Welcome To Change. A New Horizon On Urantia

[Editor's note: The date associated with this entry (01-01-1991) has no significance, but used only for allowing this document to be put before all others. In our attempts to name this website for which these lessons would be categorized and stored we make mention that all our first attempts for a title/name, the Internet 'powers that be' would not accept as 'available' our entries for titles, such as: "Teaching Mission Lessons," or "Lessons from Abraham," or "Michael's Correcting Time Teaching Mission," and etc. The only name that the Internet would accept was 'Mansion World Teachings.' Then, in the submissions of all near one-thousand weekly transmissions (which were submitted in chronological order starting 1991 and so forth), the first lesson that initially appeared on the website was the following transmission from January 2, 1996. Note in its first paragraph (of 1996), Abraham's statement that these lessons are: "...the early lessons that you discover on the Mansion Worlds." This document, then, is simply introductory.]

There are Seven Mansion Words Where Mortals Ascend To After Death. They are often referred to as the Correction Worlds. (click here for Urantia Book info. in the Seven Mansion Worlds)

Abraham, Woods Cross, Utah January 2, 1996

"I have spoken to you on your part in this family of Father. As well, I have attempted to bring forth your sense of family togetherness within this group and other mortals you have contact with. It is my goal to bring to you the early lessons that you discover on the Mansion Worlds. I have said, these teachings are to propel you forward in your spiritual learning that you may teach others. I say, signs of a world stepping forward into Light and Life are beginning to shine. I rejoice and give my gratitude to a Father who is so watchful of every universal detail."

HAM -- Announcement at the Urantia Fellowship General Assembly
(this year held in Los Angeles, CA)

Welcome To Change Arrival of Prince Machiventa ?February 01, 1992

HAM: The Light of God surrounds us. The Love of God enfolds us. The Power of God protects us. The Presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are He IS.

My profound and sincere greetings to you all this evening. I am HAM. I have been commissioned to bring the light of truth and the understanding of our Father to Urantia. I am one of many Teachers. All of us are awaiting the greater reception of our words and we are desirous of placing many Teachers among you. One moment [connection was difficult]. Great is our Mission understand this in your hearts. One moment. [Pause]

The time has arrived for expanded level of truth to begin correction. We come not for ourselves. No, indeed, rather are we in service of Michael.

This day marks the beginning of the Correcting Time. Machiventa Melchizedek has arrived and has been duly inaugurated as Acting Planetary Prince of Urantia, an assignment he has accepted from Michael.

Long years we have awaited this day. The Lucifer Rebellion is officially ended in Nebadon. The circuits which have isolated your world are being reopened. All these changes are occurring by and in accordance with the plan of Michael. Happy and joyous is this day. Blessed in the sight of our Lord. Gracious listeners, I bid you, welcome to change. We mark the beginning of the reign of Prince Machiventa on this day. Indeed am I happy to serve.

The Teachings of Ham under the direction of Machiventa and Abraham

[This is the first meeting with The Correcting Time Teachings in the United States. Also, the first meeting with Teacher Haman ascending mortal who hails from "the Gardens of Edentia," a sphere in our Universe where the Adam's and Eves to the mortal races of the inhabited worlds of time and space are located. Ham had served his mortal years on a world similar to ours, about sixty-thousand years ago.

The following is a historical accounting of the beginning days of the U.S. based Teaching Mission, written by Thern Blackburn (also known as Joshua) of Woods Cross, Utah, a small city about five miles north of Salt Lake City. Most of the meetings with Ham and Abraham (1991 through 1994) were held at Thern's home. Thern passed away in June of 1997. He and his two sons, John and David, recorded and transcribed each week's meeting and sent out dozens of copies of such (on cassette tape) each week to all who expressed an interest. These were the days just preceding the Internet.]

[By Thern Blackburn written in 1993.] To Whom It May Concern: The Woods Cross & Salt Lake City Urantia Book study group had been meeting since May of 1977. Those in attendance has changed over the years. Some have died, moved away, and for various other reasons, stopped coming. Some now attending are new members. Approximately two years ago, one of the members (Jan) told us that she had been contacted by her Thought Adjuster with the message that our group was to receive a Teacher and that she had been asked to be the contact person.

On the morning of Saturday, February 23, 1991, Jan (known in these transcripts as Rebecca) was finally contacted by an invisible being who said his name was Ham and that he would be our group Teacher. He would start this assignment at the next study group meeting which was to be held on Thursday night (February 28, 1991). Those in attendance that night were Ida, Sheila, Doug, Jan and myself (Thern Blackburn).

The meeting was held in Jan's home in Salt Lake City. I recorded this event on a twenty-five-year-old portable tape recorder. I am sorry to report that the quality of the recording is so poor as to be almost inaudible, which is my reason for putting it on paper. Jan was very nervous and this being the first time she was to serve as a contact transmission-receiver; she didn't know what to do and often interjected her own thoughts into the message Ham was presenting. This caused confusion to herself and Ham as how to proceed. The next day she was contacted by Abraham and was told how to clear her mind so the message could be given without her own thoughts interfering. Much improvement was made in the next two meetings (which were recorded on better equipment).

The following is the record of the meeting as taken from the tape. Some of the meeting and discussion is not in this written record due to inaudibility and confusion. The meeting started with the prayer, using the prayer given by the New Zealand group in prior years, with Abraham as their Teacher.]

Ham's first Woods Cross, Utah Meeting 02-28-1991

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

It is well to be careful of wording. Peace be with you. Greetings. I will be your Teacher and friend. I am HAM. Do you have any questions at this time?

THERN: Yes. I would like to ask several: Are you the Ham who was a member of the 'Caligastia One-Hundred?' (HAM: No. I worked in the gardens of Edentia.)

DOUG: Were you a student on Jerusem?

HAM: I have been to Jerusem.

IDA: We want to tell you how thrilled, happy, and honored we feel to have you as our Teacher.

HAM: Thank you. I wish to give you more understanding and share with you my understanding and knowledge of God. Communication is difficult, but it will become easier in time. For me to teach you at this time, it really matters not whence I come. The most important thing is I am here. I desire to hear personal questions at this time about your own spiritual needs.

THERN: Has Melchizedek come to Urantia to fulfill his position as vicegerent Planetary Prince?

HAM: Yes. I am under orders of Melchizedek.

THERN: And Abraham? (HAM: Yes.)

THERN: Then the teachings we receive should be harmonious with teachings of the group in New Zealand and other groups around the world?

HAM: Yes. These teachings are being taught in harmony with each other for the purpose to advance human understanding. Any other questions?

THERN: Has the adjudication of the Lucifer Rebellion been settled? (HAM: Yes.) Has Melchizedek, Abraham and yourself being here with other spiritual forces have anything to do with the decline in Communism in the world?

HAM: Political matters evolve on their own momentum. We choose times for spiritual teachings, in part, in accordance with these.

THERN: Are your teachings in harmony with the teachings of the Urantia Book? (HAM: Of course.)

THERN: Will you go beyond the teachings of the Urantia Book?

HAM: Yes. Many details in the Urantia Book explain physical, morontial, and spiritual realities. I prefer at this time to give spiritual teachings in a personal way. Are there any more questions?

THERN: I would like you to go ahead and teach us, spiritually. I am confused right now not knowing what to ask about our individual spiritual position.

HAM: This confusion is seen. The way with God is such a supreme thing that we tend to ignore what we are taught. Confusion is natural; looking for proof is natural; wanting facts is natural?but does not help in our spiritual education.

THERN: Speaking for myself and maybe the others, it is not so much that we want proof and facts as much as we want to know that we have some role in helping mankind, not just achieving our own spiritual goals and surviving.

HAM: These things are not in my hands. Timing is not so important, but your spiritual education and experience is very important. Sometimes much is accomplished in a short time, but it doesn't really matter, time-wise. You are concerned about time, don't be. We teach the simplicity of the love and power of God within you.

THERN: Was the coming of the Urantia Book necessary before this type of communication we are receiving from you now could take place?

HAM: The Urantia Book is a tool. I give you my farewell, for now.

Spiritual Water in the Form of Truth, Beauty, and Goodness

Second meeting with the personality, Ham

that this had been completed and that the system circuits would be reopened. As we continued with the second recording, Ham has indicated to us that he would not answer trivial questions involved with time or prophecy, and requested that we question him accordingly.]

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

HAM: I am with you tonight to begin the teachings which have been prepared by our Teacher, Melchizedek, on Urantia. I am HAM. (Pause.) We apologize. Jan wishes to apologize if these words are stumbling. We feel this will come more easily in the future. I sense questions. Is there anyone with a question?

DOUG: I wish to ask if there is anything, we as a group, could help Jan with the ability to communicate with you? (Ham: No.)

DOUG: Some of our questions begin with the desire to understand the nature of your teachings; particularly in regard to our individual spiritual progression?

HAM: As you will see, these things will become clearer.

DOUG: Are we, as a group, entirely prepared through the Urantia Book to efficiently communicate our questions to you?

HAM: Your questions are known.

THERN: Last week you stated that the Lucifer Rebellion Adjudication had been completed. Another question I have concerning that what happened to Lucifer, Satan, Caligastia, and Daligastia?

HAM: We are sorry, and also happy to report: It's a hard combination of reality feeling when we received this information. They have become as though they have not been.

THERN: None of them repented?

HAM: That is correct, none.

IDA: We were informed that Satan had repented?

HAM: Not in my information.

DOUG: Are we witnesses to a reopening of system circuits? Are you, as a Teacher, a benefit of this adjudication?

HAM: Yes, of course. Yes.

DOUG: Will spiritual energies change quickly from here out?

HAM: We have been witnessing great change over fifty years since the beginning of the adjudication. This time that has changed is referred to as the 'Correcting Time,' and we will now witness further change of greater proportion than we have already seen. This proportion will be of a more spiritual nature than previous. Over the last fifty years, there has been much change political, social, and technological change.

DOUG: In the last meeting, you told us of technological change this telecommunication. And, that this new communication may be a stumbling block to our progression. Could you relay more insight on this question?

HAM: Yes. One moment.

DOUG: This was also brought to our attention through Ruby of the New Zealand group.

HAM: I am aware of this, yes. In days long ago this type of communication [transmission-receiving process.] was looked on as a possession, spiritual possession. And now, as you witness with your telecommunication methods and video communication methods, images and voices can be here and there, and can be transmitted at one time to many places. You can see this, our communication to you, to be similar I exist not in your realm of reality, I exist elsewhere. Yet, I can communicate with you in this manner. I would wish at this time to teach you a little. Are there any further questions first?

DOUG: No. We covered the main topics.

HAM: One of the topics I wish to share tonight is about 'spiritual reality' it is difficult to put in your word form. The man Jesus when He, as God, was made flesh preached using the term water. Spiritual water is real. It exists in the form of truth, beauty, and goodness. "It replenishes my soul," using your words. "It rains on my soul, the soil of my heart, and awakens new growth." You see, the soul grows almost as an organic living reality/entity; this growth must be nurtured, in time, as all living things require time for growth.

A tree begins its life as a seed; it is not a tree at all. As a seed, it has no characteristic of its later maturity; and yet, in this small and tiny beginning, mighty magnificent beautiful and splendid results occur. Many times I have wondered about this; and yet, the ultimate secrets lie with God. The ultimate truth of life, in reality, are only known to God. On Edentia, I toiled in the gardens and thought deeply on this subject, yes.

Are there any questions at this point? Are you understanding the teachings so far?

DOUG: Yes. A question that seems to have limited understanding in my heart is how we, as mortals far below your level, can realize more of potential in our lives. That question seems to be a circle that continuously goes around. If you could help us with that?

HAM: Actuals and potentials are ever in fluctuation in ever-changing movement. Soul movement (morontia movement) is one type of this exchange. The soul grows by this exchange; it remains a constant to absolute levels which even I myself have not reached either. Does that answer?

DOUG: Yes, it makes that point very clear. Are we, as very young spirits, able to receive and contain energy on your level without distortion in our own way?

HAM: You are receiving, at this time, words from my level my energy to you. My words are my communication from myself to yourself, from my heart to your heart, from my mind to your mind. (Doug: Thank you.)

JAN: Good-bye ... I think, wait ...

HAM: I am sorry. As I was saying, this spiritual growth requires time to develop itself. You see, the soul (our spirit entity within) will advance and grow by its own momentum, after a point. It is not conscious that this is occurring; yet, is conscious of the difference, within your consciousness changes with this response to the difference within. Do you see? this spirit response, mental response, takes place at a superalmost consciousness level. It is not quite at an everyday-thinkingness level wherein you are aware of these changes, yet these changes are in constant occurrence. But at the time of the consciousness of these changes are these levels introverted. Are you understanding?

DOUG: Yes. We have the tape to aid us in reviewing and studying your words. We are in understanding.

HAM: Perhaps this is not clear. This spiritual growth-happening is on an infinite continuum; your progress along this infinite continuum is sometimes little, sometimes more. If you remove time, continuum is constant; continuum of soul progression, is constant. Yet, consciousness of this progression, is not. Conscious contact (understanding of the soul) is only incompleteness. Is that clear?

DOUG: Yes, it is clearer. You have the ability to read our thoughts. Is that true?

HAM: Yes, to a point. It is not for me to invade, or to change a thought or intention to change your questioning about anything. I may understand, yes, but not to change or invade, do you see?

DOUG: I understand. For our ease, particularly my own, I wish to apologize for any lack of understanding, or fright, dealing with type of conversation. It's taking time to get used to you, for all of us. This is becoming much easier as we communicate with you on our level, so to speak. Thank you for being patient with our human attributes.

HAM: You're welcome. This is not difficult. Not as difficult as I thought.

KATHY: Can I ask a question? Ham do you have knowledge of an entity named Sonada? (Ham: Is this from a book?) Kathy: Yes, from a book; and also from people channeling him as you are being channeled.

HAM: Checking. This we are not. I'm sorry there is no answer at this time. I wish to also say, our process of ?transmission-receiving? is not as is the so-called

?channeling? belief. (Kathy: Thank you.)

THERN: Before you leave us again, could you tell us if you will be at our meeting next Thursday?

JAN: I lost it for a second ... I think I lost it. I guess that's it.

Understanding Love and Truth, The Intended Effect of the These Teachings
Ham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 03-14-1991

Back

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

I am HAM. I am your Teacher. I am delighted to be a part of this project and I am delighted to have you all as my pupils. Do you have questions before we begin our lesson?

DOUG: I'd like to ask questions associated with our spiritual names in particular, Jan's spiritual name?

HAM: One moment. The names that you receive during these discussions are your soul identifications. You will be known by these names for all eternity. 'Rebecca' is who she is.

DOUG: Are there determining factors which would allow you to disclose other spiritual names?

HAM: These names are to be bestowed (revealed, rather) at the time of a profound spiritual awakening a personal spiritual awakening that you will experience in yourselves. I will tell you these designations when appropriate. (Doug: I understand.) Ham: Are there questions from someone else?

SHEILA: Yes, Ham could you describe what Father looks like to you?

HAM: I do not perceive Him in a material eye-focus manner. He becomes my real experience that goes beyond a form of description. I have not been on Paradise, or even to the Superuniverse capital. I have been only to Salvington. I was a resident of Edentia in preparation for this assignment. I have seen Michael, have spoken with Him and have been in His presence. He who sees the Son has seen the Father. It is beyond a word-conveyance. Is there anything else?

THERN: We have read in the Urantia Book about the 'reserve corps of destiny.' Are we perhaps in the reserve corps of destiny now with this experience?

HAM: Yes, yes. There will be, perhaps, a need for certain persons to do specific functions in this world. You all shall serve; and, shall receive these teachings equally. Are there further questions before we begin? [none.]

HAM: Thank you. Love and truth are co-equal, dependent. These two immense realities serve in harmony, together. Truth, as you have perceived it, is not the fullness of its reality. Truth, you see, may perhaps be mentally degraded to the level of fact perception. You say: 'This fact exists; therefore, it is true.' I say, no, this is not truth! This is not reality perception; this is mental logic-level perception.

Truth is 'spiritual perception' also; it entails/encompasses soul grasping that is morontia-level understanding of reality. Truth is indescribably, incredibly and wonderfully, more than material-level fact correlation. Truth, when perceived in reality, enlarges the soul; it allows spiritual progression to occur and advancement to real-ize within a person's personality-reality. This truth is amazing. This enlightenment is beyond mere mental cognition but reaches into the depth of soul perception.

Love is the perception of God. Love is a singular reality, a singular truth. Love is experience, yes, but it is more; it is enfoldingment, expansion, the opening of the soul to perception of reality and truth. Without love there is nothing, there is no path. The man Jesus told of a better way, the path of truth and love. This must be spoken of, must be perceived, so that such a profound experience can be understood on your material level. It is not only the beginning of life, it is also the end. It is the goal, for it is He.

HAM: Doug, your spiritual name is Jason. Is this good? (Jason: Thank you. I am deeply touched.)

HAM: You're welcome. To proceed: There is so much confusion in this world at this time. This confusion stems from the complicated/incorrect perceptions of reality. This confusion is terrible. It is the cause and results of the perpetual misery of your planet. A pain it is, to observe this. It is through simplicity and simple truths, small understandings, that break way into understanding each other. These small things, look for them; look for them in people. Look for the gateways, the gate. It needn't be much. Are you understanding? (Jason: Yes.)

There is, between people, openings and closings; openings and closings constantly occurring. When the smallest opening between strangers is there, there is friendship where before, there was nothing, they were strangers. These openings needn't be a lot. These teachings (our teachings) are meant to go beyond to fill the world when people turn to God, to the Lord, to the path, to love. His guidance is here, now. And, His guidance will follow this present time. His guidance will change and renew and restore this world. This is our purpose. (Jason: Our purpose?)

HAM: Your purpose also, yes. Yes.

SHEILA: There is a lot of work to be done before Christ comes. Is that correct?

HAM: You ask about the 'second coming of Christ?' (Sheila: Yes) Ham: The 'second coming' this we do not know when this shall occur. Our feelings on this matter is that this is a long way in the future, in your time. Do you see, I say, your time.

KATHY: Thank you, for your lesson. So are you telling us that the little things we do to reach out to other people in love is, in a small way, helping in making this happen?

HAM: Yes. Correct, you understand. Love spreads from one person to another, and another, and another. It is 'a reality,' you see; it is not 'a feeling' that you may give here or give there. It is a spiritual reality that flows on its own momentum. It flows through you and flows to another which in turn flows to even another. It spreads in this manner. Love would stop at nothing less than the realization of the brotherhood of man on earth, and this will lead to many marvelous things.

THERN: Are you preparing this world for the next order of sonship, perhaps a Magisterial Son?

HAM: Yes, correct, the next order of sonship is due to your world. This, however, will not be in flesh and blood much the same as Melchizedek as vicegerent Planetary Prince is not flesh and blood, but yet he is in control. From my information, and as referenced in the Urantia Book, this is not to occur again on this world for this world has received the Creator Son of this universe, personally, as flesh and blood. This advent is the last occurrence for this world; it will not happen again as such. Does that answer your question?

THERN: Yes, thank you very much. Will mankind know, then, if a Magisterial Son comes on a mission?

HAM: As in the form Melchizedek once did, not all. You see, there are many many, the majority of people, who would not understand nor accept such a transaction. You who understand these things are a small minority; yet, you know these transactions will change everything. Our mission is twofold: It consists firstly in transforming the individuals involved with this communication. Secondly, it consists of spreading, sharing, and maintaining the spiritual progress and momentum of the masses. This general spiritual uplevel has not necessarily improved for many years, and now the time has come to correct this and begin to enlarge the spiritual capacity and receptivity of mankind, in general. This is occurring due to spiritual forces of a more generalized nature. The Supreme Being is acting in an overall patterned manner about this area of need in your time-space. Do you understand the Supreme?

THERN: Are you referring to the Universal Father? or God the Supreme.

HAM: I am referring to the Supreme Being. It is this generalized spiritual force from the Supreme which creates pressure upon humankind, which humankind reacts to, and which helps to create an atmosphere to prepare the way for the receiving of these teachings. And furthermore, allowing these Teacher forces to gently and carefully reveal God's love to humankind. I say, this sharing, and revealing God, is the most supreme pleasure. This preparation from the Supreme will better your planet in many other areas of life, such as in your environment, in technology, in social culture and political structure these refinements will gradually lead this world, step by step, toward Light and Life. Are you understanding? (Thern: Yes, thank you.)

HAM: This is a great time for your world; a great time of progress. These things are guided and will come to pass. I shall leave you now. Farewell.

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Excuse the delay. Are there any questions at this time?

TERN: I would like to ask some things. There are several of us in the group that are confused about the soul names. In reading the Urantia Book, it says that we will not receive our new names till we fuse with our Thought Adjuster, and this has led to confusion. Could you explain that please?

HAM: This is not confusion, this is change, yes. Once, long ago, the Spirit of the Father was not universal and yet became such. This change that has taken place recently (the Correcting Time) makes it possible for you to excel and grow in understanding to the point where this ?

Rebecca is having difficulty, one moment. [pause.] Rebecca's mind is so active right now, and is trying to grasp my meaning without allowing this message to be completed. [pause.] Yes, this adjustment will be easier.

To continue... These changes in the past short time are sweeping, they are immense. They are not only planetary changes occurring within a dispensation, they concern the entire universe. This change, this new time-period, brings into being new potentials that are personal as well as global. Does this answer? (Thern: Yes, thank you.)

IDA: This is Ida and I would like to ask, were you at any time a mortal on any world, such as Abraham was on ours?

HAM: Yes, I was. I lived as... one moment. [pause.] perhaps this question is more for human curiosity. These questions ... one moment. [pause.] You see some questions need to be cleared through others before detailed answers should be given and, if answers should be given or not. Regrettably, no details.

JASON: I could use some detailed explanation: As two people mature spiritually and become aware of each identity, is it possible to project a future existence with one another?

HAM: Next life existence? (Jason: Yes). Ham: Certainly; there is much time to travel. Rebecca has difficulty. The fears and timidity of Rebecca are being overcome, one moment please. [pause.] Shall we proceed with our lesson? (Jason: Yes.)

HAM: You have been told of the spiritual water of life that this water consists of truth and beauty and goodness. You have been told that truth is a spiritual reality and exists with love as an experience of God. ?His goodness? is our topic this evening.

How do I portray to human minds this concept termed goodness? This is a difficult assignment, for goodness is so vast, so all-encompassingenthralling, perhaps, is the word. Goodness is dynamic, it is powerful, it is the way. Goodness is like a river, is like an oceanit flows through you through the opened gate of the heart. Goodness is the law, and the law is life and goodness. Goodness is life itself; it is the real of life; it is not shadow, not air. Yes, goodness is everything, for goodness is God.

Goodness goes together with mercy as God's way of reaching the mortal mind. He, our Father, is love in one hand and mercy and forgiveness in the other. ?Mercy? is perhaps not entirely the correct word, but close. This mercy is complete and total understanding of each individual mortal. It is the awareness of human failings, and the forgiveness that comes with that understanding. Do you see, mercy is total and complete, without reservation or misgiving.

Father in heaven is our Father in truth, His acts are in 'Fatherly fashion.' Always is He with love, complete unconditional love. Excuse me, ?unconditional? is not quite correct; His only condition (if it can be called a condition) is the return of that love by His children. But do you see, He is so all-goodness and all-forgiveness that even this is understoodI mean, even the non-return of love, is understood.

You all have your good days and bad days; 'in tune' days and those 'not in tune' days, many times. And I say, Father is there; His hand is there to grasp your hand. You see it not, but it is there. Each of you should try, in your daily toils, to see the hand that awaits to grasp your hand. That is the true goodness of a Father who holds and guides His child in safety and security. Are there any questions so far? [none for now.]

Then I leave you with this: Open the gates of your hearts. Open the eyes of your mind. Enfold all. Allow the Father to enfold you. Allow Him to grasp you. Allow Him to love you. Allow Him to lead you.

MEL: I do have a question: Can two people have truth in conflict? Can something be true for some people and not true for others?

HAM: You speak of beliefs? religious beliefs, correct? (Mel: Somewhat, yes.)

HAM:Beliefs in specific religious fancies will all smooth out in time. When two people converse,conflict over beliefs can be difficult, very difficult. Many times these things, I'm sorry to say, are not always resolvable between people. The followers of Jesus many times broke with their families. Jesus himself broke with most of His family. It is so difficult, these close interactions;it is regrettable. More questions, I sense.

JOHN: Does anyone else have spiritual names or is it just Rebecca and Jason?

HAM: All have these names; you all are known by your spiritual names. You are not conscious, however, of your name yet.

JOHN: What is the origin of these names? Seems like they are Anglican in nature. Are these names one's cultural upbringing? or perhaps planet of origin?

HAM: It is not 'an assignment' of the name, no. The name is who you are. It has been known since your birth, this name. It reflects, yes, your culture, heritage and planet of origin all these things, because that is the initial stamp, the soil, out of which you have grown your soul. Your new name is that initial heredity or physical body nature wherein your mind is your basis, your beginning; and the name captures this, you see.

KATHY: Do we have different places of birth, planets of origin, then? (Ham: I am not understanding the question.)

KATHY: We are all born on this world when you talk of 'planet of origin,' was it this planet? (Ham: Yes, all of this world, yes.)

SHEILA: Is it safe to assume that we might have existed as a personality before this lifetime? (Ham: No, no, no, that is not so.)

SHEILA: I see, thank you. This is our first life, then? (Ham: Correct.)

SHEILA: Was there a recent resurrection of mortals from this world?

HAM: Yes, there was a special resurrection. This was not a dispensational resurrection; but yes, a quite extensive resurrection has occurred recently. Are there any other questions before I say farewell? [none.]

Kingdom of Heaven As A Mustard Seed In The Hearts Of Men

I have come this evening to meet with you. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Are there questions to begin with?

THERN: I have a few I would like to ask: In our last meeting you said that a long time ago the spirit of the Father was 'not universal' and that confused me a little bit. Were you referring to Father Michael, our Universe Father?

HAM: No. I was referring to the presence of the Indwelling Spirit in the mind.

THERN: Thank you; I misunderstood. Also, you spoke of vast changes in the universe and on Urantia; I was wondering if the twelve groups of the Planetary Supervisors are acting in the rapid changes that are taking place: in health and politics; perhaps alternative non-polluting sources of energy; racial purification any of those type of things? (Ham: Are you speaking of angelic?) Thern: Yes, the twelve groups of seraphim.

HAM: They are always active. Yes, all through history.

TERN: I was wondering since these changes have taken place, are they more active now? We see more things happening in politics, health, and rumors of cheaper sources of energy not yet developed, etc.

HAM: This is not for me to discuss.

IDA: Was the recent resurrection in our time equivalent to the time of the adjudication of the Lucifer Rebellion?

HAM: No, this was a separate incident. It is coincidental that they occurred somewhat close together. The Lucifer Rebellion is on a wider scale rather than planetary resurrection timing. Does that answer? (Ida: Yes. Thank you). Ham: Any other questions?

JASON: Yes. Since Urantia is in the system of ?Satania,? and now that there has been such tremendous change, will there be a new name given to our local system?

HAM: Doubtful.

IDA: What will be the function and purpose of our group in the future?

HAM: To receive, to live, and to disseminate these teachings.

IDA: I am troubled and concerned about some good people I've known who've had good and strong intentions and were desirous to be with our Father in heaven, but when these people became ill and dying, they committed suicide. We have been told we must "endure till the end." What will happen to these good-intentioned people?

HAM: I am sorry, this is not for me to discuss either. However, worry not. Concern yourself with the living.

IDA: Well, is it wrong to perform euthanasia on a person that is dying and cannot get well? Is it wrong to pull the plug on the life support system if these people can never become well?

HAM: These are difficult matters and are of mortal concern. I cannot make broad pronouncements as to the rightness or wrongness of individual actions. Each person must walk in his own light and perform his duties and obligations to parents, children, family, and associates this is an individual matter. Further questions?

JASON: Yes Ham. As evolutionary mortals, we understand that we have an entire organization of high spirits and hosts helping us with the Paradise ascension plan. These people, these personalities, travel through the universe in many different ways. There is one subject of interest in our society today people are wondering about those beings that do not use vehicular travel to visit this world. These visitors to our planet, I suspect, are under the rule of the system set up through Machiventa Melchizedek?

HAM: Incorrect. You speak perhaps of angels and beings who may come and go? (Jason:

Yes). No, they are not.

JASON: Is their life-involvement with us as progressive mortals, on their level, associated with Machiventa?

HAM: You speak of destiny guardians? (Jason: Yes. Are they associated with us?) Ham: Yes, however, they are not under the rule of Melchizedek as the Thought Adjusters are not, either.

JASON: Thank you. Some of these beings seem to appear to people in the forms of visible beings. I, personally, have never witnessed such an event. However, is it safe for us to believe in the testimony of others concerning such visitations?

HAM: You are correct. These visitations are rare. For example, Mary was visited by Gabriel. However, it is [pause.]? one must carefully judge each situation according to his own wisdom. Is there a specific question?

JASON: You have answered.

JOHN W: The Urantia Book talks about various levels that we progress through. Is everyone here (group members) in the third psychic circle? And, do we have personal guardian angels?

HAM: That is not for me to discuss either. Shall we proceed? (Yes.) [pause.] Sorry for the delay, at times my contact through Rebecca is weakened and must be made stronger. Her mind at times agitates and must be calmed. [pause.]

This evening I would like to discuss the kingdom of heaven. The man, Jesus, discussed at great length on this topic, and yet very little is found in your New Testament records regarding it. His mission was a beginning, an opening, to begin the establishment of the kingdom of heaven on Earth. At that time, He of course foresaw the bringing to this world these teachings which would make possible the first beginning stages of Light and Life, or the beginning of the kingdom of heaven.

The Masters' mission foresaw ours, yes. He also foresaw the establishment of Christianity. He foretold of the skeleton-like nature of modern Christianity which has borrowed from pre-existent and extant teachings of the day, and which has been modified and splintered to an extensive degree. Christ Michael is personally concerned with the welfare of all Urantia as a whole, yes; of Christianity, and especially of all Christians. Through the centuries His words have been made to ring hollow in the hearts of menHe would fill them again.

Our mission, you see, is sponsored by Him. He said: "The kingdom of heaven is like a mustard seed planted in the hearts of men. It will grow quickly; will grow strongly and firmly rooted in their hearts." Yes, the kingdom of heaven is like the "lost talent" that a person searches and searches for until it is found; it is so preciousyet, it is lost in this world; and few seem to be searching anymore, really searching.

Mankind is caught up in this strive for material comfort, personal prestige, and power which, to man, is most important. So strange this is when the enthronement of God the Father in your hearts is what is really true and meaningful. And really, this is an emergency it is that important. If you could only understand how serious this is!

One's allegiance, one's hopes and faith, must be centered on God alone, not worried about material comforts. These things are prepared for you, given you, and are given joyfully by the Father. Your first duty, your only duty, is to do His will. This is of paramount importance for me to impress upon you this evening.

Each of you has guidance; this guidance can be strong, weak, or nonexistent. Therefore, by your decisions do you strengthen your reception of guidance by choosing the Father's will. By so choosing, life is easier. By so choosing, you lighten your burden. By so choosing, life becomes a pleasure not a struggle. You become a fountain of spiritual refreshment to your fellows, not a burden to them. You become a light in the darkness to all around you, not another stumbling block in their darkness.

By choosing Father's will, the light within your heart will shine brighter; the love you bestow upon your fellows, more genuine. Your happiness will increase. Happiness is not found anywhere else, not true happiness. Your willingness to be here tonight tests your willingness to do these things.

Father, the Spirit of the Father, lives in each person; He knows and understands each one of you, completely. There is nothing to hide from Father. Open yourselves to Him. Your willingness to do so will give you peace. Your willingness to be led by Him will give you mental tranquility; and in mental tranquility, spiritual light shines brightest.

The material mind rebels against spiritual leading, and at certain times needs discipline, perhaps even chastisement, by your higher nature this does not hurt you but is to discipline your minds to always consider the spiritual consequence of any action so that decisions become more clear for you. In this, you begin to walk out of the gray area and see with clarity the necessity of your decisions.

The man Jesus gave us a prayer: Father, thou art in heaven. Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come, thy will be done, on Earth as it is in heaven. Are there any questions? [none.] Then I will say, I hope that you all understand and receive these words with an open heart and mind; and that you will progress daily in your understanding. Farewell

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

I am HAM. I am your Teacher. This evening I would wish to express a few thoughts concerning the questions that have been asked in the past. I wish to clarify and enlighten you as to my/our position. There are many issues which cannot be discussed for the fear of intruding into the individual will-pattern. Each human being must decide for themselves many complex and perplexing questions in life, and it is not for us to interfere with these decisions.

We have come to guide and sustain you in a purely spiritual manner. This spiritual food and water will sustain you in life. We understand that there are needs and desires and wants in each person; yet this understanding of past or future events must come to each person, individually, and each must draw their lessons therefrom. Do you understand? (Group: Yes). Are there any questions at this time?

IDA: Yes, and good evening, Ham. It is nice to have you with us. I do have a question: Has the spiritual isolation of Urantia been terminated?

HAM: In the technical sense, it has been, yes. All of the circuitry has not been completely put back as before. Yet what has been done should allow greater spiritual access to and from this planet; and, should open spiritual possibilities to humankind also. The circuitry is in the process of being reinstated to its former state and beyond. Does that answer? (Ida: Yes, it does, and thank you.) Ham: Are there further questions?

IDA: At this time are we way too materialistic for any of the Trinity Teacher Sons to have arrived?

HAM: Yes. Any other questions?

HAM: Tonight's lesson: The kingdom of heaven is not meat and drink. The kingdom of heaven is spiritual. This is a fundamental basic concept that is missed so often by the churches of the world. When Jesus walked the Earth, His teachings were more advanced than could be grasped at that time; we observe it is even so in this time. These, His teachings, are the fundamental building blocks which we will use to expand upon and clarify for the enlightenment of mankind.

"While I am in the world, I am the light of the world," said Jesus. And now we have come to kindle this light once more, and to proclaim libertyliberty to spiritual captives. We bring the good news to those who sit in darkness. A message of joy and hope is what we, and you, shall offer. Liberty is freedom from meaningless tradition or 'outdated' tradition, perhaps, would be more precise.

Tradition, you see, has an inertia of its own; it is passed down through the ages from generation to generation, on and on, until the meaning of these traditions is practically worthless in modern day. And with such rapid change, as is upon us, these traditions become very quickly outdated.

As you can witness in the Muslim world, for example, the tradition where the borrowing and lending of money with interest is not allowed yet the economic necessity today for such, is overwhelming. Therefore, the economy of today suffers and stagnates under the weight of such a mores that is no longer relevant in the modern world.

Another example: Long ago on your world there existed tradition that a man should beat his wife. This was not ?could,? it was ?should? beat his wife, as a regular practice. Of course this tradition is, in modern eyes, a ridiculous thing and abhorrent; yet it was a tradition, nonetheless, and honored at the time. There are many such examples. Therefore, it becomes of necessity to distinguish that which is of a purely traditional and cultural nature, and that which has spiritual significance and meaning.

The most significant of traditions could be found in the sacrament which can certainly be practiced freely of the bread and wine that Christ gave in the last supper. This is an example of a meaningful tradition. He said: "Do this in remembrance of me." This has meaning, yes.

The kingdom of heaven is like a grinding stone grinding wheat. The kingdom of heaven makes smooth, makes useable. The kingdom of heaven makes smooth the coarseness of life. The kingdom of heaven gives meaning to tradition. The kingdom of heaven gives light and hope and freedom to the soul it will sustain and nurture all aspects of life and will remain itself intact, as water remains water.

I see a stone grinding, grinding wheat. This work is the work of the kingdom of heaven. This preparation of that which was raw, which was wild, which was unusable is ground by the kingdom of Heaven and made useable, made nourishing, made sustaining. The kingdom of heaven will transform that which is growing wild into the bread of life for the service of mankind. Yes.

Are there questions at this time? [none,] I will proceed a little further with this lesson on the kingdom of heaven.

The kingdom of heaven is like the threshing floor, it works to separate the wheat from the chaff. The kingdom of heaven is active; it is a living, spiritual, active reality. These basic concepts are much spoken of in your churches but not well understood. We hope that through many lessons, such as this, to clarify these ideas and strengthen your faith in them. The basis of our work has been laid long ago, and we need only to look at the gospel in this day, with fresh eyes.

Farewell. Have a prosperous and productive week. I shall return next Thursday.
Farewell.

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Are there questions to begin with?

JASON: Thank you, Ham. I thank you very much. Are there guidelines we should follow in sharing this with other people? Could you give us other information that would help us in introducing and explaining the phenomenon of your communication as well as the teachings you are disseminating?

HAM: Yes. This can be a difficult matter, especially for those who have not been exposed to the Urantia Book. These teachings are for the universal good of mankind and are meant to be shared. Yet the method of their communication can sometimes cause rejection as is also the case with how the Urantia Book came about; this problem can be overcome by reading of the book or hearing of these teachings.

The teachings are what is important, not the method of communication. However, this method of communication (transmitting and receiving technique the slow word-for-word delivery) is certainly a stumbling block for many people. Perhaps it is best to introduce these teachings alone for a time, without the Urantia Book or the sharing of these tapes and when that person is spiritually strong enough to be capable of receiving this much light, then can the Urantia Book and these tapes be given. [Editor's Note: In these days before the Internet, the Ham lessons were recorded and disseminated on cassette tapes. The reception process of the transmitted words was quite slow with typically 2 to 3 seconds between words. It was hard to know where a sentence ended and a new one begun. Then, with the help of his two sons, David and Todd, procured a computer program that would take out the spaces between words which helped greatly to get the whole lesson on one cassette tape, and in a more presentable format. End of Editor's note.]

HAM: As it says in the Urantia Papers, too much light can be blinding as well as well as illuminating therefore, let your light shine so as to give light, but not so much as to confuse. This dilemma is a difficult and delicate balance and must be conducted with great care and discretion; only then will your efforts be fruitful. A great deal of time may be required for each person. Yes, this is a difficult task. (Jason: Thank you, Ham.)

THERN (Joshua): Thank you very much. Today I was contacted by Charles, of the New Zealand group.

HAM: Yes, I know him.

THERN: This brings up a question that it might be very good for us to have intercommunication between the various contact groups. Are there any in the United States other than our group that we could get in contact with? And if so, how?

HAM: One moment. [pause.] It is advisable that you all know and sustain each other this is not forbidden at all. However, Joshua, at this time there exists one other potential group which has not developed so far as our group here, or the New Zealand group; we are waiting for their further development before allowing contact. There are other groups being prepared as well. These things take time for balanced readiness.

SHEILA: Yes, what happens to the ?personality? upon mortal death? And, where does it go?

HAM: One moment. This is difficult to explain because it is mysterious to me. I have received teachings, I have been through this experience and yet, it is mysterious.

Personality is nonfunctional at death, and it is functional at resurrection. This entity, a unifying functional unit, is in pieces (separated) at death and cannot continue without the regrouping; it is necessary for a body of some type. At death, we leave the mortal body; and yet, the memory pieces are safe and intact. My memories of my life are intact; memories of Abraham's are also intact, as well as of everyone these memories are still there. As it says in the Urantia Book, "All that is worthwhile remains and nothing is lost." Yet, there may be a time, an interval of non-awareness, of complete non-awareness. Therefore, that interval of time is not part of memory; it seems like an instant, yet as we are told and as we understand, there is an interval of time between death and resurrection. The personality, as far as we are taught, is in safekeeping with the Thought Adjuster. But as a functioning unit, it (personality) is dormant upon death. (Sheila: Thank you, Ham).

HAM: Are there questions? [none.] Then I shall proceed with this week's teachings. One moment.

There exists a difference between the idea or thought of God on one hand, and the experience reality of Him on the other. Most people have an idea of the Lord as an abstraction, almost with very little inner personal communion or feeling-development (soul-development) with Him. It is the experiencing of God which develops the soul. It is reliant upon the mental capacity for understanding this experience. It is the humanizing of this experience, and the personalizing of this experience, which causes those spiritual forces to mobilize and cause spiritual growth for the individual.

There is no spiritual growth without thought without the thinking, reasoning, wise understanding of the spiritual experience. At first this experience is limited and fleeting. Yet, if it is pursued wisely, sagaciously, this experience becomes, and makes, the individual become more and more real. As you realize your potential spiritual growth, this active transfer of purely spiritual (and with some, mental) energies causes the phenomenon of soul growth; and this soul becomes a morontia reality. Are you understanding?

JOSHUA: Does the soul become a morontia reality while we are yet mortal?

HAM: Yes. It is the combination of the material, mortal, mental process with the purely spiritual input from the Father, the Thought Adjuster that this combination produces a new reality. This is a life-long project for both parties involved. The mortal mind must grasp and understand the spiritual reality for it to be made real for that individual. It is a process of becoming who you really are; the process of realizing your mortal potential which potential shall extend to the morontia worlds, but it is begun on this world. Therefore, it is important that you receive and understand my teachings. I am saying, it is important that I make these teachings clear and understandable; and therefore, if there are any doubts or problems in understanding, please do not hesitate to say so.

JASON: Can the physical mind prevent certain people from attaining a full awareness in their spiritual identity?

HAM: It is the physical mind which prevents. Yes.

JASON: People that are afflicted with mental derangement, or mental inability, are they slowed down in morontia progression? (Ham: Yes. Yes. I would say so.) Jason: I understand.

JOHN: Could you please expand on what you mean by 'spiritual realities' especially in a mortal frame, that a mortal could understand?

HAM: Yes, one moment. Spiritual realities. I have difficulty in trying to convey this because it is the only reality for me. For you who are in a much more limited state of perception, this is more of an 'idea' than a 'truth.' Am I perceiving the question correctly? (John: Yes).

HAM: This truth is as real to me as the chair you're sitting in is to you. Yet to me, the physical material reality is such a limited place; it is so confined that the greater spiritual world is unrecognized by your limited perception. Therefore, in order to perceive the spiritual reality of the world, one must see with spiritual eyes, perceiving the value, the beauty, the goodness which goes beyond mere physical realities. Does that help clarify? (John: Yes).

HAM: Sometimes it is difficult to expand the mind to the point of grasping the greater spiritual reality. Yet it is this grasping, this expansion, which is necessary in order to enfold and incorporate this greater reality into a personal experience which causes spiritual growth and soul ascension. Are there any other questions?

JASON: When we reach our first stage of morontia life, the Urantia Papers disclose we have some seventy senses. Is it possible to develop these senses in the same relation as you are saying, that we become a morontia form on this plane? Is it possible to develop some of these senses while we are still in our earthly state?

HAM: Yes. Your perception of reality expands as you ascend and expand the soul. It will never be as dramatic a change as when in a morontia body, but you can experience, to a limited degree, the same. (Jason: Thank you.)

HAM: I perceive that Rebecca tires and I must say farewell, for this evening. Todd and John, we will see you on Sunday. And everyone else farewell, for this week.

Spiritual Freedom and Life vs the Shackles and Bonds That Bind Us

I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Proceed with any questions you may have at this time.

IDA: Good evening, Ham. I do have a question. We understand that our Thought Adjusters are housed, so to speak, in our minds. Can you tell us where our ?souls? are housed?

HAM: One moment. The mind, you would say, is housed in the brain although this is incorrect, the mind is not housed at all. And neither is the soul; you would envision it (the soul) as being completely throughout the physical form, although centered more or less at the heart. Does that answer? (Ida: Yes, thank you). Are there others? (Group: None.) Ham: Then we shall proceed.

My teaching tonight shall include thoughts on spiritual freedom in life. Spiritual freedom is true freedom; it is the essence of a happy and boundless life. There are no bonds and shackles to hinder the true expression of one's innermost nature this is freedom! it is the only limitless possibility for such a soul. There is boundless happiness, abundance, health, and joy, in life.

The soul who drinks the cup of forgiveness and love, the bread of love, knows no borders to his existence. He realizes his inner nature so that this true inner nature becomes his guidance, his true self. This is the essence of doing God's will in your lives, for His will is to realize Himself in you, and for 'you' to realize yourself in 'Him.' Yes, for the two to become one; for the two to express themselves as one. The personal expression of the 'human self' is no less important than the divine expression of the 'divine self.'

Next, I wish to speak of the shackles and bonds that bind us. These can be subtle or they can be overt; they are treacherous to spiritual growth and expression which is essential to a happy life. These bonds are culturally-imposed, traditionally-imposed, and many times are they self-imposed out of misguided thinking; they are the chief impediment to happiness on Earth. These bonds are the bonds of thinking too much too much self-analysis, and the comparison of the self with an abstract ideal, which leads to feelings of unworthy or inferior worth.

These feelings are to be abandoned. You need to progress courageously, forthrightly, and steadfastly through this life without the impediment of too much thinking. Sometimes it is better to allow the self simply to be, and to become; to allow the Spirit to flow through you; to allow love to radiate from you. Happiness follows love, flowing love.

Furthermore, I wish to say that the celestial beings here tonight (and with you always), express their appreciation and love for you. They wish to say how pleased they are with the spiritual progress that all of you have made thus far. Is there a question?

JASON: Yes Ham. I am wondering if you are still sometimes bound and shackled on your plane, your level? You termed it "bound and shackled" is that referring to you as well? (Ham: Yes). Jason: I see. What would prevent you from telling us more about this 'bound and shackled' condition that we exist in? Are you allowed to speak of the particulars?

HAM: Yes. The particulars are for each person, different. As I have said, over-much thinking and over-self-analysis is one form of self-shackling. Another is disease, bodily disease; and many things such as tying oneself to a hatred, or a malice, or pride, or envy, superstition, or greed, or any number of things prejudice, for example. Many of these bonds and shackles are cultural and obvious; others are personal and subtle. Does that answer?

JASON: Yes. As far as human nature is reflected, one question I would ask is: Certain individuals on a supposed spiritual plane have chosen a defending of their belief, yet they seem to produce miracles and conjure energies as well as making their presence seem bountiful, so to speak. These people I talk about are willful rejecters of the new Fifth Epochal revelation. However, they have chosen a different spiritual energy. What is their particular class of 'bound and shackled,' aside from their self-choice in fashion which they have chosen?

HAM: Do you feel that they have power? (Jason: In some instances, I have witnessed, yes.)

HAM: Do you not understand how limited and small?

JASON: I understand. Is their power self-energetic? Is it an exercise within themselves that creates their energies and such?

HAM: One moment. [pause.] It cannot be otherwise. (Jason: I see. Thank you, Ham.)

JOSHUA: Ham, may I ask a question? (Ham: Certainly). Joshua: I am confused sometimes at what the Father's will is on a given subject, and what might be just my own thinking. I have a hard time separating the two. Can you enlighten me on that, please?

HAM: Yes. This is a deep and all-encompassing subject that is a necessary part of the progressive experience the learning to discern, and then the doing of His will in your lives. This will not always be so murky for you, and recently has become much clearer. Yet, each person must walk that path of decision-making himself in order to learn how to discern the right way versus the willful self-interested, self-worrying, self-absorbed way. The corrected path is one that is self-forgetful; it is the thinking 'what is the best for others' and opening the heart to His love so that His love will nourish 'other' beings around you. This is the actual fine line on 'Father communication.' It is more difficult for me to tell you 'how.' In general, there is a feeling of super-consciousness and otherness, somewhat as Rebecca experiences during these communications; it is an otherness forcefully strong. Should there be doubts, it is hard for me to sort them for you, I cannot do. When there is no doubt, there is simply no doubt; and this will be more the obvious case as time progresses. Does that answer? (Joshua: Well, it helps. Thank you very much.) Ham: Any other questions at this time?

JOHN: I was wondering do we need to completely trust our fellow man before we can freely love them?

HAM: Yes and no. Love is from the Father, and this love He bestows is entrusted to His children; and yet, it is spurned more often than not. When his children bestow love and trust to one another often, very often, can we be disappointed or hurt, which causes mistrust. Yet in order to intelligently and fully love another human being there must be trust, there must be mutual trust. To love everybody 'indiscriminately' is not possible; nor is it possible to trust everybody indiscriminately. Therefore, wisely and understandingly, love each individual person who comes to you. The gospel admonishes us to love our enemies; to be Father-like to those who abuse our trust; to always look deeply for the underlying motives for the actions of your unwise fellows; to see them as closely as you can to the way Father sees them. This, yes, will open your heart and allow a deeper understanding of the sometimes-foolish actions. Does that answer? (John: Yes. Thank you.)

HAM: For tonight's lesson, I am a Teacher under the orders of Abraham and Melchizedek. My mission is to teach and explain and make clearer the fundamental tenets laid down by Christ Jesus. This is my main objective. This restatement the retelling of these fundamental truths is the main purpose for me to be here. Therefore, it is important for us to remain dutiful to this purpose. I perceive that Rebecca is tired, and she is telling me she is not. [laughter.] We shall proceed a little further.

The main point of this lesson is spiritual liberty 'the freeing of oneself to become a liberated son or daughter of the living God.' Even this thought this knowledge, that you are children of the most powerful reality is liberating, is freeing. His children understand this concept. Make it yours. Make it your very own. You are His child in truth. That is what I will leave you with. Till next week, I bid you, adieu.

Mission Participants Are Being Prepared To Assist

Abraham, Machiventa & Ham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 04-25-1991

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Greetings. This evening I would like to communicate something to you. As you know, Abraham is our commanding officer and as such, is in charge of the mortal 'reserve corps of destiny,' of which you are members. This evening he would like to say a few words. One moment.

Greetings. I am ABRAHAM. This may surprise you perhaps yes, even astound and cause you to be incredulous; however, the fact of my presence is known and you should not feel surprised, for I have watched these meetings many times and have been present at your homes. You are not unknown to us, no; your thoughts and feelings and desires are known. We wish to understand all of you, equally, yes.

This Mission which we have embarked upon is of supreme importance; and we wish to impress this upon you that all of you will fulfill and dispatch the duties assigned you. Some of you have received specific instructions and have done much to carry out these orders, speaking specifically of Joshua.

Therefore, we wish to extend our thanks to him this evening. It is for each person to accept or reject these gift assignments. As Rebecca has accepted her role, and Joshua has accepted his mission, so will each person have an assignment. My father in truth and brother in spirit friend/teacher, Machiventa Melchizedek extends his greetings, and also wishes to speak to you. One moment.

Greetings. I am Machiventa Melchizedek, vicegerent Planetary Prince of Urantia. I come here tonight in order to welcome you to the brotherhood of planetary believers; to wish you well in your future missions and to tell you that important indeed, stupendous events are not far in the future. Yes, you will be needed to undertake certain assignments which shall be given you through Ham; he is directly under our supervision and you need have no fears or worries of his authenticity.

The planet is going through an intense shake-up at this time in many overt and subtle ways. This may be the cause of certain small calamities which we wish to avoid. And we wish to bring many people into the fold of believership. We require your help in this endeavor.

I am Ham. Are there any questions at this time?

IDA: I do have a question, Ham, but first I want to say that I was really thrilled with your answer that you gave us in reference to the soul because it did provide some answers to questions that I had. However, I still have some questions, and it isn't just curiosity. I am trying to figure out what is causing me such intense feeling at times, and other times no feeling whatsoever. My question is: When the Thought Adjuster has to leave, does the soul become inactive?

HAM: Yes. You are correct. The soul is active in growth. Without the Thought Adjusters' presence this growth ceases. You are correct.

RICHARD: I have a question. If we are to try to bring more people into the fold of believers. How shall we know whom to approach?

HAM: This is difficult. Rebecca wonders also; yet, I really cannot tell you. These matters are so intensely personal. I advise that for a while yet this group should remain the same. We need you to hear our message, but our purpose is wider than to teach only a few, yes. When it is time, I will tell you. (Richard: Thank you, Teacher). Ham: You are welcome. Are there further questions?

JASON: Good evening, Ham. I wish to ask a question relating to spiritual preparedness. We are told of events that will place themselves in the near future are there specific ways we can prepare ourselves, both physically and spiritually?

HAM: Yes. We do not tell you too much for fear of over-preparation; perhaps this would be damaging also. Yet you all work with the Thought Adjusters daily. He prepares you in all ways. He is who you should look to.

JASON: Therefore, preparedness through insight?

HAM: Exactly. If there are no more questions, we shall begin tonight's lesson on the Father in heaven He who upholds, restores, and renews all things. It is He that we look to. It is He that we turn to in times of trouble. It is He who strengthens and prepares the way for us. It is He who removes the obstacles in our paths and leads us forward. He is the living water that renews our souls and gives hope in the darkness, the Giver of light and love and peace and harmony.

Father desires to share Himself with us. And you should desire to share yourselves with Him that He may fill all your lonely spaces, all the darkened corners, with light and love and peace. He searches your soul. He knows all the heartaches, all the unworthy thoughts. He is so very accepting that you need not fear to hide any part from Him; therefore, never do. You must allow. You should want to allow Him to fill you, for His presence is acceptance and forgiveness, and nothing else! You will be living lights when you allow this.

That is all for this evening. Farewell.

System Circuits are Being Reinstated. Stand Before the Lord With A Clean Heart

Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 05-02-1991

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

Greetings. I am ABRAHAM. I have come once more to deliver a message to you, and to teach you in person this evening. Ham is not here but sends best wishes. One moment. Clarity is our utmost concern at this time and we are establishing a better contact through the mind of Rebecca. [pause.]

Many changes have indeed taken place of recent years, and many more are expected to occur shortly. These changes are mostly of a spiritual nature and will not concern most people. But for you, these changes should be of primary importance; you will become increasingly sensitive and aware of their importance.

The system circuits are being reinstated, and this causes change in the spiritual gravity of this world which many people will be sensitive to and respond to. This will aid our work, tremendously. The gravity of the Son, the Eternal Son, that is has tremendous power and weight. Your spiritual sensitivity and capacity for receptivity will increase noticeably. His drawing power is unmistakable to the spirit, to the soul, which will increasingly respond to this feeling. Communication, such as this, will increase and become more widespread. Many people will respond. [Phone rings. Laughter, and group comments on the phone's timing.]

ABRAHAM: This is not a problem. I find it wonderful to feel such good humor and fellowship. Father Melchizedek imparts the following instruction: Allow the spirit-feeling freedom of movement. Open your spirit to receive and allow this spirit-feeling to flow through you, unimpeded; this will be of great benefit to you. I will take questions.

JOSHUA: A couple weeks ago, Ham referred to Melchizedek as the vicegerent Planetary Prince as it is in the Urantia Book. Last week the reference was just as Planetary Prince. Has a change been made?

ABRAHAM: No. This omission of the word vicegerent is not meant to cause confusion.

JASON: Abraham, I wish to ask you a question on the Personalized Adjuster of this planet. I would ask if He is here as an administrator for our Thought Adjusters. And if He is here, will he stay in the future. And, how long has He been here, if at all?

ABRAHAM: One moment. Yes, His presence here is known to us. We do not understand His mission completely. Neither do we know His time frame as to when He will be manifest and when not.

JASON: Abraham, could you describe to me some of the personalities of the celestial governing body/council of Urantia?

ABRAHAM: Describe their personalities? or denote their station. (Jason: Both, their character description and position inside the council?)

ABRAHAM: There are twenty. Each person has a specific function concerning planetary welfare and individual welfare. It is an autonomous body headed by Melchizedek, who directs their activity, personally. All things are discussed; all opinions are heard before decisions are made. This system has worked acceptably thus far. As to their character, it would be unwise, for reasons unknown to you, to discuss their individual aspects and positions, and whether they are ascending or descending. Suffice it to say there are both ascending and descending sons present, working together, planning and implementing a grand project. The specifics are not important to you.

JASON: I understand. Are they able to communicate through their own special means away from the council, away from the embodiment of high spirits? (Abraham: To mortals?) Jason: Yes. (Abraham: Oh yes.)

JASON: I understand. So-to-speak then, would they look at all of us and give us sensation on a certain feeling, spiritual or material, to inspire thought reaction?

ABRAHAM: Probably you are receiving inspiration from their subordinates, but maybe not, perhaps directly from them at times. Situations are all different and require different levels of spirit personalities to deal with them. Each situation, as it arises, is dealt with accordingly. Some situations in our view, which may seem insignificant to most people are tremendously significant and require a high level of communication or intervention. Each situation will receive as it needs to the best of our ability. Are there further questions?

TODD: Yes, I have one. Last week, Melchizedek stated that the upcoming changes could possibly cause small calamities; and, that you would like to see many people brought into the fold of believers. Then he said you would require our help with this. Was he referring to both the avoidance of small calamities and, bringing the people into the fold? or just the latter.

ABRAHAM: Both, both. I don't wish to cause apprehension among anyone. These things may seem small to you, you see. As he said, small calamities can change the world.

To us, they are calamities. To you, they may seem as nothing important. Do you understand? (Todd: Yes. Thank you very much.)

NINA: We have been reading about the stages of Light and Life. We were wondering what stage Urantia might be in, if any?

ABRAHAM: Urantia has far to go before reaching settled Light and Life; many millenniums will pass first. We are in the initial preparatory stages toward Light and Life.

JASON: Do you anticipate regression in the future?

ABRAHAM: Yes, we have seen regression already and this will undoubtedly continue for a time. (Jason: How may we help you the most effectively?)

ABRAHAM: This is an interesting question. Each person has his/her endowments which does allow him or her to work and flourish in the world. This is not a simple task. This requires much time, much effort, and will not be pushed, cannot be pushed. This must be allowed to grow naturally to cause change, to reverse the downward (or the backward) trend that we have seen for so long. This will not be sudden. This must come gradually as the hearts of men come gradually to God.

JASON: Then by touching a few with a message of love through our daily living, we can teach and inspire others and that is what you would term the greatest help of all?

ABRAHAM: Naturally, yes this is the most important! This natural help to others is more important than needing armies, building bridges, building rockets, anything; being President of these United States is not as important as this. Let not your hearts be troubled, neither let them be afraid. Go courageously into the world. Shirk not your duty to the Lord. Are there any other questions? (Group: none.)
Abraham: Then I have a few words on this lesson to impart.

Stand before the Lord with a clean heart. Be unafraid. Be truthful. Be cleansed of sin and doubt, and be unafraid. His Spirit, which is always with you, will always aid you if you turn to Him and allow. Lean not upon your own understanding, but lean on the power and the understanding heart of God who sees all things and knows all things, and who will show you how to impart your words. And this should be noted by Rebecca, especially. We all stumble. We all have doubts. This is natural and expected, yes. But after stumbling, rise again. After doubt, wisdom grows and in this way, always shall. I wish to leave you all in peace. Shalom.

A Call To Service / To Show Forth the Fruits of the Spirit

Back

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. I am aware there are many questions this evening; you may proceed with them.

SHEILA: Yes, Ham. In the Urantia Book, it speaks of a Christian Church that is in its larval stage. Can you elaborate on this? (Ham: This is referring to our movement?)

SHEILA: Well, I'll read to you out of the book: "Thus does the so-called Christian Church become the cocoon in which the kingdom of Jesus' concept now slumbers. The kingdom of the divine brotherhood is still alive and will eventually and certainly come forth from this long submergence just as surely as the butterfly eventually emerges as the beautiful unfolding of its less attractive creature of metamorphic development." That's the church I'm asking about.

HAM: Yes, correct. There are many passages in the Urantia Book referring to these events in one way or the other. This is not prophesy, for these events are planned, you see. Yes, there is becoming, emerging, a new church, in a sense. This is the purpose of these schools and these lessons to bring forth the teachings of Jesus once more; to bring them alive from their dormant state. This is our purpose and mission. This is what we shall undoubtedly accomplish. Does this answer? (Sheila: Yes, it does.)

JASON: Would we be allowed to know a specific name for a group organization?

HAM: To be known as a specific name? (Jason: Yes.) Ham: Perhaps. Undecided.

JOHN: Ham, Todd and I were wondering: We have to take a class for school, but with interruption to our meeting-attendance here for about eight weeks. We were wondering if it would be detrimental to our learning and growth if we took the class, as opposed to coming to the meetings or just listening to the tapes?

HAM: My son, what do you think? (John: I don't know. I thought that we could just listen to the tapes and get just as much out of it.)

HAM: I cannot talk to you on a tape. (John: Okay. I understand.)

HAM: The main purpose for these communications is two-way contact, mind to mind, questions answered. To my knowledge, to my understanding and wisdom, this is very important. If the day's opportunities change, this matters not, but contact between us should continue. Further questions, please.

QUESTION: Ham, do our Thought Adjusters have names? (Ham: No, they do not. They are your name when you are one. Are there further questions?)

JOHN: Can anyone else in the group receive their spiritual name?

HAM: As I said, these names are revealed to yourselves, when ready, and also to me; and this spiritual occurrence may come while we are together or apart. I am directed to reveal these names by your Thought Adjusters only when it is deemed wise to do so.

HAM: Are there further questions or shall we proceed with our lesson? (Group: Let's proceed.)

HAM: The Father in heaven is love, is mercy, is wisdom, is guidance the true parental attitude toward His children. His way may not be easy. His way, in fact, is never the easy way, for it is filled with obstacles to your progress; it is filled with injury and hard, rough, experience. This should never be forgotten that it requires effort, courage, skill, and wisdom, to progress in the kingdom.

You all know you are sons and daughters of God. You are all safely within the kingdom of heaven. I say this with authority you are, without exception, within the kingdom. Progress from here will not be easy, and this is a fact. You are all called to show forth the fruits of the Spirit in your lives; to grow and develop character and sagacity in your dealings with your fellows.

We are much dependent on your progress, and certain are we of your eventual successes. We believe in you and have faith in you and this also, I say with authority. You will show forth the fruits of tenderness in your dealings with man; of wisdom in your answers to men; of love; of courage; and righteousness in all things, however small.

It is the small and repeated action that impresses others. It is constancy, constancy in righteousness that you shall not waver no matter what the temptation that befalls you. These things, these tests, occur in every-day-living reality. They may impede and hamper your stride, yes, but we require you to walk uprightly and progress in the kingdom so that these obstacles (life's challenges) will be courageously overcome, and that you will not stumble upon them further.

What is important? What is true? man asks. Yes, we know what is important. The lesser things will not hinder you if you do not allow them to; they will not hurt you; they will not stop you. You will not falter if you persist in thinking and acting in accordance to the doing of the will of your Father in heaven, and my Father in heaven.

Up to now I have used softer tones for you and have emphasized His love for you His acceptance and mercy and tolerance of all things. Tonight, I feel the instruction to call you to service. That, we will begin shortly. Have you questions?

RICHARD: Ham, I have a couple of questions. I know of people outside of this group which I feel are more righteous, having those virtues you described in your lesson tonight, more-so than myself. When you encourage us to do the Father's will, I'm not sure just what to do, specifically. It is not always clear to me at all what the Father's will is except in very general terms, and just in terms of my attitude in my specific life what happens to me daily in my life. I guess partly, because of my philosophical mind. I can see things from so many points of view that I confuse myself, and it just is not clear to me what the right thing to do, is. Can you give me any help in understanding how I can grow spiritually in the ways you would encourage us all to do?

HAM: Do you mean 'in the ways that God wants?' (Richard: Yes).

HAM: Yes, always remember who it is we serve. One moment. I perceive you are correct in your assessment of your mind. Naturally are you somewhat resistant, stubborn, and yet, willful and this is alright. One moment. If you truly desire higher spiritual experience (and truly desire is the key), you must be willing to allow this transition to occur. Father and His will must appeal to your mind, first. At times this 'allowing' is difficult because of your mental activity and emotional actions. You must seek the stillness more often. Be open to His guidance through the stillness. The stillness is to still the mortal mind and allow Father's presence to enter your mind. His response will be as much or as little as you can allow. This simple practice will begin to give you more and more peace in your life. This, for you at this time, is beneficial and will begin to help you spiritually to grow and to have a mental calmness. For you, a little will do very much benefit. Is there anything else?

RICHARD: Ham, may I call you 'Teacher?'

HAM: That would please me very much. (Richard: Thank you, Teacher.)

HAM: You are very welcome. The stillness is an important concept for everyone to understand. The mind is like water which, when turbulent, reflects and refracts light in many directions. When still, however, it reflects the light of God to the capacity of the person. In prayer, forget not to wait for a while for an answer or an attitude change. Father's ear is always open. He hears our prayer and understands our needs. Forget not this great and tremendous reality.

This evening's session is now ended. I will leave you for this evening. My prayers go with you all. Farewell.

Seek First To Learn and Become Living Examples Before Going Forth To Proclaim

Back

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

Good evening. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Let us begin with your questions.

TODD: I have a question, Ham. Your response to John's question last week gave me the impression that our mission for the Correcting Time would be the first priority in our life. However, I have a prior commitment to the people I work with in Atlanta, to go and work with them at least one year after I finish school. I was wondering, am I going to be able to fulfill this obligation? or do I need to make other arrangements with them?

HAM: One moment. Yes, perhaps other arrangements can be made.

JOHN: Ham, I was also wondering and in response to your answer to my question last week it gave me a new outlook of the priority. I was wondering how much time are we actually going to have to devote to this. When the Correcting Time begins are we going to have to treat it like a full-time job? or part-time. I was wondering how much effort to put in.

HAM: This should not worry you. Each person will do what is required for this work. Yes, this is important, more important than you can see. Yes, I ask of you to make it your priority in life. But if you cannot do this, it is understood. However, I admonish you to heed me and who I represent to you. My mission is to teach and to organize you for future action. If you do not take this seriously now, how will you regard it later when it is necessary for you to heed me when we rely upon you?

JOHN: Ham, did you infer from my question that I wasn't willing to commit? (Ham: I am not convinced, completely.)

JOHN: I truly believe I'm committed wholeheartedly. (Ham: Very well.)

JOHN: Is there anything I can do to prepare myself?

HAM: My son, you have given much and you have done much up to now. This is pleasing. You do well. Further questions?

JASON: Yes Ham, I would like to ask a question about spiritual thinking. In particular, during this week I have had some distressful contemplating and spiritual thinking. Most of the confusion is caused by my mortal nature, my physical-thinking, my earthly state. I will receive inspirations and intensifying sensations followed by confusion and mental discernment that distracts me from focusing clearly on what was just disseminated to me. I would like to ask how the Thought Adjuster best conveys Himself in particular to myself, and how I might become more receptive to His speaking to me.

HAM: Because life is filled with distraction and turmoil, it becomes necessary to put a little time aside, daily, for spiritual receptivity only.

JASON: And I have done this. These times are ritualistic to me. They occur many times during the day.

HAM: And yet you're distracted by your own thinking? (Jason: Yes, in some cases.)

HAM: This is common. Attempt to lessen it.

JASON: I see. May I ask one brief question? (Ham: Certainly). Jason: When I was with a lady, a holistic medicine practitioner during my session with her, she used a dazing method to communicate with me. And to her surprise, and mine, an overwhelming sensation was very present in the room. She claims it emanated from myself. If you are aware of this incident, may I know what this sensation was that she was affected by severely?

HAM: One moment. You are aware there are celestial beings that are here, correct?
(Jason: Yes, is this a future thing I am to be familiar with?)

HAM: My information comes from you and others here who ask. I do not consult outside, normally. What I perceive this occurrence to be was the arrival of an archangel, yes, who witnessed your exchange. (Jason: I understand now. This is an affirmation. Thank you.)

HAM: I shall proceed with our lesson for this evening: Our Father in heaven is near to all believing persons. His nearness increases with faith in Him. When first we decide to believe in God??and this is always a conscious decision, whether early or later in life??then God-consciousness seems a far-off thing, a nebulous concept at best. He, or rather your awareness of Him, is colored by the input of others so that, as children, your belief in God is as your parents described Him to you.

It is this early concept of 'good and bad,' 'right or wrong,' 'justice and injustice,' that becomes pattern and grows to intermediate levels which has produced some personal experience-patterns in life that says 'right living' gives you the least amount of problems and makes it easier to live. That thinking, that pattern, is distressing, yes, for the conscience is allayed and fears are helped to subside through the belief that 'everything is for the best,' or, 'everything will turn out alright because it's God's will.' It is a mindset that says: 'my life is fairly stable at this point and there is not need for change, for growth.'

Do you see, this level of understanding (that all will be well) is the majority. The majority will fudge it a bit on the edges; they will be slightly immoral when it suits them and think that they can make it up later; or ask forgiveness over and over; or go to confession. Yet, this level of belief entails much confusion because of the imperfect vision of the real nature of God, the real nature of reality.

And so, the vast majority stumble through life with their eyes almost closed. The few who go past this level do so by receiving personal spiritual guidance on a continual basis. Once this concept is grasped (of personal spiritual guidance in all of daily living) then each person may progress very rapidly if they follow it.

Now here, many come against problems with family, friends, and church, etc.; and many will not follow guidance not completely or wholeheartedly. Then comes much justification. This justification may be unconscious, or become unconscious after a while. As was with Abraham he continued to sacrifice long after his instruction directly from Melchizedek that this (sacrificing) is a wasteful practice and entirely unnecessary.

Abraham did not feel secure in his new-found liberty Machiventa had taught him; he was still quite bound by tradition his peers looked up to him; they expected this action to sacrifice. In this day, we see the absurdity of 'having to sacrifice' with a more-clear light. In Abraham's day, however, you must sympathize with his plight.

There are many similar instances in modern religious life. The truth will always progress down through the ages, even unconsciously, through generations. Then there are times of great spiritual enlightenment when the unconscious becomes conscious. When the truth is told and the way opens up, the response will be forthcoming.

This unconscious well of spirituality on Earth at this time is, or will be, ready to burst forth with many many people. But for now, I tell you do not go forth boldly proclaiming the gospel; the time for that will come later. For now, hear me; talk to me; advance yourselves and prepare. You are all my responsibility and I love you as a father, all of you. Be not distressed or troubled. Walk slowly at this time of transition. My best wishes to you this week. Farewell.

John Preached Baptism and Repentance. I Say Today, Forgiveness

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Are there any questions to begin with this evening? [All Q/A's were personal and omitted here.] Let us proceed with tonight's lesson.

Our Father in heaven the Creator, the Upholder, Master, King, loving Parent of the vast, and to our small imaginations, limitless universe, is also resident within your minds. Pause to consider the contact of the infinite eternal God who extends personally to His personal children in the most intimate and sublime relationship.

In a way, you as our Father's creature, children, creation are His thought; your independent thoughts are all known to Him. Nothing of your mind, intentions, will, desires, after-thoughts, foresight nor spiritual insight, is unknown to Him. He encompasses all of reality. There is no hiding of a thought or an intention. In Him, we live, move, and have our being.

Our thought intentions have repercussions outward, as well as inward. This presence within the mortal mind is known to the Father as the 'Thought Adjuster.' These Adjusters have repercussions which manifest in the Supreme, for not only do actions have repercussions, but thoughts do as well.

Father's thoughts of love, forgiveness, and mercy, becomes yours and bears the fruits of tolerance, forbearance, worshipfulness, service, and a kindly nature. His thoughts of giving, caring, and lovingness flow outward as understanding, kindness, happiness, and tolerance. We must seek to broaden ourselves; to encompass these great thoughts; to be the vessel of these great thoughts.

At best we can only hope to capture some of this greatness, some drop as in an ocean of infinite greatness. His love is beyond our complete comprehension. Yet, a drop enters, nourishing us, growing us, giving us strength. We need to open ourselves to those drops of love. We cannot be the ocean; we can only receive what we can receive. But, in the God-knowing mortal, the results are seen clearly. "By their fruits, you shall know them," He said; and so it is and ever shall be.

Tolerance is a mighty gift. Only the strong are truly tolerant. This mighty tree of tolerance grows; and grown in time it gives comfort and shade to all who come near it. Forbearance, likewise, and long-suffering. A strong tree bends not in the wind and the rain; it forbears all things and continues to grow and be a comfort to all those who come near it.

Forgivenesshow many times shall we forgive our neighbor? Can we ever afford not to infinity? No! Forgiveness must be constant, consistent, and all-encompassing. To err is human. Our Father forgives us our errors can we now turn to our brother and forgive him not? No! for this is not God-like behavior. The Father frowns on unforgiveness.

Forgiveness remains the cornerstone of the gospel in this twentieth century after Christ. I cannot overemphasize its importanceboth in your life, and its relation in the gospel. In order to cleanse yourself, forgiveness is necessary. John preached repentance for cleansing and baptism. I would say to youforgiveness, instead. The Father's forgiveness is an open offer; open to all who would receive it.

My time grows short. We will discuss this further at our next meeting and then I will receive and answer questions. For now, I must retire. Farewell.

The Living Channel of Faith and Its Transforming Effects. The Liberation of Faith

Back

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

My greetings to you. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Perhaps you have questions?

RACHEL: Yes, good evening, Father Ham. I have a couple of questions. Can you tell us how our spiritual names are chosen and who assigns them to us?

HAM: One moment. Daughter Rachel, your name is a perception of your personal being; it is the conception of you as a personal being able to be perceived by others beginning at your physical birththough previously, in the physical embryonic state, you were developing. At the point of partition from the mother a separate person is perceived, and this person is individual and precious to God. In the broadest sense, God names you. In the practical sense, the name reflects the spiritual perception of the individual person and is thus recorded. All spiritual beings perceive you as Rachel, and always will. The tone quality of your name has a physical manifest. It is not quite the same as pure spiritual perception, but being on a material level, it is best we can do. Are you understanding?

RACHEL: Yes, and I thank you, Ham. Are there ways we can show our love and appreciation to the midwayers other than through prayer?

HAM: I have been asked to deliver a message of appreciative thanks from our midwayer friends, to you.

JOSHUA: Father Ham, may I ask a question? (Ham: Yes, Joshua, what is it)?

JOSHUA: Well, before I ask a question, I would like to bring you up to date on the happening concerning Michael Landon and the group in California. You may already know them. After last week's meeting, I called Duane Faw and he told me the Spanish speaking gentleman that helped him get the tape into the gardener's hands found out that Michael is in the hospital having a blood clot removed from his left leg. He went to the hospital and found which floor he was on, and which nursing station was taking care of him. He gave another copy of the tape to the nurse, and told her Michael was expecting the tape and please give it to him; and as far as we know, she did. He also told me that he was taking the tapes we've sent him and editing them to use at their meetings. So your teachings are going a lot further than this group. (Ham: Thank him for me). Joshua: I certainly will.

RICHARD: Teacher, my uncle Carl sends his greetings, his love. I shared with him some of what you have taught us, and he was greatly encouraged and heartened to hear of these proceedings. He asked if you might have some words of direction or encouragement for him? He is a person of a lot of faith in the Urantia Book, and he endeavors to minister to his acquaintances in a spiritual way. Can I take any message from you back to him?

HAM: Yes that I would like to see him.

RICHARD: Thank you. I'll tell him. May I ask one more question? (Ham: Certainly). Richard: When we pray, or just even when we talk, can the angels hear our voices -- even if they're not in the vicinity?

HAM: No. They do not perceive sound on a material level, but your thoughts, prayers, intentions may be perceived. (Richard: Thank you very much, teacher.)

ANGELA: Ham, I would just like to say thank you. Your teachings have greatly affected my life, and I wish to express my gratitude. Thank you.

HAM: Your appreciation is received and noted. If there are no further questions then I will proceed with our lesson:

Faith in the heavenly Father is a transforming experience. Faith is the channel through which the mortal person perceives the Eternal Father; it's the living link between the two so far separated. Without faith, there is no growth. Faith revitalizes and rejuvenates the body, mind, and soul. Faith is opening the door of the heart, mind, and allowing spiritual presence, entrance.

Faith is the active grabbing of spiritual truth, the active incorporation of spiritual reality into one's very being; it is the ladder to the infinite. Faith is active and requires activity on the part of the faith-believer. In order to utilize the spiritual currents of the universe, one must actively seek and be willing to use them. What purpose is this ladder if you don't climb it!

Faith is the use of the living God-presence. His spiritual presence is always with us; yet it requires faith to utilize this presence. Faith is strengthening by its very nature. Faith is the supreme ?will-dominance factor? in spiritual progress. Faith is man reaching up to God, and God reaching down to man. The reach of faith must be made to take that hand.

Faith utilizes the vast storehouse (or rather, the vast of spiritual energy) which envelops us, always surrounds and enfolds us. One may have intellectual recognition of this, but faith is the active daily utilization of this truth. Faith is only limited by ourselves.

Faith can be boundless; it is immeasurable. Faith is the free will act of choice, of choosing. First: to recognize God. Second: to understand God. Third: to appreciate God. And Fourth: to actively seek to do His will. Faith is the act of making His will, your will. This act is the greatest liberation man can know.

I am sorry. I perceive Rebecca is tired and I will strain her no further. However, next week I wish to continue this theme of the 'liberation of faith' and its transforming aspects for results. I thank you, and good evening.

Salvation Through Faith | Adversity Must Be Overcome In Order To Build A Strong Reliable Soul

Back

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

Greetings. I am ABRAHAM. I will be your Teacher for this evening. Are there any questions for me at this time?

JOSHUA: I'd like to make a statement and also ask a question. Richard and Rosanne cannot be with us tonight. They send their apologies and want you to know they very much wanted to be here. Also, I received a phone call from Duane (Faw) wherein he verified that Michael Landon had received the tapes.

ABRAHAM: This, we knew.

JOSHUA: Duane also wanted me to ask a question. In the Urantia Book, it talks about Van and Amadon and others that prepared the garden for the arrival of the Material Son and Daughter. Duane was wondering if perhaps in the future a Material Son and Daughter may arrive here on Urantia, and if so, could the celestials pick a location, for which he would like to contribute money to the purchase of whatever property and build a home for the Material Son and Daughter, and whoever else may need one. He has written a book and wants to use the proceeds from the book to further Father's work.

ABRAHAM: Yes, this intention is very honorable. However, time for such action has not come. To the question of ?will there be a Material Son and Daughter residing on Urantia in the near future, is still questionable and has not been fully and finally been decided. When it is I will tell you. (Joshua: Thank you). Abraham: Are there any other questions?

MEL: There is a question I'd like to ask about the adversity we experience in our life. What is the main purpose for the adversity?

ABRAHAM: This is a broad question, so I can only answer in broad terms. Adversity creates (or rather requires) a reaction. This reaction builds strength and stamina in character. Each person experiences adversity for this purpose. If life were easy and blissful, hard decisions would not be required to be made. These essential decisions must be made in order for there to be soul strengthening. In the parable of the Sower, we see that some seeds sprout readily and grow tall quickly, soon to be withered in the sun, not having the requisite strength (fortitude) to withstand vicissitude. Each person is like a plant. It is the good Gardener (the Thought Adjuster) who directs the tilling of your soil, the fertilization of your roots, the rain to fall, the wind to blow, the sun to shine; all this is done through the action of the angels, among others. Our good Father sees to it that His beloved child receives what is needful for the best growth of his soul. Adversity, even calamity, can be part of the nurturing process. The blessing of these seeming calamities may only be seen through hindsight and are not apparent to the growing seed/child. The good parent ensures proper medicine for any illness. As well, proper exercise to grow and to maintain robust health. Each child requires differing remedies and different exercise. By 'exercise' I am referring to robust life activitymentally and physically. In order to meet the challenges of life, each person must have experienced a certain hardship factor. And in the knowing that past hardships have been overcome, strengthens the mind and soul for future hardship (or mind conflict) which also must be grappled with. This 'can do' attitude is important and cannot develop further without having already done. Therefore, adversity, small and great, befalls us all and must be overcome and grappled with individually in order to build a strong and reliable soul. Does that answer? (Mel: Yes, thank you).

RACHEL: I don't have a question, Father Abraham, but I thank you kindly for being here with us tonight, and I hope there is nothing wrong with Ham, and send him our love.

ABRAHAM: No. Thank you, Rachel. He will be back next week. John, is there something you would like to ask? (John: I don't think so.)

ABRAHAM: Are you sure? (John: I'm pretty sure, but not too sure. I don't know.)

ABRAHAM: Very well then, my son, there is something I would like to say to you. We are happy with the progress you and David have made lately and we welcome you into the reserve corps of destiny where you will accomplish many duties under my leadership. You are now and in the future under my command and consider this an appointment. If we had ranks, you would be receiving a promotion. That is all I wish to say.

JOHN: Thank you very much. I am very honored and I gladly accept the appointment.

ABRAHAM: And David? (David: That goes for me, also.)

ABRAHAM: I am pleased, also, to communicate to Duane (Faw) that we are considering his previous request for an appointment of one of our Teachers in the near future. (Joshua: Thank you very much. I will call him tonight and convey this right after this meeting.)

ABRAHAM: Ruby, Martin, Benjamin, and Charles are doing well and send their love. [Editor's note: This refers to those of the New Zealand group Abraham's initial students.]

JOSHUA: Would you send our love back to them?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Let us proceed with tonight's lesson.

There are many things written in the Bible which are very uplifting, and many passages, whole books, which are very down-casting. In my day, before the Bible was written or compiled, there was very little writing. We relied on verbal messages practically completely. Traditions and new teachings were kept within the minds of the people or the persons learning. Each person learned slightly differently from every other, and his personal slant, or interpretation on a direct teaching, colored it forever.

These people who were taught by Melchizedek went forward into the world and passed this knowledge on as purely as possible until they died. They were admonished to train at least ten individuals of the younger generation as succinctly as they could, these same teachings; and they each, ten, and so forth. You can see within just a few generations the teachings would spread, but in the process be diluted and become mixed with other beliefs held by people.

The main message for seed teaching of 'salvation through faith' was eventually practically lost in many parts of the world, but remains strongest near the center of the Melchizedek bestowal (Palestine), especially the 'One God' concept. The 'One God' concept has remained strong through Christianity and is generally accepted throughout the world. One God for all peoples is a basic concept today in most religious understanding.

We wish now to extend this concept of 'One God for all people of the Earth' to 'One God for all worlds.' The concept of God over the Earth is limited and anthropomorphized. The concept of 'God for all worlds, all space, for all time,' is infinite and eternal. The concept of the infinite is partial and fragmentary at best, in your state of being; but the attempt of understanding this intense concept is, in itself, emerging. The understanding of a personal infinite is enlightening; and I will attempt as will Ham, through many lessons, to enlarge and strengthen your conception of the Eternal Father.

I pray that through me His voice speaks to you, and His love reaches your hearts. I only pray to serve Him who is invisible to our eyes, yes, but who is the greatest reality in existence. I pray that I may wisely bring forward His word that I may capture your imagination to enlighten your understanding. I pray that I may serve you well and in so doing, serve our Father. I pray that as His love grows within you that it may shine for all to see. I pray to you, Father; and to your Son personified in our Lord Michael, whose Spirit envelops and nourish each of us. And I pray that our work will be acceptable in His sight. Amen and shalom.

Faith, a Healing In All Aspects of Life | Faith Makes Us Perfect, One Step At a Time

Back

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Greetings. Greetings especially to the newcomers. Are there questions at this time?

MELISSA: Yes, Father Ham. When you told me "everything goes as planned," I have a question about this; actually a few questions. (Yes). What is this plan that I know was made, and yet unable to recall? What celestial being presented this plan to me, and where was I when the supernatural experience took place?

HAM: Yes. There is a plan for you. Yes, you have been advised concerning it. The ascension plan is varied according to the individual personality. Each person has insight into his or her own destiny according to one's spiritual level. However, in some cases the person may be shown or given additional insight, information beyond the normal spiritual scope. This would be regarded as a revelation revealing of the future, or rather, potential future; for you are free, of course, to determine your future. With guidance, fortitude, endurance, desire, will-power, determination and strength, you will achieve these spiritual levels revealed to you. Living the spiritual life requires all these things. And you, Melissa, have in store a sublime spiritual destiny, for your heart is known, cherished, and loved by many whom you do not realize. Your great will desires to do the Father's will; this is uppermost in your mind. This dedication is extremely appreciated. Your third question was who?

MELISSA: I wanted to know what celestial being presented the plan to me and where I was.

HAM: Yes. By a Melchizedek. You had not gone unnoticed. Awareness opened reality here on another awareness level. Are you understanding?

MELISSA: Yes, I am very appreciative.

JANA: I wanted to ask you about seraphim angels. If you could give me some information about them, or her, and why I was contacted?

HAM: Yes. The angelic circuits are being re-established; and angels are the daughters of the Infinite Spirit, who serve in many capacities including guardians of destiny. Seldom were human beings contacted by these daughters. Recent developments have allowed for mental contact to be easier, and when the time is propitious these contacts are favorable in allowing for not only mortal thought-expansion but also for personal messages to be delivered, such as the case with you. This was a message from your personal guardian of destiny, which she has told you is extremely important; it is wise to heed her. Melchizedek has instructed that any communication possible be made for the gathering of those who will heed. It is desirous for those with spiritual insight and sound understanding to come under his influence, guidance, and direction. These lessons are, in the main, prepared by his instruction, for this is the most important thing for you to do. Perhaps this unusual teaching method is new and disconcerting to you, but you will see the efficiency and wisdom in it. Does this answer? (Jana: Yes, thank you).

JOSHUA: Father Ham, you are aware we will hold our next meeting on this coming Monday? Is this okay with you?

HAM: Yes. I will now proceed with our lesson: At our previous meeting session, I discussed the living channel of faith and its transforming effects. I now wish to return to this subject in order to broaden and deepen your awareness of faith as a healing in all aspects of life.

Faith is the priceless treasure which cannot be bought or sold; it is free for the willing child of God. Faith is the living channel between the creature and the Creator; the soul and his Father; the son or daughter, and their all-powerful, all-wise, all-loving and merciful Eternal Parent. This living channel is indeed an umbilical cord it sustains and strengthens the child-creature in health, in mental efficiency, in life's performance, and in the transforming ability to bestow the Father's love upon one's fellows.

Only by faith is His love received. Only by faith does this love pour outward. Only by faith do we become a living channel of love. Only by faith do we grow and ascend. Only by faith are we ascended and received. Only by faith are many truths understood, or I should say, spiritually felt. There is no other technique. Only by faith are we saved from our ignorance. Only by faith do we know Him. Only by faith do we allow Him to know us.

It is faith which strengthens. It is faith that destroys error. It is faith which makes you perfect one step at a time. By faith are you healed, in body as well as soul. By faith is spiritual power known. By faith are small things made great. By faith is the mind brought to understanding of spiritual realities and truth.

Faith is the living way, the way shown by the way-shower, Michael, when made flesh. By faith the door to the kingdom is open. By faith we enter. By faith we are made safe and secure in this understanding. Faith is the wellspring of goodness which overcomes all evil. By faith we are brought into the light a light which cannot be darkened or diminished if by faith you truly desire.

I will leave you with the prayer that God's peace and His love be upon you always and forevermore. Farewell for this evening. Farewell.

Machiventa Declares The Time Is Ripe For Evangelism. Give Out Freely What You Have Been Given

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Greetings, my friends. This evening is important for I have many things to tell you, beginning with my announcement that the time has begun to bring together many potential believers. We will see who remains, and who does not. There should be no anxiety on the part of those bringing in new people for they will decide of their own accord or conscience what is best for them. Therefore, have no anxiety if they do not remain.

Secondly, I wish to declare the following: Machiventa Melchizedek, vicegerent Planetary Prince of Urantia, has decided to incorporate this group on a higher level. By this I mean, you are the first to begin evangelism under his, and therefore, my direction. As I have said previously, the Correcting Time has begun, and now begins the great harvest of souls ripened and ready to receive these truths.

This movement, or harvesting/gathering, brings much joy to our hearts; and will certainly also gladden yours when you see the results. This life is not long, and there is much for you to accomplish. We deem the time to be ripe for the beginning of this work in earnest. Be patient, be gentle and unhurried however, in your dealings with people, for each grain of wheat ripens in its own time; there is nothing you can do to hurry this process without the true spiritual receptivity of the recipient.

If the truth of my words did not create results in your lives you would not be here. What truth I give you freely, I wish you to give freely. Be unafraid to give it, for how it is received is really beyond your control. Each person can only sow these seeds, and then to wait for the results. Many times you will be disappointed, and even scorned this is known and understood.

Therefore, I send you with bravery, courage, wisdom, and discretion. Be gently yet firm, as I am. Be secure in your faith, as I know you are. Above all be loving, and many hungry souls will come to you on their own.

I am reminded of the parable of the good shepherd. When one of the flock is separated and goes astray, the good shepherd looks for that sheep tirelessly until he finds him and gently returns him to the fold. This is my mission to you to seek out those who are lost and to bring them from darkness into light; to give hope and peace and security in faith.

I admonish you be not discouraged, for the fruits of your labor will multiply many times. Melchizedek desires that many people who receive my teachings are prepared together with him, to teach others. This is the beginning of the Correcting Time. Are there any questions?

JOSHUA: Yes, Father Ham. Would it be wise to send this information to the ?Brotherhood of Man? library for them to disseminate to the readers of the Urantia Book? (Ham: Yes).

JASON: Teacher, I'd like to ask would you advise people in the group to start their own study group to introduce other people slowly to the Urantia Book, and then slowly to the teachings that you are giving us now?

HAM: No. My teachings are simple and direct. Perhaps my teachings would be easier for a person to receive than the Urantia Book. Therefore, I wish it the other way around that those receiving my teachings should then study, together, the book. As I said previous, the Urantia Book is like a tool for learning and understanding; it has, and will, bring many people to God. Yet, there is much contained therein which confuses and complicates the simplicity of our Father; and simple truth may be lost in this confusion. I will endeavor to make clear that confusion; to word-simplify that which is complex. As mental comprehension is thereby expanded, the papers of the Urantia Book become more and more easily comprehended. Yet, as all of you who have been readers do understand, this book has many different levels in each paper so that parts are understood at first, and then more and more of the whole is comprehended subsequently. Joshua can attest to this truth. It was designed that way. That is all. Further questions?

LAURA: Father Ham, can you address the role of the new women apostles of this day and age?

HAM: Yes. We understand this as the age when women are finally acknowledged as spiritually equal; and where women can, and will, play a vital?and in all respects, equal?role with men. Your roles will not be exactly the same, and do not expect them to be! You are each, individuals, yes; and each individual will therefore play a different part. However, women will not be segregated; there is no need for this, but will be fully integrated into the mainstream of this work. The example of this total equality of spiritual recognition will be a powerful influence in the world in the future; for now in today's world women are not recognized generally, to be 'spiritually equals' with men; it is this perception we desire to change.

RACHEL: Well Father Ham, I know that we have read in the Urantia Book that we will be equal; and that bothers me some here. I can't understand why you aren't teaching some of our young women separately as you are some of our young men. I know it wouldn't do any good to teach me at my age, but some of the young women we have here in our group are very capable.

HAM: Rebecca is chosen as my spokesperson transmitter to the group, and she is always present, as have many young women who have been taught privately. You see, this world is male dominant; and thus, in some work, men will be required; in other work, women are more capable. We are choosing individuals for individual tasks; and yes, their gender is figured into these tasks it cannot be otherwise. Rebecca is performing a gender-neutral task. In the future, a man's presence and voice may be required to say and do great and important work to lead men; for you see, this is a male-dominant world. I also have said, our example of full and total recognition of complete spiritual equality will influence into the future so that the world will not always remain as it is in these gender differences. Are you understanding?

RACHEL: Yes I am, Father Ham; and I guess that's why I always wished I was a man.

ELLANOR: Ham, do you mean that we are not spiritually equal on your plane either, men and women?

HAM: No. You are not understanding. You are completely spiritually equal absolutely, unequivocally, without a doubt, completely equal!

ELLANOR: Great, I am glad to hear it. [Laughter.]

RACHEL: Father Ham, trust me to open a can of worms.

JASON: At present we know there are about a dozen other Teacher/groups, is that correct? (Ham: Yes, you are correct).

JASON: I take it we can verify others with you? (Ham: Yes). Jason: Thank you.

JOHN: Are any of these other Teachers being publicized in books or mass means? or are they quite like this?

HAM: They are all quite like this, correct; but not necessarily Urantia Book based. (John: Thank you.)

JOHN W.: Teacher if we run across people who already have religious faith, should we teach them? or go on to other people. There could be a problem with others? religion, or their values.

HAM: Use your spirit-guidance and best wisdom/judgment in assessing each situation, separately. As Jesus taught, you never condemn another's belief. Only plant seeds of truth, and presently these will grow and crowd out any error. All belief systems on this world today contain differing measures of truth and error. Only seek the truth, and bestow the truth upon your brothers. Seek not to change any belief system; it is not important to do so, nor is it desirable. Does that answer? (John W: Yes, thank you).

RICHARD: Teacher, should we take that to mean that if we are talking to someone that is not a Christian, we should allow them to continue to not to believe in Jesus? Or should we make some effort to persuade them toward the religion of Jesus?

HAM: Yes, this is difficult. Christianity, in its present form, is much distorted in its view of Jesus. This distorted view has turned many away from His good teachings. At present, modern-day Christianity does almost as much to hinder the spread of the gospel of Jesus as it does to promote it. His teachings cannot be thought untrue by any thinking person. Therefore, His teachings should be used not as does doctrinal Christianity, but used as direct spiritual food instead. But as I said, do not attempt to dissuade the person away from their heartfelt convictions. Does this help at all?

RICHARD: Yes, it does. I have another question related to that. I have known good people, responsible and caring people, who claim to be agnostic. Can I assume some of these people have a good working relationship with their Thought Adjuster, despite their disbelief in God?

HAM: Yes. Yes, you can. (Richard: Thank you).

HAM: Most of the work of the Thought Adjusters is not conscious, but subconscious. And therefore, many are led and directed by their inner God without conscious recognition of this leading and directing. Of course, conscious decision to recognize God; to recognize and to accept His reality, both within and without??to understand His love and care for each person, and the desire to become like Him, to affirm His will within our own??is the first steps to immortality; and these are very crucial. Is there anything else?

JOSHUA: Father Ham, do most mortals survive?

HAM: One moment. Yes. (Joshua: Thank you very much).

LAURA: Father Ham, I'm new to the Urantia Book and I would like to understand 'evangelism,' and my mind is perceiving it as influencing the people in our lives through our good works, through our communications, and possibly even through books or songs.

HAM: The very example of your particular lives, your daily living, correct.

LAURA: So how we begin is to be at whatever stage we are at with our lives; by being more conscious of how we are living our lives, and how we are influencing people in our lives?

HAM: You are conscious now of your influence, correct? (Laura: Yes). Ham: This influence will extend, fear not. You must not think that you must be perfect to extend yourself, for this is impossible; and yet, this self-expectation is understood. You need only the desire to become as God is; to allow His being to make your uniqueness more real and unique. This does not require conformity, but rather, extreme individualityto be who you really are; and, to realize who you really are, more and more, day by day. And this unique reality will naturally be attractive. We ask of nothing of anyone but that.

RICHARD: Then Teacher, do I understand that despite the fact that we are to be evangelical, your teachings to us as a group will still continue?

HAM: Yes, of course, my son; the shepherd does not leave his flock. (Richard: Thank you.)

HAM: In closing, I would like to express: We have among us one who has walked this Earth. One who has lived and suffered in life as you have; who has borne trials and ease, disappointments and pleasure; songs, tears, laughter, melodies, ugliness and beauty, despair and relief. He has personally sent His Spirit-presence to be with each person; yes, for him to have complete understanding, and for each person to have complete comfort in that understanding. There is nothing you have suffered, experienced, borne or forgiven, which He has not done also with you.

Yes, we worship our Father, but we must not forget to revere our Brother/Father, for He is understandingly close to each of us as a brother by your side in times of trouble, in times of happiness, in grief, and in love. His Spirit-presence is always near. We should not forget to acknowledge, in grateful humility, this extreme gift. At this time may we each offer Him a silent prayer. [pause.]. Amen and farewell for this evening.

Truth Is An Experience Of The Soul. It Forever Banishes Darkness

Back

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

Greetings this evening. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Greetings all newcomers. I am happy to see you on this wonderful summer night. And now, if there are any questions.

ROSANNE: Ham I have a question. A few weeks ago, someone ask a question about our Thought Adjusters when they are gone, and if our souls are inactive at the time, and you said, yes. I was wondering if you would clarify soul growth?

HAM: Yes. The soul is that living entity which is grown by the process of the Thought Adjuster's interaction with the personality producing the real living being, the personal self, or soul. The Thought Adjuster transcribes, or takes, the physical mind manifestation of a personal reality and creates from that its counterpart on the morontia level of reality so that every true meaningful-felt thought reaction is made eternally real in the soul.

The soul is indestructible and unassailable. It is real, and in a truer sense, a more lasting sense than say your physical body. Your innermost, deepest, fairest and the truest reality that is you, is contained within the soul.

During the entire mortal life, the Thought Adjuster continually takes that which is best of you and realitizes this into the soul. And it is this 'true you' which survives the dissolution of the mortal body, and which is once again personalized on the Mansion Worlds. This is the reality which you would say shines from within; is that reality which you see in another's eyes; that reality which your soul feels in another; that reality which is spiritually responsive and knows, because it is.

It is by and through the soul that love is felt, that true values are known. And that progress toward these ultimate realities (in that it makes these realities its own) realitizes spiritual values and love. This growing entity, reality, is felt most strongly in the heart center and seems to radiate out from there. Therefore, the work of the Thought Adjuster??this spiritual movement, and the ?becoming real? of the person??is felt at the heart.

The more the soul encompasses your total reality, the more the soul grows and the more real and enduring is the individual person. On the contrary, the less a person grows spiritually, you would say the heart hardens and becomes unresponsive to spiritual activity. Does that answer adequate? (Rosanne: Yes it does, very well. Thank you.) Ham: Are there any other questions?

DAVID: Yes, I have a question, Father Ham. I had a dream where I was talking to a high school teacher, and in the dream, I felt an overwhelming urge to tell him of what was going on here. I was wondering if that was from my Thought Adjuster? or just a dream.

HAM: Yes. Dreams are a difficult subject. Many times they are significant, yes, but the majority of the time you would say they are not. However, I perceive this particular dream was extremely vivid. And I also perceive that the high school teacher in the dream is a conglomerate, or representing many people. This particular person is not specifically significant meaning he could be representing people in general, but was in the form of one individual. I don't see it as a calling to contact him, particularly. Does that answer? (David: Yes)

LAURA: Father Ham, recently I received a dream in which I came face to face to a man that looked exactly like me, and then that same night I experienced an uncomfortable high frequency; and at the same time I felt very happy and peaceful. I awoke from that night feeling very peaceful and calm. I don't know what a Thought Adjuster is. I thought if you could address that, and if the dream was in regard to the Thought Adjuster.

HAM: Your first question you are unfamiliar with what the Thought Adjusters are, correct? (Laura: Yes).

HAM: I will speak further on this: On this world, we refer to the Spirit of God, which resides in our minds, as Thought Adjusters. These spirits are individual to each person. They are of God the Father. They are an individual Fragment of His pure spirit self. They lead and guide, individually, each person, on the road of life. They are the Eternal Paradise Father in a form where He may individually know each of His vast numbers of children so that He, personally, can be with each. Each child, by their will, may choose to identify his or her will with the will of the indwelling Father; and by so choosing, in decision after decision throughout life, the child increasingly becomes like the Father. Do you see? (Laura: Yes.)

HAM: So that: "Be you perfect, even as the Father is perfect" becomes a command to know God, to love Him, and to identify yourself with Him. The only active means that this becomes a reality is by our choosing; in our decisions in our daily life, ?It is my will that your will be done.? Do you see? (Laura: Yes).

HAM: In so identifying the two wills as one, the child and the Father come together increasingly to the point of complete cohesion or fusion. And at this point eternal life is assured, the two become one, completely; there is no separation anymore. This fusion normally happens in the life beyond this life, but the beginnings of this process does occur in this life. If such complete fusion of the Infinite Eternal God with the mortal finite child does occur during mortal life, the child is immediately (or rather the new person, is immediately) translated onto a Morontia World, and the mortal body is consumed by the energy involved. However, this is very rare on this world at this time. What else would you know?

LAURA: Well, I have two more questions. One has to do with health, and one has to do with the journey. The first: I noted today in researching some papers in my office, that I, in 1980, had noted that I was going to talk to my doctor about the itching I had in my chin. I recently went to a doctor here in Salt Lake City, and also asked him about the itching in the back of my head. And my doubts come up about my health because I was a smoker for many, many years. So I'm concerned.

HAM: One moment. Yes. That which you perceive as itching has an underlying distress cause. If we relieve this distress, then will also the itching cease. At this time, I advise to allow some time to pass before the administering of spiritual healing. Next question. [Omittedpersonal nature.]

HAM: Let's begin tonight's lesson: As for now, I wish to speak again concerning truth. I have spoken to you of truth in the past, and now wish to extend the lesson. Truth is ever abidingthat is, it is eternal. We may know truth in fragments; in partial shadows; in lines that fade and grow dark. The truth I speak of today is the truth of the one Eternal Father.

Father's truth passes not away, nor is it 'true for a time.' His truth is ever abiding and true 'for all time.' Of this truth, we may see but as a pinpoint of light the blazing glory which is His truth. Yet, that pinpoint of light is our guidance, is our hope, is the source of our destiny and the goal of the ages; for truth is an experience of the soul. It is that knowing sense of identification with reality. It is that shock of affirmation. It is that quiet glow of wisdom.

Truth is light. Truth is spiritual light which forever banishes darkness. I repeat: Truth is light which forever banishes darkness. There is no shadowy uncertainty in the truth. Truth is that light which forever banishes darkness.

That is all for this evening. My thanks to one and all, and farewell.

Love is That Which Sustains Harmony. It Brings to Life, New Awarenesses. The Atonement Doctrine

Ham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-01-1991
Back

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

My greetings to you this evening. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. This evening I wish to begin with my lesson, at the suggestion of Joshua that this would expedite our sessions together, and not tire Rebecca as much.

Last week I spoke of truth as light, and tonight I wish to speak of love as harmony. Love strikes the spiritual chords, which always results in divine harmony. Harmony is the opposite of discord; it is strong and beautiful, simple and true. Harmony is balance; it is the balance between all spiritual beings. That which sustains this harmonious balance is love.

Our Father is the source of this sustenance, and balance, and harmony, for He is love. As in musical harmony, there is synchronicity of vibration, or tone. And these tones, in their synchronous vibration, create music. And this music is divine; it is the harmonious melody which is the perfect reflection of the Paradise Center. Love, you see, creates the feeling of harmonious vibration within the soul; and this love vibration (harmony), in reality, radiates from the soul-center—the heart.

What is love? Love is the spiritual reaction to an understanding of the divine harmony, which is the Father. Love is supreme understanding. Love is delight—delighting in and rejoicing in, the experience of God. Love is the understanding sympathy for one's fellows. Love is seeing them as our Father sees them. Love is seeing yourself as our Father sees you. Love is recognition of our Father and your sonship, at once.

Love is the overwhelming tidal wave of spiritual reality which washes through you, cleansing and nurturing and bringing to life new awareness. Love is the greatest spiritual reality there is. And so, as the soul grows in capacity of understanding, forgiveness, tolerance, forbearance, hope, faith, and trust—so does its capacity increase to give and receive divine love. Our Father is no respecter of persons. He loves all His children. We only differ in our ability to receive it.

My life is very rich in love, and I would wish the same for each of you. It is love which makes an experience truly meaningful. It is love which softens the hardships of life. It is love that deepens and enriches the emotions, the emotional life. It is love that turns the grayness of reality of day-to-day life into a colorful portrait of divine meaning and mutual understandings.

We are led to God through faith, yes, but by our love of God do we know Him. It is the supreme 'privilege' rather than 'duty.' Yes, it is the supreme privilege of man to love God with all his heart, all his mind, all his soul. I say again, our Father is no respecter of persons. We differ in our ability to receive Him.

Therefore I say, open your hearts to Him. Allow His love to flow through you. Allow your life to be transformed in His love and with the wise love of your fellows. Allow this to deepen and enrich your lives. You will understand, you will witness how goodness springs up, how goodness grows, yes, how goodness becomes a passion in your lives. Even the Master said: "Why do you call me good? It is God that is good." Yes, it is God that is the source of all goodness and truth and beauty. "It is best to center your minds on Him," was the Master's words.

Many many things will come to pass, my children; and you may marvel at first at my words. In time, you will come to see the truth of which I speak to you now. And now if you wish, I will receive questions.

RACHEL: Father Ham, we have a new member with us tonight, Bill Stevenson. Bill has been studying the Urantia Book for some time. Prior to that, he had been searching and when he did find the Urantia Book and started studying it, he says he now feels at peace. He also has a number of others in Ogden, from where he comes, where he feels he could start a study group. He has a question tonight.

BILL: Would that be something that would be desirable to start a study group in Ogden?

HAM: One moment. Yes, of course.

BILL: I feel like I don't have the knowledge to bring the kind of forces together that would bring these people into understanding and in reading Urantia Book, it's such a powerful message. It seems to take people a long time to start into it. I feel I need more instruction.

JOSHUA: Father Ham, I volunteer to go up and help him if necessary.

BILL: I have given the book to my sister and two others, but it's hard to get them to share the same enthusiasm as I. I feel inadequate, to say the least. I plan to give the book to four others because of the help they gave me during my search.

HAM: Yes, I see. Many people have not attained or reached that point of searching which you have. And further in each person the search is different; their finding is different. In the larger overview, wider perspective, they, like you, all basically reach the same general levels although by very different means; so that what is interesting to one and causes a sense of spiritual progress, may not for another. This is not to worry you. This is simply, life. The Urantia Book is the beginning and basis of a great revelation such as the world has never known. Many people spoke with Jesus Christ during His bestowal life; and most, as we know, did not recognize His divine origin. And for now, most will not recognize the divine origin of the Urantia Book. This is not surprising. Do not let it distress you; but rather, count yourself fortunate to recognize it to be living in a time when these revelations are occurring and to be part of their spread. When, or if, even two people, or even just one other, wishes to study the book with you, then be prepared to guide them through. The book is spiritual food for a hungry world, and those who seek will find. And further, and I say this to all of you, as Rachel has said: "teaching is a great learning experience." Are there further questions?

NATALIE: Yes. I was reading in the Urantia Book about the atonement doctrine, and I was told a while ago something about it; and I am wondering if you could elaborate on this?

HAM: Yes, I will. One moment, please. The atonement doctrine is just that, it is doctrine, man-made, and has no place in these revelations which is the expanded gospel of Jesus.

NATALIE: So what I was told was that false?

HAM: I must know what you were told.

NATALIE: I was just wondering what it was the truth about it.

HAM: The atonement doctrine is that body of thought which comprises the following:

1. The fact of Jesus' life; and,
2. The fact of His death.

The fact of Jesus' death is, unfortunately, the overriding fact between the two. It is that body of thought which says: 'He became a reality in order for His death to occur; that, by His suffering and horrible death, God is reconciled to man.' It is that doctrine which announces, 'He died for our sins.' 'He took all the sins of the world upon Himself and laid down His life, thereby cleansing the world in making salvation possible through Him.' I refer to the Urantia Book, the page number Joshua can readily find. (Natalie: Thank you).

MARTHA: Father Ham, referring back to the atonement what's the meaning of the word atonement if you say it at-one-ment? I have read about it in books as meaning 'a oneness.'

HAM: At-one-ment is a different concept altogether. This can be used to further spiritual advancements symbolically perhaps, as in using the sacrament as an 'at-one-ment' ritual; 'at-one-ment' with Jesus Christ; 'at-one-ment' with God; 'at-one-ment' with each other. All this, referring to spiritual unity. This concept is positive and growth-promoting. Atonement is an outdated concept. As a people, you have outgrown this. (Martha: Thank you).

ROB: Father Ham, recently I read about a doorway that is supposed to be opening around January 1992 that is called the eleven-eleven. Can you talk about this at all?

HAM: Yes, specifically what you have read, I cannot comment. However, there is truth in this concept, in that spiritual energy circuits are, in fact, being reopened and this will create new possibilities, or doorways, for spiritual growth. That is, the spiritual energy makeup of the world, this world, will be gradually altered; and great progress, as individuals and as groups, will be possible. Thus, I interpret it as a doorway. Can you be more specific?

ROB: I think you have answered my question, very well. The only other thing that comes to mind is that its awareness is a doorway that allows an awareness. (Ham: Yes.) Rob: And it's something that will, like you said, open our energies; or allow us to possibly allow our energies to look for something a little bit different, a little bit higher with our consciousness. (Ham: Yes. Very good.) Rob: Thank you, Father Ham.

LOREINA: Father Ham, along the same lines that was just spoken of what it specifically said was that there was a specific date in January 1992, and I think it's January 11th or 12th, where there would be some type of group or mass awakening of awareness which they are calling a doorway to another realm of spiritual consciousness. And one of the things spoken of was that this is a very intensive time of purification; and that people are dealing with those things in their psyche, in their personal lives, which they must release in order to clear out; to prepare to be open to receive the signals, or the promptings of spirit, on this particular date.

HAM: There is no particular date. This gradual spiritual awakening is occurring, yes. Sudden elevations may occur to individuals, and to groups of individuals. But for the most part, this is the exception rather than the rule. And, no, there is no specific date.

JOSHUA: As you know, we heard the sad news that Michael Landon has passed away; and we feel we are losing the vast potential of good he could have accomplished. I have a question about healing: Are these beings that are skilled in the spiritual healing, are they with me constantly? or do I have to pray to Father and set a date?

HAM: They are mostly in constant association with you. However, it is only in accordance with the true and total will of our Father that these healings may take place; and also it requires a level of complete faith on the part of the recipient, or else these healings will be ineffective or partially ineffective. There is no middle ground. I will receive one more question?

BILL: Father Ham, I have been studying the chakra energy system of the Hindu religion, and it seems it has some basic truths in it. Could you enlighten me on this?

HAM: Yes. This system of energy awareness is very ancient. Parts of it are true, and parts are partially true, and parts are completely false. Spiritual energies, yes, do flow throughout the body (material body), and certain points are like eddies within the spiritual flow. There are numerous such eddying points within the body, and some of these have been found by the art of acupuncture as well. The two main chakras--the heart chakra and head chakra--are the most significant. Although the head chakra is more in the center of the skull, more on the top rather than the forehead, and the heart chakra is centered in the body. The head chakra is a point also of physical sensation when Thought Adjuster-contact through the superconscious level, into consciousness, occurs. The heart chakra is the point/center of which the soul develops outwardly from. Soul growth is perceived most strongly at the heart chakra, and direct spiritual illumination is perceived most strongly at the head chakra. If you wish, I can continue this discussion at the next session/meeting. For now, I must bid you adieu for this evening.

My friends and children, my love goes out to you. May the peace and Spirit of the Lord be with you throughout the week. And may you grow and develop so much that you wonder at it. Farewell for this evening.

As The Mind Opens Toward Father, So Do We See Ourselves As Does Father

Back

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

I am HAM. I am your Teacher. This evening I wish to present a lesson concerning the thought ?overcontrol? and omniscience of our Father.

The Universal Father, personally, is resident on Paradise; and yet He is also resident and enthroned in the minds of his mortal children. His power of all-knowingness of past, present, and future (the eternal now) is also resident in each person. The eternal awareness of God is your ever-present comfort and security in a seemingly chaotic, insecure and purposeless world. 'Seemingly,' that is, for our Father, who is eternal awareness, understands and foresees. And this word 'foresees' is for the finite understanding the future and past and present are all one.

Yes, Father sees us in our wholeness, and we see only a small, very small, fragmented measure of our total reality. Although it is error to speak of predestination??for you know free will is absolutely dominate??it is correct to speak of destiny. And it is correct that you may each have insight, and can foresee your destiny a little bit.

As the mind broadens in awareness and receives more of the Father??comprehends more of the Father and becomes more like the Father??so can the creature also see himself as does the Father; but again I say in minute ways. And so, a pathway opens and a voice speaks saying, "Here, this is the way." The familiarity feeling prompts you to choose this direction and an affirmation is also given; and so in small ways you walk with God; He shows us the path which to take which is the right one for us.

Many of you, I perceive, feel to be at a turning-point in the road; and I say to you, the way will be clear. Do not be overly anxious. Have faith and confidence in the trustworthiness of God, for He knows all things. He knows your inner heart and soul. He has created the very core of your being. You are His children. He will not ever fail those who trust Him. The eternal wisdom of our Father neither knows, nor entertains to know, any boundaries, stumbling blocks or difficulties. He is all-wise and all-knowing. Even though you cannot comprehend this reality within your minds, you must accept it by faith. That is all for the lesson for this evening.

JOSHUA: I've talked with Duane Faw in Malibu, California. He requested I ask you a couple questions. He has been contacted by a group in Arizona who claim they are receiving celestial contact. They have asked for a money donation. He does not know if they belong to your group. The person who supposedly receives the messages calls himself, 'Gabriel of Sedona;' and the person that would be your counterpart is named, Paladin. They talk of someone named ?White Cloud,? and also, ?Sonada.? Could you give Duane any information on that, please?

HAM: Why do they need money? I have no need of money in my teachings to you.

JOSHUA: You are saying this group is false?

HAM: Absolutely.

ROB: Ham, I have heard of some crop circles in England that some people have speculated that contact has been made by UFO's or some energy sources not understood; and some people say they are trying to tell us something. There are more and more of them, every day. Can you tell us anything about that?

HAM: No, I am sorry, I cannot.

LOREINA: Father Ham, when dealing with people in communicating some of what we are learning here, is there something we can tell them to help them deal with their spiritual connectedness?

HAM: Yes. Each person must be assured of their son- or daughtership with the Father; and this essential truth cannot fail to touch the heart even if there are no outward signs or immediate recognition. This truth is so powerful and needed by every lost person. I am reminded by the parable of the prodigal son: Even though the boy willfully rejects his father's love and wanders lonely about in the world for years, when he thinks and remembers, or recognizes the truth, the father's heart and arms are always open to him. There is no sin which cannot, through sincere faith and love of God, be washed clean. There is no sorrow so deep; there is no wound that cannot be healed by His love. There is no place which is too far for Him to reach; and no soul that is so bad as to be rejected if he truly desires to return to his Father's house. Is this helpful?

ROSANNE: Yes, thank you. Tonight you talked about 'God our Father' and our concept of Him. I have a very difficult time thinking about 'who God is.' I have a hard time conceptualizing, and I was wondering if there was something I could do, personally, to help me get a better understanding of who God is?

HAM: Yes. We are, all of us, growing in this understanding. ?God the Father? is infinite Spirit personality; He is impossible to be fully cognizant of. At most, we can receive partial understanding and incomplete awareness. He is truly unsearchable for us, for He is infinite. Our growing and our understanding of Him is a progress from here??this first birth world; native birth world??and progressing to the Isle of Paradise where we will, without a doubt, someday stand in His eternal presence. And even then, our understanding will not be anywhere near complete for again, God is infinite. Do not be concerned with your present mental limitations, for these will expand; and your ability to experience God, personally, will increase. And with this increased awareness of Him will come also a broadened understanding. However, this is, as I say, is an infinite process and you are at its very beginning. Is there anything further you wish?

ROSANNE: In praying, I'm not sure whom my prayers should be directed to and I sort of clump everybody together. I wonder if there is a more efficient way of praying, for me, personally.

HAM: No. You do well, and you pray to the fullest of your heart's understanding. This is known. I will receive one final question.

BILL: Father Hamin the Bible, when Moses asked the 'burning bush' who it was, the burning bush replied, "I am the great I am." And there is much to do about the 'I am' in the Urantia Book. My understanding of it is that each one of us has some level of recognition or self-awareness. Is that in combination with our Thought Adjuster, who the 'I am' is? or do we refer to the great Paradise 'I am' when we say 'I am'?

HAM: This concept is referring to the First Great Source and Center of all the universes, the self-existent 'I am.' 'I am that I am.' He is the first existent Source of all existence. He is a person, the 'I am;' and yet He is 'all that is,' also. There is no existence outside/beyond Him. There is no awareness outside/beyond Him. There is no creation outside/beyond (or greater-than) Him. He is the first and last. He is the infinite and eternal Source and Center of all that is. And this expression, in creation, is eternal and finite; is infinite and limited, and also personal. It exists by His will; is sustained by His will; it is evolving by His will. 'I am that I am. There is no other beside me. I am the eternal God.' Do you see?

BILL: Can we say the, 'I am' about ourselves being a part of that experience?

HAM: Yes. Thank you all for this evening's experience. Next week you will have a visiting Teacher, I will not be here. So I will see you the following week. Farewell for now. God and peace go with you all. Farewell.

Embrace The Reality of the Fatherhood of God, and His Indwelling Us, Personally

Rayson & Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 07-15-1991

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is. [Unusual pause before beginning this evening's transmission.]

Greetings. I am new to you, your awareness. I am RAYSON. This communication involving Rebecca is completely new to me and is also new to her; therefore, is somewhat difficult because of the unfamiliarity. My name was new and therefore difficult for her to word form; however, this seems to be improving and I feel confident enough to continue.

As you have been told, many things have lately come to pass; also will there be many interesting and eventful occurrences in the future. Our purpose is to prepare the world for these future occurrences; one of these will be the up-quickening of spiritual receptivity among all peoples of the world. We are observing the effects of these great spiritual changes. Vast realms of space are now being opened, meaning the circuitry, which were previously closed, as you know.

We have looked forward to this time for many millennia, and now this time is here. You have all been especially preparing yourselves, with our guidance, for these days. Many of you were born into this time as the select ambassadors and news-carriers of this wonderful news.

To many, there has been no perceptible change. However, there are very many people who are now reaching a point of spiritual ripening; and these are who we wish to include in the harvest of the kingdom. You are chosen to thus go forth and help gather these ripened souls so that they may hear the good news of the gospel of Jesus again. For so very many, much of this enlarged presentation is completely new.

I am a Teacher under the direction of Abraham who has thought it wise for me to begin training with a person as receptive as is Rebecca, in order for me to gain practice for my assignment. As you see, I am quite pleased that this is coming through so readily although at first, Rebecca was wishing I was Abraham, [laughter.] I feel prepared to be allowed to present tonight's lesson to you.

I have chosen the seemingly simple discourse on the 'reality of the Fatherhood of God.' Many, being used to this idea/realization, have grown accustomed to the term; and therefore are taking this great truth a little for granted. I feel extraordinarily privileged and overwhelmed still at this momentous truth. We are seemingly so insignificant; and yet, as a small child needing a wise parent, we know that this Parent is the great Creator of the stupendous and magnificent Lord of all creation past, present, and future. There is none beside Him; none so powerful and almighty as He.

To ponder the truth that He is also our loving Father and ever-present guide and friend, never ceases to overwhelm my limited mind. What we see of His glory is so tiny and small; there are no word-expressions to enable our minds to comprehend more than a grain of sand in the sea of what He is. His vast material creation should cause you to ponder and humble yourselves at His vastness and incomprehensible reality. He is the beginning and the end. He is the alpha and omega of all reality that which is comprehended now, or ever to be comprehended by mind.

The great Father has decreed to give you use of all the mind-energy you can use. You are limited, yes, and this is well understood; but by 'mind' you may reach for the unlimited. You are endowed with part of the infinite mind which knows no boundary or finite mental limitation. You need to know your minds are free to expand in comprehension, and to grow and be seasoned with wisdom by, in and through, your souls.

Though you be dust, you have within you a spark of the infinite Father of all who bestows His greatness, infiniteness, goodness, mercy, and Fatherly love upon each person, to the greatest extent possible. He wishes for all His children to find Him, to come forth from the darkness into His loving space of light, mercy, and understanding. He wishes all of His children to grow in their own spacelight, mercy, love, and understanding. He desires for all His children to love each other to the fullest extent of their understanding, as He loves them.

Our Father desires that as His children grow toward Him, that they become more like Him. That as they realize Himself in them, that they, in turn, bestow this Fatherly love and brotherly understanding mercy upon their fellows to the greatest extent they are capable. This may require a letting go of old prejudices; a letting go of inner anguish and stress; a letting go of inner turmoil and emotion; a letting go of the worries of life and many of the little cares which can weigh so heavily when multiplied.

Allowing this "abandoning the old and embracing the new" is not an intellectual exercise; it is your very daily-living experience; it is not a moment's thought, but is the robust and vigorous exercise of true faith. Courage is required to abandon the old and embrace the new. The old is secure. The new is unknown. Though I say unto you, "abandon the old," I say, do it gladly.

My fellows, embrace the greater reality of the kingdom and do it courageously. Live your lives as if in His presence, always. I say "as if," for a reason: before the full realization is upon you, by faith reach out for it first. His presence is always with us. In Him, we live, move, and have our being. He is our ever-present guide and companion. Where is the insecurity in that? By faith, you grasp this reality; and by faith, you are transformed by it.

The true Fatherhood of God, His loving presence, is ever with us. He is an open ear ever ready to hear His children to know their hearts and minds; to understand and protect and guide and teach. Yes, these are the ways of the Father. You must take His hand willingly.

This concludes my presentation to you, and I feel competent to answer questions you may have.

JOSHUA: Teacher Rayson, I think I speak for the whole group in thanking you for being here. We welcome you; it is our honor to have you in our presence. (Rayson: Thank you.)

JOSHUA: May I ask a question? (Rayson: Yes.)

JOSHUA: This is probably idle curiosity, and you may not want to answer it but would it be possible that you may be the new Teacher being assigned to the Malibu group, Duane Faw's Urantia Book study group?

RAYSON: Yes, it may be possible. (Joshua: Thank you very much.)

JOHN: Are you an ascending, or a descending son?

RAYSON: Ascending, as you.

BILL: Rayson, I have read in the Urantia Book that approximately two-hundred-thousand years ago, the rebellion of Lucifer isolated the System of Satania, which we understand our Urantia is part of. Is this "new opening of space?"

a part of recircuiting Urantia in the spiritual fullness of the universe of Nebadon.

RAYSON: Yes, this is the end of isolation.

BILL: Can you tell us more about who you are, and do you know us, do you know me?

RAYSON: One moment. [pause.] Yes, now have I knowledge of you, some understanding. First question: I am also an ascending son; and also was I resident on Edentia, as was Ham. I volunteered and was chosen for this assignment, serving Michael. This is, as far as I understand, a unique situation in all of the worlds. We have been given permission to give advanced truth to your world such as is taught as far as Jerusem. This is very unusual. We have been thoroughly trained in your languages, your religions, modern thought-understanding, and word-patterns. We hope to fulfill this assignment with our doing the greatest good possible. We understand the many difficulties facing this assignment and have been, we believe, quite fully prepared to meet any emergency that may happen. My mortal world is really not very far different from this one, and it is thought this would be advantageous for communication. Is there further inquiry?

JASON: Rayson, how do you transport your thoughts, your expressions, your teaching over the time and space we exist in? or do you actually come in actual presence with us in this room?

RAYSON: Yes, I am here and am present; yet you are correct in surmising that there is also a distance in time and space. I exist on a different 'other perception reality' which we think of as 'distance' from you. This greater reality awareness has been perceived over a millennium, your time. This 'perception-reality' becoming a 'greater reality' has been a gradual process of change. As I am now, you cannot physically perceive my presence; yet, I can perceive your presences quite readily.

JASON: Thank you. My other question is: With the opening of the system circuits would a spirit/soul of a human being from Urantia, and coming back to Urantia, be sanctioned by Abraham and Melchizedek?

RAYSON: My information, Abraham is the only such.

JASON: Is Abraham present with us this evening?

RAYSON: Yes, one moment. A clarification. Abraham is the only former mortal who is present in residence at this time.

JASON: We have information you may be interested in Rachel was previously?

RAYSON: One moment. [Pause.] This has caused confusion in the mind of Rebecca; she had been informed, by Rachel, of the presence of the apostle Andrew. (Rebecca: Please clarify.)

RAYSON: Again, Abraham is the only person who lived on this world, who is now present.

(Rebecca asks if the apostles are coming here again. Or, in the future.)

RAYSON: Not at this time. (Rebecca: Future?)

RAYSON: I perceived this has caused some commotion in the mind of Rebecca, and I do not feel ready at this time to receive further questions.

ACTING under the supervision of a commission of twelve members of the United Brotherhood of Urantia Midwayers, conjointly sponsored by the presiding head of our order and the Melchizedek of record, I am the secondary midwayer of onetime attachment to the Apostle Andrew, and I am authorized to place on record the narrative of the life transactions of Jesus of Nazareth as they were observed by my order of earth creatures, and as they were subsequently partially recorded by the human subject of my temporal guardianship. Knowing how his Master so scrupulously avoided leaving written records behind him, Andrew steadfastly refused to multiply copies of his written narrative. A similar attitude on the part of the other apostles of Jesus greatly delayed the writing of the Gospels. [UB Paper 121:0.1]

[Editor's further note: Rachel, and those of the Woods Cross group, came to believe that the personage who appeared to her was actually the Apostle Andrew. Perhaps this visitation was actually the "midwayer assigned to Andrew" given Abraham and Rayson's comments here; and could shed light on this confusion.]

(Rebecca asks if Abraham may speak.)

RAYSON: Yes, Rebecca. One moment.

Greetings. I am ABRAHAM. I understand, Rebecca. May I explain? You see, many times we now receive visitors to Urantia from other realms. The apostle Andrew is certainly concerned with the spread of the work he began. As you know, he took meticulous notes of his experience with the man Jesus; and his hope was for these to clarify Jesus' teaching. He well knew that even in the minds of the other apostles his brothers, that they and he may not fully comprehend His teaching. You have wisely chosen to record these sessions so that although you yourselves may misunderstand, there is no mis-recording; and we deem this wise. The revelation of the life and teachings of Jesus is such that there should be no misinterpretation. Again, I refer to the Urantia Book, not the Bible. The "notes of Andrew" have been used in this presentation so he is keenly interested in the furtherance of this work. He is not, however, physically present here at this time; although he does receive reports and does transmit guidance. Does this clarify? (Rebecca: Yes, and thank you.)

ABRAHAM: You're welcome. Are there any further questions at this time?

JOHN W.: Yes, I wanted to ask about personality. I was talking to two gentlemen in New Mexico where I live. One was an atheist; the other one's daughter was schizophrenic and committed suicide. I had difficulty in discussing the personality and the stability of it. Could you help me out with that, please?

ABRAHAM: Yes, of course. Personality is the focal point of God-consciousness; it is the true basis of being, of eternal being. This person of whom you speak, whose daughter was termed as with a 'split personality' explain to him that this is not a reality. I am aware there have been many cases of people 'claiming' many personalities. However, I wish to dispel this fallacy. There is one body, one personality. Personality is the one first gift of the Father which creates the possibility of all future eternal growth in human life. Without personality, there could be no Thought Adjuster indwelling, nor soul growth. Personality is unique; is stable and unchanging. Personality is the bedrock, focal point, harmonizer, stabilizer and enables the continuity and continuation of soul survival. It is the one, and only one, unique, and completely totally unique, basis of your being. When a person is referred to as having unstable personality, this is also false. Personality is stable; emotions and thought pattern is not. There is never instability in personality. How is it that someone can be so distraught as to take one's own life in the presence of all these tremendous gifts, you ask? Yes, this is a difficult subject. The unknowingness and ignorance of reality, brings the isolation and consequent lonely forgotten feeling; this is not uncommon. It is the purpose of our gospel to bring these lonely and seemingly forgotten ones into the truth of the reality of Spirit and God's care. We truly wish to begin correcting this horrible floodtide of suicides. Is there anything else something further I may clarify?

JOSHUA: Father Abraham, I also have a question about personality. It is my understanding that the gift of personality, to mortals? while being quite unique and different for each person? can still be of the same potential or value. Why is it some mortals seem to be more spiritually receptive than others? Is this related to personality? or just their mind?

ABRAHAM: Yes, both. It is related to both. These cannot be separated in the person when it comes to speaking of spiritual receptivity.

JANA: Father Abraham, I have a further question about suicide. Are these people being taken care of? Are they receiving an opportunity to gain whatever they did not gain here?

ABRAHAM: Yes, absolutely, yes. Be at ease on this point.

LORRAINE: These are difficult days of transformation on this planet, and we who are willing to grow and expand our consciousness often find ourselves in a great deal of tumult and emotional turmoil. There is much healing being done in all of our lives. When you speak of the personality being the focal point of our unique individuality from the Father is the process simply that we are involved in personal evolution? Is it a matter of 'becoming,' in a sense? In actuality, are we 'greater than' even more than we comprehend? And is this process of the tumultuous healing one of 'coming into the sense of our true sonship?'

ABRAHAM: Yes, you have put it well. There is no growth without some turmoil, especially at first.

LORRAINE: So those who find themselves in stages of depression or difficulty, emotionally is it just that they are not aware yet of the sense of spirit that is working within them? Is there a way for them to come through this with a sense of hope and progression? and can we help this process?

ABRAHAM: Yes. There are many different forms of mental anguish all of which result from unconscious turbulence, such as depression and mania. These two, especially, are resulting from the growth process which has not been made fully conscious. It is dangerous to dwell within depression and one should seek activity to lighten this burden. Many times there are lows in life which have resulted in profound realizations, and these realizations have greatly benefited the future life. Wisdom may be derived from the understanding of the mental-emotional states, and in so doing, separate the self the 'conscious-self' from the 'emotional-self.' This can result in a wiser understanding of your being at the time. It is, again, difficult to separate from the emotional-self, yes, but can be done. At this time I will receive one further question.

JOHN: Father Abraham, a few weeks ago when you said Todd and I have been promoted to your reserve corps, we were wondering if there are different reserve corps within the group, or just one?

ABRAHAM: John, you have a future destiny apart from those in the group. However, you have also a destiny with them. The future will see, will tell. At this time there will be no separation. However, I would like to speak with you and David privately this coming Sunday. Is this possible?

JOHN and DAVID: Yes. Yes.

ABRAHAM: And now I will leave you with this thought: There is a certain tree which grows in the wind. It is gnarled and bent and small, and yet hearty. On the crag of a cliff, it looks down at the ocean and receives the mist from the tide. It looks up at the sun and receives the warmth of its light, of her light. It clings steadfastly to the rocks' face and is secure in its place there. Having grown amid so much wind, there is not a wind which can bring it down. Shalom.

Aloneness. Stillness of the Body. Stillness of the Mind

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

My greetings to you all. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. This evening I desire to begin directly. My lesson is concerning that point or focus of enlightenment referred to in ancient teachings. There is much truth to be gained in studying some parts of these ancient religious systems, especially concerning the practice of meditation.

Abraham has requested in your teaching that you retire alone and seek the stillness. This refers to first, stillness in body. It is very difficult without much practice to attain heightened spiritual awareness during physical activity. The second is stillness of mind. This step is considerably more difficult because the mind ever tends toward activity. Yes, these stillness teachings are found from many sources, generally. I wish this evening to clarify this practice.

The goal of stillness-seeking in our teaching is different in that I request not the seeking of 'blissful ease' experience, but rather the supreme exercise of true faith—the true faith of the child reaching out with courage toward the Father, and the reciprocal downward reaching of the Father towards His child. This experience of stillness is the most sublime experience in life; and much guidance, inspiration, foresight and spiritual insight, may thus be obtained as the reward of the sincere faith-seeking child.

I do not enjoin you to covet this practice for long periods of time. However, frequent repetition of this stillness (prayerful attitude) is very helpful and enlightening. I would suggest that we should attempt to seek the stillness every day, at needed intervals, for a few minutes. This can be the most fruitful experience of your 24-hour day.

It is often the practice of men to be so busy with their day-to-day thinking activity so as to simply forget the higher realms of thinking, reacting, feeling, experiencing. This is possible by the simple practice of:

1. Aloneness
2. Stillness of the body
3. Stillness of the mind.

I wish to elaborate on the third stillness of the mind: This is the most difficult aspect of this practice and sometimes requires a considerable amount of practice in order to have the ability to sustain mental stillness for any time length. This should however, be followed through with diligence; reward will follow.

I say to you with surety this simple practice will surely help to increase mental peace and serenity (the emotional happiness and feeling of well-being, as well as the physical health and well-being), for this process of allowing the contact of the Thought Adjuster through the superconsciousness is, in itself, a very healing process.

The great spiritual power inherent in the presence of the Thought Adjuster is never fully realized in mortal consciousness. Yet, you can expand this consciousness of God-awareness by diligent practice, by consciously centering the thought process on Him, and also on Christ Michael.

But the full consciousness of such an extremely powerful spiritual being, our divine Father, cannot be realized during the physical life. So powerful is He that a full, even a momentary full, consciousness (that is His being filling your consciousness completely, which is not to say complete consciousness of Him, but complete consciousness that is possible of Him) would result in translation that is also the Deity Embrace.

His supreme desire is to reach you more fully, day by day; to impart His guidance of His awareness and His teaching, directly to your mind. What a change of life which results from the sincere effort to really listen and to receive Him His guidance, His instruction, and His presence. What a supreme experience! What a supreme delight! And what a supreme advancement in your own personal spiritual development this is.

Conscious awareness of God directly results in the immediate transcription of this consciousness to the soul. This soul consciousness is immediately stepped up and made more perfect and divine; and thus, more like Him. These soul transcriptions are a permanent part of the ascendant self which is never lost a permanent reality. This permanent reality is made by your conscious decision to make it so.

Thus, a supreme responsibility lies with each person to, in partnership with God, become conscious increasingly of His awareness, His being-presence. And this, in turn, creates a new awareness (a being-presence) in the mortal soul, which is your true self. This truth is ever-present from then on. The soul, at that beginning moment, is a never-ending true being.

I have spoken in the past about the unconscious growth of the soul, and so tonight I take you one step further into the conscious growth of the same soul by your own effort. Although these efforts (and the fruits thereof) may be very satisfying and even thrilling, do not be disheartened or discouraged if at first you are not comfortable with this.

All true desire of the child is rewarded by the Father when that desire is to be like Him, to be more aware of Him, and to express His reality within your uniqueness. This expression of God is most often not a conscious effort but is the simple revelation of grace that the ever-growing and ever-expanding soul reveals to the world even without the full consciousness of such growing grace by the person.

You are all growing in grace, in truth, in light, in beauty, in goodness very slowly, yes; and at times, at a faster pace. Do not become discouraged, for this growth proceeds unabated whether or not you are aware of it. Spiritual growth is transforming, and this transformation is never sudden. The seed does not become the tree overnight. All growth physical, mortal, and spiritual growth takes time for completion.

Yet as this growth is accomplished and certain levels are attained, consciousness even sudden consciousness of this growth may happen. And this 'increased awareness' thus augments this growth and therefore allows further growth and development to occur, unconsciously. Are there any questions at this time?

BILL: Father Ham, in my studies of the meditation that you spoke of this evening, the goal in the quieting of the body and the mind is to achieve (according to the reading I have done) physio-spiritual integration; and in reaching the physio-spiritual integration, one is aware of the 'I am.' Is that a correct teaching? (Ham: Yes.) Bill: You mentioned "a goal," which was not clear to me in your instructions this evening.

HAM: Yes, I meant this goal to be one of vigorous soul growth, and a transformation among your fellows, your family. The goal in many teachings is for one to retreat from society and have blissful solitude experience. This I wish to distinguish from. Is this clear?

BILL: Yes. In the Urantia Book's reading of the experience of marriage on this world, it is clear that there is a distinction between humanly sacred relationships and sacred on a spiritual level, or God level. For example: "What God has joined together, let no man put asunder," is incorrect according to the Urantia Book, because what God puts together no man would even think about, or have any power to put asunder and yet marriages are constantly dissolved. Can you explain what part marriage plays in our ascending careers?

HAM: Yes, you are referring to 'intimate associations'? (Bill: Yes.) Ham: In a few other situations, such as a parent's intimate association with a child, children are known intimately and thoroughly in their infancy, and of course their early childhood. But as the children mature and begin to lead their own lives, this intimacy is no longer there. Understandings may be incomplete, yet they become trivial. In the ideal of true marriage, this is likewise the situation there is complete forgiveness and understanding to both parties so that minor misunderstandings are trivial. Therein is the most sublime spiritual association between two people that is ever achieved in the mortal life. And this spiritual intimacy and supreme confidence, born by understanding one another, is extremely comforting and helpful to both. Further, with an equal spiritual level between the two, there is the joy of spiritual discovery together, and soul-growth. This intimacy 'on the spiritual level' is growth-promoting because of the understanding between the two. On such intimate levels of understanding, such tender emotions may be evinced that allow the tender shoots of one's subtle personal self to grow 'in shelter' (in safety). Yes, there are intimate aspects of life which cannot (and should not) be shown to the world, that are nurtured in the comfort of sharing with another sympathetic soul. This, I believe, is greatly desirable in the general conquest of the circles [the seven psychic circles are explained in the Urantia Book.], which requires the entire personality to be uplifted. Many parts of the soul and personality are extremely intimate, and their blossoming and growth require time in a non-judgmental and non-confronting atmosphere, such as between husband and wife. Does this answer? (Bill: It helps greatly and I thank you.)

LOREINA: I have a question regarding 'spiritual names.' This is new to me, and I wanted to understand if the names that are being given in any way relate to the being that once carried them, such as Rebecca, in reading about the women apostles. Is there any correlation? (Ham: No.)

LOREINA: Are spiritual names given in particular times of one's spiritual evolution? (Ham: Yes. They are first given at birth, and revealed more fully at certain times in one's spiritual evolution. Yes.)

RACHEL: Father Ham, will you please give our love and best wishes to Teacher Rayson, who was here last week. I kind of felt sorry for him because I know he had a few problems in our communication. (Ham: Yes Rachel. I will do so.)

MEL: In relationship to meditation being quiet and alone, is it good to try to limit our thoughts to the idea or name of God? or a mantra?

HAM: No. A mantra seems helpful at times in stilling the mind, but continuous concentration upon the mantra is also a distraction.

RICHARD: Teacher, in regard to stilling the mind is it appropriate to keep our minds thoughtless, or shall we allow spiritual thoughts to come into our minds and dwell on those?

HAM: Yes, this is difficult. At the point of thoughtlessness, complete thoughtlessness, this allows the indwelling Spirit a moment to communicate to you. So thoughtlessness is desired. Focus, however, is different. Focus the mind on the highest thought, God, and allow thoughtlessness to receive Him. Does this answer?

RICHARD: It helps. When we put the thought of God in our mind, then should it be a thought in the intellectual sense? or, an attempt to feel His presence? (Ham: An attempt to focus on His presence.)

JOSHUA: I guess that's all the questions tonight, Father Ham.

HAM: Very well, then I wish to leave you with the following: The light of truth shines and is easily followed. Truth is the light that banishes all darkness. Where there is truth and light, so is there love. Where there is love, there is no deception. Farewell, for this evening.

Prayer is the Child-Person Attempting To Communicate With the Father-Person

Ham & Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 07-29-1991

Back

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

[Editor's note: Jeremiah (John Wormeck) was a nuclear physicist living in Albuquerque at this time and did drive weekly to Salt Lake City for these lessons with Ham. Jeremiah died in 1997 from a brain tumor.]

Good evening. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Tonight we have much important business before us, beginning with a question by Jeremiah on the WIPP program (Waste Isolation Pilot Plant) in New Mexico. I have consulted with the proper authorities concerning this matter and their advice is as follows:

Low-level radioactive matter is a general diffused problem throughout the Earth. There has been very much of this material stored in unsafe sites all over the world. The future may bode ill for many of these areas, for there may be leakage and general disbursement of this material by natural causes. This particular New Mexico site is dangerous because of underground water circuitry which is further underground than expected or thought.

It is little understood by your scientists, but we know that there is underground water circuitry spreading throughout most of the northern hemisphere. At times this water may be three to four miles, even five miles deep. This may create future problems when radioactive material is leaked and seeps through by gravity through the mineral surface into the water and is dispersed far and wide.

The second question unanswered by Jeremiah was if I could become visible to your eyes. This I cannot do. However, I have received permission to attempt to picture myself directly to your minds. There is one problem: Many times these picture broadcasts are distorted through the mental process of each person this, to a greater or lesser degree. However, I would like to make this attempt. [Several minutes of stillness/pause.]

Our exercise is completed, and now I wish to move on to my lesson concerning prayer: It seems there is some confusion among you concerning prayer and a desire to pray more fully, openly and efficiently, to our Father. Prayer is a request; a request for divine help or intervention in a human problem. Or, a prayer may be one of simple thanksgiving and acknowledgment of divine rewards.

We shall consider the first, a petition a petition for a fuller understanding of His will; a petition that your friends, associates and family, may further understand His will and therefore, be more fully equipped to carry out or to deal with the problem at hand. Prayer is always efficacious; it is never failing when done in sincerity. Prayer is a tool of progression; it is the child-person sincerely communicating with, and seeking the advice of, the Father-person, God.

In prayer, we must remember that our Father knows all things, and though it is sound psychological practice to articulate our messages to Him, this articulation for Him is mere formality. The act of coming before our Father in humility, with an open heart prepared and preparing to adjust our wishes to the divine will, is prayer.

The attitude of the prayerful soul is what is perceived and answered by our Father. The attitude of the prayerful soul is what is changed in prayer so that a willingness to be changed, and for the attitude to be changed, is the most important ingredient in prayer. We do not pray: "Father, do my will;" but rather we pray: "Father, I wish to discern your will and to carry this out in my life." Therefore, the attitude in any particular situation may be changed, in prayer.

Secondly: In petitions, often we pray for our fellows; we pray that their life-situation may be made easier, may be strengthened that their attitude or their self-will may be strengthened by divine guidance. Many times we pray that their life-situation may be changed this is incorrect.

It is correct to pray that our loved ones understand their situations learn from it, grow spiritually from it, and move on, themselves. It is correct to pray that they may expand in understanding of our Father's will. It is correct to pray that they may receive divine guidance through their situation. But it is incorrect to pray for a change in situation these prayers are unavailing.

There is another aspect of prayer that of thanksgiving, which is wholly correct and acceptable. Prayers of thanksgiving enhance the awareness of divine guidance by the conscious recognition thereof. This prayer is 'worshipful communion' with the divine.

Worshipful communion is another aspect of deity communication; this is a slow-starting process which gradually increases with increasing God-consciousness. Prayerful communion is the conscious act of the creature attempting 'thought adjustment' and harmony with the action of the indwelling Spirit in order to achieve harmonious thought waves and action, which results in Adjuster-mindedness. The consciousness of 'being,' is expanded to the consciousness of the Adjuster and His divine will. Action upon the mind is accepted and is integrated into the thought process of the creature.

Thus, communion is an 'at-one-ness' with the divine Thought Adjuster, so that certain periods of time there is no difference between the thought will-pattern of the 'creature' and the thought will-pattern of the 'Father.' This is a deepening experience of integration which, in my experience, only occurs over the many years of practice. As this worshipful adjustment of thought pattern becomes habitual, the will of God becomes manifest within your life.

At first, this 'human will' begins 'out of' out of tune, out of sync, out of harmony. And gradually over time, these two thought-wave-patterns integrate into one another producing a one-harmonious whole. And thus does the creature reflect and transmit the divine love-feeling the will-energy and thought-emotion of higher consciousness, which is Father-consciousness, day by day; bit by bit.

That is all concerning our lesson this evening. I am aware there are pressing questions.

JOSHUA: May I read a letter to you from Sandy. (Ham: Yes). Joshua: This letter is directed to you. He says he would like to find out the sentiments of the celestial administration concerning the current administrators of the Urantia Book how their actions are viewed through celestial love and wisdom? And why a person, who is so hard to be loving toward, is in charge of this, the Fifth Epochal Revelation from our Father. The fact is that most of us -- we the people, the readers of the Urantia Book -- think of him as being incapable of doing his job as the perpetually appointed head of the Urantia Foundation. I'll read further I would further like to ask if there is a connection between your current transmissions and the Toronto Papers of 1982, which were for the purpose of going beside and around the Urantia Foundation, to grow a tree alongside the old tree which we interpreted to mean the new tree as being the recipient of the Toronto Papers, and the old tree being the Urantia Foundation. We did not find a way to effect the change we were advised to attempt. I do feel sorry I fell down on the job, as it were, and if so, why? since I don't feel it was my fault. I would even further like to ask if it is your opinion that the Toronto Papers came with the approval of the celestial administration on our world; and if I, Alexander (as the angels called me), was really in truth supposed to represent the Melchizedeks, as well as the Ancients of Days, as it came through in one of the aforementioned transmissions? If so, where do I turn to pick it up again? Yours, Sandy/Alexander.

[Editor's note: In these first months of the Correcting Time/Teaching Mission (1991), there was quite a developing disorder/tumult that had arisen with the Urantia Book community regarding discord within the leadership (Trustees) of the Urantia Foundation. Also, a developing fission between the Foundation and the Urantia Brotherhood (later known as the Urantia Fellowship) regarding each's role in the printing and dissemination of the Urantia Book. It was at this backdrop, that the Teaching Mission in the United States was beginning to take root. Per Ham's remarks here, it is evident there were several 'previous' attempts from our celestial administrators to avoid such divisions, but human 'will' always must run its course.]

HAM: One moment. Yes, Alexander. This communication in your year, 1982, was genuine and a forerunner for our mission. During the last several years there have been many such attempts before the establishment of the Teaching Mission. These attempts, communications, were for the purpose of preparing the way for more widespread indeed, worldwideministry and promotion of the Urantia Book. This Teaching Mission, we feel, has not been seriously hindered so far by the intransigence, as it were, of the fellow of who you speak. We foresee, however, his rejection of this ministry and a fission developing within the believers in the Urantia Book. At this time we are proceeding slowly, with great patience and care that these small fissures do not develop into a great crack, as it were, between believers. Gently we proceed with wisdom, slow selection, slow gathering, of those who will receive our words. Because the Urantia Book is an integral part of this Correcting Time ministry, it is unfortunate that these recent events have transpired. We would have much rather had a united believership, but of course, this is practically impossible. The worldview (outside view) of this believership will most certainly be tainted by the non-belief of the supposed spiritual head of the organization. This is not too great of a concern anymore because of the wise action of the believership in creating that tree that you speak. You will see that this person will become his own undoing. For now, we proceed slowly with wisdom and caution. Alexander, take heed. Have no anxiety nor mistrust of yourself because of past events; but rather, trust yourself, trust in God, trust in your ability to receive and to portray truth. You would do well to proceed with a quiet heart and calm understanding. A Teacher will come to you in the near future. He will best guide and direct your future mission. That is all.

JOSHUA: Thank you, Father Ham. I will deliver the message. I have one further question. I must be awfully imperceptive because during our exercise earlier tonight I could not get a picture of you at all. Would it be possible for you to give us a verbal description?

HAM: A verbal description does not convey the understanding I wish. Even differing verbal descriptions between you matters not. Perhaps in the future this sensory sense of my person will be attempted again. (Joshua: Thank you.)

JOHN: When you are talking about the prayer communion would it be best to try to achieve that through the stillness? Or, try to focus on the Father. (Ham: This is both focus on Father in stillness.)

LOREINA: I recently have been coming into a sense, or communion, with the Mother aspect of God. My difficulty lies in the consistent and constant use of the word Father I have trouble with that.

HAM: Yes. I perceive this is a problem in your understanding. This should not be so, for God our Father contains within Himself all aspects of Fatherhood and Motherhood. Your perception of a parent is one of 'gentle nurturing' and this is consistent in fatherhood as well as motherhood. The parental role and attitude toward His children is all-loving, kindness, forgiveness. Your perception of ?motherly? is merciful, kindness, protecting. So yes, God is both. The Urantia Book will help you to clarify these things in your mind, and the experience which follows should further clarify.

LOREINA: Thank you. I am in a process of transience from old attitudes, old beliefs, old ways of presenting myself in the world, old perceptions. I am at a stage of learning to trust and let go, and I was wondering if you could offer me just a little bit of insight. I'm having trouble. I feel stuck. I am terrified. Is there something particular I could do to let go?

HAM: When you stand in oneness with God; when you trust Him; when you will His desires you are not stuck. These seeming obstacles or ?walls,? which you perceive will gradually dissipate as fog in the morning sun. You will gradually be able to perceive the grass, and then the trees, and then the birds therein, and the incredible beauty and harmony surrounding you and your life. This fog is a temporary thing. Soon the warmth of His sunshine??His love, His light??will dispel any darkness. Fear not.

RACHEL: Father Ham on page 1660 in the Urantia Book, our Lord, Christ Michael, taught that sin was a deliberate transgression of God. And on page 1664 He also taught that sin is a transgression of the laws of Light and Life. Will you clarify more the laws of Light and Life please?

HAM: Yes. These laws of Light and Life are the will of God. The laws of Light and Life may be perceived as follows:

Forgive and understand your brother as you would wish forgiveness and understanding from God.

Love and respect your fellow to your fullest capacity.

Love and respect all of creation to your fullest capacity.

Return not evil for evil, but rather return good for evil.

Rejoice in your divine son- or daughtership status with Him.

Receive His guidance and act upon it.

Love your neighbor.

Love your enemies.
Retreat not into selfish 'thought habit patterns' but rather go bravely forth in the light of truth, in the trust of His guidance and goodwill, and ...
Demonstrate all this to others.

There are more which will come up at a later date. (Rachel: Thank you.)

JAMES: Teacher, when you speak of guidance do we receive guidance when it has to do with our daily activities? our mundane activities? things that don't seem very spiritual? When thoughts come into our heads to do the wash or things like that, for instance, can we ever consider that to be the workings of our Thought Adjuster?

HAM: This again is for each person to answer for themselves. It can be ?yes? at times; and then again, it can be ?no.?

JAMES: Thank you. I have one other question referring to the Universal Father as a masculine being. We know from reading the Urantia Book, He transcends both masculine and feminine, or incorporates both. Do you refer to Father as masculine, for our sake to help us understand our relationship to Him? because there is no word in our English language that would designate a being that transcends both masculine and feminine? What is the reason you refer to Him as ?Him?? (Ham: To my knowledge this is universal, traditional.)

JAMES: Even to those beings that are not sex creatures? Do they refer to the Universal Father as ?He,? then?

(Ham: Yes, as ?Father,? yes. At least this is true within our local System.)

ROB: Father Ham along those same lines, is there a point in time when we might die and go to another space or place where we would not refer to Father as ?Father,? but as something with greater understanding that doesn't designate gender in any way?

HAM: It is not unacceptable for each person to worship God to his greatest understanding. If this understanding encompasses the thought of transcending male and female, then this is not incorrect. This is true.

MEL: Ham, when we pray and the words are not transmitted or understood as such, it would probably be just as effective to pray silently. Do we still need to ?think? the thoughts, or wishes, or gratitudes, in words?

HAM: No. Words are helpful for the creature; the Father knows your heart to begin with. The act of petition, the act of thanksgiving, the act of communion, is important. Words themselves, of course, are not. I will receive one further question.

MEL: Okay, if the world is to be settled in Light and Life, does that mean that the attitude of the world, at large, will be in tune with the Spirit of our Father? and that we will, at large, be able to desire and do His will?

HAM: Yes, this is exactly right. You have understood a complex idea and thought through its simple essence very well.

I would like to draw the meeting to a close at this time. Next week I will bring with me a visitor, until then, farewell.

In Times of Adversity Look To the Future of How Life Might Unfold From Our Tragedies

Ham, Abraham & Lazerek, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 08-05-1991

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

I am ABRAHAM. There is much I need to impart to you this evening. It is Father's will that these healings, now and in the future, shall be done in the strictest confidence and in as quiet of ministry as possible. We do not wish to sensationalize or cause unfruitful attraction of many people who would not help our cause, our mission.

Therefore, I admonish all who receive these healings, or who will receive healings, that they are not to broadcast this news. These healings are for the benefit of the individual or individuals concerned, and will gradually be brought to the attention of the world. This attention, however, must not be sporadic but must come in due time with due preparation. Many of these healings are seemingly miraculous and we wish not to have our attraction based on so-called miracles. These orders we wish strictly followed. Joshua, do you have further questions?

JOSHUA: Not at this time.

MARTHA: Abraham, my sister who is here with us this evening, and I, wanted to ask a couple questions about the death of our parents, her new husband and my brother-in-law. What we wanted to know was if you could tell us where they are at this time and perhaps give us some reassurance about the accident hopefully, that they didn't know what was happening. I have been concerned about that. I guess it doesn't matter now, but it's for our own peace of mind.

HAM: Martha, this is Ham. I meant to convey previously just this information which you have misunderstood. By all our information, no pain was experienced. Yes, right before, very sudden, no pain at all. Please be at ease on this matter. I really wish to reassure you. This is our best information. At this time they are all at rest, and by all our information, will be resurrected as soon as possible. This rest is a complete rest, deeper than the deepest sleep where there is no cognizance of the passing of time. Safely they will be brought forward and reawakened at the proper time by our Father's will. Have no anxiety or fear concerning them. You will be happily reunited in the future. Be assured this pain will melt away gradually in its time. Be secure in your life. I know this is easier said than done, but again I say to you, be secure in the knowledge that your inner Spirit??your Thought Adjuster, God Himself, who lives within you as your understanding parent and friend??stands ever ready to shoulder your burdens and lighten your load. He (Father) is very much wanting to help you. It is His supreme desire to help you, His daughter, in life's problems as well as to comfort you in your sorrow. Be unafraid to look to Him, to rely upon Him in this time of trial. He will lead you safely through this period and to eternity. His hand is even now reaching for yours. Rest easily my daughter, all is well. (Martha: Thank you, Ham.)

I am ABRAHAM. I will take further questions.

BILL: There is a man whose name is Fred Harris in Tallahassee, Florida, who received from my son-in-law a rough draft or two of our meetings that was transcribed into the written word. He called to ask if there were any Teachers in his area, or study group, he could get involved in. His interest is to be of service to the cause and movement. He is an attorney and has read the Urantia Book for the last three years and has given away many books.

ABRAHAM: Yes. There is known to us a group in Tallahassee who are readers of the Urantia Book. We are awaiting a transmission-receiver for this group. Tell him if possible, to seek a couple who live on Greenbrier Road. Further questions? (Bill: Are they being taught by a Teacher such as you?) Ham: Not yet.

ABRAHAM: I will begin this evening's lesson.

Our main purpose and objective, as we have stated many times, is to reveal the Father through the Life and Teachings of our Lord Christ Michael. His mission here was fraught with difficulty and full of many tragic circumstances. Like you, Martha, Jesus lost His father, Joseph, to an accident which was the supreme tragedy of His young life, affecting His entire Earth life. He did however, persevere in the face of this tragedy which came to color His life because it occurred at such a young age. The children affected in this tragedy (Jesus' younger brothers and sisters) were also forever affected by the loss of their father.

I have given many lessons on the positive effects of adversity, and yet it grieves me to see these tragedies occurring in your lives. But yes, the young will grow and time will pass. The seasons will change, and change back again. There will be time for grieving, yes, but know there will be time for rejoicing anew in life and in living.

In these life-tragedies, know there will be time for the recounting of your lives; of the growth of the children, and of the many wonderful things that will happen to them in the future. Parents and grandparents will see them grown and rejoice in this. There will be much happiness and laughter, all together in this future time. When you are troubled, think of this picture you have of this future rejoicing, this recounting, this happiness in reunion and fear not the troubles of today.

Now, there is something I wish to relate to you all concerning our mission. There is present here another visitor who has come a great distance to speak with you.

Greetings. I am LAZEREK. I am of the order of sonship known as Vorondadek. Your work here, Joshua, is being noted on high, and its progress is being transmitted on the universe broadcast circuits all around our local universe. I have come to deliver the following message for Michael. You are known and loved by many on high. His personal message to you is as follows:

There will be no mistaking of this work. What has begun (our Correcting Time Teaching Mission) shall be carried forward in triumph. At the completion of your work shall be sent a Son who will further bring Urantia into Light and Life. All your efforts and intents are fully known and appreciated throughout my realm of Norlatiadek. You must persevere in the face of a skeptical and pessimistic world. You will triumph, yes, and this work shall proceed unaffected. Be of good cheer, honest heart, pure countenance, and of a faithful and dutiful mind. You are my beloved son and also a loyal citizen in the kingdom of my Father. Your reward on high shall be great.

REBECCA: There is nothing else, I think that's all.

[JOSHUA: Rebecca wishes to apologize for the abrupt manner this meeting ended expressing she was under a terrific pressure which was caused by the wonderful, powerful, loving presence of Lazerek, one of the Vorondadek Sons.]

Time Is a Finite Reality Necessary For The Children Of God to Become Father-like
Ham & Melchizedek, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 08-12-1991

Back

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

My greetings this evening. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. For many weeks I have been instructing you and observing the effect of my teachings on you. Tonight we are happy to announce the decision of Melchizedek to give you a personal lesson himself.

Greetings, my children, I am MELCHIZEDEK, Vicegerent Planetary Prince of Urantia. My purpose for thus coming to you is twofold. First: I wish to extend my personal thanks to you for your steadfast and earnest faith and emotional security in this, which for you, is an unusual and exciting learning experience. Secondly: I desire to present an important lesson which is given only at a certain time/level experience of group coordinate understanding.

My lesson concerns your awareness of and reaction to the experiential God the evolving Father/Brother, the Supreme Being, God the Supreme. When you understand your duty to His experiential growth-status you begin to embark upon the supreme adventure of time. His being, His presence, is ever-evolving and is impinging upon your individualness your sense of separateness-nature. He is forever growing in experience, as are you.

Your experience contributes directly to the growth of this mighty and majestic spiritual Being. As long as you see yourselves as alone and separate, you are not seeing full reality. Your growth and being, in all phases of reality spiritual, morontial, and material are all an intrinsic part of the soul-Supreme. You are existent in, through and by, His power. There is a responsive reaction when a mortal experiences soul-expansion, for there is an equal reaction within the Supreme. The Supreme is God-in-time. I repeat. The Supreme is God-in-time. Time is a limitation, a perception of eternity.

My greetings once again. I am HAM. This lesson, though short, is of supreme importance for you to understand to the best of your ability. I would like to expand upon this in order to perhaps illustrate and make clearer the lesson.

Time and space are the finite limitations, the principal finite limitations, in which the vast material creations evolve. In time, does evolution and growth toward perfection occur. Time is a finite reality which is required for perfecting the will-creature, yes, to increasingly understand and become Father-like. Without time we would be neither here nor there; neither imperfect nor perfect; there would be no growth.

It is impossible for you indeed, to imagine timelessness, for so replete is this 'time-reality' for you. Yet, there is a necessity for this in the great plan of the ages. And that necessity is for the beginning imperfect creature to gain wisdom, understanding, tolerance, forbearance, forgiveness, mercy, and love for his fellows by a long and intense struggle upward, through the first life, and through many others thereafter; increasingly becoming more spirit, and less material; increasingly to seek the Spirit while at the same time, the letting go of the material.

These tried and tested beings are made ready for a future destiny beyond the Supreme. To reach for that destiny we must attempt an understanding of the Supreme. The Supreme is God-in-time. Therefore, our efforts, in time, are part of that reality which is God. I see that there is quite a good understanding of this among you. This is pleasing. Your duty for His continual expansion into the immaterial phase of His reality is to increasingly grow toward the Father, and you are thereby revealing and reflecting, through your soul, the reality which is you are of the Supreme. And now I will receive questions.

JOSHUA: I just wanted to thank you and Melchizedek for the wonderful lesson. It was beautiful. Last week I did not get an opportunity to express my thanks and gratitude to Lazerek and Father Michael for the wonderful tribute. (Ham: Father Melchizedek sends his personal greetings.)

JEREMIAH: Both you and Father Melchizedek were talking about 'God the Supreme' as being the 'God-in-time.' Do you mean God in-space-and-time?

HAM: Space is a material part of the creation originating in Paradise. It is more correct to envision God the Supreme as being God-in-time. Space is an intrinsic part of all material reality even where there is not God the Supreme. Does this clarify?

JEREMIAH: Yes, it does. I get confused when I think about time and space; and it is probably based upon our modern science theories where time is a function of velocity. Is velocity real? In our understanding, velocity is the rate of change of traversing space with time, or a derivative of it. These concepts are kind of confusing to me. Which one is the higher order, or which one controls the other.

HAM: Yes. Space and velocity are measured by time. Time, therefore, would be on a higher spiritual reality plane than space. Does this clarify? (Jeremiah: Yes, it does. Thank you.)

JOHN: Concerning Machiventa's lesson--the part about realizing we are not alone before we realize the Supreme--does he mean that we are always with our Thought Adjuster? or is there something else.

HAM: Yes. The lesson referred to an identity-feeling of separateness from all other reality. This is an illusory perception for "in Him we live, move, and have our being." We are not separate, really, from God; and this connectedness is made real in and through the Supreme. Is this clear? (John: Yes).

RACHEL: Father Ham, is one simple way of stating part of it: "Whenever there is a growth in the soul of a mortal, there is a growth in the Supreme?"

HAM: Yes, correct. There is also a corresponding reaction to this growth, which is a repercussion within the Supreme's "reality being awareness," which is a permanent reality and more than a "passing growth" stage.

RACHEL: Then this would constitute a real strong feeling in the soul itself? (Ham: If and when one is aware of this, yes.)

JAMES: Teacher, is the Supreme Being an aspect of the universal Father? or a separate personality, so to speak, from the universal Father? (Ham: Yes, He is both. He is an evolving creation of the universal Father; and as such, is an expression of Him. Is this clarifying?)

JAMES: Yes, and thank you. Does the Supreme have a separate consciousness from the universal Father?

HAM: Yes. However, as your consciousness is somewhat separate from the consciousness of your indwelling Spirit the indwelling Spirit is conscious of your consciousness; and so, in like-relationship, is the Supreme to the Father. He, the Father, is ever conscious of the consciousness of the Supreme. As in the gospels, Michael has said: "There falls not a bird from the sky without my Father's knowing." this is within the consciousness of the Supreme.

JAMES: Thank you, that helps a lot. I have another question related to last week's lesson regarding the message from Michael: To what extent was His message directed to the group as a whole?

HAM: To the complete extent. It was of course directed to all of you even though Joshua was acknowledged. We, your Teaching Staff, have also received words of comfort and encouragement from Michael. This has greatly cheered us.

JEREMIAH: Last week I was talking to a woman and teaching her some concepts out of the Urantia Book, which she was quite receptive to. Then we got on the subject of the universal flood from the biblical teachings and she really firmly believes in that. I wasn't quite sure what to do there. Teacher, what would you suggest for us to say here?

HAM: If it were me, I would steer away from specific biblical doctrine and concentrate on the loving character of our Father, for when this great truth shines brightly enough it will be easier to shed older concepts of a wrathful deity. (Jeremiah: Thank you. That helps, very much.)

BILL: Father Ham, today I read concerning the self-acting Thought Adjuster and found several characteristics which were amazing and encouraging; and it occurs to me that I didn't have a full grasp of the magnitude of that. I would really like you to enlighten us to the characteristics of a 'self-acting Thought Adjuster.

HAM: This question is a lesson in itself. One moment. Yes, there are different phases or levels of Thought Adjuster abilityaction ability:

One. The self-acting Adjuster is a function level which is attained when the personal subject attains or reaches third circle level awareness. This attainment (level awareness) creates an increased circle, or a circle of activity within which the Adjuster may function. He has the increased ability to guide and direct the person through their increased awareness of Him and His guidance.

Two. There is also the ability, albeit unusual, for the Thought Adjuster to detach from the person in order to receive special instructionsuch has occurred for many of you.

Three. There is the future certainty of final fusion of 'personality' with 'spirit'the mortal with the divine. The fact is (although not completely sealed as a completed fact) a universe certainty that fusion in the future will occur.

Fourthly. There is recognition by the universe Father to that indwelling Spirit for His work efforts with the mortal person. He (the indwelling Adjuster) receives personal recognition of this.

And lastly. Since because of this increasingly clear guidance and communication from the Source and Center, the person is able more easily to traverse the final circles of psychic attainment which are preliminary to final Adjuster attunement and final fusion or translation.

You see, that took some explaining. [laughter.] (Bill: And very well done. Thank you very much.)

MEL: In comparing the 'Father Supreme' to the 'Source and Center,' you referred to man and his Thought Adjuster? (Ham: Yes). Mel: Could this be termed, 'We are aware when our Thought Adjuster is aware of our awareness?' (Ham: Yes). Mel: As we grow and get rid of the inhibiting factors in our understanding, memory, then we become increasingly in tune with that awareness? (Ham: And, the Divine will. Yes) Mel: Okay.

JEREMIAH: Teacher, a few weeks ago you tried to transmit your image of yourself to us and most of us failed to receive the image of you, but a few have; and as they were explaining it, they were trying to get thoughts out of their minds, sort of along the lines of the stillness you were trying to teach us. Is that correct? And, is it similar to the problems the Thought Adjuster has in trying to transmit through to our conscious minds? Is this the same technique you were trying to use? (Ham: Yes.)

JASON: As long as we are on this subject, for those who did see images, there seems to be a similarity of which I'd like to clarify. What I saw first was a younger image with hazel colored hair, curly and prominent facial features, a broadness in the jaw and cheekbones. And just after, I saw an older man with gray/white hair in light-colored clothing and with a bold looking face with features that I previously explained.

HAM: Yes, I will attempt to do this again at a later date. I wished to give you a sense of myself, which I could not do in a single image. Do you understand?

JASON: I understand. May I ask you a personal question? What do you do in those times you are not here? Are you engaged in studying? What free-time pleasures do you enjoy?

HAM: Yes, much of my time is occupied with the study of you, each of you your reactions to my lessons which I have access to peruse at my leisure. Much time do I spend in contact with other Teachers and with Melchizedek, in training and lesson-preparation. Also, I am privileged to receive many visitors from beyond your world, as well as many high Spirit personalities stationed here, and midwayers. For enjoyment, we have the reversion of rest and relaxing humor. And, we have the happy and joyous oneness in complete worship, which you, in your state, have not yet experienced.

JASON: I am getting a wonderful understanding, thank you. I'd like to go back just one step where you say you 'spend your leisure time studying our reactions.' I had a sensation that the Thought Adjusters, although on a higher level, are subservient to you and come to you telling of our reactions. (Ham: Yes, to some degree. However, all of your reactions are recorded during these meetings.)

JOSHUA: Father Ham, may I ask a question? Could you explain more who Father Lazarek is that was here last week?

HAM: I will do so in the lesson next week if you will remind me. For now, the connection with Rebecca weakens and it is difficult to continue. I must say farewell, for this evening.

The Placement Or Positioning Of Yourselves In Life | Laughter and Mirth Overrides Anxiety and Worry

Back

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

My greeting this evening. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. I desire at this time to commence with a lesson concerning the placement, or positioning, of yourselves in life. There are many factors concerned with your individual life-mission:

1. Family life.
2. Professional life.
3. Individual happinessmotivation fulfillment.
4. Spiritual guidance.

I wish to address these in order:

First: Family life. Many of you have a rich and fulfilling life by the companionship of spouses and children. This intimate association fosters thoroughgoing understanding between all individuals within the family unit. This is a sublime experience which you should think upon as preparation for knowing the Father, God. You will seldom, outside the family unit, fully understand and appreciate another human being. The family is the basis of life and human association. The love and tenderness evinced by the parents for a child is the closest approximation to understanding God that is possible in human life. This sublime tenderness is not usually exceeded.

Second: Professional life. Everyday work is important in promoting dutiful associations among people. A sense of duty and responsibility is essential also in understanding our obligations to divinity. Ethical obligations are tried and tested most thoroughly in the work atmosphere or environment. This sense of ethical duty may blossom further into the understanding of brotherliness; for oftentimes in this environment, close associations may develop and the duty to your brother is understood in a fairly complete manner.

Thirdly: The sense of happiness and play should be fostered and allowed freedom of expression. Recreation and lighthearted human interaction are an essential ingredient in the well-balanced personality. Happiness and mirth are a ?release valve? for tension, and are conducive to becoming a more easily likable person. Those who take themselves overly serious and cannot find the joy in living, are very sad to behold; their life is monotonous, boring, and tending toward the material, being dragged down to worry and needless anxiety. Happy is he who can find the cheerful side of looking at reality; this greatly lightens the burden of daily life.

Fourthly: The spiritual placement and aspect of your earthly careers. This, of course, is the most important of these four, for the spirit will lead you to human happinessas well, purely-spiritual fulfillment. Human happiness is greatly desired in the kingdom. We wish you all increased happiness and security in knowing your place with God is absolutely unassailable and completely secure. He who can follow spirit guidance and leading, is a happier man. Much of the burden of life may easily be transferred to the Indwelling Spirit who, in His infinite wisdom, is unerring in His guidance. Much of the burden of life is felt, yes, but is illusory. Much of your earthly anxiety is absolutely needless. May I repeat: Muchin fact, mostof your earthy anxieties is needlesslyindeed, pointless.

You must be aware of your indwelling spiritual guidance. When Father is in control of your life, you need fear nothing. Many of the calamitous misfortunes are as easily dealt with through laughter, as through worry. In either case, neither worry nor laughter affects a calamity only that they have a great effect on your attitude and subsequent ability to cope with this or that particular problem. So I say, laughter is the best medicine.

Laughter is a healing and curing activity which greatly uplifts the attitude of the mental mind which is beneficial to seeing the full nature of the situation. In worry we tend to look at our feet, so to speak. In laughter, we tend to throw our head back and look around us. Worry is inner-consuming. Laughter is outward-releasing. Therefore I say to you laugh! Laugh fully and often. Enjoy each other, and be gay.

Life is short. Many of the serious problems of today are the mirthful reminiscences of tomorrow. Do not be heavy of heart. Lighten your burden. Allow the Lord to take your burden from you. Be free in His spirit-presence. Move easily and freely and lovingly, and joyously praise Him. That is all. Are there any questions?

JOSHUA: Last week you ask me to remind you about Lazerek.

HAM: Yes. Lazerek is a visiting Most High Son of local universe status. He has been involved with your world for many years. Presently he is working on the seventh Salvington training world, involved with ministering to ascendant sons before they are received on Salvington. He came to Urantia for the purpose of observing these schools, sessions, and conferring with the Melchizedeks about ascendant training. There are some mortals now reaching his school jurisdiction who have come from Urantia and he wishes to gain insight for their benefit. This was the main purpose of his journey here; although, his delivering of a message from Michael was our greatest joy. Does this answer? (Joshua: Yes, that's very informative. Thank you. It was also a great joy to us.)

ROSANNE: Ham, I wanted to ask you about calamities. You were talking about laughter being the best medicine. Does this mean we should look at the hardships we have had in our lives and try to look at the humor in them. How do we handle the hardships through prayer? through understanding?

HAM: Yes, my daughter. It is beneficial to see hardship in a humorous light if even for a moment, even if seemingly inappropriate. It is not sinful. It is not a betrayal. It is not hurtful. A little laughter is the best medicine, even when facing hardship. If we can step away and see ourselves with a little distance, many times there is a little humor, and this little humor greatly lightens the perception of a grave situation. There should be no guilt in this. It is simply sound psychological practice and a part of human nature. Are you understanding? (Rosanne: Yes, I am; but I wonder if I don't see the humor, how can I get through a very hard time?)

HAM: We all experience hard times and tragedy which we simply live through. There is a time-distancing which naturally occurs which also serves to lighten this burden. Whether through time passing or through laughter, they both serve the same. In both cases, there is a 'pulling back' and distancing from the immediate trauma of a hardship. Does this help? (Rosanne: Yes, it does).

ELWARD: Ham, in facing the lighter side of life, I understand we are to 'cast our burdens on the Lord?' (Ham: Allow Him to lift them from you, yes.)

ELWARD: When that is lifted, then we have an opportunity to see a lighter side, is that right? (Ham: Yes.)

JEREMIAH: Teacher, I have another question. We know we have the Seven Master Spirits which are each different. Our Superuniverse [Orvonton.] is basically the combination of the three persons of deity. We also know that Michael was created with the original thought, which I also believe is in our makeup. And, I know that every time the High Spirits come from somewhere, they come in groups of seven reflecting the seven possibilities of the three persons of deity. The question I was wondering is: Do we here, our personalities, do we have a reflection of one of those seven combinations? or not?

HAM: Yes. By being a creation within this seventh superuniverse, Orvonton, there is inherent in spirituality and the reflection of spirituality the trinity. Yes. You have correctly understood.

JOHN: Father Ham, regarding the lesson, how much time should we spend on leisure activity as opposed to work and spiritual growth?

HAM: This is not yet an ideal world. If it were more toward the ideal there would be the equal burden of work and equal time in relaxation. However, for most of you, this is not possible. Yes, in the material worlds this is the ideal state.

JAMES: Teacher, today we learned that Gorbachev was overthrown in the Soviet Union, and this is something that troubles and concerns some of us. Loreena asked me to ask if you could address this issue? (Ham: On this, and all political and social subjects, I am forbidden to comment at this time.)

ELWARD: When we are having problems, or are down, would it be proper to ask in prayer for our burdens to be lifted from us?

HAM: Yes and no, it is proper to allow God to shoulder your burdens, so to speak, and in working through you to help you through difficulties. To pray to have our burdens removed by supernatural means, of course, is not proper.

ELWARD: Okay. Then we should pray that we become in tune with the spirit and act in accordance with that guidance. Is that right?

HAM: Yes, and not to become overly obsessed or concerned with your problems, for always these problems are resolved whether or not you spend energy in worry. This energy spent in worry, anxiety, is depleting to you and makes you less able to encounter and solve human problems.

JASON: Of all the spirits and creatures devoted to our well-being or happiness, which of them require translators to communicate directly with us? (Ham: None.)

JASON: I would just like to thank you for tonight's lesson on laughter, I've experienced a healing benefit from laughter many times in the face of hardship and turmoil. (Ham: You're welcome.)

JAMES: Teacher, I have a question about prayer. You have taught us that when we pray, more often than not it changes ourselves. When we pray for others, can it bring about action on the part of their guardian angels that otherwise would not have been taken? Or when we pray for others can it in some way bring about a change in their attitude? (Ham: Yes, both. Absolutely.)

JAMES: I also would like to echo Jason's comments on the lesson of laughter. I won't feel quite so guilty about feeling mirthful at times in the future.

ELLANOR: Father Ham, we know that when the Thought Adjuster is away, it stops the growth of the soul. We were wondering if the soul regresses in any way.

HAM: No. There is no regression. In fact, there is growth which takes place on the return of the Adjuster which wouldn't have taken place before, had He been present.

JEREMIAH: I have a physical question. When I come back and forth to these meetings, I usually camp out sleeping under the stars. [Editor's note: Jeremiah travels from Albuquerque each Monday, to Utah for these meetings.] The Urantia Book states that looking into the Milky Way is basically like looking in the center of Orvonton, our Superuniverse. Where is Paradise the center of creation?

HAM: I must check to be precise. [laughter.] At this time, Rebecca tires and I would desire to end this meeting if there are no pressing questions.

JOSHUA: I don't have a question, Father Ham, but I would like to make one comment on joy and happiness. I think I speak for more than myself these Monday night meetings with you bring much joy and happiness into our lives and we thank you very much.

HAM: You're welcome. Good evening and farewell.

[August 26th Rebecca had an issue and there was no meeting, as noted in Ham's next meeting September 2nd.]

Part 1. Caution in Disseminating | Mansion World Mota | The Re-Opening of the System Circuits

Back

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Tonight I wish to discuss a topic of concern and of great consequence to our further development as a Teaching Mission. There are two problems which have been brought to my attention. The first is seemingly minor, yet could develop into something more problematic:

One: We wish for these teachings to be spread to fertile ground, yes; yet, the premature spread of my words to those of a disquiet disposition, or aptitude for disquiet and further, for them to speak of that which they know not; and then for these to further speak may be a cause of future antagonism.

It is very difficult to walk a line between the spreading of the word of our Mission, and the wise judgment which dictates that 'silence is better.' It may be that a person you speak with is receptive, yes, but perhaps this person has unwise judgment in judging with whom 'they' speak. Without spiritual guidance, it is difficult to discern these things.

Though the call to evangelize, in general, remains, I would like to perhaps caution and forewarn you that 'too much' spreading of our words on infertile ground could be problem-causing in the near future. Therefore, remain with the same procedure as far as allowing newcomers to be a part of my teaching. [Editor's note: It was instructed in this first year that new students first meet with Rachel (Ida) for preparation and for vetting before attending Ham's lessons; and to use spirit discretion regarding those to share these teachings with.]

Secondly: The overenthusiastic and premature speaking to those in authority within the 'Urantia Book community' should be also wisely limited. I have full trust in you, Rebecca, in your ability to receive my transmissions to those seeking direct contact with me. I wish if such contact be requested that I am to speak with these persons, directly.

Yes, Rebecca, thank you. And thank you, Joshua, for forewarning those who would prematurely bring this news to these people. This work is not meant to proceed too rapidly; if it does, there is the danger of it becoming too heavy that is, people wishing to bring others along but would not have the basic support of their following necessary to do so. This work will take many years and will require the careful and wise judgment of all of you to bring about its full flowering.

Yes, there will be many other Teachers, especially in the United States. These teachings will, without a doubt, spread to many many people. You are the vanguard of our movement; it is up to you to be as wise as possible in the dissemination in the beginning, for it is tender and delicate. This work will require much careful tending for full flowering potential to be realized. There are many many wise and fruitful individuals which we wish to contact. The Lear's are certainly among them [Editor's note: Ham refers to Norman and Lynn Lear of California]. We also wish to caution these people to use careful judgment in whom they confide this information to.

All in all, I rejoice in the splendid progress that we have made so far. I rejoice that my teachings have been coming through so clearly, through Rebecca's transmission-receiving; and, through the judgment of Joshua's wise foresight in his taping method. His general dissemination has been greatly appreciated.

I also wish to send a personal greeting to Alexander to enjoin him to remain steadfast in his faith; to carefully choose his associates and begin to build a basis for a Teacher. He will understand of whom and where I speak.

Tonight I wish to begin a teaching on the affairs of our local System and its connection with our Constellation; and, its connection to our local universe Nebadon. By decree of Michael of Salvington, the system circuits are being restored and are now nearing completion. Yes, I have spoken of this before; but this re-encircuitment into the greater spiritual communication circuits of the local universe will greatly accelerate our ability to communicate to and from Urantia; and directly to Jerusem, to Edentia, and even to Salvington.

You see, this intra-universe communication has previously necessitated the use of other circuits, angels, and messenger spirits, which was a difficult and tardy process. Now that our circuitry is being reinstated, we will have news and information from a wider universe perspective and on a more regular basis; and, we will be more readily in personal touch with those high in authority who will be able to clear decisions to enable us to work more efficiently.

On the First Mansion World, indeed throughout the seven Mansion Worlds, is the beginning of teaching of 'morontia mota.' This insight is beyond your present physical level of awareness; it is a morontial sensitivity to reality which you, in your state, do not possess. There is a greater philosophy in mota than you can even begin to be aware of in your earthly way of thinking.

Mota is not only 'expanded awareness,' it is 'expanded thought' and receptivity to ideas, reason, logic, sensory awareness, spiritual sensitivity, and insight. Mota is the blending of the spiritual and the mental, with the general sensitivity of a (for lack of a better term) bodily awareness of reality.

On these Mansion Worlds, you will be more sensitive to the presence of your Thought Adjusters. The actual presence of God within you will be a greater awareness, an extreme sensitivity, a focalization which you cannot begin to perceive as you are here.

Even on the first Mansion World existence, though our indwelling Adjuster is still ways apart from an actual fusion of the two minds, the guidance is extremely clear; His presence is extremely clear (is well known and felt); His words are clear and distinct. It is as though there are two minds within a single bodily frame of energy that are very closely linked in awareness. In this, our Father's overcontrol of thought pattern is almost complete.

On the Mansion Worlds, the morontial mind-thinking pattern will be more closely attuned to the Adjuster's expression of the Father's will so that if there is a deviation, that deviation is immediately known by the subject; he can easily attune his will, his mind, to the will of God as forecast by the Adjuster.

This 'submitting' seems to many of you to be strange; to be something of a 'surrender of will' to an overcontrol which you are unsure of. However, this overcontrol is not something which you will be unsure of by that time. Father's presence within you now is something very much a part of your being, yes, but it is sensed as a being 'apart from you.'

On the Mansion Worlds, (in the morontia form) the entire sensory apparatus is different you are becoming more 'who' you are; you are becoming more Godlike, more spiritually sensitive and aware of those spirits surrounding you and guiding you in your morontia career. Yes, these spirit influencers guide you here, though you are largely unaware. In the morontia life, you will be much more sensitive and aware of their presence.

The destiny guardian angels who have guided you in this lowly existence are also present on the morontia worlds. On the first Mansion World, they are relieved of their immediate duties as 'destiny guardians' and are released to follow the ascendants' career as 'ascendant beings.' They are still companions but their ?guardian? duties are no longer necessary. There, again, you will be able to perceive these beings as discrete spiritual entities which, in the state you are now, is really a near impossibility.

The morontia life is much more enjoyable than your toiling and stressful earthly experience. You will see with divine clarity the purpose of your ordeals in this life, and will not only appreciate the ordeals themselves but also the guidance which brought you through them. This appreciation will be a great unburdening of your worrisome self for you will be able to know your purpose; you will be able to foresee your future purpose and all of this, together, will be a great relief as well as joy in your innermost core.

This mortal life is not without a greater purpose. Your ordeals, your suffering, your hardships, are for a divine reason! Rest assured when your short life has been run, when this race of existence is completed, when you reawaken in the glorious resurrection on the worlds on high, you will know that your life has had divine meaning.

Our material life may often seem haphazard, seem futile, seem purposeless and barren of redeeming value; yet I assure you with the authority of one who knows of one who has survived a material existence and has gone on to greater, purposeful, meaningful existence; I assure you that your life, your toil, your work, your stressful suffering, is meaningful, is purposeful and, has supreme value.

God is not only with you in times of meditation, in times of spiritual thinking, in times of elevated consciousness of His being He is with you day in and day out. Through your days and your nights of labor, He is beside you, He is watching over you. The very Father Himself is entrusting you with the task of the ages. Yes, with the task of by your decisions and by your influence in life, to grow, to develop, to become more perfect, as He is perfect.

You who are called to these Correcting Time teachings, are called to emit a broader light. You are called to become perfect. This takes time, yes, but you can show your fellows that you are about this perfection process. You are called to shine forth that light of divine goodness and truth to your fellows, as the apostles were called of old.

There will be many times of hardship. There will be many disappointments. There will be many trials for you, individually, to endure. Yet I say to you, and with utmost surety, that God is never gone; He is never far from your side. He is with you; He is with you through it all. You may easily look to Him and His guidance will be there. I say this with authority as one who knows if His guidance is sincerely sought in any circumstance, this guidance will be forthcoming.

It is unfortunate that last week's circumstances cut off my communication to you, for I feel now we are a little behind where I would wish to be in my teaching. Rebecca understands the importance of this, for these teachings, in the future, will not be absent because of mortal inconvenience. This was unfortunate and was of her own free will choosing, not mine.

There is, in each person, a place where the tender shoots of new spiritual growth occur. This innermost space is wisely protected by your own being; and yet, needs a certain amount of light and air. It is good to open your hearts, as it were, to the light, to the gaze of others, and to the spiritual waters others may give to the world. This inner tender place can, yes, be a little too tender, or 'too much.' This place, in circumstances of trust, should be opened, should be developed, and should be allowed a little freedom for the wider growth of the soul.

It is good to establish and to cultivate close friendships which enable the flowering of the 'inner self.' It is the opening of the inner self to the gaze of others which gives confidence in that inner self within the person. Otherwise, there is much hiding in life. There is perpetuation in mediocrity, in allowing this inner self to be hidden and perpetuated in a mediocre realm of existence.

It is only by allowing the flowering of this 'inner self' that true individuality is seen. This 'inner self' must be shown to a wider world and when it is, much can be done. Much creativity, openness and flowering occurs, for there is a connection between that inner self of the person flowering, and the inner selves of all those perceiving it.

We witnessed tonight a talk given by Mr. Norman Lear to educators. Many of them have never heard anyone talk openly like this before exposing his inner thoughts; and they, responding to his. It is true of all true leaders that they flower as individuals, and that their individual-flowering connects with those who are too timid to do it themselves.

I do not espouse a complete openness of every single aspect of a person's personal life, but the discussion of the inner self is extremely important. In this, you will find greater acceptance of yourselves than you think; this is always the case. It is not only your inner Spirit or angels who understand you, but your friends, your associates, your loved ones.

When there is true expression and understanding this is mutually beneficial and growth-promoting. It is then you see those tender shoots, not quite so tender anymore, grow into 'robust plant forms,' for want of a better metaphor. Yes, this speech of Mr. Lear's was very moving to me and I send my personal praise and acceptance to him, and also wish for him to hear this lesson of my response. [Part 2 of tonight's lesson is continued on next submission.]

Part 2. By Your Living Show Your Fellows That God Is In You | More On God The Supreme

Back

[Since the group didn't meet the last week of August, this first week of September was two lessons in one evening. The following is Part Two.]

HAM: I have another lesson to teach tonight; it is on the necessity of love in our Father's guidance in our lives:

Father's love comes through, 'person to person,' and is bestowed upon those who draw near Him as spiritual water. The Father's love acts to bestow acceptance, to bestow love, to bestow guidance (unerring guidance), forgiveness, tolerance, understanding, wisdom, and truth. When this spiritual water flows from one person to another, it is as though God Himself is accepting this person for who he or she is. And it is this acceptance and forgiveness which all humankind craves.

For you to be personal ministers of the word of God it is necessary for your being to exhibit this love of our Father to bestow acceptance, forgiveness, love, and tolerance on your fellows, as you would hope for forgiveness, love, tolerance, and acceptance from our Father. Yes. This is a daring feat. It is not a cowardly act; it is a courageous act.

This act of courage will result in the response of your fellows to you in ways which you will find surprising; and it is by love that this is accomplished. It is not preaching; it is not earthly 'thou-shalt-not'-type ministry, no! it is simply love! simply love and its repercussion in that person. This is what I ask of you to practice until our next meeting. And now, if there are any questions, I will receive them.

JEREMIAH: Teacher, concerning the lesson that we are behind on, is it possible to double up? or do we need time between lessons to absorb the teachings? (Ham: Yes, I will increase the time length of the next two meetings.)

JASON: Ham, I have a question from Rebecca. The Urantia Book talks of space as being close to absolute, absolute in the finite sense. Can you please elaborate on the nature of space and its relation to time, energy, mind, and spirit?

HAM: Yes, one moment. Space, in a sense, is absolute reality. It is without segmentation or differentiation in any known sense. It is the basis of all known material reality; and, the fabric in which time is woven. Time is, in a sense, segmented eternity. It is the way that finite mind can perceive reality as a sequence of events. Energy and matter are created and manipulated within time and space. The Conjoint Actor's overcontrol of the creation of energy, matter, and its spiritual animation of life within time and space, is absolute. The space fabric is completely encircuited in the Third Source and Center. There is no haphazard cause and effect in the universes or, in the outer space realms. All have 'mind encircuitment.' There is nothing that is not planned, directed and known. Space is the absolute fabric on which the reality of existence is drawn. Yet space is, as you said, not infinite; yet it has an infinite source and means to be of potential infinity. Proceed.

JASON: Also, can you tell us more about the nature of the Supreme and his relation to the individual?

HAM: Yes, the Supreme is the finite God of time. He is the God of experience. He is the sum total of all mind experience. He is the wealth of wisdom of the ages. He is the overcontrol and over-soul of creation. He is the God of 'being' finite reality. If you are the action, He is the reaction. He reacts and enfolds and encompasses all action in the finite realm. He is the Supreme Father/Lord of all finite reality. He is the cause. By His reaction to decision and action in the finite creature, is He the cause of soul growth. He enables, by His being, the growth and nurturing of the soul of the individual. He is the repository of all true value, understanding, and wisdom which is not extant as an individual personality. When an individual personality chooses non-survival, He is the repository of that personality and of that value which is no longer a personal discrete entity, but is now part of the 'greater soul of creation.' He is much like the God envisioned in, say Buddhism, who is the over-soul of creation the yin and yang of existence; the light and dark; the male and female. All these things, all these opposites which interact, form reality. He is mother-like in the sense of nurturing the worlds. He is not perceived as a personal spiritual influence as is the Spirit of Truth or, the Thought Adjusters; yet, it is important to perceive our duty to Him in the general sense of spiritual growth and in the sense of personal growth, for in both do we contribute to His realization of manifestations to the worlds. He is the perfecting God of the imperfect. He is what enables the imperfect to become perfect. He is what enables not only the individual to grow, but the worlds to grow, towards perfection, toward Light and Life, toward God. He is the intermediate God which not only allows for creation itself, but allows for the perfecting of that creation. To Him, we owe our supreme duty of becoming perfect. Are there further questions.

BILL: Father Ham, in regard to your lesson about us giving others too much information, I am probably guilty. It seems every time I meet somebody, I am looking for a way to discuss your teachings or the Urantia Book. If I go away without the opportunity to speak of these things it leaves me with a feeling of 'missed opportunity.' I would really like to know how we are to perceive those people who are ripe and ready to hear the words we want to say.

HAM: Yes, as you advance yourself spiritually you will begin to see a reflection in another, of your own spirituality. That is almost like a searchlight looking into and recognizing another searchlight, for those searching will be drawn to you. You will perceive their readiness by a spiritual sense as well as by close watching for reaction, and feeling for that reaction as well. Is this helping at all?

BILL: Yes, it does. I have been reading some books that were written by Eba Bell Werber, and published in 1936, which coincides with the Urantia Book. These books are so familiar to me. One is called 'Quiet Talks With The Master.' Have you any information about these books?

HAM: There have been at many times, and through many people, this kind of communication attempted. And often it is wherein there has been this communication for a while, and then is stopped for reason of unsuitable behavior by the person who is receiving. Please be careful in your searching through these works (the books you speak of) and other receivers, for oftentimes they tend toward the spectacular and have clearly lost sight of the person speaking. If, for example, Rebecca were to (and this is uncharacteristic of her) want personal recognition for my words, this would cause me to look for another. This is one example of inappropriate behavior. Other examples would be money involvement; book publishing; professionalism; etc. This person you speak of may very well have followed instruction to publish; however, I instruct you only to look to their fruitsto look to their motives and to carefully weigh their truth. Be not afraid in using your own judgment, for you have a keen sense of truth. It is fortunate that you are willing to receive truth from many sources; this is very good. I can do nothing further than give guidelines for you. Do you understand my position? (Bill: Yes, I do.)

ROB: Ham I have a belief that 'everything has a purpose,' and earlier you referred to: "There is nothing that is not planned, directed, or known." I have a thought that God is similar to a great architect. And in regard to that belief, would that apply to the Lucifer Rebellion? or anything, for that matter, that is looked upon as being bad or wrong?

HAM: Yes and no. Freewill decisions are circumscribed within limits in immature and maturing creatures. 'Free will' is bestowed upon all creatures who are with the ability to know God. With free will comes the possibility for sin and destruction in order for this free will to be truly free. Free will, although operating within limits, has within it the ability for self-destruction. This is unfortunate, but it is a possibility, and it is a reality. The purpose behind this possibility, which is good, reveals the greater purpose of existence, and that isthe freewill-creature choosing to know God and to be like Him. The Lucifer Rebellion was unfortunate, and at the time, seemed disastrous; although in the millenniums since, we teach that there has been much more good come from this calamity, than evil; and this good has multiplied a thousand-fold, even a million-fold, over the evil that began it. So, in the wider context and picture, even though there is sin, destruction, and evil in the world, a wider and longer view/picture will reveal the ultimate good resulting from this.

JEREMIAH: Father Ham, I have a lot of questions on the Supreme: If our first motivation is to seek out and do the Father's willI was wondering if we are to seek out the will of the Supreme as the second?

HAM: No. Your second major duty is to love your brothers as yourself. The duty to the Supreme is contained within the first duty. This 'seeking of God' results in the ascendant growth of the individual, which allows self-realization not only for the individual, but for the Supremefor all reality is contained within Him. Self-realizing contributes to His overall self-realization.

JEREMIAH: You taught us the stillness, and to seek out the Father's will. Is that also adequate for the Supreme? (Ham: Yes, that is adequate.)

JEREMIAH: Do the Descending Sons contribute to the Supreme?

HAM: Yes, absolutely. There are two major directions of growth in the Supreme: One is inward toward the Father. The other is from the Father, outward. These two growth-directions are equally necessary for His realization.

JOHN: I was wondering about the Supreme also. Is God the Supreme and the Supreme Being the same? or are they two different personalities?

HAM: They are the same, although there is a difference in these terms. In referring to 'God the Supreme' we are referring to the 'sometime future' personality (power-personality synthesis) which will be the result of the growth of the Supreme. In referring to the 'Supreme Being' we refer to His status as it is now, that is incomplete. Is this helpful?

JOHN: Yes, it is. When I was reading the papers on it, it says the Almighty Supreme is the deity potential of the Supreme Being. Is that the power manifestation that God the Supreme will have, or does the Almighty Supreme have a personality right now?

HAM: No. This is the same aspect of God the Supreme.

ELWARD: Ham I have a question on the upcoming lesson I have to give next week in church about the ?second coming.? What has and what hasn't been fulfilled regarding the second coming of Christ? I would like my lesson to harmonize with your teachings.

HAM: Yes. Our Father/Brother, Michael, has indeed promised to someday return to this world. I would emphasize that even though He has not been personally manifest to Urantia on a mass scale, that the Spirit of Truth has and is. And, is with us always, that we may be in personal communion with Him. Our first duty of life to fulfill his gospel is to love God with all our being; and then, to love our brothers as ourselves. In doing so, we consecrate our will to the will of the Father that is, to give to God all we have, are, and will be; and then, to live the word of Michael. This how we portray, is how we enlighten our fellows to this greater way of God-seeking, God-finding, and God-knowing. It is our greatest obligation and responsibility to Michael. And this is true regardless of when this ?second coming? will occur. Indeed, the ?when? of the second coming is irrelevant, for His time is eternal.

I perceive Rebecca is tiring. One more question only. [was personal, and is omitted.]

Now I will leave you with the following thought: Be steadfast in your adherence to truth. Wherever and whenever you find truth, pluck it for yourself as a flower and keep it for an everlasting gift from our Father. No matter where or when you find it, truth is living, truth is growing. Truth is ever-present, and you are all fully able to perceive it. Love God. Fully accept and love yourselves. Fully accept and love those you say you love. Open the doors of spiritual gifts. Open the door of your treasure within and give freely to those you love. Develop close friendships. Love one another. Show forth the light of truth your love of God, and the wisdom of your true self in your life.

We are with you through the week. My love goes to you all. I treasure the fact that you come for my guidance, and that you receive and act on these words. My love to you all. Farewell.

The Ascension of Man | Maturity is Ever a Measure of Self-Restraint

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is. Greetings.

I am HAM. I am your Teacher. This evening I wish to discuss the following topic: The ascension of man. All of you are equally on a path of increasing spiritual enlightenment and the unfolding of increased levels of liberty and service. With increasing levels of spiritual understanding, there is corresponding increase in relative prosperity, happiness, equanimity, awareness of justice, tolerance, understanding, foresight, spiritual insight, and love.

With this increased spiritual awareness there is a corresponding level of spiritual liberty granted to you. This joyous liberation from the chains of intolerance, injustice, ignorance, slothfulness, etc., is found in these increasing levels of awareness so that you become more unselfish and less intolerant of the faults of others. You are then allowed an increased realm of action, which is based on service.

Loving service is the basis of the social fruits of all true religious experience. The more you serve your fellows, the more increased is your level of awareness of them; and with increasing understanding of them there comes increasing love and devotion to God. The more you understand your fellows, the more you love them. The more you serve your fellows, the more you love them. These three aspects of life—understanding, spiritual awareness, and service—are love-based and love-dominated.

As I said to Rebecca earlier, you must all increasingly learn to love yourselves. This will enable you to understand and forgive yourself as you can understand and forgive another. This is the basis of true self-respect. With increasing levels of spiritual awareness—spiritual liberty and social service is bestowed upon the individual. An increased awareness of duty, and love of that duty, is the duty of love.

As you grow in a wise love of your fellows, you grow ever-increasingly toward the expanded love of your Father. Learn to bask in the light of His love, for your lives will be transformed by it. We first accept the love of God as a child, and then we learn to walk in the light of His love as adults.

There is a profound self-respect, self-knowledge, self-control, and self-understanding involved in spiritual growth. Self-control is a very important aspect of spiritual growth and comes with the bestowal of increased liberty. No longer are we shackled by the 'thou shall not' doctrine of traditional religion. No. Instead, you are a liberated son or daughter of the living God.

The self-restraint and self-control exhibited by mature and growing personalities is evidence of the working of the mature mind in conjunction with the spiritualizing effect of increased spiritual contact and awareness. No longer do you walk like children, but now you stride the path of spiritual freedom with increased self-restraint as full-fledged men and women, citizens of the eternal kingdom of heaven. Maturity is ever a measure of self-restraint.

Often we have discussed adversity and its effect. The most profound effect is in learning self-restraint. The immature individual often invites calamity himself by unwise choosing and little self-restraint. The repeated experience of the adverse consequences to unbridled behavior begins the growth of maturity. The maturing mind increasingly welcomes self-restraint by the repeated noticing of the beneficial effects of such action (or the wisely restrained inaction, depending upon the circumstance).

The will of the Father is for the wise, seasoned, spiritually-leavened, restrained (that is, self-restrained) growth of each individual. He or she must learn their own way in this. It is not for me to give specific examples, for all differ. Many times as a child I was wisely restrained from dangerous action by my parents. They increasingly taught me to restrain my actions on my own. And so does Father also work in our lives by creating opportunity; and, restricting opportunity which would perhaps lead to unwise decision and calamitous misfortune.

By the increased awareness of Father's action in our lives, we can increasingly follow a narrow path of action, and limit the possibility of misfortune. Do you see, my children, this guidance is not only within, with the 'listening to prompting' for spiritual thought messages, but also it is involved with the outer world as well. Yes, of course there are many lessons in life to be learned; and you will learn all that is necessary for your spiritual development. That is the end of my lesson, I will now receive questions.

JEREMIAH: Then nothing is lost. The Supreme will pick up everything? (Ham: Yes.)

RACHEL: Father Ham, this question may be a little far out but I do have a special person in mind. Are there people on this Earth at the present time that have the gift of tongues, and others that have the gift of interpretation?

HAM: My wish is to explain this type of phenomenon to you. No. Your interpretation and understanding of this is not correct. During times of extreme mental excitement and spiritual uplifting which is Thought Adjuster contact a way of releasing this energy is in incoherent babbling. This person, in varying degrees, may be receiving a spiritual adjustment or message; however, the babbling is meaningless. Is this helpful? (Rachel: Yes)

ELWARD: You said as we increase spiritually, we have more spiritual freedom, and that those who are not as spiritually advanced bring on their own problems. Therefore, those that are more spiritually advanced, are less affected from their own problems? (Ham: Yes.)

ELWARD: Is it that we just don't respond? or is there a protection. (Ham: An awareness which allows an avoidance of problems.)

JASON: When one reaches the level of spiritual liberty the Thought Adjuster would, in turn, motivate the person in a specific realm of freedom perhaps showing us an awareness on greed, lust, or any of the vices man deals with, daily. And in trying to control these vices, each of us would have to reach a level which would give us the gift of this liberty? (Ham: Yes).

JASON: So we would receive this information from our minds, or the Thought Adjuster? (Ham: You would receive this information from the Thought Adjuster, yes.)

JAMES: Teacher, do I understand correctly that as we have more spiritual liberty, this does not imply relaxation of our moral rectitude, so to speak but rather, what is happening is our motivation is to act in a moral way rather than out of an obligation? (Ham: Yes).

JAMES: Another question: You spoke about our Father restricting our opportunities, and then when we are more spiritually aware, relaxing that restriction. How does He implement those restrictions? Is it through midways and angels? or did you mean by the mores of society and other psychological inhibitions we have when we were younger? (Ham: I was speaking of the actions of angels and so on. However, you bring up a very good point they both, of course, are operating.)

JAMES: Okay, my final question. Can you expand on what you mean by spiritual awareness?

HAM: Yes. Spiritual awareness is a complement of spiritual insight. Both operate to enhance the level of appreciation for reality in the individual. By awareness of spiritual reality, we become understanding and appreciative of the true nature of all being reality; that is to say, we see the essence rather than the outward appearance. Think on this.

To you each: As you go through the week, be aware of that spiritual leavening which you need, to grow evenly and purely. You will understand these words in the future; think on them this week. For now, farewell.

The Welfare Of Your Brethren | Have Gratitude In Our Ability To Know Father

Back

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is. Greetings.

My greeting this evening. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Tonight I wish to speak on the welfare of your brethren; and, your understanding/responsibility for it. Many times in our lives we come into situations which evoke a sympathy-response for a fellow human being; every day is filled with these actions and responses. That is, we each respond to the presence of another human in our own unique manner of sympathizing.

To the old adage: "Am I my brother's keeper?" I say, yes and no. Each person has a certain radius of responsibility for those immediately within their circle of influence. Each person, of course, cannot be responsible for an entire community, or state, or indeed the world. As I have said, true love is born in an attitude of thoroughgoing sympathetic understanding of one's fellows. This understanding must, perforce, not be limited to only a relative few.

The Urantia Book states that one cannot, by mere force of will, love the world. Love exists only between personalities not to an abstraction, or between an abstraction and a personality. As I have said, to see a person through the eyes of your greater self to allow your inner Spirit to communicate His vision of another is your greatest opportunity for increased understanding of that person.

You see, our Father sees us all as little children; and each little child is behaving towards the other children in certain ways. You may see that in circumstances where your brother or sister is troublesome to you if you would distance yourself from that situation, this allows you to be able to have a more insightful view of this person and a more forgiving nature towards him or her. And I say this as a profound reality-reaction feeling; this is not, again, a 'thought abstraction,' which you may do as an intellectual exercise this is a true 'thought-reality perception' feeling.

We remember when one of the apostles once came to Christ and asked: "How often may my brother sin against me and I forgive him until seven times, Master?" And Jesus replied: "Until seventy times seven!?" Do you see that Christ at that time saw the apostle as a child and in need of guidance toward this greater understanding of the Father. Again, this is the same with forgiveness; you cannot blanketly forgive the world of all its sins, for such is nothing more than a futile intellectual exercise.

Each person is accepting of divine forgiveness and human forgiveness according with their level of spiritual insight and perception of reality. Human forgiveness is, like human love, on a person to person individual situation. As we ascend on this road toward our Father, and become more like our Father, we perceive His forgiveness to be individual.

And now I wish to change the subject and proceed on a different lesson. My next lesson will be on the subject of gratitude.

Our Father has provided and given us many of the good things of the kingdom. We have been shown that the road toward Him is one of ease, a light burden, a happy countenance, and a sure step; and for this we should indeed be truly thankful. He has guided us through many a maze in darkness. He has surely shown us a better way to live.

Father has given us the bounty of His Earth, His land, His timber, His flowers, His abundant food, nourishment, and all material from the Earth. He has given us a blue sky above. He has sent His rain to give us life. He has shown us His friendly sun and His endearing moon through many days and many nights. He has sheltered us. He has given us clothing. He has kept us warm in the cold and given us relief in the shade from the heat. He has given us the ability to know Him, which is His greatest gift of all. I will repeat. He has given us the ability to know Him.

Each of you have your life-purpose before you. You are growing indeed, in His kingdom, in His love, His wisdom, and His mercy in your understanding of these, you are growing. I pray to our Father may your roots be deep in loving kindness. May your trunks be great and strong to withstand the winds and the rains of adversity. May your tender leaves grow toward the loving sunshine of God that He may nourish and strengthen you and help in this growth.

I say to you this day, there will be many who scoff at our teachings, who will tear at your branches and beat about your trunks that you may be (in their eyes) put down. Have strength in your faith. Be glad for your trials that you may be stronger for the next. Know that your rewards in His kingdom are forthcoming, for our Father withholds no good things from His deserving children. As a knife must be sharpened against a whetstone to improve its usefulness, so must you all endure trials which in the end, are benefits, a sharpening of your faith.

That is all. And now I will accept questions.

RACHEL: Father Ham, I would like to ask if God the Ultimate's relationship to the 'transcendentals' and the 'super-finite' is the equivalent to the Supreme Being, or God the Supreme's, relationship to the finite.

HAM: Yes and no. Yes, in an analogous way. That is, as A is to B, and C is to B, this is, in general terms, true but in specific relationship, very different. The Ultimate's relation to transcendentals and the super-finite is more close to being one and the same. God the Supreme, His relation to the finite, embodies the entire finite experience one fragment at a time, and is growing toward a oneness which is already existent in the Ultimate relation with the super-finite. Does this answer?

RACHEL: Yes, it does and I thank you. The unrevealed Consummator of Universe Destiny has he now been revealed? (Ham: No. This reference is to an Ultimate even Absolute level of understanding which will not be revealed for eons.)

RACHEL: In the future when it is revealed, then He and God the Supreme, and God the Ultimate, will then form the Trinity Absolute, which is an experiential Trinity. Do I have that right? (Ham: Yes.)

JEREMIAH: Teacher, I have a general question on self-defense and violence. We know when Jesus was young, He was passive, but He did tolerate another boy, named Jacob, to look out after Him. When He was older and on His way to Rome, He encountered a drunk with a slave girl, and Jesus held the man back but did not otherwise interfere. Can you give us some guidelines of self-defense?

HAM: Yes. The answer lies in determining God's will. For example: if you were beset upon by someone with no Godly understanding or perception, he would not be, in any way, carrying out Father's will. It would be incumbent upon you to restrain such a person. Jesus perceived Father's will for Him to be subject to the wills of men. His was a unique and Father-portraying life which would stand for all worlds for all time, as it was His will to do the Father's will. Father's will was for Him to subject Himself to the lower wills of men and their ambitions and petty prowls. With that incident of which you speak with the slave girl Jesus protected her, sheltered her from harm, but did not mete out justice, so to speak, to the wrongdoer; He did not perceive it His place to do so. He, being the Creator of this world, did not mete out justice. Therefore, to learn from Him it is not our place to judge and sentence anyone for any crime as an individual person. His discourse on society and the world of justice is one thing but another entirely, from individual to individual. Self-defense is entirely appropriate and natural in most circumstances, but the turning around and giving back revenge for an injustice is not acceptable. Is this understanding?

JEREMIAH: Yes, it is; and I thank you. Another question I have: Your teachings tonight, and other times, you've referred to plants, or "spiritual waters" for instance, as a way of conveying a message. I was wondering if on the Mansion Worlds if they use our mortal existence as a similar type of communication for teaching do they refer to the plants and spiritual waters?

HAM: Yes. I can recall a lesson: This lesson is, "If you cut your finger, it bleeds." This is a lesson on the Mansion Worlds, yet you will perhaps not fully understand this for many years.

JEREMIAH: Thank you. In tonight's lesson, you referred to love and tolerance and forgiveness associated with a small group-family. And with this, our group could you give us some guidelines on how large these groups get? Who would be included?

HAM: Yes. This close group needs expanding. That is, the people you come to understand need to be understood. And therefore, love needs to be expanded as much as you can. If you can know another, and understand and love that person, you are one step closer to doing the will of God.

JOHN: Father Ham, am I correct in understanding that physical gravity attracts morontia energy forms? (Ham: Yes). John: This may seem like a stupid question, but it seems to me like in the Urantia Book it explains the difference between morontia and physical as though they are totally separate so that they could actually be occupying the same space. Is that correct? (Ham: Yes and no). John: So is the Earth partially made up of morontia material? (Ham: Yes). John: Is that so the morontia creatures have something to stand on? (Ham: We stand on the physical Earth, also). John: So you couldn't float through the Earth?

HAM: A spirit form could, conceivably, yes; yet, morontia forms have substance that is more akin to the material at first, than the spiritual. The morontia is a blend of spiritual reality discrete spiritual being with material. This is the secret of progression from material life to spiritual life.

JOHN: So are there morontia plant forms on Earth? (Ham: No, not presently.)

BILL: But you see us quite clearly in this room? (Ham: Yes.)

BILL: I have been reading in Genesis about Abraham's life on Earth to see if I could pick up any recording of Melchizedek's presence during that time in the King James Version, and it occurred to me that we don't know and haven't asked about the welfare of Sarah. Are you aware of Sarah's whereabouts and what she is doing?

HAM: Yes. She maintains her association with Abraham, yes, although, not as an exclusive helpmate. They work mostly independently. She is not on Urantia physically. They maintain a close communication, however.

JEREMIAH: Father Ham, another question I have is on 'estimate of times.' When Lazerek was here a few weeks ago it was mentioned that the first persons from Urantia were reaching Salvington. And since humans are about a million years old, and the first dispensation was about five-hundred-thousand years ago, one might be able to conclude that it takes about a million years to progress to the local universe. Also, if you read between the lines in the Urantia Book you get an estimate of about two-hundred-billion years from one's first existence to arrive to the Father on Paradise. Are these times representative of the time it takes? And also, in the Urantia Book they give exact times/dates in some passages; and in other passages it doesn't say anything as to the actual associated time-frame. So I am wondering?

HAM: Yes. Time is relative. Each person may proceed faster or slower in a timescale frame. We have deemed it unwise to discuss specific timescale references for these traversal periods.

BILL: Do you have 'up days' and 'down days?' It seems to me that today could possibly be a down day?

HAM: Not the way you would experience these occurrences. Much of my expression is dependent upon Rebecca. She feels today a little unwell. And also with that, I would like to release her from this duty this evening and bid you farewell, until next week.

The Trinity and the One God Explanation

Back

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Tonight I wish to explain a very complex concept which is a universal problem in understanding for you. This concept is that of the Trinity, the existential Godhead this concept of three beings (or personalities) existent in one functional entity that is the Trinity. Yes, it is a difficult concept to understand. The ancestral 'One God Being' is also ancestral to all absolute concept God-Beings at once, as the Existential Trinity, and also the Paradise Isle.

I use a temporal term 'ancestral' to describe an existential level phenomenon. This term implies a temporal relationship which does not exist, but it is useful in describing these matters to the human intelligence, for you have no basis of understanding outside of temporal existence.

'Eternity' is not much more than a word concept in your mind. Having never incorporated this 'eternity' level of understanding into your experience-consciousness, this understanding is difficult to convey. So I will resort to time assuages in order to explain an eternal reality.

Therefore, the Father of all reality is first, existent. All other relationships stem from Him absolute, finite, and in between. 'God the Absolute' we think of as being first. That is, the Father splitting from His absoluteness, first. 'Absolute infinity' becomes absolute on one level and non-absolute on another. That is: God the Father though being absolute, retaining absolute, retaining infinity is freed of totality.

Then we see the Paradise Isle for the purpose of material creation. Then we see the Eternal Son the Absolute Spirit, spiritual personality. The first Word of the Father (first real personal self-expression of the Father) is the Eternal Son. The Eternal Son is Father of all Spirit personality. Of all Spirit, He is the center focal point, the Second Source and Center the source of Spirit.

The Conjoint Actor, or Infinite Spirit, is the Third Source and Center. He is the center of all mind circuitry of all reality. He is the source of reality as we perceive it. He is the Father of the vast hosts of angelic spirits who minister to mortal man while in the flesh. He is their Source and, part of their destiny also.

This concept of 'the three persons of God who is also one,' is a difficult understanding for mortal mind. They function together very often as the Trinity; and also function in their respective combinations. This functional reality begat the central universe of Havona and all the existential perfect Spirit personalities residing therein.

In the creation of the seven superuniverses of matter, and will-creatures from this material life/level of existence, God the Father, with God the Son, creates the Creator Sons who do personally create each local universe, with its inhabitants. They are the designers of our reality. Your Father Michael, is one such divine Son. Do you see, your Father/Creator, Christ Michael (your Jesus, rather, on this world, who is also my Father/Creator/Brother, Michael) is of an extremely high divine level. I want you to appreciate this reality.

Much time has passed since our Michael walked on this world, and His message is diluted to the point of almost being forgottenforgotten in the theologies and confusion of religious thought brought about in the last two-thousand years. If you look at and study modern religions, they have very little of His original message within their daily teachings. He said: "My Father has sent me into the world that I may be the light of the world." And so now again, some two-thousand years since his personal sojourn in the flesh, He has sent His representatives into the world that we may re-ignite a bit of this light.

I would like you to read pages 1274 and 1275 (Urantia Book) conclusive. I mean at a later time. I will now take questions.

JOSHUA: Thank you for a very beautiful lesson. Do I understand that what you are sayingthat God the Father, the Son, and the Spiritcould not function until they were separated from the absoluteness?

HAM: We do not say 'could not' regarding Father, for His abilities are complete. We rather think of this primal separation to be because of His will to manifest Himself, and this created the functional tension required for greater creative capacity. So, yes and no.

JOHN: Father Ham, the tension between the Father, Son, and the Infinite Spiritis that the same tension in between the Unqualified Absolute, and the Deity Absolute, and the Universal Absolute? And if so, is the relationship just basically 'the power' between the relationship that allows it to work? or is there a better explanation.

HAM: Yes, you are correct in ascertaining this relationship; it is a tension between opposites (or poles) which, by their interaction, enables the creating process to begin. For example, within each mortal person there is created, the soul. This soul is the creation of the absolute infinite God Fragment (Thought Adjuster) and the mortal mind of matter (the brain), and material thought pattern (which exists also within the Infinite Spirit). The Spirit is connected, you see, to a 'Thought Adjuster' and a 'mortal mind,' and is the interacting point between these two beings. This tension (interaction, decision-making on the mindal plane of reality) is the creator of a new reality, permanent realitythe soul. Is this helping?

JOHN: Yes. Thank you. I was also wonderingwhile the Trinity doesn't have a personality, can God the Father interact at the same time 'personally' as when He is acting as part of the Trinity? (Ham: Time is not relevant.)

JEREMIAH: How does the Supreme fit in with the Thought Adjuster and the mortalis He pervading upon the morontia soul?

HAM: Yes. The Supreme is the reactor to this tension and growth situation. It is the Supreme which reacts, you may say. The mind forms a decision within the mind circuits; the Thought Adjuster acts on this and the soul is resulting from this. The Supreme is who reacts to this action and re-action. Are you understanding?

JEREMIAH: Yes. I understand. You referred to the ancestor God. Is that the "I am"the Eternal Infinite? (Ham: Yes). Jeremiah: In that, there is the personal, impersonal, and superpersonal existence is that level just a potential that later will actualize when you form the three persons of deity, the three impersonal absolutes?

HAM: Again, we speak of time yes and no. Yes, for thought concepts. Understanding? No; for all are existent reality.

JEREMIAH: Does personal and impersonal exist at the first level? or is that a creation downstream?

HAM: All are existent always have been and ever will be. There was no time creation element. All are existent forever. For thought process purpose, we use time as illustration.

JASON: Good evening, Ham. I have brought a question from a Karen, from Albuquerque, NM. I visited her home yesterday afternoon. She seemed to be a marvelous person, spiritually attuned and high in nature. She has written a book, called the Zoid Mission which I am totally unaware of the content, but I am aware that her husband was a contact person through a Teacher entity named Jack. She is requesting an affirmation towards publishing the book and would appreciate the input you could give her. (Ham: At this time, I cannot give advice concerning this matter.)

JASON: I understand. What about the Teacher entity Jack? Was this a true occurrence?

HAM: Yes. He is a Teacher who has been working with us for many years since the early 1980's that I can remember. (Jason: Thank you, Teacher Ham. She will be very happy to hear that.)

JEREMIAH: Teacher, I did read in the Urantia Book that time is at a higher level than space; in the same teachings it is talking about the seven dimensions in space. What are the seven dimensions? Can you explain that?

HAM: That you are wondering if seven dimensions are experienceable, correct? (Jeremiah: Yes).

HAM: Yes. They are, on a very high spirit level, fully experienceable. On the level such as your material world, you may conjecture by mathematics this reality; but for the morontia level of existence we think in terms of five dimensions.

JEREMIAH: The Urantia Book talks about the desirability of studying mathematics because it gives us further insight of infinity, possibly comprehending deities easier. Is it worthwhile to study mathematics?

HAM: Of course, it is beneficial to your understanding. Your mind is especially well adapted for understanding on this mathematical-level plane. It is never a waste of time to improve in understanding, in any way.

JEREMIAH: Thank you. And the Teacher, Jack, is he a secondary midlayer? (Ham: Yes.)

RACHEL: Father Ham, what are the six prime purposes for superuniverse development that has nothing to do with the moral ascension to Paradise that the Urantia Book says we are ignorant of?

HAM: I am not permitted to elaborate on this as wisely the Urantia Book also does not. These purposes are concerning other superuniverses, not here.

ELWARD: Ham, you've talked about Michael, Jesus; and, I understood that you talked about a Michael in relation to yourself. It's a different Michael, is that correct? (Ham: No. The same. I meant to clarify my statement.)

ELWARD: Okay. In relationship to that tension that John talked about that should not be confused with contention. Right? (Ham: Correct.) Elward: And to put it in an earthly context it might be a necessary tension, like a string on a violin that can create a harmonic?

HAM: Yes. For this evening then I wish you all a pleasant week ahead and hope to see you all here next week. Farewell.

Description Of Our Awakening On The Mansion Worlds

Ham & Norson, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 09-30-1991

Back

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

Greetings this evening. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Tonight I would like to enter into a discussion on the celestial chambers of the first Mansion World. [Editor's note: See also, resurrection chambers.] "In my Father's house are many mansions." This is referring to actual structures on the Mansion Worlds. These worlds are architectural, and the structures are made of morontia materials.

You may picture in your minds a very fine and beautiful tile or marble-like substance which is more fine or delicate in molecular-level construction than is marble. The molecular structure is sexagesimal which makes this stone very fine, almost crystalline in structure, but it more closely resembles stone to the eye.

These buildings are very large and have many rooms and corridors within them. Each wing (or separate area) has many rooms (small rooms) for re-personalization. This which I speak is on the First Mansion World the Resurrection Halls. Each person is resurrected separately and alone (separated from all the others). A morontia companion greets each new arrival, individually, upon awakening. The vast roll call of a dispensation is still administered on an individual level.

The beauty and grandeur of these fine structures are very awe-inspiring and amazing to the awakened one. The expanded senses of color and sound are immediately apparent. More of the spectrum of light is visible. Color is greatly enhanced and expanded so that colors can be perceived on a more subtle and fine level than you can perceive them now. Hearing is expanded, similarly, and music becomes more intricate in that the notes can be heard on a subtler level also.

Yes, in both sight and hearing, appreciation for beauty is greatly enhanced and broadened. Also, by analogy to these physical senses, if you can imagine the mind-capacity-level to be similarly broadened, then the ability to discern (subtly, again) is enhanced. You will have a fairly good understanding of how you will be upon awakening. Other senses are enhanced, and spiritual senses, of course, are greatly enhanced. Your ability to discern your Thought Adjuster [our indwelling Father Fragment Spirit] will be greatly magnified. Also, you will be able to greet your guardian angels in a personal wayface to face, as it were.

You will have a dwelling place on this new sphere shortly after registration, it is your new home. You are shown to a new dwelling place. These dwelling places are simple and efficient. They are not austere if you think that, for it is all very beautiful. Many activities await you on your new home. Besides learning and spiritual advancement, you may also be employed in producing what you can best do. For example, you who are musically inclined will find it easy to give of yourself in self-expression for musical enjoyment of others. This is very well thought of on high.

Creativity in all areas is greatly valued and encouraged. Therefore, fear not if in this life you have insufficient opportunity for self-expression, for in the future you will have ample opportunity to do so. Science, technology, art, teaching, exploration, theology many of the things you do here, you will also do on high; at least this is true for the first of the Seven Mansion Worlds.

This discussion is with the idea to keep hope alive in your hearts and to let you know that what you do on this world is valuable except maybe dry cleaning. [Much laughter. Rebecca owns a dry-cleaning business.]

JASON: Was that Rebecca or Ham?

HAM: It was I, Ham, in response to her question. There is value in all that you do. Now I will answer questions.

JEREMIAH: Teacher, I have a question on tonight's lesson referring to the morontia elements, the molecular structure. We understand that material existence is based on particles and motion basically vibrations, rotations and orbits of energy levels. Is there morontia material in the spiritual level? And also, are there morontial particle movements in a similar sense in the material?

HAM: Yes. Very much so. The original Paradise pattern/form spirit, is the basis of molecular pattern/form which has these energies diverge create many different elemental patterns. These elements are the basis on which the Power Controllers operate to create materials. These materials may involve elements which are involved in life creation also life being a combination of the animate or spiritual, and inanimate or elemental form; both are derived from Paradise.

JEREMIAH: So everything is based on motion? We believe that quantum mechanics are a good description of at least larger particles is there similar type mechanics within the morontia and spiritual? Are they the same, or completely different? (Ham: Yes.

They are very similar in principle. In action and 'reaction,' these elements are very different and yet also very similar.)

JEREMIAH: You referred to the architectural elements of the Mansion Worlds. Is our architecture on this world inspired by any architect up there? And is that true all the way up the line? Do the higher existences inspire the lower existences of the architecture and beauty?

HAM: Yes. The development of the arch (for instance) was attained through spiritual insight by the architect originating them and given to the age at that time by that agency. The human person who strove in this expert area had also sought divine guidance.

JEREMIAH: What is a soulmate? (Ham: It is an expression of two souls being congruent in thinking, feeling, and acting. This soulmate idea is sometimes lasting over ages; and other times, for a shorter period.)

ROSANNE: Ham, I have a question about the dwellings you spoke of. You said we will each have our own dwelling. Does this mean we'll not have our loved ones with us if they are on the Mansion Worlds?

HAM: This is a delicate subject for it is understood how human attachments are. However, there is not the family structures for First Mansion World ascenders. You are ascended by your own initiative and freewill. You may wait at certain parts, areas of the ascension, for a loved one to reach you, yes, but there is not the structure of family anymore. That is, as you know of family structure here. On the Mansion Worlds, all are family.

ROSANNE: You also spoke of having jobs on the Mansion Worlds. Is the First Mansion World similar to this except that we do things for pleasure instead of just working to make money so we can live?

HAM: The effort attendant on 'striving toward a goal' is needed on these first worlds, just as are they needed on this mortal world; the satisfaction from attaining a goal is just as real as here. Life is easier in some ways and more difficult in others. You will find 'satisfaction from work' to be your reward, rather than monetary reward. Your ability to just live is your reward for toil. Is this helping?

JAMES: Teacher, it seems that our human traits are largely determined by our genetic makeup, like height, weight, some of our mental traits. Do these same traits persist into the Mansion Worlds? (Ham: Yes. To a certain degree they most certainly do, but especially in the first three Mansion Worlds, it is very noticeable.)

JAMES: Is it likewise with our natural talents (Ham: Yes.)

DAVID: Father Ham, I was curious how you were employed when you were resident on the First Mansion World.

HAM: I worked on instrument design for musical purposes.

BILL: Father Ham, in the April 25th meeting, there seemed to be some sort of organizational talk about 'the reserve corps of destiny' being broken up by areas that could be called companies. And the company commander, in this case, would be Ham; and Rayson or Norson could be commanders in other areas. Is that correct?

HAM: Yes and no. My primary work is as your Teacher. I am mostly concerned with your individual spiritual progress. This is my specific mission.

BILL: But it is through you that comes our directives? We have no human leader in this group as your students which gives us direction, but it is through you wherein we receive our specific mission assignments? And if so, therefore, you are an executive officer of this company of reserve corps of destiny. (Ham: Yes, in a sense.) Bill: In the April 25 lesson, Melchizedek welcomed the group to the 'brotherhood of planetary believers.' Is that the name for our group?

HAM: No. I believe this is unclear and is not at this time of major importance. No. It is important to limit contention over names which may be used for divisive reasons in the future.

BILL: Should we be paying attention to setting up councils as the mortal reserve corps?

HAM: No. This is changing at this time. The reserve corps membership is increasing, causing new factions to be created which are not immediately under the jurisdiction of the older arrangement. Such is the case of this group you are not under the jurisdiction or overcontrol of an angelic council.

JEREMIAH: Teacher, I have a question on 'time' which is from a woman in Albuquerque Reverend Jean, she is a healer. Do you know this individual? (Ham: No). Jeremiah: She claims her spiritual helpers have come in the past at noon and leave at midnight. Now they are arriving later and later, and they claim they are coming at the same time. So the question: Is time actually moving slower? or is time the same on the morontia and material existence.

HAM: Time is not a continually moving entity. We move instead through time. It is not time that moves.

JEREMIAH: So she could be moving slower the last few years? (Ham: I don't know what this means. I have no understanding.)

JEREMIAH: Another question: Karen shared with us some of Jack's teachings, as well as a visiting Mighty Messenger who was referring to tilting the axis of the planet to accomplish various spiritual missions. What does he mean by that? (Ham: I must see, or rather hear, the original transcript in order to understand this question.)

JEREMIAH: Shall we read it to you? or do it at another time. (Ham: You may read it if it is easy to do, yes.)

JEREMIAH: (Jack's words) We do this over the Archangel circuits. This is exactly how this operates. You have been told that I will tell it to you in my manner. We are making preparations. We are doing everything we can with the permission of the Most Highs to get this planet (aligned); all we have to do is just move it a little bit on its axis.

HAM: I am not understanding still, and decline to comment.

JEREMIAH: I'd like to ask a question about the Spirit of Truth: In the Urantia Book it states that after a Paradise bestowal Son leaves the planet, then he goes back with Michael; and both of them introduce the Spirit of Truth to that planet. In the case of our planet, Michael was here by himself. So is that the same? or do other planets get more because of 'two' beings doing it, and we had only one? Or, is it because we have the honor of having the Creator Son Himself does that give us more? (Ham: Equality. Complete equality is Michael's decision on that.)

JEREMIAH: In reading the Urantia Book I get the feeling that Urantia is more spiritually endowed than the typical planet?

HAM: We believe that this planet has great spiritual potential, which is largely unrealized at this time. However, your planet may become an extraordinary example of quick and steady spiritual growth, beginning from your primitive days, through the bestowal of Michael, and onward to Light and Life. We are attempting to bring about vast spiritual awakening which will begin a vast social, political, and economic change.

JEREMIAH: What is the origin of this 'spiritual endowment' that we have over other planets? Is it the life structure they brought here originally? or is it because we have been rebellion tested. (Ham: Yes. It is a combination of many factors; two of which you have mentioned.)

RISDON: Father Ham, I know people that feel that ?as much as they would like to have a lot of faith, sometimes they don't have the faith that they really want to have.? Is there a way you can tell us how we can increase our faith in the world we live in, which is sometimes impatient in gaining it as we want to?

HAM: This is an interesting and thought-provoking question. I would like to take it up next week. For now, I have someone here.

I am NORSON. I am a Melchizedek receiver functioning on your world. I have spoken before with others in a time of warning or admonition to proceed with caution. I desire to change this rule of caution to one of exuberance. There are now enough in the readership that this early extinction of the Urantia Book will not take place, which was our concern then. For now, I desire to give you the freedom to go forward into the world bringing our message and light. There is no danger of this being stopped.

Have peace in your hearts with the love of Michael and His personal mandate to bring Light and Life to this dark world. He sends greetings to His children; and, His personal love and regards. Be of good cheer in your life and work. Be satisfied with yourselves. Be accepting of one another and steadfast in your faith. I leave you now. Farewell.

A Lesson On Sonarington | One of the Sacred Spheres of Paradise, And Our Local Universe

Back

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Tonight I wish to begin with a lesson on Sonarington. Sonarington is one of the sacred spheres of Paradise. It is the world of the Sons. You, all ascending sons and from all seven superuniverses, pass through Sonarington on route to Paradise. It is by all accounts exceeding beyond understanding in beauty and personal charm. This world is where you will most readily understand the Eternal Son's person. His person will touch yours.

Sonarington is also a special world for the Creator Sons of the local universes. They have found personalization there and proceed from Sonarington to their future world and universe stations. It is the most precious of the worlds for ascenders, finaliters. It is the first taste of Paradise, and is forever enthroned in each finaliters' memory for all eternity.

This world, Urantia, is a precious world also forever living in your memories for all eternity, for the memory of Michael, His birthplace is both Sonarington and Urantia. I am in hopes this is clarifying our choice of names. For Michael, this world is His second birthplace and home; He will always take special interest in Urantia. You who have been born here are very privileged and cared for. It was understood in His day, by Him, Michael, on this world, that this world has a special destiny before it.

You are the initiators of this rapidly-changing transformation of your world from darkness to light; from ignorance to wisdom; from despair to hope; from war and poverty to peace and prosperity. Yes, this is your mission on Earth.

You, my children who are engaged in these lessons, are the special emissaries, role-models, evangelists and teachers of a new and better world to come. Think not lightly on this. This is a grave and awesome responsibility on which I am placing you. Much will come to pass in the coming years and you will one day be the leaders of your world. [Editor's note: Ham explains below: "This does not imply political or social leadership in the usual sense," but is meant: "leaders by example."] I will receive questions.

JOSHUA: Father Ham, that's quite an awesome responsibility you have given us. I pray we can live up to your expectations. I did have a question: I was wondering inasmuch as the Lucifer Rebellion has been adjudicated, are we who are now living still eligible to become Mighty Messengers? (Ham: Yes. I believe so, yes.)

Joshua: Thank you. I really appreciate why you picked out the name Sonarington for our lesson; and thank you very much for explaining that to us. Duane and Lucile (Faw), and Lyn (Lear) proposed the following: "In regard to you addressing the General Council, they would inform the General Council on Friday, January 31st, that you would address F.U.S.L.A., which is the First Urantia Society of Los Angeles, on Saturday afternoon, February 1st. The F.U.S.L.A. meeting will be open to all attendees, and the General Council would be invited. That way only those people desiring to hear your message will attend." Does this plan meet with your approval? (Ham: Yes.) Joshua: Thank you very much.

RACHEL: I believe it is true that in our churches they do grow in so many ways. They do grow spiritually. One of the main things that is detrimental though is that they learn to fear God, and that takes quite a long time to overcome these fears. I wonder if you have some instruction about that.

HAM: Yes. This is unfortunate and will one day be corrected. At present time this situation is looked upon seriously and will have to proceed ?individual to individual? for improvement.

JEREMIAH: Teacher Ham, in regard to tonight's lesson wherein we visit and go through Sonarington on our way to Paradise? is this our only time there? Or, do we get to go back and visit? (Ham: Yes, return visits are permitted.) Jeremiah: You mentioned that we will always remember that experience through eternity, as well as our first existencewhich is here on Urantia. Does that imply that we won't remember some of the training worlds between here and Sonarington?

HAM: It will be as memorable for you as your first existence on Earth. These two points, the beginning and the end, are both, by their position in ascendance, very much more striking to the mind and more precious in spiritual memory.

JEREMIAH: Thank you, Teacher. Do you see any problem with the Urantia Book in the future? Any problem with the Foundation? Should we start accumulating books so we will have them in the next few years? (Ham: No. This is not necessary.) Jeremiah: Thank you. Also, on this planet, one way how we show our respect for one of high position, for instance, is that we stand when they enter a room. Could you discuss this in regard to a High visiting Teacher, such as was Norson, last week? (Ham: This outward show of custom is not required of you.)

ELWARD: Ham, I have a question on worship: What would be the best definition you could give regarding 'worship,' in the way you understand?

HAM: Yes, worshipthe sublime adoration/acknowledgment of thanksgiving and humility-attitude of the worshiper toward the 'One God.' Worship is the overwhelming craving of the personality for contact with the Father. Worship is sublime adoration, wonder, openness, respect, humility, gratefulnessthe touching of the heart and soul, by and with, the Spirit Creator. Yes, worship is the touching of spirits.

BILL: In regard to the lesson tonight and our charge as world leaders, and in my understanding in reading the Urantia Bookthe ?reserve corps of destiny?seems to be a low-key group which act subliminally to effect changes in the world; and the charge tonight was that we should prepare to become world leaders, which seems to be a contradiction. Can you clarify?

HAM: Yes. I mean to put you into the world as leaders by example. This does not imply political or social leadership in the usual sense.

BILL: Are there any female Teachers? (Ham: Yes, many, as you will witness.)

JEREMIAH: Teacher, I am asked questions that are difficult to answer sometimes. I would like to ask you some of them to see how you would answer them. First: What is the purpose of God? Why did He create man?

HAM: Yes. Much of His purpose is shrouded in mystery. Many of our philosophers have attempted to penetrate these questions but in the final analysis, the universes, with their will-creatures, exist by-and-for God's will, without explanation.

JEREMIAH: Thank you. Another question was from a woman who believes in God, believes in eternal existence with Him someday she asks: "We understand this life is on time and therefore there is no real reason to hurry; so one might as well just take it easy and with no emphasis on learning and improving in this life." Teacher, what could be said in answer to that?

HAM: All creatures who truly desire to serve Him, to know God and become increasingly like Him, will, without fail, develop and improve along those lines. It is not for another creature to hurry them.

JEREMIAH: Thank you. Another often voiced comment from people is that they have their own way of receiving answers, like their indwelling Spirit guides or Thought Adjusters so therefore, they don't want to look at anything else, such as the Urantia Book, or your teachings. What would be the proper answer for that?

HAM: Very well. There is no point in pushing or giving someone something which they do not appreciate, nor understand.

DAVID: The other day Joshua asked his Thought Adjuster if he could converse with Him, and the response he got was, that his Thought Adjuster was engaged elsewhere. If Adjusters are not bound by time or space, how could his Thought Adjuster be busy at that time and unable to answer his questions?

HAM: The Thought Adjuster is not hampered by either time or space. They are "time conditioned," however, in gaining experience within the time/space structure of reality. This time-conditioning would lead you to erroneous thinking on their majesty and power. You, being time-bound completely, are completely limited by this perimeter. Therefore, in this structure, there may be times when your Thought Adjuster is engaged elsewhere, even for a long time-period. Is this helping your understanding?

DAVID: So it's our boundedness by time, not our Thought Adjusters? (Ham: Yes, correct.)

JEREMIAH: Teacher, the Universal Father is infinite and there is a finite number of entities in the universe. So mathematically, could we conclude then that He has infinite amounts of time to deal with each one of us, just limited by our capacity to receive him? (Ham: Yes). Jeremiah: Is it the same message, for example: if He is sending out information to the Infinite Spirit and the Eternal Son then they, being infinite beings, they can only understand a like-infinite being? Is the same message coming to us we just fail to receive as much as they do? Or is there a different message to different orders of sonship?

HAM: Yes. There are different understanding levels to each message coming from such high orders.

ELWARD: Ham, I have a question concerning the Correcting Time: You said there would be an increase in spirituality during this Correcting Time. Could this be expressed as an increased spiritual gravity? (Ham: Yes. Exactly.)

JAMES: When you were speaking about 'memory' earlier. It occurs to me that much of my experience slips into my subconscious mind and I can't remember most of my experience in this life; I think it's common to most of us mortals to feel this way. Will there come a time when all of our experience and all of our memories will coalesce in some way into our consciousness? and that we will be aware and actually remember those experiences we have had throughout our mortal life that is meaningful?

HAM: Yes, that is the key word, 'meaningful.' Much memory is blocked by the material mind/brain mechanism. Memory will be experienced much more freely and vividly when in the morontia form.

JEREMIAH: Teacher, how does memory work? We know it as a circuit coming from the third person of Deity; but most of us on this planet are used to computer storage, 0's and 1's, on memorizing data. What is the 'memory' mechanism?

HAM: There are two: One is brain/material electrochemical storage. The other is morontia-counterparted memory initiated by the Thought Adjuster and it is this memory which will survive death; the material memory lodged in chemical circuitry within the brain-matter, will not.

JEREMIAH: Does the Thought Adjuster then take the electrochemical memory that is lodged take the best part and convert it to the permanent reality? and the rest to just vanish when we die or translate? (Ham: Yes. It is counterparted at the 'experience time'.?)

JEREMIAH: And further on the worlds on high we go through different forms? we keep getting different endowments of mind coming from the third person of Deity? So this is like a skeleton that these mechanisms can operate in? (Ham: Yes, you could say that.)

BILL: You said that in relation to work and leisure, it should be fifty-fifty. Would that fifty-percent we are doing be considered work?

HAM: Yes, this is true. You will undoubtedly all be engaged in working for the advancement of the kingdom at some point. Yes, and this is also, work.

BILL: Then as our spiritual work becomes a greater part, and the material work will diminish it seems to me like there are many ways in this world where there is opportunity for passive income that doesn't require a great amount of time but which could be arranged in such a way that those persons required to work on a spiritual level, such as Rebecca, would be able to withdraw from a highly intensive material work situation and become more involved in the spirit work. (Ham: Yes. This will undoubtedly come to pass.) Bill: Am I hearing ?be patient?? (Ham: Yes.)

ELWARD: Ham, would it be possible some of the time to let us know a week in advance what the subject material will be so we can look in the Urantia Book and study that, so our questions will be more appropriate to the lesson?

HAM: Often I change and alter my plans. I would not wish to require study beforehand and then disappoint your efforts.

JEREMIAH: Teacher, I have some questions on rebel spirits: I understand from the Urantia Book that if you ask the rebel spirits to enter your mind, they will. Just like if you ask Jesus to enter, He will. And also, the Urantia Book teaches that on the outbreak of the Lucifer Rebellion all spirit entities were detained on the headquarters world and they had to choose, going from one speaker to another, either with Michael or against Michael. The point is, that these individuals knew what they were getting into. Is it possible for a mortal here to be leaning toward a rebel spirit and not be aware of it? that one thinks he is following God and yet he is not? (Ham: This is no longer any danger of possibility.)

JEREMIAH: Before 1985 it was possible? (Ham: Yes.) Jeremiah: Were there whole groups infiltrated by rebel spirits and now they find themselves leaderless? (Ham: Yes.) Jeremiah: Are such groups political, social, and religious are they a danger to the Correcting Time? Are there fertile grounds to recruit these members from, now that they are leaderless? Should we be concerned or not?

HAM: No. Do not be overly concerned. All will be eventually cleansed of this evil and erroneous thinking.

JOSHUA: Father Ham, it was my understanding in reading the Urantia Book that Jesus, after his resurrection, bestowed the Spirit of Truth upon mankind whereupon those rebellious spirits could not indwell anyone any longer anyone of ?normal mind.? Was that correct? (Ham: Yes.) Joshua: I am still a little confused. Since the Lucifer rebellion has been adjudicated, are some of these rebellious spirits still inhabiting the Earth?

HAM: No, they are not. Until our next meeting, I look forward to seeing you all again. Farewell.

I did have a question: I was wondering inasmuch as the Lucifer Rebellion has been adjudicated, are we who are now living still eligible to become Mighty Messengers? (Ham: Yes. I believe so, yes.)

Joshua: Thank you. I really appreciate why you picked out the name Sonarington for our lesson; and thank you very much for explaining that to us. Duane and Lucile (Faw), and Lyn (Lear) proposed the following: "In regard to you addressing the General Council, they would inform the General Council on Friday, January 31st, that you would address F.U.S.L.A., which is the First Urantia Society of Los Angeles, on Saturday afternoon, February 1st. The F.U.S.L.A. meeting will be open to all attendees, and the General Council would be invited. That way only those people desiring to hear your message will attend." Does this plan meet with your approval? (Ham: Yes.) Joshua: Thank you very much.

RACHEL: I believe it is true that in our churches they do grow in so many ways. They do grow spiritually. One of the main things that is detrimental though is that they learn to fear God, and that takes quite a long time to overcome these fears. I wonder if you have some instruction about that.

HAM: Yes. This is unfortunate and will one day be corrected. At present time this situation is looked upon seriously and will have to proceed ?individual to individual? for improvement.

JEREMIAH: Teacher Ham, in regard to tonight's lesson wherein we visit and go through Sonarington on our way to Paradise? is this our only time there? Or, do we get to go back and visit? (Ham: Yes, return visits are permitted.) Jeremiah: You mentioned that we will always remember that experience through eternity, as well as our first existence which is here on Urantia. Does that imply that we won't remember some of the training worlds between here and Sonarington?

HAM: It will be as memorable for you as your first existence on Earth. These two points, the beginning and the end, are both, by their position in ascendance, very much more striking to the mind and more precious in spiritual memory.

JEREMIAH: Thank you, Teacher. Do you see any problem with the Urantia Book in the future? Any problem with the Foundation? Should we start accumulating books so we will have them in the next few years? (Ham: No. This is not necessary.) Jeremiah: Thank you. Also, on this planet, one way how we show our respect for one of high position, for instance, is that we stand when they enter a room. Could you discuss this in regard to a High visiting Teacher, such as was Norson, last week? (Ham: This outward show of custom is not required of you.)

ELWARD: Ham, I have a question on worship: What would be the best definition you could give regarding 'worship,' in the way you understand?

HAM: Yes, worship the sublime adoration/acknowledgment of thanksgiving and humility-attitude of the worshiper toward the 'One God.' Worship is the overwhelming craving of the personality for contact with the Father. Worship is sublime adoration, wonder, openness, respect, humility, gratefulness the touching of the heart and soul, by and with, the Spirit Creator. Yes, worship is the touching of spirits.

BILL: In regard to the lesson tonight and our charge as world leaders, and in my understanding in reading the Urantia Book the ?reserve corps of destiny? seems to be a low-key group which act subliminally to effect changes in the world; and the charge tonight was that we should prepare to become world leaders, which seems to be a contradiction. Can you clarify?

HAM: Yes. I mean to put you into the world as leaders by example. This does not imply political or social leadership in the usual sense.

BILL: Are there any female Teachers? (Ham: Yes, many, as you will witness.)

JEREMIAH: Teacher, I am asked questions that are difficult to answer sometimes. I would like to ask you some of them to see how you would answer them. First: What is the purpose of God? Why did He create man?

HAM: Yes. Much of His purpose is shrouded in mystery. Many of our philosophers have attempted to penetrate these questions but in the final analysis, the universes, with their will-creatures, exist by-and-for God's will, without explanation.

JEREMIAH: Thank you. Another question was from a woman who believes in God, believes in eternal existence with Him someday she asks: "We understand this life is on time and therefore there is no real reason to hurry; so one might as well just take it easy and with no emphasis on learning and improving in this life." Teacher, what could be said in answer to that?

HAM: All creatures who truly desire to serve Him, to know God and become increasingly like Him, will, without fail, develop and improve along those lines. It is not for another creature to hurry them.

JEREMIAH: Thank you. Another often voiced comment from people is that they have their own way of receiving answers, like their indwelling Spirit guides or Thought Adjusters so therefore, they don't want to look at anything else, such as the Urantia Book, or your teachings. What would be the proper answer for that?

HAM: Very well. There is no point in pushing or giving someone something which they do not appreciate, nor understand.

DAVID: The other day Joshua asked his Thought Adjuster if he could converse with Him, and the response he got was, that his Thought Adjuster was engaged elsewhere. If Adjusters are not bound by time or space, how could his Thought Adjuster be busy at that time and unable to answer his questions?

HAM: The Thought Adjuster is not hampered by either time or space. They are "time conditioned," however, in gaining experience within the time/space structure of reality. This time-conditioning would lead you to erroneous thinking on their majesty and power. You, being time-bound completely, are completely limited by this perimeter. Therefore, in this structure, there may be times when your Thought Adjuster is engaged elsewhere, even for a long time-period. Is this helping your understanding?

DAVID: So it's our boundedness by time, not our Thought Adjusters? (Ham: Yes, correct.)

JEREMIAH: Teacher, the Universal Father is infinite and there is a finite number of entities in the universe. So mathematically, could we conclude then that He has infinite amounts of time to deal with each one of us, just limited by our capacity to receive him? (Ham: Yes). Jeremiah: Is it the same message, for example: if He is sending out information to the Infinite Spirit and the Eternal Son then they, being infinite beings, they can only understand a like-infinite being? Is the same message coming to us we just fail to receive as much as they do? Or is there a different message to different orders of sonship?

HAM: Yes. There are different understanding levels to each message coming from such high orders.

ELWARD: Ham, I have a question concerning the Correcting Time: You said there would be an increase in spirituality during this Correcting Time. Could this be expressed as an increased spiritual gravity? (Ham: Yes. Exactly.)

JAMES: When you were speaking about 'memory' earlier. It occurs to me that much of my experience slips into my subconscious mind and I can't remember most of my experience in this life; I think it's common to most of us mortals to feel this way. Will there come a time when all of our experience and all of our memories will coalesce in some way into our consciousness? and that we will be aware and actually remember those experiences we have had throughout our mortal life that is meaningful?

HAM: Yes, that is the key word, 'meaningful.' Much memory is blocked by the material mind/brain mechanism. Memory will be experienced much more freely and vividly when in the morontia form.

JEREMIAH: Teacher, how does memory work? We know it as a circuit coming from the third person of Deity; but most of us on this planet are used to computer storage, 0's and 1's, on memorizing data. What is the 'memory' mechanism?

HAM: There are two: One is brain/material electrochemical storage. The other is morontia-counterparted memory initiated by the Thought Adjuster and it is this memory which will survive death; the material memory lodged in chemical circuitry within the brain-matter, will not.

JEREMIAH: Does the Thought Adjuster then take the electrochemical memory that is lodged take the best part and convert it to the permanent reality? and the rest to just vanish when we die or translate? (Ham: Yes. It is counterparted at the 'experience time'.?)

JEREMIAH: And further on the worlds on high we go through different forms? we keep getting different endowments of mind coming from the third person of Deity? So this is like a skeleton that these mechanisms can operate in? (Ham: Yes, you could say that.)

BILL: You said that in relation to work and leisure, it should be fifty-fifty. Would that fifty-percent we are doing be considered work?

HAM: Yes, this is true. You will undoubtedly all be engaged in working for the advancement of the kingdom at some point. Yes, and this is also, work.

BILL: Then as our spiritual work becomes a greater part, and the material work will diminish it seems to me like there are many ways in this world where there is opportunity for passive income that doesn't require a great amount of time but which could be arranged in such a way that those persons required to work on a spiritual level, such as Rebecca, would be able to withdraw from a highly intensive material work situation and become more involved in the spirit work. (Ham: Yes. This will undoubtedly come to pass.) Bill: Am I hearing ?be patient?? (Ham: Yes.)

ELWARD: Ham, would it be possible some of the time to let us know a week in advance what the subject material will be so we can look in the Urantia Book and study that, so our questions will be more appropriate to the lesson?

HAM: Often I change and alter my plans. I would not wish to require study beforehand and then disappoint your efforts.

JEREMIAH: Teacher, I have some questions on rebel spirits: I understand from the Urantia Book that if you ask the rebel spirits to enter your mind, they will. Just like if you ask Jesus to enter, He will. And also, the Urantia Book teaches that on the outbreak of the Lucifer Rebellion all spirit entities were detained on the headquarters world and they had to choose, going from one speaker to another, either with Michael or against Michael. The point is, that these individuals knew what they were getting into. Is it possible for a mortal here to be leaning toward a rebel spirit and not be aware of it? that one thinks he is following God and yet he is not? (Ham: This is no longer any danger of possibility.)

JEREMIAH: Before 1985 it was possible? (Ham: Yes.) Jeremiah: Were there whole groups infiltrated by rebel spirits and now they find themselves leaderless? (Ham: Yes.) Jeremiah: Are such groups political, social, and religious are they a danger to the Correcting Time? Are there fertile grounds to recruit these members from, now that they are leaderless? Should we be concerned or not?

HAM: No. Do not be overly concerned. All will be eventually cleansed of this evil and erroneous thinking.

JOSHUA: Father Ham, it was my understanding in reading the Urantia Book that Jesus, after his resurrection, bestowed the Spirit of Truth upon mankind whereupon those rebellious spirits could not indwell anyone any longer anyone of ?normal mind.? Was that correct? (Ham: Yes.) Joshua: I am still a little confused. Since the Lucifer rebellion has been adjudicated, are some of these rebellious spirits still inhabiting the Earth?

HAM: No, they are not. Until our next meeting, I look forward to seeing you all again. Farewell.

Breakdown On How To Attain Effective Stillness | Introduction Of Will (Teacher for Tallahassee)

Abraham & Will, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 10-14-1991

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I have come this evening in the stead of your regular Teacher, Ham. He is engaged in another area. My greetings to you all. This evening I wish to present a lesson and show you a better method of the stillness communication. My lesson tonight is concerning the stillness. It is easy to achieve if you are diligent and steadfast in your application of the following ideas:

1: The stillness requires just that stillness. It is most important to still the body in order to gain a quietness for the mind to be allowed to begin its quieting process. Any position is acceptable of course, it matters not. Stillness and relaxation of the limbs, eyes, face, hands, and feet. This will help facilitate stillness in the brain that is, the electrical impulses coming from the extremities are lessened and therefore the electrical activity within the brain itself, becomes less.

2: Then the surroundings should be quiet. Stimulation from the auditory sense is most distracting and should be eliminated if possible.

3: Mental stillness. This particular aspect of this practice is the most difficult to achieve. Many of you are, however, making great progress and strides in this direction. Mental stillness is essential for Thought Adjuster communication to be received. There is a metaphor in these teachings of still water reflecting the sun. When the water (the mind) is turbulent, this reflection is splintered/broken into myriad refractions. In the ideal stillness, for clarity sake, the mind absolutely must be still. Deep relaxation, mental stillness, will, without fail, result in increased Thought Adjuster communication if you are patient and willing to commit this time. This goes for you too, Rebecca.

We have with us this evening a visiting Teacher who will be working with Vincent (Fred Harris) and the Florida group in the future. You will know her as ?Will.? [Editor's note. Teacher Will became the group Teacher for the Tallahassee, Florida TM group in 1992.]

Greetings. I am WILL. I will present this evening's lesson to you. I have chosen to speak of spirituality as a process of making something precious from something which is rough. For example, a diamond which is in the earth must first be sought-out and extracted from its embedment in the earth's surface it must be brought forth. At first, it does not resemble its later state at all; rather, it resembles most any other ordinary rock which you may find in passing and not appreciate or know of its precious content.

The kingdom of heaven is like the man who finds this rough rock and polishes and grinds the roughness away to reveal a diamond. Still, his work is not complete. For this diamond to be truly precious it must be cut with precision; it must be polished; it must be set in a beautiful setting. All this, is the action of the kingdom of heaven. This diamond will shine, reflecting its greatest light, showing its true beauty and value to all who witness it.

I am ABRAHAM, and am glad to be able to present a new Teacher, who addresses us today with such ease. For the remainder of our time together, I will receive questions.

JOHN: Father Abraham, in trying to find the stillness, I am having a really hard time and I was wondering if we are to lose consciousness of our thought? or is there always some part of us that is conscious.

ABRAHAM: Consciousness is not lost, no. In fact it is intensified; and awareness is intensified in the inner realm of being. This is not a dream-like state at all, but rather a state of intensified awareness and concentration.

JOHN: So sometimes when I am attempting the stillness and I think I am not thinking. Is that the purpose? or is that not stillness?

ABRAHAM: You are coming closer. It is a calming of the mental agitation which is needed.

JOHN: One last question: About how long would you say it would be good to do this each day? (Abraham: I would suggest at least ten minutes.)

JAMES: Abraham, where should our awareness be when we are doing the stillness.

ABRAHAM: It is our focusing on God and God-consciousness. This God-consciousness awareness will increase in the proportion that you gain stillness awareness.

JAMES: Some of us have done transcendental meditation which is designed to put your mind in a state of alpha waves. Should we consider this to be instrumental in doing the stillness? Do we want our minds to be in alpha waves, or something else? (Abraham: Yes. Yes. This is an effective tool.)

JEREMIAH: Father Abraham, what do you mean by alpha waves in the brain?

ABRAHAM: It is the electrochemical state as measured by such devices as the electroencephalograph. This is measuring a state of brain activity which is conducive to the stillness.

JEREMIAH: We can reach this state by the technique you just told us? (Abraham: Yes. Stilling the mind, the outside influence, and body.)

WILLEENA: Father Abraham, in stilling the mind, is it helpful in our beginning stages to concentrate on specific words relating to God essence? (Abraham: Sometimes this can be helpful to induce a greater stillness than allowing random thoughts. Yes.)

WILLEENA: Thank you. Particularly when there is random or mental static, is there something we can do at a time like that to calm that mental activity? (Abraham: It only requires practice.)

WILLEENA: I had an experience about three weeks ago I want to ask about. I was falling asleep and I had a vibrational force that was very unique throughout my body. At first, I felt frightened and then I heard the words: "I am here. I am here. I am here." I wondered if this was my Thought Adjuster making contact? or my own mind. (Abraham: It could very well have been your Thought Adjuster. Yes.)

PENNY: Abraham, I have been wondering for a long time about something. I joined Unity Church many years ago because I felt it was something very close to the teachings of the Urantia Book. Unity teaches the 'silence' which is the same as the stillness. Their closing prayer is the one said before these teachings begin, and I understand it was founded by someone who sought and received spiritual healing. I was wondering if the couple who founded the church were taught by you, or if they have revelations of truth. I know they publish things on the 'silence' and I was wondering if it would be good for the people here to read some of the things they publish, and if the church was fertile ground to plant seeds?

ABRAHAM: These are very interesting questions. However it, once again, is not my place to judge or evaluate the content of truth in a religious organization. This task is left to you. To receive and evaluate the claims and teachings made by people is for people to judge for themselves. Each person will encounter many such situations and teachings from many sources. You who have received/understood advanced teachings, such as those contained in the Urantia Book and also from Ham, are better equipped to evaluate these situations than most. You must remember that people within these organizations are guided by their own light of truth and are evaluating this situation by their knowledge. So, therefore, yes, to answer your question: Is this fertile ground? Yes, of course it is. However, be discrete. Be careful and wise in your dissemination of truth so that you do not damage or try to alter the stage of enlightenment of another without their full consent.

JEREMIAH: Father Abraham, is it desirable in doing the stillness to do it right after one wakes up in the morning? Your mind is kind of still at that time. But I have a tendency to fall back asleep?

ABRAHAM: Each person is different and sometimes what works for one will not work for another, and vice versa. If this method is comfortable for you, then yes, by all means.

JEREMIAH: Is it also possible to do it while doing some kind of activity such as driving a car? Can that be developed and still keep part of your mind on the road? (Abraham: Yes, of course. But it is always desirable to stay the mind on God. Yes.)

VINCENT: Greetings, Abraham. Thank you for providing a lesson from the Teacher for the Tallahassee group, Will. I would like to ask from you whether the lady I discussed yesterday with Ham is the contact person for the Tallahassee group?

ABRAHAM: There are two who are able to transmission-receive this type of communication; and there should be no problem in either person, even to the trading of this assignment between them.

VINCENT (Fred Harris): A final question and I will pass the microphone: The couple from Greenbrier Road that you ask me to seek, I have found. David H. has been advised of the message that Ham gave to me to deliver to his wife, and he remains skeptical. I believe he fears for her welfare and well-being. Is there any message I can deliver to him as well?

ABRAHAM: Yes. [for David H.] You are a son of light. Your light will increase when you allow it to. Your fears are justified, but not well founded. You will see the truth of my saying. There will come to you, our Teacher, Will. She will progress your group, yourself, your wife, and many others through a long and fruitful development. Please have steadfast faith in our Father. You will not, cannot, be led astray.

ROLAND (Bill): Father Abraham, I'd like to thank you and Ham for arranging for our brother Vincent to arrive here in Utah. You have given us so much enlightenment and have validated the work so greatly. Again, our thanks to all the forces that were involved in bringing him here this weekend. And also, I would like to thank Ham for the message we received yesterday regarding our personal meetings. During that meeting, it was confirmed that the experience I had in seeing the Second Mansion World was indeed a valid experience that was arranged for. And in my excitement, I forgot to ask one of the questions I had planned to, and perhaps I could do that tonight. How was that personal experience accomplished? I don't have any understanding of that. Could you help me there?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Your Thought Adjuster is, as you know, very experienced and able. He will continue to present to your mind, pictures of another and better reality. You are very fortunate. Are you aware of this?

ROLAND: I think I just became aware of that on Sunday, and now again, today. The volume is being turned up and I really appreciate that. I wish to thank the Father for giving me that Fragment, that Thought Adjuster, to guide this mortal through. (Abraham: Well said, my son.)

JASON: Greetings, Father Abraham. My question is in regard to your lesson involving some teachings from the Urantia Book on the Thought Adjuster. It is taught that there is a progression time to the ?Thought Controller.? My questions lead in two directions: One: Which would be the preliminary occurrences that would happen; what are the signs? And Two: How does this relate to our depth of the stillness as far as concentrating, from body functions and mind stillness? I have experienced, frequently, ?directions? while under physical duress with tremendous clarity. I wish to know where this could be placed in your teaching.

ABRAHAM: You have yourself answered this question. In referring to the steady progression from Thought Adjuster to Thought Controller is one way to view the increased spiritualization of mortal thinking. As the thinking mind progresses toward God, there is the phenomenon of the mid-mind, which is morontial. This mid-mind gains increased control and is dominated by Spirit. Thus, the spiritual overcontrol of the unified personality is becoming increasingly apparent in daily life and activity. As the mid-mind becomes increasingly spiritualized and Spirit-directed, it also elevates the mortal in all areas of lifephysical well-being, mental clarity, and spiritual value-appreciation. Yes. This stage (of course, Spirit-direction) is all-encompassing.

JASON: So in many ways then, it's uprooting the old and transplanting the new? eliminating views and thoughts learned in the planetary sense, those not recognized as spiritual? (Abraham: Yes. You are wholly correct.)

forty years of age the human being enters the age of discretion. Can you explain what is meant by that?

ABRAHAM: Yes. The age of discretion is meaning that wisdom is ripening into matured and tempered decisions. Experience through forty Earth-years is usually required for the tempering of the impulsive behavior and the increased overcontrol of higher wisdom even that spirit-direction which I spoke of previous. With many of you, this time element is not yet fulfilled; yet you have achieved this spiritual ripening of wisdom with lesser years, and I am pleased to see it.

WILLEENA: Father Abraham, with regard to Jason's question: In the last few days while doing my meditations I have begun to have a sense of the perfection that 'we are' that 'I am,' as God's reflection; and have begun to accept that and be open to that in a more willing way. What happened out of this is that there are moments, scenes, that flash in on me that are disturbing, to say the least. I wondered if some of this could be 'thought energies' that might be from the race-mind or the mass-consciousness that I have accepted as my own over the years? Or, are these energies that are seeking healing? As I am coming to a more accepting place, maybe these energies are surfacing from the depth within me to come to the light, to be healed, to be released and transformed. Am I correct in assuming some of this? (Abraham: Yes. You are overcoming inner fear which is always helpful.)

RACHEL: Father Abraham, we love to address you as Father Abraham. And for Ham, we love to address him as Father Ham. Now with Will. What would be proper to address her other than 'Teacher'? (Abraham: She has no preference.)

JEREMIAH: Father Abraham, I have a question in regard to spiritual names. Since there is only one name. How do you tell them apart if there is duplication? Or, are they unique in a given age.

ABRAHAM: They are wholly unique. Yes exactly. There may be difficulty in relating the exact word form to your minds but in all truthfulness as you are unique, also is your name.

JEREMIAH: If there are any similar-sounding names, does that mean that these individuals would be more in-tune with themselves than would be the general public?

ABRAHAM: With each other? (Jeremiah: Yes). Abraham: There is some truth to this. Yes.

JEREMIAH: For example, the soulmates; do they have different names? Even though Teacher Ham told us that they were congruent, what could you add to that?

ABRAHAM: All of you are unique and complete within yourselves. The idea of soulmate will be a touching and helpful attitude to have in this life, yes. Through the many years, you will also appreciate your differences and uniqueness which only you possess. This is all.

JEREMIAH: Thank you. I have a further question to do with God the Supreme: If an individual fails to survive, therefore he doesn't exist anymore and his potential of doing everlasting good is lost; so does that mean that God the Supreme is incomplete? or does another mortal make up that lacking part of the Supreme. I do know that their knowledge is absorbed into the Supreme.

ABRAHAM: Yes. This uniqueness is lost as a continuing entity apart and separate from the Supreme. Yes. The Supreme is incomplete now in our developing and perfecting of the super-universes stage. And yes, each thing that is lost is found sooner or later in one way or another.

JEREMIAH: Thank you. And we know also that the three persons of Deity, when they act individually, are expressed through 'mercy and love and forgiveness.' This, as opposed to 'justice and sovereignty' which is only with group behaviorgroup action, and is not on the level of Deity; the Supreme is individual himself. So I am having some confusion here in the sense thatdoes He act as a group with sovereignty and justice with God the Ultimate and God the Absolute. Can you clarify some of those problems with singular and plural behavior of the evolutionary God?

ABRAHAM: The Supreme will never be a judging person. These are actions taken in conjunction and coordination between individuals and groups of individuals who have mandate and direction from the Father, the Son, and the Spirit.

JEREMIAH: Thank you. One last question with sovereignty: We know that Michael, our Creator Son, became Master Son on his completion of His bestowal here on this planet; and therefore, He is still Sovereign of this local universe. We also know when the Supreme eventually manifests as a real personality, He will be total Sovereign of the Grand Universe. Is there a conflict of the sovereignty of who runs who? I understand both are doing the Father's will, so is that a oneness? or is the Supreme sovereignty excluding the local universes. For example, the superuniverses(the Grand Universe), and the rest of the Master Universe?

ABRAHAM: This is an interesting question. The sovereignty of the Supreme has not been made manifest; and at this future time, many changes will be implemented. Of these changes, I personally know little.

ROLAND: A few weeks ago, we asked Ham where your mortal wife, Sarah, was. He explained that she was on another mission. Can you share with us tonight what Sarah is doing and how you communicatewith her?

ABRAHAM: Yes. What she is doing I cannot say. However, her mission is of supreme value and importance to your world. We have ability for some instantaneous communication, and much is done by the communication circuitry, which has now been reconnected.

VINCENT: Father Abraham, I know that Rebecca tires, but I'd like to ask if Will would give me a message to take to the group and perhaps advise me when she plans to arrive.

ABRAHAM: This time is dependent on the free will acts of your friends, and on you. She will be present and will be helping in your delivery of this message.

I am WILL. I will be present when you deliver this message. Our mission is serious and is also very joyous. We too desire in this your cooperation, your learning, your will to achieve our mutual success in the kingdom. You each are already known to me. I am fully prepared to help you in your spiritual growth and progress when you are ready to receive me. I will unfailingly respond. Please have faith.

ELWARD: I'd like to ask about spirituality. When we meet someone, if I understand it right, we are not supposed to ever tell them that they are wrong. We can share our truth with them, yes, and as they learn to accept that truth, they will realize their own errors this correct?

ABRAHAM: In purely spiritual teaching, yes. You have been a very good teacher.

JEREMIAH: Father Abraham, we know when Melchizedek was here, back in your day, he was on an 'emergency mission.' Is the Correcting Time of today considered an emergency? And also, since he (Machiventa) is here, we know he has his Earthly associates namely you here with him. Therefore, when Michael returns will He have His Earthly associates with Him namely, the apostles?

ABRAHAM: This may be. Yes. Is the Correcting Time an emergency mission of sorts? Yes, also.

And now I must take my leave of you this evening and next week your regular Teacher, Ham, will be present. Shalom.

Fortitude, The Watchword This Day | To Enjoy the Beauty of Life's Struggle Brings Awareness Of It

Back

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

Greetings this evening. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. This evening I wish to begin with a lesson on fortitude. Yes, there are many times when the road is rocky and difficult to pass over. In these times of difficult trials, it is easy to forget our true and lofty goal as we climb this mountain of human living. When it seems the road is impassable it is sometimes incumbent upon us to wait and be still, patient, for in time the way is shown. It may be we must simply climb up into the heights of spiritual ecstasy which will show the way very clearly.

Then there are times when it seems incumbent upon us to pass another way, below, and into a way where the path is not clear; there is undergrowth of cares; there are rocks and obstacles of worry, darkness and fright. These ways are difficult to pass through and many times we must stop; we must carefully watch each turn to be certain of our path.

It is very difficult during these times to remember the high mountaintop when the path was clear. And in these days when things are dark and troublesome, when the path is obscured and the way unclear, it is necessary to maintain an attitude of strength and fortitude, to keep your courage about you and forge ahead through uncertain territory.

Remember, the path of light lays just ahead, just around the next corner. The journey you saw before you, you are still upon. Even though it may seem you are lost, you are not. Strength (spiritual strength) will keep you. Integrity and self-respect and yes, Jason, even some pride is necessary for your survival in these times.

Keep your spiritual armor with you, the shield of truth. The sword of righteousness will protect you in these times of difficult trouble against the real and unreal dangers of life. Yes, fortitude. And then, when the way is clear and you see that you have gone on the correct path, you will be satisfied in your innermost self that, yes, you saw the way and you progressed through it.

Wisdom (the fruits of wisdom) ripens most readily in the dark. It is difficult of understanding, yes, but I tell you this is true. Our most stable parts of our inner-being are made so by this difficult passage from darkness into the light, from struggle and challenge into peace and surety. Our trustworthiness, our faith, is strengthened. Our wisdom is ripened and our souls are made more perfect, even in these times of trials.

Our Father has not created these worlds for your lazy enjoyment; they are worlds of trial, and the trial is hard, is steep, is difficult but it is purposeful. Strength of character is not built on a bed of ease, never. Strength of character is built, brick by brick, in the toils of adversity. It is then when you are enjoying the fruits of your labor, when you have reached the plateau on your journey, that you may enjoy the sun.

Enjoy the beauty of life. In fellowship, you remember who you are and how you have been made who you are. Your character has grown mostly through times of difficulty, for you have learned patience; you have learned forbearance; you have learned tolerance; you have learned understanding and forgiveness. Also have you learned to accept your lot, to make the best of what you have. You have learned not to whine about the future nor regret the past, but to carry on in the face of all which is coming to you.

Yes, fortitude is the watchword for this day. Now I will receive questions.

STUDENT: Teacher Ham, thank you for a beautiful lesson. I have a question about fortitude and adversity. Why is it that some people here on Urantia seem to live lives of relative ease? While others seem to have trial after trial of difficulty and adversity? I realize it is through difficulty that we grow, but it seems to be so imbalanced as to who faces hardship and who does not. Could you enlighten me, please?

HAM: Yes. This life is filled with inequality and inequity at every level. There are extremes in this world which are not the product of individual self-will, but more-so a product of planetary mismanagement. Do you see, there has been no one to administer correctness and fairness to this world for many many years. Your Planetary Prince has been extinguished; your Adam and Eve have defaulted; your bestowal Son was short-lived. You have had no planetary organization of any kind, really and this inevitable condition is the result of natural evolutionary tendencies among peoples, nations, and races, especially when without celestial administration. Does this answer? (Student: Yes, Teacher Ham. Thank you.)

HANNA: Teacher, I have two questions to ask you tonight. The first one is something that I have been concerned about since I found the Urantia Book. I have always felt that the paper on 'race,' where superior and inferior races are discussed, is the most volatile and potentially dangerous or misunderstood part of the book. One can understand the scientific objective view, perhaps but from a human standpoint, this language can seem sometimes cruel and difficult to understand, especially if one is of the black race. How can we overcome this misunderstanding of language when we present the book to the world, and especially to the Negro race? With such racial prejudices that abound in the world, this could easily be misunderstood and used incorrectly. Were the revelators aware of this part as being potential volatile?

HAM: Yes. It was very much discussed. The decision was made to speak plainly the truth, not hiding or sugar-coating anything concerning the early evolution of the races. You are living in a time of strict racial more that is, some subjects are not discussed, not allowed to be discussed. This time will change when the circumstances of living do sober man out of his illusions about ?special? or ?superior? genetics. Does this answer?

HANNA: It helps. Thank you. The next question is one that I think a lot of people have wondered about and not really asked yet. We humans derive a great pleasure, satisfaction and even growth, from romantic love and from physical intimacy. We understand there is no sexual procreation on the Mansion Worlds in terms of having children. However, is there a morontial or spiritual equivalent of the romantic and physical love that we have here?

HAM: Yes, there is. It is very similar in all aspects to mortal 'love' but is inexpressibly deeper, broader, more understanding and less withholding in our relationships with each other. There is less willingness to hide ourselves from intimacy. There is more openness of self-expression and love-expression in these Mansion Worlds. Yes. I would consider that this special intimacy continues on, even to Paradise.

JANNEL: Father Ham, I have kind of a difficult question because I understand we are going to be having some activity in Los Angeles with the Urantia Fellowship General Assembly meeting. We now seem to know how many Teachers there are who are coming through, and it seems like the rate is going to be stepped up quite a bit. I wondered if you could answer a couple things:

1. How do we know a transmission is definitely a message coming through one of the Teachers and not a psychological projection on our part because we are expecting or wanting it?
2. How do we, as a small group of readers of the Urantia Book, guard against having our egos come into it and creating a kind of cult-like or elitist atmosphere at this particular time? Can you give us some advice on this?

HAM: Yes. There is no need to worry. There will be adequate instructions on these matters which are just now developing. I have previously said that all Teachers are known to me. Any who are insincere people claiming to be acting as Rebecca and myself, we will tell you, when asked. There is no danger of falsehood if you understand the organization is tight. Second question: How to guard against this problem of allowing our egos to take us into specialness or elitism? You are adequately equipped to tell, to detect any insincere motives of anyone claiming to be personally a leader. I, Ham, teach with sanctioned authority. I give not my authority to another. Are you understanding?

JANNEL: Yes, but I am still concerned because it seems to be happening very very fast; and all the activities seem to be among leaders of study groups of the Urantia Book. Is there other Teacher activity outside the United States such as is our small core group here? Is all your work just with believers in the Urantia Book. (Ham: Oh no. It is among all peoples. We desire Teachers to be received among all peoples of Urantia.)

JANNEL: I have just one more question then: How will we hear of this from other religions or from other groups, countries? (Ham: In your lifetime, you may not hear much. In the future, all will be revealed.)

JAMES: Teacher, when you refer to restrictions about discussing issues of race, are you referring to you, as a Teacher, being restricted from speaking to us about this?

HAM: Yes and no. Race is always, and ever will be, a difficult issue for people to grapple with and come to understandings. We are somewhat restricted in our teachings on these matters, yes, and yet our teachings, and those found in the Urantia Book, are the most plain-speaking teachings existent on Urantia. Are there further questions?

WILLEENA: Teacher, in the course of working with the stillness, I am beginning to find a sense of presence that is filling me with love, and it's a wonderful experience. And I realized last night that one of the things that I am faced with right now is that through the course of the day, and the amount of stimulation that a day's life in this world provides, how often I lose touch with that presence. My main desire, at this point, is to find a way to integrate some of that presence of love and warmth into my actual full days. Is there something you could help us with to take some of our stillness-feeling into our day?

HAM: You have indeed been an able student, Willeena, for this is at the heart of my teaching. This God-consciousness/awareness will, without fail, begin to increasingly dominate your life; and if it be your will to give your will to God's will, it will increase.

HANNA: Teacher Ham, when the Urantia Book came through, and Dr. Sadler and the contact commission were given instructions about how to make this revelation work, at least in their day, they didn't seem to know about this Teaching Mission part of the plan. Can I ask you why there wasn't some preparation disclosed beforehand? And if there was an original plan, did it go wrong? And if so, where did it go wrong, I should say, for the dissemination of the Urantia Book, and these teachings, to go hand in hand? Or was this just an adjunct to the original plan?

HAM: No. This is the original plan. Yes, those mortals involved at that time were not informed of this Correcting Time Mission. It is also not "directly" spoken of in the Urantia Book. However, the decision was made not to give premature information to them for it would serve no purpose, except to, perhaps, be dangerous. [Editor's note: Abraham had taught us in the ensuing years, that great care was taken to guard against "too much, too fast" which, with historical human experience, had proven to cause unstable growth, fanaticism, and other "isms;" and, in essence, a human pattern of "putting the cart before the horse." Foundational teachings had to be presented first, to lay a strong foundation that later teachings (the Teaching Mission) could be built upon. Ham noted in his answer here that the "Teaching Mission" was not "directly" spoken of in the UB but here is what was presented that could be "indirectly" pertaining.]:

Urantia Book Paper 37

6. CELESTIAL OVERSEERS [italics and emphasis added.]

37:6.1 The Nebadon educational system is jointly administered by the Trinity Teacher Sons and the Melchizedek teaching corps, but much of the work designed to effect its maintenance and upbuilding is carried on by the Celestial Overseers. These beings are a recruited corps embracing all types of individuals connected with the scheme of educating and training the ascending mortals. There are upward of three-million of them in Nebadon, and they are all volunteers who have qualified by experience to serve as educational advisers to the entire realm. From their headquarters on the Salvington worlds of the Melchizedeks, these overseers range the local universe as inspectors of the Nebadon school technique designed to effect the mind training and the spirit education of the ascending creatures.

37:6.2 This training of mind and education of spirit is carried on from the worlds of human origin up through the system mansion worlds and the other spheres of progress associated with Jerusem, on the seventy socializing realms attached to Edentia, and on the four-hundred and ninety spheres of spirit progress encircling Salvington. On the universe headquarters itself are numerous Melchizedek schools, the colleges of the Universe Sons, the seraphic universities, and the schools of the Teacher Sons and the Union of Days. Every possible provision is made to qualify the various personalities of the universe for advancing service and improving function. The entire universe is one vast school.

37:6.3 The methods employed in many of the higher schools are beyond the human concept of the art of teaching truth, but this is the keynote of the whole educational system: character acquired by enlightened experience. The teachers provide the enlightenment; the universe station and the ascender's status afford the opportunity for experience; the wise utilization of these two augments character.

37:6.4 Fundamentally, the Nebadon educational system provides for your assignment to a task and then affords you opportunity to receive instruction as to the ideal and divine method of best performing that task. You are given a definite task to perform, and at the same time you are provided with teachers who are qualified to instruct you in the best method of executing your assignment. The divine plan of education provides for the intimate association of work and instruction. We teach you how best to execute the things we command you to do.

37:6.5 The purpose of all this training and experience is to prepare you for admission to the higher and more spiritual training spheres of the superuniverse. Progress within a given realm is individual, but transition from one phase to another is usually by classes.

37:6.7 Before leaving the universe of Nebadon, most Urantia mortals will be afforded opportunity to serve for a longer or shorter time as members of the Nebadon corps of Celestial Overseers.

HANNA: Thank you. I want to ask one more question about what we term here on Urantia as 'soulmates.' In the Urantia Book there is some inference that sometimes our love partner in this life is our partner in eternity. Are we assigned soulmates? or do we discover each other by chance? And what is such a relationship like on the worlds after this life? Is it like marriages here, or is it more of a partnership, on a different level?

HAM: Yes, it is on a higher, much higher level, and very difficult to express in your word form format. It is hard to even use the word love, for presently on your world, love means many things. On the Mansion Worlds, love has meaning that is higher than your love definitions here; it is more compatibility and with more complete understanding and sympathy. Do you really discover each other while in the mortal life? Yes, perhaps. and occasionally. In these times of mortal living, such lasting relationships are difficult to project.

HANNA: Is there a certain time in the evolutionary plan where you are brought together? or is it left to coincidence? Do our angels or our Destiny Guides help us to meet? Is there just one person that could be our soulmate? or are there several? (Ham: All of the above.) [laughter.]

STUDENT: Teacher Ham, could you explain for me, and the California people, what your mission here under Prince Melchizedek is? And, what all our roles are in it?

HAM: Yes. My mission is as a Teacher, as you know. You all will be given individual assignment missions as well, to carry forward our work and word into the world. These things are not to be unfolded prematurely but must await the ripening of the time/circumstance.

JEREMIAH: Teacher Ham, I have three questions. If we think we have a soulmate, may we ask you for verification? (Ham: No). [laughter.] Jeremiah: I have a question about language: How many languages of this planet do you know; and during the Correcting Time are we going to be moving forward to a universal language?

HAM: I am conversant in English only. It is foreseen that English will be the evolving world language.

JEREMIAH: The third question is with spiritual circuits I believe they come in through the spiritual center of the planet. Is that correct? (Ham: Yes, and there are others.) Jeremiah: Thank you. I was going to ask if it is a uniform distribution of these fields from there, such as a spiritual grid; sort of along the lines you are talking about the spiritual energies flowing through the body to various eddies, chakras. Is that a similar analogy of what is happening on the planetary scale? (Ham: Yes, somewhat. Yes, it is.) Jeremiah: Are we, as mortals, sensitive to grid lines if we drive through them? I'm referring to these certain positions on the planet.

HAM: Yes, and also you are aware of general spiritual intensifications; an uplifting, in general.

[Further personal Q/A's are omitted here.]

Letting Love Grow and Flow Outward Requires A Tolerant Mind

Back

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Greetings this evening. I wish to begin again with a lesson on tolerance.

Sometimes it is difficult to understand your brothers; they are all so very different different feeling, different thinking, different emotional balance, different insights, different mental capacities, different upbringings and different world views. It is sometimes very hard to reach beyond this wall of 'difference' that appears between individuals. I tell you now that, and it is true, love will banish all barriers between mortals.

Love is like a magic wand which you would use to make obstacles disappear. It is a hard tool to master. Much is dependent on surrendering to God, which is not a 'controlling-feeling' emotion but a surrendering instead, through 'love impulses' which when directed toward another, elicits this same love impulses in return; it is unfailing except in certain severe situations.

If your love is strong enough, if your heart is willing enough, if your mind is tolerant enough, then love will surely overcome differences, barriers, and obstacles between you and any other person. Yes, this is hard at times; it is requiring a humility and meekness that is surrendering to the Father's will to a great degree. Some of you may feel that surrendering love for a day or two and then lapse back into defending your hearts with worries, cares, concerns about others. I tell you this is not the way of God.

The way of God is complete and total love. The way of God is learning to find this love within us and letting this love flow outward to bless and give light to those who sit in darkness. This also requires a tolerant mind a mind which is willing to allow love to come first, and understanding, later; a mind to allow a greater mind to be its overcontrol. And this greater mind is dominated by love.

I will take questions. Rebecca is a little tired and I wish to make this meeting tonight a little shorter for her.

JOSHUA: Would daily sessions (healings) give her any additional energy? (Ham: This is unclear). Joshua: Okay, thank you. Rebecca asks me to ask you a question for her: When you gave us the spiritual name of Ramsey, and then Rayson gave the same person the name of Andrew, this confused us. Her question is: Why didn't you correct her?

HAM: Rebecca??in her enthusiasm for my message and over-exuberance in her mental reaction??thought this on her own, in her own mind. In thisour connection, her mental strength is high and is sometimes difficult to break through. It is not my intention to confuse or distress anyone. She simply got carried away. It won't be very often that this ever happens, and when it is serious, correction will be made sooner or later.

ELWARD: Ham, what is the difference between the ?Deity embrace? and the ?Corps of Finality embrace??

HAM: Deity embrace may not include Corps of Finality members. Those in the Corps of Finality have Deity embrace as well as Corps of Finality embrace. These are two separate things. A Mighty Messenger, for example, has Trinity embrace, which is Deity embrace. He is not, however, a member of the Corps of Finality. Does this answer? (Elward: Yes.)

ROLAND: Just one other thing about these transmissions on paper. I have been asked many times regarding when they will be available to read. Basically, as you know, we have just a rough drafts of the transcripts, and they have not been cleaned up to the point where I feel they should be out in the public. Some of the printed lessons we have sent out have been ridiculed. I would like to focus our efforts on getting this together, these lessons, this book, this 'volume one' of your teachings to the Woods Cross group of 1991; and bring that forth as a disseminating volume at the end of this year. We are not including those transmissions that are to other groupsthose outside of our own group. Are we ahead of ourselves on the lesson's dissemination?

HAM: This would be an admirable accomplishment and is certainly encouraged by me if it is your will to undertake such a task. Yes, it is much appreciated. We are thankful for your efforts, Roland. Use your own wisdom in this. You are, in all things, doing very well.

JEREMIAH: Teacher, I have two questions before Rebecca tires: You were talking a couple weeks ago about 'resurrection.' How is that done when it is a general or a special resurrection? Is it done by time? For example, the sixteenth century people before the seventeenth? or is it done by the spiritual level? or a combination of both?

HAM: Yes, it is done chronologically by the most recent first, stretching backward in time; and of course spiritual level is taken into considerationand segregation is also made on this basis.

JEREMIAH: Thank you. In regard to the Christian dispensation: Which century in the West had the highest spiritual attainment, and which one had the lowest? And how does the eighteenth and the twentieth century compare in that? (Ham: The ?Christian dispensation? has not fully arrived. It is not for me to speculate.)

JEREMIAH: Thank you. The other question I have has to do with the Correcting Time: It is our understanding the Lucifer Rebellion has been adjudicated so the whole System is going to be corrected; and, instructions are that you are doing the correction plan on this planet. If I remember correctly there are something like thirty-six planets that revolted. Is the Correction Time just applying to this planet or is it including all the planets that rebelled in the Lucifer rebellion? Do we all go through this 'correction' at the same time? or since Michael's bestowal planet is Urantia, are we, then, an example to all the other planets?

HAM: No. This world is unique, yes, but all worlds are also unique. Many are now receiving Sons of the Magisterial order or Bestowal Sons. Many are in disarray like Urantia. Urantia is undergoing a unique development which is unusual and different. Many things are unusual to your world; yours is projected to be greatly progressive, spiritually, if all goes as planned.

JEREMIAH: Teacher, do you understand the full meanings and values of this Correction Time? Or, do you feel that there have been many more plans on high not yet revealed, perhaps to eternity, to fully understand the meaning of this? (Ham: Yes. I have a good understanding of our Mission, and my role. The fullness of time will see our results. This will be many years to come.)

JOHN: Father Ham, I have a question concerning a feeling that Todd and I sometimes have, that we are just generally upset. We don't know what is the cause; or, what we can do to fix it. Is that our Thought Adjuster trying to get through to us and perhaps we are just too dumb to realize? or is it just our bodies' natural function.

HAM: Emotional cycles are inherent in mortal life. I'm afraid there is little to be done but to grow spiritually. Recognize these cycles 'as cycles,' and progress beyond.

ROLAND: Teacher Ham, I probably needed that lesson on tolerance tonight. I'm seeing there is perhaps a hard lesson we can learn and it basically has to do with that each of us desires to do the will of the Father, yes; and that we have His help to resolve our differences of opinions. And, that we have you, our Teacher, to ask.

HAM: I may or may not become involved in these differences. It is not well to dwell on differences but rather, to see our common goal of Father-attainment.

ROLAND: One of the things that I have had some difficulty in is when I sense that I may be at odds with one of our brothers or sisters here. I am almost hesitant to air that difference because of fear of offending them. When our brother Vincent came to visit with us he felt, and expressed that as we are more willing to air our differences, the more we would be able to progress as will-creatures. Would you concur in that?

HAM: Yes. Understanding of one another is essential in doing Father's will. There is no understanding in non-communication of feeling of differences, and what have you. All must be revealed, you see. I would add one further comment in higher spiritual attainment there is always need for better control.

JEREMIAH: Teacher, do the morontia bodies have the aging phenomenon that we have here? (Ham: No). Jeremiah: Can a morontia being pass through a human being? (Ham: Yes, yes. There is, and can be, movement through and around the physical body without disrupting personal unity.)

JEREMIAH: What size are our personal guardian angels' forms compared to the mortal? Are they smaller or larger as compared to ours? (Ham: Taller.)

Rebecca is tired. I will have to end our meeting discussion this evening. Are there any other comments before I depart? (Group: No). Then I will say goodnight for this evening. I will see you all next week. Farewell.

Prayer and Stillness vs Two-Way Communication

Back

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your teacher. This evening I wish my lesson to begin with a few further words on the stillness. Once again I wish to instruct you a little in your personal devotions. The stillness is not meant to be an end in itself, no! it is the beginning of personal communion with God. You will receive, in the stillness, a consciousness of a feeling of 'higher self-awareness.' It is in this higher mind-state where communication between your Indwelling Spirit and your consciousness can take place.

Often the olden seers were content with only the God consciousness 'sensation' awareness. I am asking you to go further than this to do as Christ Michael did and reach communion, two-way communication, between your conscious mind and your Thought Adjuster.

Praying is most efficacious in this awareness feeling of God. That is, if you speak to Him in a prayerful attitude of childlike humility, often there will be a response whether it is an inner change of attitude (a peace-awareness of His over-care), or the more directness of consciousness of intent direction; or, awareness of another's intent or direction.

And still further, there may be direct word messages flashed within into your consciousness, even as word messaging is received through Rebecca to you from myself, Ham. Also, this can be effected from your own indwelling Spirit into your own mind-consciousness level. Many of you have received already this type of communication and are aware of my words. Then again, many of you are in the earlier stages of change of attitude, awareness of others and their attitude. This change and awareness is in itself life-changing.

God has His manner of communicating in allowing us a broader sensitivityincreased awareness to other people and ourselves. This inner awareness is now developing within all of you, and you are becoming more and more of who you are meant to be.

'Self-realization' is a word/phrase often used in connection with meditation; it is these early stages of meditation that we refer to as 'self-realization.' At even later stages of self-awareness realization, there is a God consciousnesscommunication between the Thought Adjuster and the human consciousness. And further, there is a oneness.

In future time, there will be no communication between two minds (yours and your God-Fragment?s), for there will be one mind. In doing the decisions of your greater self??your own Indwelling Spirit, who comes from the Father??you are increasingly becoming like Him. You are doing His will for Him and for yourself. You are more closely attuning your will to His; your mind to His; your awareness to His.

And in future time, as I have said, there will be only one. And on that day, when there is only one, you are immortal. You will come to understand the saying that: "There will be no more weeping; no more tears of sorrow, for He will wipe away those tears. There are no more sins to burden you; for all your sins, although they be as scarlet, are white as snow." Yes, for you have become true and noble and eternal citizens of the Father's kingdom, where there is still adventure, still uncertainty, still reward for effort, still effort to reach the eternal Fatherbut your success is assured. The way is truly open and the faltering is truly no more.

This time of oneness is sought by all will creatures, on all worlds, in all universes, in one way or another. This attuning of the ?creature will? to the ?divine will? is the Father's command: "Be ye perfect as I am perfect." This is the Father's one and only command of you. And now I will receive questions.

JOSHUA: Father Ham, we would like to make a few statements. Today we incorporated Sonarington. Also, regarding the tapes of your words which we are to send to the General Councilors [of the Urantia Fellowship], we have reached a conclusion on two tapes for considerationthe first is your transmission on 'Meditation/Stillness,' which does not really appear in the Urantia Book. And the other, 'The Kingdom of Heaven,' which does. And then I would like to ask your permissioncould we dub onto the end of those tapes Abraham's talk about the tree on the cliff? And are these two lessons okay with you?

HAM: Yes Joshua, my son. These are perfectly correct and you are proceeding with love and guidance. These will be received with love and guidance also.

JOSHUA: Is that also an answer to Abraham's message on the end? (Ham: Yes). Joshua: Thank you very much.

HAM: All will be open in time. All will be revealed. There is only at this time cautionary measures to prevent confusion. Are we agreed? (Joshua: Yes.) Ham: Thank you. Proceed.

ROLAND: Teacher Ham, this morning I had an opportunity to have a wonderful meditation. And I am still kind of new at this, but during this meditation I received a message from you. What I would really like to do is confirm that with you. Can you do that for me? (Ham: Yes, I have in recent times relayed messages to you via your indwelling Spirit. Yes.)

ROLAND: Thank you. I was really appreciative of your lesson tonight. It seems like it's developing within my own mind and clarifying. Could you please instruct me on this: I meditate without any papers or tape recorders, but I ask my Indweller to stay with me, in my conscious mind, long enough to write down the messages I receive. And I feel confident the words are there, but they are so powerful that sometimes one wonders if it's wish-fulfillment. Is there a way you could instruct us to the difference between wish-fulfillment and instruction from our indwelling Spirit?

HAM: Yes. It is difficult and dangerous ground for each person to decide which is real Thought Adjuster communication, or is 'inner-thought wish-fulfillment,' as you say, and so forth which is unduly glorified by our own inadvertent thought process. It is always hard, and especially in early times, to know the difference. There is distinctly an 'otherness,' which is, as my speaking to you is not your thought, but 'received thought.' It is still difficult, yes, for even Rebecca, who has been doing this for many months, can still make errors by her own thought obstruction. It is very difficult to distinguish the difference, yes, but in time and with practice you will begin discerning the difference if it is just yourself? which is wonderful and good for you, or if it is known to be from Him, your Father. My lessons are also meant for wish-fulfillment, in a way. I teach how to become more aware of God and a wish to do His will this is wish-fulfillment also. Much will be taught this way. Many examples in earthly life may be given. Your indwelling Spirit is always working with you and yes, I say this with authority even in this life, for your earthly betterment and happiness. In many teachings of the world 'this life' is not to be cherished but 'the next life' only, is important. I say with authority cherish this life; cherish your souls; cherish your bodies; cherish your spirits. Love yourselves, your fellows, your God, and your life. That is all.

JEREMIAH: Father Ham, if our Thought Adjuster is gone, what do you say about doing the stillness?

HAM: Yes. Even when the spirit is not immediate, He is still in awareness of you and can respond even over great distance. It is still good to practice stillness even when no immediate response is forthcoming.

JEREMIAH: Thank you. The reason I asked that question was that I think my Thought Adjuster was gone last week. Is that true? (Ham: No. Not to my knowledge.)

JEREMIAH: Because I had real difficulty last week as compared to other weeks. I was curious, that's all, as to why.

ROSANNE: Ham, I have a question on some of the reading I was doing in the Urantia Book? The Life and Teachings of Jesus; it referred to this mortal life as His last bestowal; that it would subject Him to the will of the Father, and that this was His final of the seven bestowal combinations. And I was wondering if that meant that we, when on Urantia, are subject to the Father's will here, and then in the future we would be subject to the different combinations of the Father, the Son, and the Eternal Spiritis that true?

HAM: No. Always, Roindayes Roinda (R O I N D A.)you will always be subject to Father's will and Him alone.

ROINDA: Thank you very much, for my name. (Ham: You're welcome.) Roinda: Does this mean my Thought Adjuster is back? (Ham: Yes.) Roinda: Thank you. This makes me very happy.

JEREMIAH: Teacher, it is my understanding that angels and other spiritual beings are tested primarily over a long period of time, whereas we, as mortals, are tested quite intensely over an extremely short period of time. Why is there a difference?

HAM: Your short life on Urantia is the test of whether you will go on to the next life. You die from this world to be resurrected on the next. Angels do not die. (Jeremiah: Understood. Thank you.)

WILLEENA: Father Ham, I have a quick and easy question, and then I have one that is trying to formulate. On my way back from Hopi land Friday night and Saturday morning, we came through an intense snow storm on Soldier Summit. I was driving and I was talking to the Father, and I heard a voice. My question specifically was: "My Father, are you here with me?? Before the question was completed, I heard: "Absolutely." I would like to know if that was my Thought Adjuster? Or, just a wishful thought on my part. (Ham: Yes, and yes. Proceed.) Willeena: Thank you. In tonight's lesson, the "Be ye perfect" part when those words were spoken tonight, I felt a ring in my heart; and this is something that I am working a lot with in the last two months. Furthermore, I am not clear on how to word this question because it has to do with that stepping into the "more" of which you have spoken; and I am coming through to a new place in my own consciousness that no longer feels unworthy. I have been working with this process very purposefully because I am not clear how to step through this space in my own thoughts that feels so undeserving or unworthy. I wonder if you could offer me something here.

HAM: Yes. My daughter, you will take the hand of your Father and He will lead you through this. It is not by your own power that you are delivered, it is through Him, by Him, and for Him. You are His child. You will be His child always. (Willeena: Thank you, Father Ham.)

RACHEL: Father Ham, I'm not ready for this cold weather, how about you? Does the extreme change of temperatures bother you at all? (Ham: No.) Rachel: Do you realize how lucky you are? (Ham: Yes.) Rachel: I wonder how you are energized how do you receive all your energy?

HAM: Yes. Being here on Urantia is requiring a special method of energy transference which is easily obtained on higher worlds. And since we are here on a mortal sphere we have brought, in a sense, our own provisions.

JOHN: Father Ham, since you guys need a special kind of energy. How do midwayers, both primary and secondary, how do they get theirs?

HAM: Yes. [Pause.] Pardon the delay. Sometimes the mind of Rebecca becomes engaged in pondering questions and I cannot speak. The midwayers are all supplied with a specialized sort of food energy which is brought to Urantia especially for them. They do not require food energy as often as mortals. Only about once per month.

JOHN: Thank you. My next question concerns the stillness. I think that I am at one of the lower stages of stillness attainment which you talked about. But it seems to me that if we are to clear our minds of all thought, and at the same time be more conscious of our bodiesreleasing the negative energies as you say, in order to gain a higher consciousness. This almost seems like a paradox to me, that we can clear our mind of thought and yet have two-way communication with our indwelling Spirit. Could you explain that to me?

HAM: Yes. It is after a clearingness of mortal concern that there can be communication unhindered. In active thinking, there can be no clear communication. The thought activity should be slowed and centered perhaps on a prayerful message to Father, at first. (John: Thank you.)

JEREMIAH: Father Ham, many weeks back you gave a talk about space and the Supreme, and you were referring to space where God the Supreme was not located. I am confused there. Could you give me an example of where there would be space without the Supreme?

HAM: The Supreme is everywhere present, personally, in the superuniverse realms only (Grand Universe), and not beyond, nor in un-pervaded space realms of the Master Universe.

JEREMIAH: Is the un-pervaded space real or outside of reality? (Ham: It is very much real.)

ROINDA: Hello again, Ham. I have been wondering for a while how wonderful it would be if we were able to see our fellow humans as 'what their potential is' rather than 'what they are;' and I wondered if this is how you see us? or if you see us differently?

HAM: Very much, yes. You are coming into great awareness at this time, Roinda, indeed. (Roinda: Thank you).

JEREMIAH: Teacher, can we as mortals, by spiritual advancement, see further into the potentials of other mortals, as opposed to actualities, as we get to know them better? The communications that have taken place in the pastcan we see more of their potentials in the future by higher levels of spiritual advancement? (Ham: Yes. Certainly.)

JEREMIAH: Thank you. I'd like to ask another question if no one else wants to. This is a planet of accidents, one with the potential for disasters. On the Mansion Worlds and higher, I have understood there is no problem of accidents. Is that true?

HAM: Not entirely. It is a matter of awareness-level. On an adult-level (in the mortal life) you may prevent childhood injuries with your children who do not have awareness to such, and develop an understanding of potentials. In the Mansion Worlds, this analogy does still hold true.

JEREMIAH: So in your case, the level you're on, you have a certain probability of having accidents on high? Is it the same probability here on Urantia? or is it more dangerous here for you because you are on a physical planet here with us.

HAM: There are many problems. Mostly concerning human will. You are like children with little knowledge of potential problems which lay ahead involving decision-making, whereas I may see a potential problem more easily/clearly. I am restricted in my advice. It is for you to learn mostly on your own how to grow and foresee the future.

WILLEENA: Ham, about a week ago, my boyfriend Brad, was talking about wanting to begin the process, the journey, in looking for the place (area) he would finally settle. For some reason, he looked right at me and said: "maybe Manitoba, Canada" the place where you say your headquarters are. I just wonder if that was his Thought Adjuster talking or bringing that to his mind? or just a strange coincidence.

HAM: I don't know. It could be coincidental, yes, and maybe not. It is fruitless to try to see Morontia existence/structures, for you cannot see them or be aware too much of our realm. It would be just as well to be anywhere. It would not benefit anyone so much to be there (Manitoba).

JEREMIAH: Teacher, I have one more question: If I know a person that claims they are an atheist, and they die, and I believe that they are a fine person is there anything I can do to petition without leaving it all up to the Ancient of Days to allow them to have another chance on the mansion worlds? Is there anything as mortals we can do to petition a decision like that on first life extension?

HAM: There is nothing which you can know which is unknown by his indwelling Spirit. This Spirit will provide all necessary chances for decision-making on this world or the next. You needn't have anxiety. All is known and mercifully prepared for. (Jeremiah: Thank you.)

HAM: Rebecca is growing weary with speaking. It is well that I leave you for one more week. I will return next Monday and will prepare my lesson for then. In the meantime, I bid you, farewell.

Spiritual Healing And Its Affects Through Faith | Life Carriers Are The Healing Agents

Horace & Ham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 11-11-1991

[Editor's note: Horace was a celestial teacher on the staff of Abraham who was assigned in September 1992 to a group in Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada. In the weeks prior to this transmission, Joshua had been engaged in healings, with the assistance of Life Carriers. One recipient of these healings, Ramena, in California, passed away the previous week to tonight's transmission. It is important to note that in 1997, Abraham taught several further lessons on this gift of healing (beginning this lesson in April 14, 1997).]

Greetings. I am HORACE. I am a teacher sent here tonight in order to effect my understanding of this type of communication with the help of Rebecca. It is new and interesting to me to experience this myself. English is hard for me to word formulate. However, since all is proceeding well enough, I will therefore attempt to give the lesson tonight on spiritual healing and its effects.

The method by which these healings are taking place is not miraculous. No. It is a method used often in many diverse situations in Satania. The healers (healing agents) who perform these healings are Life Carriers. They are well in understanding of physical/material bodily structures, and effect healing through energy-transfer and rearrangement of stimulus patterns within the body.

There are within living cells an energy which can be either stimulated for growth and secretion of chemicals; or, cell death and removal. Each living cell within the body carries these attributes within itself. Specialized cells in organ structures are utilized in varying degrees, depending upon the problem. Often when a change in cell stimulation or cell death has occurred, then this change is permanent (lasting) so that after healing is completed, permanent change has been affected and the body's natural harmonious balance is restored.

Ramena could have been completely healed. It was her desire to begin a new life. This was not the error of the Life Carriers assisting her. Her condition was very severe, and changes in some bodily areas were well under way, but others were not. These healings, as I say, are not miraculous and instantaneous.

It is our hope and desire for all who seek this healing to understand its mechanical effects. Yes, it is at once, dependent on faith, also. Often with the spiritual/mental poisons of the mind, fears can chemically imbalance the body which greatly retards this healing effort. Simple faith is very necessary not only for energy channels to open within and allow healing to take place, but for mental soundness in healing acceptance.

Halfhearted wavering between doubt and belief is detrimental, both mentally and spiritually, and can set back healing efforts. Faith is miraculous in itself. Faith is extra-material, yet not fully spiritual; it is mental, physical, and spiritual. It is personality coordinated, unified, and directed.

Faith is the most wonderful gift there is to will-creatures and the most wonderful gift will-creatures may give the Father. Yes, even so, even in your darkest hours, your faith is your saving grace, gift, and bestowal. Thank you for allowing me to address you all this evening. I am very pleased to make your acquaintances. I will now allow for Ham to speak.

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. We thank you, Horace, for joining us this evening. And now if there are questions which I may be of assistance, I will gladly accept them.

JOSHUA: I would like to ask on the lesson that Teacher Horace gave us on healing: If my understanding is correct, that the healing goes through channels like water goes through pipes. If there are valves in those pipes that are turned off it is faith that opens those valves so the healing energy can flow through. Is that correct? (Ham: Yes, in a way. Correct by analogy.) Joshua: Thank you.

JEREMIAH: Father Ham, I have three questions on Horace's lesson tonight: The first one is that he was talking about these chemicals that are secreted that can actually trigger the healing process. Can man someday be able to formulate these cell-stimulations as enlightened humans? For example in Light and Life times when we exhaust all possibilities of science and medicine in our stately existence, can people be trained how to do that? and do so, directly, without Life Carriers?

HAM: No. This is a peculiar Life Carrier prerogative and is not available, per se, to mortal man, except in certain drug therapy and the like, which is a form of chemical realignment different than the cell-stimulation through faith. This will become more and more fine-tuned as civilization progresses.

JEREMIAH: As was, for example, penicillin in our twentieth century? (Ham: Yes). Jeremiah: The second question I have: The Urantia Book discloses that our planet was a life-modification planet, and the Life Carriers were trying to increase the healing capability of our life plasm. Is this the same chemical? Or is this more in the lines of smaller ails and wounds like, say, on the skin? I'm talking about the healing process they are referring to in the Urantia Book which the Life Carriers were trying to perfect.

HAM: Injurious healing is always the same it is healing by growth-regeneration of cells which also secrete chemicals for their protection and pain diminishment. It is hard to explain the many chemical reactions which take place in wound-healing. There are many thousand.

JEREMIAH: Thank you. And my final question: When Jesus was on the planet when He was doing healing was this the same healing that Teacher Horace was talking about, just sped up? Was this such a technique, or was it miraculous?

HAM: The Creator Son has many prerogatives in creatorship ability. He is unique in all His abilities in this universe. Depending upon the healing situation/requirement, He is able to use many different levels of energy transfer, even material energy transfer, which causes instantaneous (more or less) healing. This is unique to him. (Jeremiah: Thank you, Teacher.)

RACHEL: Father Ham, I too thank Horace. I am happy that he could be here with us. If you will, Father Ham, I would like you to tell me an answer to a question that someone asked me, if you would please? (Ham: Yes). Rachel: He asks If God is a good, kind, and loving Father, why does He allow the little children in Ethiopia, and a lot of the other countries, to suffer so with diseases and starving to death? He understands that the grown-ups have probably made their own bed and must lie in it, so to speak, yes, but, the young children, they can't understand. Could you help me with it, please?

HAM: Yes. There is no suffering which our Father is unaware of. He does not turn away from those who need. He is suffering with anyone who suffers; and, He is ever-present in the heart of all who believe. It is not any part of God's plan for us to allow for suffering. It is the natural outworking of the overall divine plan to allow man his free will. Adult freewill decisions, and multiplied over long periods indeed, may result in much human suffering. We are all God's children small children and adult, alike. No suffering is in God's purpose for us. Evolution and human societal structuring, is progressing and will eventually eliminate this horrible spectacle of intense human misery. It is a passing age on Urantia which will someday sprout into a new world in which there is becoming (year after year) a very lessened human suffering; yes, less pain and less misery. Perplexing as it is to witness such suffering, know that it is a passing thing. You must use spiritual eyes to see. The dawn will come after the darkness.

RACHEL: I thank you, Father Ham. I will relay your message.

RISDON: Father Ham, recently my wife, Jana, has been told that she has a disease called Epstein-Barr disease. We did not find this out until she had seen many doctors and many months of going through many difficulties. Even with the knowledge of it right now in the medical field, it is something that is not well known about. We have been told about an alternative method to help her disease; it is called oxygenation. It allows oxygen to enter the body in high amounts; and by doing that, the virus goes away somehow. The more oxygen, the more the virus does not have the capability to survive. Can you tell me anything about this oxygenation, if it's possible that it might help her in relieving the disease?

HAM: No. I have not understanding of this relief method. The viral disease is not real. It is a man-made effort in attempt to understand symptoms which are not exactly the same between people. This problem is chemical imbalance only. Not the result of a viral infection. It can be treated by Life Carriers if you desire.

RISDON: Thank you. As a matter of fact, Jana has been getting healing from Joshua and they seem to be helping. I believe that Jana has very strong faith deep within; although, with many of the problems that she has had from this, and other things like the car accidents, sometimes her faith seems to waver. Is there something I can do to help her in her faith somehow?

HAM: That which you do, is well; I have not advice in this personal matter. You understand your wife very well and have always done well.

RISDON: Thank you, Ham. One last question I have is in regard to Teacher Horace's lesson: If somebody who has much adversity throughout their life if their faith has diminished, is there something that they can do in order to regain or increase that faith? or empower that faith, to regain its strength?

HAM: Individual remedies for individual persons. The Thought Adjuster knows best. (Risdon: Thanks again, Ham).

ROLAND: Father Ham. I met a man from India. He was raised there in his youth and left in 1957 at the age of twenty-three. His name is Norden Amamy. He is a reader of all the holy books; his tradition is Muslim. He's impressed with what we have discussed over the weekend. He lives in San Francisco, and is interested if there is a group or a person he should find that would be readers of the Urantia Book so that he might be involved in that group. (Ham: This can be sought by human channels.) Roland: Do you know this man? (Ham: Yes, a little.) Roland: I will tell him he is known.

HAM: And now, this evening's session is closed. I bid you a fond farewell. Until next week, my blessings. Farewell.

True Happiness Springs From An Internal Well | Fellowship Strengthens and Secures It

[There was a meeting the previous week with Ham and Norson (November 18th, 1991) which was a short lesson on healings and personal issues. That whole transmission is omitted for this MWT compilation.]

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

Greetings this evening. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Tonight I wish to begin as usual with my lesson. Our lesson for this evening is on happiness. Happiness, peace, spiritual fulfillment, is part and parcel of God-knowingness. Happiness, true happiness, springs from an internal well. This well, found in stillness and the peaceful quiet, wells up within the soulrefreshing not only yourself but all those who chance to come in contact with you.

Many years are normally spent in unhappiness in 'passing happiness,' that is. Happiness is not found in external stimulation, possessions, physical adornments, infatuations, or wealth. True happiness is only found within, and augmenting this happiness is our relationships with others. Friendship/fellowship of all kinds augments, strengthens, and secures true happiness.

Remember, you always have this refreshing well of happiness to drink from. All aspects of life are enhanced: friendship is made more meaningful; daily burdens are lessened; the stress of living is replaced by the joy of being; the wonder of existence replaces the doldrums of the daily routine. Yes, happiness must be shared for it quickly dies in solitude. Live life to its fullest by sharing it with your loved ones, your friends, your true neighbors. Sharing of oneself is God-like. And now I will receive questions.

JOSHUA: Thank you. I have one general question: In the Urantia Book it talks about if a person reaches 'the third circle of psychic attainment' that upon death they can be re-personalized 'on the third day.' It also states that one 'System Day' is equal to about three Urantia days. How long does it really take for a person who reaches the third circle to be re-personalized in Urantia days?

HAM: This depends on spiritual advancement. Third circle persons are candidates for this immediate re-personalization. The 'sooner or later,' depends on individual circumstances. The 'how long,' is irrelevant and unmeaningful. It is not a question of concern.

JEREMIAH: Father Ham, I have a question regarding ?sacraments.? What can you tell us about sacraments? Do you have them? I think the ?remembrance of Michael sacrament? is one.

HAM: Yes. The ?remembrance of Michael? is symbolic bread and wine ingestion, which has been termed a sacrament. In our temples of worship (on high) symbols are not employed. We attempt to discover true worship in its pure sense. Again, symbols and sacraments are not employed.

JEREMIAH: Thank you. To follow up on Joshua's question. Are you at liberty to tell us anything about the borderland is there a place between living here, this Earth, and higher realmsthe arriving on the Mansion World? There is reference to it in the Urantia Book but nothing too much is said.

HAM: No. I am not at liberty to discuss this time-period of transition. (Jeremiah: Thank you.)

JEREMIAH: Teacher, I have a series of questions that are concerning the physical and the spiritual world: What can you say about crystals? Some people attribute healing to crystals, or just generalizing to any kind of molecular structure that could allow the focus to intensify spiritual energies. Is there truth to any of that? We do know from the Urantia Book that there is a "sea of glass" on the architectural worlds which facilitate transport as well as, I think, spiritual reflectivity communication. What can you say about crystals?

HAM: Crystals are unique physical molecular forms. They can, in certain circumstances, transmit and amplify energy which may be reflective of spiritual substance. [Editor's note: The rest of the meeting was regarding personal questions/answers, and is omitted here.]

One Mighty And Strong, Gabriel | The Upcoming Los Angeles Announcement

[Prior to tonight's lesson there had been a discussion regarding an expected visit from Gabriel, next week. Also, prior to this night's transmission was group discussion regarding Ham's request to address the General Council at their Los Angeles upcoming meeting in February 1992.]

I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Greetings. This evening I have decided to discuss with you certain matters of your interest. The first and foremost in your minds is that of the Gabriel visit next week. I need to prepare your minds and attitude for his coming. He is ?one mighty and strong.? He is Gabriel, the firstborn of Michael; the Bright and Morning Star; the chief executive officer of the entire universe of Nebadon. Your world is significant in his regard. He has spoken his intention to address this group. His brilliance will be overwhelming. His person is overwhelming in itself.

Even if you do not see with your physical eyes, Gabriel's spiritual brightness would still be overpowering. He is a son of vast wisdom, experience, knowledge, foresight, and insight. He will know you in an instant. He is truly representative of Michael in all things. He is one and only. He is the first-son of our Lord Michael, who, in all intents and purposes, represents Michael in the universe.

You will see the reality and importance of Gabriel's visit in your lifetimes; it will likely only happen once. Understand, your will/dignity is left intact; he is respectful of that. Your entire lives may be drastically changed by his appearance. Look well into your hearts and come to him with pure intent. He acknowledges no falsehood, and neither should you in yourselves. Respect, rather, your God indwelling. Respect yourselves, your intentions, your decisions. Grow nobly as strongly anchored, centered, and well cared-for young trees that you are.

Receive these words sent from our divine Lord Michael as water to a thirsty young tree. What I do is preparing for this and for what comes after. My friends, you have come very far. You will go also very far, as I have told you in the past.

Secondly: This meeting of the Urantia Book Fellowship of readers in Los Angeles will eventually be very fruitful. In the immediate reaction, you will not see the seed which has been planted, sprouting, for it is small and goes unnoticed; it is covered-over by the old way of seeing things like brambles over the soil in which the seed is sprouting. Let not your hearts be troubled by this seeming unfruitfulness at first, in the end result, many will be drawn to our new path.

Yes, this upcoming meeting is of the utmost importance for all mankind. This is the testing ground. You will witness the word of God spring forth righteously, nobly, and with power. Our time is drawing short. I will receive questions now.

RACHEL: Father Ham, I have the honor and privilege of addressing you first this evening. I want to thank you for the beautiful description and insight of Father Gabriel. I don't know exactly how we should address him, but want to thank you. Also, I want you to know how much we love and appreciate you. We have three women in Golden, Colorado by the name of Paula, Joanna, and Mary. They would like to know if they may receive tapes of these meetings? Also, if they come to Salt Lake, could they have a private session with you; and if so, when?

HAM: Yes. They may receive taped transcripts. Yes. They may receive a meeting with me privately at their convenience next month. (Rachel: Thank you, Father Ham.)

JOSHUA: Martha called me yesterday; she attended a Urantia Book study group meeting in Pocatello, Idaho. She told them about some of the events that are transpiring here and reports they are very excited and want to hear more. She desires to know if she may share the tapes of these meetings with them? (Ham: Yes. Nothing is hidden from truth seeking children.)

JOSHUA: Is the spiritual center of the world in Mariposa Grove in Yosemite instead of Manitoba? (Ham: No. It is as I have told you.) Joshua: Thank you very much. With Gabriel's coming here next week, may I invite Andrew and Ruth? (Ham: Yes. Yes, this would be permissible.)

JEREMIAH: I have a question regarding Gabriel. We know he came to our world and talked to Elizabeth and Mary; and he also visited with Jesus. Has he appeared to mortals since that time till this present year? (Ham: No. He has not.) Jeremiah: Thank you. It's a great honor for our group to have his presence. I have a general question regarding the evolution of communication to mankind. I see four generations relating to the development of communication with mortals. The first, being when we first learned how to talk. Second, when we learned how to write. Third being the printing press. And now some people are saying the fourth generation is with computer technology. We know this teaching here, from you, is a supernatural way of communicating. I assume that Gabriel will also be using other techniques. And of course Havona, and other worlds on high, use harmonics and other forms of communication. Could you tell us what the future holds for this planet? Will there be new and better ways of communicating downstream? for example, as we approach light and life, and the final stages. What can you say along these lines?

HAM: Communication still is between minds, from one mind to another. When you listen to another speak, that person is communicating a thought process. When you read a book, your mind is reacting to the thought process of the mind of another personality, even if long gone. The same is true of computers but speed, accuracy, and ease of transferring thought communication is enhanced. It is not "better;" per se; nor is it more effective in actual communication of thought-intent process. In many ways, its characteristic is more sterile in that it is cleaned of inaccuracies and there is less misunderstanding of language. However, the subtlety of human communication is often shaved away leaving the brilliance of black and white without the gray. Much of the beauty and texture in language communication is in the pronunciation and inflection of tones; this cannot be duplicated in a machine. In our teaching you, we utilize human beings for our communication for this reason; it is much richer and more readily understood in subtler tones and nuances. Is this helping?

JEREMIAH: Yes it is, teacher. One final question. In regard to next week's meeting, what restriction do you have on who should be here? Because tomorrow I go down to Albuquerque for a week, and would it be permissible to invite Patrica, who was here a couple weeks ago, as well as Karen. Karen was the one who had the midwayer teacher, Jack, back in the early eighties. Or, is it just strictly this study group, the people who attend regularly that you want in attendance next week?

HAM: No. It is permissible to invite those who you can entrust with such a sacred event. But as you will see, there may be those who do not see. (Jeremiah: Thank you, teacher.)

JOSHUA: Father Ham, after Gabriel appears to us, is it permissible to more or less broadcast this around? Are there any restrictions on who we tell? (Ham: As always, use wisdom and discretion. It would not do to have it on the nightly news.) [group laughter.]

RISDON: Father Ham, over the weekend I was reading a book that gave me some good insights on abundance. The example they used on this was about, and I hope I say this as clearly as the Urantia Book does, but that we are a self-expression of our Father in individual form, and because of that, we are encompassed by the Father, everything the Father is. And also because of that, we really have abundance available to us in every form whether it be in material things, our career, or health, or any of those. Can you discuss briefly about abundance and how it can be obtained?

HAM: The mortal mind tends to focus on problems, and it fears scarcity. Your recognition of your abundance is good, yes, for it is better to practice focusing your mind on what you have what is available to you, which is abundance. The Urantia Book says most mortals are truly rich in faith, yet they refuse to believe it. This is a truth; it has been observed for many many generations. The fear in scarcities tends to overwhelm the understanding of the truth which is, you all indeed have abundance; it is the gift from our Father. Yes. Recognize this gift and be thankful and rejoice in it rather than allowing a fly to spoil the ointment. One of Christ's most effective sermons concerned this lesson: "Consider the lilies how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin." And also: "There is not a sparrow that falls from the tree without my Father knowing; and how much more precious are you than the sparrows?" Yes. Receive His goodness into your lives and all aspects of life are enhanced. "Seek first the kingdom of heaven and all things necessary will be added unto you." That is all. (Risdon: Thank you, Father Ham, I appreciate it.)

ROLAND: Regarding our stillness/meditation practice, I have been trying to get ?into the moment.? The process that I am involved in now is taking anywhere from an hour and a half to two hours long. And reflecting on what you had mentioned, ?about ten minutes?am I over-doing it then?

HAM: Take as much time as you require. Father begrudges His time not. Certainly, He is happy to have opportunity for communion with His son.

SONJA: The Urantia Book says that complete understanding between men and women is unattainable and I have been just really frustrated lately in trying to communicate with someone. Is there anything that you could help me with, or help all of us, in trying to understand each other?

HAM: Understanding grows when minds are sympathetic. There may not be complete understanding, but harmonious relationships are certainly attainable. Sympathetic mutual and non-judgmental attitudes are essential in this love-growth. The strength of man is logic; and the logical thought pattern is somewhat inimical to the strength of women, which is intuition; she, in many ways, finds it easier to follow God, for His communication is often in that intuitive realm. This (intuition) is a great and noble strength which should be respected in this world although, it is largely unrecognized. These two complementary (yet different) mindsets are wonderfully expressive in union of the Father and His creation. In union, there is tremendous and entire nobility of expression of both men and women, together. This union is sublime, stronger, and more beautiful than either one, separate. It is meant to be so. Is this helping, Sonja? (Sonja: Yes, very much. Thanks. I'll try harder.)

ROINDA: Ham, first of all I am glad to be back. I've missed everybody in the group. I have missed you and your teaching. Secondly, when you were talking about Gabriel, you mentioned that even though if we didn't see him with our eyes, that his presence would be so powerful that we would be able to feel him. And I wondered, does that mean that some of us may not be able to visually see him when he appears?

HAM: No. Only that his person is so bright that his presence would be felt even without the visualization. Visualization will be available for all depending on each individual's preparedness. (Roinda: Thank you. That clarifies it.)

MELISSA: Father Ham, I was wondering when you look at us, do you see light illuminating from us? (Ham: Yes. I can also see your souls, you see.) Melissa: Thank you. Are our lights different colors? and does it illuminate brighter at different times, or stages in our growth?

HAM: Yes, it (this light) is from a different part of your being which is developing, though in embryonic form at this time. It will become more manifest in time as you yourself will experience. Different colors? No, not at all. But rather, a spiritual brilliance which I can perceive, which your material eyes cannot. (Melissa: Thank you, Father Ham.)

JEREMIAH: Father Ham, has Father Gabriel been to any of our meetings in the past, as an observer? (Ham: He has observed from afar.) Jeremiah: Thank you. Is it possible that in his presence, to advance a psychic circle if one is soon ready to advance?

HAM: Yes. Many things may happen to you, individually. Yes, it is bound to make a profound impression lasting throughout your eternal life.

JEREMIAH: This is exciting. We are all looking forward to it. Can Father Gabriel manifest his personal presence by himself, or does he need help from power directors, or celestial beings? (Ham: Power directors will be employed, yes.)

JOHN: Father Ham, when you were speaking of Gabriel's visualizing, and of our false intentions, would these false intentions be self-deceptions on our part? or would they be more of a willful false intention. (Ham: Both. Yes. It is good to be self-searching at this time yes, son; however, you do well. Worry not.) John: Thank you.

RISDON: Father Ham, when you say that you can see our souls. Can you explain or describe what that looks like to you? (Ham: Rebecca will explain, for I have just now visualized to her.)

WILLEENA: Father Ham, does Father Gabriel know each one of us individually, as does our Lord Michael?

HAM: No. He will discern you when he arrives. You will be aware of his understanding of you. (Willeena: Thank you).

DAVID: Teacher, when you mentioned the number of worlds in Michael's realm, I thought I read in the Urantia Book that it was somewhat over three-million at that time when the Urantia Book was published. I thought you said seven-hundred some-odd thousand worlds. Did I just misunderstand you?

HAM: Correction. You are correct. I was referring to Norlatiadek only. My apologies for the miscommunication; please excuse me. [Editor's note: The balance of the meeting is omitted because of the personal nature of the questions and answers.]

Visit of Gabriel and Gavalia | Admonition to Avoid Splintering

Ham & Gavalia, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 12-09-1991

Back

HAM: Greetings. This evening I wish to begin with a short lesson on understanding. This is a very diverse group now and is becoming more so. In time, your fellowship will extend throughout the world; and it is becoming into our awareness that it will be difficult for all of you to remain in close contact for understanding to be complete.

I am therefore, warning and admonishing each of you to be understanding of things you don't understand. Have enough room in your heart for patience, tolerance, forbearance, for I will not have any fractional splintering if it can be avoided; and it will, and should be, avoided entirely.

You who are here this evening are the forerunners of a vast and far-reaching spiritual mission; you are among the first, and many in later times will envy your position now. Carry out your duties and responsibilities with a measure of good cheer, lightheartedness, and a welcome attitude.

All of you gathered here this night will be witnesses to an epochal event. You are my children, my friends, my associates. I hope you can know in your inner self the significant and importance of this evening. I will now ask each of you to pray and make yourselves ready. [group pause.]

I am GAVALIA. I am an assistant for Gabriel. He is with us also, and has requested me to speak to you. I am the Brilliant Evening Star. My order is mainly used for human contact. I carry a message from MICHAEL:

You will see with your morontial vision, Gabriel, the Bright And Morning Star. He is my supreme messenger. You are walking the road I opened. Many of you will lead on this highway of salvation. You are my ministers for this unhappy world. You bring words of joy and peace. Care for my sheep. Feed them with love and kindness. Water them with truth. Guide them, gently. Remember who they are. Remember who you, my children, represent. Remember my words, for this I send you. Carry on.

[The balance of the meeting was personal and not recorded. Some had experience with Gabriel's visit, "the mighty and strong one" and others did not.]

Father's Mercy is Abundant. Fear Has No Place Between Father and His Children

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. My greetings to you all. This evening I wish to begin with my lesson although I am aware that you have many questions for me.

Also, I have something to tell you concerning organization in the future. Rebecca has been under strain for many years (work-related). She is coming to require additional time of recreation and rest. She is correct in deeming the Los Angeles meeting as a priority and has requested that private meetings be postponed till after this event.

I wish to grant this request with an exception. The meeting request with the Colorado group is granted. All others are postponed. Roland is beginning the practice of transmission-receiving communication and will be assisting with this part of our mission. He will soon be prepared to relieve Rebecca at intervals. This is looked upon with great promise and hope. All are in understanding, Rebecca, be not worried.

And now I would like to proceed with tonight's lesson on mercy.

Our Father is unbounded understanding. His mercy is abundant and ever available for you to draw upon. Our Father is always malleable to any situation. He is not inflexible. He is always able to respond to your innermost heart. He is abundant in wisdom, and this wisdom is merciful. No thought or deed is too far for His all-encompassing knowing.

Blind iniquity stands alone by its own choosing. All who desire to know God and find their way in His bountiful kingdom, are welcome. No man may close the door my Father has opened. Abundant is His knowing, understanding, merciful forgiveness; and indeed, joy at finding His lost children.

Many of His children feel they must hide a part, a secret part, from His loving gaze. This is not true. Our Father knows your hearts, and by your willingness to open your secret places to Him are you increasingly strengthened, and indeed, saved. His love is ever ready to respond to every opening of His children. By His power have you truly, power. By His strength have you, strength. By His love have you, love.

It is by increasing to open your innermost being that you increase your God-knowingness and God-likeness; and by this, you become a living channel for His light and love. Fear has no place between our Father and His children. Knowing His love, is all that is required. That is our lesson for this evening, and now you may proceed with your questions.

RACHEL: Father Ham, we have three newcomers that I would like to present to you this evening. We have John Covington and his wife, Valeta; and Len McKee. John and his wife have had the Urantia book for about a year. Len has had it about three months and is about two thirds through the book, which I think is great. I think all three of them are spiritual, Father Ham.

HAM: Thank you Rachel very much. I am well pleased to welcome you all here tonight. Any further questions?

JOSHUA: Father Ham, I received a letter today from Steven Dreier the president of the Urantia Fellowship. I would like to read just a few excerpts from it and ask your opinion:

(Steven Dreier.): The spirit of the Executive Committees decision is that no meeting between the Councilors and the Woods Cross Study group be scheduled anytime on the weekend of January 31, 1992, either formally or informally. We respectfully ask that you refrain from any attempt to involve the General Council in your activities during its January 1992 meeting. Should you ignore this request and proceed with your plans you will be attempting to impose your convictions upon a group of which you are not a part, and which is neither requested nor does it desire your presence. You will be interfering with the right of others to pursue their convictions as they see fit. We appeal to your sense of fairness and appropriateness in asking that you respect our right to reach our own decisions and that you allow us to structure our meeting as we think.

JOSHUA: Father Ham, is it still your desire for us to make arrangements for you to speak at that meeting? (Ham: Yes.) Joshua: We thought it would be that way. Thank you very much. We will do it.

JOHN: Teacher Ham, there is a word that I looked up in the Concordex to see if I could find a reference in the Urantia Book the word is?anointment.? Can you explain what that is in relationship to our mission?

HAM: Yes. Anointment has been used on your world for many ages as being symbolic of entrance into greater service. Priests are anointed; upon completing vows and sacred duties they are anointed into a brotherhood. Spiritual anointment is analogous in that you are now entering into a phase of greater service. To take on this service for Michael is a noble and sublime duty. He has called you all into this greater service which is even now forthcoming. Does this answer? (Roland: Yes, it does. Thank you.)

JOHN: That makes me feel a lot better. In reading the Urantia Book during the week, I found a part where Christ was saying that self-analyzation doesn't lead to character growth; that character grows, it is not built. I was doing a lot of self-analyzing this week and really didn't understand that. I was wondering if you could explain?

HAM: Yes. Some self-analysis is not always unfruitful. At times it is wise to be self-searching to know your limitations and weaknesses, which you may then pray for guidance, strengthening, and understanding. By self-searching and prayer, these shortcomings are consciously addressed and consciously turned over to God. It is wise at times to do so. Overmuch self-analysis with the mind of changing character by force of will, is faulty and in error. You may say: "I wish to have this virtue," and humanly force this onto an unsound framework. This cannot stand, will not hold up, and is destined to fall, crumble. Virtue and righteousness are things which grow naturally from God-knowingness, from willingness to be God-led and God-grown. These will spring forth within, as do all righteous virtues; these are secure and steady. They, once acquired, cannot be disowned; and you would not disown them by force of will. The others, yes by force of will are easily shaken off. Is this helping? (John: Yes. Thank you very much).

MELISSA: Father Ham, in one of our study groups this question came up from the Urantia Book: On peripheral Paradise, there are historic prophetic exhibits areas assigned to the Creator Son. Could you elaborate on this? What are in these areas?

HAM: I have not seen them and know little more than that. I cannot elaborate without truly knowing. (Melissa: Okay. Thank you.)

JEREMIAH: Father Ham, after the December 9th meeting, were more spiritual beings assigned as spiritual helpers to us? (Ham: Yes. In some cases. Yes.) Jeremiah: Thank you. One last question: I understand that the Universal Father, Eternal Son, and the Infinite Spirit, have complete and full knowledge that they are conscious of our consciousness. The question is: With Michael and I know that we are to consider Him as our spiritual Father/Brother, the Spirit of Truth but does He have complete and full knowledge of us? or does He have to use other techniques? (Ham: He has access to any information necessary. He can have full and complete knowledge. Yes.) Jeremiah: Thank you, Teacher.

JAMES: Teacher, we are in understanding that our English language is, at best, a crude way to communicate, and it is fraught with ambiguity. Many of our scriptures and spiritual teachings on this planet have a lot of ambiguity in them; and even your words to us are sometimes ambiguous do you ever deliberately introduce ambiguity into your teachings, knowing we may misinterpret your words?

HAM: No, no, this is not deliberate. Your word forms are necessarily ambiguous often and require spiritual insight to find the true meaning. It is not my intent to be overly ambiguous so that the spiritual message is misconstrued. No.

JAMES: Given the fact that you and your associates can monitor our reactions to your lessons do you sometimes allow us to continue on even though we misunderstand one or more of the concepts you have tried to teach us?

HAM: All understanding will surely come in time; and yes, often misunderstanding (partial understanding or incomplete understanding) is in the way. Often my teachings are repeated later to help clarify these things when you are more spiritually prepared to receive them. It is, again, not intended to mislead. (James: Thank you very much, Teacher).

WILLEENA: Teacher, my questions are a little bit along the lines of James? last question: It came to mind that I have had a wondering with regard to our December 9th meeting, the Gabriel event, and the unusual procedure that it followed. I guess my first question is: Were there many more spiritual beings in our presence than usual? And then my second question is: Was there some purpose in allowing us to stay with our expectations for the length of time that we did without some communications to us with regard to what was occurring from that on your end? Did it serve us in some way to experience it exactly the way we did? And was this deemed somehow valuable? (Ham: Yes. Yes. You are understanding with spiritual insight. Yes.)

WILLEENA: My sense of it is that we have been, and forgive me if this sounds goofy but, like children being so eager to learn; your teachings have been so wonderful for us. It's been a little bit like being able to be spoon-fed. And that evening last week was such a difference; we were left on our own only with our faith??at whatever degree we had it??throughout the night; and it was an experience that was very affecting. I can see that, for myself, it really served me and I realize that I went through a lot of fluctuation between what John said regarding the place 'within' that ?felt unworthy,? and then feelings of being spiritually enveloped. For me it was not particularly a matter of whether Gabriel ?appeared? or not, but just simply the place in myself that is seeking to heal, to come into the light. And it was really a powerful thing for me to get in touch with it so deeply, and continue to offer it up to the Father that it may heal. And so I really thank you and everyone that was involved because it touched me, and I know that I am a different person from that night. I really appreciate it. Thank you.

HAM: Thank you, Willeena, I will close this evening on those words so graciously spoken and touching. Thank you all for being here this evening. I will be here next week, and I bid you a fond farewell.

Greed Comes In Many Forms Besides Monetary Pursuits

Amster & Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 12-23-1991

Greetings. I am AMSTER. I am a Teacher. I am here this evening to understand this communication in detail, and through personal experience. I was also, like Will, a female person in my birth sphere. [long pause.] I am having some difficulty in this communication and you must please excuse me for proceeding slowly.

My lesson tonight is on greed. There are many forms of this human characteristic/trait of greed. Most of the time we think of greed as concerning monetary-related values this is not always so, for greed is a deep-seated human emotional characteristic. Greed is manifested in many other ways also, such as selfish desire for attention from others and the lack of consideration for their needs.

It is important to recognize greed in its many manifestations. It is not a mortal sin, however, no. It is rather a leftover from primitive times when self-preservation was more necessary. Now, in your modern day, it is seen as childlike. The mature person is grown beyond the mere innate instinctive passion for self. The mature person is seeing himself in a broader context. He understands his dependence and devotion to others and to God.

This, the understanding of oneself within a community network all dependent on our Father, frees the individual from instinctive 'fear for self.' And such a one can begin to root out the weeds of greed and other self-serving motivations. Yes, it is a true understanding of reality that one can become fearlessly 'unselfish.' And this concludes my lesson this evening. I will answer a few questions and then Abraham would like to say a few words.

JEREMIAH: Teacher, I have a question on your lesson. When you are referring to greed having origin with the primitive (the early races), does that mean that eventually (in the advancing races) we can eliminate this from the gene pool? Or does that mean that no matter how advanced the races are, greed and other undesirable animalistic traits are always present? and that, as mortals, we just have to transcend them?

AMSTER: The latter. In advanced cultures, greed is not as sharp of a pain upon society. It is dulled, softened and in general, lessened, even among children. Diminishing greed is the fruit (evidence) of an advancing culture.

JAMES: Teacher Amster, I have a question regarding your lesson. Perhaps in a world that is settled in Light and Life it would be much easier to be unselfish to think only of other people and how you can be of service to them because you would know other people are thinking of you. And in an economic sense, there may not be that fear of deprivation, economic deprivation. But in today's world on Urantia, we seem to be dominated by selfishness and greed. I think many of us feel fearful that if we really attempt unselfishness, we will be taken advantage of, or not have enough ourselves, which would cause us suffering in many different ways; particularly an economic suffering. Do you have any words to address this?

AMSTER: Yes. Unselfishness does not mean recklessness, over-generosity, or encompass foolhardy actions. 'Fairness in fellow-dealing' does not risk yourself. To do unto others as you would have them do unto you; this does not involve reckless or unwise opening of yourself to economic vulnerability. It is, rather, a person-to-person day-by-day living as in God's sight and showing His noble character through yourself. Walking in light will not require stumbling in darkness. One foot before the other on firm ground is all that is asked. You, not any of you, are asked or required to risk your security. Be assured that your ultimate security is in God; and He who loves you, protects and cherishes you, will not put you in harm's way. Is this helping?

JAMES: Very much. It is a very beautiful teaching you have given us tonight. Thank you.

ROLAND: Teacher Amster, in my readings of this last week, many of our will-creature difficulties come from following the ego as opposed to turning to the indwelling Spirit guidance. Regarding the idea of greed being based primarily on the illusion of scarcity we produce our own scarcity by paying attention to it; but likewise, we can produce our abundance by paying attention to the abundance in the world God has given us. Is this a higher law than the one of 'security?' And, is it true that the ego is producing the illusion of scarcity and therefore, greed? (Amster: Your understanding is correct. Yes.) Roland: Then in our evolution into Light and Life, it seems as if our requirement in the stillness, when we have security matters that we are dealing with in regard to material well-being, that if we pay attention to the indwelling Spirits' leading and guidance it will take us to abundance. Is that correct?

AMSTER: This is a more personal question; it is, in the main, correct. Also is there the guidance of your indwelling Spirit which seeks to teach you through life's schoolroom the important matters beyond the material. It is in apparent material failure where are found those gems of immense treasure, which will keep with you always. "Where your treasure lies, there will your heart be also." This divine treasure cannot be plundered. It is impregnable. Always understand Father's higher aim for His child, and be not overly concerned with temporary material failure, for all your needs will be fulfilled by His wisdom.

ROLAND: Is it well then to pray for an attitude change? and an attitude of non-attachment to 'material-needs greed,' as well as the greed which you spoke of in regard to 'attentional greed' for oneself? and other attitudinal ego errors, for the lack of a better term?

AMSTER: Yes. It is well to know where your true treasure lies. Matter is temporal, it is changing dust. Even great wealth is only temporary. It is not the means by which you build your true security, which is in heaven. Always can we look beyond this life and realize that this fleeting existence will soon be over and you will be a citizen of the Mansion Worlds where greater gifts, even greater than these words of instruction, are given. You will still be living life and facing difficulties, yes, but you will have a longer viewpoint. I say, have this understanding with you now, look toward the ultimate goals rather than temporal ones, and know that all is in Father's hands.

ROLAND: Would it be permissible for us to know a personal history of yourself? Perhaps where you accepted or volunteered for your mission from for your Teaching Mission here on Urantia? What brought you to that act of volunteering?

AMSTER: In the ascension scheme, one often has the opportunity for greater growth and glory in service by taking assignments such as this to help enlighten those less fortunate. I felt myself lacking in this growth-promoting service and have volunteered for this supernal task of helping Michael's world, which is my honor and privilege to be chosen to be a part of. Does this answer?

ROLAND: Yes, it does except for the place it was when you volunteered perhaps you can give me some understanding of your world of origin? (Amster: I am forbidden to discuss my birth sphere. I volunteered from Jerusem.)

ROLAND: Thank you very much. It would be wonderful to hear a lesson regarding the circumstances in Jerusem, but I know that would likely be at another time.

JASON: Teacher Amster, back to the subject that James brought up: What about when a large financial entity in this world picks on a little financial entity and unjustly forces them out of the competitive market simply by low tactics should one stand up and fight fire with fire? Or, to take a mild stand and perhaps be subject to defeat simply because of morality?

AMSTER: The God-knowing man always takes the high road; yet, he is subject to the storms and trials of life all the same. He remains in a superior attitude and position in all respects. Be not concerned, for the evil and injustice which besets you is always vanquished with light, truth, and justice.

ABRAHAM: Greetings. I am ABRAHAM. I am the overseer in charge of this Teaching Mission, and have brought before you many noble minds and valiant hearts who have volunteered for this undertaking. Amster is due to be assigned shortly. You will be aware of this assignment.

There are others which you are unaware of at this time. They will eventually be brought to your cognition. There are many future Teachers coming into assignment-level as we are about to embark upon a more widespread Teaching Mission, which some of you will be involved in facilitating.

The future bodes well, yes, and I wish to personally thank each and every one of you for your help and support in this noble cause. It is just beginning. You are seeing the first fruits of your labor. All will be clear in time and your purpose will be made manifest more readily. Teaching is our primary goal and objective. It is beginning to take shape nicely well.

I am very pleased with your personal efforts and sacrifices. You are well regarded in our circle. I wish you all well, and the best for you and your families. Be unafraid. Walk forward in light and truth always. I will be returning again next week also, and will give you further instruction. As for now, I will have to part and say, shalom.

Truth Changes Lives | Progress Report of the Teaching Mission

Back

Greetings. I am ABRAHAM. I will conduct this evening's lesson and question/answer period. I am going to tell you a little about our progress concerning our Mission assignments.

Like paper in the wind, many of our Teachers are unheeded. Attempts are repeatedly made for human contact and these attempts are often disregarded by their subjects. Enough time has passed now for the beginning phase of this teacher/student assignment. Learning and teaching will become your passions.

You are walking the road of righteousness and truth, which is becoming straight and wide. In broadening your mental capacity and outlook, you are able to perceive this road with clarity of vision and purpose wherein you are in little or no danger of falling by the wayside; for you plainly conceive of this walking task. And so it is! it is an easy task and full of many rewards.

Coming to our teaching valley (Salt Lake City area), we have tarried here for learning purposes; and it has been well worthwhile, for now are you coming in contact with many other mortals seeking truth revelations; and this is your first great test/mission. You have been tested; yes indeed, you have. And we are well pleased by your sincerity and devotion. Many lesser-tested beings would have been shaken greatly. I am proud of your steadfastness and loyalty.

Truth is powerful. The words of truth change lives, communities, nations, races, worlds. The coming of the Spirit of Truth changed your worldnurtured it through the dark ages to prepare the people for greater revelation. What you see now is the response to religion, which has been partially true through the dark ages. It is that truth within religions' message which creates this reaction now, even if error is contained therein. Still, there is also only partiality of perspective, guidance, and truth in our teachingfor all of the teaching short of Paradise, is so.

Ages are required for enlargement of concepts; and your world has been well prepared for this. There are now five functioning Teaching Mission groups, and we are happy with them. There will soon be two more added, and these are a welcome enlargement for our purpose. There is only one outside the United States at this time besides the New Zealand initial group. Directly as result of your ministry there are many more groups responding, and we are responding in kind. Yes. Proceed with questions.

JOSHUA: Father Abraham, as you undoubtedly know, David and I went up to visit the group in Pocatello yesterday. There are two young ladies you are probably aware of by the name of Debbie and Frosty, who have evidently been receiving training from some Teachers, and they both volunteer to be transmission-receivers for their group they would like you to know that. In addressing the group, and trying to answer their questions, there was one question that I really don't know how to answer; and I would like if you would help me so the next time this happens that I'll be able to give a better answer. I think this question has been asked before in one of our groups. It is regarding people feeling they have experiences of 'past lives' which we know from reading the Urantia Book, cannot be true. But some people have been hypnotized and they say that they lived a life as the queen of Sheba, or someone else usually of great historical importance. They really believe in this and I don't know how to answer them in a positive manner to help lead them forward instead of turning them off. Could you address this, please?

ABRAHAM: Yes. This (past lives) is serious error in thinking. When we lament a glorious past, like the supposed golden age of Adam and Eve, with the subsequent fall from grace and causing the misery of man, it is looking at life as a lost potential and this is error when we believe that past lives were lived in better circumstances than present. This is akin to it; an error was made in thinking of past glory days, and reincarnation was imposed, you see that 'fall from a better state,' again. We should rather look at our present world as a springboard of boundless opportunity for future greatness. Potentials within are waiting to be unlocked and lived; they are not 'locked up' and you 'live again.' These potentials of 'personality-power' are awaiting expression, now. We are beginning the great adventure now! not reliving the dust of the past. The images which people perceive may be a forward-looking 'potential expression' from the indwelling Spirit illuminating 'character possibilities' and 'potential,' not memory from a past. Is this helping?

JOSHUA: Yes, very much. Thank you. In regard to what you were saying a few moments ago about other Teachers' efforts being "as paper blowing in the wind," could any of us help, individually? Could we help at all with any of these people that you are trying to have receive of your Teachers? I'm asking, could we, as fellow humans, talk with them, help them with a different perspective than what confusion is coming through their minds from the Teachers' words? I myself, would volunteer to go anywhere you want me to.

ABRAHAM: The coming into awareness that this (Teachers from on high) 'is possible' and 'is good,' are the two most important things. We are reaching now many new people, with Teachers standing by ready to respond to this awareness. They will experience this by themselves, without human help except for the planting of the seed, your presenting of this ideal. (Joshua: Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome; and thank you, Joshua, for your willingness to help.

JASON: Father Abraham, if there is another group outside the United States, besides the one in New Zealand, is it in Canada? (Abraham: No, not yet. It is in France, quite isolated. Yes.)

JASON: About the New Zealand group, I have written them three letters and have had no reply whatsoever. Is there something that has developed down there that prevents them from returning mail? or is their time altered? What is their situation?

ABRAHAM: They are now retiring from their duties. They have completed their mission as far as public announcements and so forth. Now they are engaging in personal spiritual growth and teaching. They will, and have, touched many lives as indeed your own. Their work is complete for now, in public matters.

JASON: So they will still have access to the transmissions by yourself, but just in private? (Abraham: Yes. Would you like me to deliver a message?) Jason: If they could reply to my last letter only. That would be greatly helpful.

JEREMIAH: With the apostles when their Master left this world, they were saddened and depressed. I would like to ask you personally about that because I believe you had the same thing happen when your teacher/mentor Melchizedek left. My question is: What can we do, as a group or individually, to prepare for when the Teaching Mission leaves. And even if the Teaching Ministry is supposed to be active till the Trinity Teacher Sons come can you still comment on that question, please?

ABRAHAM: Yes. The Teachers are here for the span of time needed in preparing Urantia for her Teacher Sons. We are not leaving until that advent. Life is full and rife with disappointment and sorrow. Yes, great sadness and the feeling of abandonment overwhelmed the apostles for a time. Shortly, however, the Master came again and allayed these fears. His Spirit of Truth is poured out to be with you always. For myself, I shortly followed my Teacher with my own passing. He greeted me on my arrival on Mansonia number One. He has been my constant friend and companion since. Our short separation was mostly illusory I felt abandoned, yes, but was not. (Jeremiah: Thank you).

WILLEENA: Father Abraham, my question is regarding the actual effects of situations that are arising on the planets such as tomorrow mornings? peace/prayer meditation. There are groups of people attempting to affect the upliftment of the spirit and energy of this planet. My question is? and particularly with something like this meditation which is at 4:30 a.m., wherein there are people all over the planet who will be meditating at exactly the same time for world peace do these have effect? Do these kinds of events lift the spiritual consciousness of the masses on the planet? And if so, what would be a good focus to keep in mind in participating?

ABRAHAM: All prayers have an effect, yes, and the prayers of many have great effect. You do well to pray for your world and people. It is a good thing and is well thought of. Yes, it is a noble thing. Yes.

WILLEENA: Thank you, Father Abraham. I wasn't able to be here this last week, and I missed our lesson. In reading the transcript, there was a particular question that has been on my mind; I hope you will allow it. My heart is searching for an answer that will really help me to grasp the essence of the Christmas season the real message that does somehow get lost at times with all of the commercialism and all of the stress that comes along with the modern day living around the Christmas season. I wonder if you could just address this, even briefly; just something to remind us of the true spirit of what we are celebrating.

ABRAHAM: This is for each person to find within, your own relationship to Michael and His coming next coming. Yes, all need to cultivate the soil of one's heart to receive His spirit, His words; and to look toward that distant happy horizon when He returns. (Willeena: Thank you, Father Abraham). Abraham: With that, I shall take my leave. Shalom.

For The Greater Realities Of The Kingdom Remain In Simplicity

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. It is an excellent evening for snow. I am not affected as you are. I admonish you all to exercise caution while driving.

Tonight our lesson is for the greater spiritual edification of all men. We are in the early beginning stage of the vast, yet relatively short, time frame period of correction. This is our duty and life purpose – to effect change and correction in many areas of human endeavor. We are, primarily, teachers of spirituality.

The matters of the spirit are of the highest importance for individuals, nations, races, and worlds. This is our primary objective – to raise the spiritual consciousness of all mankind. You who have been called forth will engage in this effort. In learning, hearing and receiving my words, you are growing and changing, adjusting inwardly to spirit-reality, which is the only reality.

It is requiring many years for preparation in this work, and there will be many years of labor in the orchards. I am using symbolism that is most illustrative of our work. The ground requires tilling and moisture and fertilization. The small trees require uprooting and replanting. The larger trees require pruning and protection from their many harmful effects, from insects, from birds, from frost. These harmful elements are poisonous to growth and deleterious to health.

Yes, you are all protected from these calamities. Little do you realize the full extent of your superhuman watchcare, even if you glimpse and acknowledge its ever-changing effects. All of you gathered here tonight have searched and found God within. You have acknowledged your status of sonship with Him. You have received His love, understanding of His mercy, understanding of His guidance, friendship – and indeed, His salvation. Yes. I know whereof I speak – all gathered here this night have received eternal salvation.

In instructing you in the greater realities of the kingdom it is helpful, or well, to remain in simplicity, for the essence or core of the kingdom is simplicity. Often we search in complex philosophy for expanded mental vision into reality, and I say to you, it is not found there! Knowledge is essential for understanding, yes, this is so – but comprehension of the 'essence' of God's spirit is found in simplicity.

Have your hearts been opened to this wisdom? Do you see the divine plan working in this? Do you have the childlike attitude necessary for reception? Do you have the strength and courage of robust forthright men and women who can grasp this understanding and make it your own? Yes.

I will receive only a few questions this evening. I am aware of Rebecca's headache and desire a clarity of my words. Proceed.

RACHEL: Good evening, Father Ham. Thank you for the beautiful words that you have just spoken to us. Tonight we have three guests from the Pocatello study group with us. They are Bill and Virginia Kelly, Lisa, and Debra. Bill has been studying the Urantia Book for about ten years. Lisa has been studying about two and a half years, and Debra has been studying for about two years. I think they were very brave to come out on these roads this far, tonight.

HAM: One Moment. Yes. I am in understanding of these people and have words to address them. Yes. This evening is a beginning for you. We have assigned a Teacher already. Are you, Debra, willing to function as Rebecca, to transmission-receive for your group?

DEBRA: If this is God's will, then I will do so.

HAM: You must determine that for yourself alone, and so when you make that determination, you will find a Teacher. Yes.

JOSHUA: Father Ham, would it be permissible to ask the Teacher's name?

HAM: The Teacher will speak next week. Rebecca has a severe headache. It is difficult for communication tonight. I am sorry. No.

JOSHUA: While we are talking Teachers, I received a phone call from Bob of California. Their study group is in Northern California – the Santa Rosa group. They request a Teacher also. Would that be permissible? (Ham: Yes. I will make the request.)

JOSHUA: Thank you very much, Ham. I can see that Rebecca is having a lot of problems. Bob asked me to express his gratitude to you for your teachings. He requested and received permission some time back to be able to hear your tapes, and he thinks your teachings are wonderful.

HAM: Very well. I must retire for now. It is too difficult for communication. Rebecca is alright. Be not anxious. All is well. I must say, farewell.

Life is Constant Growth | Introduction of Daniel to the Pocatello Group

Daniel, WOODS CROSS, UTAH

MEETING WITH DANIEL – Teacher for Pocatello, ID group who presents this evening's lesson.

Greetings. I am DANIEL. I will be your Teacher and will deliver the lesson this evening. I am happy to be given this mission opportunity and desire to thank you all for coming here tonight and for meeting my students.

Our lesson this evening is about growth. We are, all of us, growing. Life is constant growth. Some years we receive more spiritual food and water; and in those years we are growing more rapidly. In times of spiritual drought and famine, we grow more slowly. The tree is sturdy, nonetheless, and strong within, even in those times of spiritual malnourishment. You see, it requires nutrients and nurturing of the soil for its adequate, proper and steady growth to take place.

This is my mission to you, to provide the waters of hope, truth, life, and abundance – and, the nutrients of wisdom, experience, and character-building. I come not for myself but rather for Him who sent me, our sovereign Lord, Christ Michael. Our association, I hope, will be very fruitful, stimulating, growth-enhancing, comforting, and beneficial for you, yes, and also the greater Mission-objective. I wish to answer some questions from my new pupils now.

RACHEL: Teacher Daniel, we are very pleased and happy you could attend and be with us this evening, and we do have some of your pupils here from Idaho – three of them were presented in the meeting last week with Father Ham. Also, we have Martha, who used to be part of our study group here in Woods Cross. Those new here tonight that were not presented last week are: Bert and Merna (his wife) – Bert has been studying the Urantia Book for nineteen years; Merna has been studying for seven years. Bert is also the Urantia Foundation's area coordinator for the state of Idaho. He has a study group in Jerome. Also new: we have Norman from Pocatello, he has been studying the Urantia Book for one year. We have Kenneth, from Idaho Falls, he does attend the study group in Pocatello and has been studying for fifteen years. We have Larry from Pocatello, he has been studying the Urantia Book for one year. We have Bill, and Virginia his wife, from Pocatello, they have both been studying for five years. Bill used to be a Presbyterian Minister. And that is the line-up we have, that have not been presented before. Thank you, Teacher Daniel. (Daniel: Thank you, Rachel.)

DEBRA: Daniel, this has been quite a week for you and me. I am grateful that you have verified this for me. You have been with me through my struggles, and I just want to thank you for the comforting thoughts you have given me.

DANIEL: Thank you. I enjoy you very much and am happy to be working in association with such a beautiful and intelligent spiritual person. (Debra: Thank you, Daniel).

BILL: This is Bill from Pocatello. We understand that you are to be our Teacher? Is this correct? (Daniel: Yes). Bill: Will you be able to help us with questions of logistics that we have been talking about? Such as how many meetings we should be having so we can deal with these problems? Should we concern you with these sorts of things?

DANIEL: Yes. I will instruct you as to the best method. It has been customary among these groups for weekly group gatherings, and perhaps also some private meetings if requested. I am very willing to be easily available to meet the group needs.

BILL: Thank you, Daniel. I just want to say that we are glad to have you here tonight. I was concerned that maybe something would happen. My wife tells me I worry too much. I am sure that is one of the things I need to work on. But I want you to know I am very glad to meet you and have you here tonight. (Daniel: Thank you).

RACHEL: I think your pupils from Pocatello are being just a little bit timid. They don't seem to want to ask any questions. (Daniel: They will. [laughter.]) Rachel: I would like to ask: Were you a mortal also on another world? (Daniel: Yes. I was also a birth being of material origin. Yes.)

BILL: I would also like to thank you for coming to guide us in our growth, and I am asking for Debbie now: When are we to begin weekly lessons?

DANIEL: I would like to begin next week if Debra is willing. You must all be considerate that she is only beginning to learn this method of communicating. Rebecca, I know was slow at first, and has since gained self-assurance and confidence in this communicating method. Be reminded that this transmitting and receiving method is imperfect and requires time to develop this skill. Rebecca, even now, does at times stumble over our words. I am saying, it is alright to be slower, for we have time.

BILL: Daniel, there are two Bill's in our group. I am the first Bill that spoke. I have been making a transcript of Ham's transmissions through Rebecca from the tapes that I have. Primarily, to come to some sort of understanding of the veracity and authenticity of you Teachers – and I have reached that conclusion probably a while ago or I would not be here tonight. Did you want me to continue to do this with tape recordings of your teaching and your contact with us? because I would be willing if you so desire.

DANIEL: Yes. You are appreciative of the importance of these teachings. I am happy and pleased to hear this and am pleased at your dedication. Yes.

WILLEENA: Daniel, while your pupils are preparing questions for you, I thought I'd ask one. Is that alright with you? (Daniel: Yes, of course). Willeena: Thank you. About two or three weeks ago I started having the name Daniel come to my mind. It was repeatedly happening, and I wasn't really sure what it was regarding. It was happening particularly here in our lessons. I wonder if you could find out, or if you would know if it has anything to do with you? (Daniel: No, not that I am personally aware of. It was perhaps your indwelling Spirit speaking – maybe concerning me. I did not, personally, speak mindally to you, however.)

WILLEENA: Thank you. I don't yet have very much communication with my indwelling Spirit where I receive the answers. Would it be possible for you to ask my indwelling Spirit if there is something with regard to what you just said that I should be attuned to for future reference?

DANIEL: There is nothing which I perceive as so important. (Willeena: Thank you).

LEN: Teacher Daniel, this is the first time I have asked a question at this meeting: Concerning your lesson on personal growth, I realize that we may not see our day-to-day growth, but we perhaps see it more month-to-month, or year-to-year observations. What single thing would you perhaps suggest to us, or to myself, as most significant daily thing we can do to see a daily improvement in our spiritual growth?

DANIEL: A noble and sincere question. You have evinced the desire for growth. The desire of your heart is known by our Father. It is Him you must seek, daily, and Him you must wholeheartedly desire to know; and this understanding is so deep as to become you. As your understanding grows, your soul and character grow also, even more than your understanding. As you become more of God, so are you made in eternity your immortal soul. Seek first our Father's will in all things, and His will will be made known to you, yes, most certainly. Seek and you shall find. Love and you shall be loved.

LEN: Thank you, Teacher. I perceive that as most fitting. As we learn to receive and understand the love of Father, that surely would help us to learn to love and understand those around us, and the things our Father has to present for us. Thank you very much. (Daniel: You are understanding well.)

DEBBIE: Daniel, I wanted to let you know, even though I'm sure that you do know, what an honor it is to be able to work with you, and also a very humbling experience. My question tonight had to do with: How do I know for sure that it is you coming through? It's good to have you on the other side right now (talking through Rebecca).

DANIEL: Yes. It will all be plain in time. At first, it is not clear and is hampered by excessive worry and anxiety also. Be of the attitude 'of allowance.' Allow my words to be spoken clearly without interference from your thinking, if possible. It requires time for the relaxation of the anxiety and fear, but you are coming along very, very well. I am perfectly content and happy with your progress, and in time you will see how easy it is. Am I responding as to your understanding? (Debbie: Yes, thank you.) [Editor's note: The tape recorder stopped here, causing much commotion and laughter.]

RACHEL: Teacher Daniel, how do you like our contraptions?

DANIEL: They only get more complicated from here. [laughter.] Yes. As I was saying, Debbie, I will come by appointment soon, and it will be clear when I am here and when I am not. Don't allow yourself to be misled by your own thinking when it is so easy to allow me to speak my own. You need not fill in or try to finish sentences, I will do so. Just allow time. There may be gaps and time-lapses, but do not let this be worrisome - just allow. (Debbie: Thanks, Daniel. That will help me a lot.)

ROLAND: Teacher Daniel, we met before at my house. (Daniel: Greetings, again.)

Roland: Thank you. I have some questions for you that I have written prior to the transmission experience I had with you. Perhaps you didn't really have time to give me the answers to them. It may be interesting if it's permissible for us to know these things: As a mortal, were you on a non-breather, light-breather, medium-breather or heavy-breather world? (Daniel: It does not matter.)

ROLAND: Except for our darn curiosity. [laughter.] Well, I'll drop that. Another experience I had with our communication is that there does seem to be different qualities from different Teachers – Arthur, Amster and yourself. I am wondering if you use different kinds of connective points in the brain, if that might be known? [Editor's note: Arthur was the name of the Teacher recently assigned to a group in Canada.]

DANIEL: You always use the same brain-matter for speech, yet with different mental states or moods your speech can alter. So it is the same concerning these communications – we are all using the same technique and are perceived a little differently depending upon many factors. Among these factors are mental states. Also, personality differences are manifest by the quality of your perception of us. It is still very similar in actual procedure. Is this answering?

ROLAND: Yes. I am wondering if you are in touch with our physical brains in order to stimulate our minds, or is it mind-to-mind in the communications we have? (Daniel: Both). Roland: Then the other thing I think is important: I recognize that you are limited, somewhat, by our vocabulary – in other words, things we have learned over time; and I see you use our vocabulary. So when you have a particular thought to convey, do you have to get that basically from what we have learned in the past? (Daniel: Yes, it is, and your vocabulary is well sufficient.)

ROLAND: Well, that is good to know. That was my next question. I too would like to welcome you and thank you very much for spending time with me. I have enjoyed our association. I hope you will return. (Daniel: I will not return for now. I have been assigned. I have my work before me.)

BILL: Daniel, this is the first Bill. I guess we too have our work before us. Ham says that Teachers are prepared in collaboration with Melchizedek, our vicegerent Planetary Prince, and I am assuming the same thing is true with you? (Daniel: Yes.) Bill: My question is: Do each of you Teachers have input so that it is a product of both your own teaching as well as Melchizedek's – are these all pre-prepared? Do you do it as a group, or in collaboration with Melchizedek? If you could answer that question, please, I'd be curious.

DANIEL: Yes, I can. We are given guidelines, subjects, and the depth of mental comprehension for each lesson. We are relatively free to embellish and make these teachings personal for our own group. We are given great freedom of expression, and this expression is modified by our transmission-receiver's personality, who is also unwittingly coloring the transmission by the limitations of the human intellect.

BILL: Thank you for answering my questions. I just have one more. I don't want to take more than my share of time: Ham also conveyed in the teachings that I have listened to, that the commitment on the part of each student, to personally attend his teachings, is very important. And I am assuming that this is something that you would also expect of each of us as your group students. Am I correct in that?

(Daniel: Are you planning to miss any?) [laughter.]

BILL: No. I don't think I am. I don't plan to miss any. I suppose that was a foolish question. But, as a good teacher you expect your pupils to be in attendance, I am sure. No. I don't plan to miss any. You'll see me there if it is physically possible.

BILL: This is Bill number two. I have been asked by a friend to say hello to Ham, if I could – his name is Tim. So if you could pass that on, we'd appreciate it. Thank you. (Daniel: Yes, I will.)

JEREMIAH: Teacher Daniel, I have a question on humor: I would like to have some guidelines on possibly what you consider good humor, bad humor, and possibly examples of each? What type of humor or relaxation best promotes spiritual growth?

DANIEL: Humor is buoyant to the spirit. Healthy and happy humor is always good. Unhealthy derision and the taking pleasure in another's misfortune is not healthy and buoyant – it is like a weight, a rather 'sinking' weight. You can feel this difference within and should engage in the former – healthy humor type, exclusively, if possible. I do not have time to elaborate. (Jeremiah: Thank you, Teacher.)

MARTHA: Hi Daniel, I also would like to welcome you. I have a question concerning how Teachers are picked for specific groups: Are you perhaps more 'well trained' let's say, to the group in Pocatello? And are you to teach us for a specific mission?

DANIEL: I am matched to the mind of Debra very well, and this is not accidental but the results of the preparation of Debra. Also, I am well suited in personality compatibility with your general group atmosphere, personality types. You have all been scrutinized and evaluated – for me, and by me also. I am prepared to be with you for some time to come and have been prepared for some time prior so that I feel ready to accept this responsibility and honor. (Martha: Thank you very much.)

VELETA: Hello Daniel, I am with Ham's group. My question: Have you been here before at our group and are you familiar with us? Have you been here before this evening?

DANIEL: Yes, I have. I am somewhat familiar with you each, although not to the extent as brother Ham. (Veleta: Thank you.) Daniel: I will receive one further question.

BILL: Just a tactical question: We have been in the practice of meeting on Sunday mornings in the Methodist church, but recently we've had to vacate that premise; and it occurred to me that when this all happened to us that it was probably for the best inasmuch as your teaching might not be comfortable there – that the experience of having this happening in the Methodist church might not be comfortable. I am sure you know all this, so we have chosen to meet instead in homes; and we planned to meet this coming Sunday morning at nine-thirty in Debbie's home. Is there any problem with that, as our initial meeting, as far as you can see? (Daniel: Wonderful.)

VIRGINIA: Daniel, I can't help but wonder if you have been present in our groups and know us and our personalities. Also, I've been wondering – has it been in the hands of 'other than humans' that circumstances have reached the point where we were asked to meet in another place? Did supernal beings on your side have anything to do with that move?

DANIEL: If these circumstances had not arisen, we would have asked you to relocate, yes.

VIRGINIA: Thank you, Daniel. I know you said 'one more question,' but I usually keep very quiet, ha ha, around strangers. Should we stop now? or another question? I don't know. (Daniel: I will answer another, yes.)

RACHEL: While we are waiting for them and the microphone. I would just like to say I am thrilled with your answers where humor is concerned, because I would sure hate to stop all this fun I have been having.

JOSHUA: Is Abraham or Ham or anyone else here tonight. (Daniel: Yes, they are.) Joshua: Would you give them our greetings and our thanks for bringing about this wonderful opportunity to have you as a Teacher in Pocatello? This is very wonderful. We are glad to see this Mission-work, expanding.

DANIEL: Thank you. I will say goodnight for this evening, and will be present at your next meeting in Pocatello. Ham will be teaching again next week. I am glad to be here with you all. Good evening.

Prosperity Is Enhanced And Augmented By And Through Our Relationships, Human and Divine

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. This evening I wish to begin with a lesson on prosperity. I am aware and am in understanding of your various needs and desires in the realm of material comfort and enjoyment. You are all undergoing a time of increasing awareness of this material life's celestial overcontrol.

As you increasingly become aware of divine overcontrol in your life, and that of others, your abilities are enhanced. With this awareness, your ability is enhanced to master situations in relationships, as well as concerning material well-being and monetary rewards. Not to imply unfair advantage-taking, no, not at all; rather, the understanding of social levers of spiritual value and import which may result in augmenting material comfort.

Society, economics (economic society), is run on personal relationships. Prosperity 'economically' is enhanced through and by augmented spiritual insight into relationships. Personalities are economics-related, yes. Even on large scale and small, are all personalities interacting with other personalities. Yes, it is only by augmented enhanced spiritual insight into personal true motivation that brings reward in all areas of personal reality. Life is not a balance sheet, no! life is your personal relations with others, yes.

Realize the great extent to which your personality can reach. Great things can and will be accomplished by and through you all. Be of increasing personal awareness and insight toward your fellows – your immediate associates first, and augmenting and going outward from there. Have a personal awareness with all with whom you have dealings. All dealings are personal, none are not. A beautiful life--as you experience it--is in geometric proportion to people you have dealings with. Yes, have awareness on all levels to which personality reaches. That is all. Greetings. I will receive questions.

RACHEL: Good evening, Father Ham, and welcome home. We are glad to have you back.

JOSHUA: I received a phone call a few days ago from a Steve of Versailles, Kentucky. He also desires to know if he and his wife, Cindy, may receive copies of these tapes.

HAM: This is a delicate matter concerning this group of people. Yes, you may deliver to them transcripts or tapes of our meetings. I am not at liberty to elaborate on their status at this time. However, we are undertaking their careful evaluation, and when it is completed to my satisfaction we will issue a statement on Teacher-readiness. (Joshua: Thank you very much.)

JOHN: Father Ham, I have a question regarding your lesson on 'prosperity.' Do you mean that prosperity, true prosperity, is measured by how well we interact with our fellows? And, that as a minor consequence or an outworking of that, it may help our economic status? Is that a good summary?

HAM: Yes and no. I am concerned to give instruction to you on the methods of material well-being and how it affects spiritual stature. You are all accounted as 'in the kingdom.' You are growing in wisdom and insight. Growth in character and strength (which 'is' spiritual stature), and prosperity with true self-respect, brings wealth. This wealth may not be grandiose and ostentatious (pretentious), but self-respect-promoting. Independence and happiness (freedom from want) are part of the nurturing of the wise, noble, good, true character. Yes, the essence of life is found in our relations with others; and the secret of true prosperity lies in this essence also. Is this explaining for you?

JOHN: Yes, it helps, but I kind of always thought of this, your teachings, as being removed from material aspects of existence. Are you basically saying that you are concerned about our prosperity 'materially?' because we, being physical creatures, we do need to worry about that? And if we do become more prosperous, that it gives us maybe more time to become more spiritual?

HAM: No, not at all. I am explaining life and its material repercussions. Always will there be relationships in your life – in work, and otherwise. All of life is now becoming more enjoyable. Relationships are becoming stronger, more steadfast, and more reliable in professional life as well. It is on these bases of relationships which build the foundation of prosperity – materially as well as spiritually. Those who think lightly on these relationships are foolish. He who easily breaks relations, making new ones, breaking those and so forth, seldom becomes prosperous. Are you beginning to see? (John: Yes. I think I understand now.)

ROLAND: Teacher Ham, this has been an extremely enlightening lesson for me tonight. My week has been filled with economic crisis. It seems that the error that I made was in my meditations and writings. I had assumed, or perhaps had asked several times maybe more than I should have asked – I got that feeling about whether a particular financial deal would come to pass. I took great confidence and security in the fact that my indwelling Adjuster has told me repeatedly that everybody was ready to make this deal – and yet, it fell apart this week, or at least I came to consciousness that it did. The great lesson it taught me was that I am very attached to material well-being; and in that attachment, I pass over the greater gifts of spiritual enlightenment. I like that in your lesson where it said that it's good to continue with our relationships with people we are doing business with because that's what prosperity arises out of. And I am sure it does – but if anything, it's a minimal by-product of the fact that they remember us as a person – if we had treated them well and as a fellow traveler on the road to eternal ascension. I would think that, in reality, we leave very little behind as far as a material benefit; but it does make it awful nice while we're here, our material abundance. So in my searching in my own mind, I have discovered that the supernals that we are dealing with – our own Thought Adjuster, as well as you, Teachers – seem to have a different vision of material well-being than we do. You are optimistic to the extent of being able to give us positive answers. If in that vein – in the vein of understanding that I have based my attachments to material well-being – is it that we really don't have any surety of material prosperity when it comes to numbers and volume or amounts of money? but that prosperity lies in the relationships we have with others. Is that where we are?

HAM: Yes and no. Sometimes when your biggest disappointment arises it becomes your greatest blessing. Often this process is painful and shattering. You will reap the wisdom at hand when occurrences need attention. You, children, are developing in character, developing in wisdom. You are developing strength to handle situations. You are increasing in courage to face the inevitable, and the fortitude to ride it out; all these things are more valuable than gold. Your life is not entailed on the basis of material prosperity. The steadfast and strong face the wind that may assault you dead on – for in guiding your ship to shore, gales may buffet you incessantly. Many may fail, and many will not pass through these gales – but you, children, are destined to reach the shore; you are on your way. Soon the night will pass to morning; the sky will clear to pastel shades; the golden sun will ripen soon – and surely you will guide your ship to safe harbor, I am certain. The true goals of existence are spiritual; yes, never lose sight of that. Of course as you grow in the spirit, these other things (material comforts) are added to you. It is wise to work at worthwhile/worthy goals for material stability and happiness – of course, for life is challenging and full of adventure in this area. Yes, you are attaining levels of spiritual living which make possible material comfort also. Comfort is found on the material and social-level strata, yes, but happiness and joy in this is found through the Spirit. In this way, needless yearnings for superfluous material things are eliminated, yes, while enjoyment of one's present status is augmented; yet all the while, further augmenting your material well-being level. Are you understanding?

ROLAND: Yes. Thank you. One other question: In this maze of life's pollutions that we live in in this will-creature existence – as you look at us and you see us here (what we do in our daily lives), what would you suggest we do, and what should we do less, in order for us to cut through the illusion and get to the reality that seems to be our destiny?

HAM: Enjoy what you have. Truly enjoy your lives. Have less fear and more enjoyment of the moment. Yes, less fear of the future, of that which is not. Do you see, most human fear is dread of a non-existent reality, a possibility or probability which has not manifest into present reality, except in your minds. You destroy much happiness with this needless future dread. I say, happiness is found in the present state only. Yes, true happiness is found in living in the moment – in the present, in the day, the hour, the moment. Yes.

MELISSA: It is good to be back with the group to hear your lessons. (Ham: Welcome back, Melissa.) Melissa: I've got a question: Sometimes we meet people, or people meet us, and we feel like we know each other or that we've seen each other somewhere before – anyway, we are familiar with each other and yet have never met. Could this be because our Thought Adjusters have been associated previously? And also, could it be that there is some type of destiny for us in the future with that person? (Ham: Yes, both. And it is wise to use wisdom in this, Melissa.)

MELISSA: Okay. Thank you, Father Ham. I really enjoyed your lesson tonight. It was very enlightening. Thank you.

LEN: Teacher Ham, I enjoyed Daniel's teaching last week but I have not spoken with you. I am glad to be here. In the first part of your lesson tonight you talked about over-control. Am I to understand it has been what you just described as how we try to worry too much of the future and not enjoy and take advantage of the every minute, the every hour, the every day?

HAM: Yes. Realizing your lives are under the over-control of our heavenly Caretakers frees your mind from petty cares. Yes. (Len: Thank you. That is a very good thought for the week to try to work on, for me anyway.)

DOROTHY: Father Ham, I want to thank Rachel and Len for including me. I am thankful for meeting these two lovely people, and I want to thank this group for allowing me to come and visit. At this point I do not have any questions, but I find that your lesson is very, very good. And yes, I myself, will not forget and 'go for the gold,' as we call it – and that means that I won't forget the spiritual end of it; meaning the spiritual end of taking care of myself and my family with the love and the acceptance that they need from me. (Ham: Well said, and I thank you.)

JASON: Greetings, Teacher Ham. In the Bible, James talks about liberty and how if we follow our inner liberties, that all things are given to us 'as we deserve them.' The exact verse goes: "For he who looks into the perfect law of liberty and who continues in it, and who is not a forgetful hearer but a doer in the works, this one shall be blessed in all that he does.” Could you give us a synonym of liberty that would tie with this verse to your lesson? And I have one further question.

HAM: This was a very apt quotation, and I thank you for speaking it. Liberty is spiritual freedom – freedom to grow in true form and direction. Without liberty (spiritual liberation for new growth) there is a stifling, a molding of not becoming trueness. Young plant shoots need plenty of soil around them for nutrients, plenty of sunshine for growth, and plenty of water for sustenance. 'Truth, beauty, and goodness' is spiritual food, water, and sunshine for developing souls. True liberty is the freedom to take and enjoy and utilize these free gifts wherever you may find them. Yes, truth, beauty, and goodness are all around; and, they are all, within. One's freedom to grow in this--to understand, and to recognize this--is true liberty, yes, true liberty.

JASON: Thank you, Teacher Ham. I will insert those in my character and try to grow. My second question lies with individuals that are aggressive and vigilant in their money-making characteristics. Perhaps many of us have done business and even dealt with the blows from these people. How do you suggest that we face these kinds of challenges? The majority of the people that are financially controlling our world, in my own judgment, I consider them unjust.

HAM: In time, the old ways will die and pass away, for they hold no lasting value within. A hollow victory is found for these people; a dead goal is their reward. They and their methods will not be enduring forever, although it may seem they have been so. 'Power' on your world is beginning to change – little by little, person by person. Eventually, there will be a more just balance reached in all things – economically, socially, and politically. Life as you know it, is unbalanced. Society is unbalanced by the few with 'too much' and the many with 'too little.' Yes, it is unstable, and will gradually correct. You will see much in your life. Yes. (Jason: Thank you, Teacher, for that marvelous timepiece lesson.)

JEREMIAH: Father Ham, in your lesson you were referring to material prosperity. Does that include our pursuit of intellectual happiness? or were you just referring to gold and glory-seeking. For example, a lot of time with our maintaining relationships – using the 'old boy network,' whatever – one can really have a lot of satisfaction with intellectual pursuits in understanding things. (Ham: Yes, of course it includes satisfaction in all areas of life. Self-respect requires satisfaction in life's performance. Yes.)

JEREMIAH: Thank you, Teacher. Following that question further: If you have a satisfaction of trying to finish a work, or understand a certain political concept by yourself or with the help of other people – is that feeling that you have there, is that a spiritual feeling? or is it just strictly material? I'm a little confused on that.

HAM: Always and forever you will experience the thrill of intellectual expansion and understanding. Never is this capacity exhausted. Always you will experience the thrill of new intellectual discovery – on into infinity, yes; it is a never-ending source of increasing happiness and satisfaction.

JEREMIAH: Thank you. On the Mansion Worlds, I understand we wouldn't have to worry about room-and-board, nor do we worry about our health. So if we consider the same thing down here then, that would be the best way of pursuing the other things which you are referring to – of prosperity? (Ham: Rephrase your question.)

JEREMIAH: I think a lot of people have problems in the chase for the material things that you are referring to because of our need of providing room and board – economics; or, their concerns with their health. So if we would just transcend that by 'these things are being taken care of,' or these things we are pursuing under the category of the things we are pursuing, things that are desirable to chase, look forward to... (Ham: Rephrase please.) [laughter.] Jeremiah: Ok, let me rephrase: Jesus our Lord, said: "Where your heart is, is where your treasure would be." So if one could consider if we were up on the Mansion Worlds now, we wouldn't have any problems with health, is my understanding – for there, materialistic consequences are taken care of. So therefore, those things are not a concern, and not to worry. So living there, we could live our lives and pursue relationships with people, pursue intellectual and spiritual advancement, and not worry about those things for survival as we do here. If we could pretend and think that such is the case down here, wouldn't that be a very useful concept – to think that way? and would be of great help to us in living our lives down on this planet? (Ham: Yes, yes.)

HAM: I am with the understanding that our session is now ready to be ended. I thank you all for being present with me this evening and wish you all peace in the coming week. I pray very much for each of you. I ask you to pray for each other, and pray also for growth. [Joshua: I'm sorry I didn't get Ham's good-bye. I ran out of tape.]

and more reliable in professional life as well. It is on these bases of relationships which build the foundation of prosperity – materially as well as spiritually. Those who think lightly on these relationships are foolish. He who easily breaks relations, making new ones, breaking those and so forth, seldom becomes prosperous. Are you beginning to see? (John: Yes. I think I understand now.)

ROLAND: Teacher Ham, this has been an extremely enlightening lesson for me tonight. My week has been filled with economic crisis. It seems that the error that I made was in my meditations and writings. I had assumed, or perhaps had asked several times maybe more than I should have asked – I got that feeling about whether a particular financial deal would come to pass. I took great confidence and security in the fact that my indwelling Adjuster has told me repeatedly that everybody was ready to make this deal – and yet, it fell apart this week, or at least I came to consciousness that it did. The great lesson it taught me was that I am very attached to material well-being; and in that attachment, I pass over the greater gifts of spiritual enlightenment. I like that in your lesson where it said that it's good to continue with our relationships with people we are doing business with because that's what prosperity arises out of. And I am sure it does – but if anything, it's a minimal by-product of the fact that they remember us as a person – if we had treated them well and as a fellow traveler on the road to eternal ascension. I would think that, in reality, we leave very little behind as far as a material benefit; but it does make it awful nice while we're here, our material abundance. So in my searching in my own mind, I have discovered that the supernals that we are dealing with – our own Thought Adjuster, as well as you, Teachers – seem to have a different vision of material well-being than we do. You are optimistic to the extent of being able to give us positive answers. If in that vein – in the vein of understanding that I have based my attachments to material well-being – is it that we really don't have any surety of material prosperity when it comes to numbers and volume or amounts of money? but that prosperity lies in the relationships we have with others. Is that where we are?

HAM: Yes and no. Sometimes when your biggest disappointment arises it becomes your greatest blessing. Often this process is painful and shattering. You will reap the wisdom at hand when occurrences need attention. You, children, are developing in character, developing in wisdom. You are developing strength to handle situations. You are increasing in courage to face the inevitable, and the fortitude to ride it out; all these things are more valuable than gold. Your life is not entailed on the basis of material prosperity. The steadfast and strong face the wind that may assault you dead on – for in guiding your ship to shore, gales may buffet you incessantly. Many may fail, and many will not pass through these gales – but you, children, are destined to reach the shore; you are on your way. Soon the night will pass to morning; the sky will clear to pastel shades; the golden sun will ripen soon – and surely you will guide your ship to safe harbor, I am certain. The true goals of existence are spiritual; yes, never lose sight of that. Of course as you grow in the spirit, these other things (material comforts) are added to you. It is wise to work at worthwhile/worthy goals for material stability and happiness – of course, for life is challenging and full of adventure in this area. Yes, you are attaining levels of spiritual living which make possible material comfort also. Comfort is found on the material and social-level strata, yes, but happiness and joy in this is found through the Spirit. In this way, needless yearnings for superfluous material things are eliminated, yes, while enjoyment of one's present status is augmented; yet all the while, further augmenting your material well-being level. Are you understanding?

ROLAND: Yes. Thank you. One other question: In this maze of life's pollutions that we live in in this will-creature existence – as you look at us and you see us here (what we do in our daily lives), what would you suggest we do, and what should we do less, in order for us to cut through the illusion and get to the reality that seems to be our destiny?

HAM: Enjoy what you have. Truly enjoy your lives. Have less fear and more enjoyment of the moment. Yes, less fear of the future, of that which is not. Do you see, most human fear is dread of a non-existent reality, a possibility or probability which has not manifest into present reality, except in your minds. You destroy much happiness with this needless future dread. I say, happiness is found in the present state only. Yes, true happiness is found in living in the moment – in the present, in the day, the hour, the moment. Yes.

MELISSA: It is good to be back with the group to hear your lessons. (Ham: Welcome back, Melissa.) Melissa: I've got a question: Sometimes we meet people, or people meet us, and we feel like we know each other or that we've seen each other somewhere before – anyway, we are familiar with each other and yet have never met. Could this be because our Thought Adjusters have been associated previously? And also, could it be that there is some type of destiny for us in the future with that person? (Ham: Yes, both. And it is wise to use wisdom in this, Melissa.)

MELISSA: Okay. Thank you, Father Ham. I really enjoyed your lesson tonight. It was very enlightening. Thank you.

LEN: Teacher Ham, I enjoyed Daniel's teaching last week but I have not spoken with you. I am glad to be here. In the first part of your lesson tonight you talked about over-control. Am I to understand it has been what you just described as how we try to worry too much of the future and not enjoy and take advantage of the every minute, the every hour, the every day?

HAM: Yes. Realizing your lives are under the over-control of our heavenly Caretakers frees your mind from petty cares. Yes. (Len: Thank you. That is a very good thought for the week to try to work on, for me anyway.)

DOROTHY: Father Ham, I want to thank Rachel and Len for including me. I am thankful for meeting these two lovely people, and I want to thank this group for allowing me to come and visit. At this point I do not have any questions, but I find that your lesson is very, very good. And yes, I myself, will not forget and 'go for the gold,' as we call it – and that means that I won't forget the spiritual end of it; meaning the spiritual end of taking care of myself and my family with the love and the acceptance that they need from me. (Ham: Well said, and I thank you.)

JASON: Greetings, Teacher Ham. In the Bible, James talks about liberty and how if we follow our inner liberties, that all things are given to us 'as we deserve them.' The exact verse goes: "For he who looks into the perfect law of liberty and who continues in it, and who is not a forgetful hearer but a doer in the works, this one shall be blessed in all that he does.” Could you give us a synonym of liberty that would tie with this verse to your lesson? And I have one further question.

HAM: This was a very apt quotation, and I thank you for speaking it. Liberty is spiritual freedom – freedom to grow in true form and direction. Without liberty (spiritual liberation for new growth) there is a stifling, a molding of not becoming trueness. Young plant shoots need plenty of soil around them for nutrients, plenty of sunshine for growth, and plenty of water for sustenance. 'Truth, beauty, and goodness' is spiritual food, water, and sunshine for developing souls. True liberty is the freedom to take and enjoy and utilize these free gifts wherever you may find them. Yes, truth, beauty, and goodness are all around; and, they are all, within. One's freedom to grow in this--to understand, and to recognize this--is true liberty, yes, true liberty.

JASON: Thank you, Teacher Ham. I will insert those in my character and try to grow. My second question lies with individuals that are aggressive and vigilant in their money-making characteristics. Perhaps many of us have done business and even dealt with the blows from these people. How do you suggest that we face these kinds of challenges? The majority of the people that are financially controlling our world, in my own judgment, I consider them unjust.

HAM: In time, the old ways will die and pass away, for they hold no lasting value within. A hollow victory is found for these people; a dead goal is their reward. They and their methods will not be enduring forever, although it may seem they have been so. 'Power' on your world is beginning to change – little by little, person by person. Eventually, there will be a more just balance reached in all things – economically, socially, and politically. Life as you know it, is unbalanced. Society is unbalanced by the few with 'too much' and the many with 'too little.' Yes, it is unstable, and will gradually correct. You will see much in your life. Yes. (Jason: Thank you, Teacher, for that marvelous timepiece lesson.)

JEREMIAH: Father Ham, in your lesson you were referring to material prosperity. Does that include our pursuit of intellectual happiness? or were you just referring to gold and glory-seeking. For example, a lot of time with our maintaining relationships – using the 'old boy network,' whatever – one can really have a lot of satisfaction with intellectual pursuits in understanding things. (Ham: Yes, of course it includes satisfaction in all areas of life. Self-respect requires satisfaction in life's performance. Yes.)

JEREMIAH: Thank you, Teacher. Following that question further: If you have a satisfaction of trying to finish a work, or understand a certain political concept by yourself or with the help of other people – is that feeling that you have there, is that a spiritual feeling? or is it just strictly material? I'm a little confused on that.

HAM: Always and forever you will experience the thrill of intellectual expansion and understanding. Never is this capacity exhausted. Always you will experience the thrill of new intellectual discovery – on into infinity, yes; it is a never-ending source of increasing happiness and satisfaction.

JEREMIAH: Thank you. On the Mansion Worlds, I understand we wouldn't have to worry about room-and-board, nor do we worry about our health. So if we consider the same thing down here then, that would be the best way of pursuing the other things which you are referring to – of prosperity? (Ham: Rephrase your question.)

JEREMIAH: I think a lot of people have problems in the chase for the material things that you are referring to because of our need of providing room and board – economics; or, their concerns with their health. So if we would just transcend that by ‘these things are being taken care of,’ or these things we are pursuing under the category of the things we are pursuing, things that are desirable to chase, look forward to... (Ham: Rephrase please.) [laughter.] Jeremiah: Ok, let me rephrase: Jesus our Lord, said: “Where your heart is, is where your treasure would be.” So if one could consider if we were up on the Mansion Worlds now, we wouldn't have any problems with health, is my understanding – for there, materialistic consequences are taken care of. So therefore, those things are not a concern, and not to worry. So living there, we could live our lives and pursue relationships with people, pursue intellectual and spiritual advancement, and not worry about those things for survival as we do here. If we could pretend and think that such is the case down here, wouldn't that be a very useful concept – to think that way? and would be of great help to us in living our lives down on this planet? (Ham: Yes, yes.)

HAM: I am with the understanding that our session is now ready to be ended. I thank you all for being present with me this evening and wish you all peace in the coming week. I pray very much for each of you. I ask you to pray for each other, and pray also for growth. [Joshua: I'm sorry I didn't get Ham's good-bye. I ran out of tape.]

The Rewards of Effort and Endurance Is Spiritual Growth, Finding Father

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. This evening I would desire to begin my lesson about effort and endurance.

Often in life in varied situations you are ready to give less effort than is necessary to achieve our objectives. Easier it is to give lesser effort and blame circumstances for our shortcomings. Easier it is to overcome all desire for goal than to achieve it. Often we let lesser distractions take precedence over full measure of effort toward the goal and put our effort toward lesser distractions, also using them as an excuse not to achieve goals.

Busy life is, yes! busy and full of distraction and cares. Be assured of your inner goals, that they are sanctioned from your greater self (indwelling Father Fragment) who in reality is giving you goals and opportunity – one after another. You may be disappointed today and then jubilant tomorrow over these opportunities and goals which are within your grasp.

The ups and downs of mortal existence are there for a reason. You are thoroughly tested in all ways and are required to overcome many small obstacles, and even large obstacles, to be sure of your serviceability, reliability, loyalty, and faith-trust toward the greatest goal of all existence – the goal of finding, discovering, growing in, and eventually reaching the Eternal Father.

You are all undergoing intensive training, testing, for greater responsibilities and goals in the future. Keep your head above water by keeping the goal of your life in focus, it will invariably lead you to higher ground. Keep the attitude of perseverance and steadfastness in your life's reaction patterns. Doubt not the rewards of faith, loyalty, and trust in your inner guidance always.

Effort is required of you to reach your temporal destinations as well as the eternal destination. All effort is rewarded; no effort goes unnoticed. You are all treading the path of mortal ascension and are required therefore, to exert yourselves – to put one foot before the other and walk firmly, steadily and surely, ahead. I am here to help you in this path of mortality; and I am here to teach you of your greater selves and goals. Fear not anymore, your path is steady, sure, and reliable. I will entertain questions now.

JOSHUA: Father Ham, thank you for a very thought-provoking lesson. I pray that we will all walk the path with sufficient faith to reach the goals that you desire that we should. And I thank you and all the other spiritual beings that are helping us in this guidance. Elizabeth, of California, desires to know if you could give her a time estimate of when she will be able or be ready to be a transmission-receiver. (Ham: Yes, I can. In three to four months' time you, Elizabeth, will be sufficiently prepared it is hoped. Rayson will inform you when.)

JOSHUA: Thank you very much. She asked me to thank you for the message that you gave her last week. Andrew desires to know if the lady that has come to his study group the last couple weeks, whose name is Crystal, is being prepared as a transmission-receiver? (Ham: No. Not at present.) Joshua: Thank you. On a similar note – Bill, who is a former member of the Coeur d'Alene study group in Idaho, says that a lady by the name of Barbara of that group, requests a Teacher for their group if possible. (Ham: All requests are taken seriously and we will seriously consider her request. Yes, of course, I will transfer this request.)

JOSHUA: Thank you. Debra, in the Pocatello group, is concerned that she is getting her thoughts interjected into Daniel's teachings, and she is fearful of direct questions from the people in the group. She kind of desires confirmation of how she is doing as a transmission-receiver?

HAM: I have observed her lessons with Daniel. I feel she is anxious and nervous needlessly, and wish to promote a calm and peaceful element for her. Anxiety is detrimental to clear communication, and also is hurtful to the psychic of Debra. It is our desire for her to have no fear. It is understood, however, that her trust of us is fragile and is only strengthened by time-association. Therefore, it is best if we just go slowly; not to pressure her or prematurely encumber Debra with needless anxiety. Remember that she is feeling anxious, and I therefore request the group to be thoughtful of this in their questioning. She is altogether a splendid person who we are happy and privileged to know and work with. She is doing very well.

JOSHUA: Thank you very much. She also desires to know if the healing sessions are proceeding as they should? Also, she asks if she could use acupuncture with the spiritual healing – if it would do any good? And if so, could you tell her what points to concentrate on?

HAM: Acupuncture is an ancient method of pain remedy. It is psycho-spiritual as well as physical. In pain relief, it is very effective and not too long-lasting, however. It is good in procedures where pain can occur during the method used for healing. It is not a curative in permanence in itself, and if used in connection with other healing methods it can produce lasting effects. In this case, it is not a necessary method, for I cannot see how it would be of lasting benefit.

JOSHUA: Thank you very much. Now I have a question for me: Do you desire to give us any special instructions on what we should do in this meeting coming up on Saturday down in California with the Urantia Fellowship General Council?

HAM: Yes, I do have something to tell you. All is proceeding very well, thanks to Andrew and others. His efforts are truly commendable and I desire personally to thank him. The meeting portion itself will last about forty-five minutes to an hour – ten minutes to begin; forty minutes for my speech and question/answering time; and five minutes for ending, give or take. At first we request a few minutes, to ask the audience for quiet and patience for a few moments in preparation. Most have some understanding of the circumstances and require not much introduction; however, a short introduction is requested for those who do not. So it will be mostly asking for quiet and sincere meditation on the part of those present. I always wish for my listeners to have a quiet mind and still heart for receiving my words to their fullest. Rebecca is well prepared, I feel, and will have little difficulty in the transmission. Quiet is best for her preparation, however. Also, remind them that this imperfect communication method used sometimes has pauses for transmission clarity – not for other reasons. Understanding this, is helpful. Allowing time between question and answer is not faulty, but natural. Indeed, a much historic day it will be – much observed, yes, much recorded and studied in future time on Urantia, and beyond. It is very important – yes indeed, very important that this transmission is as clear as possible. Remember, a quiet and prayerful attitude is best. I will not elaborate on all contingencies that we are taking into consideration, for we are well prepared and ready for this day. Happiness, yes, yes. Celebration, yes, yes. All are awaiting this day. That is all. (Joshua: Thank you very much, Father Ham.)

RACHEL: Father Ham, I pray that this lesson you are going to deliver in Los Angeles will be an ultimate success, and I also pray that the results therefrom will fulfill your heart's desire. (Ham: Thank you. Yes, indeed.)

JOHN: Father Ham, is there any advice you can give us on how to handle questions from people, like before the meeting and after – anything you want us to stress or stay away from?

HAM: No. You are well prepared for yourselves to answer questions; do so from your heart and experience. Don't be false in any way, no. Allow yourselves to become known as who you are. Be fearless of hard questions, for you have questioned much yourselves, and have received answers to your contentment. Rely on your firm feelings and be happy, joyous, fearless, and love-promoting. The genuine test of true faith-enhancement is the lovability of the adherent.

JOHN C.: Ham, my name is John. This is the first time I have ever talked with you. I have a son, who is twenty-five years old, he lives in Mountain Home, Idaho. He has been having some real bad emotional problems. I am told he has tried to commit suicide two times lately. I have tried to give him some spiritual support using words from both you and Abraham. I was just wondering if you could advise me.

HAM: You are correct in seeking through your spiritual guidance, yes, for it is said of this of which you speak, which is darkness and death consideration, that there is a choice – a coming of the light of spiritual truth instead of darkness. And the results is hope through hopelessness, comfort through despair, and life over death. It is by using spiritual truth that tragedy will be avoided. You can be sure that that saving light will never fail. Jesus said once: "Look up my son, look toward the light." I say, arise and be a new man of the kingdom. Trade your cowardice for bravery. The Spirit of divine truth will comfort you, protect you and enfold you. There is nothing of harm, not even through darkness, which can overcome a faith-son of God. Trade your despair for faith. Be reborn in the light of truth. Allow not fear, despair, and intolerance to overtake your inner self. You are truly my son and brother in God's kingdom. Forget the past. Walk bravely toward a new and better existence. That is all.

MELISSA: Okay Father Ham. I have a question about what percentage of our superuniverse is settled in Light and Life – if you could possibly let us know. Also, in our local universe and also the seven superuniverses.

HAM: I am not aware of exact percentages. However, on Superuniverse One we are told many worlds have achieved settled Light and Life. Yes, and so have whole Systems and one constellation. You see there is a long way to go. It will take ages upon ages for the entire superuniverse systems to be settled in Light and Life. Most of the superuniverse Systems show a spotty and uneven distribution of worlds, for this age is still relatively young. Much time for strong showing to occur. Yes. (Melissa: Thank you, Father Ham.)

ROLAND: Father Ham, in the last week I have allowed myself to get into a spiritual quagmire where I am not experiencing much progress, and also some feelings of being stuck. The method that seems to be most effective is in my prayers, prayers of thanksgiving and enumerating all the things that have been a blessing to me in the last year. I was wondering if you could give myself, and some of the others that might be feeling a little bit spiritually down, some ways we can practice that would alleviate this 'being stuck' feeling.

HAM: Yes. You are not stuck, only feeling so. Spiritual growth, being partially unconscious, is not subject to emotional whims and pressures. When you are feeling in better emotional attunement you will see the progress made, even now. This is natural and happens to everyone – to have periods of ‘ups and downs.’ Have neither guilt nor anxiety concerning this. Realize you are human, and humans have emotions and natural reactions to the real world. It is not really a problem at all, only natural adjustments. Be at ease.

ROLAND: Thank you. I'll try that. In the last week, I haven't done much contact work with Amster, but I did have one personal meeting with Loraine, and Amster answered questions. I sense there were a couple of errors that she caught right in the middle of the communication. Can you give some feedback about the accuracy of what that personal communication was for Loraine?

HAM: Yes. My understanding is that it was overall, accurate, and sufficient in transmission intent for Loraine's recognition of it. She is understanding of the shortcoming of this type of communication and is able to understand her level well, and receive instruction and guidance, well. This is important, yes, for at times, words may be inaccurate; but overall meaning/intent is understood anyway. It is very good that you are still helping this movement, even under great stress. We are very thankful and happy to have your cooperation. (Roland: It's my privilege to do that.)

JEREMIAH: Father Ham, in the Urantia Book there is a statement from Jesus in the Jesus papers. I quote: "People from another age will better understand the gospel of the kingdom when it is presented in terms expressive of family relationship." Can you comment on that please – because I know you use the term 'the kingdom' in the past – are we ready for this advanced concept?

HAM: Yes. When Jesus expressed man's relation to God using "Father and Son," he was speaking to an age of humans able to understand a loving parental relationship. Primitive clans, hordes, etc., are not as understanding of loving parental relationships as is relatively civilized mankind. Even in Christ's day the father patriarch was 'stern and feared,' and this was not meant to be expressive of the father/child relationship which He desired in using for this day. Today this higher understanding should be more understood. The foundation of great religious advancement has been overlooked in favor of olden ideas of God, even in the twentieth century. Are you understanding? (Jeremiah: Yes. Thank you, Teacher.)

LEN: Father Ham, I enjoyed the lesson tonight. I am very much pleased and love to hear the wisdom, the kindness, and the patience you and the other Teachers have presented to us. John and I both work at a place called Mark Miller Pontiac. We have much occasion to talk with others that are there. I feel that our being there together, at the same place at this time and with the same purpose, may have some significance. Is there any guidance you might have for the two of us for our purpose being there? How to handle ourselves? The second question: I would desire to know my spiritual name, and perhaps a time for a private meeting, please.

HAM: Use wisdom and discretion, especially around a certain female person working with you. She is not advanced spiritually and could be easily turned away from religion by overzealousness. At this time private meetings are being re-scheduled and it is hoped by Rebecca to have assistance from Roland for my communications in the future. I have no objections, for Roland is able to receive transmissions quite accurately. A few weeks more, I may ask him to assist – perhaps at first also employing Rebecca for accuracy-checking. Your spiritual name will be given at that time. You are very well proceeding having come through much hard road. We do not want to push you too quickly for you tend to become overwhelmed with responsibility feelings, and also, false guilt. So we will schedule later. (Len: Thank you very much).

RACHEL: Father Ham, the lady I introduced to you last week, Dorothy, she asked to be excused from these meetings for the next several weeks. She had already signed up for a course in meditation and those classes are all on Monday. (Ham: Thank you. I perceive it is growing late and I wish you all to rest well this evening for we have much ahead of us. Yes. Time will come for much activity soon. Yes.)

If there are no more pressing questions, are there? (Joshua: No, Father Ham). Ham: I will then bid you all a fond farewell for tonight.

Preface to Announcement by Ham - Los Angeles, CA 02/01/1992

This is an interjection - a Preface, to the upcoming transcript of Teacher Ham's historical Los Angeles meeting/Announcement. This meeting was in conjunction with the General Council Assembly of the Urantia Book Fellowship which was being held in Los Angeles this year. Ham had requested of his Woods Cross, Utah Teaching Mission group that he be scheduled to address this assembly/council - a request that was not accepted by the General Council. Ham insisted to meet, regardless, and arrangements were made for this historical 'announcement' (meeting) to be held in an adjacent location, and to invite the General Council Assembly. The Fellowships' president, Steven Dreier, had previously sent to the Woods Cross group a formal letter asking them to 'not' attend their event:

(Steven Dreier): The spirit of the Executive Committees decision is that no meeting between the Councilors and the Woods Cross Study group be scheduled anytime on the weekend of January 31, 1992, either formally or informally. We respectfully ask that you refrain from any attempt to involve the General Council in your activities during its January 1992 meeting. Should you ignore this request and proceed with your plans you will be attempting to impose your convictions upon a group of which you are not a part, and which is neither requested nor does it desire your presence. You will be interfering with the right of others to pursue their convictions as they see fit. We appeal to your sense of fairness and appropriateness in asking that you respect our right to reach our own decisions and that you allow us to structure our meeting as we think.

A commission from the Woods Cross group traveled to Los Angeles and arranged Ham's request not knowing the subject matter nor significance of Ham's intention. Some of the General Council did attend this meeting. Let it be understood that in previous years (1970's and 1980's) many of the Urantia Book community, and some even of its leadership, had felt somewhat spiritually swindled by their trust and experience with the persuasions and 'announcements' from one, Vern Grimsley, which had much to do with 'the impending doom' of planet Earth by way of a supposed and predicted WWII nuclear war.

Vern was quite the charismatic Urantia Book enthusiast. His movement was called 'The Family of God Foundation' (FOG) wherein he had impressive regular broadcasts on the Armed Forces Radio Network and Radio Free Europe – espousing his 'transmissions from celestial agencies' regarding the upcoming demise of planet Earth. Vern had convinced many in the Urantia Book readership community, including some of the leadership of the Urantia Foundation and the Urantia Fellowship (Brotherhood), to follow him in a large venture to save/shelter those that were selected to survive the demise. This included a significant land-purchase in California where the supporters and followers would be protected from the inevitable WWII and nuclear fallout, in underground bunkers.

Vern's predictions and transmissions were later shown to be without merit or incident, and as a result, the whole experience of 'celestial contact' seemed to be discarded by most in the UB community. Thereafter, most any such claim of 'contact' was met with the sentiments of: "Oh, here we go again."

Perhaps the baby was thrown out with the bathwater, so to speak, in the UB community's reasoning. Like Christianity, who says: 'We have our Bible and we need no more, and any other claim must be of the devil.' – that also became the 'general' sentiment within the Urantia Book community: 'We have our Urantia Book and we need no more celestial contact; any claims of such must be of sinister intent or man's ego-emanations.'

It is this writer's summation: The celestials have always been willing and available to communicate with mankind. Why would Father not want such! Much, perhaps even 'all,' of mankind's advancements has been a result of revelation from on high. The prevalent contention among the Teaching Mission naysayers is that such 'revelation from on high' is only to be given to today's soul-seeker by way of Spirit of Truth and/or from one's Thought Adjuster-nudging, and that anything else, anyone else, must be accounted as 'sinister' and not to be trusted.

Jesus taught that whosoever asks, receives – if asking with real intent. However, it is all too true that as soon as man gets a little celestial insight, he all too quickly seeks special notice or credit, and yields to self-aggrandizing. As history has shown, many (perhaps even most) of religion's leaders who have asked and received from on high did all too easily escalate into elitism, fanaticism, and mysticism – which in the aftermath has caused great skepticism, confusion and doubt toward most any celestial claim. But yet, not always! There were those who truly advanced the cause of truth; these were those who maintained a healthy balance of logic and reason in their pursuit of truth, beauty, and goodness – which balance has moved the masses toward a higher cosmic mindedness and has enhanced spiritual reality.

The Teaching Mission (which had its beginning in the late 1980's in New Zealand) likewise had its share of mysticism, fanaticism, and self-glory-seeking. Abraham had taught that "such is human life on an evolutionary world." Freewill reigns; and therefore, many egos were involved among these first years of the Mission enthusiasts. So much of the Teaching Mission's beauty, all too soon, became sullied by the many who wanted to be 'seen and heard;' and more often than not, had a book to sell about it.

In short, one might seek enlightenment from God, and when he gets even a slight revelatory answer the tendency is that all too often, he immediately begins to set himself up as special and as God's mini-savior to mankind rather than to simply accept that the revealed tip from the other side of the veil is intended for personal enlightenment - which elicits personal change, first and foremost, before heralding such to others.

As Abraham and Ham often taught in their transmissions, 'The human ego wants one to just talk about personal change and growth - but not actually do the hard work.' Hence, Melchizedek's announcement to those who were to assemble at this momentous Los Angeles meeting: "Welcome to Change." These teachings were to be made a living reality and, 'by example,' to be shown/worn in the lives of the Mission students.

It could be said that at the pinnacle of the Urantia movement in or around 1990--when emotions within the Urantia Book readership was astir, and on the heels of Vern Grimsley's FOG movement (that proved faulty)--the timing was ripe for a small group of Urantia Book students north of Salt Lake City (the Woods Cross group) to receive such a letter from a small sister-group of New Zealand truth-seekers who proclaimed they were under the direction of MachiventaMelchizedek and his former mortal associate, Abraham.

The New Zealand communique stated that not only was the Urantia Book a gift to mankind, but that the heavens were teeming with celestial assistants and Teachers who are ready to help each person bring the Urantia Book to life through daily living - and in so doing, no person is more special than another; "all are equal at Father's table." Melchizedek and his staff of teachers had strong admonitions against fanaticism, personal wish-fulfillment, proof-seeking, self-aggrandizing, and thoughts of self-importance. He taught his new students to instead become child-like - teachable; staying small while in loving service to one's fellows.

"The world will change one changed soul at a time," Abraham and Ham repeatedly taught their Woods Cross students. In Abraham's words: "The Urantia Book, is words on paper - those words cannot love, but you who embrace those words and implement them in daily living as you pass by, can exhibit that love."

The Teaching Mission had its 'U.S. -based' beginning early 1991. Abraham and Machiventa introduced the United States-based Teaching Mission, "the Correcting Time," to the Woods Cross group - under the tutelage of one, Ham, a former mortal from another world in our System, and who hailed here "from Edentia." And on February 1, 1992, Ham delivered this Welcome to Change proclamation to the whole of Urantia (Earth):

"This day marks the beginning of the Correcting Time. MachiventaMelchizedek has arrived and has been duly inaugurated as Acting Planetary Prince of Urantia, an assignment he has accepted from Michael. Long years we have awaited this day. The Lucifer Rebellion is officially ended in Nebadon. The circuits which have isolated your world are being reopened."

Ham was commissioned as the 'Coordinator' of the 'Teaching staff' comprised of former mortals, both male and female, hailing from Jerusem(our System Capital). Ham identified Abraham as his superior. Abraham said he was under MachiventaMelchizedek's direction, as Director of the Urantia Mortal Corps of Destiny. All acknowledge they are administrators in Michael's Correcting Time Teaching Mission on Urantia (Earth).

Many within the Urantia Book community hail that the UB is clear - that "former mortals do not come back to their worlds of material origin." [emphasis added.] The Urantia Book states clearly to the contrary:

146:7.2 Jesus further explained to his apostles that the spirits of departed human beings do not come back to the world of their origin to communicate with their living fellows. Only after the passing of a dispensational age would it be possible for the advancing spirit of mortal man to return to Earth and then only in exceptional cases and as a part of the spiritual administration of the planet."

A valid question is: Does that 'spiritual administration' make contact with humans?

According to our Correcting Time Teaching Mission administrators, these lessons of the Woods Cross Transcripts contain those lessons mortals receive once they awaken on the first Mansion World - but Michael has decreed to be made available to mortals of this world before death. They are those lessons that will lead this world into 'the first stages of light and life.'

In all the transmissions to the Woods Cross Group there are no Armageddon "end of the world" type teachings. Nor was there any 'warnings' for that matter, as were in Vern Grimsley's FOG experience. Rather, all lessons are about personal change and training mortal students to become better living examples patterned after "the Wayshower" - Jesus of Nazareth, as expressed in the Urantia Book. Los Angeles ANNOUNCEMENT | Arrival of Prince Machiventa | Welcome To Change

[This 'Announcement to Urantia' and the Urantia Book community was scheduled and held at the time of the Urantia Fellowship General Council's annual meeting held this year in Los Angeles, California. It was held at the Quality Inn Conference Room adjacent to the L.A.X. International Airport. The Woods Cross Group was originally a study group of the Urantia Fellowship. The Fellowship (and also the Urantia Foundation) had, for the most part, refused to accept the Teaching Mission's validity as of the date of this transmission, and even as of the date of this updated narration - June 2022.]

WELCOME TO CHANGE

HAM: The Light of God surrounds us. The Love of God enfolds us. The Power of God protects us. The Presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are He is.

My profound and sincere greetings to you all this evening. I am Ham. I have been commissioned to bring the light of truth and the understanding of our Father to Urantia. I am one of many Teachers. All of us are awaiting the greater reception of our words and we are desirous of placing many Teachers among you. One moment. [connection was difficult.] Great is our Mission – understand this in your hearts. One moment. [Pause.]

The time has arrived for an expanded level of truth to begin correction. We come not for ourselves. No, indeed; rather are we in service of Michael.

This day marks the beginning of the Correcting Time. Machiventa Melchizedek has arrived and has been duly inaugurated as Acting Planetary Prince of Urantia, an assignment he has accepted from Michael.

Long years we have awaited this day. The Lucifer Rebellion is officially ended in Nebadon. The circuits which have isolated your world are being reopened. All these changes are occurring by and in accordance with the plan of Michael. Happy and joyous is this day. Blessed in the sight of our Lord. Gracious listeners, I bid you, welcome to change. We mark the beginning of the reign of Prince Machiventa on this day. Questions are welcome. Indeed, happy am I to serve you.

JOSHUA: Does anyone have any questions?

QUESTION: Ham, I am Bob. Would you please comment on the purpose, the scope, and if possible, some timetable information of your Mission, activity, program? Which of the three terms would be best?

HAM: Mission is best. Yes. Plans at present are as follows:

1.) Initiation and expansion of the Teaching Corps. Many of you will desire to receive personal instruction. At present we are preparing a group of Teachers who are in the first phase of our Teaching Mission. The mortals brought under their teaching and guidance are in our corps of elite, who will in the future become teachers themselves, as themselves, not in an intermediary position as is Rebecca tonight. Spiritual enlightenment, individual and group and national and planetary progress, is anticipated.

2.) Also, along with the spiritual uplifting, we are anticipating and desiring cooperation in other areas of human life endeavors as well – chiefly: economic, political, social, environmental, and technical changes. Of course, we are anticipating many years duration of these initial phases of our Mission.

3.) I am commissioned to announce also the third aspect of our Teaching Ministry Mission, and that is as preparatory for an even greater Teacher. Michael has prepared the way. We are expanding the way. A Teacher Son will complete the way toward Light and Life on Urantia. Time, I cannot adequately and accurately foresee and comment upon.

QUESTION: Ham, this is Sarah. There is a concern in this group from many people about the validity of this experience. There are many here that think that it is a psychological phenomenon or a subconscious phenomenon or an ego-centered phenomenon, and this interferes with the transmission. I would like to ask if there is a way that you could let us know what is the reality and the truth of what is going on, and how are we to know, as individuals, if this experience is just a subconscious kind of phenomena? I think this is an extremely important thing to address. Thank you.

HAM: Understood and appreciated. I cannot tell you anything which will be convincing. All of you must, and will, decide on your own the validity of my words. Only by and through the message and reaction with your indwelling Spirit will there be witness to truth. I can only provide this living truth. It is often, but not always, unrecognized. I have taught for eleven months, and in the main, my words have been received accurately. Yes, there have been errors and mistakes made. I am not a perfect being, oh no. I am as are you, ascending; and as an imperfect being, I come before you.

QUESTION: Hi, Ham. My name is... [inaudible.] I am a mother of young children. Ninety-nine percent of my life has to do with focusing/concentrating on raising and the teaching of them right now. I find that the other one percent generally gets spent doing things for myself. What I am curious about is – because my life is so focused right now on raising my children, doing my best to live the life that I understand Jesus to have taught us to live – I am asking how your teachings may differ from what I have already chosen to follow in the Master's teaching, as I've understood it, and which I have chosen to follow. I ask you that in relation to my children because I feel like I have a really excellent plan. So I am curious to know, in terms of what I teach my children, I am curious to know if you forecast giving us information that it is going to be something new? or is what you're going to be giving us by and large a restatement of the truth Jesus has shown us, and continues to show us in the Urantia Papers? I wonder if you could comment on that. (Ham: Correct. Our Mission is involving only the re-statement of the living gospel.)

[Someone asked a question in Spanish – Ham did not reply immediately.]

QUESTION: Ham, I am Bob. I would speak for my brothers and sisters who don't have any problem here with your validity – there are a few of us out here. I would send our greeting, our collective greeting, and they can stand up and join me if they want to; but I don't care, I am standing here. How wonderful to be involved in this occasion, and I welcome the acting Planetary Prince, Machiventa Melchizedek, wearer of three blue concentric circles. Thank you.

HAM: Thank you. I have enough trouble with English. [laughter.] I ask for the former question to be re-stated.

QUESTION: The question was: Do you have any direct message or comment from Michael Himself as to what He has in store for us as readers of the Urantia Book? If there are specific roles that He wants us to do?

HAM: I must not speak in substitution for Him; your personal relation with Him being foremost – but yes, love one another. Love our Father. Understand the gospel. Make your lives a living testament to the truth. That is all.

QUESTION: My name is Phil. I mean no disrespect to anyone, but I must ask this question: The Urantia Book tells us that most of what we accept as inspiration is the emanation of our own intellect. We have in the Urantia Book a revelation which is both spiritually valid and factually accurate. I have had the opportunity to listen to a number of the tapes, including three of them having to do with the announcement that Gabriel would make a visitation. And I am trying to understand how such an event could have occurred because as some of us know, Gabriel did not make an appearance. My question is – and I should say that I know that you, Ham, have taken full responsibility for the occurrence, saying that you fully expected Gabriel's appearance – my question is: Did Gabriel fail to show up and leave us or leave the Utah study group waiting, and also yourself, waiting? or did you, Ham, schedule this without confirmation? The only possible third explanation I can think of is, while the spiritual content of the messages out of the core seem very valid, perhaps the factual part indicates that it emanated from Rebecca's deep mind. Can you comment on the question?

HAM: Certainly. I, Ham, have explained the event you have described and have found a spiritual vantage point wherein I understand it fully. To explain this in entirety to your human understanding is impossible. It is only by faith and spiritual awareness that these seemingly inexplicable occurrences are understood – not by the mere mental thought-logic pattern. Morontia mota is similar; an understanding of the spiritual is not capable through a mere intellect awareness – it is a blending of deep spiritual insight bringing awareness together with thought and logic, which is mota. The purely intellectual reasoning will never be entirely satisfying to any of you. That is all.

QUESTION: I think that the teachings that you have shared are quite beautiful, but I must admit that I have learned a few things from a member of the Woods Cross group that cause me to have grave and serious doubts in your Mission. I will say the three things that I have learned; and since you have made bold to come before us all, I will make bold to speak my mind so if there is truth to this, we can bring it out.

1.) I have heard that a member of the Woods Cross group is the spiritual head of the reserve corps of destiny.

2.) I have heard that another member of the Woods Cross group is the next John the Baptist.

3.) I have heard that still, another member of the Woods Cross group is the next Abraham.

I was wondering if you could comment on this and perhaps shed some light on their aspect in your Mission.

HAM: 1) Incorrect. 2) Possible. 3) Incorrect.

QUESTION: Hi. I am Marvin. About seven or eight years ago I was part of a group of about thirty-five or forty people who were convinced with varying degrees of conviction that one of our members was receiving messages from higher up. [Editor's note: This was likely referring to the 'Family of God' movement spearheaded by one Vern Grimsley, which had many followers/believers. Marvin continues...] We went through a very difficult experience, very difficult for us personally, psychologically, emotionally and spiritually - very challenging and testing. As I look back on that experience, I am quite clear that each and every one of us had a motivation for being part of that group and for continuing to participate in it; and, for continuing to believe in the validity of the messages - they were very human motivations. They were means for self-importance; for having a special status; for being part of something big and glorious and grand. They were young and idealistic, but the whole phenomenon wasn't real. I don't think I am addressing anyone but Rebecca right now. I don't think there is anyone else up there. I think you (Rebecca) have, as does everyone, a complex mind that is capable of partitioning for various purposes, reality and experience. And, that the mind can partition reality and experience as different things and feel like other parts of it is speaking, which serves our motivations and what we want. And so I ask you, Rebecca, and I'd ask all the people there involved in this experience: How much time have you spent looking carefully and with integrity at your motivation in doing this? What is it bringing you? What are you getting out of it by having all these people sit here listening to you for a nice stretch of time? How much time have you spent looking at that motivation, and what have you found out as a result of looking at the depth of your motivation? That's my question. (Ham: No comment.)

QUESTION: My name is Ross. I have a twofold question. First: Aside from what you said today about there being a new Teacher in the group, and a new kind of corps coming to Urantia - Is there anything you could tell us that was not able to be transmitted during the original Urantia Book transmissions - something that was left out that we might find encouraging or enlightening today. And secondly: Since the circuits are now opening due to the end of the Lucifer Rebellion, can you tell us what that entails and what else that might mean? If there is any kind of glimmer or something we might see that might let us know that that's come to pass?

HAM: Yes. There is much within the Urantia Book that is preparatory to this Teaching Mission. The Teachers are expanding, and will continue to expand, your spiritual understanding of reality. The actual evidence of the opening of the system circuits will be realized in your life-experience. Much change will you see and experience and witness among the people of Urantia. Have faith, have courage, my son and friend. Yes.

QUESTION: Ham, my name is... [inaudible.] In the Urantia culture--through many seers like Nostradamus, and through certain other interpretations such as in Revelations in the Bible--there have been many channelers in the twentieth century that have contacted people, 'extraterrestrial civilizations' and the like - all with the notion of an inevitable 'doomsday' or 'Armageddon' type scenario which is supposedly a certainty for our planet. Is such a doomsday scenario part of Michael of Nebadon's master plan? (Ham: No. Unequivocally not! No.)

QUESTION: My second question is: There are to be ten-million inhabited planets in our local universe of Nebadon; and at the same time there are one-hundred-fifty-billion stars, approximately, in our galaxy of the Milky Way, measured with our crude primitive optical astronomy. My question: Is the local universe of Nebadon a part, a section of, the Milky Way galaxy? or if it is bigger, how many galaxies does it include? (Ham: A part, section, yes.)

QUESTION: Our astronomers have discovered that there is one-hundred-fifty-billion galaxies in a sphere of twenty-billion light-years around us. Is this all included in the superuniverse of Orvonton? or are we really able to see parts of 'outer galaxies,' superuniverses, and/or possibly part of the central universe? (Ham: Outer. Outer universes. Correct.)

QUESTION: And my final question is: Usually channelers are tested for veracity by asking a question that is not in their personal field of expertise. I would ask a question from physics for the disbelievers in this auditorium. The Urantia Book mentions that antigravity is a physical phenomenon proportional to the [inaudible] variables that our physicists already know. There are forty-eight references to antigravity in the Urantia Book, and in eight of them there are specifically mentioned these two 'other' variables that antigravity is proportional to; directionally proportional meaning, the higher the other two variables the bigger the effect of antigravity. (Ham: You are mistaken in your question. I am in concurrence with the Urantia revelation, entirely. I am sorry.)

QUESTION: First of all, I join my new friend Bob, and hopefully, the people of my study group that I read with, in welcoming you to the now infamous Quality Inn at LAX. [laughter.] It's kind of a solemn atmosphere in here, but I, for one, was moved to tears when you announced what you had to say; and if it wasn't for the presence of so many disbelievers I would probably be jumping and screaming. So I welcome you and with an open heart. My question is: Now that we are going through this transformation, are there material foodstuffs that we can partake of that would increase the communication with our spiritual selves and this new encirclement that we are undergoing? (Ham: No. It is an entirely spiritual transformation. In your daily dietary intake, use wisdom. Your own scientific understanding is entirely adequate.)

QUESTION: Okay. Thank you, Teacher. My second question is if I am known by a different spiritual name than the one that I am currently using? (Ham: These names will be made manifest to your awarenesses soon.) Reply: Thank you, Teacher, and welcome again.

QUESTION: My name is Joe. One simple question: You made reference to an elite corps as possibly becoming new teachers themselves. I am curious, and am wondering if they are outside of the "Urantia Book" readership? That's all.

HAM: Most of the receivers of our teachings are all eventually and purposely brought to the Urantia Book, for it is extremely accurate. In many of our teaching lessons, there are some inaccuracies - which are inevitable when you consider this type of communication. The Urantia Book is a bedrock of knowledge for you to build upon and we are encouraging its greater study and understanding. Yes.

QUESTION: When you stated that there will be a new corps of human teachers who will be acting for the celestial government but not through channels like you – who will be directing them and how will we discern their personal normal actions from these new actions?

HAM: I understand. It is a difficult question for there are many, many people involved. It is, indeed, unnecessary for you to concern yourself with others' actions, for you only should concern yourself with yourself. I am authorized to appoint Teachers and am doing so by request at present. These Teachers will give instruction which you must discern and evaluate individually; it is entirely free of individual conflicts between the Teachers, for we are in harmony with one another. Conflicts may arise between humans and you must humanly settle them, for it is not our place.

QUESTION: Hello, Ham. My name is Leslie and I welcome you; and I also welcome all the other spiritual beings that might be in this room with all of us tonight. You speak of inaccuracies through these communications by possibly yourself, or others, that might be receiving information as Rebecca is; we all know how the Urantia Book came through – are there also inaccuracies in the writings of the Urantia Book through the personalities which claimed to have presented it? That is my question. (Ham: Very few, and these are so very minor as to be negligible. It is very accurate.)

QUESTION: Greetings, Ham. I, for myself, want to thank you for coming here with all of these brave souls from Utah who have come to share with us. I can imagine that it is likely, that as people leave this assembly there will be a variety of feelings and attitudes and points of view. I wonder if you would comment on the role of your Teaching staff to promote personal brotherhood in love and good cheer, and especially a good sense of humor in this whole business.

HAM: Thank you. We are, all of us, attempting to follow the way of the Wayshower. It is His will and greatest desire for you to know His life and teaching. You all know His words. I need not say any more.

QUESTION: Greetings, Ham. My name is Wally. In two sessions with the Salt Lake study group on October 7th and 14th, there is mention of a temple to be built. Could you elaborate on its purpose and where it's planned to be built? (Ham: No, not at present. Sorry.)

QUESTION: Hello, Ham. My name is Mark. I have a great appreciation for the beings working in our behalf--your co-workers, so to speak--and the difficulty they have in getting us to look at new things and do new things. In some of the previous times on this planet, when the celestials felt it necessary, they simply visualized in front of a group of people or a certain individual, as did Gabriel's appearance to Mary. Why don't you use that technique so your message is not so ambiguous to us; and there is no doubt who you are then? (Ham: It is not Father's will.)

QUESTION: Hello, Ham and Rebecca. My name is Richard. Can you tell me a little bit about how the cosmic mind can be used in determining the validity of such phenomenon as yourself? (Ham: I am not a phenomenon.) [laughter.]

QUESTION: Let me re-state that: [laughter.] How we can determine the validity of the realness of your teaching?

HAM: Yes. Just as you all have experienced the workings of the Spirit of Truth, and also the effect of your indwelling Spirit in testifying to you of the truth of the Urantia Book itself, I can say nothing more than that.

QUESTION: Also, I have another question. You said earlier that you are to just “re-state the messages of the Urantia Book.” Will there be other personalities transmitting and receiving, as is Rebecca, that might be able to add new revelatory information?

HAM: Of course, many others besides Rebecca. She is only one of a great many mortals who are, at present, being prepared for the same mission. (Thank you).

QUESTION: Ham, my human name is Duane (Faw). You ask me to provide you with an opportunity to address the members of the General Council of the Fellowship. I wonder if you have any particular message that you would like to make to the General Council per se. I'll stop at that question.

HAM: No, Andrew. There is nothing further or special for them. It is only by their reception of this announcement which one is counted on for this particular event. All of our proceedings have been monitored and watched. It is of a greater and more far-reaching importance than you now realize.

Thank you all for coming. I am pleased with the results. I hope to be in your presences again in the future and am so very happy to be selected to make this announcement to you. My greetings, my love, my hope, all go with you this evening. Thank you, Rebecca, for this service. You are well loved, also. I am preparing now for leaving. Farewell.

Report On The Success Of The Announcement In Los Angeles

Greetings this evening, I am Ham. I am your Teacher. I am pleased to announce to you the following: Our meeting in Los Angeles among the General Council members and myself was very successful. We are very happy and joyous that even a few who were at the announcement immediately understood and believed our message. Many had been previously prepared by their inner spiritual force. One moment.

As I was saying, pleased and happy are we with the announcement results. You are going to see and experience the work of God firsthand. My words, though factual in nature, also contain spiritual inner content; and this inner content is sure to bring many many people to awareness of the actuality of this teaching.

Very grateful and pleased am I with the conduct and spiritual understanding which you all exhibited. All were buffeted by the wind of doubt and fearful antagonism - which was exhibited by some of our new friends, yes.

Eventually, even those most vehement in rejection at this time may one day wish to change attitudes; we should all be prepared to welcome them in sympathetic understanding and rejoice in their decision. Hold no grudges. Reject no man. Always stand ready to open the door of brotherly love and acceptance. Many celestial eyes were watching those proceedings, and a great host of angels surrounded the room/building - and, Rebecca. All of these spiritual helpers will work for the advancement of skeptics.

Good is the skeptical attitude when warranted. We must be so unthreatening as to be inviting. Never force an opinion. Always show courtesy and respect for the opinions of others - even when we disagree with them; even when we know they are false. "A soft word turns away wrath" - always remember that, for in this manner, triumph is assured. Little ground can be gained through an emotional, or even an intellectual argument, for only defensive action (which usually cements one's position) is usually the result.

Listen to all newcomers, understand their anxieties, fears, and doubts. Begin to love them as a brother or sister. Sympathize as best you can with their position. When complete non-threatening atmosphere is displayed, then a defensive person becomes willing to change attitudes and opinions. Force and argument never work.

Surely this Los Angeles meeting-experience was a beginning of what you will see in the future - a wide range of reactions and opinions. We will rely now upon the Spirit to work to bring forth these seeds as small sprouts. The seed was planted; God will send His sunlight and rain. We supply the seed; they supply the soil. If the soil is fertile, the seed will bring forth a hundredfold. We cannot control this soil, for it has been the results of a person's lifetime.

You have done very well, my son and friend, Joshua. Much will be required of you; you have stood firm in the winds of adversity directly resultant from your efforts on my behalf. I thank you. And my thanks also from Prince Machiventa Melchizedek. He also wishes to give thanks to Andrew, Rebecca, John, David, James, Roinda, Jason, Roland and Jeremiah for taking our task/Mission so sincerely and seriously. All of you were shining lights to many. You have performed a great and noble service which is to be rewarded in even greater service. I will receive a few questions.

JOSHUA: Father Ham, thank you very much for those kind words, but if that is what the winds of adversity are I don't know what joy is. That was wonderful. Bob of Arcadia, California, who as you know is the person who stood up and addressed you in the public meeting as a believer and wanted to stand up and be counted, has requested that his group receive a Teacher. His wife, Bonnie, says a Teacher has been preparing her for years and that she would like very much to be the transmission-receiver for a Teacher. She wants to express her gratitude for the love and understanding she has received. She is very grateful and appreciative. She would also like to know if her Teacher's name is Estarra?

HAM: Yes, her name is Estarra. She is a great Teacher and loving friend for them. Her association has grown from unconscious preparation, slowly, into a more conscious manner. To Bob and Bonnie: Estarra would like to begin teaching as soon as possible and would like to make a definite appointment for Saturday at 3 p.m., at your home. Please be patient and careful in your receiving and transmitting of her message. It may be a little tiring at first, for you will have some anxiety connected with this. I am happy for you. You have been long serving and gracious companions for Estarra. She has given many favorable accounts or reports before our committee. Yes.

RACHEL: Father Ham, I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate you and Rebecca on your very successful presentation in Los Angeles. I would also like to thank and praise our members that were present, and for the beautiful job they did in representing our group. Congratulations, everybody. (Ham: Thank you.)

JOHN: Father Ham, I just wanted to say thanks also to you and the rest of the planetary government, and all the unseen help we had there. I appreciate it. (Ham: Acknowledged.)

JAMES: Teacher, I had occasion on Saturday night to speak to a man by the name of Martin. I had a good conversation with him. And Sunday, Jeremiah was kind enough to share with me his copy of the tape of the Idaho meeting where Daniel addressed their group. It seemed to me that the contents of that tape addressed very poignantly the very topics that Martin and I were talking about the previous night. I'd like permission to send that tape to him - both your permission and Daniel's, and anyone else's that might be appropriate. Would this be permissible?

HAM: Yes, with a cautionary note - the Pocatello group is not ready for strong public exposure at present. Soon they will be better prepared. Use caution in your accompanying remarks.

JAMES: Would you suggest that maybe I put into writing and send that, rather than the tape - and omit the origin of this tape? just explain that it's a different group functioning elsewhere in the United States? (Ham: Yes. Very good.) James: Okay. Thank you, Teacher.

ELWARD: I am trying to understand the Unqualified Absolute. Would an accurate definition be the aspect that makes freewill possible?

HAM: No. For the Unqualified Absolute contains within, a freewill aspect. Difficult is this subject and hard it is for me to explain in English to your own level of comprehension. The Unqualified Absolute is a Deity of completeness, carrying 'within' the seeds of reality as we know it. Reality, however, is unstable in its unfolding. The Unqualified Absolute is stable. I will one day address this subject with more depth. (Elward: Thank you).

ROLAND: Teacher Ham, I'd like to express the feeling of cosmic connectedness/citizenship that I felt in Los Angeles during the weekend. It seemed like there were a hundred spiritual beings for every individual - at least it felt that way. I thank you very much for the opportunity to have been there. Two things were said in the address to the body of people who had assembled to hear your teachings that seemed to be new to me. One: That the Teaching Mission will be augmented by mortal teachers who will be prepared to teach the new and expanded gospel – was that part of the message? or did I misunderstand that? (Ham: Yes. You are being so prepared. Yes.) Roland: Thank you. The other, and it may not have been clear: The word ‘phase.’ That, I had not heard you say before; that the fifth epochal revelation, the Urantia Book itself, was the first ‘phase’ of the Correcting Time; and the second phase is your Teaching Mission. It seems to me like the Trinity Teacher Son is a big phase far-off into future; and I don't know – are there other phases between now and the Trinity Teacher Son, that we are able to know about?

HAM: Yes. There will be many such phases between now and the coming of the Trinity Teacher Son. This group is an example for others, for you have been experiencing our teaching the longest; and you will experience this plan/phase of the teaching ministry earlier than most. I can only speak of the two I mentioned earlier. Our teaching to you, your learning and then your subsequent teaching, are all connected together at this time. Many people you are even now teaching, though not formally. It is this personal ministry which we hope to foster at present.

ROLAND: I understand that the preparation for mortal teachers is in the experience of these meetings, as well as reading and understanding of the Urantia Book. I am very much impressed with the idea that there is deep-mind teaching going on. It manifests itself in my experience as a ringing in the ear. Can you confirm that?

HAM: Yes. It is occurring. The inner Spirit works for preparation mainly through deep-mind adjustments and preparing for future events – so that ‘shock and fear’ are lessened; and also, the readiness for action, is heightened. Yes.

ROLAND: I had an experience. It was as if someone else was talking ‘through me’ during an interchange with some of the people who were at the conference during the last weekend. It seemed to me like some of that was directed by my indwelling Spirit as well as the Teachers who were present at the meeting. Can you confirm that? (Ham: Yes. You are led by your Spirit well and, are learning to rely upon His guidance and overcontrol.)

JOHN: Father Ham, a few of us were talking in California about distributing the meetings’ transcripts when people ask for them. I assume people will be asking for them. We are seeking your advice if we should cut out all the personal questions, and references to things like ‘the Sonarington project’ out of them before we send them out?

HAM: It is wise and appropriate to use your own best judgment. I will not censor anything, personally. You may edit and control the giving of information with wisdom and foresight using what you have learned in these past few weeks, and especially this past weekend. Use your own intelligent judgment. (John: Okay. Thank you).

RACHEL: Father Ham, is Lanaforge still our System Sovereign? (Ham: Yes.) Rachel: Has he visited Urantia since the Lucifer Rebellion has been adjudicated? (Ham: Yes, once, for a short time.)

RACHEL: Thank you. Now that Prince Melchizedek is with us, will we be receiving an Adam and Eve or a Vicegerent Adam of Urantia? (Ham: This is not projected for many years – perhaps even more than one thousand.) Rachel: Thank you, Father Ham.

LEN: Father Ham, during this meeting I have had an overwhelming nudge inside of me to ask if there is someone back in my hometown of Tridell, Utah that I should send a book to, and the name that came to me was my uncle DeVon. If so, should I send a book anonymously? He'd probably read it easier than if he knew where it came from – his 'wayward nephew' here.

HAM: You can use your best judgment. Be unafraid to give this great work and stand behind it with assurance.

LEN: Thank you. That helps a lot. I'll do that.

JAMES: Teacher, when you said that we could edit with good judgment some of your teachings, could we interpret that to mean that in some cases to rearrange a sentence, bearing in mind that we would be trying to preserve our understanding of your intended meaning?

HAM: Yes, it would help the readability in some cases. Of course proceed, as your intention is clearly for the best. Worry not over trifles. (James: Very good. Thank you very much.)

LORAIN: In the future, when feeling lack, is there any way I can draw nearer? Is there any suggestion you can give me to help me draw nearer to my Thought Adjuster in these times?

HAM: Your wish and intentions are known and you will gradually experience that which you seek. One further question?

JOSHUA: This question may be premature; and if so, I'll understand: At our transmission in California, you mentioned that other than the spiritual teachings, that the group, on your side, would get involved in economics, politics, the environment, technology – and I can't remember what else. Could you elaborate on that? or is it too early.

HAM: These things will be Spirit led, yes, and will be made more plain and clear in time; and yes, will straighten the road of material progress. It is unwise for me to say any more at present. I am very proud of our work accomplished together, and am so very pleased to be among the privileged as I am.

I send you my prayers tonight for each and every one of you. You all hold a special place within me of love and a feeling of cherishing. So happy I am to serve Michael, to serve our Prince Melchizedek, and to serve you, my friends and children. I love you dearly. Goodnight.

Beauty Appreciation and Value Understanding Equals Spiritual Perception

[Editor's note: This meeting may be considered the pinnacle of excitement for this new Teaching Mission – at least for those of the Woods Cross group on the heels of the Los Angeles 'Announcement.' As the apostles of Jesus' day were cautioned about becoming imbalanced spiritually – which easily leads to instability and even fanaticism – Ham (and Abraham in years following) gave much caution about becoming too top-heavy spiritually. This transmission was again, such a caution.]

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. This evening I wish to announce a change in our teaching schedule. Beginning next week, we have arranged a different approach, one which it is hoped will meet the needs of all at least somewhat better; Roland has accepted his role/responsibility as transmission-receiver, as Rebecca does. It will be good for you to recognize my personal being in association with another mortal. I would like Roland to receive the transmission for next weeks' Monday meeting.

You are all beginning to perceive reality using spiritual vision; we are endeavoring, through teaching and experience, to enlarge this perception. Many years are required to even begin perception of true mota; it requires the soul to become perceptive and experiencing, coupled with the intellectual understanding, together. This dual perception is the beginning of mota.

You may not perceive reality well in using only intellect or, only spirit. The true blending of these two, results in a combined perception experience which transcends either one alone. Philosophy, (or theology) is man's intellectual approach to reality. Metaphysics and various spiritisms are a spiritual approach to reality. These two are both limited, erroneous, and easily toppled/broken by themselves – for the over-extension in either direction is inherently unstable.

Ponder the spiritual value of a child if you would: There is in this understanding, a combination of direct value-perception, to a degree, and, the intellectual understanding of the child 'as a creature of God.' The love from God for the child is the key to understanding this perception. Is everyone following? (Risdon: For myself, I would say, no.)

HAM: Very well. It is your future in understanding, if you will. This is meant to help your balanced growth by promoting deep thought.

Consider instead a beautiful tree whose loveliness begins to be truly appreciated. Impossible it is to be in complete harmony with God's infinite understanding/appreciation. Gradually we can approach His understanding through spiritual insight. And sensing this great beauty is not only through the intellect (that is, mechanical sight and mind reception), but with spiritual perception. You may count the branches, you may note their color, you may see if there are buds on them, or birds nesting therein – these things you may see, but again, the understanding of God's work is in spiritual perception.

This perception is beyond sensory – being truly a morontial experience where we are in 'beauty appreciation;' it is coming a step closer toward 'value perception.' All true value is from the Father and is consisting of an expression of Himself.

Beauty exists everywhere. It behooves us, in humility, to stand before the beauties of nature, in awe, to begin this understanding. How small are we? How impotent we are in the face of the creations of God. If tonight were clear I would suggest looking at the stars before you retire. Pause to ponder on this vast creation of infinite variations and spectacular beauty. Allow your ego to be humbled and childlike, for it is truth and the only proper attitude.

Also, when pondering and reflecting upon the glory of our Father, consider that you are His child; how special you are to Him. It is truly comprehensible, yes, that One who is all-powerful in all things is, in fact, your Father. Allow this to help you grow inside, in stature and in worth to Him. Allow not the trivial ego-centered self to dominate the true spiritual-potential self – the emerging self. Do you see my meaning? Are there further questions?

RACHEL: Good evening, Father Ham. May I thank you for a beautiful lesson, and may I also extend our congratulations to Roland. We have a newcomer with us this evening. Her name is also, Rachel. She is new to our group, but she is not new to the Urantia Book – she has had hers for about fifteen years. Up till about five years ago she did attend Joshua's study group for eight to ten years. Also, Joshua received a letter from Keith and Pat, from Duluth, Minnesota. They are absolutely thrilled – as he said here in his statement: “I have just become aware of the most wondrous news of the direct contact of the spiritual government with your group in Utah. I was made aware of this through my long-time friends, Loren and Ila, in Kansas City. Fantastic!” They are so thrilled and happy about this, Father Ham, that he has requested that he be given anything to do; anything that he can help with the cause, he is willing to do so. He also wants to know if it would be alright for him to come here to Utah to one of our meetings? Would this be permissible?

HAM: Yes, of course, and assure him that he is welcome within the growing circle of those who are receiving teachings. His ready acceptance is a testament to his already strong spiritual contact, and he is most heartily welcomed.

RACHEL: Thank you. Also, last Saturday, Father Ham, I had a long conversation with a member of a study group in San Diego. They had previously asked for a Teacher. They had been a little disenchanted through a number of things that have happened – however, they are still wanting a Teacher. They are waiting patiently for someone in their group to be contacted as a transmission-receiver. Is this forthcoming before too long? Or, do you have something you would like to say to this group? You certainly have my permission to check my mind or memory on this, or anything else at any time.

HAM: Thank you. It is only a trial period they are going through. All have experienced this and are certainly made stronger. The entire purpose of life on Urantia is for testing and trial. Yes, spiritual growth does result from this testing; hard though it seems. In retrospect, life is made more sure and steady by this manner of testing. Yes, it involves all parts of the person, and greatly upsets (or shakes) the very foundations of faith sometimes; and this is wisely done. Forget not whose will we do, and know that His ultimate purpose will come to pass – no matter what plans, expectations or disappointed hopes we have in the interim. I am also tested here in my morontia existence as a teacher on Urantia, for this is part of my training also. Not only do I come to serve, but to serve for a purpose of finding God further, myself. (Rachel: Thank you, Father Ham.)

JOSHUA: Father Ham, Bonnie, in Arcadia, California would like to hear your opinion on how she did as a transmission-receiver last Saturday.

HAM: A little shaky but willing; and this willingness is the key for ultimate success, with practice. I say to her: Fear not that you are erring, for in time these errors are made right; it is nothing serious for now. Also, be patient and unhurried. Consider that Rebecca has had eleven months of intensive training in this transmission receiving process. In watching her it is deceptively easy, yes, but it is the result of practice and increasing trust on her part, including her trust in me. It is hard at first to trust these words, they sometimes seem foreign and not to make sense. It is easier if you forget the 'make sense' of it and trust the words to flow of their own. If a word has been incorrectly spoken, usually you will sense a pause, a withdrawal of communication for a moment, and perhaps a correction. Be at ease in this process, for time is required to develop proficiency.

JOSHUA: Thank you very much. Bill, of Lawrence, Kansas, desires permission to hear Jolene's tapes of your lessons. And their group also requests a Teacher, if possible. (Ham: Permission granted, yes. A request is submitted, as before. There are nine new groups becoming ready to receive Teachers and all may do so fairly soon.)

JOSHUA: Thank you. Now that the knowledge of your teaching is spreading around the nation, do you still require approval before we can give tapes to various individuals that ask?

HAM: You may use your best judgment. The early time is passed, yes, and now becomes the more public part of our task. First, it is best for the Teacher to hold the group closely as a group, and yet, teach each, individually. When the student becomes adept at incorporating these teachings on a personal level, then comes time for greater teaching of higher spiritual truth; and then for the pupils to begin practice in teaching others. It is easy to be swept up in early enthusiasm - which could lead one into danger of spiritual disappointment, or to fall. This time needed for careful learning, reflection and incorporating, for many, has been stepped over. I would say that you, my students, are ready to withstand many earthly troubles and hostilities toward our teachings, for these teachings are now a living and exemplary part of you.

JOSHUA: Thank you very much. Andrew called me this morning and asked me to ask you some questions in which he had asked their Teacher yesterday, and was referred to you. May I ask these questions? (Ham: Yes.) Joshua: First, he wants to make the following statement: I believe in order to maximize the impact of your address in Los Angeles, I feel it advisory to mail to each of the General Council a transcript of your message. I volunteer to do so. First question: Is this a fruitful endeavor?

HAM: It is difficult to say. Many have hardened their positions and are reluctant to listen with spiritual perception, they find it easier to pick a flaw which they perceive invalidates our Mission. It is hard to predict what the outcome may be. Use your best wisdom and insight. I am relying on that.

JOSHUA: Thank you. I will go ahead and read the rest of the questions and then just leave this up to him. Also he asks: Should he enclose the transcript of only the message part of the Los Angeles meeting? or of the entire proceeding? (Ham: I will not answer.) Joshua: Okay. Thank you. In drafting a cover memorandum, Andrew wishes to make certain assertions. May I read these assertions for your comment on each? (Ham: Yes.) Joshua: Is he correct in stating that the case of Gabriel versus Lucifer has been finally and fully adjudicated by the Ancient of Days, and that all rebels, including the leaders, either were granted mercy or have ceased to exist? (Ham: Yes.) Joshua: Two: That MachiventaMelchizedek has been appointed and installed as acting Planetary Prince of Urantia and now resides here on Urantia? (Ham: Yes.) Joshua: Three: That the public meeting in Los Angeles, to which the General Council members were invited, was to publicly and formally announce this momentous and joyous event? (Ham: Correct.) Joshua: Four: That, among other things, Machiventa has organized a Teaching Mission to parallel or supplement the Urantia Book, and that this Teaching Mission is the second phase of the Fifth Epochal Revelation? (Ham: Correct.) Joshua: Five: That you, Teacher Ham, are in charge of this mission? (Ham: Incorrect.) Joshua: Six: That Father Abraham is either an advisor, or a Teacher, or both, to this mission? (Ham: I owe allegiance to Abraham. He is my supervisor.) Joshua: Thank you. Seven: That it is wise for the Fellowship to neither endorse nor oppose the Teaching Mission? (Ham: No comment.) Joshua: Eight: Would this letter be more effective if signed by Thern, or Duane, or both? (Ham: No comment.) Joshua: Nine: Does Andrew have your permission to proceed with this? (Ham: No comment.) Joshua: Thank you.

MELISSA: Father Ham, I talked with Elaine over this weekend and she wanted me to ask you some things to see if you could confirm them. She believes that she had received a message from Melchizedek stating that she will be receiving a Teacher by the name of Orion in the near future. Can you confirm this? (Ham: Yes, my daughter. I am happy to confirm this.) Melissa: Thank you, Father Ham. I will call her when I get home tonight. She is really anxious to hear this.

LEN: Father Ham, I don't know if this is a proper question, but I received a phone call on Saturday from a guy named Alvin, in Alaska. I met him once in a restaurant and told him a little bit about this Urantia Book and what is going on with you and the Teaching Mission. He is quite familiar with the term 'channeling' from his travels - especially from an acquaintance of his, Sharon Maynard, in Sedona, Arizona. I explained that in our experience here with you that it is not 'channeling' per se, but a process called transmission-receiving. Alvin is a pilot who flies all over the world. He would like to receive a copy of the Urantia Book when he comes down this weekend. He would also like to be included in what is going on with you in this Teaching Mission. Alvin has a particular question that he wanted me to ask you tonight. He has contact with a Dr. George Merkl, who is eighty-two years old in El Paso, Texas, and who has developed what he calls liquid 'live' Chondriana Life Crystals. And he would like to know if this is something you are aware of, or the Life Carriers? Is this something good for increased health for mortals here? I don't know how to respond to that, to him.

HAM: As mankind develops and changes in awareness and spirit perception, many are seeking greater spiritual contact. Crystals, as such in themselves, are nothing. It is the spiritual level of energy vibration which is transmitted through the crystalline molecular structure, which is sometimes amplified; and this is perceived by humans who are sensitive, spiritually. The man in El Paso is one who has great spiritual receptivity, but who is lacking in some basic reality information, which is perhaps causing a confusion. He is known to us. (Len: Thank you. Is Alvin also known to you, in Alaska?) Ham: Not yet.

[From the Editor, As a sidenote for some historical context: "Alvin Celser" (likely a pseudo name), in the below question, was apparently a one-time under-cover agent for the CIA in the 1980's who had likely been given witness protection in Alaska resulting from his under-cover piloting of drugs for Manuel Noriega - the self-proclaimed dictator of Nicaragua. Alvin was a witness against Noriega in a US Federal trial in Florida in late-1992 and early-1993, which resulted in a guilty verdict against Noriega. Celser became aware of Ham's teachings in Utah (late 1991), via this editor's chance friendship. It was learned later that Celser, in about 2002, was mysteriously assassinated while docking his water-craft plane in Juno, Alaska. Also of interest in upcoming transcripts is Alvin's question regarding the micro-scientific work of one, George Merkl- at this time living in El Paso, TX, but originally from the Soviet Union (Hungary), from which he worked for a time as a scientist in Europe during World War II. Merkl but fled to the US when things got sinisterly corrupt in his science work, in the Soviet Union. Ten years after this question (below) to Ham from George, he (George) was also mysteriously killed (2002) allegedly as a result of his findings that were challenges to corporate interests (see this information on a Dr. George Merkl Facebook page). (Also, is this link which sheds some light on Dr. George Merkl's work; there are many acknowledgements on today's internet.) A further point of interest here: In the Urantia Book, there is a disclosure regarding the 'ancient Sumarian Clay Tablets' that were yet to be translated. Note in Dr. Merkl's dissertations claiming experience in 'his' translating of those Sumarian Clay tablets.]

RISDON: Father Ham, I would like to thank you very much for your lesson tonight. I don't get a chance to say this often, but I would also like to thank you for other lessons that you have given in the past. Quite often when I hear your lessons, my heart jumps and I am filled wonderfully with your messages. My question that I have has to do with your lesson tonight: It sounds like, from what you were saying tonight, that one of the things that we might continue to do is to look for our spiritual perception to continue and to grow. My first question: Is that correct in what you were saying? (Ham: Yes. The growth of the soul will be evident in augmented spiritual perception.)

RISDON: Okay. Thank you. My second question is: We are seeing more and more wonderful things and events happening around us all the time, and I am wondering if there are other things that we can do, other than what you have taught, to prepare ourselves; for things seem to be coming faster and faster.

HAM: Each person should seek those activities which promote inner satisfaction and peace. A wise person follows his inner leading by the results, spiritually. If it is conducive to inner happiness and peace to play an instrument, for example, then this is good. To enjoy the outdoors, this is good. It is best to lead a balanced life, one in which you remember to live in the moment so that while doing things you enjoy you fully experience them. If for example you enjoy jogging – do not think while jogging, of something else, like work or car payments or housework or whatever. Live in the jogging moment – experience and enjoy this, for it is yours. Do you see? (Risdon: Yes, I do. Again, I want to thank you for all of your teachings.) Ham: Thank you.

JEREMIAH: Father Ham, in your lesson tonight you used the terms 'ponder and reflect.' Can you give us a little more insight on the word, 'reflect?'

HAM: Yes. Reflection is a powerful mind-spirit tool and experience. To reflect upon an event is to bring memory and meaningful insight together, into focus. For example, when you reflect upon your interaction with a person, you are seeing this interaction outside of its happening. You are using your mental and spiritual ability to bring meaning and understanding to the event; and also, deepening your appreciation for it in a spiritual sense. Is this helping? (Jeremiah: Yes. Thank you very much, Teacher.)

ROINDA: Teacher Ham, I just also want to thank you for that lesson. It opens my eyes to what is going on recently in my life, and I just want to thank you for giving me some insight. Also, I want to ask: As with Risdon's question, you brought up the act of 'living in the moment' – does that also include, I guess, when we feel we have made mistakes? You talked about reflection. Is it best not to dwell on the mistakes, and to just chalk them up to experience? and then, just live for the moment from then on?

HAM: Yes. This is wisest, for re-living a mistake changes nothing. You may live it for a short duration, depending upon your self-reflection, but living it over and over for days, weeks, months or years, is error. All we can do is live now. Learn – yes! Dwell – no!

ROINDA: Thank you. I also want to see if I am understanding about the balance between 'spiritual vision' and 'intellect' – when you look at beauty and you feel something, like in your heart which feels beautiful, is that enhancing your spiritual growth, your soul? (Ham: You are perceiving your soul – its reaction to beauty; this is enhancing to the soul. Yes.)

JAMES: Teacher, I don't have a question but I feel the need to just thank you for the beautiful lesson you gave us tonight. It was thrilling. I feel deeply honored to be counted as one of your students.

HAM: Thank you, James. I will be happy to begin some private sessions, depending on the combined working of Rebecca and Roland. I am looking forward to meeting with you all again privately. For now, I am preparing for my departure tonight. As well, I look forward to next week and hope you all will be here, also. God bless you, each and every one. May He enfold you in His arms and guide you in His ways, all week. Farewell.

A Lesson On the Concentric Circles | Wherever We Are, He Is

[As announced last week, Roland is the transmission-receiver for this evening's transmission.]

The light of God surrounds us. The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

Good evening. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. It pleases me to be here tonight and share in the new up-leveling of will-creature camaraderie. Your prayers are a grateful manifestation of group integration and does begin the meeting with the power of focusing your collective God-consciousness.

This evening I wish to begin this newly public receiver/transmitting relationship with Roland with a lesson regarding the three concentric circles. This understanding, of course, is multi-leveled and deals with the symbolization of concepts of the infinity (or limitlessness) of the presence of God the Father.

Eternity, a word form which expresses timelessness of the self-existent Father, is with the proposition of 'never-beginning, never-ending.' In our concentric circles, each of these circles represents this concept.

In the final expression of your prayer - "He is" - is that 'ever-presentness' of God the Father. Taken together, with 'all that is,' one recognizes that throughout the vast universes there is no dimension of time or space that you may be in that the visualization of these concentric circles will not remind and assure you of His presence.

Thus, the last phrase of the prayer: "Wherever we are He is," applies in the broadest sense to this world's experience, as well as your entire ascendant career. This should be a great comfort for you and those with whom you associate - those who are within your everyday immediate presence and throughout the brotherhood of the planet Urantia. Your departed brothers and sisters who have traversed this planet are likewise always in the presence of God.

This concludes my lesson this evening. For the most part, Roland got the words right.

RACHEL: Father Ham, I agree with you. Roland did do a good job. We do have a newcomer with us this evening. Her name is Mariana. She attends James' study group. She just received the Urantia Book about three weeks ago and has already read about 700 pages. So we welcome her to our group. Also, this week I had a long telephone conversation with Keith from Duluth, Minnesota. I talked to you about him last week. He is going to come to our meeting on March the 9th. He desires just to be here the one night and the one day, and would be thrilled to death, Father Ham, if he could have a personal meeting with you at that time. I have mentioned a little to Roland and asked him if he is free a little earlier on Monday so this could be possible before our meeting.

HAM: Of course, granted. Roland is available and expresses his willingness to do this prior to that evening's lesson. And yes, I shall be here.

RACHEL: That's wonderful, it will thrill him to death. He is so thrilled and excited over all that is going on that he can hardly contain himself. This is true both over the telephone and in his writing. Also, I had a telephone conversation today with a Jenny, from Westwood in Northern California; she is a school teacher. There isn't a study group there, but Jenny has been studying the Urantia Book for twenty-two years. She was at the Los Angeles meeting, and she was absolutely thrilled – and even more thrilled after she received the tape away from the other forces that were present there. She said she wanted to send her love to you and asks if it would be possible for her to come up here to a meeting on April 19th and 20th. And, to have a personal meeting with you on the 19th. Is this possible?

HAM: This would be acceptable, yes, and advisable to coordinate with Rebecca and Roland for this personal meeting, as to which of them would be most convenient. The expression of excitement is understood, and it is the manifestation of the new energy which characterizes this new public experience of our Teaching Mission. You will receive many requests, and much enthusiasm will accompany the expanded Mission. (Rachel: I thank you, Father Ham. It is a thrill and a pleasure to talk to these people.)

JOSHUA: Father Ham, I too have received some telephone calls from various people. Karen from San Diego wanted me to thank you for your message to her last week. She wants me to ask you if there is anything at all that she can do to help serve or to further the cause of this Mission? She is willing to do anything and is also very enthusiastic. Not only that, she wants me to give you her love. (Ham: Thank you. Her willingness is noted and this sister will have an understanding soon of how she may benefit the mission through her efforts.)

JOSHUA: Thank you. I received a phone call from a lady named Pat. She told me she is willing to be a transmission-receiver for the Sarasota, Florida group. (Ham: Such willingness is appreciated and is noted. We have not finally concluded the timing as yet.)

JOSHUA: She would also like to know, is Pat her spiritual name? (Ham: It is slightly incorrect. Correction will come to her soon.) Joshua: Thank you. She has been doing some automatic writing on her computer for approximately a year. She would like to know if this is real.

HAM: As her Thought Adjuster communication becomes more clear, this accuracy, or the lack of it, will be known to her. It is encouraged and desirable for her to continue to practice this method of conscious communication with her indwelling Spirit.

JOSHUA: Thank you. One final question for her: She would like to know if a being named Maitreya, and a human named Benjamin Creme, in England, are of your group? Or, are they false teachers. (Ham: They are unknown to us presently.)

JOSHUA: Thank you. I have one statement and a question from Lee and Connie, of Englewood, Florida; they have received some of your tapes via Ila, of Kansas City. They want to convey their appreciation for your teachings. They think they are wonderful, and they are truly believers. The question they ask: Is it true that the Inspired Trinity Spirits are bridging the gap between now and when the Trinity Teacher Son will arrive through superconsciousness techniques?

HAM: All Teacher-interaction is mind-to-mind communication. The higher part of the mind is engaged for this purpose – transmission-instruction. Teacher Sons are assisted by many entities. A complete new entourage of spirit Teachers and supernal beings will accompany the arrival of the Trinity Teacher Son. They will usher in a new and even larger expansion of the interaction with will-creatures and supernals during the Correcting Time. Does this help? (Joshua: Yes, very much. Thank you.)

MELINDA: Hello Father Ham. I want to ask for a private meeting with you.

HAM: Of course. It is a pleasure to begin again with these personal guidance sessions. The re-institution of these private meetings will be coordinated, and dates will be assigned according to your convenience and also of Rebecca and Roland's availability. This is a will-creature decision that needs to be thought-out and planned. I will be available in the weeks to come for this activity on Sunday, anytime. Roland just tells me that he too will be available. To lessen confusion, the scheduling of these meetings can be done between Rebecca and Roland. Proceed.

RISDON: Good evening, Father Ham. The other night I had a dream about a solution for raising money to help the homeless. I wanted to find out about getting verification if the dream was really a possible solution to help the homeless; or, if this was something coming from my Thought Adjuster? Or, if it was only just a dream?

HAM: Much dream content--especially vivid dream content--has contained within it creative imaginative ideas which must be tested with reality. Your progress, spiritually, and your willingness to help your brothers and sisters who are less fortunate, is indeed a noble undertaking. Your indwelling Spirit assists you in all worthy efforts. Does this help?

Risdon: Yes, it does. Thank you, Father Ham. I sense that I am guided to do this. Other than my Thought Adjuster, would there be support from other celestial beings to have this possible solution work?

HAM: Risdon, my son, you are surrounded by helpers. You have only to go with faith and to apply your energies toward Father's will.

REBECCA: Father Ham, I don't really have a question right now as much as I'd just like to express my love for you, my respect for you, and my heartfelt appreciation for all that you have done for us. One year ago when you first came I had no idea who you were and I deeply apologize for all my doubts and misconceptions. I just want you to know that I love you, and I'll stick by you no matter what.

HAM: Your diligent, courageous and loving work with me is the beginning of a great and extended mission that you will be known for throughout your ascension. Your relationship with me, and mine with you, has been a great learning process which will continue and will bring great joy and satisfaction to both you and me throughout our long association. Your doubts and skeptical ideas, which have been part of each person who is here in attendance, is the necessary opposite polarity to knowing and believing with assurance. The tension created between skepticism and understanding, produces the fiber that is the strengthening element of your character. Each person is known to us and has this element. A healthy rational mind is, and can be, of greater service. Rebecca, you are loved and cherished.

WILLEENA: Father Ham, it is very exciting to hear you through Roland, as well as through Rebecca. It's a gift to have your presence with us. I had a question from last week's teaching that stayed with me. I wonder if it's okay to ask. (Ham: Certainly). Willeena: When Roinda presented her question, and your answer came back – I wondered if I understood accurately. Were you saying that the soul perceives itself in the beauty that it is valuing; and as it is seen and recognized, it grows and is enhanced? So with that, in essence, are you saying it is the soul that is seeing itself in reflection all around? and this feeds it to become greater and bigger?

HAM: This is a spiritual insight which is difficult to understand from the experience of looking from the body to the exterior of the body. Soul visualization can perceive itself without the aid of reflecting material. Soul also sees the spiritual beauty and light of other soul matter. You are becoming aware within yourself of this new level of perception. Often the quotation that "one may see the soul in the eyes of the mortal" has some validity. Physical light-stimulation is limited to the perception of reflected light. Spiritual vision is encompassing a larger range of energy awareness. This is sometimes perceptible. Does this help?

WILLEENA: Yes, it does. What I am experiencing lately that relates is that I am starting to have a perception of the energy that is involved in various situations and communications – is this what you are addressing with me right now? May I clarify? (Ham: Certainly.) Willeena: It's different from my thoughts and my emotions and my physical experience; it's more like a perception of the energetic experience apart from those other three aspects of myself. Is this developing, and becoming more of my soul perception?

HAM: Your sensations are created through the integration of physical sight, spiritual insight, and mental resultant stimulation. This is the state of integration which can be achieved by mortals who are sensitive and seeking such integration. Does this help?

WILLEENA: Yes. Thank you. On tonight's teaching – I have been seeing several times now a pebble being dropped into a clear lake and the concentric circles that ring outward from it. Did I understand in your teaching that as we visualize this picture of concentric circles and relate it to the ever-present love of the Father, that it will help in the integration process that you were just discussing with me?

HAM: Your indwelling Father Fragment is the one who conducts and brings together these elements. This is a manifestation of the Fragment of the Father. The love of the Father is also universal and manifests in many ways. The visualization of a pebble dropping into the still waters does create waves which could symbolize the power, expression, and energy-surges of Father-presence. However, as the water is the medium by which the surges of (or waves of) energy are radiated, it is the vast water which is more representative, analogously, of the Father-presence. Does this clarify? (Willeena: Yes, thank you.)

JASON: Good evening, Teacher Ham. I feel like I have been in a spiritual quarantine for several months. The private sessions are very much a feeling of your company in our household. Last Tuesday evening, Rebecca and I were in the living room and sensed the presence of who I believe to be Abraham. During these moments that he was with us we both experienced a monitoring feeling, like our thoughts and feelings were being picked through. During this time, I went into meditation and conveyed to this individual my concerns and thoughts. I'd like to ask if they were received.

HAM: Your progress is monitored with loving care and concern. There are times in your development that a period of spiritual distilment requires time to be completed. Your concern of spiritual vacancy is unfounded. Growth is continuing and you will receive this expansion of spiritual understanding (mota), soon. You will have a better understanding.

JASON: Thank you, Teacher Ham. I would enjoy very much discussing some of my views and concerns in a private session and I am very grateful to you for the lessons that you have given to us for preparation in this advancement that you speak of. I hope that we all take them the way you deliver, according to our needs, and make use of them. That's all I have to say this evening. Thank you, Teacher.

SONJA: Teacher Ham, I'll save my questions for a personal meeting if I can get that arranged. I just wanted to say thank you for the teachings and everything; it's really made a big difference in my life. Last week I really wanted to hug you. I felt very frustrated in that I could not, but I suppose we could hug each other in spirit. I just wanted to let you know that. Thank you.

HAM: Thank you, Sonja. Your personal meeting will be scheduled and I will be present to answer your questions.

LORAIN: Father Ham, I don't have a question but just want to give my thanks, and say I really appreciate hearing you come through not only Rebecca but also coming through Roland; it means a lot to me and is a great stabilizer for my testimony of these meetings.

HAM: You're certainly welcome. It is a testimony to building faith, to experience this communication through Roland. His word-formation and pattern is accessible and adequate. Also, it is different and less practiced, which is to be expected. His nervousness, yes, makes the process more difficult; but with time, this will improve. My connection with him is beginning to have more stability.

With that said, it is time to end this meeting. This is a process which takes energy, and weakens as the energy is becoming depleted. It is, therefore, advisable for me to wish you all a prosperous and enthusiastic week to come. I am looking forward to our next meeting and the personal meetings which are at this time requested. I give you my love, caring, and bid you, farewell.

Urantia Book excerpts regarding these three concentric circles:

93:2.5 [Part III]

In personal appearance, Melchizedek resembled the then blended Nodite and Sumerian peoples, being almost six feet in height and possessing a commanding presence. He spoke Chaldean and a half dozen other languages. He dressed much as did the Canaanite priests except that on his breast he wore an emblem of three concentric circles, the Satania symbol of the Paradise Trinity. In the course of his ministry this insignia of three concentric circles became regarded as so sacred by his followers that they never dared to use it, and it was soon forgotten with the passing of a few generations.

93:3.3 [Part III]

The symbol of the three concentric circles, which Melchizedek adopted as the insignia of his bestowal, a majority of the people interpreted as standing for the three kingdoms of men, angels, and God. And they were allowed to continue in that belief; very few of his followers ever knew that these three circles were emblematic of the infinity, eternity, and universality of the Paradise Trinity of divine maintenance and direction; even Abraham rather regarded this symbol as standing for the three Most Highs of Edentia, as he had been instructed that the three Most Highs functioned as one. To the extent that Melchizedek taught the Trinity concept symbolized in his insignia, he usually associated it with the three Vorondadek rulers of the constellation of Norlatiadek.

104:1.3 [Part III]

The third presentation of the Trinity was made by Machiventa Melchizedek, and this doctrine was symbolized by the three concentric circles which the sage of Salem wore on his breast plate. But Machiventa found it very difficult to teach the Palestinian Bedouins about the Universal Father, the Eternal Son, and the Infinite Spirit. Most of his disciples thought that the Trinity consisted of the three Most Highs of Norlatiadek; a few conceived of the Trinity as the System Sovereign, the Constellation Father, and the local universe Creator Deity; still fewer even remotely grasped the idea of the Paradise association of the Father, Son, and Spirit.

Loyalty in Relationships and Loyalty to Father

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. A special welcome to our new friends from Los Angeles. I am pleased to welcome you all here tonight.

First, I would like to discuss the meaning of loyalty: Loyalty is a sacred and blessed virtue. All personal loyalties are the highest expression of self-worth. In personal relationships, our loyalties are paramount and are our precious gifts; the innermost soul is exhibiting its highest and most profound beliefs.

Our first and foremost loyalty/duty is to our heavenly Father – who demands, in love, our first allegiance. God gives of Himself in all creation; He has sent His perfect Spirit to indwell the mortal mind. How loyal is this! How profoundly loyal to His creatures is He! How can we exhibit a lesser loyalty than full personal, worshipful, complete, wholehearted, consecrated loyalty!

Our Father, God, is love. Also is He the most consecrated, divine, complete Parent. Who has a child that they are not completely loyal to!

This word 'loyalty' is inadequate for my complete expression; but in necessity, we use it. In human life, loyalty can express a lower form of consecrated duty in you. This loyalty which I mean to express is supreme for each person. This loyalty – to follow one's own inner Spirit – must be supreme over all else. Blessed is he who walks in his own light, yes, for the light which I may help you discover within, is already there; I am but a helper, a teacher, to help you to discover your own inner loyalties, your own inner truths, however this may be expressed.

Roland, your assistance is required. Rebecca has a headache. [Roland continues with the transmission-receiving.]

To continue ... This concept of the 'Inner Reality' is an ever-increasing truth within each of you. As a child, loyalties are learned in childhood relationships which have relatively simple meanings. As we grow through our mortal experience, loyalty becomes related to our understanding of the fundamental concept, which involves the Fatherhood of the Universal Father, and our relationship to one another as spiritual brothers and sisters.

Consider the idea/command of the Son of Man in which He asks that you “love your enemy.” Recognize, even in this such adverse mortal experience, that the enemy is still your brother. This requires a new level of understanding – loyalty. Ponder this lesson during the coming week, asking yourself: “Is this loyalty?”

This concludes my lesson for this evening and now I will receive your questions.

RACHEL: Father Ham, we would like to welcome Matthew and Joseph to our meeting. I know that you have already acknowledged them, but we want to thank them for coming so far to visit with us and welcome them at any time to our meeting. (Ham: Thank you, Rachel, and welcome, again, Matthew and Joseph.)

ANDREA: Father Ham, yesterday in our study group, we were reading a paper about Conciliators; and the example that was brought up was how the judicial and legal part works. Was it the decision made 'through them' (Conciliators) to include the Life And Teachings of Jesus in the Urantia Book? I was just wondering, because I heard the story about that section second-hand. Can you confirm that the Part IV of the Urantia papers kind of 'appeared' just as they were transcribed? And if so, did that decision go to the Higher Court for that section of the book to be included?

HAM: The story and of Urantia would not be complete without the full and comprehensive section of the Life And Teachings of Jesus – Part IV of the Urantia Book. Bringing forth this book was fraught with difficulties and will-creature turmoil. This part of the book, Part IV, is the foundation of the Fifth Epochal Revelation – a period of which we are its Teachers. Many forces and events were synchronized to allow for the book to be in its present form. How lucky and providential. This body of spiritual understanding is now well established on Urantia. Does this answer? (Andrea: I guess so. Is it true that Part IV of the Urantia Book, was not a 'transmission,' as were the first three parts - but just materialized? Or is that rumor?)

HAM: A form of this communication (transmission-receiving) was used to produce this Section IV of the Urantia Book. Sudden 'materialization' is not correct.

ROINDA: Ham, I have a question about your teaching tonight; I just want to be clear about it, and also maybe ask for some guidance. My understanding is that the loyalty our Father shows us is like a father showing such to his children, which to me would represent His love for us; and this is what you would like us to show toward our fellow man - that brotherly love. Is that correct?

HAM: Understanding. Loyalty of person-to-person relationships increases with spiritual expanded awareness. To understand that all who you meet are spiritual brothers and sisters does give you the ability to grasp the importance of this quality. Loyalty to your Universal Father is more difficult to manifest in your daily behavioral life. Loyalty is a decision and a congruent action. (Roinda: Thank you. You answered my second question too.)

JASON: Good evening, Teacher Ham. With the Teaching Mission exposed, fairly exposed - broadly enough that perhaps a thousand people are now familiar or have heard your name - will there be an event that you can tell us this evening, something you foresee, that will cement these teachings in this Teaching Mission to the Urantia Book family at large, irrefutably, for the newcomer or nonbeliever that may chance upon the teachings in the near future?

HAM: Those brothers and sisters who are truly God-seeking, and who hear or read my words, will be moved upon by the Spirit of Truth and will know from the resonance of their inner being the truthfulness and the source of whence these teachings come. Miraculous events, or seemingly miraculous events, do not a believer make.

JASON: That is understood by me - yes, and thank you. About the Jesus papers of the Urantia Book - is it true that they were disseminated by automatic writing? or perhaps a material method that would enable the Part IV (the Jesus Papers) to be compiled perfectly the first time around with no mistakes, and then taken away or hidden, so to speak? (Ham: Query - would the method of these writings change your belief in them?)

JASON: Oh, absolutely not! What my question is leaning towards - would we perhaps be expectant of helping to bring about more - perhaps on a different subject such as science, for instance? In other words, a continuation, separate from the compiled papers of the Urantia Book, but nonetheless, a continuation?

HAM: The Urantia Book is complete as a spiritual guide to this generation and many more to come. To seek deeper spiritual content is admirable. To understand the Urantia Book, as it is written, is a lifetime task. Your question with regard to science information is better directed towards books which deal with these subjects. With regard to further spiritual information, your presence at these meetings has up-leveled your spiritual understanding awareness, and has given you a foundation to better understand those lofty spiritual realities expressed in the Urantia Book. The content of these – our Mission teachings – further illustrates and illuminates those which are contained in the Urantia Book. Is this understanding?

JASON: Yes, Teacher Ham, very much so. Might I say, the Urantia Book will continue to impact me far beyond this life. My final question would involve the people who are developing for their receiver/transmitter stations/groups: These people are here and there throughout the world, and we really do not know them. Should we form a network of communication that perhaps helps foster people that don't know what is happening to them? perhaps even seek after groups that are already intact and ask them to express their views? perhaps even do Mission work with our fellow Urantia citizens that are very familiar with the Urantia Book but not familiar with these teachings? Should we actually seek after them?

HAM: The personal preparation of transmission receiver communication energy is extremely personal. Will-creature fear, and personal commitment to such an extraordinary life-experience, takes its own course. As you know, there are many Teachers in our Teacher Corps which are presently unassigned. And, many are assigned to groups which are in the developing stages of transmission/receiver mortals, but not yet receiving their own teacher lessons as are you, my students of this group. Their experiencing of our taped transmissions and written word facilitates their acceptance at a time which allows them to solidify, concretize, their personal internal will-creature decision to accept this role. [Editor's note: These initial Woods Cross lessons were a few years preceding the Internet, which soon became a much more effective way to disseminate these transcripts.]

JASON: I understand. Will we hear from the Washington's group-Teacher Spartnik, in our group?

HAM: We encourage the recording and transcription of all group-Teacher lessons and announcements. Your lesson-content experience with Spartnik's group, on a personal level, is not foreseen, but is a group-level experience for them. Once a Teacher is posted to their assignment – that group is their main focus of attention, yes, and requires much preparation and review between Teacher and their students' reception.

RACHEL: Father Ham, I'm going to give you an easy question. Have you been present at some of our study group meetings? (Ham: Of course. Yes. I have attended you in your studies, both as a group and individually.)

RACHEL: Are you happy with our Urantia Book group study format, Father Ham? and do you have some suggestions?

HAM: Your contemplations of the spiritual information contained in the Urantia Book, along with the association with your brothers and sisters, is a welcome and joyful experience. We as Teachers, wish to stimulate further reading, study, investigations, ponderings, associations – which brings an increase in understanding. This is the fruits of our teaching.

CALVIN (Len): Father Ham, I appreciate the lesson tonight. A quick question: Last night I unexpectedly thought I heard from someone named Arthur. It was very short and yet, a little bit powerful. Something I wasn't used too. Could you maybe confirm that?

HAM: Calvin, you are close to verbal communications with your indwelling Spirit. Your indwelling Spirit is the gatekeeper to communications from various Teacher entities. Practice the stillness. Continue to seek to hear your indwelling Spirit.

JEREMIAH: Teacher Ham – this Friday is February 28th, which is the first anniversary of your being here with us. I am very happy and thankful to be a part of this. I look forward to many many more years of service and working with you in our Father's kingdom. I love you. (Ham: Thank you, Jeremiah.)

JOSHUA: Father Ham, Joseph, Matthew, and myself were today discussing the message that Norson gave us on going forth and spreading the teachings of the Urantia Book, with exuberance. And we were wondering – does this include lifting the ban on 'advertising the Urantia Book?'

HAM: The best advertisement of the Urantia Book is contained and emanated from the spiritualized reader's daily living. It is then, when one's example of loving expression (which is the light of God shone through each of us) is manifest, that such example brings that associate/person to the recognition of that hope and love which they wish to have within their own lives. It is this motivation to the new believer/seeker which would give energy in sufficient amount to undertake the reading of such an enormous book. Printed advertisements are, at this time, in a controversial setting which is better left alone.

JOHN: Father Ham, the Spirit of Truth seems to be very strong in every individual in this room. In other people that I have talked to it's very hard to recognize that the Spirit of Truth is even there. I was wondering, is it the long search for truth that develops the Spirit of Truth in each individual? or are some people just given less of that Spirit?

HAM: This great and powerful Spirit of Truth is on the Earth and is in full force and effect – attainable by those whose hearts are softened and who hear with true intent. Many times when we observe our fellows, there is no outward manifestation of the Spirit of Truth acting within their hearts. However, many times, seeds are planted even in the most barren of conditions; and when watered with spiritual water, these seeds grow and do manifest within that individual long after these seeds were planted.

WILLEENA: Father Ham, in our lesson tonight you said that loyalty is a sacred and blessed virtue; and that our personal loyalties are our highest expressions of self-worth. I am wondering: As we grow spiritually and develop our understanding, I assume our self-worth also grows to match that? and that our loyalties, that everything, is uplifted to match that – is that accurate?

HAM: In the ascension and expansion of will-creature spiritual awareness, the qualities which surround the reality of loyalty are up-leveled with coordination and required integration. One virtue does not stand by itself but is supported by those uncommon expressions of higher-awareness.

WILLEENA: Thank you. So with regard to the Correcting Time, and those of us that are involved on a personal level and are developing growth and spiritual understanding, does it serve to develop or enhance our personal self-worth? Is that enhanced by our focus to the virtues, such as loyalty and allegiance to the Father? As we focus spiritually then, is the experience of self-worth, enhanced?

HAM: The strongest and most powerful self-worth enhancer is the personal acceptance of 'the Universal Father as your spiritual Father' as fact. And with that, 'the loving/accepting watchcare' which is expressed and exhibited by this Eternal Father. Once this is realized within the heart of the will-creature, self-confidence and cosmic identity, is established.

JOSEPH: Good evening, Father Ham. It is a pleasure to be here this evening with you and an honor. I wanted to ask about loyalty. When you said to always ask: "Is this loyalty!" - does that mean that every act and decision throughout the day can be considered as either 'loyal or disloyal?' And also, that there could be levels of loyalty - loyalty to a person, a group, and an ideal loyalty to God Himself? Are there levels of hierarchy, or priorities of loyalty, where one loyalty might be higher than another?

HAM: You have rightly said that the highest priority of personal loyalty is to the Universal Father. Once this decision is part of your working practical being, all other loyalty questions are subject to the love as expressed by our Universal Father. Then, even in mistakes of judgment, the love of the Father is so 'all-forgiving' of these judgment errors. If you ask yourself in each situation: "What would the Father do," you will see it - loyalty - most clearly.

JAMES: Teacher, there have been times in my life when I have asked myself the question: "What would the Father do in this situation?" and in nearly every situation I encountered throughout a day I was quickly made aware of my human frailties, and became quickly discouraged because I wasn't willing to live up to my highest ideal in every circumstance. So can you address this issue? It can be very intimidating.

HAM: Yes. To place this high standard of 'living the will of the Father in your daily life,' is indeed an exercise in dichotomy. With prayer, and recognition of the Father's forgiveness in all matters, you can proceed with a happy countenance in your efforts to follow through with this ideal; for it is in the intention (in the direction of your desires) that it is known that you are indeed 'on the path.' I say to you, my friends - mistakes and errors are inherent in this mortal existence; do not allow these errors to discourage or depress you. James, is this helpful?

JAMES: Yes. In a way, it sounds familiar. Somewhere deep inside, I knew that. Thank you for reminding me.

HAM: Truth often sounds familiar. [laughter.]

VELETA: Father Ham, I just wanted to say thank you very much. I have been having a lot of struggles, spiritually, but this last week my heart is so full of joy. I have a hard time expressing, and I feel a lot of love and warmth from you, and a lot from others. I'm not sure of the who or what, but I feel a lot of love surrounding me and my family. In seeing the changes that are coming about, this really makes me happy. I just want to thank you, personally.

HAM: Beautifully expressed. The connection with Roland weakens. It is perhaps a good point, and on such a beautiful statement, that we should conclude our meeting together. Next week I shall return to instruct you in a new lesson. Until then, I bid you, farewell.

Obedience Results In Increased Opportunity For Service

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. This evening I wish to begin our session with a lesson on obedience. Loyalty and obedience are one and the same. Highest loyalty belongs to our Father. Also, our highest obedience belongs to our Father. Contrast this concept with blind obedience to authority - this, I never will preach.

Obedience - that is, actively seeking and actively doing your highest will, is the will of God; this is true obedience. Not all thought impulses seemingly foreign are adjuster communication. If I advocated doing everything which is abrupt presentation of thought, I would error in my teaching.

Life's roads are winding and treacherous, full of stumbling blocks as we have earlier discussed. Keeping safely on this path requires: sound judgment; open reason capacity; ability to think through problems clearly; and fourthly and most importantly - openness to prayer and receiving of guidance. Guidance may come in many ways, for inner heartfelt security on your road is of utmost importance. Guidance is also the concern of your guardian angels, who help to straighten your path so that your footsteps may fall securely.

Father is ever mindful of the needs of His children. This means He ever has an open ear to all your petitions, for He is an all-wise provider. Wise guidance means He will hear, listen, and provide. Yes, and this, with your wise petition and not foolishness in asking - knowing your hearts as He does, your needs as He does, your will as He does. Therefore, be secure in knowing you are wisely provided for.

Obedience (matching your highest will with His will) results in increased opportunity for service in the kingdom. Father has an individual plan for each of His children. Some religionists require conformity in seeking our Father; I tell you, this is error. Some would have you dress alike, eat alike, sleep similar hours, pray alike and live alike; and this is not our purpose, no! Rather, our purpose is for each and every one of you to find for himself/herself this individual path-purpose.

Each of you will live your own individual life, yes, expressing God through this life in whatever means are available to you. This, is increasing God-consciousness and opens the door of service to one's fellows regardless of your station in life. One need not become a monk, a priest or a nun, to lead a Godly life and to lead others to God; or, to be a light for God's expression, no. The sons of God are enlisted together to spread this word through their individual means and capacities.

In the common life, who best to show God to the common man and woman than common men and women? Who can better reveal the heart of God's love than a neighbor? Think on this and how you, personally, can show God's love for His children by showing your love for your neighbor. Hard as this is, essential it is for the path. Easier will it become as you grow in God-consciousness and awareness of His love; for in your growth of becoming 'like God,' you must open your hearts to shine forth His love for His children.

Ponder this and make an honest effort to do it. Even those who you find abrasive or are distrustful of, show through yourself God's love for them. See for yourself how God sees them, and how you may shine forth this love. I will answer questions now.

JOSHUA: Father Ham, in reference to your lesson on obedience: Am I understanding it correctly that we should be obedient to our highest concepts of the Father, regardless of the mores and traditions of mankind?

HAM: Yes. However, I would preface that statement by allowing that the evolving mores of society have a place in our lives. Reckless disregard for these can cause much unhappiness and needless torment and conflict.

JOSHUA: Thank you, very much. Ila and Loren of Kansas City request a Teacher for their group, if possible. (Ham: Yes. This is not only possible but one has been assigned. Her name is Ester. She will contact Ila very soon.)

JOSHUA: Thank you. I will telephone them and tell them the good news. John and Jane Roper of California would like to know if you could give them some additional new information on the stillness, other than what you have already delivered in your lessons.

HAM: Yes. This is difficult, not knowing their situation. The stillness is a practice of quieting mental and physical motion in order to allow for higher consciousness - contact with the indwelling Spirit. You see, much of the Spirits' work is on a level which goes unrecognized in the conscious mind; superconsciousness is its contact level. When we quiet the middle mind (common mind, everyday mind), the higher consciousness wherein these thought registries have been made can then meld down into the human consciousness, thereby increasing conscious awareness of Adjuster function. Your indwelling Adjuster rejoices when conscious registry is made of His work, mental work. The stillness purpose is to help facilitate this communion. I hope this helps. (Joshua: I am sure it does. Thank you very much.)

RACHEL: Father Ham, you have a very anxious mortal son by the name of Alvin Celser, who lives in Alaska. We have located a study group that he can attend in Anchorage, which means that he will have to fly about 60 miles to go to the study group. What he would like to know is if there is a member in this study group that is being trained as a transmission-receiver? (Ham: Question premature. I cannot answer at this time.)

RACHEL: Then he asks this further question: He wants to know if it is possible for the celestial beings to check him out to see if he is a candidate to become a transmission-receiver. He wants to do anything that he can do to further this work and to get it started up there. (Ham: Request noted. I will contact the proper authorities.)

RACHEL: Thank you, Father Ham. Calvin, do you have anything to add to this?

CALVIN: Maybe just one quick question, yes: Alvin is taking this 'liquid Chondriana' (a new discovery from one, George Merkl, in El Paso, Texas) and asks for your advice on what is known on that. Also, he asks if he should stop taking this. Is it harmful to him? or to continue to take it?

HAM: My limited understanding on this is as follows: Moderate use is beneficial for the endocrine glands and eyes; also helpful for immunity and disease-fighting. When the dosage is too great there occurs the opposite effect, glandular systems having been over-stimulated begin shutting down and immunodeficiency becomes apparent. The advice is to take a minimum amount which seems to help. Don't overdo this drug, for you could cause harm by doing so.

CALVIN: Thank you. A question both he and I have discussed is: We know that we are a creature of free choice and have the choice - to choose the Father's plan and will, or not. Alvin's curious question was, from the understanding of the Urantia Book - if we choose not to follow that plan then we come to be as though we are not and never were. The query is, then, what choice do we really have, rather than to ascend, or, cease to exist?

HAM: Always is there free will. Guidance is available, but at each step, freewill choices are made. Once this choice is made, other guidance must become apparent, and then another choice, different guidance. There is no set predestination for anyone; but rather, the freedom to follow guidance here, reject guidance there, in all different areas of life. Always is there complete freedom of will/choice. Never is there coercion to follow any guidance path. Choosing total cessation of existence is very serious. Only after all possible calls from the Father are rejected is the cessation of existence inevitable. Always does the Father attempt to bring back His lost sheep. Only by total and willful final decision does any will-creature of will-status become extinguished. Does this help?

CALVIN: Yes, Father Ham, and thank you for that most complete answer and the time you have taken to answer this and his other query. I appreciate the lesson tonight and the love and kindness you show us. I hope we can heed your advice this week regarding obedience and loyalty. Thank you.

RISDON: Father Ham, thank you again for a wonderful lesson tonight. My question is regarding our study group meeting: We were reading about the purification of the races on Urantia. I had a question come up in regard to a section, I believe it's page 590, that discusses certain individuals that are labeled as defective, degenerate, mentally defective, socially unfit, abnormal, inferior, unsalvageable. It kind of affected me a little bit because in my heart I have always felt like everything in this world has some good. I am wondering – if we, as a society or as a world, decided to purify our race, how would those judgments or discriminations come down? Who would say who is unfit or who is degenerate or abnormal? Can you comment on that, please.

HAM: You are admonished ‘as an individual’ to judge not your neighbor. As a society, however, judgments must be made, group-wisdom judgments. An individual is not in any way qualified to judge his neighbor. However, in this difficult matter, group-wisdom judgments will someday have to be made. Important is this idea, for advancing civilization must one day take heed – that the bottom strata of society should not be so great as to sink all of society with it. This is a major problem on Urantia and will take the wisest and most careful judgment of minds to implement any future plans. Again, this must be a group consensus – done to make a better world for your children, your children's children, and your children's children's children. Much of your present societal ills and suffering are the result of the unwise decisions of your ancestors. Do you see a little of how this problem is viewed from our standpoint?

RISDON: Yes, I do, Father Ham, I do. You have clarified it very well for me. When you said that this will lead possibly to a better world "for my children and their children's children, and their children's children's children," that leads me to believe that this is something that is forthcoming very shortly. Am I hearing you correctly that this is something that could happen in the next ten, twenty years maybe? (Ham: This is yet, unknown.)

JEREMIAH: Father Ham, I'd like to follow up on Calvin's question. If a person is trying to make a decision – the highest decision of doing the Father's will – he could look that as either in the short-term, local terms of time and space; or, one can see that it might be another decision based on what's best in the big picture – eternity. My question is: Are there any possibilities where the decision could be opposite locally in the short term, versus the long term?

HAM: The question is: Can there be two wills of God? One for now, and one for later? (Jeremiah: I see, I understand.)

JOHN: Father Ham, in showing love to our fellow man, I often have a hard time. I was wondering if you could give me, or any of the other members of the group, some pointers on how to manifest this, or how to show them the Father's love?

HAM: Yes. The Father's love will grow in your heart first, and naturally, before it spills out into the world. Don't try to push this, for it is a natural outgrowth of God-consciousness. When you begin to know God, then you begin to feel His love for you. And when you begin to feel this love for yourself personally, this love spills out and touches those around you. This need not be a conscious effort always; usually, it is not. Is this helping? (John: Yes it is, and I thank you.)

WILLEENA: Father Ham, I'd like to go back to Risdon's question, and also a question regarding the lesson. I guess I am a little confused. What I gathered in reading the Urantia Book: If our planet had undergone other circumstances – had our Planetary

Prince and our evolution gone according to the original plan, then the weeding out of inferior stock would have occurred 'naturally' a long time ago at a stage where tribes were still warring. But as it stands, because things went amiss and there were mistakes made such as – and this is where I get confused – people who were allowed to live, then infiltrate the whole of mankind with inferior or mentally defective capacity genes, so that now we are in a position where it is a much more difficult situation; now we are facing an even worse predicament having a great deal of infiltration of inferiority. Given all that, we are having to face 'what to do with purification' and 'upgrading the human stock' decisions – and so on and so forth. What I don't understand is: Are we talking about something as simple as an energy force that is very vicious, very cruel, very uncaring inflicted on someone who is born maybe with not as much intelligence – say mentally defective? I'm not meaning mentally retarded – someone who might have a good heart or even a good connection, no; but maybe someone who has got a mean streak. I guess that is where I don't understand. What exactly are we defining as mentally defective or this type of infiltration into the genetic structure, the gene pool, that is not good for the whole? (Ham: I can't tell you. This, society must come to its own decisions regarding.)

WILLEENA: I think my fear is that if 'as groups' we are to judge and then act upon those judgments – are we going to be wise enough by that time to actualize those things. Are we being guided in such a way that we won't have mass massacres and witch burnings and scary things like that? That is scary to me because there have been times on the planet when there has been much death resulting from these attitudes and practices, and I don't believe that it was done with the highest order or intentions. (Ham: Understood. Again, these things must be humanly decided and implemented.)

WILLEENA: Is it possible in these kinds of judgments to make great mistakes? (Ham: Of course. They have been made.)

WILLEENA: Are those mistakes paid for throughout eternity? (Ham: Yes, to a degree. The ramifications are long-lasting, but in time all things are rectified.)

WILLEENA: I'm taking it that these kinds of judgments will not be made by such groups as governmental agencies or peoples in power who seem to get off track with that power? (Ham: I can't tell you.)

WILLEENA: Will we know? Will we have the guidance we need to make those choices as wise as possible? (Ham: I pray so.)

WILLEENA: At this point, there is much that threatens; there are diseases that are running rampant – aids being an example – that looks like are on the upswing rather than the cures coming forth. Are things like this a part of what we are discussing? Are these going to be the ways where some of the people are weeded out? (Ham: No. Absolutely not.)

WILLEENA: So we are actually talking about making choices then? (Ham: Yes.)
Willeena: God help us all.

JOHN: Father Ham, I have the feeling that when I experience soul growth or when I conceive a bit of the Father's love, that there is a certain energy that runs through my body. It feels like that energy itself could be a healing energy of the physical body. Am I correct in thinking that? (Ham: Yes.) John: So is it true that as we understand God's love more, that we will become more physically better? (Ham: More healthy, yes.)

JASON: Teacher Ham, I wish to know where the largest intact population of strong genetic relation to the green man (the one-time green race) is located on our planet at this time.

HAM: Nowhere is there such an 'intact' population, for the green heredity line has been mostly obliterated. Though some, as you stated, still remains in small quantities in India. There is no strong green line population anymore.

JASON: I see. Thank you. Another question: As far as our races in genetic structure being under-developed, there seems to be another new threat that lessens and damages our promotion, and that would be the use of drugs. How would you speak in this day to the habitual drug user who is not only scrambling his makeup of chromosome but also passing on his un-spiritual countenance through his actions to his offspring? How can this problem be addressed?

HAM: Only through spiritual enlightenment do problems such as drugs and alcohol abuse become solved. No power other than God can truly and lastingly save the soul who has plunged into spiritual darkness in the form of bodily abuse. All other remedies are temporary, and not permanent. The emptiness which one feels inside – to such an extent that they seek to fill it through drugs and alcohol – can only be filled by God, through His love; there is no other saving.

WILLEENA: Father Ham, John's question seemed to strike a chord in me – that as we grow closer to the Father and more attuned to the Father's will, that we do grow healthier. And something about that seems to be coming into this other series of questions that I was asking about – being able to discern and judge wisely. As we grow more spiritually attuned and more healthy in all regard, will it become more evident what we are supposed to do?

HAM: Perhaps for you individually, yes. As a society, this understanding will come through hard lessons and much pain. Very difficult is this problem, and extremely so in view of your present-day social structure. Hard and painful will these lessons for society be. But finally, when these decisions are made and implemented, then progress again will be forthcoming within a few generations; and a corresponding decrease in crime and poverty will also be seen.

WILLEENA: Is this a part of our Correcting Time that we are dealing with? (Ham: Yes.) Willeena: I'm sorry that I am spending so much time on this, it's obvious that this has really gotten me triggered here; I'm feeling very strongly about it. I feel like I have a particular work that I pray is in line with the Father's will, as a voice, a writer perhaps, on a mass conscious-wise level. Or, is this change just going to happen if each of us did our parts in Father's will in our own daily regular environments? Is there some possibility we could help ease the birthing pains of this process?

HAM: Yes, of course. There is always the freewill decisions of individuals, and the group, which could change the course of history. Yes.

CALVIN: Following up a little bit, Father Ham. In some of the tapes of earlier meetings I know you talked about some in-roads being made 'politically and socially.' And in response to what we have heard tonight from you, is there some benefit that we might have to contribute which would be exercising our free will, and which would promote things now, which would help? I seem to think that maybe nothing will be done unless someone asks. As one is prompted and then asks - if maybe each of us, in our own way or in our own purpose, might ask and be told what we can do?

HAM: The guidance must fit the time. When the time is right, guidance is available. Premature guidance is unwise.

CALVIN: I would perceive from that reply then - our most important thing would be in our learning to have contact with our indwelling Spirit, and come to find the love of our Father; and be prepared in that way first and foremost? (Ham: Yes.)

JAMES: Teacher, we have covered a lot of material tonight that has triggered a lot of questions in my mind, and I don't think I can remember them all right now. But one of them is about our individual guidance. Were you saying that our Thought Adjuster leads us on from where we are presently; and regardless of which way we choose out of a whole lot of options, He will just take that choice - and from there, try to guide us from then on as to the best options from that point; on and on and on? (Ham: Yes.) James: Okay, that's what I thought. And regarding the question of eugenics: In my mind, I have always thought that the Urantia Book seems to suggest that we deal with that problem through restricting certain groups or individuals as to their rate of procreation. Am I understanding that correctly? (Ham: Yes.) James: Okay. And one question I had about your statement to John: About the fact that 'as we grow spiritually, we become more physically healthy' - that doesn't imply necessarily that people who become ill are not as spiritual as those who don't become ill in their lives, does it?

HAM: Certainly not; not at all. Only to say that contact with the indwelling Spirit promotes physical health, mental balance, and spiritual poise.

CALVIN: One more question for Alvin C. in Alaska; and this might be a more humorous note to end this meeting on if it's time to end: He asks the question: Life on this world as we know it has predominately two eyes, a nose, two ears, one mouth - from the fish to the spider to the snake, and so on. He wanted to know if it's a master plan that would fit all life on all worlds, or is that not necessarily so?

HAM: No, not necessarily. In other universes, the life plan is quite different and there are endless variations.

As we end this meeting tonight, I send you forward into your lives with my prayers and God's blessing. Good night, and farewell.

Self-Elevation and Self-Ego Thoughts Bring About Hardship and Sorrow in Life

[In a private meeting with group-member, Andrea, several weeks before this night's meeting, was told through one of the group transmitter receivers, that her upcoming baby would be a daughter; and this week she gave birth to a son. This was reason for some to begin to doubt these teachings' validity altogether. Ham used this occasion to show how errors are bound to happen, especially when the human wishful-thinking is prevalent; and that we were not to rely solely upon another's supposed truth, but fully upon Father's truths.]

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Tonight I wish to send fond greetings to Andrea, welcoming into existence her son. My most replete congratulations in this wonderful event. My apologies also for miscommunication of my intentions, for I am no prophet.

ANDREA: Thank you, Father Ham. There is no apology necessary. I am grateful to have him.

HAM: Rebecca also apologizes. Acknowledging error and stimulating better understanding are an intricate part of this learning process. Many years of preparation have gone into preparing for these communications. Error is necessarily a part of these transmissions when human will and willfulness in understanding are involved.

The most important part of these communications – and I say this for all new persons who are beginning to develop this transmission-receiving skilled effort – is that the human receiver is to be almost completely neutral. To be unconcerned, almost to the point of unawareness of this word-form process, is the easiest, safest and surest method. When one is intervening by any prejudices in any way there are bound to be errors. Be aware of this. Do not worry about it too much, but acknowledge your humanness and encourage others to acknowledge this also. This is the easiest way for our transmission/receiving process.

Tonight I wish to speak about another human will-creature characteristic, and that is the elevation of the self. Often in our inner mental life we tend to raise our self-importance in our own eyes, causing much effort to maintain this elevation to others. This 'others interfacing' is the key element in stress and 'self-importance' maintenance. When we do this, inevitable clashes will occur with others; false self-elevation is easily demoted, crashing down to a more realistic level – which may be painful to the person, but is always a learning process.

Mostly, it is in the mirror of defeat when we view our true selves, our true level of self, as we interact with others. Jesus said: "Better it is to take a lower seat, from there to be elevated to a higher position, than to put yourself in a higher position and suffer the humiliation of being de-elevated." (Click here for the full Urantia Book text on this phrase.)

Much sorrow and hardship in life are results from these 'false self-ego thoughts' - which in your eyes is self-elevating, but in the eyes of others may be ridiculous. Nowhere, on the other hand, do I advocate false self-abasement. Somewhere in-between there is a balance; there is that point of self-knowledge which enables a person to see himself as others see him - and most importantly, as God sees him.

When you can begin to see yourself as God sees you, you can begin to truly grow in the spirit. This growth will bring the boy into manhood and the girl into womanhood - but in truth, not in falsehood. Then, in this balance, can a person stand with two feet squarely on the ground in complete self-assurance. Also, in this knowledge of how God sees you, is your understanding of your sonship with Him; all true dignity and nobleness of character will grow from this knowledge.

Sturdy and sure advancement in the kingdom requires the growth of maturity and the sureness therein. Unsteady souls wavering in incomplete self-knowledge are destined to fall. By self-knowledge, I mean not the overly psychoanalytical position of the psychiatrist, no! Rather, to know who you are as a son or daughter of the living God; begin to acknowledge that status, and to love your associates with all your heart - for they are likewise children of our same Father. You will see then how you are viewed; you will understand your place in the universe. 'Character' is always growing, developing, and changing. Wise is the man who prunes his own branches. That is all.

RACHEL: Good evening, Father Ham. We have a newcomer with us this evening. Her name is Sarah H. She is a newcomer to the Urantia Book, to the study group, and also to your teaching. I pray that she will continue to come to both meetings - these and our Urantia Book study group, that she may gain a knowledge and really grow spiritually.

HAM: Thank you, Rachel. I am very pleased to meet Sarah this evening.

RACHEL: Also, Alvin Celser. did go to a study group in Anchorage, Alaska. Everything he told them about your teaching and what was happening here - it was like they just poured cold water on it. So needless to say, he came away feeling pretty sad and frustrated. Is there any way you can tell, Father Ham, if the study groups in Juneau or in Fairbanks would be more receptive? He does have his own plane and can fly to where needed for these meetings.

HAM: Most men are secure in their religion. Even within the Urantia Book community, few desire increased spiritual understanding and knowledge. Most cling tenaciously to their settled and safe belief system. Surprising as this may have been for Alvin, it is of little surprise to me. I say to Alvin, seek and you will find - within and without, yes.

JOHN C: Ham, I had a call from a friend of mine this week who claims to be an atheist, and I have had a hard time trying to find a way to approach him with truth. He called concerning his wife who has been ill and has been losing in her fight for life. Her mental capacity has diminished slowly since an automobile accident about a year and a half ago. They have spent a lot of time with doctors. He called asking me, perhaps with my limited medical knowledge, that maybe I could give him some ideas. And in doing that, I explained a little about your lessons and he said that it would be agreeable for him and his wife if you could assist in any way, perhaps diagnose, or prescribe some type of treatment that could help his wife?

HAM: Permission is granted to give these people transcripts or tapes of our meetings sessions. If then they desire to speak with me, I will be pleased and happy to do so. Begin with this first, the giving of the lessons. We will observe the results and proceed from there.

ANDREA: First, I'd just like to let you know that the apology has been accepted and I am so grateful for this wonderful son that has been brought into my life. I would like to thank Father for the opportunity to raise this child. And I would like to thank you for the guidance that you have given me. (Ham: Thank you.)

CALVIN: Hello, Teacher. I have been trying to write down your lesson, but you lost me tonight, or Rebecca did, so I couldn't keep up. I get impatient to wait for the tapes – is there possibly a better way you could suggest that we could get a correct recording and make it more readily available in written form. I would think that if we had a court recorder stenographer-style, and they type them off and pass them out. Maybe I should just be patient and wait for the tapes. (Jason: Or, you'd better learn stenography.) [laughter.]

HAM: These problems are of a human nature which I do not desire to meddle in. At the earlier meetings, Rebecca says you would not have had problems writing things down. [laughter.]

CALVIN: In your lesson tonight you said, unstable souls waver – I believe you said that 'wavering in self-knowledge, one is destined to fall.' Then you clarified what you meant by self-knowledge. When you say 'destined to fall,' do you mean to 'fall for a short time and then pick up later on a Mansion World?' or fall, as in 'fall and never ascend?'

HAM: Oh no. Only a temporary falling in order to find that self in self-searching. To find God often it is required for humans to experience much adversity, which tends to lower the ego walls of a false self. Only then can such a person begin to reach for the Father in contrite humility asking sincerely for help in understanding. Only then can the beginning shoots of the soul find firm roots to grow in. Often a major catastrophe occurs, and this is not a wrathful God punishing His wayward child, no, but rather is the natural outworking of life on this world which results in much adversity, enough to where a self-satisfied soul wonders about himself or herself in truth, and begins to really seek for their inner God.

CALVIN: Is it okay then, from what you are saying, that it is good to feel inadequate and feel weak, which therefore can cause one to reach out and ask for help from God.

HAM: Yes, yes! so long as this feeling is not all-encompassing in despair and depression. Feeling weak and inadequate, yes, is a beginning of understanding your relationship to the Lord, for no one can help but feel this way in beginning to seek God. Knowing His spirit lives within your mind and is helping, guiding, showing you always, is a source of great strength. This strength is not drawn from the well of self-ego, no! but rather, is drawn from an everlasting spring of divine help and love.

CALVIN: Thanks. That helps very much. It's good to know that about myself, feeling like an unstable soul, that I am not destined to fall. Thank you.

VELETA: Father Ham, along the same lines that Calvin was on: If one is to feel like a person that's weak and is having a tough time to the point to where they may be having the feeling of being engulfed in depression, what are some suggestions you can give to help feel better about life in general – to feel stronger and to do the things one needs to do? Can you give me some direction there?

HAM: Yes. Often our own mind clouds reality. It may do so with feelings of depression – which tends to show all the world as a vast disappointment to the person. This is a reflection of feeling disappointed with oneself. The only way to overcome this feeling is by grasping the eternal truth that you are a daughter of the Most High God; His own daughter. He understands all your feelings and emotions. He desires of you to stand up as His daughter and to overcome these small difficulties. Use His viewpoint; use this understanding, to see yourself kneeling before a seemingly insurmountable obstruction – which, if you stand, you may walk over. His viewpoint is long range. The difficulties you may be having now are short range. See yourself as an eternal soul, one who will unite with the universal Father Fragment within you, in the wondrous journeying toward Paradise. View yourself in this long-range perspective. View yourself as a daughter of the living God, always. Begin to see these small difficulties as preparation – preparation of your soul for greater things. Know within you that you can, and will, overcome any obstacle. Life, as it is lived on this world, is so short; and the journey to Paradise, is so long. These minor obstacles – though they may seem large, if you keep with the greater viewpoint, you may get a better perspective. Is there anything more specific I may help you with this evening? (Veleta: No. Not this evening but I'll talk to you more on Sunday. Thank you very much. That was very enlightening.)

ROLAND: Teacher Ham, there was a very significant experience on Sunday with you and Jason. There was a concept that I think probably needs clarified and brought to resolution from that meeting; and, given the earlier remarks tonight about will-creature intervention and error in the transmission process, it might be well to see if my understanding was clear on it: We are here convened in a school of high-level spiritual understanding and learning, which brings us to the harmonization and in-tune-ment with our indwelling Spirits. The true prosperity (spiritual, mental, and physical) of the will-creature, or mortal, is the sole responsibility of the indwelling Spirit in cooperation with His personality mortal. And that is your mission – to teach us how we can better unify and become in-tune with our indwelling Spirit. And we know that our prosperity comes from that harmonization – our closer unity with the indwelling Spirit. And then, in conjunction with that indwelling Spirit, to bask upon the world to provide all of our material needs. And that, in fact, it is not any part of your mission to provide any kind of material assistance. That's the way I understood it. Can you confirm that? (Ham: Correct, yes.) Roland: Given that – then each one of us is charged with the responsibility of providing for our well-being in the physical world and arranging our affairs in such a way that we will have as much time as possible to devote to this service of this Correcting Time Teaching Mission. (Ham: Correct again, yes.) Roland: That's a great relief to know exactly how that is. There is one other question that is a little less positive: In the Urantia Book, in the section describing the default of Adam and Eve, there was a reference to Eve and a generalization made about women – that they were “a little less farsighted,” and “more impatient to see immediate results.” It states that this was part of the cause for default or the beguilement of Eve being led away under false pretensions. This seems to me that is part of a sexist generalization about women. That in truth, that it could easily be said that 'human beings' are a little less farsighted and interested in the immediate; that 'all' are a little impatient, not just 'women.' The reason that I address this subject is not so much that I don't understand, but that perhaps this too was part of human 'will-creature input' into that paper? How do we explain to new readers who are keenly aware of the Adam and Eve story and how sexist that is in the Bible – how can we explain this apparent oversight or unequal spiritual view of women in this particular passage in the Urantia Book?

HAM: The female mind is slightly different than the male mind. And it is observed among females – even on our System capital, Jerusem, with the material daughters from Edentia– that this trait of which you mention is apparent more-so than in male material sons. [Editor's note: The Urantia Book discloses that the “material sons and material daughters – the Adams and Eves, hail from the capital of Norlatiadek– Edentia.] Ham: Women in general on Urantia possess excellent minds and wonderful reasoning capabilities. It is, however, also observed among women of Urantia that they possess the same tendency as was Eve – to not be as farsighted in their planning – but rather, to desire more immediate gratification. This is not true of 'all women' compared to 'all men,' of course – only an observation of general mental tendency. It is not meant to be a sexist remark made in ignorance, but one made merely as an observation.

JASON: Good evening, Teacher Ham. I am very grateful for you and your words. Yesterday I needed a swift kick to restart my motor. As of today, I have begun pruning my tree. [laughter.] Any sprout that may have grown crooked, I chopped them and am now a little more straight in my thinking. I have a new motivation to do my mission work as best I can. I wish to express my thanks to the celestial governing council in letting me roast in the frying pan for two months to bring out my ego so that I could cut it off as well. That's all I have to say this evening, Teacher. Thanks once again. (Ham: You're welcome, Jason. Be careful not to cut too much.) [laughter.]

MARIANNA: I was thinking about this ego thing this afternoon. I have been so exhilarated with my new-found knowledge and my happiness, and in thinking about it – what part of this too, is my ego that is feeling so 'chosen' and so happy to be included? Can you give me a little more help in controlling my ego? I really don't want to stem my enthusiasm, but maybe I should calm down.

HAM: No. Happiness is a natural out-flowing of spirituality. Acknowledgment of your place as one who is fortunate in receiving these first teachings is wise. You do very well, Marianna. Believe with a whole heart that your Father in heaven has guided you and is watching you always.

WILLEENA: Father Ham, this lesson was very poignant to me. My life as a human – and I have observed that most people seem not to be like myself – I realize life is that process of learning to come back to the Father, coming back to the center, coming back to the point of having both feet on the ground with clarity and with responsibility. I know that I have spent a great deal of my life mainly putting myself down, I do that to myself. I have seen people who have done the opposite, and I have seen people who fluctuate in both places. It seems to be a pattern in the human condition of not feeling 'good enough' to be the child of the Almighty. I am wondering with regard to true self-knowledge – it seems that we are in the process, that life itself is the process, of being unstable, falling down, picking ourselves up, gaining some knowledge, some understanding – going along a little further, maybe going off to the right too far, finding out that self-elevation is not the right way, and then going back to the self-debasement. Are we progressing directly enough? Is there something more? How do I really understand this concept of being this loved and this precious in the universe, and have it be so 'on target' that there is not like a 'fat head' about it? It's like that whole thing about self-elevation and self-debasement – how do I come to a state of purity in recognizing in myself as a child of the living God?

HAM: Willeena, my daughter, friend, and co-worker – you are doing this daily, more and more. Do you not feel that in knowing this immense blessing, that you have not falsely elevated yourself? Do you not feel that in your knowing this immense blessing that it has provided a cushion for you so your self-debasement cannot go any further? I perceive your balance is much greater than a year ago; and I also perceive your spiritual growth has been wonderful. Wise, cautious, and excellent in spirit are you. Far will you ascend in the kingdom during your lifetime and further. You are inspiring to others. You are a great and magnificent soul, even if not fully seen by yourself. Let go of some things and walk ahead in assurance, my daughter. (Willeena: Thank you, Father Ham. I love you.) Ham: You're welcome, my daughter. I love you also.

BRAD: Father Ham, this is the first time I have spoken with you. I have been here a few months observing and tying into this wonderful teaching; I am starting to feel very much now recently within myself. I have traveled many paths and I have discovered many things along this road of life. I am very glad to be here and very grateful for your teachings. My question is dealing with something we have been contemplating at work: We have group contemplation's which you probably know about. We have been talking about fear lately. I would like you to give some words of guidance on how we can be fearless in the face of fear?

HAM: Fear stems mostly in unknowing – an animal reaction of a physical nature to the unknowing. For a man who walks a pure path as you, fear is very little in the way of the outside world. Inside fears of self-doubt, self-failure, and self-inadequacy, may sometimes plague even the purest of souls. Natural is this process in the mortal life, for out of self-doubt comes certainty. Out of self-inadequacy comes strength. Out of self-failure (the fear of self-failure) comes success. All these things tend to be opposite sides of the same coin so that when seeing one, we also see the other – whether in the mental life or in outer life, this is often so. Think on this and we will discuss this further.

BRAD: Thank you, Father Ham. That was very helpful. I am just kind of curious – are you present at all during our conversations at work, or are you just aware of them? (Ham: I am aware, yes. Personally, I have been present on one occasion. Yes. Christ's path. Christ's path.)

CALVIN: I just have a quick question. I have a terrible time remembering things. Like yesterday, I'll see somebody, I'll talk to them and I'll have their name four or five times, and the very next day I remember them vaguely, but I haven't a clue what their name is. I have really tried to get better at that. Any help I might have? I don't know how to help myself remember people's names better.

HAM: Human problem requiring human solution. Sorry. For now, I would like to close this meeting session and wish you all a wonderful growing spiritual week. And I, again, wish to be in your presences next week. Farewell.

HAM: Do you feel that your enthusiasm was threatening to them?

RISDON: It could have been, yes; that is hard for me to see. Sometimes I get over-excited and maybe some part of that is my thinking that this is better than anything else, even though I don't try to portray that, but maybe some of that propensity is in there.

HAM: Jesus taught by asking questions. Try to draw out your subject/person by asking questions. By your questions you can teach in little bits. Showing the way, a little bit, without too much light, too fast.

RISDON: Thank you. That helps a lot. I have a second question regarding my wife Jana, who for a long time, maybe a year or more, has had some sores on her arms. She has been to many doctors, and they have stated that it may be stress. Sometimes they go away a little bit and then they come back. Is there anything that you can tell me about these sores? (Ham: No, I don't have anything specific. Query – Is she feeling any better, all-around health?)

RISDON: Most of the time she doesn't. She does come and get healing once in a while from Joshua, but most of the time she has stayed continually sick, one thing or the other.

HAM: Do you think that spiritual bread would be benefiting? By that, I mean, would she be ready to come to our group teaching lessons?

RISDON: I think that my wife is very spiritual in some ways; and I know that her body has been hurting from the car accident for a long time. It is hard for her to be comfortable with such pains in her body; I think it is frustrating to her because sometimes she does want to come, but it takes such toll on her to do so.

HAM: Often in spiritual growth comes an all-around better physical health as well. If she is able to attend, I personally feel that it would be beneficial in the long run, for each health-failing feeds into another health-failing. It has become a cycle of distress and worry. If by chance we could help alleviate the distress and worry, then perhaps the health symptoms would alleviate a little too. I am only suggesting.

DAVID: Father Ham, I have a friend, Shirley S., who has four girls, and all of them have some very severe either mental or physical problems. I have been talking with Shirley a lot about the Urantia Book and I believe that in time she will be willing to embrace the beliefs that are in the book. I was wondering if it would be possible for you to evaluate her and her kid's situation and see if they would be candidates for spiritual healing. And secondly, if this is the case, how could I approach her with the subject? I don't want her to believe in the movement and everything just for the healing themselves; but yet, I think it would give her a lot of hope that she doesn't have right now. Could you help me with that?

HAM: Yes. The healing benefit made possible by Joshua is available to all, really. However, some may benefit more than others; some physical symptoms may benefit more than others; a wide range of results can happen. Personally, I feel her situation is known best by you. You are helping her, already, spiritually especially, and this in itself is helping very much. Use your own understanding of her mental state to decide how much to express to her without expressing too much. I am, in this case, leaving this up to you.

MARIANNA: I have been reading papers from previous meetings. There was a discussion on 'truth,' that "the truth is not facts." Could you explore the idea of truth just a little bit more, to help clarify my thoughts?

HAM: Yes. Truth is soul-experience. Truth is that experience of knowing reality. I teach truth, for I teach 'spiritual reality.' And this spiritual reality, and its repercussion within the soul, is truth. Facts, on the other hand, are things known intellectually only. So therefore, one may be correct as to the facts of a given situation, but wrong as to the truth of the meaning of the situation. For example: The facts are that there are people in this room listening to my discourse. The truth is, my discourse has drawn the people to this room. And the meaning of this may go beyond our understanding, for the true meaning of the God-knowing person receiving the words of truth of God creates a new meaning; and this meaning is a part of the Supreme Being – which full comprehension is beyond my understanding. Truth is like a bell. The bell rings and creates waves of sound which are not the bell. The waves of sound reverberate in the listener and the listener gives it meaning and appreciation – for then is the listener understanding the bell. If that bell were God and His ringing, and His words are coming to the listener – how much more meaning is that? Truth is everlasting spiritual reality – which is God. Facts are simply things known or accepted as known. These two – one on a spiritual-reality plane; the other on a material-reality plane – are very different concepts. Is this becoming clearer? (Marianna: Yes, Father Ham. Thank you, ever so much.)

ROLAND: Teacher Ham, in the Sunday night meeting which I was privileged to be a part of with yourself and Rebecca, there was a clarity of 'the mission of the Woods Cross Group' stated that I feel compelled to share. And in doing so, I wish to ask that if I misspoke about this 'Mission,' that you help us in clarification or amplification? (Ham: Certainly.)

ROLAND: As follows: "The initial contact by yourself with Woods Cross Group is for the purpose of bringing each of us (as you have reiterated this evening) to a personal God-awareness, a God-consciousness, which, in conjunction with each personality and each God Fragment within each of us, brings a light, a spiritual awakening, a spiritual attractiveness, and spiritual power - which then, as we radiate this experience to others, brings them to us for the opportunity to express and tell those who come, of this Teaching Mission, and of the new and expanded gospel." This seems a simple definition, but one which each person will manifest in their own individual way. (Ham: Correct, correct, yes.)

ROLAND: Then can you amplify or make clearer. (Ham: It is clear.)

ROLAND: I think, for myself, I have been waiting for a spectacular event or happening to initiate action upon my own part. Surely there has been many communications and events in my life which have been abundant and full, and I am very thankful for them. I'm feeling that this simple Mission is one which we can now seize upon as a developing momentum, and with an immediate charge to each one of us to go forth and bring others to this group as new believers. Is this our course of action?

HAM: Yes. Yes, very much so - a very quiet movement; one without spectacularism or radicalism. We exact (or expect) the personal loyalty of everyone, to the Father. This loyalty, which is above all things, will lead you to do what is best for all concerned. Father, who is personally present within each person, must be the ultimate guide. Advice I will give now and again when asked, yes! but direction in one's life, I will not, for this must come from our indwelling Father. Is this helpful in your understanding?

ROLAND: I think it is very clarifying for me. One question I have in regard to reading in the Urantia Book: Going back to the default of Adam and Eve - as I read it, it indicates that there is enmity between the man and the woman. It seems that is stated in another section of the book about the relationship between man and woman - that there are natural hostilities and antagonisms stemming from the advent of the 'default.' Is that a natural state of all mortals? And, is it unique to just our world, or is it a common problem amongst the evolving worlds? Can you address this?

HAM: Yes. There are certain differences between the male and the female of your species, which are biologically predetermined and affect all areas of personal development. Temperamental qualities, yes; and yes, qualitative differences abound. These differences we must look at as not 'antagonistic' but rather, as the spice which causes life to be enjoyable. Often these differences create a dynamic of personal interchange which can be amazingly fruitful in all areas of life: home building, child rearing, working relationships (intimate and non-intimate). These differences of mind are there for a purpose. Usually, the working together of the two is better than the working between the same sexes in many respects. As it states in the Urantia Book, complete and total understanding of one sex by the other, is impossible – for so much is involved in mental temperament and traits that are associated within one's sex. There can be, therefore, no complete understanding between the two, but this does not mean that there cannot be sympathetic tolerance between the two. Do you have anything more specific?

ROLAND: Then the enmity was not created by the default of Adam and Eve? (Ham: Correct. And this enmity has evolved for the better, in general, throughout the universe, as far as I know.)

ROLAND: Then we don't have, for lack of a better term, 'a curse' that has been placed between men and women to create the apparent differences that we see in our modern society, from the disobedience or the default action of Adam and Eve? (Ham: No. No. That would be misunderstanding. There is no curse on mankind at all.)

ROLAND: The other question that I have, or pondered about: In this particular Paper, it seems like it is rich with things which one could think about, such as when the caravan of the Adamites were journeying to the second garden, and during that journey celestial messengers came to that caravan and took two-thirds of the children, including all the children of Adam and Eve, who were not of decision-making age, back to Edentia as a part of some punishment that was wrought against Adam and Eve. Can you help me with that?

HAM: Incorrect. The children who left, decided fully to go on their own accord. The children of pre-decision-making age were taken for their greater good, and the children who decided to stay, were left.

ROLAND: For some reason, my understanding was that this was a punishment in effect. (Ham: Incorrect. Each person's personal decision was respected. That is all.)

LORAIN: I don't really have a question at this time, Father Ham. I just wanted to thank you for the lesson, and the other comments; they have really touched me very deeply; they've touched my heart. I just wanted to thank you; and thank God for the blessing of opportunity that this is for me. Thank you. (Ham: A simple "you're welcome" is not deep enough to express my return heart feelings.)

ELWARD: Ham, in the lesson tonight you said that we could teach by asking questions. Would a good question to ask someone be something like: 'If I had a truth that could benefit you in your life, would you be willing to listen to it?' (Ham: Yes. Yes, of course.) Elward: If you followed this question with: 'If it were to interfere with what you have been taught, would you still be willing to listen to it?'

HAM: Yes. This is a wise and gentle manner to introduce a truth which may be contrary to a person's belief. I advise, however, to draw out by questioning the person's truest belief – which, despite all belief systems, will naturally be a truth – 'to them.' Bring this forward and nurture this rather than trying to tear down a belief wall. Let those walls fall when they may. No person can decide for another what they should or should not believe.

ELWARD: Thank you. Could you give us some examples of questions that we might ask?

HAM: Yes. "How, my brother, do you best perceive the Lord our Father?" "What is your highest concept of Him?" "How has He touched you in your life?" "How do you know, personally, of God's goodness?" Do you see, questions like this – which show your interest in that person, deeply, in their deepest thought motivations – are really more constructive for that person than anything that you could say. Are you understanding? (Elward: Yes. Thank you).

JEREMIAH: Father Ham, I also have a question regarding the Urantia Book. A while back I was reading that our seventh superuniverse, Orvonton, is based on 'love and mercy.' I understand that Father is the Source of love, and the Creator Sons are Sons of mercy. My question is: With all the attributes of God, are these two (the ones which are highlighted as 'in our superuniverse-'), are these simply 'as in contrast to the other superuniverses' which might have different attributes highlighted? (Ham: Yes. You are correct. The superuniverses, in their spiritual administration, are governed by Sons created for that superuniverse, so that each one is a unique expression of the Father, and the Trinity, and their interaction. Yes.)

JEREMIAH: Are you at liberty to give us examples on some of the other superuniverses – on what some of these attributes are? Or are we not to be concerned of the other superuniverses at this level of our development? (Ham: It is not a matter of spiritual importance for you at this time.)

I would like at this time to break, for the connection with Rebecca is weakening and it is becoming harder to answer accurately. Next week I will answer your further questions. Until then, I must say, farewell.

Personal Character is Forged in the Fires of Adversity. Gratitude is a Mighty Attitude Changer

Jan 1st. 2025 zoom meeting: Before we get into today's lesson, here's an excerpt from the UB which is consistent with Ham's previous lesson in response to Elward and also Risdon's question regarding effective ways to teach one with long-held traditional beliefs. This excerpt is referring to the time he spent with Ganid and Gonod (from India) while traveling much of Europe:

(1455.4) 132:0.4 Jesus learned much about men while in Rome, but the most valuable of all the manifold experiences of his six months' sojourn in that city was his contact with, and influence upon, the religious leaders of the empire's capital. Before the end of the first week in Rome Jesus had sought out, and had made the acquaintance of, the worth-while leaders of the Cynics, the Stoics, and the mystery cults, in particular the Mithraic group. Whether or not it was apparent to Jesus that the Jews were going to reject his mission, he most certainly foresaw that his messengers were presently coming to Rome to proclaim the kingdom of heaven; and he therefore set about, in the most amazing manner, to prepare the way for the better and more certain reception of their message. He selected five of the leading Stoics, eleven of the Cynics, and sixteen of the mystery-cult leaders and spent much of his spare time for almost six months in intimate association with these religious teachers. And this was his method of instruction: Never once did he attack their errors or even mention the flaws in their teachings. In each case he would select the truth in what they taught and then proceed so to embellish and illuminate this truth in their minds that in a very short time this enhancement of the truth effectively crowded out the associated error; and thus were these Jesus-taught men and women prepared for the subsequent recognition of additional and similar truths in the teachings of the early Christian missionaries. It was this early acceptance of the teachings of the gospel preachers which gave that powerful impetus to the rapid spread of Christianity in Rome and from there throughout the empire.

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. I have decided that the beginning prayers are so lovely that another introductory prayer is unnecessary. I will, therefore, begin directly. Thank you, Elward, for your kindhearted prayer.

Life is like a continuous prayer – we ask our Father for many things but are sometimes disappointed with the reality which ensues. Better it is, then, to live a joyful and complete life, praising our Father in all things, even for our disappointments and apparent failures. He who sees all things looks deeply into your hearts in times of crisis decisions. When all seems hopeless and dark, a ray of light always enters the faith-filled person, guiding and showing the way to a greater comfort state.

Discomfort in life has a purpose and reason; not to cause you to flee from it, no – but rather, to strengthen your character by enduring what is discomfort. Strength of personal character is forged in the fires of adversity. When life is too easy, overly comfortable, then are decisions easily passed over – decisions which need to be made for strength and courage to be made manifest.

Hard decisions require courage and stamina in their follow-through. When Jesus found a lost child, for example, He spent a good portion of the day searching for the child's parents. He made a decision to help and He had the strength, courage, and stamina to follow this through. This is an example of 'strength of character made manifest.'

Ease in life is generally sought after and yet, rarely found. Life is not easy; it is not meant to be. When you give your word on something, have you strength to follow through? Or, do you sometimes take an easier pathway neglecting your original decision? Strong characters are resolute characters. Hard though your paths may seem, persevere and you will be rewarded by your Father who sees all and knows your true intent. Envy not your fellows for whatever station in life they hold. Each mortal lives life and learns life's lessons differently. Your precious life is for you alone to live.

Each person makes individual choices, sacrifices, and endeavors to create a unique life of God-worthiness. Judge not your fellows, for I say this again – their own decisions, their life, is theirs to live; and no mortal is ever capable or fit to pass judgment on another, no matter what the circumstance.

Therefore I say to you, live your lives fully and deeply in the knowledge of your relation to the Father each day. Be grateful for your lives, even when it is the hardest of circumstances. When the feeling of gratitude is far from your hearts, attempt to bring it back. Think more deeply and more farsightedly about your life circumstance.

Yes, everyone faces their own unique challenges with family, with work, etc. Be grateful for the opportunity to surmount those challenges and to show yourself what you can do. Our Father has all the confidence in the world in you; He knows already what you can do – perhaps maybe you will even surprise yourselves. Remember, gratitude is a mighty attitude changer and useful in many of life's situations. That is all. I will receive questions.

JOSHUA: Father Ham, yesterday I received a telephone call from a gentleman named, Bruce M. of Knoxville, Tennessee. They have communicated with the people in New Zealand and request a Teacher for their group. (Ham: Granted. A Teacher is due shortly.) Joshua: Thank you. Would you care to tell us the Teacher's name? (Ham: El Roy.)

RISDON: Good evening, Father Ham. I have been pondering a question recently in regard to a concept that I have had for a while from books that I have read, movies that I have seen, and experiences that have happened to me. The concept is that everything has a purpose, that there are no accidents, per se; and I don't mean it in a way that everything is completely planned out for us, but more as an optimistic way of looking at things so that sometimes when things do go wrong, we do have a reason for those things that go wrong. Can you tell me if this is an accurate concept?

HAM: Yes and no. Everything in life is a combination of pre-determination and the accidental world. So much of life on this world is bound up in material matter of time and space. Human life is the progressive path of increasing spiritual control over the material. Many people are far less spiritual than you are; they are prone to experience more of the accidents of time, and may even inflict these accidents upon you. Your spiritual guidance may find that the best understanding for you is to have your experience in these accidents so that you gain enlightenment, even though they are an apparent misfortune. So you see, not that an accident was pre-determined to happen to you so that you would 'learn this lesson,' no – but rather, your indwelling Spirit found the lesson in the accident to give you. Is this helping?

RISDON: Very much so. I have another question in regard to your lesson tonight. You state that each one of us goes through a certain amount of discomfort. Though sometimes, as I see people go through their hard times, I seem to see some people go through a terrible amount of discomfort, and a part of me says: "Well God wouldn't give this person this amount of discomfort if the person couldn't handle it." And another part of me says it's so unfair; it is so hard to watch people go through so much discomfort. I ask if you could comment on that.

HAM: Yes. The accidents of time and space are not fair. In spiritual reality, these things are known as minor in the overall view. To a suffering mortal a different view of course, is seen. That is why I endeavor to give you a broader outlook, enhanced wisdom, and a stronger base to stand on in view of all the many different sufferings you all go through. Father, of course, has not willed these sufferings upon you. In His great plan, sufferings are an inevitable result, but short-lived for the individual. What matters it if you endure hardship for a tiny fraction of your eternal life if this is the greatest determining factor in your survival? Wise and correct it is to have compassion for your fellows. Yet, how could you know compassion without ever experiencing suffering? Compassion is a great and worthy spiritual fruit which can only come in self-identifying with another. Mercy is God's great abundance. His mercy is infinite. How would you understand mercy without knowing sin and suffering? In God's great design, His spiritual nature rules and dominates. Only the partial reality is sin and suffering; and though existent, they are not enduring – they are only partial shadows of the true reality of God. Do you have further inquiry?

RISDON: No. No thank you. That was beautiful. I just want to say that I love you very much as a Teacher and a friend, and I think of you often.

HAM: Thank you. The feelings which are communicated, I give you also in return.

JEREMIAH: Good evening, Father Ham. I have two questions. The first one is to do with your lesson: You say: "Live your lives to the fullest." Can you talk about that a little further?

HAM: Yes. Each moment lived is a wonder. Often we forget who we are, where we are going, and what this life means. When we reflect on these things (on God, His goodness, and the beauties of His world) and come to appreciate His children, then are we just beginning to live life fully, for we have a greater awareness of true reality. Each moment can be enjoyed for itself, for to live in the present, in the presence of God, in communion with our brothers and sisters – this is the beginning to living life fully.

JEREMIAH: Thank you. My final question: I am having trouble with respect to 'will,' and 'desire.' Can you help me understand these two terms and the difference between them?

HAM: Yes. Desire is the beginning step of will. Will is the actual living of a desire which is a thought pre-action. Will is the thinking and acting-out of a plan which is desired. When we desire to do God's will, the first step is taken toward the doing of His plan so that when your will and His will match, you are actually living God's plan for you. Is this helping?

JEREMIAH: It's very clear. Thank you very much, Teacher.

JOHN: Father Ham, I am having a problem regarding fear. I understand that I should look at my relationship with God, realize my sonship and take great joy in that. I think I realize that intellectually, but I have a hard time realizing it spiritually, and making it a part of my life. I was wondering how best to deal with that and incorporate it, as well as to just understand it?

HAM: Yes. Fear often inhibits true spiritual understanding and growth. It acts as a blinder to the more complete vision of life. Fear can create tunnel-vision of sorts, preventing a wider and more meaningful picture of reality to enter our souls. It is wise in life to reduce fear and anxiety. Understanding of your sonship with God will gradually take root and grow; and in doing so, will crowd out the small weeds of fear and mortal cares. These weeds of anxiety should not be allowed to choke the good plant of spirit. A willful and purposeful decision – to disallow anxiety to be a factor in decisions – must be made. That is, exercise your right of being; this right includes freedom from anxiety, freedom from fear – it is your birthright as a son of God which gives you this privilege. Stress in life often creates a haziness in thinking and forgetfulness, for we tend to adhere to troubling thoughts and not let them go. Adhere instead to pleasant thoughts; don't let them go. Focus not on the weeds, the insignificant things of life. Look well to your shrub which will soon be a tree. Acknowledge your spiritual growth and progress – think how wonderful it is expanding your horizons in this way. If anything that I have said is helpful, then I am most pleased, for I hope to be of help. I know that often these words may seem hollow.

JOHN: No. They are very helpful. Thank you. I have another question: We were reading about personality extinction, and I get kind of confused as to whether the Ancients of Days are always the ones that judge on that? I came home from the study group and was reading, and it said that a Magisterial Son, in the case of a planetary dispensation, will adjudicate that age for surviving mortals, or mortals who don't survive – could you clarify that?

HAM: The Ancients of Days always pass final verdict. They receive recommendations from lower tribunals, much as your modern courts do. (John: Thank you. I just wanted to tell you how much I appreciate you.)

HAM: Thank you, John. I love you.

RACHEL: Good evening, Father Ham. I likewise, thought your lesson tonight was wonderful and with a lot of food for thought. I thank you. I would like to ask how our individual guardian angels are chosen, and who assigns them to us.

HAM: They volunteer to escort you through life and are assigned by a tribunal of angels who review your personal needs and decide the pair best to accompany you, personally. This recommendation is transferred up to the world of angels surrounding Salvington where there is another tribunal which passes on that decision. The higher tribunal has final approval of jurisdiction.

RACHEL: I thank you. Then they really are assigned to us to match our needs – more or less the same as our spiritual names that are given to us, matching our personality as close as possible. Is this correct? (Ham: Somewhat, though names and beings are very different.)

CALVIN: Of the inhabited worlds in a System, where there are eventually one thousand inhabited worlds – and I understand there is not nearly that many in our system yet – but is that literal physical worlds? I read in the Urantia Book where it speaks of super-physical worlds, which are architectural worlds. I understand that we are material beings, and that there are also morontial and spiritual beings – so is that true also regarding ‘worlds’ – physical planets? Morontial worlds? and spiritual planets? Could you help me on that?

HAM: All of the planets’ systems are material with some having architectural addition of morontia materials. The System planetary mortal evolutionary worlds are material entirely. There is no purely spiritually-existing planet, but Paradise is close.

CALVIN: I think I understand – until I got to the part where you said: “Paradise is close.”

HAM: It is not a material reality at all. It is the birthplace of material reality. (Calvin: That helps very much, and I thank you. I also thank you for your lesson.) Ham: You're welcome. I will receive only one more question.

SONJA: Teacher, I ran across the titles of a couple of books that I wanted to ask you about. One of them is called: “Melchizedek Truth Principles,” from the “Ancient Mystical White Brotherhood.” The other one, even more curious to me, is called: “Melchizedek Bible,” and it has a publication date of 1989. For the author, it says: “The order of Melchizedek Staff,” and it is edited by: “students of the anthology of the order of the Melchizedek Staff.” Are you familiar with either one of these books and this group of students? And would this be of any value to us? Is this truth, or whatever?

HAM: You must make your own determination. I can only suggest reading with an open attitude, and to always seek truth, no matter where it seemingly originates.

That is all for this evening. I wish you well this coming week. I sincerely love you all and desire the best for each of you. My job is circumscribed in what I can and cannot say to you. Know I truly desire your well-being and happiness, and am doing the best job I can for you. Farewell.

Florida TM Group Letter Regarding Melchizedek Incarnation | Health and Awareness of the Body

Ham, Ester & Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 03-30-1992

JOSHUA: Roland received transcripts from the Tallahassee, Florida group, which he read at the beginning of our meeting and was not recorded. With his permission, I am reading them to put on the first part of the tape so the rest of the tape will make sense. The Teacher in Tallahassee is named Will (female Teacher). I will read a portion of what Will and others said:

WILL: I wish to say a few words on the rapid and astonishing developments taking place with the Sarasota group. These people, like you, are long-time readers of the Urantia Book and they approach the prospect of further developments with a different component of eagerness than those assembled in this group tonight. Since your Sarasota neighbors are so willing to cooperate and promulgate these teachings, there have been some unforeseen developments in that area.

I recall saying to you some time past that we never know when the Melchizedeks will act, and that many decisions are made at a level far above my own. The administration of heaven has no rumor mill; we find out about things when they happen.

It is not disturbing or surprising to me that those involved in the instruction of the Sarasota group would be taken by surprise that Michael would appear or deliver a message, personally; but I will say that we have come very close to this in this group in the past. Those events, like the Sarasota developments, were told to me only after they had occurred.

It is left for us in the administration to puzzle out exactly what it is Michael intends to do. He is apparently responding to changes in circumstance and it is not known to us exactly when He intends to put His new plan in operation, but it does appear that Machiventa Melchizedek will incarnate and once again walk on the soil of your planet.

I am astonished at these developments. None of this was forecast. Only the roughest outline of the plan which we originally followed has remained. In the details, very little has proven to follow the original forecast. It has a very vital feeling to it all. The Melchizedeks will establish a school, as they did in ages past, with many students with a broad range of ability. Now let us stand by and see if there is further commentary on these events.

JOSHUA: Then Mantutia Melchizedek spoke through their [Tallahassee group] transmission-receiver. He says:

Michael has this to say: You are not the elect, you are the 'select,' and He is pleased. Each of you is known to Him from the beginning of this effort. Each of you is thoroughly examined and found ready for this task. You are known to Him and you will soon stand in His shadow. Your world is scheduled for a change of more than epochal dimension. He proposes to take human form and walk among the people and gather them to Him and reveal Himself to them in all His glory and in the name of the Father.

Michael's light reaches into every corner. There is no place to avoid His power. You cannot shrink from that which surrounds you on all sides. He but has the thought and the event is achieved. Many are His servants. Your world will be blanketed with His shining example. I know whereof I speak for I am a Melchizedek in His service. My name is Mantutia Melchizedek. It is my honor to prepare His way. Malavatia Melchizedek, Machiventa Melchizedek, and myself, will precede him. Michael Himself will usher in the Trinity Teacher Son who will follow in His stead, and God's wake will wash across this universe. It is the tide that raises all boats. Your world will be changed as much as the difference between night and day.

Michael's sun never sets. A new day will dawn for you, our friends and noble companions. You will be called. Make yourselves ready. Clear the decks, the time of action is here and not many days hence you will see these events transpire with your own earthly eyes. Make ready. The table is set. I bid you a fond farewell, and look forward to meeting you, embracing you, each one of you. So be it.

JOSHUA: Then Machiventia Melchizedek spoke:

It has been decided that the instruction groups, while a sterling idea, are not the method to reach the majority of the people, not only on this continent but around the planet. Therefore, we have turned up the fire, Michael has said so. I am happy about it. I look forward to this. I do not long for the burden of the material flesh, but it has its compensations. There are days when the smell of the air makes life worth living. We desire that you enjoy the things of the material life which help you appreciate the great Gods' creation.

Therefore, several of us are asked to take on human form. It is cumbersome, but in many respects rather fun. I anticipate this. In not many days from now we shall look upon each other as brother and sister. I have enjoyed your companionship and fellowship up till now. It has been a joyful experience for all the members of the instruction team. Mark this lesson for it should serve you well. Opportunity leads to further opportunity. We are on a grand adventure.

I look forward to seeing the planets hang in the night sky, the sky lightening before dawn, the heat and the bugs and the dogs. I thought I had set these memories behind me. Now I find that I have another opportunity to re-live these experiences and correct those few mistakes which I made – this time with Michael as my companion, what a joy. I will be happy to be rid of the burdens of office. I prefer to be myself, Machiventa Melchizedek, your companion, your guide, your friend. Many are the conversations we will have together. I welcome this.

Well, we all have work to do. The day will arrive, you will know. In time, everyone will know. What a grand development. I will speak with you again before this transpires, but I must return to the party. Goodnight and God bless you.

[Editor's note: The above was a letter read at this night's meeting from the Tallahassee TM group, and their exchange with the Sarasota (Florida) TM group, concerning transmissions they had received regarding the Melchizedek's 'physical' return and, of the 'Melchizedek teaching schools.' Their transmission did evoke some great wishful-thinking, proof-seeking, exuberance, consternation, and even doubt throughout the Teaching Mission in the months to come. Thoughts to consider regarding this letter of the Florida transmissions, and the Woods Cross TM group's reaction: In Jesus' day, He told his disciples of His promise to return again. Thereafter, in the first generation and the 2000 years since, many of his followers expected this Second Coming event to happen 'any day.' It brought about much anticipation as well as confusion when hopes and expectations were not met. Consider also, and likewise: The prophets of old – from Abraham's day and forward – had foretold of the Messiah to come; that this Messiah would become a living breathing personage in human form. They, the believers in each generation following, anticipated the Messiah event to materialize 'any day now.' And it was approximately 1800 years following the first announcement in Abraham's day that Jesus' literal human birth did occur – the actual fulfillment of their long-held expectation. And so it is again; this announcement of the Melchizedek's materialization in human form (as Machiventa did in Abraham's day), we were told could happen 'any day;' or, it may be 'many years into the future.' To the future students of these Correcting Time Teaching Mission transmissions: Consider that the wording in the above transmissions from the Tallahassee and Sarasota groups 'may' have been contaminated with some human wish-fulfillment and errors of transmission; and/or, contain transcribing error. It is therefore incumbent upon each student of these transmissions to use their own Spirit guidance regarding these matters. In the weeks following this evening's transmission, Abraham and Ham did give some clarifications to the Florida group's announcement.]

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. This evening you have heard an announcement which I am happy to confirm. Though you are unsettled about your understanding, I am ever within a different light. Our time is short this evening, for I am needed elsewhere. Another Teacher is here and will present this evening's lesson. Farewell.

I am ESTER. I am a Teacher who is learning this communication and am pleased. Yes, I am very happy to be here tonight. Long ago I was as you are. I hail from a different system, though near to your location. I have long sought a mission like this one and have been repeatedly disappointed. And now I am so happy to be here, for all my existence has been naturally focused in the service of Michael.

My lesson tonight is concerning health and awareness of the body. In your daily life activity, very little awareness is focused upon the physical, except in times of discomfort. When you are learning to become aware of the spiritual life there occurs an equal awareness-reaction in the physical form or body. When we are in a heightened awareness/consciousness, the body adheres also to awareness so that the sensitivity in the physical senses is also heightened. Ancient yoga practice entails awareness of the breathing which is a calming effect, for mind and body are really a unit in function, together.

Sensitivity to beauty awareness in physical stimulation is enhanced through spiritual eyes. The physical is no less important in your bodily state. Practice, when you are hurrying about in your daily activities, to calm the mind through breathing slowly. Become aware of your surroundings and your bodily senses. Feel the wind on your skin, for example. See the colors of the trees and the sky. Become aware of the feelings on your fingertips. Enjoy the moment of living within the body and the material world.

When this life has passed, small memories will remain with you. Those memories of spiritual importance, which may entail the smelling of a flower or the look in someone's eyes, or the smell of new cut grass - these are things which will remain in your memory. Much of your mortal life will not be remembered, for the experience of living is largely a non-experience. Always you are rushing from one task to another and little are you thinking of awareness. I ask you to focus on awareness this week; and now another person asks to speak.

Greetings. I am ABRAHAM. I am also ecstatic with joy in this great forthcoming event. Though we have not chosen a time element and many of you are unsure as to this unusual occurrence, Melchizedek, my friend/Teacher, always keeps his word. I am not allowed to re-partake of the life in the flesh of course; however, I am always available for counsel, regardless. I am your servant and friend always. Questions?

JOSHUA: Father Abraham, after this event occurs, will that be the end of our having a Teacher?

ABRAHAM: Certainly not. No. Our Teaching Mission is only a beginning for much which will occur; however, the Teaching Mission is the central thread running throughout the Correcting Time. The Teaching Mission is intact and permanent throughout your life.

JOSHUA: Oh, thank you very much. Will we also be able to, at least occasionally, attend the Melchizedek schools?

ABRAHAM: This is future time, and I am unsure of the full ramifications and complete planning which is now in progress. However, I can certainly offer you the hope that many of you will attend in these great schools. I was, myself as a mortal, the beneficiary of the first such school here with Machiventa in the millenniums past. I wish my pupils of today to also experience the greatness of these schools.

JOSHUA: Thank you very much. May we share the information that we have received tonight with our friends in the other Teacher groups? (Abraham: Yes. Of course. They are also my student children, friends. Yes.)

ROLAND: Father Abraham, I am very excited about the news and I'd like you to pass on an invitation to Machiventa to join me in the canyon in Ogden. There are plenty of bugs and great dogs. [laughter.] I will be looking forward to strolling together in that canyon, hopefully. The question that I had tonight is in regard to the information which I garnered this morning during meditations with Amster. It seems that the Teacher groups will continue, and that the Melchizedeks will assist us in bringing people forward, and to give them instructions facilitating their ability to transmission-receive these wonderful lessons for us. Is that part of their assignment? (Abraham: I cannot speculate. Perhaps.)

MARLIN: Abraham, with Michael's second coming incarnation, this time will it end war and hunger and suffering?

ABRAHAM: This great event will be the end of very much suffering. I will here stress that Michael's incarnation may yet be a way in the future. So that you understand, this Melchizedek Teaching Mission may extend through many generations. The most important thing is for each individual person to increasingly find God, within. This brings these great events closer. (Marlin: Thank you. That helps me understand.)

WILLEENA: Father Abraham, is it still in the works as to where these events might take place? And, where the Melchizedek school might be?

ABRAHAM: Yes. You will, of course, be not only informed of these schools but also may very likely be involved in their inception. Much remains to be planned, but often plans are changed, so I cannot say with a certainty where or when, as yet.

WILLEENA: Thank you. As to our part, and I think I heard you correctly, but I want validation: We can help this to occur by bringing our focus and our attention to the stillness within, to coming closer to knowing the Father Fragment within us – is that correct? Is that what you were saying?

ABRAHAM: Of course. Yes. Often we have stressed this essential seed element of the broader Mission context. Each person, whether within or without our Teaching groups, are given the great command: "Be ye perfect, even as my Father in heaven is perfect." When men and women take this command as their greatest goal and purpose in life, then will you see a great change on Urantia.

WILLEENA: My last question: I want to thank Ester for her lesson and it felt very timely. It was a little difficult to settle down after the announcement though, and to be aware. I think that I am picking something up here. It seems to me that the lesson was perfectly timed for this announcement because along with going into the stillness, as we go into a more awareness/presence with our experiences of day-to-day life, that that is as important at this stage, and as effective, as going into the stillness and into our prayers. Is that accurate?

ABRAHAM: Somewhat. We have asked that each person set aside a little time for communion with the Father, exclusively. This practice is extremely helpful throughout your mortal lives and carries into the day-to-day a little greater awareness of the Father. Ester's lesson concerns awareness of beingness. When the awareness of beingness approaches God-consciousness, then you become more completely aware. Am I helping your understanding? (Willeena: Yes. Thank you.)

JOHN: Father Abraham, do I understand correctly that Christ Michael is here on the planet right now?

ABRAHAM: Always is Michael present in spirit. He is personally present always. Understand His greatness. His power and glory encompass a personal presence upon Urantia. But as a being, entity, apart from His spiritual glory, no.

JOHN: Thank you. When the Melchizedeks make themselves incarnate, will they make themselves known to our political structures? or will it be more like when Machiventa came in your day?

ABRAHAM: I am speculating; it will probably follow a similar way to the first way. We have not come in order to coerce or control, rather is our mission, to teach.

DAVID: Father Abraham, it sounded to me, from the message that Roland read, that while Prince Machiventa is incarnate he will not be functioning as vicegerent Planetary Prince. Who would be in his stead? Or, is that something that I got confused on.

ABRAHAM: He is going to function as Planetary Prince until the coming of Michael and then it is unknown.

JASON: Good evening, Father Abraham. Tonight, I would just like to ask one very small question that involves everyone in this room and those with mortal ears across this Teaching Mission. Are there any requisites that we must absolutely meet in unison before the incarnations of the Melchizedeks on Urantia?

ABRAHAM: No, it is not hinging on your personal growth/development; or, a requirement therein. Only is there a requisite for peace and inner-Godly fulfillment, in a way, for such was even requisite before I could speak to you. All spiritual beings focus upon mortals' readiness, you see, for the mortal state is like an embryo waiting, beginning to develop these precious gifts of life. We desire to fulfill their destiny with the Lord, with God. So much spiritual help and energy is directed toward mortals. Never, even during long isolation of rebellion, was your world and its inhabitants ever abandoned. Even the greatest being within this universe did personally come to minister to you, and has promised to do so again. And still I say, no one knows the time of His coming. It may be tomorrow, or in many, many years. It is unknown and probably will not be known to us.

JASON: Thank you, Father Abraham. As far as in regard to Machiventa's arrival, I wish to be first in line to offer any material service that I can offer. That is all I have to say this evening. Thank you, Father Abraham. (Abraham: This is very pleasing and it is gratefully acknowledged. Yes.)

JEREMIAH: Father Abraham, I also would like to be in the service of Prince Machiventa. Thank you. (Abraham: Thank you.)

JOSHUA: Father Abraham, although you would not speculate on a time that the Melchizedeks would incarnate, being an old duffer as I am, will I still be here? (Abraham: Perhaps.) [laughter.] Joshua: Thank you and I also would like to volunteer my services. (Abraham: Acknowledged.)

RACHEL: Listen to Joshua. I am ten years older than he is. Do you think I will make it, Father Abraham? [laughter.] (Abraham: I do.) Rachel: Can you tell us approximately what qualifications we have to have in order to enter into one of the Melchizedek schools? (Abraham: Willingness to learn, I believe, is the greatest qualification necessary. Yes.)

ANDREA: Father Abraham, I am just curious about something. I read the paper in the Urantia Book about the soul, the mind; I was wondering where the soul originates from and if you are escorted here at birth by your guardian angel?

ABRAHAM: The soul is born upon the arrival of the indwelling Spirit Father. It is a living, growing, and vital element in human existence. And this product of living, in collaboration with your indwelling Spirit, is your real element. It is your most real reality – more 'real' than the human body, for soul survives the body's dissolution, and progresses onward. The soul is both spiritual and material, for both elements are incorporated in its growth; material mind pattern, with spiritual meaning and value, becomes as one. The soul concept is well explained within the Urantia papers if you would search for it.

EDWARD: Father Abraham, I have a question that I have been struggling with for quite a while concerning 'striving to become more perfect:' It has to do with trying to overcome various physical excitements such as eating, making money, driving a car, the various different physical enjoyments and excitements we have on this Earth. Is it really necessary, though, to overcome these to the point where you really don't need them? Or, can you still enjoy them while progressing quickly in the spiritual arena?

ABRAHAM: Christ said; "I have come that you may have life, and that you may have it more fully." Self-denial and guilt have no place within the gospel; only immature and fearful minds seek such and teach such. All our Mission-message is involving 'life as you live it;' and is not asking/requiring that you change, no, but that you strive to find God within you. And strive also to make your will be His; to bring His will to yours - which then, brings personal growth and change. That is the essence and the key of spiritual progression through all time and all circumstance; no physical requirement is necessary.

CALVIN: Father Abraham, I've heard you here before and I am most grateful to be here listening tonight, and to speak to you. I just want to say that I have been a student of yours - in the study of what we have of recent, and also what we've had of our scriptures for ages - and I have spent many a night at times alone gazing at the stars and wondering of the great things that you saw and heard. I am most appreciative of the new learning I have since my finding of the Urantia Book, and to see an even greater light, more understanding, of your time here on this world. And here I am as one of your students, personally, in the year 1992 A.D.; it is a humble sobering. How little did I know of the importance of Prince Melchizedek, and am now just realizing. Without my understanding through the Urantia Book I may have never seen that. I am very thankful to those beings and overseers that have been in charge of my life and who have led me and guided me in this direction - I know they have been there through my life and have guided me here. I understand that you, Abraham, have had great charge to do with the Teaching Mission that is going on right now. I wish to thank you for your help to this world, and I know everyone in this room would say the same for there are many lives being touched. And with this new announcement tonight I can see that the things we are learning will be spread very world-wide and at a much-increased pace than what we have gone through for many hundreds, even thousands of years on our world. With that, I would just like to say, thank you.

ABRAHAM: I am also grateful to be here, yes. And on that fine message, Calvin, I am now preparing to part, for I am needed somewhere else. The lesson tonight from Ester, I charge you each to remember this week. I am sorry to say farewell, but time grows short. Shalom.

In Love We Find Our True Spiritual Self. True Love Is True Harmony In All Matters

My greetings to you. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. My lesson tonight is again concerning love. Our Father of all creation is a true being who is at one in His vast dominion. He is everlastingly a source of pure Spirit. He is love. His love is all-embracing and all dominant. His great ideal for your spiritual growth is by and through His vast and all-encompassing love-reality.

All of creation is permeated, guided, inspired, directed and over-controlled, in and by, love. In love, we find our true spiritual self. In love, we find God's true spiritual intent. In love, we can begin to meld our intent with His. This melding is not in discord, not in force, not in violence of any kind; whether it be anger, envy, intolerance, or etc., this is violence in the soul. Love, on the other hand, is tranquil, pure, and purely peaceful. There is no conflict where love reigns.

True love is true harmony in all matters. Love is giving of love as a reaction to its reception. Love is never static. Always does love move and seek to permeate all surroundings. When you become an active channel for this love of the Father do you feel yourself at one with your universe; you begin to find your place within the being of the Supreme God. Peace, joy in service and true nobility – strength in happiness – all come from this finding of love.

Discover for yourselves this wonder of God. Release your barriers to this love-flowing. Begin to relax. Be at home within your love surroundings. Recognize your true identity and place within love. Show your fellows that you have found love. Preach not an intellectual doctrine; rather, show in your lives your love – and thereby, show that you are in truth the sons and daughters of the living God.

Oh callous heart, heed my words. Release your barriers of self-protection. Know you are safe and that you are loved by our Father. Allow His love to begin the process of strengthening without false barriers of fear, and to begin the process of allowing this love to radiate from this heart so long encapsuled in such a small space of fear.

Are there any questions concerning this lesson now? Are you all in understanding of my words?

JOSHUA: Father Ham, Marilyn G. and Conrad S. of St. Louis, Missouri, request a Teacher. Is this possible?

HAM: Yes, of course. I am knowing of whom you speak of and am in the process of assigning a suitable Teacher for them. I need also to say, their group is small and is needing another person who is living near them and is willing and able to transmission-receive our Teaching Mission message. This person is now in process of reading the Urantia Book and will eventually be contacted, and this group can come together. Have faith and be vigilant. That is all.

JAMES: Teacher, when the Father wants to express His love, must He do it through His children by having His children express love to each other? or can He express that love and have His children perceive it directly from the Father to the child.

HAM: Yes. You have all felt our Father's great love in your own being, directly. His love is received both individually and also by and through His children. His love is like a great symphony where each person has a unique note to play. When His love, which is ever-present, is feelingly received by His child, this note bursts forth and blesses all who hear it. Is this in understanding? (James: Yes, thank you.)

WILLEENA: Father Ham, you made a statement: "Oh callous heart, hear these words, release your barriers of self-protection. Know you are safe in the love of the Father." That brings up a question for me: If someone has become very callous in their heart – and that is usually due to pain over a long period of time where they become very cynical – then at that stage, they are often not receptive to words like, 'feel the Father's love.' How then are we to approach someone who is very very shut down, without sounding trite or flowery to them? Is there a way to reach through some of those barriers? or an initial way to begin that process where they could actually hear us?

HAM: Yes. Always show a genuine concern and respect for all people, individually; be unaffected by their cynicism. Be secure within yourself, first, and offer true respect; show concern with their concerns. Trust is the thing most lacking in a person hardened by life; often they would welcome a friend in trust, and gradually, trust may build. In your example of daily life, in casual conversation, show forth the Father's love. It is unnecessary to preach God's goodness when you may exemplify His goodness; this is so much more appealing and brighter and understandable. A soul often responds even when the intellect does not. Often the intellect is slow to follow the soul's leading/growth. Eventually does the intellect build a new world-view to encompass this enlarged reality of reaction experienced by the soul. Appeal not to the intellect alone, it is very unfruitful. Rather, appeal to a person's soul, and do so by example. Is this helping? (Willeena: Absolutely. Thank you.)

JANA: Father Ham, my question is about children that have been either raped, abused, or molested. Because what I am hearing, correct me if I am wrong, that there has to be trust when there is love. How do you approach that? How do they go about learning to love the person that has abused them?

HAM: In children, often their trust is broken by a parent figure. It results in very deep and lasting hurt which is never fully overcome in adult life. All I can comment on regarding this extremely broad and variable subject is to say that all hurts and deep scars may not be erased in mortal life. Mortal life is too short, it is only as a day. Memories and trauma occurring in this time-frame may not be healed by nightfall. This (one's inability to not forgive an abuser) is not a fault for guilt-causing condition, no – just reality, and should not be so burdensome. What you begin in this life surely you will finish in the next. Strive not to cram an eternity into a short mortal life-span – you cannot do it. You cannot become a perfect being in your mortal life, for ages upon ages upon ages are required for this perfecting process. Have patience with yourself. Don't try to do everything. Is this helping?

JANA: Yes, and I have one further question: So then, in order for them to heal themselves do they need to, at that point, forgive and forget who has abused them and learn how to love the person who has abused them?

HAM: No. Not always. Often it is more a matter of self-forgiveness and healing from within, which requires not outward conditions.

CALVIN: Teacher Ham, I'll take advantage of the microphone while I'm ahold of it. I very much appreciate your lesson again tonight – it is most fitting. I find that since I have started coming to your lessons my tolerance seems to be increasing – and hopefully, that means my love also, such as for the people who I seem to not love so much at work, and so on. Yes, my tolerance level has increased tremendously so I can see a very big benefit from your lessons, and I am thankful to you and to Father for that. This weekend, Teacher Ham, there was the LDS conference in town and many of the people who we deal with are avid listeners and followers of that organization. One statement from one of the highest position-holders who had spoken from that conference said: "If we have a prophet, we have everything. If we have no prophet, we have nothing." I found that very alarming – to think that my children who are still in that church, and others, are being taught that they have nothing without a man to speak for them to God. And, in discussing that today at work, my co-workers interpreted that as meaning 'if we have no authority through a prophet' then we have not direct connection with God's 'priesthood authority' to correctly bring us back and get us through this world. How would you comment on that which might help me in discussing with these friends?

HAM: This is a difficult subject which you have raised. On the one hand – is authority of God intended to be given from one to many? In our teaching, authority of God's intent is given directly to each person, recognizing that God's will is discernible by every mortal being; it is ever available to any thirsting soul. On the other hand – to answer another who in true faith believes in 'priesthood authority,' it is difficult because they are not asking. Having based their faith in leadership, they are secure and wish no interference from any outside source. When they feel free to seek other sources of truth, then can one be ready to provide this. When they seek not, no force should be used in trying to persuade them. You are in a delicate spot. Be cautious and tactful. Is this helping?

CALVIN: Yes. Tactful is not my greatest suit, so my wife says. [laughter.] In Isaiah's teachings, he speaks of a latter-day Israel being taught some very great and important things, but the people will not hear nor understand. The quote goes something like: "Whom shall he teach knowledge, and whom shall he make to understand doctrine?" And the answer from God is: "They that are weaned from the milk and drawn from the breasts – them shall you teach." Do I take that to understand what you are saying – those who are ready for the new are those who have been weaned off from their pulpits and their leaders, and are open to new understanding? (Ham: Yes. This was a very appropriate quote. It is often the hardships and trials of life which cause the soul to search. Yes.)

CALVIN: Thank you. I met a lady today who fit the very description of one searching. In essence, she said, like myself and maybe like many of us that are here at your teachings: "Something is not right where I have been and what I have been taught. I am thirsty and waiting for something more clear." Hopefully, she will be with us soon in hearing of your teachings. Thank you, Teacher Ham. (Ham: Thank you, Calvin, for a thoughtful question.)

WILLEENA: Father Ham, Calvin's question brings a point to my mind that I have been pondering since my session with you last Sunday. I was raised in a dogmatic religion, the Catholic Church. It is different from the Mormon Church here, but in some ways, all dogmatic religions seem similar. I realized last night how much of the indoctrination that I was fed affected my ability to approach the Father. I was aware last night at the amount of guilt and shame that I carry from some of those teachings in my early formative years. I experienced a great deal of upset and anger at some of the memories that have come up recently. Things like one of the phrases in the Mass being: "mea culpa, mea culpa, mea culpa.!" Meaning: "through my fault, through my fault, through my fault, Lord!" So, many of those phrases and teachings (not questioning, not supposed to question, and being taught to not think), I have spent a lifetime undoing. I found often, the people who have been subjected to very intensive religious upbringing are suffering from a lack of personal honoring, of a personal relationship with the Father. I heard in your teaching tonight, about anger. Some of these places that surface do cause anger in me. I wonder, how is the best approach to heal that anger without getting stuck in a lot of blame, a lot of resentment and vengeance. Is there a way, as these memories surface, as these wounds become clear, to deal with them without falling into the pit of mindless rage?

HAM: Yes. Understand, truly understand, the intent of those, who in their religious practice and life, that have influenced you. Their intent was certainly for good, even though the results may have been very different. Each person acts in their own light of truth and acts within their own belief system. Their intent is never to harm anyone in this, but to give enlightenment. Even as faulty and mistaken as many of the methods and methodologies are, the intent is usually good. If you can see this and see these people as the Father sees them - struggling with their faith, struggling with their belief system limitation, trying to serve God within these sets of limits - then you may come to understand them and not be so negative. Is this helping? (Willeena: Absolutely. Thank you so much. That's very helpful.)

RISDON: Good evening, Father Ham. Do I clearly understand you that the greatest love that we can share is through our relationship with Father? And, that we can enhance and grow that love with Father by loving our neighbors, our family, friends; and with that, our soul will grow stronger? (Ham: Absolutely. Correct. Yes, you have grasped the essence of my lesson. Yes.)

RISDON: Sometimes, Father Ham, I walk around in my regular daily course - and though I have intentions of showing love or wanting to show love to people, I am faced with my own internal judgments as I go around. Can you give me some advice on what I might do to combat my judgments so that I can more clearly have a chance to have more love for my fellow brothers and sisters?

HAM: Yes. Judgments are a natural human reaction and are a part of your person which differentiates you and your wisdom from others. It is not necessarily negative when viewed from a God-like perspective. You can see yourself and your human mental reactions to those around you by stepping aside, mentally stepping back. In this stepping back, judge not yourself. Allow yourself to be as 'an instrument of the Lord.' This self, which is fraught with difficulties, with judgments, with frailties, etc. - allow this imperfect self to become an instrument of His love. Think on this once a day, of one person whom you may contact and show a little light. We needn't all become great beacons all at once. A little light here, a little light there, is sufficient in a day; this is all you can do. Judge not - and I say, judge not yourself. Allow yourself to be a little greater by recognizing the greatness within.

ELWARD: Ham, if I understand your lesson on love, I get the idea of the love you are talking about is based on action – the way we do live, the way we do treat people, and not based on a feeling or emotion. Would you like to comment on that?

HAM: Yes. Emotional feelings are fleeting, here and gone. Commitment to truth and doing Father's will is the basis of all real spiritual growth. Emotional life – though always present – is an ever-changing mosaic of past and present feelings and experiences which can color your perception of the outer world. Emotions have no real solid basis for planting spiritual seeds, for as shifting sand is the emotional life. Words of truth are planted in the soul's soil – the very basis of being, the solidness of true personality. Am I helping in our query?

ELWARD: Yes. There is one comment I would like to make. A lot of people look at their fellow man in general and have a tendency to say: "After I get to know them, then I can love them." But the idea came to me that our approach should be: "I'll love them first, and then get to know them." How does that sound?

HAM: Very perceptive, for it is best always to base relations on truth, which is love. First meetings can be based on loving feelings rather than mistrust and judgment, so that openness to understanding is already established and need not have obstacles to overcome. Jesus was able to see within a man's heart to his true being and desires. Few of us will achieve such understanding in this life – but I say to you, it was done through love. Is this in understanding?

EDWARD: Teacher Ham, you have given a lesson tonight on love, and of course this is a very encompassing thing, and I hope my questions will be within the framework of that. We know that our Father in heaven loves the individual; loves this world, Urantia, and its outcome. After the Lucifer Rebellion, the circuits were cut off to this world; it's been a devastating thing for this world – it is very primitive and has a long way to go as far as development. My question is: Now that the Lucifer Rebellion has been adjudicated – at least as I understood from my reading the Urantia Book, that the universal circuits would begin to be opened up to us? And in opening them up, is it going to be mainly through contact with super-mortal beings and individuals? Or, will it be by mechanical means also, such as maybe interstellar radio or communication that way, like television or maybe other means of communication? Could you comment on that, please.

HAM: Yes. In the main and most important circuit system, it is spiritual, entirely. Material circuitry is still intact and always has been. Interplanetary communication (between planets) is not part of the system circuit reinstatement, per se, by mechanical means. Rather, are spiritual beings and helpers coming, and they have access to spiritual-based-circuited communication, broadly, all over. Each group of super-mortals, to use your words, are briefed concerning system and universe matters, daily, like you receive your newspaper. Your present state of development, worldwide, is unprepared for so much universe-wide information at present. In the future, you will – or rather your world's peoples will, receive these communications like newspapers. Is this helping? (EDWARD: Yes, and I thank you for clarifying.)

GERRY: Ham, I have an understanding that we are made of light waves and energies and consciousness. And there is an energy that is higher which is coming to this Earth which is helping us to raise our consciousness. This is in assistance to us to raise our consciousness, the energy which is being brought into this planet. Am I correct?

HAM: Yes. You are correct. It is a worldwide effect of the spiritual opening of Urantia. Spiritual growth, receptivity, perception and understanding, should all become enhanced generally for those who seek the spirit. Yes. I will receive one further question for Rebecca is tiring and becoming less clear.

CALVIN: Teacher Ham, last week we received some papers/transmissions from Florida which says: "get ready, make your tables prepared," and so on. My first question: What would you have for us to do, other than increase in our learning and pray that we can comprehend? Secondly: I understand there is some conflicting information; I am not really aware of what it is but there is some conflicting information concerning the announcements about the Melchizedek's taking on a human form. Would you have anything to say to us tonight in regard to these things?

HAM: Yes. First question: No, nothing special required, no. Second question concerning conflicting information: Often the mental clarity of the transmission-receiver is sided in favor of, or disinclined towards, one thing or another, which colors the output. Be aware of this and take it into consideration in all communication which you receive. Always, when using this transmission-receiver method, a human variable input is also present. Therefore, always use your own inner guidance to show you through any seeming conflicts or difficulties. Never will your own inner Source fail you in this. As well, the Spirit of Truth is ever-present for all, to know of and be of service to you each, individually. Use your spiritual power to discern truth for yourself. Rely not on another's understanding, for often you will find errors.

My friends, go now in peace. Peace be with you, and on you, and through you. Our Father's love may guide you and keep you. Until next week, farewell.

Divine and True Reality is a Pre-Existent Government

Back

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. This evening I wish to present a lesson about government. Divine and true reality is a pre-existent government. Your thoughts and will are either 'in tune' with this government or are 'in discord,' causing a reaction in the reality as a ripple on water, invoking reactions which are in accord, or not in accord, with this government.

Karma is a partial idea concerning divine reality and its over-arching and far-reaching effects. The purpose and wisdom of allowing imperfection is held within the divine purpose of spiritual government. Immature creatures are unknowing of their divine responsibilities and are uncaring of their divine Monitors and watchcare Providers. Divine government – this overarching system of truth and divine reality – is all there is. Yet, to the immature soul who is unaware, 'government' (of any kind) is interpreted as a mechanism of restraint.

For the sons and daughters of the living God, government is the all-consuming desire to serve and become a part of His divine kingdom, His government. As true citizens of the universe, how can you reject your --responsibilities – for love is uppermost in your heart; and duty to God, is uppermost in your minds so that you become instruments of divine law and will.

Our Father is no respecter of persons. His law governs all. His children are set apart to serve His great purpose of divine progression. When you speak about a 'mission calling,' understand that you have already received it. How you come and go among your fellows is amazingly important – so important that this Teaching Mission is resting on your shoulders. The truth which you have incorporated into your own individual expression is the complete key to the spreading of our word.

Many may hear this lesson and yet reject my words, even when showing a halfhearted belief. When you completely become a tool and a living channel of God's divine purpose and will, then are you showing the impact and results of your many years of striving, spiritual striving. If I am helping your progress toward what you are striving for, then is the Mission successful.

Often in your private moments are doubts about your own worthiness concerning your overall spiritual mission; this I have understanding knowledge of from my own personal experience, and I exhort you to please rise from your self-centered thinking, and think instead, of others. If you can bring truth – or a broader and more enlightened understanding of our Father, even in a small way, to even one person during your life – how far this goes and is in His hands. Fear not if you feel unready, and fear not if you feel unworthy, for I tell you, I, Ham, have also experienced these feelings and concerns.

When truth is truly bestowed from one being to another where there is full reception of truth, there can be no wrong, there can be no inhibiting of the spiritual fruits which grow from this truth. Surely you have witnessed somewhat of this for yourselves and perhaps for others also. Ask yourselves: "Am I living a fuller, more loving life than I was a year ago?" "Am I growing towards the Father unconsciously?" "Am I helping to bring His light to another?" "Am I becoming truly aware 'as I am,' that I am His growing son or daughter?"

So often when words of divine guidance are spoken, it causes the opposite reaction than intended at first; and often a person becomes overcome with feelings of inadequacies and inferiority. I wish this to be in understanding – that my love for you, each one, is as the Fathers' to my greatest ability; I am saying to you, you are precious to me 'as you are.' Perfection is an everlasting process and not one which must be taken on as a burden.

I wish to emphasize this point about the perfection process. Our purpose is not to burden you with this divine charge, no!. Our purpose is to lighten the loads you have; to enable you, each one, to grow in the Spirit. It is the true freedom of spiritual liberty when you are in knowing of your own self-worth; and, your own true relationship with our Father. This should be a releasing, loving, opening process – not a fearful, doubtful 'wondering if you are worthy' process.

Children, all are worthy. All deserve these words, our teaching. All deserve spiritual truth, guidance, and comfort; and none are ever shunned. Of course I have told you of the great vastness of spiritual and morontial beings who are mobilized and are mobilizing to give these truths to a truth-starved planet. How many on our unseen side are reluctant? none! for all stand ready to help each and every one of you in your life's journey.

Yes. Hold your individual preciousness close. Truly begin to understand – God loves you! He loves who you are; who you are now. Your preciousness to Him is infinite as is His love. Be secure and safe with yourself. Understand His love for you, and feelingly experience this love.

When in your individual meditative practice you feel a comfort, open the doors of your hearts to this comfort as much as you can; allow yourself to feel it, allow yourselves to experience His love for you and His concern. It is not far away, this love – it is so very close, for it is within you all. Seek and you will find it, knock and its door will be open. Know for yourselves this truth – I will tell it many times and I will tell it many ways, for this is the most important thing I can tell you. His love is infinite. There are no bounds and there is no shutting off of His love for you. Are there questions at this time?

RACHEL: Thank you, Father Ham, for your informative and awesome lesson tonight. It was just beautiful. We have four guests with us this evening: We have Rutha and Steve R. and their daughter Amy, from Pocatello, and we are always happy to have them with us. We have Norman J. from Duluth, Minnesota. We want to thank Norman for coming so far to visit with us.

HAM: Yes. Again greetings, and of course our doors are open. Our hearts are pleased and gratified by such a long journey.

JOSHUA: Father Ham, Frosty J. of Pocatello, as you know, is being prepared as a transmission-receiver. She is anticipating moving up to Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, where that group has requested a Teacher; and Frosty wants to know if she will be their transmission-receiver?

HAM: In the present state of development, it is entirely possible. Yes.

JOSHUA: Thank you very much. Bob and Linda L. of Indianapolis, Indiana, request a Teacher for their study group, if possible.

HAM: It is possible, yes, in time. As of now, it is not certain. When a request is made, then further steps are taken to prepare a transmission-receiver for this task. When this person is then close to being ready, a Teacher is assigned in certainty.

Too previous of Teacher contact is not consistently working. Yes, formal request is confirmation of desire, and speeds the process up. Teacher Welmek is possibly their assigned Teacher.

JOSHUA: Thank you very much. I received a phone call from a person in St. Cloud, Minnesota, by the name of Jim Cleveland, who used to be one of the General Council of the Fellowship or Brotherhood. He is now a Teaching Mission believer and volunteers to be of whatever service you can use him. He would just like you to know that.

HAM: How pleased I am to hear so many requests. All are noted and will be acted upon.

JOSHUA: Thank you very much, Father Ham. For myself, I too, like Rachel, would like to say thank you for a very beautiful and wonderful lesson tonight.

EDWARD: Teacher Ham, I have a question relating to tonight's lesson, which was very helpful and duly noted. Could you give a little more assistance on how one might bridge the gap between the intellectual acceptance of the Urantia Book, and the actual living of its message? Also, further insight regarding our emotional or spiritual motivation of our will to accomplish some of these things that you're talking about.

HAM: I understand your concern about intellectual versus spiritual acceptance. To not have a spiritual enhancement is rare among those who have completely read and understood the Urantia Book, for in this understanding comes 'spiritual growth' and 'increased' understanding – the two are really, one. The mind is the gateway to the soul so that when intellectual knowingness becomes real, it is by and through a spiritual means so that the two are mutually interdependent. The knowing of a fact can stay on an intellectual level, yes. But the recognition of truth, in itself, is the spiritual reaction, and is a co-mingling of intellectual understanding and spiritual beingness. Truth, 'when embraced,' is more than just an intellectual attempt, but becomes a wholehearted spiritual commitment. This is, in a sense, the meaning of truth. That is, I am intellectualizing to explain the process of truth-recognition and experience, which is also partly intellectual. Is this helping with your thinking? (Edward: Yes. That is very good and gives me more to ponder over on the subject that you gave. Thank you very much.)

MARIANNA: Father Ham, your lesson tonight was so beautiful. It made me warm all over. I wanted to ask a question about our teaching: You said our Mission task has already been given to us. I guess some of us, me in particular, feel as though I have so little influence over such a small circle of people. I wonder how I can ever make a difference with my life?

HAM: Circles of people tend to shift and change, and grow and shrink. Many people are brought in contact with the God-knowing person by work of the unseen helpers. You needn't concern yourself with this process, for it can be very slow – but is very effective.

MARIANNA: Thank you, Father Ham. The other thing: I keep closing my eyes every once in a while, and I see a white-haired man. I have never had this experience before. Could I possibly be visualizing you? (Ham: Yes. I am envisioned as having white hair.)

ROLAND: Father Ham, we know that Christ Michael has promised to return; and we also know that no man will know the time and the place. My question tonight is: Aside from the time and place – perhaps with your farsightedness, you would be able to describe a scenario in which Jesus, the man – Christ Michael, would return to Urantia? (Ham: Sorry. It is not fitting that I speculate on His will.)

CALVIN: Father Ham, I much enjoyed your lesson. For me, it is a little bit of a follow-up from last week on growth from where I was last year. I have you and the Father's love, and this understanding in the Urantia Book, to thank for that. Over the weekend I had a little experience in the hospital that you may or may not be aware of. The medical staff didn't know what was going on with me. Could you give me any insight into my three-day experience in trying to figure out what was going on?

HAM: Also is this question personal and better asked in private. Have no fear, however, concerning your health, for you are doing well even considering this episode. It will be a passing stage and not a lingering illness or disease. Yes. (Calvin: Thank you. That takes a lot of pressure off already.)

NORMAN: Father Ham, I want to thank you again for the private session that we had today. I also would like to thank my brothers and sisters here in Utah that have made me feel so welcome. I carry a grateful-filled heart back to Minnesota and look forward to being with you again. Thank you. (Ham: I am pleased and honored to be of service to you.)

WILLEENA: Father Ham, truly we have made great progress in the short time we have been together with you – it's evident as we look about ourselves and see each other. In the course of the day, and our dealings with our brothers and sisters in the world, often it happens that an emotional reaction occurs. I'm learning so much about how to be with that experience more and to call out to the Father for help, for guidance. I noticed today, when these occurrences happen, these emotional reactions, they are embarrassing – not only to face myself and my brothers and sisters, but to actually turn that around and say 'hello' again to the Father within me. I found myself feeling so small, silly; and yet I could still see the progress. Is there something you could say to this place of making a mistake like that – turning around and say: "oh, oops! hello Father?" And how to get through that little place that feels so silly, so small, and still knock on that door and reach out and ask for that help that we so much need?

HAM: You have eloquently described this process yourself, yes, for each person is in daily life confronted with many challenges and stresses. These often reveal a place needing nurturing, for often where there are parts of one's character where there is weakness, it is all the more evident during stress and confrontation. This means you must water this place with truth and love. Allow yourself the opportunity to grow in this space. Retreat not into self-set ways but recognize this episode as a growth opportunity – to see a place that needs 'a little growth and watering,' not 'a defect which needs fixing.' Is this helping?

WILLEENA: It's wonderful. I think what is happening is that I am beginning to become more aware of the ever-present watchcare of the Father – and so when these places come up, it is really awkward. I think in that moment, what I am hearing you say, is not to shy away from the Father when I see that happen; or I react wherein I am not pleased with my reaction – but internally reach out to the Father for help through that experience. Is this correct?

HAM: Exactly, correct. His loving care is ever present. Allow Him in your weak spaces, for example, your fearful parts. Allow His love to come in. Often we block these places from ourselves and from God. How much more you will grow when you allow Him to enter. Allow His presence. This is not to say 'you must change;' is not to say you are wrong or bad – no! but allow His presence in those places which you 'hide from yourself.' Is this in accordance, or in understanding with your thinking? (Willeena: It's wonderful. I love you so much. Thank you.)

JANA: Father Ham, I have a question in regard to our parts to assist in the Mission that you were talking about. One is: I know that our group, as a whole, has a mission in general. However, I do see individuals in the group that have been assigned certain things to do in order to help the Mission. So when you said: "We know what our mission is," are you saying that we each 'individually' know what our part is? Or, that we know 'as a whole group' what our group-mission is?

HAM: This knowledge is of individual 'spiritual' growing, and this is the mission. When one spirit/soul can water another – this is the mission. Are you in understanding? (Jana: Yes, I am. Thank you.)

GERRY: Father Ham, I understand that we are here on this world for experience; and what helps me to not judge or condemn myself is to recognize what I am to learn with that experience. It may look just terrible to other people and they say: "Why did she do it, or why did they do it?" But I think we are here to learn, and so I think the most important thing is to ask the question: "What am I to learn by this?" Is this something which you would agree with me on?

HAM: Absolutely. Yes. Each life-episode is a learning experience which will never come again. Each episode is unique and different. Whether it is a sameness in generality but a different reaction, or a different episode completely – all of life is this learning, experiencing, growing, and becoming who you really are. Each time that we succeed or fail, or somewhere in-between, this is purposeful for your own personal growth. Your strength, your love, your understanding for others – these cannot come to fruition without going through these experiences yourself. Think on the purpose of Christ's bestowal life. This purpose – of living life fully; experiencing all things possible; understanding each person better – can only come through living life. Are you in agreement with me?

GERRY: Thank you, yes. Since I have been very young, I have often made this statement, which is very offensive to some people – but, I have been able to love the mass-murderer or the murderer because I have empathy that if that person were my son or daughter that I would want to help. We know we can't always help, but I would want help if it were me, or my son or daughter; and I think that is what our Father wants for all of us. So with that outlook on my experience, whatever they have done or why they have to go through that, I can still love them for it. Is that wrong?

HAM: Of course it is right to always recognize God within another person, even an erring and sinful person, for God loves us for who we are, not what we do. He loves in spite of what we do. Error, sin, iniquity – these are a path of self-destruction, not a path that the Father wills. Father would have all His children come to Him. Father has not erred in creating this child, the child has erred in rejecting the Father. Are you in understanding? (Gerry: Yes. Thank you very much.)

RUTHA: Father Ham, I have a question: For the last few weeks – since our Teacher, Daniel, started his Teaching to us in Pocatello, he has been imploring us firstly to build our foundation and become strong, and to know the will of the Father 'intellectually.' Now he is bringing it to our understanding to go past 'intellectual,' into coming to know the Father 'spiritualistically' and with our whole being, so that we reflect the Father's will in everything we do. It doesn't have to be something we think about consciously, it just becomes us. He has given us such beautiful, beautiful lessons that we are learning. And I am wondering if you could explain to me how I could better serve my brothers and sisters. Is there something more I can be doing? Could you maybe give me some help in that? [Editor's note: Rutha (Debbie) was at this time the transmission-receiver for the Pocatello, Idaho TM group.]

HAM: My daughter, Rutha, how great is your service for your brothers and sisters. Without your being willing and able to perform this crucial and vital task, there would be no group contact for the others with Daniel. You are indeed a great and strong soul who reflects the Father's love very wonderfully. Your great service is known throughout a vast universe, and long will you be remembered for this. I pledge my personal devotion, for crucial and vital are you for so many. Worry not, and fear not – you do well.

RUTHA: Thank you, Father Ham. I just feel like there is more I should be doing. Thank you so much for your beautiful words. One last thing, and this is probably out of curiosity: I keep seeing a very beautiful light behind Rebecca's right-side, and I am wondering if that is you?

HAM: Yes. My position would be approximately above and behind Rebecca, were you to perceive it. Yes.

CALVIN: Teacher Ham, in the Urantia Book it may answer this but I haven't found it yet, maybe a slight answer would be helpful from you: It says, before Christ Michael's seventh bestowal, the Thought Adjusters were not available to mortals here. Am I perceiving that correctly?

HAM: No. The Thought Adjusters were not 'universally bestowed,' prior to Pentecost. After Pentecost – when the Spirit of Truth was bestowed upon Urantia, all normal-minded humans who reach an age of moral decision would receive immediately the Divine Gift. Is this clearer? (Calvin: Almost. Then prior to Pentecost, what type of being would not receive a Thought Adjuster?)

HAM: Prior to the bestowal of Michael, prior to the Spirit of Truth being poured upon this world, each person who sincerely believed in God, would then receive a Thought Adjuster. This divine gift did not come to them upon their first moral decision, as it does since Pentecost, but upon an individual's moral maturity. Are you understanding?

CALVIN: That helps clarify, thank you. Then what I perceive from that – the Spirit of Truth, which was poured out upon all flesh, made it feasible and reasonable for the Thought Adjusters to also to be shed upon all mortals.

HAM: Correct, yes. Rebecca is growing tired and the connection between us is weak. I must therefore conclude our lesson this evening and bid you all, farewell.

Mota Reality Is Becoming Your Reality | Morontial and Spiritual Growth Is a Craving For God

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. My special welcome this evening to all newcomers.

Our lesson tonight is concerning growth of the soul in spiritual perception. Again, many times I have spoken on this subject, and tonight I wish to do so again, for you are all coming to a greater awareness than you were previously. A greater spiritual light may now be imparted to incorporate your growth and illuminate your awareness.

Often we think of spiritual growth as having to do with religious thinking entirely; this is only partially correct, for spiritual growth entails the development of the whole person, including physical, mental, morontial and spiritual awareness. When the material mortal mind is growing toward a spiritual awareness, morontial reality is being created.

This morontial reality is real; it is an integral part of the whole human experience – which, while being the part of experience (or rather the whole sum total of one's soul experience), it is also the vehicle through which experience is perceived and appreciatively expanded; so that while living a common life, your experience of it becomes uncommon, for it is uplifted by your spiritual awareness and morontial perception. This understanding is mota.

You are all understanding mota a little. Awareness of your daily life's journey toward God, encompassing all the details of living, is becoming a new reality; it is a greater awareness, a finer perception than expounded-understanding, mindal-understanding. So much of life is unappreciated by the majority of those living mortal lives. No matter what your station and duties in life, maintain an 'awareness of otherness.' This otherness will be your 'awareness of God-consciousness.' Therefore, while being in the world, your awareness is that you are not of it.

Your life's journey toward God is becoming more and more uppermost in your mind, not only during meetings or on the Sabbath day, but always. Awareness is encompassing this greater reality. Your sense of self is becoming more firm. Your sense of son- or daughtership (your childhood status in the Kingdom of our Father) is allowing you to function as one who is safely at peace and who feels comfortable within this world. Without this greater awareness and understanding, many people are lost and insecure, and are wandering in the world.

Your example of total selfhood security is a great comfort and inspiration for those in search. Mota reality is becoming your reality. Appreciation and a finer sense of beauty, truth, and goodness, are yours. What greater gift can one have than to love more completely; to appreciate the beauty all around us with a fine sense of love; to hear words of truth from many places, and to recognize this and to incorporate these into your own person. This is the gift of God – the gift of the ages. This is what wise men have searched for all through eternity.

Once this spiritual growth begins to blossom there is no turning back, shutting off, or stifling of it. Yours it is, yours for your own personal possession. This awareness may shed many lights for those less fortunate in spiritual advancement. Helpful beyond your station do you then become for those in need. Unconsciousness of this augmented helpfulness is common, but be aware that it is part of this growing process, and look for times and circumstances when you may be of assistance to one who sits in darkness.

I do not mean to say become a preacher, no, not at all; but to wait the opportunity to shed a little light – not overwhelming, but only what is needed. The plants, as they grow, take water from the soil as they need it; utilize sunshine for their nutrition as they need it; and grow as much as they can, given these parameters of growth – water, sunshine and soil.

So are all human beings – all are growing as they can, little by little, utilizing the gifts of God as they need them. You who have been coming here for so long are coming to thirst more, hunger more – so that spiritual growth is becoming an all-consuming need. This is as it should be, and is planned to be.

All mortals will someday come to see that spiritual growth is the most important thing in life, and will learn to water and nourish their children. Now, in your age, I see so much confusion as to what is important. Goals are confused. Lives are shallow. Few seem happy. Few seem fulfilled. So many are lost; having no direction, they have no real goals.

Monetary goals may satisfy one thing – material comfort. Health goals may satisfy another thing – physical well-being. But spiritual goals satisfy the true woman or man, personally, within. Without spiritual goals and guidance, the world is made of lost sheep – wandering here, wandering there, looking and searching in many areas of life for comfort, for hope, for God, though not knowing where it is found.

There is within each person a craving for God, a craving which is satisfied with nothing less than spiritual growth, an acquaintance with God, personally. This craving may be stifled even from an early age throughout physical life – only to be reborn on Mansonia One. Those whom you cannot, for whatever reason, reach during this life – rest assured they will have abundant opportunity in the next. Worry not over those whom you feel need the gospel, yet reject it. They will also find their place in God's kingdom – in time. Are there any questions now?

RACHEL: Good evening, Father Ham. That was a very enlightening and beautiful lesson. I thank you. (Ham: Thank you, Rachel. Proceed). Rachel: We have a guest with us tonight by the name of Jenny M., and she comes from northern California. She has come up here just especially to be with us and we thank her and welcome her.

HAM: Greetings. I also welcome you. Yes. Extremely glad am I that you have chosen to come and am hoping you can hear all who are around you, opening their hearts, opening your heart. This time of journey is important for you. Very great fruits will be born resulting from this long journey. We are very pleased you have chosen this pathway and welcome you among this fold. Yes.

RACHEL: Thank you, Father Ham and we'll give Jenny a chance to thank you in just a moment. We have two newcomers to our group, Father Ham. One of them is Carleen S. from Salt Lake, and she has been reading the Urantia Book for two or three years. We welcome her. We have Pat J. from Ogden. He has been searching for a long time. Those are our two group newcomers.

HAM: Greetings also. My good wishes to you. Yes.

RACHEL: Also, we had a phone call from Bill and Eugenia B. of Lawrence, Kansas. Bill has been reading the Urantia Book since the early fifties. He has one of the original copies. His wife has been studying for the last three years. They would like to come to Salt Lake and have a private meeting with you on Sunday, May the 17th, and also attend our Monday night meeting May the 18th, if permissible.

HAM: Yes it is, of course. I would wish verbal confirmation from Roland at this time. (Roland: Yes. I would love to do that on May the 17th). Ham: Thank you. I look forward to meeting these fine people, personally. Yes.

JOSHUA: Father Ham, I received a telephone call from Jim C., who I mentioned to you last week. The very next evening he was contacted by some spiritual being. He said the name was Larkin, and he transmitted to his wife for approximately two hours. He would like to receive verification of it.

HAM: Of course. I wonder if he needs verification for such a personal and important visit. He should not take Larkin's words lightly, for he is a great Teacher, a great being.

JOSHUA: Thank you very much. I also received a telephone call from John and Jane R. They have met with most of the people in their group and have reached a consensus that they request a Teacher for their group in Dana Point, California area if possible.

HAM: Yes. I will relay this request. Yes.

JENNY: Greetings, Ham. Thank you for such a warm and wonderful welcome, and for making me feel so much a part of this group. I was sorry I was not able to meet with you on Sunday because of the circumstances that came about, but perhaps indeed it was a blessing in disguise because I got to speak with Daniel (Pocatello, Idaho group Teacher) and found that very wonderful too. Please tell him that I thank him, very much. Part of my problem, as you probably know, is not having a group like this to be a part of. Your words made me feel more a part of this group, and I thank you for that. I have just a couple questions, and I must apologize for the first one: I know that it is really not that important, but in my meeting with Daniel I did ask him for my spiritual name – there was a lot of confusion and it wasn't clear to me. I wondered if you would mind telling me what it is? (Ham: Arlena. Yes, Arlena.) Jenny: Thank you very much. The only thing that came out was "ea" which wasn't clear to me, so I do appreciate that. My second question comes from Philip, who had requested a Teacher for his group. He wonders two things: One – if a group Teacher is still being considered? And secondly – He wanted me to ask whether Robert O. might be the 'receiver/transmitter?' (Ham: Yes. Yes, to both queries. Yes.) Jenny: One of my very favorite words. Thank you so very much.

JOHN: Father Ham, I have a question about your lesson: What part does our soul play in our lives? Is it just like an inert thing that just sits in the background and just grows when we grow spiritually? Or, does it actually exert an influence on our decisions?

HAM: For those who have felt its influence, yes, it is an integral part of your total awareness-reality through which also you perceive the world. Your decisions are then a part of your awareness. In general, the greater your awareness of true reality, the wiser your decisions become; for you are living in the understanding of true reality as opposed to the partial shadow of existence which characterizes the average human living on Urantia. When there is little awareness of truth there can be only partial understanding of life. Your soul, which grows within you, is reacting to and interacting with your total reality. All your understanding and decision-making is effectively filtered and colored by your personal spiritual awareness. Each person, though different and unique, grows roughly along similar lines, and wisdom is the general result. Is this answering?

JOHN: Yes it does, thank you. I have one other question about spiritual growth: In spending this time with you in the last year and a half I think I have started to realize my sonship more fully; but at the same time I don't really know if it has manifested in my life. I still have a hard time socially going out and actively taking, or putting into motion, the things that you have taught us. I was wondering if you could help me with that.

HAM: Your own spiritual pace is growing along with your souls' growth. Often when we are troubled within and feel ineffective in the world, the light from within will guide you forward. Worry not about your life-situation, for new opportunities are always being presented for the growth of your wisdom. Decisions upon decisions must be made for you to begin true adult learning. When your foundation, which is firm even now, is strengthened even more, then will you feel your 'animal-self' transition to become your truer 'spirit-self,' and comfort within will shine for others. Fear not. Have no anxiety, for all things require time. Is this helping? (John: Yes. Thanks. It really does.)

HONORAY: Father Ham, I want to thank you for the wonderful and inspirational personal interview you gave me last Sunday. I want you to know that I have tried to do everything that you counseled me to do this week. Because of the result of it, it has been a wonderful week. I want to thank you, again.

HAM: My sincere appreciation is felt and extended, coming from your words. I thank you. Your great spiritual gifts are truly inspirational for many. Have your great hope always close to your heart.

MARIANNA: Father Ham, I too want you to know how your teachings have so helped me in accepting my daughtership with God and my will to make His will, mine – it has so helped me with the news that I had this week. But could you in any way tell me anything about what we heard about my daughter's fetus? We were concerned, greatly concerned.

HAM: It is not wise for me to discuss this matter in public. However, glad I will be to discuss it privately, hoping that you can strengthen your understanding of God's will. Some things, which are not easily coped with at the time, in time, becomes greater understanding in benevolent blessing. Have strength.

WILLEENA: Father Ham, on tonight's lesson I have a question with regarding the light within us. Does this light emanate from us in our walk on this planet? And as we become more attuned spiritually, does it grow and have an affect on people around us in the world?

HAM: Yes, very much so, exactly! You are in great understanding of this process and are very enlightened to those around you. Even without using words, often your spiritual luminosity is enough to attract those seeking love. Yes.

WILLEENA: Thank you. Does this light also emanate an energy or vibrational affect?

HAM: Yes. You think of this as an energy emanating from the heart area in love and light and truth. Live in love; walk in light; live your truth.

WILLEENA: That's lovely. The last question I have is with regard to the same thing: I have begun to be aware, as I am walking my dogs in the neighborhoods around me, that there are more and more gang people in the vicinity where I walk. I am aware of them and am with a curiosity as to whether or not they are being helped in any way – simply by this presence of light that you have just described? Are they being affected, positively?

HAM: Possibly. This light, emanating from advanced spiritual growth, is often not perceived by those who are not so advanced. Sometimes, perhaps – but often, no.

WILLEENA: Is there then – with that kind of unawareness or lack of perception on that level – danger in being in their presence, even briefly? Or, is there protection from the light that is emanating?

HAM: Both. There is protection, yes. Yet, use your own common sense when venturing in areas with those of a darkened spiritual perception.

WILLEENA: Thank you. Is there any hope for some of those people?

HAM: Of course. There is always, always hope – never forget that! Only remember where they are now, and use sound judgment. (Willeena: Thank you, Ham. I love you.)

RACHEL: Father Ham, with yesterday being Easter Sunday and the day that we celebrate the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ, I re-read the paper on the Spirit of Truth. It says in the Urantia Book that the Spirit of Truth does more or less pave the way for the coming of our Thought Adjusters. So my question is: Do we receive the Spirit of Truth just prior to receiving the Thought Adjusters? or is it bestowed upon us at an earlier age?

HAM: The world is 'awashed' in the Spirit of Truth. When you are born, you are born even into this spiritual influence, which is all around us. Is this helping?
(Rachel: Yes it does, and I thank you.)

MELISSA: Father Ham, I have a question for you, but first I'd just like to comment on this new awareness that I have been experiencing lately – I feel such a comfort, peace and a tranquility, within. I don't think I can just put it all into words, but I just love it. My question is: I was introduced to Sinkra last Tuesday and I would like your confirmation on this – is she a Teacher?

HAM: Sinkra is a special Teacher who has been assigned to you for now. She will help you in your daily life's plan and will guide and instruct you as necessary. Be careful in your transmission of her messages. If you have questions, you may verify them with me.

MELISSA: Thank you, Father Ham. That's just wonderful news. I am very touched.

HAM: You are very well respected even among our Teaching Corps. Your place among us is secure and sound. Your mental and spiritual level is high and unwavering. Secure and faithful are you; and in that, we are secure and faithful together. Are you understanding?

MELISSA: Yes, I am, very much so. I am also very thankful and overwhelmed.

MARIANNA: Father Ham, I have just one other question tonight: This new awareness – I just feel like I am feeling it all day long, not only when I meditate. It's almost like my skin comes alive, and my hands – it's like I am electrified or something. Is this part of it?

HAM: Do you feel tingling in your fingers? (Marianna: Yes). Ham: Yes. Often this occurs during Adjuster contact when it is strong. This should pass.

MARIANNA: Father Ham, I don't understand, "this should pass."

HAM: The tingling of the fingers will go away.

JEREMIAH: Father Ham, how can one become more consciously aware of the soul? A spiritual being a while back was saying that one could concentrate on the soul inside the chest and think of it coming out through, and glowing, and thus lighting the whole body. Could you comment on that, please?

HAM: Yes, exactly. This is a beginning of soul-awareness. In the stillness, you may concentrate on the heart area radiating outward with light filling the entire body, throughout. Visualization is often helpful for becoming aware of spiritual reality and allowing this reality to grow. Yes. One more question?

ROLAND: Father Ham, we just got back from the Lake Powell conference and many of the things that you described tonight in your lesson, occurred. I am really appreciative of the ongoing instruction that I am getting from you each Monday night. What I am wondering is: Were you there during our weekend experience?

HAM: No. I could not attend; however, others were present.

ROLAND: We certainly felt them. We have new brother and sister believers by the name of Don and Willow G., who are from Tulsa, Oklahoma, and who have returned there to prepare their group for a Teacher. Amster, during a private meeting with them, gave them that instruction, if it be their will. It was such a startling experience and one that I needed to confirm with you. (Ham: Confirmed). Roland: There were quite a few other things that happened over the weekend that were not so positive. I won't take time to talk them out in the group, but I do need to meet with Rebecca so that we can make sure that all the communications were clear. Is that possible with Rebecca?

HAM: Yes. She can meet with you on Sunday morning. (Roland: Thank you very much).

And now the time has come that I must say farewell, for Rebecca is tiring and the transmission falters. I am happy to meet all you who have come and hope to do so again next week. For now, farewell.

Matrimony and Family | The Support-Base Foundation of Culture and Society

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. My welcome this evening to all who are new to our group. My well-wishes go out to you and my prayers are with you all.

This evening I wish to discuss an unusual subject - that of matrimony. There are different kinds of human relationships and different levels of commitment between humans within those relationships. Matrimony, the pairing together of man and woman, is the highest form of commitment between humans on your mortal plane. This commitment is wholly voluntary in all civilized, or more highly civilized, cultures.

The understanding and compassionate loyalty between those persons thus joined is supremely touching; but more, it is the most important level of committed living in all areas of life that any person can do, aside from commitment to God.

You who are thus blessed in a state of mutual love and loyalty know the tremendous benefit in this life. Children are the most precious gift – a gift both from God and to God. How precious and marvelous and wonderful is this experience. How all-encompassing! How totally committing! And how wonderful to be thus blessed with children.

The family is the support-base of all culture. Family, is the foundation on which all societal institutions are built. It is the beginning and the flowering of all true civilization and culture. Family exhibits and enhances the highest motivation levels human beings possess. When you truly give of yourself and are filled with love for your family then truly are you glimpsing the perspective of God, Father, who is in Paradise.

God is, in reality and truth, our spiritual Father/Parent. He has given of himself 'through love' to create His family, and He loves each child, supremely. By and through His infinite love, each child is born. Each person is individualized as unique and precious in His sight. Each person is born of the spirit into His love – and, into His gracious, benevolent, and bounteous universe.

Matrimony is different from the 'parent-child' relationship, it is more akin to the 'brotherhood of humanity' relationship. It is the highest expression of true kinship, for in matrimony you, in truth, acknowledge your togetherness as one. True love between two people is never more deep nor meaningful than in matrimony. Years are traversed together, side by side; a family is born and raised and given to God and His kingdom.

Understanding sympathy, companionship, and true love – these are never more deep and more sincere than in this great and wonderful relationship between a husband and wife. Happiness and true self-fulfillment is found within this marvelous marriage institution. No longer does the individual worry alone, ponder alone, cry alone; for them, always is there another sympathetic ear ready to understand and perhaps make this journey a little lighter by carrying part of the load.

How precious you are to God, and how precious you are to each other. Love, my children, is the highest spiritual expression of self that there is. Loving each other, committing to time over years together, ripens in mature ennobling and self-understanding. Though there are times when all of us must by necessity walk alone, you realize you are all truly loved when within a family relationship with someone.

Those whose children are grown are blessed by having the most understanding friendship. No longer does the child need the parent for selfish reasons – now is the child standing apart and equal again on the brother/sister level of life. This true friendship and amazingly personal understanding between two people is precious in God's sight; and again, brings an understanding of the brotherhood and sisterhood of all mortals.

In family relationships, often is there conflict and misunderstanding. I say to you, you are wise to tread lightly over these difficult shores, for remember in God's sight you are all His children. Hold hands, walk life together. Love each other, within your family and abroad in the world. Love your workmates. Love your children. Love your childrens' children and their children. Love your in-laws. Love everyone. This is the path, the only path there is, to walk towards God.

Brave and courageous is the person who can set aside petty difficulties and love in spite of them. Be big enough and brave enough to do this in your lives; this will bring you great reward in this life. You see, my children, there is nothing more important than love – the love of God within, the love for your fellows without. This is life's great lesson, and wise is the man who learns it early. I will answer questions now.

RACHEL: Good evening, Father Ham. I think I am going to run out of real good adjectives to compliment you on your wonderful lessons, and this was really a superlative lesson. I have five people to introduce to you tonight. Would you like me to tell you about all of them and then comment? Or would you like to comment after each one?

HAM: All is sufficient for today.

RACHEL: Okay. We have Maryann J., who is here from California; she has studied the Urantia Book for eleven years and she does attend a study group there. Here locally from Utah: We have Kerri H., she is studying the Urantia Book and has been attending James' study group. We have David S., he has been studying the Urantia Book for about four years. We have Jan P. who is a friend of Willeena. She is not reading the Urantia Book, but she feels like she was spiritually guided to come to our meeting tonight. And, we have Jo Mckee, she is Calvin's wife.

HAM: Thank you, Rachel, and welcome, all.

MELISSA: Father Ham, I've got some questions about Sinkra. Friday night I believe she contacted me and I would like to read what messages I felt she left with me. My biggest fear is me putting my own thoughts into this. So I'll just go ahead and read. [Melissa reads a few pages of her words from Sinkra.]

HAM: Yes. Confirmed. It is always difficult when beginning in this transmission-receiver position to be sure that each word is clear. However, you are well prepared and are doing very well. We all look forward to the day when you can even begin to transmission-receive for others. This day will be soon. (Melissa: Thank you, Ham. I really appreciate that.)

JASON: Good evening, Teacher Ham. I have an interesting situation regarding your lesson. A question was brought up in my mind: What of the 33,000 polygamist that live in this State with us? I know some of them and there truly is love within their family units. Even some of the gentlemen that have five and six wives – it seems a balance of love that I have no concept of true understanding. Maybe you could shed some light on this?

HAM: Within these unique families there is usually a great love. They are not sinners and are not erring in God's love. They are following a practice which they believe and which truly feels, for them, to be a higher spiritual law. Therefore, there are not the usual antagonisms that can occur within monogamous marriages. These people are truly loved and welcome within God's vast kingdom, and you would all do well in following their example of unselfish love with each other. The monogamous form of matrimony is better in all ways in arrangement of society; it will stand the test of time – and indeed, has. Polygamy is an aberration within the social structure which will gradually die away. They are individually just as spiritual and loving as any other humans, and are not to be despised for living their beliefs.

JASON: Thank you, Teacher Ham, that's the way I feel truly inside about them. Is it possible that we have, literally, an infinite number of soulmates, and not just one?

HAM: Yes. On the highest level of understanding, this is absolutely so.

JASON: It's quite a staggering thought, Teacher. Thank you.

JEREMIAH: Father Ham, in regard to tonight's lesson: What would you say about people who get divorced or those who can't find a spouse, or possibly those who are homosexual?

HAM: In this era of civilization on your world, in your country, there is an amazing number of divorced couples – so many so, that there are more who have been divorced than who have not been divorced. This is part of the change in 'living life' which has come through a rapid-paced and drastic societal movement; change and family disruptions have been the temporary result. When a more spiritual bedrock is made to build upon a new society, then will such phenomenon gradually lessen. So much of your modern world is consumed with secular problems and concerns, individual needs, wants, and desires – that little is left for spiritual quest, for family-valuing, and for brotherhood-realizing. When the shift comes away from materialistic and egotistical desires, toward spiritual desires – spiritual growth results. Then, will the higher living (spiritual living) again stabilize and once more become the seed for the flowering of a new and a greater civilization. The individuals who are caught in this tumultuous time-period of today are not to blame in and of themselves for "not living up to a higher standard," no! for this time is full of conflict, doubt, and self-recriminations – it is a perpetual confusion. Much anxiety is rampant among all types of people; it seems that the very ground is moving. When all this changes, and comes along a better and more enlightened people, then great civilization will come about because this potential is so extremely fertile. We look toward the future with great hope. We do not despair of the present times this world is traveling through, for we know this is only temporary and will, in time, rectify. Forced civilization (a forced cultural conformity) is not the answer to society's ills, for you may straighten a piece of wood, as Christ said, and work much upon it, but if it is inwardly rotten your work is in vain. First take care that the wood is good within – that is, that each person takes care to strengthen his spiritual foundation – and then can we go to work on the rest. No society can be truly fruitful when built by imposing 'from without' – a social, political, and even an individual conformity to a norm or, to an ideal. No, it is not lasting! Each individual person must find from 'within' of their own true spiritual being and happiness, and of their self-expression in the world. This is of utmost importance. We do not demand or insist: "you must do this," or, "you should do that, for this is the way of the ideal" – no! Each person's own individual ideal is sought for through 'self-expression' and 'expression to God.' If this 'self-expression' takes a form which is different or unusual, or even "sinful" to some – that is not for anyone to judge. Each person must uniquely find their place in the world and no one may judge that person; nor, take away their right to find this self-expression by enforcing a conformity to the majority. Is this answering?

JEREMIAH: Yes Teacher. Thank you very much for such a thorough answer.

RISDON: Good evening, Father Ham. Your lesson sparks something interesting in me: There is a lot of controversy right now with abortion, all around our country. I take it, out of what you just said, that it applies to people's own wills as well in this situation, where if they believe a certain way that they should not be forced to have a decision made for them or to conform to a certain particular way. Is that understanding correct?

HAM: I cannot comment on this particular issue at all. I am sorry. This, and many other social problems, issues, etc., must be resolved in a purely human way. You may interpret my words how you feel. I cannot say or comment upon these particular issues – particularly abortion, capital punishment, or any other social issue in particular.

RISDON: Thank you, Father Ham. I also just want to say how wonderful your lesson was. I was very moved by it.

WILLEENA: Father Ham, you mentioned that in making mistakes that the Father always loves and forgives each of us no matter what. I am beginning to realize that and it's very helpful. My question is: I made a good one today, it was a big one (mistake) and I am going to be facing the person that I made it with after this meeting. I prayed on it for the last three hours so that I could stand in my truth, stand on my integrity – be responsible for the disappointment I caused and yet not debase myself at the same time. With regard to this human experience of 'making error,' how best can we serve our brothers and sisters in owning up to the mistakes with regard to them, and still maintain our sense of dignity?

HAM: Yes, this is a very good question and very personal. Each person must find that within themselves. The strength and integrity to admit to error is greater than to ignore an error and let it go unacknowledged. So first, you are building your inner integrity by facing your mistakes; you are doing the opposite of debasing yourself. You are so strong and spiritually replete when you know you have made an error and can acknowledge this as error. Yes, this is true strength; it is not weakness at all. How often is this misunderstood in your culture, where admitting to error is seen as weakness or 'giving in' for allowing someone to somehow get an advantage. No, no, not at all. Truly are you growing towards Father, toward your true spiritual self, Willeena; and in doing so you are flowering to be a great spiritual woman – one who has experienced much doubt, sorrow, and error and all that goes into living life. Be always strong enough to admit to error, and strengthen your inner integrity and personal will thereby; for when error is seen, acknowledged and rectified – then, have you truly made a step towards Father.

WILLEENA: That was excellent. Thank you.

HAM: You're welcome. I am always pleased to speak to you.

WILLEENA: I appreciate that. I have a question regarding family as well, because you address so poignantly the tumult of our times – when family has not been able to be in alignment, and when there has been much abuse; not just abuse from parents but with each one within the family, with each other. Many mistakes and much conflict are evident even in just normal families where there is lack of real understanding or communication – and we are beginning now to become clear that we want to have a good and healed sense of alignment with these people that matter so much to us. How can we begin that healing process with the people in our families that maybe don't hear us very well, or who do not feel safe enough to be able to allow us to be the individuals that we truly are; and do so in a good way, a way that will not make them feel, in any way, defensive or pushed away?

HAM: Yes. Often, time is a great healer, and time may be the missing ingredient here. Even though some members are willing to come together in faith – faith with each other; faith in each other and also in love – others may not be quite so ready. Give these members a little extra time and worry yourself not overly over it, for time is eternal; and you have an eternity to be with these people, to love them, to give them of yourself and your love. Forcing a person who is not spiritually as advanced to take what you have to give is a mistake, for they do not understand what you are giving. Allow them time to grow toward this understanding so that your gifts are accepted as they are given – in truth, in love, and brotherhood.

WILLEENA: That's wonderful. Then how do we work with those people that maybe are not in understanding? Sometimes there are ways that incite conflict, such as when they talk down to us or judge us – how do we deal with that so that we don't come back at them defensively, and yet, we don't get demolished by them?

HAM: Once again take the spiritual view. Try to view them as the angels do – as children who are hurt, who are defensive, who are jealous, who are turning inward. You are a great spiritual woman, Willeena. You have the capacity to see truth and reality very well balanced. Always, when conflicts arise, endeavor then to use your higher mind and glimpse the situation more like God does so that you are sympathetic toward your erring brother or sister, and not judgmental. See their attacks for what they are. See them hurting in their own space and allow it. Though the desire is to heal this space, we must allow them to have it. We cannot change this situation by force or even by revelation – this is not God's way. He allows the time to ripen, the situation to mellow – then He acts, and then your actions will make a difference. Do you see my meaning?

WILLEENA: Yes, and I thank you. I have a guest with me and I know that it is unusual for first-timers to be able to ask questions, but she felt spiritually guided to come and I wanted to ask you if it was alright if she had a question for you? (Ham: Yes, of course)

JANA: Father Ham, when you talked about families, it brought up a few questions for me: One is concerning couples who can't have children and end up adopting. Also, what of couples that get married and one spouse already has children, and so they don't have children together. Now I know how important it is to have that experience of being a parent – can they still be a parent in that sense without having to bring life into the world together?

HAM: Absolutely. Yes. There are many ways that this experience can be had. Experiencing actual childbirth is not a prerequisite for spiritual advancement. Each person parents another in a number of many different circumstances and beliefs, for if you understand God's viewpoint you may minister to many people as an instrument of Him. Being a material parent allows the greatest room and opportunity for this experience of being an instrument of God to another, yes. This, however, can be had in many many different circumstances and is not necessarily confined to individual childbirth.

CALVIN: Father Ham, in regard to your relationship to us in this group as your students, you are then regarded as a parent, so to speak, over this group, which makes the term "father Ham" a little more in understanding to me wherein we are as though your students/children. Might that be better said, differently?

HAM: Yes and No. You are my students, yes, and yet in love and spiritual reality you are my brethren. When you address me as "father" or I address you as "my child," we are saying "God is a more palpable reality in my being to you than any other soul at this time." So yes, we are acknowledging our separate experience-levels with God, for you see I am in reality very old and have gained much wisdom and experience through my existence. This is, I believe, only a temporary situation, for when we all reach Paradise, time is not a matter of importance anymore, for time is non-existent there, and all are equal.

CALVIN: Thank you. Is that the term that would be most fitting to address you by as "father" more than "teacher," or is there another term more fitting?

HAM: It matters not to me. 'Teacher' is adequate, and I am gratefully acknowledging of this title.

CALVIN: One quick and last question: In reference to matrimony, would two individuals who decide not to run to the courthouse or to the temple or church for marriage, but yet commit to each other to be together and raise a family – be considered matrimony?

HAM: Yes. It is absolutely considered on the spiritual level as true matrimony. Often are couples joined in loveless wedlock, and this is sadder than any other human condition.

RACHEL: Father Ham, when I address you as such, it is to show my respect that I have for you and my deep, deep love, when I call you "Father Ham," and it is sincere.

HAM: I know this, Rachel, and I thank you.

ROLAND: In your lesson about matrimony, I recognized two things which are a concern to me. One is: In my reading of the lives of the apostles – in particular, Thomas, who was married. He put aside his family business to take on the apostleship, which seems to be the highest commitment you could make. Is there, in this Mission, ever a requirement of we who are in its midst to give that sort of sacrifice?

HAM: This is an individual matter and cannot be answered 'in general.'

ROLAND: Also, in your answer to Willeena regarding the suffering that occurs within marriages that are bound together by traditional and cultural force, that they maintain a marriage which has very little spiritual growth in it: I think now of my sister who spent thirty-seven years with a husband who resisted any kind of spiritual content of their relationship. It was sad to see that after all those years of struggle to maintain this relationship, thinking it was one that might ripen into something very wonderful, that she finally gave up and divorced. How do we speak to those individuals who are in that situation?

HAM: Again, this is an individual question which cannot be answered in general terms. I do not wish to answer.

I am sorry and I must now take my leave for this evening. In truth, my love for you is boundless. I wish only love, harmony and happiness for each of you and your families. Please have understanding when I cannot answer a question, for often these situations are so varied and individual, that to answer in a blanket term would be a gross disservice and injustice for those who may in future times come across my teachings. Farewell.

More On Tolerance, Forbearance, Forgiveness and Mercy

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. My humble and sincere thanks and gratitude for your diligent perseverance in attending and supporting these meetings and incorporating these lessons into your own individual lives.

How well you are all progressing in your understanding of the tendency of God-awareness, and of the consciousness that you are all very brightly shining in your daily activities. In these activities there are many opportunities to shine forth your own inner awareness of light, yes, when these opportunities arise.

I am in understanding that you are all not amiss in doing your duty to God and your fellows. Our Father is not a sleeping God. He is, rather, all-watchful, all-knowing, all-caring for each of His many many children – myriads of children. His love and protection are never out of reach. Of course I have told you of these things many times; and yet, I wish to tell you again that you may keep this understanding close to your heart – that you may, in your daily existence, come to know that this truth, this everlasting truth, is always apparent, always with you, never to be shaken off.

My lesson this evening, once again, will be on forbearance and tolerance. Forbearance is above tolerance for forbearance is an attitude which, in love, encompasses any situation. Tolerance implies being battered about within a situation and tolerating the effects. Forbearance, on the other hand, is a matter of 'living above the fray,' so to speak, with an understanding wisdom to not necessarily be an overly detached observer, but rather, to love all involved to such an extent that you may forbear any transgression which your brothers may make.

When you are truly in an attitude of forbearance, forgiveness is not far behind. Forbearance is above tolerance, forgiveness above forbearance, and mercy above forgiveness. When you have reached an attitude of forbearance for your fellows then little are you buffeted by their unforgiving or unwise actions – you can more easily forgo an attitude of intolerance or vengeful thinking.

Often in life are we confronted with situations or persons who antagonize us. This antagonism you can meet head-on – or, you can be wiser and look down upon the situation from a higher perspective; for always will there be problems and people who willingly or unwittingly antagonize – and even try to antagonize us into acting unwisely. The superior character looks upon the foolish actions of these fellows with an attitude of forbearance.

You can easily put aside your wounded ego, your wounded pride, your wounded checkbooks, by knowing and living within the overcare of our Father. He will not allow any real sustained harm to come to His beloved children who have unwavering faith and trust in Him. With Father, always can you rise above any obstacle, no matter how hurtful or difficult it may seem at first.

Yes, allow forgiveness into your hearts. Water yourself with this spiritual replenishment and allow this forgiveness to flow in your lives. This is beyond an attitude of mere forbearance, but goes to the essence of our Father. Our Father is truly forgiving of any and all transgression – how can you be any less to your fellows! Knowing within that our Father has forgiven your blackest deeds, your darkest thoughts – everything – how can you then turn to your brother and withhold this forgiveness from him? That is all for my lesson this evening. I will now answer questions.

RACHEL: Father Ham, that was another beautiful and very informative lesson, and we thank you. We have a newcomer this evening, her name is Loray C. She lives in Roy. She has not read the Urantia Book but she would like to attend a study group as we get one going in Ogden. So we all welcome Loray. (Ham: Yes, of course, welcome all.)

JOSHUA: Father Ham, your lesson is very timely tonight. I've been watching the TV news reports on the riots in Los Angeles, and I am trying to come to grips with this in my own heart and mind. I can understand more now, from your lesson this evening, and I thank you very much. [Editor's note: Joshua is referring to the Rodney King beating by some Los Angeles police; and the rioting that followed after the acquittals of the policemen who were involved.]

HAM: Again, I cannot comment on social situations.

RISDON: Father Ham, your lesson is very timely for me also because today I had a manager explode and blow up at me. It was very difficult to know what to do exactly with my emotions at that time. I am having a little bit of a hard time understanding forbearance. I ask: At the time when the emotional outburst happens, is there something that you can help me understand what I can do at that moment? Because at that moment I felt so overpowered and not knowing how to bring the Father into the situation.

HAM: Yes. There are situations where one person is in a position of authority, and at this same time he is acting in a childish way. You can overcome this situation by understanding that perhaps the Father has brought you into contact with this person in order to exhibit to him the higher way of God. Even if your position is subordinate, it matters not; our Father works with all His children, equally and lovingly. I would like to see your attitude be one of gentle forbearance – if not complete understanding. Easily you can master this situation by showing a loving and forbearing attitude. Hard is this lesson, for so much hurt and wounded ego-centeredness is occurring at this time. If you can step away from your own ego-center, even for one hour, to contemplate this situation without allowing emotional hurt, you can better be prepared for your next meeting when tempers are calm. A foolish man is one who easily loses his temper, for it often creates a much worse situation than what he was upset about to begin with. Easily could your manager hurt (and has hurt) your relationship – which anyone knows takes time to build. Always remember that foolish actions have repercussions. Do not fall to become merely a 'reaction' to a foolish 'action.' Do not allow a situation such as this to force an action on your part – it is not necessary, and you are wiser to hold your own counsel and to speak when the situation is calm. Is this helping?

RISDON: Yes. Thank you very much. That is wonderful advice.

RONDEL: Father Ham, I have a question regarding forgiveness: How do you forgive someone who has done physical harm to you when you are still threatened by them, for instance, a child that has been molested?

HAM: Who is now an adult, perhaps? (Rondel: Yes.)

HAM: Are we talking of one who feels threatened, or who is threatened?

RONDEL: Is not threatened but still has the same feeling as being threatened in the presence of this person.

HAM: I see. This person (the offended person) is in need of true spiritual growth. In growing to a more full maturity, and realizing that this feeling – a memory reaction pattern – is possibly illusory and overblown, then the higher enlightened person will come to a wiser understanding of the situation. Full forgiveness may not come without first, tolerance. Where there is a feeling of feeling threatened inside, this (tolerance) is not exhibited. Later comes forbearance as the threatening feeling ebbs. The mature 'living life' person is only a slave when fear becomes a master. Fear (or the reaction memory pattern of fear) is illusory and will, in maturity, come to be shed. Often as not, this process is life-long – and not only for those who have had this trouble, but for all people who are affected by fear. Fear is, as the Urantia Book says, a master intellectual fraud which, in enlightened reasoning and understanding, comes to be seen as the illusory shadow which it is. I know that my words may mean very little to someone who is constantly in a threatening and fearful situation; and who, even as an adult, carries this painful/fearful feeling within – but nonetheless, true are my words. In time, fear shall be shed, and new growth-potential will be found within the frightened soul. Fear inhibits; faith releases. Faith, in one sense, is the opposite of fear – for faith dares to grasp realities which are beyond the small fearful night. Faith is the antidote to fear and one day will conquer this fear. Is this helping in your understanding?

RONDEL: Yes, it is, and I just have one other question along that line. What if this individual who is molesting or raping women is continually doing so, still, and the fear this person has is out of harm for others, and the perpetrator has no remorse for that?

HAM: It is not for me to pass judgment upon a mortal. Society is equipped with its self-protection mechanisms – which, though faulty, are sometimes effective and are wholly sufficient to deal with criminal behavior. It is not my place to judge nor to sanction judgment.

RONDEL: Well how do you forgive them when they have no remorse or don't acknowledge the transaction? That's been my biggest question – how do you forgive someone who doesn't think they need to be forgiven because they feel like they haven't done anything wrong?

HAM: This forgiveness is as much for the forgiver as for the forgiven. You see, forgiveness opens the heart and soul to God, to God-awareness and understanding. It is not necessary that the person that you are forgiving acknowledges this, for each person, ultimately, is forgiven by God alone. Your feeling of forgiveness towards that person is a measure of your awareness of God and is not necessarily a product of your relationship with that person. (Rondel: That clears it up. Thank you.)

WILLEENA: Father Ham, I am not asking in the direction of information regarding the social situation on our planet, most immediately the Los Angeles situation with the Rodney King riots, but my question revolves around the spiritual aspects regarding these kinds of crisis. I assume – because I know I was affected, and I know of other people who also were – that many prayers were sent out. I wonder how effective are our prayers for these troubled brothers and sisters in many places on our planet? Do those prayers actually combine energetically from the many of us that offered them – and do they have any impact to alleviate and restore a sense of hope, a sense of peace?

HAM: This is an interesting question. As you are aware, your prayers are directed within the great system of mindal connection in this universe. When you pray wholeheartedly and unselfishly, your prayers are directed to those who can, and do, offer assistance. Yes, when many pray together, the effects are more strong, more effective. We often forget that prayer is a very effective vehicle for change and is always available. Even when all else fails, superhuman assistance is available and ready for action on the order from their superiors. As such, much angelic and midwayer assistance is evident in the Los Angeles riots. I cannot speak of who ordered this, nor of your social situation in general, for therein I am restrained.

So yes, there can be intervention by those who are entrusted to provide this service. In these situations, there are, and will be known, many brave and noble acts – as well as the cowardly and serious acts of immaturity. How starkly these acts contrast with the purity and nobility of those who bravely face violence in order to offer assistance to those in need. So often is this true that grave injustice kindles forth the greater and more noble natures of humankind, so that even in the most terrible of situations do we often see the light of a greater and more worthy character truth, within. Good always triumphs, even in the darkest hours of suffering. We must know that goodness is a universal law, and goodness will always triumph over evil and injustice.

WILLEENA: Thank you. (Ham: You're welcome). Willeena: You probably do know, but I just want to say that your words have great effect. I want to ask also: If the people – who in their circumstances, whose heart may be jaded and lost in their pain – if with enough prayer going towards those situations, is there also a fact that their hearts, too, may come back to an opening and to recognize the higher work that is at hand? And, as you mentioned last week, that there is always hope that some of them may be turned around and brought back to that hope?

HAM: Yes, and especially so in witnessing the higher and more noble acts of their fellows; perhaps they realize within, who they really want to be.

WILLEENA: I found myself experiencing excitement at something coming out of this that feels very positive. I believe, in regard to the 'correction time,' that the consciousness of the people is being affected towards the greater truth; and therefore, that this event, the Rodney King riots which sparked much attention and upset, will, in fact, turn out to be something that brings forth more goodness and more family community amongst peoples of this planet. And yes, it is good to know that by addressing the injustices of our small prejudices, that even the governmental agencies of the world will be affected by the hearts and the caring of the people.

HAM: As you have so eloquently expressed, is also my hope.

WILLEENA: Bless you, Ham. Thank you for being our Teacher.

JEREMIAH: Hello Father Ham. I'd like to follow up on that question. Can you tell us about mortal group-consciousness, or sub-consciousness, of the planet that's now going on? And also in regard to the question concerning 'group prayer' – for example the riots in Los Angeles – does that all raise the conscious level of the planet?

HAM: No. Each person can rise to their own level. Each individual person is not necessarily directly affected by prayer from group-conscious prayers, but is perhaps, indirectly. This, because of circumstances which can be, and sometimes are, manipulated in order to bring forth their highest sense of God-consciousness so that, in general, a group-consciousness is not a true reality. Individual God-awareness is very personal and individual. Is that helping? (Jeremiah: Yes, it is. Thank you, Teacher). Ham: Only one further question this evening. I am sorry, but Rebecca is tiring in this connection.

CALVIN: I think your lesson was directed at me, and we all might feel that way about ourselves. At work, I sometimes have situations where a co-worker or a manager will do something very unethical and dishonest and it is my nature to throw a fit or get mad back at them. I'm thinking that by doing that (expressing my anger) that maybe it lessens the next go-around and maybe even might avoid another one – but I see now, what you're saying is to 'calm down' and then come back and talk about how I didn't like how I was treated, and to do it with a feeling of love and understanding, rather than rage and anger?

HAM: Absolutely. Correct. Take a broader view of each person and begin to open yourself to a broader and more all-encompassing understanding. Even when this behavior is a commonplace occurrence. For example, in a ghetto environment, often "an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth" is the rule of the understanding. When you truly understand the Christian message – which this gospel means to say: 'to become like the Father to the highest extent of your ability within your own individual circumstance' – when this ability has become a way of being, then no longer are you threatened or hurt or frightened by the many circumstances and situations which buffet us during our daily existence. I say, rise above your circumstance and show your fellows a better way. Though this is difficult and may be dangerous at times, it is the way of Christ Michael, which is our duty to follow. He came to show us a greater, more truthful and loving way to live. How can we shun His life and not consider and truly understand His life. His mortal existence is the example for all worlds, for all times. Perfect as His life was, and imperfect as our lives are, surely we have a goal; surely we have an understanding by and through His example that allows us freedom, the freedom to choose the greater road.

And now I must depart for I am needed elsewhere. I thank you all for coming this evening and hope to see you here again next week when I will have another discussion with you. Good evening and good night. Farewell.

Who Am I | Seeds of Potentiality | Life Is a Process of Making Potentials Real

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Thank you, Jason, for a welcome, open, precise, and loving prayer.

I am with you tonight in order to assist in your individual self-discovery and realization. I am always pleased and happy to see so many steadfast, seeking, earnest, and dutiful disciples here. I am also pleased in noting your progress spiritually in the realm of morontial awareness and understanding.

"Who am I" is the most sought-after question in the universe. "Who am I" is the central question in our lives, here and beyond. "Who am I" has deep meaning and significance in life. When this question is asked for the first time it signals a spiritual awakening that continues throughout this life. The quest for your true selfhood identity is life-long, even on to Paradise.

There are within each and every person/personality, seeds of potentiality which, when watered and nourished, are given to sprout into actuality. Through life these potentials are given opportunity to sprout, as it were, to grow into actual selfhood, which becomes your true selfhood. What was once only a thought of God becomes a steadfast universe reality within our growing existence. Through life there are many many of these potentials which become real, within.

Life is a process of making potentials into actuals; making actuality – reality. For example: Within a child who is frightened by the dark, there exists the potential of a truly courageous and dominant character. In the child, it is only ‘potential’ and it takes time and life-experience for this potential to grow into ‘reality’ and an actual character possession of the full-grown person.

You may think of these potentials as boughs on a tree's branches. Each branch grows, then sprouts new branches – which grow and sprout further new branches. In this way, a mighty tree is grown over time from a seedling, which on first sight resembles not a mighty tree, but its potential.

Many of the contrary (or what you may consider negative) influences in your lives are, in reality, bringing forth a potential character reality within. For example, a weary child may be a test to an adult – crying, wanting attention, and so forth. When the adult grows stronger from this experience, and into a wiser way to handle the child, this new and stronger character trait is permanent, and does not revert.

Once one acquires wisdom (through adversity or not) it is a permanent part of your selfhood. One who is truly wise finds the most correct manner to deal within a given situation; and yes, this may lead to more and more refinement. Like a branch on a tree which is ever sprouting – still, this branch is a permanent part of the tree.

Life is full of sorrow and joy; of heartache and happiness; of feelings of self-doubt and exuberant confidence. Life is a challenge, yes, and through this challenge you are to grow, within; grow those character aspects which enable you to more effectively live.

Life never ends, and neither does your soul-growth. Life goes beyond this short existence into eternity. How great is this experience, and how great is this soul who grows from it. Life is never stagnant – it is always moving, changing, growing, and diversifying. A challenge, yes! but in life, if you discover defeat are you truly defeated? no, only temporarily blocked.

One must learn to discover our true potential from these life-situations. If you stumble, do you not arise again? Yes – in life, if you stumble, you rise and walk on. These daily tests and toils and worries are all a part of your growth toward God. How insignificant they appear when seen in this true light.

“Who am I?” Each person is a unique and individual expression of God. “Who am I becoming?” is the greater reality. Each person has the potential to grow in this realization of selfhood – to know that this selfhood can be a reflection of God. And even though this awareness is presently partial and incomplete – it, nonetheless, is true and unique; and there is no one else who has the unique abilities you do.

"Who will I be?" You are becoming yourself 'in truth' – yes, a self which is deeper and more true than you are capable to realize at this moment. Always is the 'self' revealing its deepest, truest, and most beautiful secrets. Little by little this growth towards God is revealing the immortal child at the same time. The child is no less, and is no greater, than all children, for all are uniquely wonderful; all are uniquely finding self-expression. It is true, those finding self-expression are finding God-expression.

Each child is in a vast and seemingly endless Grand Universe of beings wherein all are experiencing this wonder of ascension. Beings who are created perfect do lack experiential growth – and truly envy those who have it. Though no less precious to God our Father, truly do they appreciate what wonders are wrought in His never-ending evolutionary and experiential works – that such strong, yet finite characters, are created in this way.

Look well to the future. See yourselves in transition. Do not try to hold on to what is fading, for life is new growth, new paths, new opportunity – yes, new life. Life comes from life – and springing therefrom creates life and growth in endless abundance. Never is there stagnation and dormancy in truly living life. Walk firmly and tall through your daily tasks. Even though these sometimes arduous tasks may cause you grief, know in the end there is a true purpose, and so much will your load be lightened.

Jesus, as He lived His life on Urantia, was not given an easy road. On the contrary, His path was very rugged; yet He was, and is, the divine example of 'man made perfect.' So can you, in your lives, in your rugged paths, begin to show forth the divine that is within. God, as represented by your indwelling Spirit, is active in your lives. He is not sitting aloof watching your life – no, for He is part of it. He is part of you. He is living and suffering and watching your growing.

Yes, in toil and fret, the Creator of the universes is right there with you – within; He is not far away. He is not waiting for you to come to Him, He came to you! and He is with you always; always remember this in your minds. When life is burdensome, when your tasks are difficult, know that God, Himself, is with you, right within you. And now I will conclude our lesson by asking if there are any questions?

RACHEL: Father Ham, that was such a beautiful lesson and such a wonderful explanation. I am sure that it has to be of help to everyone. This evening we have two newcomers. Dennis J. and Dave W., and they are also newcomers to the Urantia Book; however, they are reading now, and Dennis J. was at our study group last Thursday evening. I feel that both of these fellows have been searching. I would like to welcome them to our group.

HAM: Yes. Thank you, Rachel. I extend my welcome to all, of course.

RACHEL: Also, two fellows from Northern California, Alfredo F., and Phillip, would like to come to Salt Lake and be with us at our meeting on June the 1st. And also, Alfredo requests a private meeting with you on Sunday, May the 31st, if this is possible.

HAM: Yes, it is possible, and I deem it important. Is Roland available? (Roland: Yes, Teacher, I am.) Ham: Very well then, it is settled.

MELISSA: Father Ham, I was speaking with Roland tonight about helping him with these personal meetings and I was wondering – I am willing to do it, but when would I be ready to do this?

HAM: It is hoped that in a few more weeks you will be able to help in these meetings, and I am very grateful for your assistance. It is advisable that you should begin slowly with those who are here in this group so that you will feel more comfortable; and also, that errors can be corrected. If you and Rebecca could meet on a Sunday for two or three weeks, and practice, it may be beneficial.

MELISSA: Thank you, Father Ham. I appreciate the input. I am happy to serve and I will get with Rebecca on that. (Ham: Very well.)

ANDREA: Father Ham, I have a question on the lesson: If we don't grasp a potential that we have for our life, do we lose it? or does it come back in another opportunity? Do you know what I am asking?

HAM: Yes. These potentials are an inherent part of you. It is not something lost and found, here and there – they are growing through your life and are not ever lost. The branch may turn and sway, or grow this way instead of that way, but the potential is never lost. (Andrea: That's nice to know. Thank you.)

MARLIN: I can understand how these teachings and this Mission is going to affect what we consider to be the civilized world. But when I take a look at primitive people – people we consider to be primitive, like the Kayapo Indians in the rain forests of Brazil – I see they live in harmony with nature, and I don't understand their spirituality. Is this Teaching Mission going to affect them? Is it going to heighten their spirituality?

HAM: Yes, for all of Urantian children, God's children, are being drawn to Him – even those who you may consider 'unspiritual.' They have an equal potential, yes, and we are considering how to uplift the spirituality of all peoples. It may be soon, or not soon, depending upon their leadership and potentials – and of such, I am not at liberty to discuss. Suffice it to say that no man, woman, or child, is left out of God's kingdom; all are on equal spiritual footing, even if they are unknowing and intellectually backward. Spiritual 'growth-potentials' are equal among peoples of all civilizations and times.

JAMES: Teacher, in our lives on this planet it often seems as though we are so busy making a living and attending to our basic duties that we are unable to find time to develop many of our potentialities – many of our talents. Also, I get the feeling that supernal beings even as far progressed as you are, bid for opportunities for service – and yet it seems only a few are chosen for it, which therefore leaves many to be disappointed. Will our whole universe career be such that there will be less opportunities for self-expression and service than there are beings desiring those opportunities?

HAM: The impulse desire for service is a growing development. When you are living this mortal life, this impulse is small. As you progress in your universe ascension, this impulse grows to dominate your life in joy and in love; for what is service, really, but the opportunity to help in God's plan. If you have this desire, truly you will have the opportunity to pursue it. When sometimes we are disappointed in our ambitions not being fulfilled – this again, is part of our soul-growth, for it stimulates further growth potential; but, perhaps different than our expectation. Each experience, throughout life after life, has its effect on soul-growth; and one is unprogressive when not yearning for one's full arena of potential life. Those who would seek God 'through isolation,' are erring, and stifling their own spiritual growth – for the opportunity for stimulation is lost; and there are potentials which are not developed now which would enrich this life. But again I say, these potentials are not lost forever; they are given opportunity for expression in another era, in the fullness of time. Don't make the mistake of feeling cheated in life, thinking there is not enough time for this, or time for that – for time is eternal. 'Time in eternity' is an eternal moment. 'Fragmented time' is only a temporary condition for your intellect. This time-scarcity which many do feel, is temporary. Soon, when you have acquired the intellectual and spiritual level of understanding what is essential in your spiritual growth – and, that God's time is, in your time, 'eternity in a moment' – you will then realize that there is always enough time. Is this helping?

JAMES: Very much. Thank you for enlarging our perspective on this. Did I understand you correctly in a previous lesson wherein you said, in essence, that on Paradise we will, all mortals, reach the Corps of Finality? And there, we will be in some sense, equal; and will, at that time, be able to express all of our potentials?

HAM: Yes and no. That all potentials within your ascension career are expressed – this is true. But after your ascension career has culminated – then you begin a career of descending so that further potentials are allowed expression. So, yes and no. (James: Thank you very much.)

WILLEENA: Father Ham, when the Father's 'thought' that becomes our 'being-potential,' is first an idea – then, at that stage of the idea (within that moment, or that amount of time, whatever that is), is the very core of our whole being inspired at that time? so that our propensities toward types of experiences needed in our ascension careers are developed at that point? I realize you say that there are accidents; and, that there is a plan – so that some of the things that occur in each of our lives are things that happen without being directly planned for; and yet they serve to develop the character/qualities that we are coming into our 'potential to be.' My question is: When the Father first has the idea that becomes us – is it at that stage, then, that we have the various potentials for our character-building? (Ham: Yes.) Willeena: Then the kinds of experiences that we may encounter in our particular lifetime – these are all a part of that initial ideal?

HAM: No one knows for sure. But we can say, and with a fair degree of certainty, that yes, it is true – Father sees the end from the beginning and all stages in between.

WILLEENA: So in essence, there may seem to be accidents, yes, but the particular kinds of accidental occurrences that happen to each of us in our individual lives are perfect for our particular development of our potentials?

HAM: Perhaps 'perfect' is too strong a word. 'Sufficient,' would be better.

WILLEENA: Then when there is a great deal of growth opportunity in a person's life – such as from a very rugged road at some stage as the consciousness wakes up – is it appropriate and key to take a certain amount of time from our life to focus attention on that healing that needs to take place? say from the past, to be able to come to the present with more of one's self?

HAM: This is personal and unique to each person. Each person is able to find the time necessary for personal growth, yes – and, for healing where needed. These two aspects of life are complementary so that each requires the other, and complements the other. Your own growth in life has been an example of an exemplary life illustrating this.

JEREMIAH: Father Ham, I have a few questions on tonight's lesson; they are related, so maybe I'll ask them all together: What can one do to better recognize potentials that we have? And second: Using your analogy of converting potentials into actuals, as a tree with branches is growing – let's say we have overlooked one potential, and the branches around it are growing more and more, and one is a little short – what happens there? Is that somehow manifest to right itself in our life if we are following guidance? Does that mean that our spiritual helpers will manipulate things to help us become more aware of that potential that is lacking, to try to develop it? And the third question is: If we are not converting these potentials, but keep chasing the same ones, let's say, and not converting actuals into more potentials – if I hear what you are saying, then more and more – and again with the analogy with the tree – it is possible for that tree to be unbalanced? growing off on one side much more than the other side? And if that is the case, how can I be on guard against that?

HAM: True. This is a danger in a freewill life. For in allowing freewill-choosing, the potential is great for unbalanced living. It is wise to recognize potentials, yes, and allow for their full development. When one grows 'un-actualized,' it may or may not have consequences in life, so that a person who has potential to be very gracious, for example, and yet persists in abrasive action toward others – he stifles his potential and grows a little crookedly, you might say, so that his potential of wise and gracious action is limited by his persistence in being crude. This, in turn, creates further potentials in another direction. Life is filled with trees, and many of our fine trees are slightly unbalanced here and there. The mansion worlds experience is, in fact, designed to correct these deficiencies if they are not corrected here. Is this answering all the questions?

JEREMIAH: Yes, Teacher, just one further question: [laughter.] The potentials we have, are they designed for this planet only, and for this generation? or is that immaterial?

HAM: Yes, in a sense. You are all a part of your life's generation and civilization; so your potentials are limited and expanded thereby. Yes. My love goes out to all. Farewell.

Self-Awareness, Otherness-Awareness, and God-Awareness Brings Us To Truth and True Faith

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. My heart is glad to know you new arrivals, and am also thankful for your service. Our time this evening shall be filled with new spiritual enlightenment.

My lesson this evening is concerning wholeness, and the integration of life's various aspects into a meaningful and trustworthy wholeness within. When our lives become over-burdened by the many stresses and activities comprising modern daily existence, there is a tendency to become unsure of one's centered and secure being. This uncertainty is entirely a mental state, a mindal fragmentation, and not reflective of your true spiritual wholeness.

Fragmentation is an attribute and attitude of mind itself. Mental comprehension requires this fragmentation for understanding to occur. Mind takes fragmented reality and integrates this into a meaningful whole. When mind becomes overly-stimulated in a constant daily manner, then does mind become confused and isolated - or rather, feels isolated. This isolation-feeling is illusory, for one's wholeness - a centered, perfect, entire being - is real. Those unwholesome mental structures - worries, cares, and so on - are not real.

We, as imperfect beings, live largely in our mental domain; and this mental domain is filled with our own mental structures (mental creations) which we see as real, but they are not.

As I was last week explaining - the wholeness of being; the 'who am I' of self-hood; the deepest and truest awareness of self - is experienced through the soul and then, real-ized by the mind. We are not a structure created by our minds, no! Rather, are we a structure, a soul, growing with the aid of mind, but not made by our minds.

For example: Often we become immersed in a trade or business activity in which the shallow-thinking person is defining their 'right to being right.' Their self-worth feeling and attitude toward others is derived from an earthly accomplishment. This is error, for this earthly accomplishment is always in danger of toppling, and the person's self-security is in danger of toppling with it. The true sense of self-worth comes from only one reality, and that reality is one's relationship to the source of reality - God.

'I am,' is a unique awareness to humans as opposed to animals. Self-conscious (self-awareness) is a spiritual level indicating that progress will be made in life.

Without this awareness, progress toward God is impossible.

So you see, awareness of self presages awareness to the awareness of God; the two are mutually working together as we grow. As we become aware of our lives in a greater aspect – as we become aware of our errors, aware of our forgiveness by God – we become also aware of our relationship with others, our brotherhood and sisterhood toward our fellows.

Children, as they are growing, often emulate an older person when they are truly impressed and inspired by this person. Likewise does the adult, by exercising true faith, actually grow into beingness by emulating their highest concepts of God. Limited and even childlike that these concepts are, they are invaluable in helping to guide the soul toward proper worthwhile and marvelous growth. The growing child soon becomes aware of self-hood. This awareness of 'self' is like an auto-revelation when it occurs. Often this revelation occurs in conjunction with Thought Adjuster circle-attainment.

Yes, self-awareness, otherness-awareness, followed by God-awareness – then comes the awareness of God in others. All these early 'first knowingness stages' presage the 'adult knowingness stage' in our merging adulthood. Our awareness of God is growing and actually changing the way we live our lives in connection with those around us.

Faith transforms the ordinary life into one of amazing feats of courage, wisdom, and foresight – faith in God, and also, faith in ourselves. Yes, I will repeat this: Faith not only in God, but also, faith in ourselves – the two are the same; different aspects of the same thing. When we have faith in ourselves it is a faith that goes beyond the self; it is a faith that extends to our higher self – our inner Spirit. This faith is not a selfish thing, no; this faith, which is a surety within, is an up-reaching and uplifting thing.

Who can be niggardly in the face of such abundance? Who can be cowardly in the face of such sublime courage and stability? Who can be poor in the face of such riches? Who can be weak in the face of such strength?

Awareness, you see, is the greatest gift of truth. Truth is liberating, for truth gives awareness a reality and an understanding thereof. When this understanding is used wisely, nothing – again I say, nothing there is which cannot be done. Life may be full of toil and burden, heartache and sorrow; yet, in true reality awareness (true understanding of the great 'I am') there is the strength; there is the wisdom; there is the courage to overcome these obstacles. It is there, yes! it is reality which you are becoming aware of.

Truth has power. Truth is spiritual power. When we walk in the light of truth, truly have you greatness, spiritual greatness, which shines for all to see; wise and noble actions can only be the results. Have courage. Have faith – faith in God and faith in yourselves. Have faith in your own understanding of truth. This transforming faith will overcome the partial shadows of negativity in existence.

Truly are you all noble souls. Truly have you greatness within; abundance of strength; and resources in courage. Truly are we all brothers and sisters in the great kingdom of God. Reach to each other in light, yes, through love and with truth as your bond, as your medicine, as your sword, as your comfort. Truth is of God. Truth is ever abiding. Truth is universal light, love, and reality. Truth is an ever-increasing knowledge of God. Truth and faith are the two transforming miracles of existence. Light and love follow truth and faith; and love is the essence of God.

This concludes my lesson for this evening. Are there any questions at this time?

RACHEL: Thank you, Father Ham, for that glorious lesson. I surely hope that you really know how much we appreciate you and your teachings. We do have our three guests from out of town with us this evening and you met them yesterday. But again, we would like to acknowledge them. There is Horace, and Setha, and Harkana. We thank them for coming so far to be with us this evening, and we have enjoyed them.

HAM: Yes. Thank you, Rachel, for again presenting our guests. Pleased and happy am I again to welcome them here among us.

MELISSA: Father Ham, I would just like to say that you answered every question that I could have had tonight, because I have been feeling a little insecure and uncertain with myself. I seem to have a lot of faith in Father, but when it comes to me, I lack confidence sometimes. So the lesson you gave tonight was very fulfilling. I just want to say thank you.

HAM: Melissa, my daughter, you are prized and cherished more than you will ever know. (Melissa: That is very appreciatively received. Thank you.)

HONORAY: Father Ham, I feel the same way as Melissa does tonight. Your lesson tonight has also answered questions for me. I would like to report the progress that I have had in the last three weeks in spreading some of your lessons and things throughout my family. Because of it I am getting visits from my family in Salt Lake and visits from California. In fact, friends that I haven't even heard from before are coming to see me. To top it all, my nephew from Washington, DC, who happens to be the head of the NASA space program right now, came to see me last week. He said he felt like I had a message for him; and I have to tell you that he took it very beautifully. So I want to thank you. This Mission is really spreading through my family. Your work is being well known and is getting results that are unbelievable.

HAM: Honoray, I am deeply touched and thankful for you. How precious you are, again, you do not know. (Honoray: Thank you.)

SETHA (Eugenia Bryant): Father Ham, I just received my name yesterday, and indeed it was a wonderful and moving session that we had yesterday with Roland, James and yourself; and, coming to know of our new Teacher for our group in Lawrence, Kansas. Your lessons have already done wonderful things for people in our small corner of the world. We are beginning to share them with others on a selective basis; but I think right now we are in the process of sort of assimilating a year of your work and teachings with this Woods Cross group. We have just been so touched and so moved by the many of your lessons. I do have some concern in that the Urantia Book has kind of taken a little bit of a back seat lately; we are just referring to it occasionally when we come across questions that come up in your lessons. For myself,

I would like to say thank you for the lesson tonight. I know you didn't pick the topic just for me but it's a wonderful topic for me, because I am a little bit the opposite of the two that just spoke. I'm one who has a great deal of faith in my mind and still I have a lot of difficulty with reaching God. Not that I didn't understand God was there, but in my reaching through to God, and allowing Him to show me of His presence. So for me to have my faith in God, it was a great deal of difficulty for me to let God help me in my life. And your lesson today was deeply appreciated, and I thank you very much for all you have done for us.

HAM: Setha, you are truly a unique and precious spiritual woman. I am honored to be in your presence. (Setha: Thank you so much. I am honored to be here.)

HORACE (Bill Bryant): Father Ham, my beautiful wife has said it so well that I would just like to say, amen, to that. (Ham: Thank you, and God go with you on your journey home.)

CALVIN: I also thank you for the lesson. Marlin and I were discussing this question that I have – it may be better for another evening but if you will: We understand Melchizedek's order from the Urantia Book, and in the LDS community the term 'Melchizedek priesthood' is used often. But is there a similarity or a purpose to the known priesthood referred to as 'Aaronic priesthood?'

HAM: No. This is a human priesthood; and so is the so-called 'Melchizedek priesthood' a human institutional contrivance. These are not indicative or reflective of those orders on high.

CALVIN: Thank you for answering that. I have another simple question: In regard to your teachings, which we are now receiving this last year or so, and those since the teachings started with Father Abraham in New Zealand – has the same sort of teachings been tried in other histories of Urantia? Or, is this the first period/era that these type of teachings have come to us in this fashion?

HAM: There have indeed been other teachers from on high throughout history who have taught in a similar fashion. Yes. Their names and times, however, are not of importance. Now, in this day, these teachings are somewhat more advanced, as the Urantia Book is advanced comparatively with the evolutionary and revelatory religions of the past. Michael's teachings, however, were the highest and still stand as such.

CALVIN: One quick question from reading this morning in the Urantia Book: In the pages around 1400 it talks about 'sovereignty' – and that to have real freedom for all mankind and a united brotherhood, this planet must evolve and integrate into a national or international sovereignty, a 'one world government.' Do you have insight on whether today's United States administration, and/or the United Nations – are we working in the right direction toward that? Or, would you say, the wrong direction?

HAM: It is not allowed for me to comment on that matter at this time. (Calvin: Okay, and thank you.)

ROINDA: Ham, I have a question about faith: I feel like I have a lot of faith, but I wonder if it is all just 'in my mind.' I understand it is through prayer that I can increase my faith to be more loving and do more of the will of the Father? Is that accurate?

HAM: Yes, of course. Prayer always increases the ability to receive and understand the daily prompting of the indwelling Spirit. One must actively pray for, and actively follow the guidance, for guidance to be manifest. Yes.

ROINDA: Does it get easier to follow divine guidance rather than just thinking about if we are doing something correctly? I don't know if I am following guidance, or if I am just following my own mind.

HAM: Everyone is living in a complicated world like are you - mentally, spiritually, and physically. Inner guidance need not be an overt intellectual experience. No. Rather it is a quiet, soft, inner-felt comprehension of God, which is always there to aid and comfort you, yourself. You are all following guidance; yet must you think through the problems of life and make life's decisions. These decisions must be yours to make or they are meaningless. So yes, you all live in a world of decision-making which is based on mental assessment, with the awareness of spirit helping. God never makes your decisions. He only helps you with the decisions you have made. Is this a little clearer? (Roinda: Yes, thank you.)

HORACE: Father Ham, yesterday we met you over at Joshua's house and had a wonderful conversation, but it failed to record very well. There was a lot of static and noise. We had four different tape recorders over there and we are really puzzled of what could be the problem. I know it is a technical thing and is our fault in some way, but I was wondering if maybe some of the energies from our friends on your plane were doing anything to cause that static on the tape recorders. If you aren't to blame, then we'll keep looking. (Ham: Keep looking.) [laughter.]

TOMACK: Father Ham, I would like to ask a question. How would it be best to marry your teachings with the dominant Christian teachings when they, so many times, conflict?

HAM: Yes. This is, in reality, an individual matter. The dominant Christian teachings are largely evolved from ancient times over generations and are largely the result of traditional thought. The gospel of Jesus as presented in our Urantia Book, standing alone unencumbered by these other traditional teachings, is indeed very advanced. Each person can and should weld these two concepts together in their lives. Tradition and the common practices of the day should be largely honored, for conflicts and unhappiness may result from strenuous insistence on the 'purity' of the gospel. Each individual must walk his or her own path in life and in society, choosing those convictions most suitable; and personally decide if such convictions should perhaps be subject to their ideals. Living the true gospel of Jesus will again one day triumph over the errors of incidental teachings which have become enmeshed in modern Christianity - ideas such as 'the atonement,' the 'virgin birth,' etc. Difficult is this when confronting those persons who cherish these erroring beliefs, ideas/teachings. In most cases these should not be directly challenged, for this will come to nothing, to naught. Is there something more specific? (Tomack: No. That was very helpful. Thank you).

ED: Teacher Ham, I was wondering if you would comment on the basis, the need, the source, and the value of the great religions of the world? And why they have such great followings and growth, even though it has been over long periods of time?

HAM: The answer is within each believer, for he or she individually finds a truth in a faith (a religion) where this person is comfortable existing. Far braver souls may find truth outside their culture and then incorporate a foreign religion as their own, as superior to the local religion. But all religions are vital for human stability and cultural integrity. Without religion, cultures disintegrate, and individuals suffer. Religion is vital to all spiritual progress, for even the seemingly irreligious soul has a flicker of divine love within; and often this flicker is the light which they are guided by, regardless of the outer trappings from religious life. I will endeavor to answer one further question tonight.

ONCLIVAN: Teacher Ham, I am very thankful for your teachings, and I would like to express my appreciation. I'd like to make an observation on my understanding of love to get your feedback on it. Recently we went on a two-week trip to Japan where my wife is from. I met with a number of people and told them about your message. I have some quite favorable reactions concerning that. I noticed during our busy schedule that I met with some of the people, and I was very busy, and I had not prepared myself to have more of a peaceful feeling of love. As such, I noticed that our Mission message was not accepted as well as when I was able to prepare myself. And as I was able to feel love during our meetings, I would notice a positive reaction in them even though they were not necessarily understanding the message. So concerning this love: If my understanding is correct, even at the end of your lesson you said about love, "The essence of God, is love." Also, you talked about love "being the highest motivation we can use in our universe ascent." And one of my questions concerning this is: If in everything we do, wouldn't we make our seven psychic circles attainment faster and progress quicker if we would always do it with a love motivation? If we could prepare ourselves beforehand, before we meet a person, before we tell the message, before we take on some responsibility – if we would take the time to pray so that we get that feeling of love, so that our motivation is a pure motivation rather than just out of responsibility or out of fear or obligation. Is this something that is important to do? Would that help us make our circle progress quicker if we get that love motivation before we do our daily tasks and things?

HAM: Yes. Very well put and well understood. This inner feeling of a well-centered love and peace is the essence of spiritual communication – so that when your words are delivered, so is this radiance of love and peace. Yes. Of course, all of life would be better, more smooth and happier, if everyone always thought to send their communications from love rather than from the head, mental.

The connection with Rebecca is weak and I am afraid I must end our meeting. Go, all of you, with God in your daily lives. I pray for you and with you: Father, please guide your children this evening and always. Farewell.

Life Transitions. From What You Are To What You Are Becoming

Ham, Abraham, El-yon, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 05-25-1992

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. This evening I am pleased to welcome all of the travelers who have come, and also, to thank you all for coming on this holiday. [Memorial Day.] I am very happy and joyful today for it has been a year since our true beginning as a group. And, I am ever so happy to announce the second-year phase of our Teaching Mission. Abraham is here and would like to speak to you.

ABRAHAM: Greetings forthwith. Elevated consciousness is growing and growing, yes. How wonderful is this day to be here, for our hopes and expectations have been met. Wonderful new beginnings are upon us. Our lives are in transition. The one common thread throughout this period of change is your personal spiritual growth; for as you look back on your life, that is what you will perceive most greatly. You will experience memories concerning your spiritual growth, and this will comfort and sustain you through periods of change.

Our beloved sons, David and John, are departing for a momentous mission/assignment this very week; I ask you all in humility to pray to our Father for their fruitful and safe journey and work. New beginnings are transpiring for others also. Yes. Firm is your foundation and strong are your limbs. Happy is this great day. Beginnings are upon us. Yes.

There are those who are hostile, indeed even threatening, and are meaning harm to our Mission through ignorance, yes. You have all passed through much testing; you are all sure within yourselves of your own spiritual growth – this certainty is the foundation of your strength and will carry you through any hostility. Yes, you are all so very mature in comparison with others who are insecure and behaving childishly. I have the utmost confidence and secure awareness of your strength and abilities, yes.

Long ago I talked about strengthening within through the trials of life. Yes, and many of you have indeed, passed through these trials of personal problems – problems within and without. Resolved now is this time. A chapter is closing and a new one beginning.

Our Father, I pray for your children who have walked a sure path and have come to this place, this transition-time. Father, I pray your Spirit be close with each and every one of your children gathered here this evening, now and forever. Amen.

Greetings. I am Ham. I wish to extend my thanks and appreciation to our beloved friend/Teacher, Abraham, for his excellent summing up of our progress.

This evening I wish to begin our lesson and speak about transitions. In the road of life, often are there hard and unsure pathways; there are unsteady footholds; there are rocks which give out beneath our feet. Where we thought we were safe, is not always so.

Understand that your concepts of security and safety may be based on illusion, for what is true security? What constitutes a balanced, safe, secure, strong existence? Is it not centered on the good Spirit of our Father, who guides us and shows us the path through a noble exercise of faith and surety?

True security/safety, is not found in the 'things' of this world. I say to you, all this 'material' world existence, is but dust. All your wealth, all your fame and glory, will not carry you beyond the grave; all these you leave behind. Yes, as surely as I speak, all 'things' of this world are but dust, and much of what you perceive to be secure, is crumbling even now.

I am not advocating the giving up of your material wealth and security, no, not at all. However, I do mean to show that this is not your true security, for what matters it to a man of true faith if all things earthly, crumble. He who has real and abiding faith and strength is secure in his knowledge of truth and reality. This knowledge precedes and supersedes all of the material world.

Father, who walks with each of us, is always concerned over your true welfare, yes, and will never ever forsake His children. You are all carefully looked-after, watched over, and cared for within His great eternal arms. He who is the maker of all reality brings you to Himself and to the truth of this fount of all that is. Within each child, the good Spirit is - and is becoming, in life.

Often all the cares of the world are so overwhelming, that we, who once were a part of this dust, can see that it may overwhelm and overcome you - your thinking. We wish for you to understand how untrue and how false this overwhelming thinking is! What a lie is this! Yes, you who see and have insight into true reality must exercise this living faith to get you through these times of transition and trouble. Yes, you must show within and without to others, that you can, and do, rely upon the living God and the Spirit of Truth for your true security, happiness, welfare, and progress.

Transitions are so very difficult in their uncertainty. Uncertainty causes the material mind to fear, and fear can be deadly to spiritual progress. Always must we look to the Father in these times of difficulty and uncertain futures. Yes indeed, even when we are uncertain of ourselves, certain can we be of God.

Transient reality is the essence of material existence; all change and all growth is in continuous transition. Even when life appears static - inwardly, you experience great change, great difficulties, great problems; and all these you surmount, yourselves, by your strength, by your calm and secure mental abilities, which are grounded in spiritual truth. Life is the sum total of your hard and difficult decisions through the exercise of sublime faith.

How are we to judge another! Who among us lives within another's mind? Only our Father! We who serve and teach and endeavor to show you a broader path, a wide and open path of certain salvation - we indeed, are walking this path arm in arm with you. And you who are walking this path with us are indeed, walking arm in arm with God. As well, you who are walking this path are indeed walking arm in arm with Michael, for His great spiritual benevolence is always present with you, truly.

This concludes our lesson this evening. I will endeavor to answer your questions at this time.

RACHEL: Thank you, Father Ham, for your lesson. And also, may we thank Father Abraham for his beautiful prayer for us. This evening we do have three out-of-state visitors who have never been here before. One is Frosty J., from Pocatello, and Rick and Barbra Giles, from Coeur D'Alene, Idaho. We also have two guests who have been here a number of times that you already know, Lisa and Bill Brock. I would like to welcome them.

HAM: Thank you. I am happy and pleased to welcome all you who have traveled. My thanks to you for making such a long journey to be among our group this day.

RACHEL: Thank you, Father Ham. I do have one question. Seeing how this is Memorial Day, and it is the day we honor all of our loved ones who have passed on, I'd like to ask: Do they know of our efforts to try to show our love and appreciation for them? or is this effort just merely a soul-growth experience for us.

HAM: It is important for you to remember those who have traveled on ahead of you. Yes, they are always aware of your love, even if unaware of your specific prayers.

JOHN: Father Ham, I think I speak for both David and myself when I just say thanks for this last year. And also, I thank Abraham for the send-off. If you would like to visit us we would be more than happy to have you. We wouldn't know you're there but if you would just rattle some pots and pans or something. [laughter.] [Editor's note: John and David (Joshua's sons) were given a mission assignment to assist in the Teaching Mission's cause in the Naperville, Illinois area.]

HAM: You will have sufficient guidance for your needs. Yes. Even if I am not present you are always cared-for and watched over, for you are truly becoming a beacon personality for many who will be guided by your bright guiding light, which is indeed, your life lived.

WILLEENA: Father Ham, this was a wonderful occasion tonight; and I felt very deeply that this was a very special day – although I had no idea what relevance it was in the spiritual sense. When it was said that we are in the beginning of the 'second-year phase' I felt something really strongly. I am not really clear, but it seemed to me that if we are in our strengthening-faith stage, in our growing ability to be aware of the Father, and to have soul-connection with our brothers and sisters in the world more and more – that there will be beautiful times ahead. And it seems to me as if I am seeing it all around; I have heard it from other sources as well, from people I know. It is obvious that things are accelerating and that there is a great deal occurring on this planet in many regards, spiritually. Am I correct in surmising that this next year will be rather momentous in that there will be much that occurs and requires a great deal of faith? And, that our growth from the first year is going now to be put into service more and more as we come into this second-year phase?

HAM: Correct. You are in the beginning of your growth-opening stage. In the early days were you very closed inwardly; and now are you ready to begin truly opening as a flower opens toward the sun; to show the beauty within; to experience the sunshine on your petals, and take in the rain. Do you see?

WILLEENA: Quite clearly, yes; it's growing quite precious, and it's growing quite sacred. Were you aware of the experience I shared today with my aunt? (Ham: Indirectly, by your reaction, which I can perceive.)

WILLEENA: May I simply say thank you for the one occasion – the answer that you gave me in regard to seeing the intention behind the various churches that I was not understanding at the time. Your answer was about looking deeper and seeing the heart and soul of the intention of all these well-meaning people. Today I got to experience something that felt like a 'coming home' insight to one of your teachings. I am so grateful to you because it's apparent that in the world now these experiences are starting to take hold. And, I am beginning to see that 'service' is a simple work in some ways – it is just in being present with a loving soul that is looking deeper into an opening of the heart. I am very, very grateful to you. I also wanted to ask, and this may not be appropriate so please share with me if so: In the last twenty-four hours or so I am having quite an unusual and very interesting experience in my hands, a vibrational pulsing; and I am wondering if you will verify whether or not this is something, as you told Marianna, could be an increasing connection with my Thought Adjuster? or maybe just something other than that.

HAM: It is inappropriate at this time/phase to discuss a personal experience which is very private and I will be happy to talk with you again when convenient. The hand tingling is often concerned with nervous reaction in spiritual change; it is temporary and is not a concern.

WILLEENA: Thank you. So do I understand you to be saying that it is simply a bio-physiological adjustment to spiritual shift? (Ham: Yes, it is.) Willeena: Thank you, Father Ham. Is it appropriate to ask for a private session; and if so, will Melissa be doing sessions in the next month or so?

HAM: Yes. It is projected and hoped that she will very soon.

BARBARA: I know our study group would ask us to ask you for any message that you would like to relay to them? I don't know if that is appropriate, but I'd like to ask that because I know we will be asked that.

HAM: Evelynnn, yes, the name we know you by, I would desire to say a greeting, and also, instruction concerning the coming of your Teacher who is shortly to arrive to your group. El-yon is the name of your Teacher. He is of great spiritual magnitude and wisdom. He is a 'word study' person who has contributed much to the development of these communications over a long period of time. El-yon is with us this day and would like to address you now.

Greetings. I am EL-YON, and I am your Teacher. It pleases my heart to greet you in this manner, for I have been with you for some time now. It is my sublime, supreme and totally heartfelt hope that I may address your group soon. If it is becoming to you, Evelynnn, to be a helper to me, and also for Gloria, perhaps in future time, I am happy to make appointed plans for future instruction time. If it is your will to be of assistance, will you be in the capacity of transmission-receiver?

BARBARA/EVELYNN: Of course I'd be willing. I don't know if I am capable.

EL-YON: You are thus capable, even if you have not had experience yet. It brings great comfort to hear the answer I already knew. [laughter.] I am of a punctual nature and am happy to be of assistance in your life's schedule. If you will make an appointment with me, I will keep it, and you may begin to practice this transmission when you are comfortable. Will you give me a time?

BARBARA/EVELYNN: Each morning at seven.

EL-YON: Very pleased am I, yes, and will be in attendance then. Welcome to a far-reaching, stupendous, magnificent, excellent, wonderful assignment. How pleased am I. I also wish to extend greetings to you from Prince Machiventa and Abraham. Welcome, my child.

HAM: Again greetings. I am HAM. Thank you, El-yon, for your presence. I am aware that Rebecca is growing weak in connection. This has been a long transmission-time for her, and strenuous in effort.

I am so pleased with all of these great developments. I wish to tell you of my personal love for each of you, even you who have just come to know me. I indeed, love you all – each individually, as a friend, as a teacher, as a father. Indeed, how pleased I am with you, my children. How happy is this day for me. I cannot fully express my joy. Farewell.

Love Is The Greatest Gift of All Existence ~ Of Your Being-ness In It | Beingness Is A Miracle

I am HAM. I am your Teacher. This evening is a milestone in our teaching efforts for we now have established over fifteen groups who are now benefiting from Teacher contact. Many more are soon to come. Your efforts are directly responsible for this great occurrence. I give you the highest accommodation which is allowed me, from Melchizedek himself.

All who have heard my lessons are being changed by them and I am happy with the response of so very many wonderful and spiritual persons. I am truly humbled by this great love-outpouring and am truly thankful to God for allowing me to become your Teacher. Thank you, all of you.

This evening, I have prepared a lesson on enjoyment. So often in daily toil do we not enjoy little enjoyments of simply 'being.' I have often spoken of this and wish again to begin to nurture this aspect of your souls.

Life is so precious, so divine. It is so awe-filled and wonder-inspiring that it offends God when you ignore His bounteous wonders. Enjoy the little things, for they are what life is made of. Enjoy the birds singing. Enjoy the sunshine on your skin. Enjoy the color of the grass and the trees and the sky. Enjoy food and drink. Enjoy touching another person. Take time to enjoy the small seemingly insignificant things of life and you will enrich your entire life thereby.

Wonderful and meaningful is this life. Miraculous and deified is this life. Remember as you walk along enjoying the fresh air, the sunshine and the flowers – remember that there, is God – a spark within, and a spirit without you. Remember to think about your own soul. This is happiness. This is spiritual fulfillment.

Yes, take time to enjoy the feeling of wholeness, the feeling of spirituality, the feeling of being a wonder in this world. Express to your very self: "What a miracle am I this day. How much more precious to God, the Father of all creation, am I, than the material wonders around me. How miraculous is this! How wonderful is this!" Yes, open yourselves to enjoyment of beauty, to enjoyment of the senses. Be open to the Spirit of God and allow His spirit to give you appreciation for enjoyment. How simple and how wondrous is this gift.

Certainly, all of you have felt those moments of miracles when suddenly you feel a connection with God and all of creation. Fleeting is this, yes, understood. However, meaningful is this, for it will stay in your hearts, in your memories, for all eternity.

Being-ness is a miracle. Yes, I say, a miracle! How do we thank God for this miracle of being? What can we ever give to Him in return? It is our wills. All we have in truth is our will – and that is all we really have to give. When we trust and love and appreciate God to the point that we consecrately and consciously give our will to Him, it is a great day for God. Easy it is to do 'in the moment,' 'in the hour' here and there, yes, but hard is it to do 'for a lifetime.'

Father knows your intentions; and, knows your goodwill toward Him. Forgiveness is yours – always remember this! For all faltering steps, all forgetfulness, all misunderstanding – even in rebellion, yes, forgiveness is yours. Father requires you, as a prerequisite for true spiritual perfection, to honor His will and enthrone it in your hearts; that you may know your Source, your God, and seek to do His will on Earth. What a privilege is this!

Are you comprehending that God, our Father, the Creator of this vast universe of creations, has given you the gift of being? and that this gift of being includes 'freedom?' He who is always present, is always understanding. A miracle is this; a divine miracle! His presence within your very minds is truly a miracle that has not ever been surpassed. All of His vast creations are striving toward this one eternal goal – to know Him.

To know Him is to love Him. It is to carry His Spirit-presence within and honor this Spirit in carrying out His will, His love, His understanding, His precious Being – which flows through you, in love. All of life bows before Him. All of life is existent by His gracious, divine will. All of life revolves around Him.

Our beloved Father is the Source and the destiny of all who believe in Him. He is the One who is giving eternal existence to men made of clay. He, who has given everything, asks only one thing – that you grow closer to Him; closer in craving His divine love; closer in knowing and loving Him – God, our Father.

Who is so self-destroying as to spurn this offer! Many may do so for some years; some may do it for a short time; but most thinking, feeling, and breathing human beings know that in their hearts there beats a heart more true. All who have spurned this offer for a time are forgiven and drawn back when the opportunity arises. Yes, even do the most hardened of hearts, when truly pressed will they at some time acknowledge the love of our Father.

Be unaffected by those who would spurn God and your good intentions – for I tell you, the time will come in their lives when a word or a gesture or a phrase will come back in its true meaning. Often we strive in life to give a word of God to those in need; often this word is spurned. For now, be unaffected, for all things change, in time. Love is the greatest most divine wonderful gift that is. Love softens the heart. Love opens the seed and love-plants, sprout. Love is the greatest joy. It is my greatest joy that I have been part of the spread of this love.

Enjoy your lives. Allow love to flow through you and give you that wellspring of true divine enjoyment of anything and everything. Enjoy the new growth of this wellspring of love in which you feel here this evening. Enjoy the moist it brings to the air of the evening. Enjoy the love between each other and fear it not. Love is the greatest gift of all existence. Freely love one another, as I freely love you. That is my lesson for this evening. I will now receive questions.

RACHEL: Father Ham, your lesson tonight struck me so deep in my heart that I feel very humbled. I thank you, and I love you. I know that yesterday you met with Philip and Sardineo, both from northern California, but I officially want to welcome them here and tell them how happy we are to have them; and we hope they come back soon.

HAM: Yes, indeed. And my great thanks for their effort in coming this long distance, and especially for their effort in this work. These two men are very closely watched and regarded in this circle of the celestial helpers. They are truly 'first-ground-breakers' among many people who have not experienced their spiritual level. They have the capacity for true seed-planting, which will yield a spiritual awakening among those who are seemingly rejecting. My humble thanks to you, and my prayers for you.

RACHEL: Thank you, Father Ham. We also have John and Jane Roper of California that would like to come up here and have a private meeting with you on July the 5th, and then attend our meeting on the 6th. Is this permissible?

HAM: Yes, it is. I also have another announcement to make. Melissa is now available to begin her assignment in the transmitting and receiving of my words. She is ready to assist Roland in the scheduling of private meetings. (Melissa: Thank you, Father Ham.)

PHILIP: Brother Ham, I thank you so much for your wonderful lesson this evening. I am in awe of one phrase and would like to ask you about it: You said that “a word or a gesture or phrase will come back with its true meaning” – does that mean that the individual who temporarily ignores or discards Gods will – will, at some time or another, pick up on, and perhaps reflect, the many small things that we humans do for them in a ‘passing’ way. Would you perhaps expand a little on that?

HAM: Yes. It is common and often observed that in the drudgery and hardness of life – which many mortals are subject to, and often are they rejecting of spiritual light and truth – that in such times of crisis these words or experiences from prior times will be brought forth in consciousness by the indwelling Spirit in their full light of truth; so that even if this person is rejectful now – at some future time, your words may have great impact. Timing is not always right when people (humans) interact. The timing of one’s truth may not mirror another’s timing of truth, but at future time this may change. Have faith in your words of truth; know that they may flower in future times – and, may be life-changing in future time, even if not immediately apparent.

PAT: Father Ham, I am a newcomer. I am happy you spoke about love because that was the question that I had for you. I would like to know the meaning of ‘marriage partner’ in the afterlife and how it is going to affect those of us that don't have someone that we are married to any longer, in this life.

HAM: Each child of God is considered precious, individually. This preciousness is neither hindered nor elevated by human association. This preciousness is complete and unchanging in itself. Father loves each of His children individually, alone. His love for us is unchanged by our choices of life’s path. Even on the morontia worlds, there are continuing associations; yet oftentimes associations from Urantia are no longer correct and then these associations are not serviceable anymore. Each person will choose their own individual pathway to God. In this pathway, certainly will there involve associations of many different kinds. So in life’s’ path, the associations may be temporary, yes, or more permanent. But this is not important in the long-term view of the ascension career. For “two to become as one,” this has no greater meaning than your becoming one with your Indwelling. Is this helping in your understanding?

PAT: Yes. It does help somewhat. I know in the current religion in this area, the LDS Church, so much is based on marriage and having it extended to the afterlife. And you know that is a concern to me right now because my husband just left and I just didn't know if it was something that I needed to really think I had to do, or had to be accomplished to progress in the afterlife.

HAM: Certainly not. You are a precious child of God, yourself – you, yourself. That is all. (Pat: Thank you very much.)

JEREMIAH: Father Ham, we know in the Urantia Book the revelators tried to teach truth by using human expressions of the past in order to relate to the people of today. They reverted to revelation when knowing they were lacking in the concepts of our background history. Is the Thought Adjuster the same way with a given individual – using all of the tools that He can to teach truth to the individual? And, His main method is on revealing previous human-indwelt experiences and the interactions that the persons had in the past, as opposed to the other method – revelations that are brand new from the Thought Adjuster or the Spirit of Truth? If that is true it would be very very important when we plant seeds in individuals because we are giving the Thought Adjuster many tools downstream to work with.

HAM: Yes and no. The indwelling Spirit is capable of transforming the understanding on many levels. The tools (as you say) incorporated in this effort are usually drawn from one's own life's experience. Yes. It is important however, not to cause a person to reject religion by too much seed-planting. No person on this world, or any other, is ever to be forced or coerced in any way to accept God. God so loves His children and is so aware of their endowment that He allows them freedom of choice. You each must also do the same – allow each person their own path to God. Each person has this fundamental right, so to speak, of 'being.' Each person is free. Each person can choose to find God in their own way. Each one is so precious that this freedom is never, ever, abrogated in any way. Are you in understanding?

JEREMIAH: Yes. I have one further question with regard to the lesson: We know there are sparkling lakes on the Mansion Worlds, but the rugged mountains are lacking. In search of beauty, here in this life – if we have an option for ample leisure time or vacation time, should one seek out the mountains for example, as opposed to lakes? In other words, seek out beauty in our personal situations that we perceive to be unique to this planet as compared to the worlds on high. Is that wise, or not?

HAM: It is irrelevant. The beauty appreciation comes from within. Beauty appreciation can be had in all aspects of life and its' surroundings; it needn't be only confined to times of beauty appreciation of things, so to speak. When you are growing in God's love, this transforming light reverberates in the appreciation for all surroundings as beauty. This appreciation can be great over something that is very small; or, can be small over something very great – it is all interdependent. Is this helping? (Jeremiah: Yes. Thank you.)

HAM: Only one further question this evening.

WILLEENA: Father Ham, there were a couple statements that I just wanted clarification on from the lesson. One was, and I'm paraphrasing: "The Father takes offense when we ignore the bounty, the beauty, the wonder of His creations since it is given in so much love." The other: "Each act of forgetfulness and each wrong turn and misunderstanding is already forgiven." I wonder if you could just expand a little bit on these two statements. I guess I was a little bit confused about whether or not we need to do something when we realize any mistakes made; or, that we have ignored or forgotten Father and His bounty. Is there something we need to do to rectify that?

HAM: No. It is understood, this confusion. Perhaps the word 'offense' is too strong. It was given to shock the consciousness of the listeners, for it is incumbent upon me to make it plain – the reality of God being so near in our every move. When we are slothful, forgetful, intolerant, wasteful, wanton, and so forth – our Father is so close that He experiences these reactions to life with you. In a way you could say that His reaction is nonexistent – His reaction never even existed. Yet in my teaching, it is my reaction to be offended for Him. It is perhaps good that this is cleared up.

WILLEENA: Thank you, Father Ham. In regard to Philip's question, and your answer - the question that came out of it for me was that it is through our awakenings spiritually that we are more consciously and more consistently approaching the Father for our guidance. My question is: From our past un-awareness, and actions/reactions to life - is some of what we are experiencing which is difficult in our days, somehow related to some of the earlier responses, unawarenesses, that is again coming back to get our attention in some way, so that we may heal it or rectify that in ourselves?

HAM: Only in certain instances would this be true. Often it is the tendency for humans to dwell and worry over past errors. This is not a healthy state and should be abandoned - left to lie in the past. Past is unchangeable. Only the present and future can be changed by your desires and your will. Think on the future. Forget the past - let it lie and leave it.

That is all for this evening. I am called away and am thankful again for your presence here tonight and will again be with you next week. My love to you all, each and every one. Farewell.

Through The Infinite Spirit Do We Discover the Richness of This Life While Living In This Life

Good evening, I am HAM. Our lesson this evening is concerning the Infinite Spirit. She is the motherly person/aspect of God, and is ever watchful of all Her children. Infinite is the depth and range of Her understanding. She is all-knowing and all-seeing. Her infinitude is unfathomable by mortal minds. You are the recipients of this infinite blessing; and even so, you cannot fathom but an infinitesimally small part of this great reality.

Indeed mind, itself, is infinite. Though you are experiencing mind in a finite manner with limits of function, you do taste that this infinite mind exists. The world, the universes, are also potential infinite, for they have the infinite Architect who is planning, managing, and administrating this vast creation.

Mind is truly an aspect of God the Trinity. You who are finite are in reality also infinite, for you have part of infinity as your birthright. Even as the spirit is minded of infinity, the mental is minded in finite, yes, 'a part,' which will become part of the infinite spiritual wholeness. As explained within the pages of the Urantia Book, the Infinite Spirit is co-creator of all reality.

You who have a part in this creativity power have the potential for infinite creative power. You are like the bud upon the tree: This bud will blossom and grow and change over time, yet giving birth to creativity each day. You all have within you 'infinity of purpose.' Your purpose will change, as does the bud on the tree, day to day, year to year, life to life. You who are part of infinity will gradually grow within this great universe and blossom to yield the beauty which you are. Yes, you who have a part of this infinite mind creativity have creative potential, which is unlimited.

Life need not be stagnant to be secure. Remember where your true security lies - with God, with Spirit. Use the creativity you are given to go forward in life, courageously and with beauty. How great is this beauty! How wondrous is this infinite potential of life, of growth, of change, and newness in creativity! Each person discovers as they grow, those little abilities, those little gifts, those little things which they do well - very well. Enjoy this creativity. Allow it the freedom to blossom and grow.

Life is so often hurried and hard and strenuous. How wonderful it is to set aside some time to develop your own creativity; and to wonder, indeed, at the creativity within - at what actually happens during these creative times. These times of allowing the creative resources, which are yours to function freely, are very special and precious. Each person has creative potential. Each person enjoys the gifts they receive from their God-within. Each person is satisfied and gratified by this enjoyment. Each person should praise our Lord for allowing this wonder into their lives.

Some of us found this great creative 'genius within,' upon our Mansion World experience, for it was not recognized or acknowledged in our mortality; yet, this creative genius was always with us in the mortal life, unrecognized. I am saying to you who hear these words, discover this now in this life; allow it to give you this great enjoyment which only comes from your expression to our Divine Parents for their gifts through us. Life hurries by, the days pile upon each other and memories are packed away. I say, take a little time each day, each of you, for yourselves, and explore your creative potential.

How wondrous is this life! How full of enjoyment it is! Yes, enjoyment in the little creativity, the little expressions of hope, of feelings of intuition, of change. Life is too precious to be stowed away for years like old clothing. As the years go by, have a little something for yourself that has brought you much joy; take advantage of this time and enjoy yourself. Explore yourself and love yourself. Time is not so important an issue in the Mansion World life; only in this time, this life, is it so. Therefore, I try to give you the wisdom from the next existence-perspective, to enrich and make more beautiful your lives in this existence.

Each flower blooms in its own time, yes. And I say to you with surety that there are many many blooms within you which may blossom in this life, if allowed. And, are there many which do not find expression in this life but must await the future time, for your life here is too short. How is it that so many people have so much, and are in awareness of so little!

You all are on the threshold of entering this new existence - the Mansion World existence; but it can be lived here. Life is happier in mortal living as you enjoy and find expression for your enjoyment. Art is part of this expression of being. You are all great artists, architects of your future life. All great artists are deeply appreciative and enjoying of their gifts. Yes, greatness is bestowed from above, and realized within. Expression of self is the budding of the morontia self.

Life in this great universe phenomenon is wondrous to behold for all mankind. Each of you have great potential of self-expression, whether it be cooking, creating clothing, in music, or writing letters – the list goes on. Express yourself. Love yourself. Love your brother. Give your expression to them in love. All of the future life is a vast unfolding, revealing of the inner potential. Find a little bit of the great potential in this life, yes, and you will find it lived much much richer.

A Comprehensive Lesson On Judgmentalness vs. Assessing Another

Aaron & Ham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 06-15-1992

Greetings. I am Aaron. I am connected with the training mission of Melchizedek on this world. Our lesson this evening is concerning 'judgment.'

How easily it becomes us to judge another human fellow. It is often tardy, or is instant. Often it is either growing or diminishing. Often judgment is deep-within – attitudinal; or, it is superficially attitudinal. Often are we tempted to judge at first sight. Often we are tempted to judge in relationships, judge actions, without knowing full intentions – or even worse, without full intention ourselves.

Judgment is a plague of misunderstanding. Judgment is the opposite of empathetic understanding. Judgment is error. If you can find your way past, through, or around judgments, toward understanding, you have gained very much. Understanding is the key to growth. Understanding ones' fellow mortals is the key to brotherhood and love.

Judgment stands before the door of understanding like an unwelcome centurion – he must be vanquished for you to enter this door. Judgment often springs from inner wounds, and is often a cause of greater wounds. Judgment must be forsaken as a partner in your decision-making. Often our decisions are based on judgment – which is usually false (false perception) which causes errors in decision-making.

It is said that social justice requires many judgments, and so it does. However, being judgmental individually is error, always. Group wisdom must function for justice to arrive at approximation of true justice. Individuals cannot judge each other at all – these judgments cause error, cause emotional problems, cause sorrow and heartache.

Often are we judgmental in an 'off-the-cuff' type of manner. This is the most insidious type of judgmentalism for it stems from preconceived ideas about people which are usually erroneous. Each person is individual, and each individual must be treated with the maximum amount of 'benefit of a doubt' and the maximum amount of understanding. Especially in new relationships, you should take care not to be judgmental of superficial appearances.

These many long-held judgmental attitudes occurring throughout your world are a great barrier to brotherly love and peace. Attitudes are often deeply inset within personality patterns which have grown up over time and have been reinforced over this time-period. Racism is a form of this type of preconceived judgmentalism of other human beings – which is practiced without knowing this person well; it is error and is a great cause of strife on your world. Recognize this error within yourselves and take action to correct this error.

Judgment can be imposed upon individuals by society, in groups, yes. Juries are an example of the correct way to find judgment against a wrong act. Justice is not by any means perfect on your world; you cannot expect complete justice here. Do not force your ideas of complete justice for they are erroneous to some degree or other. When individuals are forced into judgment battles (litigation's, etc.) there will inevitably be error in the outcome; one existing in this world cannot expect otherwise.

True justice is real and does exist; yes, indeed it does. However, when we are existing short of perfection, then is justice reflected short of perfection also. In our ascension career, each realm has its own justice system. Each level of morontial progression has its justice system. These systems are very important and are essential for the happiness and harmony of the inhabitants of each world.

Your own justice system is very flawed and is in need of revision, with this higher understanding incorporated within it. The old law: “an eye for an eye, tooth for a tooth” is not practical; nor, is it serviceable to mankind. However one may feel that it is fair – it is not! Fairness must take into consideration: motives, intentions, etc. Justice cannot be blind to intentions, for then it becomes unfair. This concludes my lesson this evening.

QUESTION: What is the distinction between assessing a person's character, and judging a person's character?

I am HAM. This is the essence of our lesson. Yes. Assessment of character of God-likeness is a part of living on this world. All humans living upon this world must see each other in the light of spirituality-attainment. This light may cast shadows of character flaws, instabilities, undependabilities, etc. How you interact, then, with these people, using your understanding, is the basis of living! All of life consists in interaction on various levels. The wise man distinguishes between assessment and judgment. Yes. Judgment implies a personal response toward a person, a negative judgment against a person. Assessment is the wisdom of knowing spiritual light – and, reacting within that light with a person, yes; or, avoiding those without much spiritual light. It is the ‘spiritual light’ within each person which will automatically give you the answer to dependability, uprightness, righteousness, and self-worth. This, however, is difficult to assess correctly and completely, especially on a world living in the aftermath and results of a rebellion. Each person must live with these assessment skills – which are erroneous to a greater or lesser extent; it is not implying judgment, however.

QUESTION: In keeping with Father's will in regard to this healing process of one's anger – an anger that has been buried for a long time, and which is coming to surface and needing to be addressed somewhere, but in an appropriate way – how can we go about accomplishing that, being conscious not to vent it on those around us, and yet, needing to deal with it?

HAM: Yes. Each person individually has to face these things alone – even if this awareness is gradually and carefully brought forth. Fear and anger are powerful emotions. Often these powerful up-surges of feeling, of confusion, of hurt and anger, are not able to be controlled in all situations. This is not to blame the person, no, for these very hard and deep wounds are volatile; and those who are around the person experiencing these should be understanding of the sometimes-inappropriate outbursts of energy. Physiologically, it is healthy and sound to approach this issue as one requiring 'kid gloves' for all concerned. Delicate and fragile are these hurt places. Understand, you are in complete forgiveness no matter what you feel. Do not feel guilty for feeling angry, hurt, or wounded. Do not feel the lesser for having being hurt, for all of God's children experience greater or lesser degrees of hurt and emotional trauma during life – you are not alone. Many sitting around you here understand these hurts. These deep lacerations within the heart are as a curtain – shielding. Many many people do have and carry them, and wear these scars; but know, all is alright and is becoming whole again in time, becoming enabled to connect the present and the past. This whole person will not be shattered by these traumas in the end. There is goodness within yourself, yes, even behind these curtains. You are not good in front of this curtain and bad behind this curtain, no – you are 'good throughout.' Yes, you are good throughout! Look behind this curtain and find yourself again, the good person which you are. Find this in your memory and you will experience much healing.

QUESTION: How can we recognize the error of our judgments, and regain balance and continue on?

HAM: Yes. Often these judgments are the products of our rearing so that they are automatic in our thinking; automatic from the way our parents, friends, or whomever, would think – and how they would react; we automatically repeat a pattern, something that they would say. An example that comes to mind is concerning another person making racist judgments; and we are influenced, especially when in our youth, to repeat these racist patterns. It is important to always remember that we have a lower subconscious mind which interjects these past learning ideas/patterns. The real way towards truth and wisdom lies beyond this level, toward the God-like level of the indwelling Spirit. Between these levels are many stairs. On each stair is there new awareness and understanding. Allow yourself to climb up a rung or two – then use that judgment, that wisdom, for your basis of interaction with another person; and do not allow old ideas and old patterns to surface and take over. They will surface – yes, but do not allow them to take over your entire attitude.

QUESTION: Would it be proper to say that when you start sharing an assessment with others that it then becomes judgment?

HAM: Yes and no. In sharing this assessment, you are perhaps reinforcing judgments which you have made, yes. However, if it is a discussion over an issue where another's character must play a part, there is essentially a sharing of assessments, which can be illuminating to both parties concerning a third; for each may have a different perspective and therefore widen each other's perspective of this person. This would not be considered judgmental.

QUESTION: Then the more accurately we assess, the greater the understanding? Is that right?

HAM: It is not possible to completely be accurate. Your understanding toward another is always limited, no matter how close you are to this person; no matter how well-informed you are. Complete understanding is limited. It is not possible. Our complete understanding of ourselves is also limited. Impossible it is for complete understanding on this level of existence; and furthermore, for many many levels/existences hereafter. Paradise is the only place where one can claim complete personal awareness and understanding. So you see, there are the possibilities for misunderstanding all the way to Paradise. Therefore, how can one hope to have complete understanding on this level! How can one's assessments and judgements be wholly accurate! Humility Is the True Mature Choosing of Divine Strength

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Our friends in the other realm of planetary existence, the midway creatures, are happy to extend a greeting to you this evening.

The Midwayer Commission (those involved in compiling the Urantia Book) is yet awaiting new orders for compiling certain facts about the coming of these revelations, even now. They will in future time present a history of this movement/revelation, and are happy to be observing the transactions and interactions which even now are occurring.

All is recorded and well cared-for; it is all requiring much work. The New Testament is, in fact and intent, the compilation of human witnesses of Jesus' earthly years. The Urantia Book account of the history of Michael's bestowal is much more in-depth and well organized by these same Midwayer's endeavors. It behooves us to give them thanks and appreciation for their tireless work.

And now this evening I wish to begin our lesson on humility. Humility is the true attitude of the soul in its open and receptive form/attitude. Humility is becoming to all for it shows the willingness of each person to be God led, to be God directed, and to be God revealing. Humility is the essence of true religious faith-healing; it is the beginning of the truth of the wise knowingness, for without the tender shoot of humility these branches of wisdom will never be.

Humility is the correct, and only correct, attitude of the individual child toward the one Father. When we are faced with human difficulties and emotional turmoil, the attitude of humility is often stifled and covered-over by attitudes of fear, anger, and aggression; and hard then is it for God to direct this child, for his attitude is one of concealing the inner part of self and directing an outer aggression; it is at once, defensive and aggressive.

The attitudes of aggression and defense are stifling to the correct seeing of the way-showing of the inner spirit. It is the only way of knowing that you are receiving truth – to look within your own heart and to find true humility. All other attitudes tend to cloud or shade spirit-ledings in ways of your own willful choosing. This was, and is, the way of Jesus – to show true humility; humility before all creation, even His own.

Truly the Master walked humbly with God; truly He was willing to be led by God, even to the end of His life. Humility is at the core of this understanding. Even if it seems beyond your understanding, if your reading of His example seems to be incredible, and even strange and impossible (beyond your human understanding), then it requires the attitude of true humility to walk that path as he did. All other paths are erroneous.

Even if your insight into destiny may seem beyond your present grasp, remember it requires humility to reach that point. You cannot walk the way of God without true humility, taking the hand of God and allowing yourself to be led. Our Father is no respecter of persons. He is a Father to all. It requires humility to open your heart to your Father. It requires setting aside of the childish ego and taking the mature attitude of humility.

It is often thought that humility is weak; I say, it is not weak! Humility is the true mature choosing of divine strength. No human strength can touch it. No human ego-led possession can near it. No human institution has even come close to acknowledging this great and noble truth. It is the wisest and most mature act in life – humility.

True humility is that part of laying down your life, laying down your ego, laying down your self-centered interests, laying down your worries and your cares. And in utter and true humility, opening yourself to greater understanding; to open your heart to God's understanding wherein you begin the true and enlightened path toward Him; all other worldly deeds mean nothing compared to this.

When you lay down your life for God, this is the moment when you truly begin to live, truly begin to walk the path of the way. Jesus laid down His life, in fact and in truth, only to pick it up again and begin the ascent to our Father. Yes, His entire existence is “the way.” Our lesson is ended and I am pleased to ask for questions at this time.

RACHEL: Thank you kindly, Father Ham, for such a beautiful lesson. Please thank the midwayers for us. Give them our love and tell them that we do appreciate all those long, long years of service and the marvelous things that they have done for us. (Ham: Indeed. Yes.)

RACHEL: This evening, we do have a guest with us from Santa Cruz, Calif. His name is Salvator T. Jr., and he does belong to a Urantia Book study group and has been studying for about four years. We welcome him.

HAM: Greetings, and welcome, yes.

JOSHUA: Father Ham, would you clarify a point for me? You said that the midwayers are compiling these teachings. Are they going to put them into a book-form that mortals can read, as they did the Urantia Book?

HAM: Yes. In the future, yes, these teachings will be a part of the story of this world's emergence from darkness into the light. However, not the whole story. Yes, it is incumbent upon man to retell the story of our coming, of our making contact, and of our reception, etc., etc.

JOSHUA: This may not happen then for, I suppose, for a thousand years or something like that? (Ham: Many years, yes.)

ROINDA: Hello, Ham. I want to ask you about your lesson on humility. For me, personally, this is a very good lesson because I think I could practice being humble a lot more. I wonder if when I am being humble, or trying to be humble, that I'm feeling resistance to letting go of my defenses or my long-held position. What would be best for me to do at that point, when I am truly wanting to be humble and not really knowing how to succeed at that? I'm feeling a bit stuck.

HAM: Release is a word to remember. Release yourself. Release your cares, your worries or defenses. Who can harm you? Who can truly harm you? Do you see, our Father – who cares and protects and watches over you – is more powerful than any perceived threat you may have. Release these cares, release these defenses. Allow yourself to commune with your Father, allow this. At times it feels that there is a need which must be fulfilled – and this need, which is gnawing inside, is one which can be filled not by doing, but by being – being with your Father, enveloped in love and light and releasing. Allow the hand of Father a chance to wipe away the creases of worry from your forehead, to dry the tears from your eyes and to hold you in His arms as a child. You, and all beings, all require this and need this. All of us who are ascending, we are all children to Father. Even they who are eternal from the first, from Havona, are children to God. It is our great love, hope, joy, and reason for living, to just be with Him for a while. When we reach the great Paradise – the eternal goal of the ages – then will this communion be complete. Yes. Until then, we must take some time away from the worlds' cares; take some time, enough time, to allow yourself this releasing. This, indeed, is the most wonderful way to control your emotional self, to allow this emotional self a release within the secureness of Father's grasp. You will be able to bring this security into your life; and this security will do wonders to change the emotional stability of those even around you. Yes. This intimate communion with Father is the most important thing that each of you can do in your daily lives. Yes. Is this beginning to help you in your understanding?

ROINDA: Yes. The answer was beautiful. It gives me pleasure talking to you, and in listening to your lesson. I just want you to know how much I appreciate your understanding.

HAM: Roinda, my child, it is my most sincere pleasure and I am eternally grateful to know you.

PAT: Father Ham, recently I have been thinking about Job [Bible story] and how he must have felt to have everything taken away from him. Is this an example of humility that you are talking about in the lesson tonight?

HAM: No, it is not – because Job is a lesson (a parable) concerning affliction in the world and its effects on a noble and a God-knowing man. It is humbling, yes, to consider his fate, and indeed, the fate of those many humans living who are afflicted and in pain in many ways. Humbling it is to perceive the strength of those who endure great suffering, yes. It is a great lesson to learn – to admire those who have suffered and do suffer – and yet, they walk uprightly. Is this answering? (Pat: Yes, it is. Thank you).

ELEA: Father Ham, I would like to ask you to expand on humility regarding the Scripture: “Many are called, but few are chosen.” If that person is chosen, is there a conflict of humility versus ability, versus timing. Do you know what I mean?

HAM: Yes. I am in understanding. You who are here this evening have chosen in your own minds to accept your responsibilities for the kingdom of heaven. It is not so much a matter of ‘being chosen’ as of ‘choosing.’ This acceptance is the main difference between you, and let's say, your sister. The acceptance of responsibility is unique and precious for God. All of mankind is chosen for salvation; yet it remains for mankind to ‘choose’ salvation. Timing is individual and comes with mature spiritual attitudinal growth, which then flowers into this responsible choosing. The timing for each person is personal and unique. It may be now, or many many years from now, when the others around you begin to understand their choosing. Be unaffected by their attitudes at present for they are in turmoil and confusion, and are unsure of themselves. Be sure of yourself and begin your great mission calling.

ELEA: I would like to ask one more question: In the changing of an individual, when they are going through this change, I guess there are only two emotions – fear and love. Fear manifests itself in many ways, maybe even fearing our own correction that we need; and love gives us strength and courage. Maybe fear is that we might face negative and lack; where ‘love’ is abundant. Can you tell us how in this Mission – which is foreign to our belief and strange in all this new beginning – how do we support that individual so he/she doesn’t yield to fear when given an assignment, so that they actually feel this abundance and capability to carry out this assignment without apprehension and some fear. How do we help these to carry out their will with the Father's will, in the spirit of love? Is that confusing?

HAM: No, it is in understanding. You are bound to be confronted with fear from others; it is inevitable and will be so. Make abundance a reality within your own being/self; you will have ample awareness to understand this fear and to be able to confront and combat it. Worry not.

RACHEL: Father Ham, I am having a hard time getting anybody to speak up here. [laughter.]

GERRY: In my learning, I understand that there is abundance for everyone and what we need to do is be aware that we need to accept it. So I am, every day and many times a day, accepting abundance; it makes a great deal of difference. And my friends that are learning this; it is changing their lives because they didn't really realize - a lot of them thought that it was just their luck not to have abundance. They are realizing that through thought and through asking that they can have abundance. Is that correct?

HAM: Fortunate, indeed, are you who are living at present here in this place, meaning the United States in this day and age. For many many people, abundance is nonexistent in their everyday needs. Life is a struggle and full of hardship for most of Urantians. Abundance is a state of being for you in this land, for you are well-cared for; and, as such, must begin to appreciate what you have and how much you indeed enjoy of this worlds' prosperity. Hunger and thirst are nonexistent for you. Life is full of needs and desires, yes, some which are necessary, and others, which are not. I say, abundance is indeed around all of you. And it is becoming to you to learn to appreciate how much you truly have without desiring the many things which are superfluous to life.

MARIANNA: Father Ham, I am having a little trouble with humility and exuberance. When I pray, I get so excited. In fact, even now it hasn't gone away; I feel so full with love, and with excitement. And then at times, I feel like maybe I should not pray because I don't feel humble enough?[group laughter.]

HAM: They are laughing because they understand your question, personally. Yes, it is true that human emotions are effervescent at times with love and happiness and joy - and indeed, how wonderful is this. What a wonderful gift. There are other times when one is lonely or full of worries and cares; and such a one can be shown a little light with this emotion of humility. And then there are times when this emotion of humility allows the full grace and abundance of the Lord to fill the soul and overflow into the world. Both of these actions, feelings and emotions, are indeed part of growing in God's light and are not contrary at all. I will receive one further question.

ALTOR: Father Ham, I am on my way to Chicago for the intensive study, and I am going to meet Ernest Moyer there. Do you have any words you need to speak to him about or say anything to him? [Editor's note: Ernest Moyer had been one quite boisterous in opposition to the Teaching Mission - claiming it to be a ruse of Caligastia.]

HAM: Exude love, as you so well do in your life. Allow him his attitude and do not force your own. Go in peace, my friend, and allow him also to go in peace. Yes. No conflict should arise.

I am pleased to be with you all this evening and I am happy to greet you again next Monday. For now, I am leaving. Farewell.

Put Aside Our Fears and Open Ourselves To Love

(Melissa-TR) I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Our lesson tonight is on love. Our Father has much love for His children. He is accepting and always wanting of His children to follow His path of light. He has in store for each beautiful child many gifts, blessings, and much divine love – thus it is so, all the way back to Him. You are His beautiful, glorious, growing, spiritual children who are in your adult stages of mortal progression.

Father wants each one of you to open up to Him and put aside what fears you may have. He wants to help you grow and does appreciate very much when you communicate with Him. You are each, as you know, endowed with His Fragment – and this is such a precious gift, a treasure for all His children to have. It is your God Fragment that guides you and lifts you step by step on the path of spiritual growth.

In your meditation is the best time to communicate with your God Fragment, who loves you and cherishes you and guides you back to our Paradise Father. His love is so magnificent and divine for each of you. He is waiting and wanting for all of His children to turn to Him and to love Him. His understanding and mercy is far beyond your comprehension. You are always welcome to be close to Him. He is always reaching out for you. Open yourselves to Him. His love is secure and whole. This completes our lesson for this evening. Now I will answer questions.

RACHEL: I want to thank you for that beautiful lesson. This evening we do have a newcomer here with us. Her name is Kathy K. She has not read the Urantia Book, but she is spiritual and she does believe in meditation. So I would like to welcome Kathy.

HAM: Yes. I welcome her also.

JASON: Good evening, Teacher Ham. I speak for Rebecca this evening. She is going through a very, very difficult time while her father is shedding his body. If there are any words that you would have me give to her, I know that she would appreciate them greatly. She is very sorry that she couldn't perform her function here this evening.

HAM: This is understood. Rebecca, my daughter, my love and support is very deep for you at this time. Your grief and sadness is understood by us all. Our Father is here for you, His beautiful, loving daughter. He understands your pains, your sorrows, your stress, the endurance that you are experiencing with this. His arms are open wide for you and grasping you in love, peace, comfort, and serenity, my daughter, Rebecca. Each tear will be wiped away by Him with much love and understanding. He comforts you. Yes. (Jason: Thank you very much, Teacher Ham).

ROLAND: Teacher Ham, it is very good to hear you come through our sister, Melissa – another beautiful lesson delivered. I do not have a question tonight but I would like to thank you and those who have initiated this Mission on the Earth that has brought this experience and the teachings into my life. This meeting marks my one year of experience with mind-to-mind contact with you here in these lessons and also in my home with private meetings and meditations. I want to tell you that this has been an astounding year of growth of trials and tribulations, but I appreciate them all. I am very grateful.

HAM: And Roland, I thank you. You have been, and are, very wonderful to teach and work with. I appreciate and cherish knowing you.

CALVIN: Teacher Ham, in your lesson you said that our Father wants to help us, and for us to put aside whatever fears we might have. I think that would be most helpful in my life. I seem to be very quick to anger and frustration. And in this regard, I feel like I am more going backward than forward a lot of times. That's very hard to do – to change this pattern. Maybe just the will isn't there, I don't know. I don't even know what I am asking – just acknowledging the frustration. Sometimes it would be nice to feel the love and let that override the frustration. If I could somehow do that.

HAM: Calvin, my son, it surely isn't meant to be easy; during your meditation, you may ask for help. Yes.

CALVIN: That is the shortest and best answer that I have heard. Thank you.
[laughter.]

MARLIN: Father Ham, in watching a news channel the other night I heard them talking about some people in Santa Maria, California, where a lady had been contacted by an entity. She wasn't sure exactly who this female spirit was, but she had been contacted about twenty-three times and had been given several spiritual messages. Along with that, I have heard about things happening in a place called Medjugorje, Yugoslavia. On a news station, they mentioned that these, what they call “paranormal experiences,” have been increasing in the past couple of years and have spread around the world. I was just wondering what connection, if any, do these have to our Mission?

HAM: With the opening of the circuits there are many spiritual experiences happening. And this is wonderful to witness on this world, for it is in our prayers for the spiritual growth and development to continually progress on Urantia.

CLAIREESA: Teacher Ham, I would just like to say thank you for all of your love and your lessons and your guidance. It has been a tool that I have used in my life and it has been so much better, so much happier, and I really appreciate it. Also, this past weekend I spent at a Native American Pow Wow. There, I witnessed several spiritual ceremonies and I felt great spiritual power in these ceremonies. I wondered if you could comment on these.

HAM: Claireesa, your in-tuneness with spirituality is lovely for me to behold. There are many ways in which cultures have in expressing their beliefs and heartfelt traditions, yes, and they can be very beautiful to behold. (Claireesa: Thank you, Teacher Ham. My love to you). Ham: And mine to you, my daughter, Claireesa.

RACHEL: Father Ham, when I think of the millions and millions of worlds that there are in our seven superuniverses, and I think of all the human beings, all of the celestial beings, and the spiritual beings – such large large numbers – I am just flabbergasted; I don't know how you are going to keep track of all of us with one little spiritual name.

HAM: Rachel, my daughter, you are amusing, [laughter.] and good for my humor.
(Rachel: It's good to be good for something). Ham: You only have one spiritual name.
[Big laughter – Melissa, the TR, laughs also.]

RACHEL: It made me wonder because next week we will have two gentlemen here with the spiritual name of James. Will each one of those have a different type of pronunciation on them for the next world?

HAM: The language will take care of the phonics. Yes.

ROINDA: Father Ham, going on Rachel's question. I wonder if these two people with the same name or similar names of James would be similar in their personalities or temperament, or similar in ways that would be evident.

HAM: There are kindred spirits, yes, and also many different personalities with individualism, but all each with his own. Yes. Does this answer?

ROINDA: Sort of. I can understand that we are all unique in our own way and that God gives us our own personality. And I know that each of us has certain aspects of our personality that may be similar to someone else. I guess what I am specifically asking: Is there somewhere in the universe where I would run into one of these kindred spirits that I would see more similarity than I would in somebody else that I feel is somewhat like me? (Ham: Most likely.)

NOLUS: Father Ham, I wanted to thank you for my new name, which is so very similar to my mother's name, her given name, when she was alive, which was Nola. It makes it even extra special to me. It really gives me a lot of joy to have a spiritual name. I felt a great deal of peace and solitude and love at our session yesterday. It was a wonderful experience to behold. This feeling carried way into the night. I work during the night and last night I felt like I was just going to break, it felt so great. I thought that even having two days in a row to talk to you is a wonderful thing. I really appreciate it very much. I appreciate the fact that Roland gives his time. That's really, I think, something very special that a human can give time like that and not ask for money or compensation. I guess that we as humans are so used to paying money for everything that I felt like I needed to give him some money yesterday. So it was a wonderful experience for me to really partake of what I feel is unconditional love by having had the opportunity to experience that session. I am very grateful and I wanted to say thank you very much.

HAM: Yes, my daughter, Nolus. And I am also happy to serve you and know you and love you.

CALVIN: I have a quick question. I was listening to a tape of a meeting that I missed by Aaron two weeks ago – a very very good lesson in which I would like to thank him; maybe you could carry that to him. My mother in Roosevelt a few years ago went to a meeting where someone received transmissions from an "Aaron." My question is: Would you know if the Aaron a couple weeks ago is the same Aaron of several years ago. (Ham: No. This was not.) Calvin: That is good to hear. Things didn't sound the same as what I am hearing now; so thank you.

LOREINA: Father Ham, I want to just ask a question about the lesson on love. Over the last couple of years, I felt that I have found myself. And that I love myself very much, which is a great gift. I sometimes feel myself slip and I was wondering if you could offer advice for those times.

HAM: Yes, my daughter, Loreina. Each one here has slipped and fallen in life and gets back up again to reach out to Father, who is always willing to help you, His daughter.

LOREINA: Thank you very much. Also, I just want to thank you for the lessons and the consistent love and preparation. It is a great validation to my testimony to see the lessons come through different people, and it has been a real blessing tonight. I thank you.

HAM: And I thank you, Loreina. Your light and love are pleasurable and comforting for me to experience. Yes.

JEREMIAH: Father Ham, I have two questions on your lesson tonight on love: When the Father put reality up into personal and impersonal types of existences – my first question would be: Is love the highest form of person to person interaction with deity? My second question is: What would be the term or attribute to deal with an impersonal entity? or an absolute?

HAM: My son, Jeremiah, it is well for you to know that. Yes, love is the highest form of giving or receiving. You, my son, are very loving indeed and this is what I leave you with.

CRONSEL: Teacher Ham, about five or six weeks ago there was a couple here from Lawrence, Kansas. They asked several questions and they are very desirous of receiving a Teacher for their group. Do you have any information as to their progress whether some implementation is taking place with regard to their group?

HAM: Yes. Their group is being well prepared for receiving of a Teacher.

CRONSEL: Thank you. Maybe one question regarding ego and the spirit. I understand that ego is somewhat detrimental at times to our spiritual receptivity. The ego seems to create fear a lot of times, guilt, and some of the negative qualities that I think we try to shun, but we have a battle sometimes with that. But on the other hand, the spirit will give us peace and joy and love. Could you give any counsel as to maybe the better approach or the best way to eliminate the negative side on that, so that we can receive the positive. And, just what are some of the implications of ego?

HAM: It is entirely possible to discipline your ego-mind by telling it not to interfere. Also, reach out for spiritual enlightenment through meditation, through transcripts, through whatever spiritual paths you may have. Does this help?
(Cronsel: Yes. Thank you).

ANDREA: Father Ham, I just kind of want to make a comment about the feeling of Father's love and how it envelopes me and makes me feel warm from the inside out. How wonderful that is to experience. I only wish that it could be all the time. I would also like to thank you for the wonderful lessons.

HAM: Andrea, my daughter, you are on the correct path and Father's love for you is great and magnificent as you have felt in your realm. I find it a pleasure to serve you.

ANDREA: Thank you, but the pleasure is mine.

JAMES: Teacher, I have been sitting here trying to think of a question to ask about your lesson but it is difficult because the things you talked about are so simple and so clear. And many of us have heard these things for many years, they are replete in the Urantia Book about love and how the Father loves us. But I want to tell you that in the past year and a half since I have met you, what you have done for me is help me to get past a mere intellectual understanding that the Father loves us. I am just beginning to have an experiential understanding of the Father's love, which I don't think I ever really had before my interaction with you. Much of it has to do, I think, with observing your attitude of love towards all of us, and your attitude of acceptance and encouragement. This is a gift that you have given to all, I think. It may have taken the rest of a lifetime for many of us to experience this. So just let me thank you for that at this time.

HAM: Yes, my son, James. And it has also been your love that enhances mine and I am always pleased and happy to receive this, my son.

ELEA: Father Ham, I would like you to just make some comment. I guess I have been trying to evolve into this God Fragment, this oneness, with my physical and my spiritual for many many years. I find that the hardest part of it, at first, is in the excitement of it all, and I think it may be ego because we don't know anything but a kind of a hierarchical specialness that we become adjusted to, and then it's a very natural thing. I am wondering, this group and the other groups that you are coordinating, is it becoming more of a natural thing for us than what is out there in the world? Will this become more and more a natural way of communication with those leaders – those people on our world who are in control? By that I mean, through their power, their politics – their leadership and hierarchy; will they come to this same type of oneness that I am talking about? Does it always have to be through great emotional need and trials before it will be accepted? Do you know what I mean?

HAM: Yes, I do. It has been a struggle for Urantia because of the Lucifer Rebellion, the fall of Adam and Eve, and Christ Michael's life was taken at a very young age. The hopes are always for the reaching out to Father. And about today's society, I am unable to give suggestion. But with time passage, and now that the Correcting Time on Urantia is now in place, the light begins to shine. Does this help?

ELEA: Yes. That helps a lot. I was just thinking with this particular group: As we go out individually to our daily job, and then we come here on Monday night, there is a certain love and a certain feeling and a vibration here that gives a feeling of 'we're home.' Then, we are trained for when we are out in the world, to not be strange and 'far out on a limb' and so-called 'kooky' and 'nuts' – that we need to keep that balance. I am sure there are many people here that have many talents who have succeeded in many areas. Maybe I am older and I feel like this is a very special group because we can be more real then we will ever be when we are out there playing that game of life in the world. I would just like to quote a poem. I think it is so important for children if we quote great things to them when they are very young. They won't understand it, but will perhaps get it later. One thing my father did when I was very, very small is he quoted Shakespeare and all of those poems to me. He didn't know that there was a grade level that he superseded. The one poem that stuck with me, and now I understand it, it was from Shakespeare: "Earth is a stage, and life, a tragic play. Some players are praised and others are rejected from first to last. But who are we to judge and say that power alone can determine from whom the parts are cast." I understand that now, and I just want to be normal out there; and yet, teach these concepts in an understandable way. Do you know what I mean by not being too 'far out?'

HAM: My daughter, Elea, you are a light for others about you. And yes, this group is in unity and understanding of each other. Your heartfelt desire to share their beauty is very heart-warming for me. When you are in your daily life and are among others who you want to share it with, then each individual person is receptive of different things and it may be best to test the waters first, my daughter.

WILLEENA: I wanted to ask you with regard to the 'seven psychic circles.' In talking to James last night, and Melissa yesterday a little bit, I got a better understanding on that – how the progression is made spiritually in our lives has to do with the overall picture of our growth and comprehension in this lifetime. What I understood from talking to them, it had to do with our spiritual communion with Father and the guidance He has for us. But also, and this is what I hadn't understood before, that every area of our life is coming into a balance and harmonious synergy--and that was exciting to learn. I guess my question is: Is that the reason why when we enter this teaching with you, the things that are buried deep within our beings that have been repressed from our past, start to surface? so that they can then be healed and released and we can walk in more balance?

HAM: Spiritual growth requires many different things. And yes, the suppression of emotions are drawn out as these growth phases are passed through, and the individual has grown a new beautiful petal in spirituality. Yes.

WILLEENA: So that is not unusual then, but rather more common, that each person that enters into this teaching with you, or those beings like yourself that are teaching on this world, are then coming to a more in-depth knowing of themselves, and are healing on levels that maybe they haven't been ready for previously?

HAM: Yes, and each individual person does have their own trials they experience. Yes.

WILLEENA: Thank you, Ham. I truly love you. It has been a pleasure to know you and to have you in our lives, in my life. It is so moving! It is hard to comprehend the gift that you have brought to me.

HAM: And your gifts have been plentiful to me, my daughter, Willeena.

If there are no further questions, I will close this meeting and send each of you off into the world. My love and my prayers go with you. I love you all. Farewell.

Wisdom Is Gained through Understanding and Experience

(TR: Melissa) As you have grown - and each one here is aware of the wisdom pertaining to each one's own experience - this is a marvelous and an expandatory area for you. As you become more enlightened you, of course, become more wise. I am happy to experience and see this in each one of you.

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Tonight my lesson is on wisdom. When there is wisdom to be had it is a great and wonderful gift, and requires knowledge, experience, and much life and living. As you grow in spiritual enlightenment you naturally gain more wisdom. Our Father has much in store for each child to learn, to experience, to grow in trials and tribulation, joy, love, happiness, spiritual awareness, and many heartfelt experiences in sharing with your brothers and sisters.

Our Father, through His Indwelling Spirit that each one is given, is in constant knowledge and has much wisdom of each of you. I am also gaining in knowledge and wisdom and continually look forward to growing more with this, our interaction together. There is so much to know, and so much experience yet to have. It is a tremendously effortful and 'gaining in learning' path, and is also very very fulfilling.

If you could take a few moments of your days this next week and ponder on what wisdom you have, you will stand in awe and refreshing amazement at yourself. Therefore, I ask you to pursue your assessment of your gained wisdom with effort. This concludes our lesson tonight and I am happy to take questions.

RACHEL: That was a very enlightening lesson, Father Ham. Thank you kindly. We have Joan P. with us this evening and she has had the Urantia Book for a long time. She has been reading it off and on. I find when I talk to her to be a very spiritual person. So I would like to welcome her. And also, I would like to welcome Martin back from Duluth, Minnesota; it is certainly a pleasure to have him.

HAM: Yes. Greetings and warmth to both of you.

JAMES: Teacher, in your lesson it seems you were using the terms enlightenment and wisdom differently. Can you define how you mean each of those, and how they differ?

HAM: Yes. Wisdom is what you gain through your living experiences and trying activities. Enlightenment is brought about through your learning and can be used and connected with wisdom. Do you understand?

JAMES: A little better, yes. Does enlightenment have a spiritual connotation to it – whereas wisdom has more of a mota or an earthly type of knowledge connotation to it?

HAM: Both are of morontial and spiritual value. They both are a learning/experiencing affect, but wisdom comes with much enlightenment and knowledge.

JAMES: One more clarification: Is there a difference between knowledge and enlightenment as you are using those terms?

HAM: Yes there is, and they can also be used to complement the other. Does this make it clearer for you? (James: Yes, and thank you.)

JASON: Good evening, Father Ham. Rebecca wishes that she could be with us this evening, but she has suffered some setbacks that have affected her body. She wishes to be excused. I have a question about your lesson tonight involving wisdom: If you have any wise words for us to follow about meditating on ‘wisdom’ and wisdom’s integration with ego – that nasty tie that seems to follow the self-conscious opinions, so to speak – if you could give me some inspiring words, please.

HAM: Yes. Jason, my son. As you go into the stillness and focus on your experiences, look and feel and understand where you have come from and where you are; and if you want, you can also ask Father for guidance, yes. Does this help? (Jason: Yes, very much. Thank you, Teacher.) Ham: Yes. And Rebecca, my daughter, I am in deep understanding and sympathy for you; you need not ask to be excused, my beautiful daughter. We all understand and our prayers and love are with you. Yes.

JASON: That's wonderful. She will be very pleased to hear that. I would also return in thanking you and the supernal forces for being on her side, along with everyone here in this group that has given their time in prayers. Thank you very much. That is all I have to say this evening.

ELEA: Father Ham, since so many questions about healings – you gave me an awareness of the gift of healing when I was in a very desperate time. I would like to ask you if I am proceeding correctly in the way I am approaching this commitment – that I am not given to a lot of emotionalism or ego, but rather, daily discipline of going into the stillness and letting things transpire through contemplating your transmissions and your directions of how this is to be done. Could you give me some enlightenment on that?

HAM: Yes. My daughter, Elea. You have a great and wonderful gift, and you are more aware than you realize. If you continue in your stillness and your prayers, you will grow in understanding. You are doing well. We are very pleased with you, my daughter, yes. (Elea: Thank you).

NOLUS: Father Ham, your lesson last week was on love, and the thought came to me this week, it’s kind of a little different thought, but: As we all meet together each week and see each other – we hug, we shake hands, we share spiritual feelings as we greet each other. I just wondered if in the other realm, your realm, when you meet others that you want to share with, how do you greet each other on that realm?

As we progress closer to our Father, how are these greetings done?

HAM: Through communion, communicating, contacting, in being aware. Also, being in assurance that all are growing, all around us, and that we are each in loving unity. And yet we also have our frailties and trials that we need to overcome. On the road to perfection, we are only a few years ahead of you in our ascension. Our love is deep and growing, as is yours. Does this help, Nolus?

NOLUS: Yes. Do you physically embrace each other on your realm or is it just more of the spiritual type of greeting rather than an embrace?

HAM: This is more of a spiritual awareness type. Yes.

NOLUS: It is more of a greeting of vibrational level; or am I not grasping?

HAM: It is an awareness of each individual person that is soul-exhilarating, and you will become more aware of this in time, my daughter. Yes.

JEREMIAH: Father Ham, I also have a question on your lesson tonight regarding wisdom: My understanding in reading the Urantia Book, it says that 'one cannot rent or buy wisdom, but it has to be earned by direct experience of living.' I think that if someone else tells me about a personal experience that they have had, I think I can get wisdom out of their experience by just hearing about them. Is that true? If that is correct, then should we all share with each other various examples of our daily experiences in this existence, with the idea of trying to pass on wisdom to each other?

HAM: Yes. It is important to share and some wisdom can be gained through this; and yet, more wisdom comes through personal experience. Yes.

JEREMIAH: Where is wisdom contained? Is it within our soul? or our personality?

HAM: Wisdom is contained through your Thought Adjuster.

ELLANOR: Father Ham, I just wanted to tell you that the past year that I have been coming here that I have gained much and I would like to start giving back. I want you to know that if you should need any help with the healing or anything else, please call on me.

HAM: Yes, Ellanor, this is special to hear. Thank you.

TOMACK: I have a question: I recently attended a Rainbow gathering and these people, I don't know if you are aware, they live much differently than the normal product of society as we know it. What I would like to know is: The way they are trying to gain spirituality, is this the correct manner? I mean, is that type of environment conducive to spirituality more-so than a regular society? (Ham: Can you explain further?) Tomack: Okay. Basically, it (Rainbow gatherings) is a communal type of living wherein many times mind-expanded drugs are used to enhance so-called spirituality. It is a very giving type of sharing and love, and I want to know if that is a conducive thing to spirituality; or, if that is more of a 'taking away' from it?

HAM: Spirituality growth is gained better on a natural, normal condition, not through enhanced alterations. Does this help? (Tomack: Could you define normal for me?) [laughter.] Ham: It is best to keep your body clear of any foreign substance or drugs or anything that you generally don't need. Yes. I will take one more question.

ELWARD: Ham, I have a question on the lesson tonight: We gain experience by living life. You can gain understanding from talking with people, or reading, or borrowing knowledge so to speak. We can gain enlightenment by realizing something. Or, having cognition of how something works. So if I understand it right, wisdom is what we do with that understanding and experience. Is this right?

HAM: Mostly, yes. But also, wisdom is what you have through all of this experience, enlightenment, and knowledge; and it is a most wonderful and precious gift in daily spiritual awareness and growth. Yes.

I will bring this meeting to a close and I send you all into this week with my love. Farewell.

Comparing the Openness of the Preacher Personality with Sharing the Inner Life with God

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. This evening, I would like to open our session with a prayer of thanksgiving.

Our Father who dwells in the highest and most serene places, always would we be mindful of your serene and noble presence. In our lives is there much cause for rejoicing, daily. Your good light is ever present with us, and near to our breasts is the Spirit of your Son. In our humble lives are we lifted up by your immense and life-sustaining presence. Always would we be mindful of your inner joyful life-giving sustenance within our innermost core. Even in the depths of aloneness are we thankful for your good presence. Amen.

Remember, our indwelling Father is always present and standing ever ready to assist you in your daily decision-making chores. It is wise to always allow time to discuss your problems, personally, with Him. And this is not really so much being 'prayerful' as it is in simply being 'openly sincere' - sharing the inner-life with God.

Our lesson this evening is comparing the openness of the 'preacher personality' to the wisdom of simple sharing the inner life of one's being with the presence of God. Our lives are often full of distractions, sorrows, misgivings, and so forth. It is always in our best interest to be open with these concerns, yes, and to share them, this opening, with the Father's indwelling Spirit.

If you are in confusion, I am meaning: There are times in your praying that it need not be done in an attitude of 'reverence,' which is not always necessary in your personal prayers. In your personal prayers, you may just open your heart to God with your confusions or frustrations, and it need not concern anything else. Prayers take in many forms, and this is only one form which I am suggesting to you.

It is Father's desire to draw close to His children, and this is only really affected when the child is willing to draw closer to the Father in truth – and, in spirit. There are many avenues which prayers may take when communication circuits are opened between child and Father. If you would only remember that you are not alone in your difficulties in life, but that you have your inner Father to share all things with – this is greatly easing of the burdensome feeling.

Life is so often full of small problems and circumstances – and these you would typically feel unnecessary to be sharing with God. Yet He is interested in your smallest littlest problems; He is interested in your thinking, in your planning, in your reasoning, in your life's decision-making. Yes, as we know, often these seemingly small problems contribute to our decision-making – decisions which are very important.

My children, you should all feel free to discuss your problems with Father every day, even for a few moments before retiring perhaps. This sharing with Father is helpful to ease the burdens of living and to provide you with the helpful psychological benefit of talking things out. Understand that sometimes this talking out helps one to clarify the problems at hand, which often are muddled together with other emotional influences in the unconscious mind of the person.

Our Father is not so far away that He cannot be talked to like a good friend. Our Father is so very near for He dwells within, yes, and is fully understanding. You may discuss anything with Him. He is the closest ear for your troubles; He is the closest hand for you to grasp; He is the surest footing for you to follow in all things. Lift the burdens of your daily life from your breast, and place them with God. Every day, every night, let them go. You will find your sleep is even improved so the psychological well-being is more firmly established, day by day by day.

My friends, it is not necessary for you to struggle alone with your problems. It is not necessary for you to carry this weight of problems through your days and nights. You have present within you the one who can take your burdens; the one who can dry your tears; the one who can ease the suffering of the heart; the one who replaces mourning with joy; He replaces suffering with gladness; He replaces sorrow with ease.

Yes, you have within you the greatest gift of all creation – for it is the Creator Himself. You are so privileged in this; you are only beginning to understand the full ramifications of this great truth. Even all my lessons are only the tip of the great iceberg of understanding. All of living is but the first step of life. Keep your perspective open. Keep your desire for understanding at a high and true level. And allow – again, allow your burdens to be lifted, for they will be so.

It is not necessary to take responsibility for the world. All of life is, in the Master's words, "but a bridge." On this bridge we must not think to build a house, only walk across.

Your burdens should be light. Your responsibilities are really only one – to love; to love God; to love your brothers and sisters; to become who you really are – within, and growing – without. This is your great responsibility. These burdens of life, these trivial cares which weigh like stones, are in reality, non-existent.

Remember who you truly are becoming. Walk gently and nobly in truth toward the eternal goal. Be wise in your decisions. Keep wisdom and prudence at your right hand, yes, but most of all, be loving. Have a charitable heart and all things will be added unto you. This is the essence of the gospel; it is essential that you make this essence the essence of your living. Be at peace. This concludes our lesson this evening. I will take a few questions.

RACHEL: Greetings Father Ham and thank you for an extremely helpful lesson and your beautiful prayer. This evening we have three guests from Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, who have never been with us before. They are Dal D., and also, Mary and Mark Rogers. We want to welcome them and thank them for coming. Also, we have Lisa Brock, from Pocatello, we would like to welcome her back with us.

HAM: Of course it is gladdening to welcome all who will come. You are all welcome here in my house, so-to-speak. Yes, indeed.

MARLIN: I would like to thank you for that lesson also. That felt like it was directed right to me. It probably helped me as much as anyone in the room. In the New Testament, it mentions that when we worship, we should "worship in spirit and truth;" and I heard you mention 'spirit and truth' again this evening. Can you explain a little bit more about what that means?

HAM: Yes. Truth and spirit are one reality. And also, the injunction to worship in spirit and in truth is the beginning of a great lesson concerning worship. Worship is the complement of prayer and of thought. Worship is the essence of feeling, which is the depth and breadth of your true spiritual awareness of God. Worship is the expression of being, which is the 'essence' of God. That is – when we worship, then truly it is the coming forth of your spiritual essence and the duty of your being, to God. Worship is the first experience of being one with the Lord. It is an extreme feeling of awe. Your worship in churches is much diluted. True worship begins and ends all other spiritual experience. Worship is the 'essence' of being. Prayer is the 'understanding' of being. The two are complements as are your two hands folded together. In prayer, there may be worship – and in worship, prayer. Is this helping? (Marlin: Yes. Thank you.)

NORWOOD: Teacher Ham, I want to thank you for the time you spent with me yesterday. I just want to tell you that your lesson tonight will help me open the doors to my search for faith. Thank you. (Ham: It is in my understanding that you will find, yes, and my prayers are with you.)

MARK: Hello, Father Ham. This is Mark from Coeur d'Alene. I would first like to send you greetings from our Coeur d'Alene study group and the unanimous proclamation of appreciation for the project at hand here. We are a rather young group, and we are struggling to contain our enthusiasm over the latest developments. Along those lines, a question that we have is: What are our specific guidelines to meditation, and why is it apparently so hard for individuals to make contact with a Teacher or other divine beings? Forgive me if you've dealt on this issue before.

HAM: Understood. It is in our timeframe to prepare each person separately and in their time. Every person requires time for adjustments. And it is not in the depths of meditation, necessarily, when the Teacher-awareness may come - it is all depending on preparation, which requires time. Rebecca, for example, was seven years in preparation. You are not to feel hurried or pressured. All will come, in time.

MARY: Good evening, Ham. Another question from the Coeur d'Alene study group: Do you have any specific suggestions about the structure of a study-group meeting that might be helpful in organizing our get-togethers?

HAM: Your Teacher will give you instructions, in time. For now, it is a human endeavor and must be humanly organized.

CALVIN: Teacher Ham, I also am glad to be here for your lesson tonight. I've been concerned about the words used in our Biblical and other scriptural references regarding the 'last days.' A lot of passages in scripture say: "in the last days," this and that. As I understand the Urantia revelation papers, this world goes on for eons of time into Light and Life. If so, then what is the "last days" in reference to? Or, is it just a human input that was incorrect understanding?

HAM: Much human input is throughout the Bible, yes, and all of it concerning the 'last days' is more or less, misleading. Your Bible is a conglomeration of many varied and very different pieces of writing. And when these writings are all together, they make for an uneven picture of reality which is very inconsistent and contradictory. There are some passages which are prophetic in nature, yes, and some which only claim to be. It is difficult to separate one from the other, for often they are within the same work. Rest at ease concerning the prophecy of destruction. It is part of human fear and awe of God, and His supposed 'wrath,' to prophesy destruction for the 'infidel,' so to speak. Be at ease. The fears of 'the last days' is mostly human imagination.

And now I am pressed for time and must be going. My sincere thanks to you, my daughter, Rebecca, for being here this evening. And to you each who have chosen to come hear my words, I give my love and heartfelt thanks to all of you. Farewell.

Life is the Accumulation of Individual Spiritual Goals and Their Undertaking
Abraham, Norson & Ham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 07-20-1992

I am ABRAHAM. I have come to help you in this understanding of our goals. You are each using your individual choice methods and are using your insight into spiritual reality and goals. Correct is this reasoning and steadfast are your personal religious goals becoming.

Life is the accumulation of individual spiritual goals and the undertaking efforts to achieve them. Only the tried-and-true goals are worthy of striving for. These are the goals which you all carry within; they are the goals which have been the goals of the ages.

The lights which your forefathers sought, and which Christ Michael brought to this world – which even in this day we are bringing forward to you and your children – are the lights which will make the world strive to a higher state.

Life is the accumulation of the goals of all. Progress in the civilization of man is the accumulation of the goals of the highest and noblest of men – the cream of mankind. Life is moved forward and is brought into existence by the goals of family and child-rearing. Noble indeed, is this striving. Noble indeed, are parental affections and their associations with the protection and nurturing of children.

Society and civilization are also the accumulation of the goals of men, which are largely concerned with family. Politics cannot take the place of a strong family institution. The goals of society are sometimes sidetracked into thinking that there can be goals for society which are other-than the accumulated goals of the masses. Each person contributes his worth and well-being – and his family's care and struggles – to this common melting-pot called society.

All of our lives are concerned with our individual upkeep and well-being of our family. Each person owes his primary duty and responsibility to God, first, and family, next, yes. The two are closely linked in one's individual life-experience, for in your experiences of living, and in being a representation of our Father to one's family, your expression of His love is mostly, and most especially, true; and this is mostly carried forward in your individual lives and through the family.

The goal of Christianity has often been merely to spread dogmatic beliefs, and churches are vying one with another for believers. This is not Christ Michael's wish; nor is it His view of how our living should be. All churches must come to recognize the true gospel, which is this – and this central truth must stand before all others: It is the truth of the Universal Fatherhood of God, and the truth of our relations with each other as brothers and sisters – for under God, this is our true religion.

Love for your brothers, sisters, family, and familial relations is the first love between individuals which every person experiences in their lives. Our Mission goals are to extend this familial affection to those outside the family. When this goal of true brotherly love and affection between individuals becomes a goal of society, then will much of the strife and pain associated with living in this world be lessened – for you and your children, and their children's children.

In this strife-torn world, where there is no true goal for individuals collectively to seek, society breaks down and crumbles by the weight of so much selfishness. In time, this world will see a greater vision and goal for its future plan. In your lives, you are already glimpsing your great future destiny and have come to grow within with this knowledge.

Your future is even now unfolding before your eyes. And this future state – one in which your will is in harmony with the God of the Universes (the Supreme Being), where you strike step with Him in living the full and complete – is a replete life which you are destined to live, yes.

Each one of you is wondering if you see your destiny correctly – wondering “how will this amazing change, or deepening of relations, occur.” I, with authority, can tell you that once you glimpse your true self, this true self will never stop seeking expression. This true self will blossom in the world and a way will be made – a way that is sure and true and straight; a way which will open the gates of uncertainty, blindness, ignorance; the way which you will walk hand in hand with God. This way is yours alone. This way is, for each person, their only way to Father.

When you are in the depths of disappointment, despair, and need – then is this vision sometimes even clearer. Father who knows what you need inside, who knows your true inner beauty, will show you this vision of yourself. He alone will do this. He alone is your source of truth. Only when you are walking the path in great delight, when all is pleasing and the world is harmonious and your heart beats in step with life – then, are you assured; and then, is that feeling of power of assurance also very deep.

Roads may wind, they may diverge and they may converge – yes, life's roads. Each person is on a pathway, and this pathway which you walk, you are walking because of your faith in God. He is always present to lead you; always present perhaps to block a path and to open another. He is always present to open the gates, to roll away stones, to make this pathway smooth for you if you will but follow Him.

Father is no respecter of persons. He is a Father, a true and loving loyal Father. Only by faith are we truly assured. Only by faith are we truly shown and led. Only by faith are we lifted up and made more than we are. By faith, you will know Him and come to understand His individual plan in your life – yes, by faith and faith alone.

That is our lesson for this evening. I am happy to announce that we are having a guest with us this evening; he has been present earlier and is again pleased to speak.

Greetings. I am NORSON. I am a Melchizedek receiver in your world. I am the only receiver of the original twelve who is also council in the planetary affairs in the long-view council. I am happy again to greet you here in this manner. You are all commissioned as representatives of Michael in your day. Proud and happy am I with your selections and of your choosing to engage with us in this great work. That is all. Ham is here to answer questions.

RACHEL: It is certainly wonderful to have you with us, Father Norson. And also we want to welcome Father Abraham, and thank him for his beautiful lesson this evening. Also this evening, we have a visitor from Corvallis, Oregon. Her name is Cindy S. She is a member of a study group and has been reading and studying the Urantia Book for fifteen years. I know that she has a question for you so I will give her the microphone.

CINDY: The question that I have is how I, or the members of our study group in Oregon, can help facilitate us receiving a Teacher?

HAM: I am HAM. Yes. This question is often asked by the visitors, and it is one which is two-sided in the answer. The first part is requiring the willingness of others to serve in this mission. The second, is concerned with the preparation of the transmission-receiver – the one who will be the essential aspect of your early reception of a Teacher. Such preparation is usually unconscious and, at times very slow; and it is reasonable and correct that this should be so. If a person is not fully prepared to be in this position of transmission-receiver it could be very detrimental to that person, both psychologically and physically, for a Teacher to begin transmitting prematurely. This we have learned from experience, and we are still learning. Preparation, and a firm feeling of commitment and faith, are all requisite for this type of communication. However, at this time there is also the other effect – the opening of the system circuits, which is also impacting and affecting all of Urantia and its inhabitants, whether this is conscious or not. Teacher assignment is surely an event which will come to pass if you are willing and able to commit your beingness to a growing and stable network of beings who are all helping. All of us are helping each other. I am helping you in your understanding. Rebecca is helping me in this transmission. You are all helping each other in many many ways, and it is all precious. Therefore, in the closing of my remarks on this question, I would say, love one another. Open your hearts to each other. Trust yourselves and each other, and much, very much, will be accomplished. This is all, my daughter.

JASON: Teacher Ham, in Abraham's lesson this evening he talked of the religions of this world. I have always had a question involving how the opening of the system circuits is impacting our religions, directly. I understand there is a force that we all can tap into directly as a benefit of this opening, and I am wondering if the unconscious reaction of all the religion's people – which is just now beginning to develop and is forming – will be to the displeasure of their religion's leaders? The desire to 'have more,' the seeking of 'extra beliefs,' and even seeking 'spiritual insights' – those have typically been things the religion's leaders would term 'detrimental.' This system circuit-opening that is impacting us directly right now, it is tremendous in my own sight. Could you comment on this?

HAM: Certainly. Each individual person is a reactive and active entity. The opening of these circuits is a spiritual event. The person who is largely closed-off to enhanced spiritual reality will feel, or be, responsive very little. The person who is spiritually aware of himself will be spiritually reactive to these new spiritual forces. Always has the Spirit of Truth and the Indwelling Spirit been with you. The new spiritual forces are yet to be defined in personal experience. In time, I will assist in this and you will be even more keenly aware of these circuits, for you will see their impact and feel their strength. Even now are these circuits creating spiritual awakenings in many many people. These circuits are real and are impacting in the individual lives of many people within the various organized religions. And yes, it is causing some spiritual conflict in some where there is need for growth. In most times, growth entails some conflict and turmoil – this is a natural state, yes. Be concerned, therefore, with 'your own' spiritual awareness and understanding of these new spiritual realities. Begin to learn the effects and benefits in your life; and in the future, I will discuss these circuits in more detail.

JASON: Thank you very much, Teacher Ham. I have questions to arrange meetings for two individuals: Joseph would like to meet with you on Friday, August the 7th, 7:30 p.m.? (Ham: Granted). Jason: And, Hal Bynum, of Nashville, wishes to meet with you on Sunday, August the 16th – however, due to his traveling, this plan is tentative at present. (Ham: I will confirm when positive.)

JASON: I understand. Thank you, Teacher. I just wish to extend myself as a tool to the circuit opening, in particular perhaps helping the agitated spirits of our planet grow on a smoother path. That's all I have to say this evening. (Ham: Jason, you are the living example of what you just wished.)

ONCLIVAN: Teacher Ham, I would like to ask a question on the transmission process. I know this will be helpful for me, and possibly helpful for others involved in this process. I have talked with a number of the transmission-receivers. From all the information that I have gathered, I am confused between two trains of thought on how to practice for this. Firstly: Some of the transmission-receivers say that they receive the words very much as an 'otherness' as the words come in; and they know that it is not their own thinking. This is really what I have been expecting to receive is this otherness, which I have experienced just slightly with a sentence or two in the past. This is what I have been trying to prepare myself for in my meditations. I go into the stillness to totally block out my own thoughts and just wait for your voice, or one of the other supernals, to speak in otherness to me. And secondly: I also have received some information that possibly this transmission-receiving can be done more-so by way of 'just letting your thoughts rise up,' and even though it seems like your own thinking, that when you read it back after you have written it down, that you can tell that it has been inspired. I have tried both of these methods. I can't seem to come very clear yet with the otherness, although that is what I am waiting for and that is what I would feel comfortable with if I were to do a session for someone. But this other, the second method I mentioned – is this something that should be continued to work with? just letting thoughts come up and then to write those thoughts down? Is that inspired by the supernals? or is that just my own thinking. Or, should I just wait until I become better at this and can actually receive the otherness in a word-for-word format, as does Rebecca, and be more clear? Could you please comment on that?

HAM: Yes. Rebecca is not always certain of the exactness of these transmissions, and I am aware of her concern. It is becoming a concern for many, as yourself, for you are aware there is an easy way for error wherein this method involves some allowance of thought manipulation. This is always an interesting phenomenon for it is not completely controlled and there can be a co-mingling of both thought patterns – yours and ours. This is uneasy ground for both, and such should be avoided as in the giving of a transmission to another, until one is more stabilized. It is more safe to wait and a Teacher will come and be very forceful if it is your will. You see, it is 'the will of the transmission-receiver' which is controlling the clarity. It is always the will of Rebecca for this transmission to be strong and unmistakable for her; and she is very hesitant to receive any transmission that is hazy, although she has. It is difficult, yes, for there are sometimes the clouding of clarity, and then the un-clarity of your mental understanding of the transmission. And even then can there be the clouding from a wish or desire of the transmission-receiver – which is very difficult to ascertain. Only over much time and experience are these questions resolved, and they will become clearer to you in time. You must not worry or stress your body over these problems, for they will come with practice over time. It is not something which is done overnight. Be patient, yes, and all things will become clear.

ONCLIVAN: Thank you very much and just one more quick question, which you can answer very shortly. Every night about 11:00 or 11:30, I spend time trying to wait for a transmission, also in the morning. Should I continue to do that? Is there a Teacher maybe waiting to speak to me? This might be quite a while before I can maybe hear it clearly. Should I just go along on that assumption and continue doing that and not worry so much about the writing with the conscious uprisings from my mind?

HAM: Yes. Your ability to transmission-receive will come in time; and stillness is always beneficial to life in all ways in the meantime. I always encourage practice of the stillness. Yes.

ROLAND: Father Ham, to perhaps add some personal experience to the process of transmitting and receiving: In my early times there was a transmission to me which indicated to me that I had to move forward in faith. I could get the first couple of words, but then I would have to speak them before the next word would come. That may be of assistance to Onclivan, or to those who will be trying it. The other thought comes to me: In my experience there are as many ways to achieve this experience as there are people. It seems very individual. That may be not so helpful, but one might pay attention to the fact that they might get to that point by themselves. Does that follow in with what the ideas of the supernal's experience?

HAM: Yes, exactly, of course. And in these transmissions, it is correct that word follows word; and if these words are unexpressed, they will repeat or cease.

ROLAND: Moving on from that: I am about to journey to Tallahassee to enjoy the brotherhood of planetary believers down there. I was wondering if I can do anything as a mortal on this level that might facilitate the Mission while I am in Tallahassee, or Sarasota, or Tampa, or Englewood?

HAM: The light will come and it will be your light. Yes. (Roland: Then to move as guided, I am taking that to mean?). Ham: Correct. Rebecca is growing weary and one further question will be taken.

ELEA: This meeting of this group and the Idaho group that is coming up: I know it is a social event, but will the Teachers be there? Will you be there, Ham? Will Daniel be there? And, will there be some instruction of correlation? I have read the papers from Tallahassee, from Idaho, and of course our group, and I am keeping in touch with Lawrence, Kansas. We will be traveling there in another month. There is quite a difference in the way the meetings proceed. Some seem to be more aggressive in the Mission, and maybe it is because of the culture or whatever level the people are on. Can you respond to this, and can you give me any indication on what that meeting in Idaho will be like?

HAM: The meeting is significant and will be attended by many on our level. You will witness a great surge of feeling, which will be communal. Christ Michael will be present. All who gather will be blessed. I am very happy to also be present. Daniel, indeed, will be present, yes, and I will offer instruction then.

I am aware of Rebecca's weariness and am going to close this meeting/session with these words. Happiness, love, joyful self-expression – all these are your birthright. Your true being will flower and become real. Think on these things this week. I bid you, farewell, for now.

Judgment | A Broader and More God-Like Aspect

Ham (with Daniel present), WOODS CROSS, UTAH 07-27-1992

[Daniel, Teacher for the Pocatello group, was present this evening's lesson. Editor's note: This group-meeting had become so large that we had relocated the Monday meetings to the basement large meeting room of the Rexall Drug Store in Centerville, Utah. Often approximately fifty people were in attendance. Previously, all of our meetings were held in the home of Thern Blackburn. (Joshua) in Woods Cross, UT.]

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. This evening I would like to begin by honoring the present and past soldiers in the army of God's children who are on the front lines of this spiritual battalion. Using the analogy of wartime is not my most favorite – however, in this instance, it is apt. In the discipline of armies, each person has an individual job to do – without which, the whole, as a functioning unit, would suffer.

I wish to commend you all for your valiant service and steadfast faith in this mission which is destined to be on the front lines for some time to come. Especially I would like to comment on those persons who have given of themselves in the aspect of receiving of our transmitted messages.

It is always understood that these transmissions are somewhat altered or filtered through each individual. And though there has been much concern over this, it will come to pass that most all of these transmissions will be viewed in a greater context and find their correction. This will eliminate some of the small errors which chance to find their way into these transmissions. Time and distance will show that most of these transmissions are very accurate.

Judgment, for our Father, is intrinsic to His being. He is truly all righteousness. He is all goodness. No falsehood or evil can exist, ultimately, in His kingdom. He has willed that in your Earthly state that there are allowed errors and sin and iniquity which require judgment – and I should say, this is the state of affairs all the way to Havona: Yes, there are tribunals and judgment centers (branches of administration) throughout the superuniverses, all the way to Havona.

Our lesson this evening is again concerning judgment. I have spoken many times concerning this aspect of God's kingdom and the individuals concerned with judgment. I am now willing to discuss judgment in a broader and more God-like aspect.

Judgment is a necessary necessity. Where there is the possibility of error and evil, judgment is set to right, or attempt to change/rectify the errors. Judgment is required when the individual is incapable of self-correction, for then is group judgment--through wisdom and affording correction--required on this erring individual.

God's infinite wisdom has remanded this judgment to His creatures. Father takes not part of judgment. Father holds mercy and infinite love as His citadel. Judgment is not Father's personal requisite, no, for He has given this judgment requirement to His righteous-striving children.

When Christ Michael said: "Judge not," He is meaning not to take on this responsibility yourself, which was not given you. "Judge not. Be God-like," that is. Let us each stand apart from judging, for in this judging you indeed commit error; and this error may be judged.

In life's myriad of situations and extremes it is tempting to judge, and when doing so we demand punishment or justice towards one's fellows. Error is it always. God's way is not always convenient, or easy, or the way of the world. God's way stands apart from worldly conflicts and enters not into the judgments of His children. He requires you to understand His way.

Great is your reward in heaven, and on Earth, when you are mightily shaking a coin of judgment from your own storehouse of wealth. How often we are tempted to steal back that coin! How often we are tempted to vent our personal judgment upon an erring fellow in anger! How often are we tested in this manner!

Free yourselves from the burden of judgment. This burden was not placed upon you. It is not yours to take. Allow yourselves rather, the freedom of sonship with God, which will allow you the absolute freedom of not judging. Judging ties, judgment binds, judgment constricts and wraps the personality in their own ideas.

Allow yourself freedom from this error in thinking. Allow yourselves the freedom to love all, freely - even those that do you harm. Yes, allow yourselves that freedom; take it for your own, for this is truly yours. You are all truly, sons and daughters of the living true God. You are allowed the freedom which He has of Himself - the freedom to bestow mercy, to bestow love, to bestow forgiveness. This, my children, is freedom, truly. Entanglements in judgments only bind yourself.

This is all for our lesson this evening. I will answer your many questions as I am able.

JOSHUA: Father Ham, we would like to welcome tonight some of our friends from Daniel's group, Steve, Debbie, Bill, and Virginia.

HAM: Welcome. I am happy to be in your presence and am pleased also to welcome Daniel here tonight. He is also present and is observing our proceedings.

JOSHUA: Thank you very much. I have a question concerning your lesson: It sounds like in making a judgment that we do not even have the right to form an opinion – that is not correct, is it?

HAM: This is delicate ground. Forming an opinion is often judgmental, and this is error. Often we have opinions about those we know not well. When we are privileged to know and understand another more fully, then are these early judgmental attitudes usually changed. When we are in ignorance of the true story concerning any particular person, it is the natural state to form opinions which are erroneous. In the habits of living, often do lazier people not even try to go beyond their own opinions concerning another, for they are self-satisfied with their own opinions – this is error and is always to be corrected at some time. Is this helping? (Joshua: Yes it is, and thank you very much.)

BILL: Ham, I am very pleased to be here in person to meet you, although I have listened to you many times over the last few months from tapes, as well as writing down some of your words. I think the thing that I wanted to tell you and Daniel – and I am glad he is here to hear this – is that I am so appreciative! for you, our Teachers, have shown us your lack of judgmentalness. By your acceptance in responding to us, your students, you have impressed me with the very teaching, and exemplifying that teaching, that you are talking about. You have been so encouraging, tremendously encouraging, to the many people I have heard on the tapes; and Daniel has done the same thing with us, in person. I just want you to know that what you teach is wonderful, but it's also very impressive for me to see that you actually live this way and regard us in this manner. I just wanted to share that with you.

HAM: Thank you. I am always happy to hear that our teachings have encouraged others. In the beginning of this Mission/assignment, many were unreceptive who are now beginning to become hearers; they are well-planted trees which are allowing themselves to gain a little growth and strengthening by some spiritual watering. New buds are sure to spring from old branches. All of our efforts are worthwhile when this happens, and it is very gratifying to know that it is happening so frequently. We are pleased and innerly joyful to have such wonderful, and indeed, amazing and gifted students, as you all are. Always are we pleased when newcomers show interest and have a spiritual response. Daniel is very experienced in his work. He is a great and noble being who we are fortunate to have among us. Love is his main character trait. So God-like is he. As well, how pleased are all the supernal beings gathered here this evening to see such advanced bright and glorious beings as all of you here tonight. Yes. Indeed. Indeed.

JASON: Good evening, Teacher Ham. I appreciated that lesson. It helped me tremendously tonight. But I have some questions: Since we are sometimes forced to live in the world surviving on a somewhat forced system of justice and judgment and defense, I have tried very hard in the last three years of my life to limit my judgment capacities, because I do feel that it comes back to us in a so-called 'karma' way when we are in error, and that is embarrassing. However, sometimes it is necessary to follow a judgment. I've found it necessary sometimes to follow a judgment in order to ensure justice – and in some cases, even protect or defend myself. I do this very elusively of course, since I don't claim to have any superpowers in understanding judgment. If you could clarify those points for me it would be greatly helpful.

HAM: Yes. Judgment is, unfortunately, a word form used in many situations and circumstances. Judgment, as far as 'decisions,' is one kind of judgment. Judgment of another being – meaning taking responsibility of justice upon yourself – is another. A person is not capable of taking on justice in any manner for another. Group judgment is faulty and yet, is a functional necessity – a necessary evil if you will, within society, functioning in order to maintain social norms. Judgment of individuals is ultimately remanded to higher judicial systems, if you will. These higher systems function on the Mansion Worlds and beyond, and are progressively less faulty. Your desire to maintain your personal property, or personal integrity of various kinds, involves self-protection. It is allowed, yes, and this self-protection is functional. The going beyond 'self-protection' into revenge or vengeance-seeking is courting judgment from yourself, which is error. Protection, yes. Self-defense, yes. However – vengeance, no! Is this clearer?

JASON: Much clearer, Teacher Ham, and I thank you very much for that insight. I wish that our entire world could operate just a little higher and change what appears to me to be a complete disaster in this arena of 'judging.' Thank you, Teacher.

RACHEL: Father Ham, last week I had an opportunity: I read to my Relief Society teachers your very first lesson you gave to us on faith. As I watched them, yes, I did form an opinion. My opinion was that your lesson was very well received, but I couldn't go ahead and tell them any more about it other than it was 'a lesson given to us by our spiritual leader.' I know they went away very impressed. I thank you. [laughter.]

MARLIN: A few months ago I spoke to you about a new acquaintance of mine named Bob, who was a Jesuit Monk. I have been making a little bit of progress in talking with him. There is a question that he wanted me to ask you for him about virtue: He was wondering what is considered to be man's highest virtue and what is the best way to obtain it?

HAM: Virtue is the results of spiritual growth. Virtue is not an 'attainment' but a fruit from spiritual living and understanding. The eventual and inevitable growth of the soul within is the Father/Mother cause of what we view as virtue for righteousness. Righteousness cannot be bought and sold. It is not something which can be striven for, alone, in the bareness of non-spiritual growing. Said Jesus: "Do men gather figs from thistles? No. The tree must grow and bloom and bear fruit." The fruits of righteousness are a natural part of one's character, not something apart. Is this helping in your understanding?

MARLIN: I think that was a beautiful explanation. I thank you for that and for all of your lessons so far.

ROLAND: Father Ham, in regard to the issue and the problem of judgment, is there some instruction you might be able to give us that will catch us in the process of judgment. It seems like we know these things to be true, yes, but if we had a tool to use that as soon as a judgment began to form, that we could immediately stop and think about things, then such a tool would perhaps help us not make that judgment?

How do you, yourself, do it?

HAM: For me, it is not so much of a conscious effort, for I have grown into my understanding – just as you will grow into your understanding of this lesson. I would not require for you to be on alert, so to speak, watching your every thought and restricting yourselves, no! Rather, I would wish you to grow in your awareness of reality to that point where judgment is known to be futile and damaging. Is this helping?

ROLAND: Yes. Thank you very much. I know that this 'judging' is a will-creature decision within our group, but I notice that the sound in the upstairs activities ceases about 7:30 or 7:45. As you know I have just returned from Florida where I met with two other groups that have personal interchange before their meeting. My question to you would be: Will you mind if we had maybe thirty to forty-five minutes, prior to your lesson, that you would give us for personal interchanges that have to do with catching up with things that are going on within our group?

HAM: Of course I would not mind, this is a group decision. It is always gladdening to witness your happy and loving relationships grow.

ROLAND: I suppose the next step on that would be to see if everyone else is in agreement. (Ham: Correct.)

ROLAND: Thank you very much, Father Ham. I would like to express my gratitude to you, Abraham and Amster, and all of the supernals that were with me in Florida. They created such a beautiful experience for myself, and for Vincent – our brother, and all those who heard your words. Thank you.

HAM: Yes. It is a worthwhile trip that you have undertaken, and it has helped to strengthen the faith and love of those whom you have touched with your faith.

DEBBIE [transmission-receiver for Pocatello]: Father Ham, I just want to take this time to thank you and Daniel and everyone in this beautiful Mission for the love and the guidance that you have given all of us. I especially want to thank you for the wonderful things you said about Daniel because we know he is love, and we have felt it. We just want him to know how much we love him. I want to thank you also for the gracious and kind words you said about the transmission-receivers. Just thank you very much. (Ham: Understood.)

CALVIN: Teacher, I have often been pondering an Old Testament scripture out of the book of Daniel. There is a part that talks about "How long before our daily sacrifice shall be taken away." I have never understood that passage, but I felt it was of some importance. Maybe you could help me with that?

HAM: Somewhat. It is my understanding of this passage that it is referring to those days of great strife when it requires great effort in living. The time in one's day is so short and not enough for the reception of the much understanding that is needed when one is driven to sacrifice daily and the efforts in living are strenuous. When this 'need to sacrifice' is taken away – meaning, that when there becomes a 'no need feeling' to sacrifice, it would be a great and drastic change in the quality of our daily living, and more time is available for pursuits of truth, beauty, and goodness. Is this helping your understanding?

CALVIN: It sheds a whole different light on how I can perceive and tackle that. I think once I read over your words I will be able to understand it better. I much appreciate it and I would like to say that I am indebted to you for your change of my life and my attitude since last December when I first attended your lessons. I love you for it. It has helped me increase my love for others and to want to know the Father and to know more of His will. Your lesson on judgment tonight was very timely following Aaron's lesson a few weeks ago about this topic. You've answered so many questions in mine and Marlin's minds as we discuss this very subject at our work. We now consider more about what you said about becoming consciously aware of the effect on those around us at work; it is very beautiful now to see with new eyes. After each week's lesson, I can go back into my daily life and at least be aware of the improvements needed on a personal level, and from there, work toward change. Thank you.

HAM: My blessing to you, my son. You are always in my prayers and thoughts.

NORWOOD: Father Ham, during my day job I am a supervisor over women and men, and I find myself, as you went through the lesson tonight, trying to understand your lesson and apply it to what I am doing at work. I find that when dealing with individuals, that judging them or trying to understand them can be confusing at times. In trying to give the right answers when dealing with these folks, it can become very confusing. I have to live by the law of the land in dealing with these coworkers. And at the same time, as I am taking your lessons in, I am trying to supervise them by those lessons. I want to know if you can give me a little bit of guidance on this.

HAM: Yes. It is your responsibility to enforce rules and regulations and quotas, etc., and this is a job which requires doing, of which you do very well. In dealing with humans, often it is that emotions, resentments, anxieties and so forth, cloud the judgment of those with which you deal. You are only human and are not superhumanly conscious of each person, especially when they attempt to hide true problems and mask them with others, and so forth. Always remember that you are God's son. You are sent out each day to do your Earthly duty, as well as your heavenly one. In your position, you may find occasion to impart some words of comfort, or even truth, while not being over-zealous or fanatical. You make it very easy for people to talk with you. You are doing very well, and we are here to help your own spiritual growth. If this spiritual growth is enlightening for others, then this is very pleasing. But you cannot force those who will not see reason, much less to see truth. You are adept in balancing your Earthly duties and your spiritual ones. Continue on your path; you are truly growing in truth and love.

NORWOOD: Thank you, Father Ham. I appreciate that.

ONCLIVAN: Teacher Ham, I would just like to relay an experience I had concerning the lesson we had tonight on judgment. [Editor's note: Onclivan's full page of a related experience is omitted here, which simply had to do with our 'judging others, in error.']

HAM: Yes. As you said, always is it error in our individual judgment of another person to assign motives which you are suspicious of. These errors in thinking will lead to consequences that are always unprofitable. When we are tempted to judge another, it is good and correct to use love to alter this mindset. There are no kingly roads to God. All must travel through this 'testing' and learn our own lessons. It is for me to perhaps point the way; and for you each to walk your own path, and learn by doing it in your own way.

ONCLIVAN: Thank you very much. Just one more comment and I am sorry to take so much time here. I have recently been fortunate to receive some of the Sarasota papers up through June and I have read about 110 pages of them. There are many messages in there from Christ Michael. I was extremely impressed with the number of them and they talk a lot about love. I have a question concerning this, and also a comment to make, which might be of benefit to the group, because I know that the Sarasota group made tremendous strides when they all seem to have a love for each other and cooperation in their group. They were all working for one purpose – to do God's will and help each other and help others. I know that after that, they started having a little bit of different problems, probably ego-based. I don't know what of all the different things that happened, but then the group-progress slowed down, and I don't know what happened after that. I would hope that in our group – and especially this thirty minutes of discussing things which Roland brings up – I hope that we could all come with a very loving attitude for each other and try to help each other succeed in whatever our individual responsibilities might be. And that we can do away with our petty judgment and petty feelings of somebody not doing something right. I guess what I am trying to say is that this is possible with this group, too. And if so, I know that you can work with us much quicker. I know you work with us according to how quickly we go, not only as individuals but as a group. I hope that we can get together closely now. Maybe you can make some comment on that. The other thing that I want to ask: These 'Christ Michael papers' from the Sarasota group, I am very willing to make some copies of those and give them out to the group. Is that something that might be a good idea, and are these indeed, accurate teachings?

HAM: It is all very accurate and true. It is also the responsibility of each person to understand these messages with their own light of truth. All else is your own decisions. One further question?

VIRGINIA: Hello, Ham, and Daniel too. I didn't mean to have the last question, but I was overwhelmed with embarrassment when I realize that as Rachel began her story of sharing the fact that she had given the first lesson to her Relief Society Teachers, I had immediately pre-judged what the Relief Society teacher was going to say – and with my laughter and etc., I realized how quick I am of myself to think something of someone else and hear it with an entirely different ending; and I couldn't help but just be embarrassed. I am sure that Daniel will have a lesson on it for us when we get back to Pocatello. [loud group laughter.] I also had a question about your lesson: I have thought for many many years that one of the most difficult times for me in removing myself from being involved in judgment is when gossip is occurring, especially in the workplace. So in escaping, I judge what might happen of the people who are doing the gossiping. But, by removing myself from the lunchroom or break-room, I guess I am guilty in judging by not trying to be a part of the gossip. Do I make myself clear, and do you want to comment on this?

HAM: Yes. You are using your judgment in a situation and choosing to follow your best understanding. In this, you are only judging actions, not people, and are correct in your efforts to be Christ-like. Fear not, for you do well.

And now I am preparing to leave you this evening. I pray that your weeks are profitable for you, spiritually, and that you are all in one accord in your intentions to become who you each really are – that is to say, God-like. Farewell for now.

Assessing versus Judging. What is Spirituality? Is Spiritual Understanding a Reality?

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Our lesson this evening is concerning spirituality. What is spirituality? How do we use this term and what is its meaning?

Spirituality denotes an understanding of one's higher human consciousness. It is a term used by one person when describing another's (or describing his own) higher-minded experience. Human spiritualness is twofold: It is a measure of one's own understanding of those things spiritual; and, is a term used to describe the relative understanding of another's understanding of these same things spiritual.

What is our understanding of spirituality? Is our spiritual understanding even a reality? Or, is spirituality just an ongoing concern of ours. Is spirituality a cause and effect for one or the other? – or both.

When we think about this 'spiritual understanding' (spirituality) and how it is transmitted to another being, we are coming close to understanding morontia realities. Morontia realities exist in that realm between the purely animalistic human experience of 'sensation-awareness' – and also the human understanding of, and the human experience of, 'spiritual-awareness,' which is extra sensory. The meaningful understanding, and interpretation of this experience, hinges onto 'morontia/soul-reality.'

This soul-reality, which is growing and developing into a real and even tangible being, can become an understanding even while in the purely human form. In your awareness of another, use your morontia insight into this person; see this person as brother, friend, helper, a father, a mother, a child of God. When you use your morontia insight you will see these pure natures inside each person – this is spirituality in its real form.

I would say, often what we have denoted among our fellows as being 'spiritual,' is not genuine. It is only by true spiritual insight into another person that any grasping of that person's true spiritual being is really possible – it comes through not by words but by deeds, by manner, by grace, and love bestowed.

People in your realm are often concealing of themselves by using wit or "charm," or other methods of falsity – cleverness. This cleverness is not true spirituality; and by your standards, in our eyes, it should be obvious to you all, the difference. Always use your morontial-feeling-understanding in assessing a person.

This morontial-assessing is not to be confused with judgment, no; it is, rather, a constant 'state of being' – for truly spiritual persons do react to 'spirituality' within one another. This reaction may be purely one of mutual understanding on only a minor subject, or it may be an all-encompassing recognition of brotherhood or sisterhood, which is stronger and more lasting than life itself. Life after life you are recognized and respond to each other in a spiritual manner – a recognition-reverberation; and therein is a sublime welcoming of each other.

You who are clothed in the flesh really miss very very much of that which is in our understanding to see. You are in the embryonic stage of beingness; and during this mortal time, there are inner-flutterings of the 'being' that will progressively emerge. It is this 'greater being' which will ultimately emerge in the hereafter, yes, but which also has the ability to react even in the daily living of this mortal life.

Yes, morontia beingness (soul) is beginning to blossom within each of you, and it will react in life's situations if you allow it. Your real being, your heartfelt oneness with your greater self, is beginning to find expression in the world. And much of this new discovery of yourself involves discovery of your brothers and sisters, as well.

When we discuss among ourselves our relative merits and shortcomings, it is wise to recognize and understand that we are all still embryonic. We are all partly blind. We are all walking in the greatest light which we know at this time. In the future ages all human beings will become much more spiritually advanced, and these lessons which you are receiving now will seem even trivial to them. Each stage of progressive life, progressive civilization, progressive world consciousness (beingness), has its own stage of discovery.

This world is now at a critical spiritual point in our spiritual development; you are bound to discover Father and Michael. You who are dedicated to this great work are all destined to leave behind a wonderful and enlightened task/work which, in turn, is wonderful and enlightening to future generations. Understanding this 'as you are-ness,' your own 'being-ness,' and your own individual destinies as they unfold before you each – you, then, are indeed lights in a grayish dark world, and will become even more-so as your lives unfold.

In our lesson this week I have endeavored to distinguish between individuals judging others, and the recognition of spirituality between people; and, the subsequent 'assessment-making.' If this is unclear in your minds I will be happy to answer your questions. It is a fine line and a delicate area of accurate perception, yes, but with true spiritual prayerful insight, can be understood. Even the worse sinner on Earth, if he is desiring of true salvation and forgiveness, will, in time, surely achieve this understanding.

It is desire, coupled with action, which is truly the making of men and women toward divine humans. Desire and action constitute the pathway of life. Desire and action are the twofold steps which lead us on this pathway. We, who are in this great ascension realm of understanding, know that the left foot cannot proceed without the right foot. Will and decision; desire and action – both, are part of our spiritual becoming.

In another lesson, I will help your understanding of will and its true significance in present-day life, and, in Light and Life. Are there any questions tonight?

JOSHUA: Father Ham, I sure appreciate the lesson you have given us tonight. I believe I've got a lot of growing to do, a lot of understanding to accomplish. I've got to grow in soul; and to do so I have a lot of thinking to do. I hope I can live up to the expectations of we mortals that you desire. Thank you very much.

HAM: It is truly said that it is not so important what we are today, as what we are becoming. Use your insight to set your own goals.

WILLEENA: Good evening. You just said: "Use your insight to set your own goals." That brings to mind that in a private session you addressed "following my heart." Is that, then, a key to this spiritual development? As we are more attuned to our deepest hearts' desires – which in the deepest sense would have to include the Father – then that is what will lead us in the right paths and the right choices? And, in the direction that will more and more connect us with the Father?

HAM: Yes. You are in good understanding. Within yourself, you are growing out of a difficult stage/area wherein are dark canyons. These dark canyons are only a temporary state and are growing in the direction of the light. Hard is your pathway, and hard are you on yourself. You are beginning to learn there is always a way to 'grow' out of your seedpod rather than trying to force it open, chip it open. Yes, growth! and, 'allowing time' for this growth. Allowing growth is the way out of the pod, the way out of the dark canyons.

WILLEENA: Could you explain that a little more thoroughly – the difference between "allowing" what really is, what it really constitutes, versus what you just described that I am inclined to do?

HAM: Time is an element which cannot be abridged. You must take time to allow this spiritual growth to occur. Time will be the changing factor in this transformation. Time is required, yes, and it is not your responsibility to push it.

WILLEENA: Wouldn't that be – I am hearing to relax a little bit more with the process, and that may help me to allow the time that is necessary? (Ham: Correct.) Willeena: Thank you. You also said in the lesson: "We are at a critical spiritual point in our spiritual development." Could you address that?

HAM: Yes. It is a critical point in the world's development. You are all very well on your pathways. You are (individually) "saved" in the Christian sense, yes, for you are receiving salvation even now in this life. In the stages of world development (the enlightenment through till now, and those changes to come), our mission is critical to a richer world in spiritual development. The Urantia Book's information is crucial, yes; and our teachings are supplementary to the Urantia Book through daily living of life. The world will come to know this higher spirituality and new morontial awareness – and be transformed by them. In this beginning stage, it is crucial to stay the course in a slow, calm and steady transition. Like a child newly born, his first few hours and days are most critical. Are you in understanding now?

WILLEENA: Yes. Thank you. It is quite well explained. So, therefore, what you are saying about the "critical point" is that as we develop in our own individual spiritual path, there will be an affect to the whole of the planet wherein we will be able to touch hearts – reminding the souls of the brothers and sisters that we come into contact with that we, together with them, will be bringing more of our brothers and sisters along with us in the march towards Light and Life. Is that correct?

HAM: Yes, it is; and this will proceed naturally and progressively down through the generations to come. Yes.

ELEA: I need some expansion on communication, how we communicate. You said we conceal ourselves through "wit and charm and cleverness." And I understand you to teach that, rather, we are to scatter seeds of service and love through 'the fruits of the spirit.' Would you differentiate this also with our use of humor in our concealing of ourselves? Christ said: "Unless you become as a little child, you cannot inherit the kingdom of God." We have become very rigid adults and we have learned for our best well-being on this realm to be concealing on things. Would you differentiate between the "wit" and "charm" and "cleverness" we use to communicate – versus humor, in regard to spirituality development-type growth?

HAM: Yes. It is becoming to the truly spiritual being to laugh and enjoy humor, naturally. It can be damaging to the becoming-spiritual person to conceal themselves in 'humorous pretending.' It is the difference between truly living in the moment and enjoying humor, versus the pretense of humor while thinking of yesterday and tomorrow, for instance – all the while concealing the person by falsehood. That is fear – a fear that is concealing-promoting; the fear of not being accepted; the fear of being ridiculed; the fear of losing something – all these are a promoting of this concealing or hiding. It is this posturing between people which often retards true communication. Is this helping your understanding?

ELEA: A little. I am still wondering: How do we come out of the rigid-adult, this concealment, and become this truly spiritual child that lives in the 'now,' which Christ was talking about. I am not getting the differentiation still between humor and wit. Someone said that many a truth is spoken in jest. How do we break through this shell so that we dare to become real and lose our fakeness?

HAM: Again, it is a growth process and you will grow beyond this seed-shell, and then it will no longer be useful. It is a process of growing, and growth alone will answer this question for you.

ELEA: Thank you. I heard a comment the other day, and it's kind of sad; it is regarding those people who have wonderful skills and really beautiful things to share – that they are not sharing these; they feel self-contained and happy within themselves. Maybe we should share more, but I think it has to do with the 'how' – how we share!

HAM: Life is only truly worth living when you can share it with others. When one lives with fear and anxiety, then sharing is not occurring to the fullest degree possible. When the person learns to share with God, then that sharing becomes spontaneous with others. Living in the absence of a 'God-sharing understanding' is the chief cause of human suffering. Is this answering?

ELEA: Yes. This is helping. I think what you mentioned--that you are going to take this up in the future--will greatly help further. Are we bordering on what you were saying with the 'will and decision' which leads to 'desire and action?' (Ham: Yes, yes.)

CALVIN: Teacher Ham, are we then better off being genuine and sincere and maybe not so outwardly happy and bubbly, than we are to be falsely happy, bubbly, and yet not genuine – until we grow naturally that way? if that makes any sense.

HAM: Yes, it does; and yes, you are understanding.

CALVIN: You said it was a fine line to judge. Is it a fine line, then, when we judge another person's false happiness versus his sincerity? Is that what you were saying?

HAM: Yes – that is, if your understanding is not judging. Understanding another's spiritual state, or their 'lack of' (their concealment from the fear), enables you to open yourself to this person in sympathetic understanding and perhaps help them reach beyond their 'facade of being' to being truly touching with each other. These, even small life experiences, are sometimes life-changing. Are you understanding?

CALVIN: Yes. In summation of that: Then it is good for us to be able to discern, in an understanding way, a person's genuineness. (Ham: Yes.) Calvin: I look at people in daily life – and some I can feel that they are genuine and receptive and are whom I would like to get close to and share with; and others whom I feel as though it would not do as much good to share my spiritual excitement, so to speak.

HAM: Correct. You are understanding my lesson about spiritual assessment. Yes.

RACHEL: Father Ham, to put it just simply: What you would like for us to do is just plain let our hair down, be ourselves, and not put on a false front with anyone. Is that correct?

HAM: Correct. [laughter.]

MELISSA: Father Ham, I just recently came out of an incredible growing experience, and I just want to comment on how thankful I am that you're here. And I also want to say that I really appreciate and love Willeena – she has helped me incredibly through this. And I thank Father, most of all. It is good to be back.

HAM: You are never far from our understanding. My personal love for you is great and growing. I am always concerned with your happiness and well-being. And, I am thankful that you have learned, grown, and become yourself, Melissa, through this experience. Are you seeing the beauty of it now?

MELISSA: Yes, I am. Thank you. (Ham: Thank you, my daughter.)

I shall conclude our meeting for this evening. May love and peace be yours.
Farewell.

The Value of Group Interaction | You All Are Living In Abundance

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Gladly have I heard your discussion this evening and also during this last week. It has greatly eased my heart and has shown that you are all advancing into strength of character which is unshakable. Each of you has progressed greatly in this last year or so. It is good to witness your willingness to serve Machiventa Melchizedek and his servants.

All of our work to date has been personal in that you have been personally touched and moved by my words. It is so with all Teacher-groups, the students have been personally nurtured, yes. It is time that you become greatly aware of your responsibilities, which lie beyond yourselves. This world is filled with lost sheep; it is your assignment/duty to help bring these sheep back home.

Individually you can do much, yet it is limited. 'As a group' you can function on a greater scale impacting your fellows and the masses. Also, as a group can we help ensure against individual fanaticism and error in thinking. Correct and good are your intentions and motivations on a personal level, yes, but to continue with your interactive processing of life with one another will bring you much ease of thought. Knowing that each of you share common concerns, common experiences, and common wisdom helps unload the burden of the individual.

Regarding your weekend celebration - relax and share with each other your enthusiasm and joy. Show yourselves happily and joyfully to God. Release your inner tensions. Allow yourself to freely flow with love. Yes, flow with love. Allow yourselves to be changed. Allow yourselves to be uplifted. Allow yourselves the freedom of love.

This is all I have to say on the subject at this time regarding personal responsibilities and the value of group interaction. All other will-decisions are yours to make.

The lesson this evening is concerning abundance. Again, I am here telling you that you all live in great abundance. Even though you may be shaking your heads to yourselves: "No," you say, "I have deep concerns and worries over my material existence; who are you to make light of my problems." Yet, staunchly and forthrightly I assert the same – you all live in abundance. These petty and self-centered worries must be gradually abandoned to the dust-heap from which they came.

When you throw something away do not return and pick it up again. Often this is the case when it comes to material concerns, for they are seeming very real, very stressful, very engaging of the person. Many of you have indeed lived through times of severe financial crisis which have tested your moral strength in ways which no other severity can do, and these old 'memories of lack' often haunt the present days of plenty.

Again, I assert the following: Father, who watches your every movement and thought, knows indeed what you are in need of. If you are in need of testing or strengthening in certain moral areas, these areas will be strengthened. If you are in need of assistance in your daily toil, if you have exhausted yourselves, this assistance will come in ways which require an opening of the eyes to see.

Often there is help needed which you are unwilling to ask for; and we say, yes, you can indeed ask your Father for help, even for 'material' help. Often this assistance comes from greater understanding of the problem, or a willingness to see another option which you yourself had willfully closed off to. Or, the willingness to have a change of some kind and a new manner which helps you alleviate this stress.

You see, children, Father is intently watching you, loving you. He is always attempting to guide you – like a child taking their first steps with parent hovering over them, keeping them from falling, holding their hand, letting go for a minute to see if the step can be taken alone, grabbing if it couldn't, allowing if it could – this is truly as the Father sees you.

All your worry and toil is part of your shared experience. Father shares your experience closely with you. He forsakes no one – but rather, is willing always to share. If the child, in turn, is then willing to share with the Father, great things come to pass; both are then 'as one.'

Yes, 'will' your life to God in all its aspects. Understand that you may gain contentment, security, peace and happiness, in so doing. And by sharing and in the giving of yourself, will you find great abundance – even beyond your expectation.

You, my children, are not the first to walk this road of hardship and challenges; many before you, and many to come, will walk this same path. You are not alone in your struggles; you are not isolated by them either, for He who sees all things and knows all things is watching and waiting for the small hand to reach up. This is the conclusion of the lesson for this evening. Questions will be received.

CALVIN: Thank you, Teacher Ham. They gave me the microphone, so I get to lead off. Is Prince Machiventa with us this evening? (Ham: Indeed, you have perceived correctly.) Calvin: Thank you. My love to him for his message yesterday, his direction. Are there any corrections that he or yourself would like to make to what was presented yesterday or discussed so far, today? (Ham: Correction will come as time progresses.) Calvin: Thank you.

ROLAND: Teacher Ham, I was, as you know, the receiver/transmitter to the messages Sunday from Machiventa. You just said: "correction would come in the process of time..." Was the general overall message correct? I am getting a little confused?

HAM: Understanding is like skiing - you may veer off the trail from right to left, yet go down the path. So it is with your understanding of our messages - know that it may error slightly here and there in accuracy, yet in the main the message is correct. Your transmission ability is very good and is getting better. There are only a few minor details transmitted erroneously. Therefore, do not worry overly about it.

KARL: Teacher Ham, I would like to thank you for the lesson this evening. It was extraordinarily beautiful and helpful. I wish all the people on Urantia would have been able to hear it, for it would be very beneficial. I have a question I would like to ask that is somewhat different than most of the questions, but you might be able to answer it: I am curious if any of the people on other evolutionary planets have ever developed interstellar travel?

HAM: Yes. It is so on advancing worlds that they are exploring the neighborhoods of their worlds; and it is to be expected in all worlds, eventually, as communications become advanced and there are methods and technology available to allow this type of traveling. Yet, and even so, usually the area explored remains within the solar system of origin. Interstellar travel beyond a solar system is a very extremely advanced stage of technological development and is not common, though I know of a few instances of its existence.

JOSHUA: Father Ham, changing the subject again: Could you tell us how many Teacher groups are in existence in the United States, and also in the world as a whole.

HAM: Many are just budding into being receptive to a Teacher and some are just flowering into receiving Teacher transmissions. It is like looking into a garden and seeing buds opening here and there, or sprouting, or flowering. There are many; yet you can't say which exactly are flowers, or which exactly are buds. Therefore, I decline to answer specifics. [laughter.]

ROINDA: Teacher Ham, I would like to thank you for the lesson also. I would just like to express thanks to my Thought Adjuster, which I feel has been giving me guidance lately; it is much appreciated. I would just welcome any additional guidance that He is willing to give me.

HAM: You are in good caring hands by those which watch over you, constantly. I am pleased to see your willingness to be guided. So many mortals are unwilling to learn, feeling self-satisfied and complete. Feeling incomplete, and wanting growth and guidance and help, is truly wise and mature. Yes. (Roinda: Thank you and I do feel more and more like I am being taken care of. Thank you again.)

NOLUS: Father Ham, I had tears in my eyes tonight when you gave the message to Marianna. I feel like she is a spiritual sister in that she had shared that transmission with me - that had really meant a lot to me. I have two questions tonight, one of them is: Many times I think about you coming and making the rounds to each one of us to see how we are doing. Sometimes when I am studying, and sometimes when I am sharing things with other people, I often wonder if you are there. But I don't have the capacity yet to know if you are present, or not. I wonder if there is a way that I could tell when you are visiting and when you are with me?

HAM: You will know when you know, my child. I cannot give you this understanding overnight. Within each person develops a sense of being in mota awareness. This morontial sense of awareness culminates in the awareness also of other morontial beings. As you are progressing within, your soul is growing, and the ability for sensory-perception is growing with it – you will surely be aware of Teacher presence and even communication. Yes, certainly, you are truly well prepared for this new experience.

NOLUS: Mesneur and I wanted to thank you very much for the experience we had last week while coming to the meeting. It is a wonderful experience that we have on the way down here each week wherein we discuss the topics that are brought out here at the meeting. On the way home, we realized just what had happened regarding our pre-meeting discussion – that we had had a pre-knowledge in our discussion of what was to happen at the meeting, and we were just so delighted. It felt like it was a real special witness for us. The other question I have: Regarding the law of tithing that many of us practice in our structured religion. [the LDS/Mormon religion.] I haven't read all the Urantia Book yet, but can you enlighten me on what your feelings are about the 'tithe' and how we should follow what we need to be doing in that?

HAM: No, I cannot; this is a personal decision and choice. One further question is all that Rebecca will be able to transmit.

JASON: Greetings, Ham. My question tonight is real quick and easy: When should we have our first TR (transmission-receiver) meeting/session? I have some deep questions that I just feel and know could be answered in this group. I have desired for this to come about for some time. I think it would solve a lot of problems.

HAM: When you all have decided, we will follow your direction on this. (Jason: Ok, tonight?) [group laughter.]

HAM: If it is group consensus, then of course. It is always my pleasure to serve you. I am aware that Rebecca is very tired, however, and cannot continue in receiving the transmission from me this evening. Therefore, I will say farewell.

Invitation From Michael To His Present-Day Workers

Daniel, Gabriel, Michael, Machiventa Melchizedek, WOODS CROSS & POCATELLO GROUPS
08-21-1992

[This meeting represents the first conference of the Teaching Mission Correcting

Time - held up in the mountains east of Pocatello, Idaho in the home of Bill and Virginia Kelly. Approximately fifty people in attendance, many of which camped in tents for this 3-day event out in the Kelly's beautiful nature yard. Their home was strikingly similar to the home here depicted.]

First Meeting in Pocatello, Idaho Gathering -
Friday Evening Session

I am DANIEL. I am your teacher, your friend, and your guide. I welcome all of you here this evening. We have been very happy and excited about this gathering of the Woods Cross friends with the Pocatello friends. The bonding of these two groups will, in future time, create avenues for our mission and will help in further growth.

The coming together of you on this occasion of great importance is viewed in our regard as a splendid event. We are happy to be here with you. The members of the Pocatello group have been preparing and awaiting this event for many months. And so to you, our friends from the south, we wish you welcome. We are pleased you could come with us today to celebrate our Father/Brother and Teacher, Christ Michael's mortal birthday. Myself and Ham, we wish you welcome.

GABRIEL: Our thanks, our love, our blessing upon you all. Father, bless these new apostles upon Urantia. Allow them open entrance into your vast kingdom. Give them strength, courage, and wisdom - to help bring the gospel into this confused world. Show them simple reality, truth - gifts of love, within and without, together and apart, in darkness and in light. Reveal to your tenderhearted children a new and abiding reality that Michael is among them. Amen.

Life is never-ending. Love is self-revealing. Love is my Father Michael's greatest revelation to you, now and forevermore. Love is abiding when all things earthly shall pass. Give each other your only true gift - love; show our little ones the path of love and truth. Commissioned are you all; take upon yourselves this solemn responsibility to my Father, Michael. I say this as His son, Gabriel of Salvington. Michael is present.

CHRIST MICHAEL: My children, it is I. I am the Vine, you are my branches. Open, open your hearts. Allow, allow me to be with you. My dearest children, I wish to gather my disciples from across the land. You who will be my present-day workers, sow the seeds of your foundations well that you may be the planters for the generations to come on this sphere which has so long, too long, been cut off from direct input. This I know. I trust and have faith in your inner-beings, your true selves, your willingness to be the harvester of souls. I am deeply touched by all of you!

Open now your hearts. I will now touch all of you with my love [pause.] I am always with you, always aware of your struggle. Do not ever feel that you have been forsaken. You will be the impetus for my rebirth. I love you all.

Reach out now. Hold my being close to you until you are with me in the Isle of Paradise. Sow your seeds deep; water them with spiritual waters and allow the rays of warmth from the Son - for that is who you gather your strength from. Yes, I am He, and will never fail you. My peace to you all. Carry on.

DANIEL: I, Daniel, am speaking for all of the Teachers present and all other great and loving celestials. We are humbled. We are sincerely in awe and thankful for the words given by our Lord Christ Michael to this group this evening. It is indeed a humbling experience for all. Put this into your hearts and come to the realization of the importance of this invitation to each who hear these words.

This is an individual calling and personal request by Christ Michael - to be His disciple. Think hard upon this! Allow this! You will be transformed by this great task! You who choose to follow will indeed be blessed with many joys, and yet, many struggles; yes, for following the path to the Father is not easy, but with the support of love from the Father, from Michael, you will endure.

The presence here this evening of so many is a welcome and most joyous occasion on both the human plane for you, and for we who are unseen. And now there is another messenger who would like to address you. Machiventa will, with Rebecca's permission, address you through her.

MACHIVENTA: Children, it is pleasurable being here tonight witnessing this great moment of your holding steadfast in such faith levels. Remain complete unto yourselves with clear vision, steady hearts, and willing hands. Michael's will will be carried forward. Remind yourselves of His perfect presence beside you. This is our commission to you: 'Remember Michael.' This is all. Good cheer. Good evening. God's peace go with you, forever.

DANIEL: My friends, tomorrow there will be another lesson in the morning. This is enough for tonight for you to digest. Ham and I both are pleased with our students. Our love to you all. Good evening.

See Ourselves As Michael Sees Us

I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Our lesson this evening includes our lesson from the previous meeting. We are extremely pleased with your new-found courage and your new-found openness which will surely guide and instruct you in the days to come. We are expecting much change and intense goals among you all, which is indeed exciting to behold.

This is also a time, however, which can cause some unsettling. When there is such unsettling - which can and does occur - there can also include panic, fright, and withdrawal. In this, you must be patient with your brothers and sisters who are in this state.

All our efforts are focused upon you all. We are aware of your doubts, your feelings, and your fears. No one is above any other, for all are equal in God's eyes. All of you are equally precious in His sight, yes, you are all in His divine awareness, constantly.

Michael, Himself, is always aware of your feelings. He is ever ready to assist you in your struggles; whether they be personal, inter-personal, material, or whatever is the cause, Michael is always understanding. Remember the life He led among you here. Michael's life was full of self-doubt, turmoil, struggle, and yes, those most poignant moments – all these vicissitudes of life He certainly possesses within His understanding; but know that this understanding extends into each mortal life through His Spirit of Truth.

Michael is always aware of you, personally. He is, as is our Father, understanding of your shortcomings, or the shortcomings which you perceive you have; His perception though, is much different than yours, for He perceives your real identity, your real self, which is above any of these minor self-doubtings.

Children, you must begin to see yourselves in glimpses as He sees you. Understand the confidence He has in you. Understand the love He has for you. Begin to experience this within your souls and it will create within you such a feeling of self-confidence that nothing can intrude in this space of being with Michael. Yes, this place where your soul and His can touch is beyond any other consideration that you may have; it is beyond words; it is beyond life experience that you have had so far; beyond any doubting. It is, and is always, your faith.

Life from now and forward is taking on aspects of morontia being. You will see life, people, and beauty in nature, through the eyes of the spirit – these eyes will not deceive you. Trust yourselves. Trust your inner vision. Life is sure to move on in its bumpy way, yes, but you will now have the ability to stand aside and observe; you will have the vision to understand a more complete wholeness of life so that you will not be buffeted back and forth by the extreme vicissitudes of living in this world.

Faith will lead you! Faith will accompany you! Faith will transform you! Faith will become your reality! Faith and trust are the two ingredients of evolving your eternal soul. And this soul – when so evolved – will cease to live without faith and trust. Trust always in your inner God, your own inner light, which is struggling to guide, protect, and become your entire life. Trust in Father Michael, for He is always present and awaits your ability to receive Him. You will all receive Him, personally, and will testify to this fact to your brethren who are in such need.

This new reality is coming into the consciousness of many, many people; they will be ready to hear the saving message of Michael, which He will so soon deliver unto the world on a global level. You are to be His workers and will comfort those in distress, for you will guide those into light who sit in darkness now. Yes, you will do much saving work in this world. For now, you must simply know how much you are loved. When you understand how much you truly mean, then will you be ready for service; then, will all of life take on a new and meaningful aspect. Surely you are experiencing this now in your daily dealings with people.

How many of you have touched someone with a kindness, a smile, an openness, a willingness to assist even in the little things, yes. Jesus was always very fond of doing little things for people. Find that in yourselves. Begin your ministry on a personal level. Every person is precious. You will begin to see their value in God's eyes through your new spiritual understanding and spirit-vision.

When you see the value of your fellow brothers and sisters, you will want to assist, you will want to share, you will want to be helpful. You will want to love them as God loves them, for you – each and every one of you – are truly becoming more and more like God every day. You know in your hearts that this is so. Long you have been on this path. Yes, you know! I will answer questions at this time.

RACHEL: Father Ham, that was really beautiful and I thank you. This evening we have a newcomer, her name is Janet M., and she is Honoray's daughter. We want to welcome her. (Ham: Extremely glad am I to welcome you.)

RACHEL: Thank you. Also, Susie B. from Hawaii called – they are requesting a Teacher for their group. Would this be possible? (Ham: Yes, it is. I have already assigned a Teacher for them.)

RACHEL: That's wonderful, they will be thrilled to death when I call and tell them that. Also, Father Ham, when Elaine more or less resigned and said she is not going to work with Spartnik anymore or have anything to do with this Mission, and then Andrea also told me that she is not going to be a part of our group anymore – I was really surprised and somewhat shocked. But when I received a letter from Melissa, and then finally talked to her today on the telephone, she told me that she is no longer going to be a member here and is resigning completely. She said that she, also, is not working with Spartnik anymore, and just doesn't want to have a part of it. I am really sad and I am baffled. This is such a loss to our group/family, Father Ham, and I am sure that you know the reasons she gave to me in writing, and also verbally on the phone. That is all.

HAM: Be not of sadness, for our daughters are well looked after. They are following their best judgment and we should not judge them. Open your hearts to them, always. Receive them when they return, and know that this time of trial is necessary. Do not try to force anything.

JASON: Teacher Ham, I had deep thoughts of Melissa and Andrea last night, and I had a feeling that, together with Elaine's negative experience, there was a publication that they might have been exposed to. The author of this publication, Bruce McCoy, authored a paper called The Pilgrim. In this paper, he states three possibilities for an explanation for the receiving/transmitting. One of them is that rebel midwayers of Caligastia's lot is to blame. We have all experienced discussions regarding this allegation and have dealt with it. The second one lies with the mind simply 'forming these transmissions out of thin air;' and I hope we have all dealt with this, considered this, as well. The third one though, is very clever and does take reasoning in a spiritual sense – that this is a deception by, of course again, those rebellion midwayers, or what have you, to delude people who are first exposed to the Urantia Book, to create a somewhat state of confusion and a diversion. This one I reasoned with also. I have concluded that you, and the rest of the supernal Teachers, have inspired and have organized our groups to initiate the teachings given through the Urantia Book, and I perceive your teachings are absolutely to be a companion, completely. I feel that our fellow sisters might have received this Pilgrim publication, and that it helped put them in a sense of disbelief. I am wondering if we can change this thinking with an approach to them as brothers and sisters, which we all are. All of us know Melissa and Andrea, and they are both capable spirits in discerning truth from error. In this challenge, we have each been strengthened. You say not to interrupt, and I understand, but is there anything we could do to support them? They have already experienced your kind and loving words. I would personally wish to do this, speaking for myself, to go speak with them.

HAM: It is yet too soon to begin this dialog. If you wish, of course, it is your own free will to do as you best see appropriate. Be considerate of the time-factor which you will be led to understand.

JASON: I understand. Thank you, Ham.

NOLUS: Father Ham, I really wish to thank you for the lesson today. It is remarkable to me how you absolutely were able to give me what I needed for what I was feeling today, and I am sure many others, after what we experienced last night. I appreciate having your definition of my feelings, so that I could kind of get a perspective. I feel well-nourished and almost like one of those people who needed to isolate for a while. But coming here has really helped me to make sense of what I was feeling, and I very much want to say thank you for meeting those needs. And, I thank you very much that I was able to be there last night to experience a part of this new communication. It is very exciting to me and I am very grateful to be a part of this group. I am very grateful for being led here. I am very grateful to have my Teacher. I think her name is Rose. Sometimes I have some difficulty in getting the names correctly, but I think her name is Rose. Again, I thank you for being able to meet my needs.

HAM: Nolus, your Teacher's name is indeed, Rose. You are progressing fastly, even beyond yourself. At times you will feel unbalanced for this rapid growth and must take time to catch up with yourself. You are a great woman in our mission calling, and you have indeed, a great destiny, both here and in the next life. Your name is destined to become well known. Take care of yourself, for your mission is beyond yourself. You must understand that there is much which will be asked of you; and I say this to each of you - you must be willing to put aside your own selfishness and begin your new life as apostles of Christ Michael. This process of letting go - letting go of yourselves into the new phase of your lives, may extend over some time. Yes, this time, though crucial, will become your most precious time, for you will look back on these days of great decisions as your most cherished moments on Earth. Love yourselves enough to allow yourself your own greatness in becoming.

ONCLIVAN: Teacher Ham, I've got a question I would like to ask. I wasn't going to ask it today, although it has been on my mind a lot the last few days, even the last few weeks. And when I heard of the resignation of the three people who have been involved in the transmitting process, I thought it might be an appropriate time to bring it up. Maybe it's not something to be overly concerned about, but possibly something that could be addressed and that maybe we need to work through, or at least to know your directions on the best way for us to proceed - a way to maybe lessen this type of thing happening, and also maybe cut down undue or unnecessary criticism from other people who look at this process quite critically. It is concerning the transmission-receiving process. It just occurred to me when I heard of the resignations tonight that if the people had been fully prepared – as is, let say, Rebecca, where the words come in very strong and forcefully, and there is no doubt that it's an 'otherness' and not of their own thinking – it seems to me that there wouldn't be the tendency or the thought of resignation or dissension, no matter how much trial a person might have, because they would know of a surety that they have received a message. I wonder if sometimes we might be pushing this process a little bit too quickly. For myself, I received a lot of encouraging words at first, a few months ago, as I began starting to write my thoughts as they came. At one point I was even about to become involved in the transmission-receiving for private sessions. But I know now that had I done so too early, before the words really started coming clearly, the same thing could have possibly even happened with me wherein doubts could easily set in. This is something where a person almost feels like they are perpetrating a fraud type thing, because even though their intentions are good, they aren't in fact yet receiving it in 'otherness,' and it seems very much the same as one's own thinking. I wonder if maybe we shouldn't wait, as Rebecca apparently did, until the time where we really do receive these words stronger, even with our own private sessions.

HAM: This was not the case with Rebecca. Her first transmission was public and is on record. All of her transmissions have contained her own human coloring of my words; and it must be understood by all who are receiving these messages that your own intellect, your own word-forms, your own understanding, colors these transmissions. It is alright! It is part of this plan! We, who are the supernal transmitters, understand and know the minds through which we transmit, very well. Also, we understand and know your life experiences which are tending toward leaning our teachings in certain directions. You must be concerned with keeping these transmissions as clear as you can, yes. You must be concerned with emptying your mental processes of your own prejudices and thoughts. There are many many times when Rebecca's transmissions have been colored to the point of losing my pure thought – yet we have persisted, and are persisting with all who have come, and, all who are hearing these transmissions. I say, enough of the purity has gotten through that they are standing up to scrutiny. This is all that I hope for, and it is less than Rebecca hopes for – she would wish that all of her input was erased. I do not wish this, for I enjoy her unconscious input – it is refreshingly humanly clever and personal; it expresses myself well. Are you beginning in your understanding to comprehend that this is a partnership? it is not purely a oneness, as you say.

ONCLIVAN: I understand, of course, the coloring of the words and sometimes where the other thoughts could mix in and then leaning toward a certain misleading area. The part I don't understand is because of comments you made about a month ago. And when I have talked with Rebecca, she said she very much wanted her receiving to be clear; and therefore, your words had to come in very forcefully word-by-word format before she would be willing to speak them. I think even though it might be colored unconsciously by us, as you say – if we had it come in more forcefully, as in 'word-by-word' – there wouldn't be any concern. The concern I think with many of us, and I know myself, is that it has been almost entirely 'like our own thinking,' and not a strong 'otherness.' This is where any person could start saying their own thoughts, which could be somewhat very good thoughts if we have read good books. And we have all read the Urantia Book, so how do we know that our reception is from the supernals? I am seeing that already in our Teaching Mission where there are many times when the messages are different when even on the same subject. I am just concerned – if the process is to become more of an ‘otherness’ where it is undoubtedly clear, that at least the hope of that will happen sometime before we come out so confidently and claiming that we are hearing supernals when it’s just possibly our ‘own thinking’ – especially where that is open to mistakes which can, and does, bring a lot of unnecessary criticism from other groups. As well, such experience and the confusion is causing guilt when one says they are receiving messages from a Teacher, but is perhaps only their own thinking. This is what has been my concern.

HAM: Each must sort this out for themselves; it is for each person’s own experience. Each is different, and will always be somewhat different from each other. You will, in time, come to your own understanding of your Teacher, and of your messages from on high. At present, you are confused in this and are perhaps needing to relax.

ROLAND: Greetings, Teacher Ham. I have good news that I am sure you are already aware of: The area coordinator, Marian Smith from Winnipeg, Manitoba (Canada), I contacted Sunday. I told her of the information that I have regarding the Teacher, Horace, being assigned to their group. Her comments were many, but summed up in the idea that she had been waiting all her life for this telephone call. She is very excited about it. I plan to send her transcripts from your teachings, and transcripts from Tallahassee will come from Vincent (Fred H.). I got a vision-like last night of Horace with a great grin on his face, being happy about the fact that they now know of him. Can you confirm these things?

HAM: All will, in time, come to know of our Teaching Mission and will all be invited to become a part of our great and growing group of believers in Michael's Correcting Time. All will need nurturing and guidance. You, my son, have understanding of your role in this. You are clearly on a path, a mission-calling. You do well and are clearly well chosen for the task.

ROLAND: Thank you for those kind words. I am recognizing that a mission-calling is evolving for me, and I am so pleased to be a part of this endeavor. I am constantly amazed that I am so included; and the realization of it all seems to be coming more clear. I'm grateful.

HAM: Again, remember to set yourself aside for your greater self to function. Love yourself enough to allow yourself to be who you are.

GLORIA: Father Ham, I just have a question pertaining to what I have to do. I feel like I am very dedicated and very committed to doing the Father's will, although I haven't had any supernal teacher come to me yet. I don't know what I am doing wrong. I just need some guidance.

HAM: Gloria, you are, in fact, a very looked-after person. You have a great watchcare staff who look over your daily existence. You are not doing anything wrong and I wish to lay aside your self-doubts. You are beautiful and truly gifted in very, very many ways. You are an angel in human form walking among a very mortal world, if you understand me. You are coming into an understanding of your deep commitment to Father – which understanding has been growing all your mortal life.

This deep commitment, and the great courage which you possess, will be your strength and guidance through the trials which lay ahead. Be unconcerned over a Teacher's contact, for you are assigned a very experienced Teacher who will, in fact, contact you soon. Your life is rapidly changing, and you will be in need of guidance which will be there when you need it. Be aware that you are cared for always, in all circumstances, all your days. And again, love yourself enough to allow yourself to become your true self.

GLORIA: Thank you very much. Also, I have my brother, Joey, with me tonight. He has had several experiences that he is really concerned about and just needs some confirmation.

HAM: Truly you are blessed of God, my son. You are indeed, a noble truth-seeker. You have come through much experience in your short years. You are continuing to grow and develop along the lines which your Father in heaven has laid before you. You will come to a great understanding, in time, and will be a great leader for many who, even now, are your associates. Be patient with yourself; allow yourself time in this awareness. Be comfortable with your understanding, for your understanding is unique to you; no one else will have this unique perspective. Is this helping?

JOEY: Yes. I also have a question on stillness: When I meditate, I feel words of direction or comfort are ready to come to me, but I keep them away maybe? Maybe I am scared or perhaps don't have enough experience yet?

HAM: No. Experience is of no great concern at this time concerning these messages. Be in awareness that you are loved and cared for, as is your sister. If you understand this great loving care, which exists without and within you, you will become more self-assured in your transmission of supernal messages. It is always a time of testing when you must witness to what is real. Are you understanding? (Joey: Yes, I do. Thank you.)

CALVIN: Father Ham, I would just like to express, in behalf of the group, a thank you for the love of Michael which you have presented to us this evening, and through your teachings. (Ham: And I thank you, Calvin.)

WILLEENA: Father Ham, the question I have is with regard to emotions, which is a human experience, and one that we have dealt with. At this point and time in our history, we have not known how to deal with it very well when it comes up in people's lives. I noticed when the announcement about Melissa was given, I personally felt a loss; and I experienced that feeling of loss from Onclivan's question also. I assume others will also miss her. Even though I really do understand your answer regarding all this - which is to trust, to allow, and to continue in our own growth. Would you please give us some guidance with regard to this emotional aspect of ourselves - and, how to truly be in alignment with Father's will with that part of ourselves - as well as our understanding, mentally, of our continuation of this work in a physical way.

HAM: You need not miss Melissa, for you can remain friends. This is not judgmental on either side. Melissa is a strong, beautiful and spiritual woman, and always will be. Remain her friend. Do not close doors; it is not necessary.

WILLEENA: Thank you for that. I would now go to the heart of the question that I would really like to ask. You realize I am working quite a bit with my emotional state; and I think that is a real need in our society, and in our spiritual growth as well, because it has been something that has been left out of the picture quite often in our evolution – probably because our emotions can be so volatile, they feel very disconcerting and I don't think there is many in our current times that are very adept with handling that part of ourselves. Again, is there something that you might offer us with regard to when this aspect of ourselves shows up, these upsets? Usually, we handle the joy part of it pretty well; the pleasant side is not difficult at all, it's the upsets that are difficult for us to handle. In general, I see people dealing with emotions when there is an upset. If a negative part of us is in denial, then we don't talk about our feelings, or don't bring them up; it gets shoved to the background and we go on as if these denials aren't happening. Is there something you can say to this? Because I also believe that it's a part of our growth to address these parts of ourselves with more honesty and integrity.

HAM: Yes. Emotional self-control comes naturally through spiritual growth. Emotions can hinder the growth-process by being blocks to love. These obstacles to self-love, and to understanding the enormities of God's love, are important to be addressed. All mortals experience these emotional disturbances (or emotional fears within) to greater or lesser degrees. When you have succeeded in casting aside these difficulties, which comes about through much effort, and have come into the spiritual boundaries which enable you to look back and see the road you have come up – it is at that point you will be able to more readily control these emotions; they will not control you. This I say with the assuredness of one who has experienced this same process in my mortal state and, in my morontial state. In time, your spiritual real self will be controlling your lesser self; and this process, although it is a struggle, you are sure to win. The emotive part of 'being' always cries out for attention and control of self. In time, this crying will lessen and lessen and lessen, until you hear it no more. Be assured this is true.

WILLEENA: That's wonderful. There are a couple of things in there that I want to understand. In this crying out, this emotional crying out, is that partially caused by the fact that we are evolving? You have said several times tonight to different people, "to love ourselves." And, for instance, you spoke of how children are often mistreated; and not always with 'conscious' intention on their parent's part, but 'unconsciously;' I wonder then, as we are getting more clear and more spiritually attuned, if those needs will be more automatically attended to in our children, and even in ourselves – the child within each of us. And therefore those emotional states will not need to cry out quite so much?

HAM: Yes. You are in understanding. And also, this greater spiritual self, your true morontial being, will triumph in the sense that you will not remain hurt anymore.

This concludes our meeting tonight. I am pleased to be your Teacher. I will always remain your friend and will ever be here for you. Farewell. [Cannot find September 14th meeting – to be added when found.]

A Message From Our Most High Father, Oliver. A Message From Michael

Oliver, Michael and Ham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH

09-21-1992

Greetings. I am OLIVER. [Long delay.] Greetings. I am here with HAM. Excuse the delay. In extending myself into this area of communication it has required an alignment with which Rebecca is unfamiliar; [delay again.] and now, after some adjustment, it is in an easier frequency. Excuse me and I extend apologies. [More delay. Rebecca relayed to the group after this transmission that the energy level of Oliver's transmission was "off the charts."]

Yes, I am Oliver. Ham is also present in the case this communication breaks away. This communication is more difficult, in a sense, for it is requiring a certain linkage which is incomplete regarding Rebecca's status and her spiritual development. It was requested, however, that this communication proceed.

I am a Vorondadek. I am here in the capacity as Teacher for this evening. I have been asked to deliver a message from the Most Highs of Edentia (our Constellation headquarters).

As pure water is waiting for sunlight, we are awaiting a wondrous worldwide event. This eventual understanding, in a most wonderful way, is becoming clearer in the eyes of those who are waiting.

There will, in time, happen that Michael's presence will be understood and known by all on your world. His glorious being is here in His limited way. He, in time, will make His being understood in an unlimited way. You are all understanding this great truth, the truth of His pure being which is here this evening.

I am MICHAEL: All of my branches are part of my vine. I receive you all as myself. When you embrace each other, you embrace me. When you love each other, you love me. When you help each other, you aid me. Look into the eyes of a child – see me. Hear all of God's words from each of His children – hear me. Tell all of His great love. [Onclivan's child was in the room and crying.] Love this little child. Calmness will pervade. Allow your love, freedom. Allow yourselves, freedom.

You are all beloved more than you can ever comprehend during this short life. [child still crying.] Love this child, love. Of all our great creation of a vast universe, our Urantia is home to me. My beloved world, I am here. All of this world is destined for help. My children who hunger will be fed. My children who thirst will have water. Yes, my children who seek living truth will be watered and replenished by my being. Faith, children, faith in me, and in each other. Carry on.

OLIVER: Ham is awaiting to address you now. I am Oliver. Farewell.

HAM: Children, all is well. You are all in preparedness for your spiritual alignment with Michael. He is present. He is always waiting to enter your home, to enter your 'self.' Know His love for you is equal to that of the Father. Know that His interest in you is no less than that of the Father. He is ever ready to assist you in your daily lives. He is ready to help carry your burdens. He is ready, yes, to stand beside in helping you, comforting you, leading you.

The Master has come in order to bestow Himself upon each of you, equally. All of our understanding is surpassed by this great deed. How great is His love for you that He has come! How great is His love, children! Even am I in incomplete understanding and full comprehension of it. Tonight, our questions must be brief.

RACHEL: I am overcome. I don't know what to say, Father Ham, so please bear with me. [pause.] This evening we are grateful and thankful to have two guests with us from California. They are from Andrew's study group. They are Joan and Joe LaVine. We want to welcome them.

HAM: Yes. In welcoming you, we welcome Him, who is within you. Yes.

CALVIN: Teacher Ham, I thank you for helping to present to us Michael's presence and message; and, for Oliver's message from the Most Highs – I think I speak this in behalf of this group. I would like to ask if you would have words for us in our discussion on how we can individually prepare ourselves for this great event to happen. Is there anything more you would advise, other than to increase our faith in our daily lives, which we have discussed tonight, and seek Father, a greater understanding of Father, and feel more of His love. Like Rachel, I don't know what to say, other than that.

HAM: My son, Calvin, all is alright with you. Always release your love. Allow this love the freedom to flow, to ebb, to change course in your daily activities. Think of love as a flowing stream which swirls in places, flows in places, spills over in places. Love is a great reality. Love is a living reality. That is all.

WILLEENA: I, too, was deeply moved. I heard this before, but it soaked into me more this night – that within each face, each pair of eyes, there is the reality that we are addressing the Father who reflects from 'within' us. I suppose all I have to say is thank you for all of this understanding; it touches so to the core and brings hope. I love you.

HAM: I am pleased with your loyalty, your steadfastness, earnestness, and devotion.

MESNEUR: Who is Oliver? Maybe I should have asked him when he was here.

HAM: It is alright. Oliver hails from Edentia [our Constellation headquarters world] and is a Most High Father.

MESNEUR: When I have been working on this love, one thing that I do is recognize that everyone has God in them, everything has God in it. We are all made out of the same kind of atoms, materials. And it helps me to recognize them as we are all really connected, and so when we do something to someone, they really are connected to us and it's almost like we are doing it to ourselves. And it helps me also to know that we are here for experience; and therefore, when someone doesn't do it in the same way as I do it, I recognize they need a different experience than I do; and this helps me to allow them their experience without judgment. I have been working for years to have this unconditional love; and what you are saying about it – I feel like that is really the answer to what we are all supposed to be arriving at so that we will be in preparation for the connection that we need to make for our eternal lives.

HAM: Yes. How is God's love conditioned except by mortal will! Father's love is all-encompassing, all-awareness. Duty it is to prepare your own house for His dwelling place – not to judge another's house of its preparedness, for often there were times when your own house was unclean. In your remembering that all are your brothers and sisters, and that judgment is not entering into this relationship, then this relationship is open to receive.

WILLEENA: Father Ham, I am in understanding that each of us are to reflect the Father – to look into each other's eyes and see that in each other. I personally realize that I, and others might likewise, have a difficult time seeing that reflection in myself. Looking in the mirror, I would like to see that reflection of Father within me. Might you say some words to this for each of us?

HAM: I am in understanding that what you are seeking is the goal of perfection, in a sense. Know, my daughter, you will come into alignment with Michael's true spirit and will see the Father everywhere in time.

WILLEENA: Is there something particular I should ask of Michael to come into this alignment? It was suggested in our study group we could try asking Michael if we might be privileged enough to step into His mind, and see through His eyes, His love?

HAM: Yes. You are privileged to do so, even now. You will understand more in the future. For now, be yourself. Worry not. Keep your spirit, searching. Lose not your hunger and thirst for truth and love. You are becoming more than you were yesterday. So patience, my daughter, time will show you. You have an eternal existence. Have patience – patience with yourself. That is all.

WILLEENA: Thank you, Ham.

All of our time has now elapsed. I am happy to have been here this evening. All my love and prayers are with you. Keep your inner sanctum strong. Don't be swayed unduly by erroneous thinking. Trust yourselves and Father. That is all for this evening. Farewell.

The True Believer is Free of Self Doubt | Worry Not Over the Matters of the World

[Prior to tonight's lesson, it was announced that Abraham would be conducting private interviews in the upcoming weeks with each member of the group, in groups of four.]

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. I am happy and glad to welcome the return of John and David, who have, in their efforts, greatly facilitated the Missions' plans. We are in debt to you both and are ever grateful for your service. [Editor's note: John and David are the Blackburn brothers – Joshua's sons and Rachel's nephews, both returning from Naperville, Illinois from a Mission assignment.]

This evening's lesson is concerning growth. You are all at a growing stage which is requiring much spiritual nourishment. You are each in need of personal relationships and interpersonal relationships, which help to foster and promote this growth. Hard is this at times, for when you are alone and are feeling insecure, you are tending towards self-doubt.

Self-doubt is not becoming to the morontial progressor. The true morontial progressor is, in a large degree, free of self-doubt, self-worry, or self-pity. The morontial progressor is happily secure in his place in the cosmos, and will dutifully carry forward his guidance, his divine inspired guidance, with little thought of the outcome. The only thought of the morontial progressor is to carry forward his duty; it is not his place to judge the outcome – and therefore by so doing, judge himself of his own performance.

Only Father can know the ultimate outcome of one's acts upon this world. You who have limited sight (viewpoint) have limited psychological understanding of one's impact upon the world. True impact upon your fellows is difficult for you to ascertain; therefore, it is best to leave it 'as it is,' not to worry over it or to cause inner doubting or turmoil over it.

Every person comes to decisions in life which affect not only themselves, but many people. Always understand that you may, at these critical times and at all times, come forth to your Father and seek His guidance, for He is never failing and is always help-providing, even if you misunderstand the help.

Yes, sometimes we feel abandoned by God for we are limited in our seeing of Him. He is always working for our best interest; therefore, when you feel this way (abandoned) know this feeling is temporary. Most assuredly it is, that one can look back on those times and perceive the immense amount of help which you did receive, even though you didn't perceive it at the time.

I am sure that you have all understood this lesson. When Father truly needs you to act, you will know. Have no fear or doubt of your understanding of yourself, or of Him, for when it is essential, His guidance will be prominent. His guidance is becoming clearer for all of you here, yes. His guidance is becoming an all-encompassing desire of His will, for you are becoming truly a divine creature.

Worry not over matters of the world, for these things will take care of themselves. Seek instead the divine and pure – the heavenly kingdom, in place of the human world. And of course, when you do this in all that you seek to accomplish, surely you will succeed wherein 'your will' touches that of 'Father's will' – and this is the only success which counts in this life.

Truly you are mastering your lower tendency and replacing these impulses with those of divine inspiration. Hearts are becoming opened around you – have you seen this? Hearts are becoming receptive to your words. Place words of hope and comfort into these newly opened hearts and you will see a great change in them.

One day you may be called upon to water many fields. Prepare yourselves to be this living water. Begin in watering those closest to you. This living water is the substance of life. It is the core of truth and the essence of reality. One day you will surely be asked, in both large and small ways, to feed the spiritual hunger with the living bread of life, even the bread which our Master, Michael Himself, has given, and will give.

Remember how Jesus broke the bread at the Last Supper and passed it, and the next man broke the bread and passed it, and so forth and so on. This symbolizes the living bread of life which our Master so humbly has given this world. It has been passed on now so many years. Very little remains of the original loaf and still, the world hungers. Michael has not a deaf ear, His ears are always open to His children's needs, and He will feed now His little ones again.

Indeed, blessed are you who have heard these words for you are the first to receive. You are the first obligated to pass it on. Michael is pleased and accepting of your being. Open are His arms to receive you, His children, His little ones. Spiritual nourishment and strength are your rewards. Service is your joy. Happiness and everlasting life are yours, eternally.

Verily I say unto you, that you will hear Michael's words proclaimed throughout the world. In this, through your morontial understanding, your morontial vision, you will live to see His coming again. Prepare your hearts in openness to receive Him. Receive His words, no matter where they seemingly come. Open your lives, make room for Him, He will not fail you. Our beloved Michael is with you, as is our Father, at once. I will receive a few short questions.

WILLEENA: Father Ham, I had a question come up in the last few nights and I wanted to ask you: In wanting to serve another in our lives that may be struggling, how do we approach our Thought Adjuster to approach their Thought Adjuster. Is there something specific that we need to be conscious of to respect their free will? Or, can we simply send a message that we wish that contact to be made for their highest good, in accordance with Father's will?

HAM: Your question shows high understanding, indeed. You are quite right in adjusting your will to Father's in all requests. You are correct and right in praying such, for you are indeed a great catalyst for spiritual transformation. Those who are touched by your living light are never really the same again. You are correct in humbly taking it upon yourself to be as an intermediary between God and your fellows. You are correct in doing this with humility and always seeking guidance. You are correct in attempting to help where you see a need. You are correct in asking Michael's assistance. And, you are correct in your reasoning over this capacity, for you are truly wise when you make yourself small. Yes. Correct.

WILLEENA: Thank you. Another aspect of the question is - when I see that person in need, is it true that because Father always awaits a request, or a welcoming in, an invitation, and if that person says he is not spiritually enough attuned to ask for this, then I, or another seeing that for them, make that request to that Thought Adjuster for them? Am I on track with that? or is it simply a welcoming in request for Father to help their willingness to open?

HAM: In this matter, there is a difference, yes, for you cannot welcome Father into another's psyche, for this must be done by that person, alone. You can provide insight, love, and clarity for this person, yes, but you cannot make their decisions.

WILLEENA: Thank you. That clarifies it. I appreciate it, Ham.

JASON: Teacher Ham, I truly appreciate that lesson this evening. I sometimes find myself viewing myself with a retrospective attitude, and I know that fear is once again installing itself into my thinking. I have the reasoning of love to cancel that out if I will just do it. I can see now that a 'forge of bravery' is necessary to ensure my personal comfort in my position – spiritually. (Ham: Correct.) Jason: I can feel that now. Thank you very much.

HAM: Yes, it is a great intense all-enveloping form of bravery which enables one to live in the moment. When we slip into fears and worries over past or future, this is a little cowardly. Bravery it takes to stand firm in a decision and to live firmly in each moment. Yes, it is a comfort, this bravery, for it will shield you from the unneeded anxiety. Yes, this bravery is available always; yet, is forgotten often and easily discarded as we slip into old forms of thinking. It takes much more courage to let go of comfortable old thought patterns and embrace new thought patterns, than any other type of courage. Physical courage is not comparing to mental courage. Mental courage is much stronger. Yes. You have understood correctly.

NORWOOD: Teacher Ham, yesterday I was in balance and I felt really comfortable with my spiritual self and my physical self. But this morning when I woke up, my spiritual self was out of balance, felt uncomfortable; I felt that there is a change occurring and I had that feeling most of the morning. As the day wore on, I became more comfortable with my spiritual self. And when I came in this evening, I heard the news that the group would be receiving interviews from Abraham, and listening to your lesson this evening it is giving me better understanding and strength. I just wanted to thank you for your beautiful lesson this evening.

HAM: Yes. Seldom is it possible to maintain perfect balance in this earthly existence. You are all human, and this aspect is your most precious possession. Your humanness is your basis; it is not to be shunned or ignored for it is precious in God's sight. Your eternal being is based on this humanness, yes, for without your human nature how is it that you could be personal? Make not the mistake of trying to be so God-like that you forget your human basis. Jesus made not this mistake, rather did He integrate His human and divine nature into one balanced personality. All of you are in the process of integrating higher spiritual realities with lower human tendencies; and this process can be imbalancing, upsetting and tumultuous at times; it is all a part of growing, yes.

I am now in need of retiring for the evening. At Abraham's request, I will give you the first roster of individuals slated for his private interviews. Nalus, Ellen, Ellanor, Norwood. If you can arrange this meeting, please do so this evening, Abraham will take note and be receptive to the time.

I must leave at present and will return next week at our regular scheduled time. Our thanks and gratitude to all who are present. Farewell.

Only Love is the True and Abiding Influence Upon Children ~ The Ultimate Buffer Against Hate

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Our lesson this evening is about love. We are all in a process of learning to enjoy greater freedom of love. When you are small your circle of human contact is limited. As you grow in years your circle is extended. When you are given this situation of extension – first is love there; but all too often in these formative years when you are learning to imitate your fellows is love restricted. I shall elaborate:

Children are, naturally, loving beings. This love should be fostered and nurtured in them, giving them ample opportunity to extend their love beyond the family circle; and by that example, the parental fortitude in exhibiting love is a strong influence. For example: If the parent suffers hurtful behavior from another, and yet exhibits forgiveness and love, the child is in understanding; this awareness and understanding is passed on to the observing child and exhibited to others through the child.

Children are naturally wanting to broaden their moral horizons for they are very much aware of the feelings of injustice and unfairness towards themselves. When children are brought into an environment of trust and love they naturally follow this example, readily. Naturally, will they want to show their fellows that they can exhibit forgiveness – for children dislike to hold a grudge; rather would they like to resolve disputes, quickly.

It is unfortunate but true, much erroneous learning is constantly bombarding and impinging upon children in this world. They are always seeing erroneous and hurtful behavior from their peers and their elders. Little wonder is it that children, who are great imitators, are now in crisis for they are only imitating their perceived world-reality of adults.

When this world comes into a great enlightened awareness – then, in one generation, children will cease learning war. In today's world, where wars are rampant and chaos is everywhere, children have little understanding of true reality. How saddening it is to observe their pitiful actions.

You, as the parents and the very leaders of the next generation, have an awesome responsibility in child-upbringing. Yes, it is difficult for children to be non-conformists. They tend to want to conform with their peer groups, and you are as a lone influence compared to a whole world full of influence.

How then are you to really touch a child's life? I say it is through love – through love, always! Reason with them intelligently, through love. Be great enough to show these little ones a better way each day; then will this seed of love be planted for later growth. Children all respond to love. Show love always.

Teach not the higher things of the kingdom to children. Allow the children to find their own realities. Love, and only love, will be their guide, as love has been yours. Fear not that they may grasp onto false ideas, but concentrate on their ideals, instead. Yes, courage, loyalty, love – these things will be of greatest influence if exhibited by you – not by 'telling,' but by 'being.'

All of you here are the products of your influences. All of you can think back to your innocent days when your impressionability was greatest, and remember an influence in your life. These children are now in such need of good influences that you can even visually see their longing. Yes, it is correct to want to explain your reasoning sometimes, yet it is unnecessary to be overly complex.

Children yearn to do right; children yearn to be good; children yearn to understand truth; they are your most precious future. Our children's world should be better and more peaceful than this present world. Better – meaning not in the things of material nature, but richer in things of the spiritual nature. Bringing this awareness is very important. And again, it is through love that it is so.

A day will come when the “nations shall no longer learn war” – that day is approaching; you are its harbingers; you are its forerunners. Our work, our efforts, are not only for a few but are destined for all – that all peoples shall live in peace; that all men are brothers. I say, "all men" meaning 'mankind;' and, including 'all children.' Yes, all are family. And in this day, there will be no more hatred. Ponder this. Enjoy your evening. Farewell.

Inner Signs are Morontial Insights | Crystals Help Direct Energies

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. All along this winding road we have come into various states of understanding and consciousness of greater reality. This evening I am going to begin enlightening you as to another road of reality; this is one which will last us through several weeks. Our task is shortly coming into a more full focus. We are as ready as we can be for our purpose in bringing morontial insights to those who will receive.

Morontial insights and living truths are becoming evident in your inner realities. This inner world of life and experience (experiencing truth) is ever in flux, changing. Yes, this inner world is always in change, even uncomfortable change; it is often tumultuous and churning as a darkened sea in a storm, changing – then when the sun again appears, the sea calms and again reflects the beauty of the sky and clouds in peace and tranquility.

In these times of turmoil, there are often signs which point in directions of uncertainty – this is a time of testing, for all are able to read these signs. Do you act, or do you remain in indecision, in turmoil? It is concerning these signs which I am speaking now. Inner signs are clear to each person. Everyone always reads the signs; you are not given signs which you cannot read. When you read and understand your direction, then is your task clearer and your fear quieted; then are you able to walk forward, step after step, into your new awareness.

Inner reality is the guiding force of life. All of your outward existence is the direct result of your inner state of understanding reality. You may say: "How long is this inner teaching (your testings), for always is there unjust suffering or undeserved wealth." True! Yet I declare, and in the face of all other influences - ultimately, we become as we prepare ourselves to become. You who have read the many signs and have followed your longings in this journey of life to your present moment, are the direct results of your inner-life becoming real.

I am not saying to unrealistically set goals which are fantasy, no. You understand that as you read each sign and act, you become more of your destiny - yet, your destiny unfolds from within. This is true 'becoming!' This is truly 'living the way of Michael.' His way is high and advanced. His way is far beyond the present ability of anyone here to live up to at this time, yes; but you can, and will, be true to your Father by daily walking with Him in humble obeisance to His will.

He, our Father, who is always guiding your inner spirit with the Spirit of Truth, is ever present; He is ever guiding, helping, showing you the signs; helping you read them, giving you insight of truth to each sign. You are all aware that you have inner gifts. These gifts are becoming more and more real to all as your inner realities are realized.

The gift of healing, of which you are recently becoming aware, is truly part of your spiritual growth. There are other gifts even more thrilling which await you. Your sensitivity to, and understanding of, these spiritual realities will increase over time; and yes, healing will advance as you grow in understanding of this great force.

There are many forces which surround and flow through your physical means. These forces are real energy, yes, and are also, in a limited fashion, becoming a part of your new awareness. These universe energies are in abundance and can be utilized and directed by crystals. And as you will learn in time concerning these crystalline molecular structures, they are especially useful in directing and focusing these healing energies - energies which are becoming a part of your growing knowledge of 'material things' that aid even your own bodies. Yes, you are becoming increasingly aware of their functions and how energies flow.

Crystals can be used to help direct spiritual, morontial, and material energies through the physical body - healing the spiritual, mindal, and physical forms; for all of these three levels of being constitutes humans. You are not only a spirit enclosed in a physical form, but more-so are you spirit manifesting in a physical form. You are indeed close to morontial insight when this becomes reality for you.

All of your existence in this level of reality (human nature) constitutes this form of being. You are first born physical; you are nurtured as a physical child wherein you soon receive the divine gift (your Thought Adjuster); and you grow as a morontial soul in this mortal time-frame - from youth to adulthood and throughout your mortal life.

Most all of Urantian citizens are given time for this growth to become maximum of potential in human form, except when there are grave errors of human judgment and interference. It is God's will that all human beings attain their maximum growth abilities before they are carried on to the morontial worlds.

Life can seem unfair at times. Yet, if you could see 'with morontial eyes' all the seemingly sad and terrible situations, you could begin to understand their great blessing for you. Oftentimes these horrible happenings (deaths, woundings, trauma, etc.) are truly where you began to grow and receive your divine birthright - which would perhaps have been ignored for too long, without the hardships.

Humans tend toward complacency and repetition in life, always seeking safety and comfort. Father's will is harder; it requires steep action, firm decisions, and life-changing experiences of trusting in Him. Often it requires trauma for this 'letting go' of ego and 'letting go' of comfort, to that of a daily regimen of prayer; for humans are very soft, spiritually, and tend toward safety in little spiritual work. Yes, it takes true courage and prayerful decision-making to go through severe trauma and become better for it.

All of you gathered here have had your own traumatic place in living where you made the decision to change. And now you have come to a new dawning of time where you appreciate your lives, your gifts, your service - and you appreciate yourselves. All of you are learning that you must appreciate truly who you are - who you are becoming for Father, and hold this precious gift in the highest esteem.

Don't allow yourselves to fall into low self-esteem anymore. Appreciate your great strength and your beautiful characters. Appreciate what you, alone, can give to God. Bring that understanding to yourself and you will truly become who you are.

This lesson is taking a long time; I will resume it next week and wish you to ponder this over the week ahead. Have questions for me when we meet again. I will receive only a few questions this evening, as I am indeed careful not to overtax Rebecca.

RACHEL: Father Ham, that was certainly a most wondrous lesson, and I am sure each and every one of us appreciate and thank you for it. This evening we have three newcomers with us. We have Lucile F., who is Honoray's cousin. She has had quite an eventful life. I know because she has raised three adopted children and three stepchildren, so she's had to be a very busy woman. Also, we have Christine C., and Robin S. Robin is a friend of Marlin, and Christine is a friend of Robin. They are both spiritual young ladies. We all welcome the three of them. We are tickled to death to have them with us.

HAM: Certainly, it is always the case of our rejoicing when there can be expansion of our teachings. This Teaching Mission is of the utmost importance, for many of you are becoming prepared to advise and instruct your brothers and sisters for the days to come. Long years of wonderful service for the Father does await all who truly seek to do His will. Yes, welcome all newcomers. All are welcome here.

JASON: Teacher Ham, I am very interested in what you spoke on about crystals. I don't have very much experience with the material elements of crystal at all, but I felt like a young scientist while I was in Oklahoma, and was witness to some interesting energies that are almost visual. I am wondering if we should, as a group, try to test our understanding and maybe develop some experience with these crystals. Is it a prescription? or just a recommendation? That's all.

HAM: An instruction which can be acted upon, or not, depending upon your own feelings. This understanding will become apparent in the future. This is only preliminary introduction and we will have further specifics about these things in the future. (Jason: Thank you, Teacher. I just wanted to be a test pilot for anything that you have which may come my way.)

NORWOOD: Teacher Ham, I really appreciated the last part of your lesson this evening on trauma. I have just recently been put into a situation of a family trauma. I found myself being placed into a morontial/spiritual feeling of understanding - with love, non-judgment, forbearance, self-understanding. And I felt especially moved this evening on this part of the lesson, I just wanted to let you know that there is great understanding here. Thank you.

HAM: Thank you for your kind words. Your situation is known by me and understood. You have truly progressed as a direct result of this trying experience. Although this situation is truly tragic there is always good to come of it. Even in the most tragic situations, there is God. His love, His truth, prevails under all human circumstances and even when we see it not. By faith, you will know that this is true. One further question?

KARL: Teacher Ham, I would like to thank you for that superb lesson regarding signs. Are these signs sometimes 'internal?' And also, are they occasionally 'external' signs?

HAM: Both. They are both, for they involve life choices. You are always guided and protected in these life choices which are manifest. Signs are given, usually, preliminary to a choice. Is this helping your understanding? (Karl: Yes. Thank you very much.)

HAM: Rebecca is growing tired and I am obliged to take my leave of you this evening. I leave you with my humble blessings and my humble prayers. Until next week, my love to you all. May His peace be with you always. Farewell.

Part 1. Questions and Surfacing Doubts

[Editor's note: By this time, after nearly two years of Ham's teachings, there were many Teaching Mission groups that had sprung up around the world, mostly in the United States. Some of these groups had remained sound as mere 'students in learning,' and some began to side-step the need for personal correction, and instead yielded to grandiose expectations of their self-importance, becoming minded with a mystical thinking in what was to come. There was much wishful thinking, proof-seeking, and personal agenda's surfacing through some of the Mission's 'transmissions.' As a result, there was much 'transmitted' material in various groups that was conflicting. This caused great confusion. It seemed to be a matter of 'too much too fast.' As Abraham taught and explained to the Woods Cross group in the ensuing months and years, there needed to be a time of digestion of Ham's teachings; and, time for free will to run its natural course – to see who would remain as mere students in learning versus the free will of grandiose-seeking, proof-seeking, and mystical thinking. As the "feeding of the five-thousand" was soon reduced to about five-hundred faithful believers in Jesus' day, so it, in time, seemed with the Woods Cross group and other Teaching Mission groups. This night's meeting revealed the rising doubts and fears that are so common in mortality when the revelation of 'new' and higher teachings are introduced perhaps too quickly without the balancing effect of time and the actual implementing of experience, to give lasting root to the new teachings. Three week's following this night's transmission, Ham announced that his lessons would be put on hold for a time. He admonished us to meet weekly and review and discuss his lessons thus far, and that when ready, the lessons would resume. We did meet weekly, as advised, and the lessons resumed again in January of 1995 with Abraham as our group Teacher. Rebecca had moved to Nashville (married Hal Bynum of Nashville) and resumed Ham's teachings with the Nashville-based group. Suffice it to say, however, that many Woods Cross group members did move on to other interests and did not resume in 1995 with Abraham's teachings. It is hoped that the inclusion of this "surfacing doubts" meeting will help future students of these teachings to see the importance of pacing one's spiritual intake in a balanced, helpful, and fruitful manner.]

I am HAM. I am your Teacher. This week I am planning a different approach to your teachings. This evening I am here to answer questions only. The lesson will be forwarded to next week, for this evening I wish to address questions you may be holding in your hearts and which are causing doubts.

Are there any who wish to proceed first? I would allow these questions to be personal, for you are in need of help in personal areas. We are all an understanding family/group, therefore, fear not to be exposed before others for all have, or are experiencing, similar feelings.

ROINDA: Greetings, Teacher Ham. Since you are allowing us to ask personal questions: In my life at this time, I have been feeling very discouraged and a lot of it has to do with the results of my health. What I want to know is how to get past the discouragement so I can come to an understanding of what happened and why. In some ways, I felt misled. I just would like a little understanding of what kind of process I am going through? What can I do to help myself get through this?

HAM: Only your will is an obstacle to your faith. Healings are not only faith-dependent upon the recipient, but are also dependent on faith and clarity of the healing channeler. Faith is able in all health instances, all healing instances, to heal. However, in each being/person are there unclear areas where intellectual, or morontial (which is also intellectual), is concerned – and thereby may cloud the healing occurrence and lessen the effectiveness of the energies directed. Also, the Life Carrier work is rarely instantaneous but is slowly affecting change in the physical realm working through the morontial realm. When there are obstacles in their efforts of morontial energy focus, they are powerless to change these obstacles for they operate under the domain of human will, which overrides all of their doing. Now you say that you are wholly desirous, and of course you are faithful, to have these healings – and consciously this is so, absolutely true; but know there are, as in all mortals, a vast unconscious realm of fears, desires, and unconscious motivation which affects will. Overcoming this is not an overnight transformation, for we must work on many different levels of a person's reality. Also, since Life Carriers work through these levels slowly and methodically, there are no sudden leaps of faith either, for each step you take must be firm and grounded. You are progressing well and should not be discouraged, for you have seen the future forecast, which is not always transmitted in the time expected to the understanding of the recipient. You have received truth, yes, that you will be healed; and yes, you have received correctly that you are healed. Time is the factor involved through which you are perceiving two realities, 'the now' and the 'to be.' Father sees His children always in the 'to be.' He is seeing you from your future state into your natural state now. His view is of your perfection. To God, time is non-existent, so you have received a clear message – yet you have mentally misconceived. You are incorrect in your present understanding which will be greatly expanded in time. You are coming into a new awareness which will greatly alter your present state. When you are fully prepared and ready within will you then be taking these giant steps. For now, prepare by taking small steps. Continue in your daily practice, continue with your own Teacher's understanding, and you will see the great gifts you are being given in a more enlightened and aware state. Have patience with your own progress. You are not running a race with anything, with time, with yourself, with your Teacher, or with me. All is well. Have comfort in your heart.

ROINDA: Thank you, Teacher Ham. Tell Savanna, my personal Teacher, that I will be ready tonight to begin my transmissions again.

RUNDALE: Father Ham, I have been experiencing back and forth uncertainty. It is like I have faith in the transmissions that I have been receiving because they don't sound like me, but I know that from time to time I have an overwhelming fear that happens. The kind of fear like, 'what if,' and I just don't know what to do with it.

HAM: Examine it. Be unafraid to examine your fears. Be unafraid to imagine the worst possible scenarios. Be unafraid to honestly look at every transmission, at every idea of your own. Be fearless in your assessment of your acceptance. It is not for anyone to promote faith at the expense of honest reason – this is unavailing, for where there is faith without honest and searching inquiry, there is faith which is teetering on an unsure foundation. All of your faith entails some acceptance of some unknowns. True, however, while you accept these unknowns you must be securely fastened in your own self. While you yourself believe in the unseen, this must be a matter of personal decision, and no one can say you must believe, "you must think this" or "you must have faith in that," for ultimately, what we believe, how we think, what we have faith in, is an entirely personal matter. Is this helping? (Rundale: Thank you, yes.)

WILLEENA: Father Ham, two questions come to mind: One is from Roinda's question. I wondered if part of what is occurring – which is very difficult for me to comprehend – I wonder if you would address this. I have heard that the past, the present, and the future, in some way, are simultaneous. Is that accurate? or a misperception. And if so, that does account for some of the confusion when we are dealing with time elements.

HAM: Correct, yes, for your indwelling Spirit, for God within, you are perfect already. For you, in your present state, are in imperfection, yes. When there is perception of some higher consciousness of perfection then often there may be a time-element difference. Yes. It is correct, your awareness.

WILLEENA: Thank you. With that, I wanted to receive some reassurance with where I'm at in my personal processes. I feel like I have fallen away in the last few weeks and it's a very hard experience. I have trouble when this happens, to make my way back to a connected sense, which is what I am working towards. In my regressions. I seem to be dealing with my past, surfacing. I now believe, from what you said, that it is a matter of clarifying my whole will. Is this accurate?

HAM: Correct. Yes, you are in understanding. Correct. You are, all of you, at this moment between past and future. Father sees you in wholeness, encompassing past, and encompassing future. When your whole will (which embraces all of yourself, including past and future self) can clearly and unreservedly commit to Father's will, then great healing can occur. This past-self is present as unconscious patterns of reaction and unexpressed desire. This often manifests unconsciously during your conscious state, or through dreams. And these often influence feelings; and therefore, causes reactions such as reverting back to old patterns in present life. This is common for everyone; you are not unique in these discoveries. Everyone is the same. For you, the difference is in the extreme of the emotional reaction. For you, daughter, you have come so very far in your understanding of this new process, and you are indeed an example for many to look to. Your understanding, and your sympathy with others, is deep. And, you are a wise counselor for the emotional selves of others. Be assured that your so-called "regression" is not "regressions," but are a time-period for consolidation of your rapid growth. This consolidation will help you ground yourself in firm faith and allow the next growth-period to begin. When you think your "knowing" really regresses, this is only a perception, for we can't always be on the esthetic mountaintops of your highest spiritual experience. This must be incorporated into your lives so that this great enlightenment can bring wisdom. As leaven to bread, it must include all of you; then can there be further growth from further enlightened periods. But these periods of seeming non-growth, are not! they are periods of great strides which will be recognized later.

PENNY: I am kind of confused on something. I hope I can make my question clear enough. Yesterday in our meeting and some people's private meetings, we are beginning to hear that there is still negative energies out there that could be influencing us. I thought the Thought Adjuster would stop things like that. Yes, we were told that 'our will' could override our Thought Adjuster but if one is a person choosing to do the will of the Father, like we all are I believe, then how does our will override our Thought Adjuster on that? I always thought if we choose to do the will of God, that God would protect us - and that we didn't have to worry about any negative influences, if they even existed.

HAM: Correct. You are correct - absolutely true. Father's will does not allow the influence of sin or sinful persons to undermine or dupe the Father-knowing child. There were good people in past (and even in the present and future) who have willfully chosen wrongly, and have chosen error and sin - even while their intentions were good. I say, for the God-knowing child who trusts Father in all things, this is impossible. Always can freewill have full and total choosing. And always is this will free to choose 'error' or choose 'righteousness.' Yes, even in much more advanced states (and worlds) is there error. Error is just the opposite (or the consequence) of there being this great gift of free will. The question concerning "rebel midwayers" or "evil-thinking spirits"– there are none here now, and I say this with authority, they are no more! However, I say, and also with authority, that always can errors be made, even by myself or others. Yet, Father's will, Father's plan, will triumph even over the most egregious errors, for these things are ordained by Him. His plan for His beloved world, Urantia, will come to pass, in time, and regardless of the errors in time. Have no anxiety about your own ability to choose Father's will for you are very experienced in knowing the truth of this. Many times you have chosen wisely and correctly. Many times you have inspired those around you by your courageous will decisions by choosing God's way. You are well aware of your path and are firmly standing erect and should have no fears of being led astray, for you have control of your eternal destiny. Your will is paramount, yes! And when 'your will' and 'Father's will' work together – life, indeed worlds, are transformed. Increasingly, all of you are coming to this awareness that oneness with Father in matters of choice, enables great things to occur. Have faith in your own ability to see truth and error. Surely all of you are protected; you are watched over and are loved by multitudes of those unseen. There is no fear in this. There are no mischievous partners among us. We are all united in our purpose, and you are united with us. And together, this world will witness great change through God's love. Absolutely be at ease; be secure; be happy; be joyous and light. Lighten this burden, for it is unnecessary.

PENNY: Thank you, Ham. I feel much better.

(This night's meeting was very lengthy, and broken into two parts. The rest of this meeting is the following entry –Part 2)

Part 2. Questions and Surfacing Doubts

Ham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-19-1992

Continued...

ROLAND: In the Urantia Book it indicates there are corps of "reserve corps of destiny" which are groups that are aligned with the seraphim destiny guardians, and that each one of these corps are kind of aligned with, for instance: the angels of commerce, the angels of home, the angels of progress, and several other ones. Are we, as a group, aligned with a certain segment of the angel corps, or are we all different?

HAM: No. We have undergone a restructuring of this arrangement since we owe allegiance to Machiventa and Michael. These angelic corps are still functioning with mortals, true, but not exclusively. With the arrival of Machiventa Melchizedek, this arrangement has been changed so that the reservists, all, are under a single leadership of Abraham who is, in effect, the supreme commander of the reservists. The Angelic Corps are still functioning, and are in an increased manner, yes, but they, the reservists' allegiance, is overridden by Abraham over them.

ROLAND: Very interesting. Thank you. I noticed also in my reading that as a reserve corps of destiny mortal, that we are deep-mind trained. I recognize a lot of understanding within the pages of the Urantia Book that I do not attribute to something I've learned externally – I am wondering if we're constantly deep-mind trained as reserve corps of destiny mortals.

HAM: Yes, indeed. All mortals are in a sense 'deep-mind trained,' but only for the general purpose of spiritual advancement. When one is part of a Mission such as this (Michael's Correcting Time), there is deep-mind training for future role activation, so that when you are prepared for a certain duty, your inner training has been sufficient to prepare you for the unexpected (unconscious expected) advents of circumstance. Is this helping?

ROLAND: Yes, it is. Thank you very much. I have one further question and I think that it may affect everybody that is receiving transmissions at this time, either through guided writings or verbal interchanges with a Teacher, and/or other supernals who are visiting them. It was given to me the understanding that the Urantia Book itself was written and the information was obtained from an 'unconscious' receiver/transmitter. And after that, there was a commission developed that took those words and expanded upon them. After they had expanded upon them, they asked questions in regard to those things which they didn't understand, getting further input from supernals to edit these papers over a period of twenty-four years to produce the incredible amount of content that is in those pages we see now in the Urantia Book; and then, another twenty years to publish such. The reason that I go through that again is that I'd like that confirmed. The next thing I would ask is: Many people who are observing this Teaching Mission movement are critical of perhaps some of the errors, or 'lightweight' of the material content itself – being that it is of lighter weight than the Urantia Book revealed material. Now that stands for reason (makes sense) if it took near fifty years to develop that content (UB) – and that now we would take, for instance, the transmissions and the lessons, as we received here tonight, and analyze/edit them – and then in asking questions to fill in those areas of needed clarification, we would then have similar to the Urantia Papers. The point being – now we are able to interact with our supernal Teachers on an experiential basis which clarifies and promotes deep-seated understanding of these concepts in addition to just the deep-mind training. This is my explanation of it. I feel like in that explanation comes a desire to help clarify the experience of doubt that has been mentioned here tonight and other occasions. Can you confirm or expand or illuminate that for us? (Ham: No, I cannot. [laughter.]

ROLAND: On the basis that you would like us to struggle with that? or on the basis that it wasn't clear?

HAM: This is your understanding, which is your personal view. It may not be another's view. Concerning the Urantia Papers' transmissions, I am forbidden to speak.

ROLAND: Well, there is a paper out called, The Birth of a Revelation [by Ernest P. Moyer – First Edition; or by Mark Kulieke – Second Edition], and he is the son of one of the people in the original Urantia Book Revelatory Commission who expanded upon that same orb of thought regarding the fundamental part of that diatribe that I just presented. I happen to believe that it is a very helpful experience for me, and to express that here in this group. I will that the Father's will be done, yes, and if this is not the Father's will, I will cease from doing it. (Ham: No comment.)

JOEL: Hi, Ham, I have a question: Because there is a possibility for error on all realms, from what I understand, from all the teachings and on down: I understand that there have been some who've witnessed the rebel spirit beings. I'd like to confirm about these rebel spirits, or just what these sightings have been. There have been sightings of gargoyle-like figures and they seem very visual to us on Urantia. Is it just that our spiritual energies are coming up and we are able to see these thought forms? Can you clarify first of all what that phenomenon is, and what we should do when and if we ever experience that for ourselves, how to keep ourselves in line with Father's will? And second of all, for my own benefit so I may proceed in what I always will discern for my own truth: Is the Christ Michael that is spoken of in the Urantia Book, and these teachings that you do present to myself, is it the same Christ of Nazareth that has been followed through the biblical times and is called the savior of our world? And, are you of this ultimate good journey to bring man back to their salvation point? It is important for me to know of whom you are from, for sure, so I can clarify that for myself. And, about the rebel spirits - how do we do a protection, if in fact there has been an error, because in my understanding, in what we were told by yourself and Abraham, in 1985 they were "as if they had never been." So, they are not here anymore? I think it is important for my own self to know how - that if they are here then what kind of protection should I take.

HAM: Yes, I am from that ultimate good which is this, Michael's universe. Yes, Father Michael was Jesus of Nazareth on this world some two-thousand years ago. There are no rebel spirits here on Urantia at this time. Fear can always produce reactions of terror even when there is nothing to fear. Fear is largely a chemical animal reaction to word stimulations stemming from the physical/animal basis of your human natures. Fear is non-existent in reality for fear is a mental reaction. For what do you, a true kingdom believer and a God-knowing child of the Infinite Lord of all creation, have to fear? What harm, ultimate harm, could ever be done to you or to this world? All of you - all of the children of this world - are God's children. Yes, all of you are His. Fear not these things. They largely rise up in the mind and are not real. Be fearless in your search for God. You are, as His child, entitled to search for Him everywhere, to search for Him even through those perceived fearful places. You are empowered and allowed your search, yes; and yet, no fear can change the fact that you belong to Father and He alone is your God. Is this helping?

JOEL: That helps a lot. I was asking that, personally, for a friend that was distraught by the gargoyle experiences. And what I interpreted that experience as, and I wanted to directly ask you, is that it is almost as if being around 'thought forms,' that they cannot affect me in any way. It is just like being around a person that is somewhat negative in behavior - how that is kind of uncomfortable. That was my perception, and you cleared that up tremendously. And also, you've made clear regarding the mission that you are on, that you are the person who I adore and I believe in, and whom I love. I will always be firm on that! I don't believe I can be easily swayed away from something that I love so dearly. So that is why I ask the questions that I do; it is not out of any disrespect, but it is out of respect for God, as I understand God, and Jesus the Christ, who I know. I know I will one day experience the ultimate love and find meaning and value to the challenging experiences that I am having here on Earth, for I know God is always with me no matter if I feel like I am failing or when I think my will overrides His – because my will never can. So yes, I know that God is within, even when I make mistakes. Thank you for clearing up things for me tonight. I feel much more confident in my journey within this path, however long; I will remain on this path. Thank you. (Ham: Thank you. Understood.)

ONCLIVAN: I would just like to make a short comment and ask a question? Just a quick comment on what Roland had brought up: I read the book Birth of a Revelation, also; this book is regarding the Urantia Book's validity. I think that as each person reads through the Urantia Book they need to make certain suppositions and come to an understanding on how to decide on their own of how the revelations really came about. I looked at it more in the light that the revelatory words were quite accurate as they came out from the 'unconscious person,' and that maybe they came during a long period of maybe twenty or thirty years. I think they were 'learning experiences' just as we are experiencing, in coming to understand the messages that were being given – rather than the messages being changed after – and that is kind of my view on it, just so we get both sides in there. (Editor's note: The balance of Onclivan's question is very long; the following is greatly paraphrased by the editor): Having grown up in the LDS (Mormon) faith, and doing much missionary work advocating that belief system wholeheartedly, but then becoming disillusioned as to that faith's validity. Then joining the 'Science of Personology' belief – which is the reading of characteristics from the face, personality, the distance from the eyes indicating high tolerance or low tolerance, and things like that, and having written books about this belief, but again becoming disillusioned. Onclivan then embraced the Urantia Book and has been a firm believer since. And now, with the teachings from Ham, he wonders if he will become disillusioned again, and wants more proof of Ham's validity – and, validity that this whole Teaching Mission experience is in reality a part of Michael's directives and not some emanation perhaps from Rebecca's gifted mind. Likewise, with the other transmission receivers in other Mission groups. In some of the other Teaching Mission groups there is some confusion, with 'suspicious' claims and transmitted messages, which is very concerning. Onclivan's question finishes with: "We're to have faith in things, yes, but they have got to have a factual basis; and we know that people can have faith in wrong things as well, as many of us have had in our lives before, in different belief systems. Why should we believe this? Maybe you could address that?"

HAM: There are many paths. This particular path is correct for some and incorrect for others at this time. Not everyone is capable or suited to receive this Mission-calling. This is not to be judgmental or seeking to change anyone, no, only the honest recognition on my part of what is realistic, from our perspective. I do not demand belief in my teachings, nor do I demand the belief in Abraham's, nor even in Michael's. It is not for me to say what you should believe. I am a Teacher. I teach of the gospel laid down before me. I am commissioned to help the mortal understanding of Father and Michael's truths, and to prepare the way for Him and for His future Sons. This I am doing. Whether it is accepted by one or ten-million at this time, matters not – for these teachings will prevail in the end. Father Michael's return will, again, be rejected by many. Future generations will grow to accept what this present generation cannot. Is this helping?

ONCLIVAN: I understand what you are stating as your mission purpose. It still doesn't answer what is the basis that we can know that this is really true, as opposed to other people who believe other belief systems, and also believe that they may be getting accurate revelations in other groups. Your messages are very impressive, yes. I have to admit that every week when I come here, even with all my doubts, I am quite surprised that if it was just Rebecca speaking that she would be able to speak with such wisdom. This is the thing that has kept me coming, I suppose. Although she might be a lot more intelligent than maybe we are thinking, maybe even a real genius – I have had some doubts about that a little bit now. (Editor's note: The following is a paraphrase again, for brevity.): Onclivan suggests that perhaps new transmission receivers wait until they can clearly 'receive' the transmitted words distinctively and clearly, as Rebecca does, before publishing their Teachers transmissions; and, that there should be some vetting of the transmission receivers to verify their competence. Onclivan again asks for proof of some kind which could verify that this whole experience is from Michael and not from some deceptive spirit such as Calagastia or some of the rebel midwayers. He suggests that nefarious spirits could be trying to produce a ruse to draw people away 'from' the Urantia Book – but, concludes that 'time will tell' whether this whole Teaching Mission experience is real, or nefarious.

HAM: You have stated well the prevailing attitudes and understandings of many. And you are correct that these things will become clear in time.

Rebecca is becoming tired and the transmission is becoming unclear from our lengthy discussion. However, I wish to thank you, personally, for your forthrightness and your generous spirit in coming to my lessons, and your kind words concerning them. For this evening, I must now say farewell, and I thank you all for your gracious questions. More will be answered next week. Farewell.

Nothing Divine is Truly Owned Until it is Shared | Putting Father, First | More on Crystals

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. This evening's lesson is concerning helpfulness in daily interaction. It becomes one to always show helpfulness in God's love; when you are going about your daily business it is good to be ever watchful for those incidents or times when you can show forth your integrity by being helpful to another person.

Easy it is to ignore the unspoken pleas of others around you. Easy it is to become so self-involved in your own tasks/projects that you deem them more important than other's projects. And as such, you deem your time to be more valuable than other's time such that it is looked on as 'wasted time' to help those in need around you – and then does one resent that 'time lost' when it could have been put towards your own work. This mindset, this attitude, is easily unconsciously building and is not the Christ-like manner.

Father Michael is always ready to hear the pleas of even the most small and insignificant concerns of His many many children. Ever is He willing to help guide his children to Himself, and to Father. Often this guidance evolves through the toil of this world, for many are led to a God-like understanding by their long hard days. Understanding Christ's humility, and His life's mission, is central in understanding Father's loving nature. He who is so great was yet so willing to be subject to the world as it is.

In your daily lives, many times you are given opportunity to show forth Father's nature which you have been striving to own, yourself. Nothing divine is truly owned until it is shared. You are all required to undergo these many many trials and tests of life wherein you are given the opportunity to show the higher way of love to one who may or may not be spiritually as aware as you are. Have faith that no work, no tasks, go without their rewards, whether this reward is material or not.

When you are able to help another in need, in whatever capacity this may be, you are sharing our new-found Godliness; and therefore, we are making this Godliness our own. When the opposite may be true – when you are required to do work which is unsatisfying, know that there is also a lesson in it for you. If you can find the satisfaction from knowing Father's will and Michael's path, you will find true satisfaction in the most menial of work. Yes, those who are having to do work in areas which is looked upon as menial can find true comfort in sharing Michael's path.

Many tasks would be considered as 'menial work' in this day of never-ending paperwork, yes. The Savior worked at many tasks in His lifetime – He worked with His hands, worked at crafts, worked with animals, worked with His family and with children; the Savior found inner satisfaction in these tasks. Even knowing He was being deprived of an advanced worldly education, or wealth, or fame, He held fast to Father, and tread His path with Father beside Him.

My friends, you can tread your path with Michael beside you. He is forever the comfort of the ages. His life is the great example of one who triumphed over all circumstances – and did so, humbly, walking with God. Yes, the Master always took great delight in helping those around Him; His greatest joy was in doing little helpful tasks for others – not to be detrimental of His own work, but He always took a little time in order to show forth human assistance through Him.

When you look at your lives from an advanced perspective (higher consciousness level) you can see that your little joys in life have come through similar channels where you stopped to aid someone doing some little thing. When you think about doing this (making it a conscious effort) it multiplies, and your life becomes enriched by the multitude of small joys.

I say this to you tonight: Do not become so self-important that you forget your reason for living. Remember who it is who lives within you. Remember who it is who walks beside you. Show forth His great love in life. Give all you can! And in giving, grow toward Father and receive His being. This is the great purpose in living life.

What purpose is there in your toil, in your worry, in your little bookkeeping, if your life comes down to only existing? On that level, surely you have missed much that has passed by you. Open your eyes to your surroundings. Welcome those who come near you. Help those who need help, and find your greatest satisfaction therein. Are there questions at this time?

CALVIN: Teacher Ham, you talked about life's testing and so on. I have been reflecting on that for a while. I don't see where Father would test us like, for instance, how the world perceives the testing of Abraham to sacrifice Isaac wherein (in the biblical version) God is essentially saying: "I want to see if you are spiritually strong enough, go sacrifice your son." And then when Isaac is on the altar and ready to be sacrificed, then God supposedly says, "Oh I didn't mean it, I just wanted to test you." I don't perceive our Father as being that way with us. In what ways then, are we tested?

HAM: The lesson of the story of Abraham and Isaac is deep and abiding, even though the outward symbology, or story, is flawed (in error) showing a God with a capricious nature, erroneously. However, God does require everything. He requires your complete and total dedication, even over the flesh. Not everyone could be tested this greatly in your lifetime, but His demand for totality of commitment extends throughout the morontia existence also. So even though Abraham's son is spared, his commitment is tried/tested. In most life situations there is not the outward testing like the Abraham story; rather, does Father ever test your commitment in more subtle ways. For example: willingness to serve under circumstances which are less than appealing - your willingness is perhaps tested in the face of unknown factors. Allow me to clarify by an example: The rich man who came to Jesus asking, "Lord, what must I do to be saved"? The Master answered that he must "sell his wealth, possessions, and distribute them among the poor" - testing his commitment. If there is something which stands in the way between you and God, must we overcome this obstacle? Yes, we must! so that the outward attachments are unimportant compared to the inner attachment to God, which is most important. Each person's testing comes in as many varied ways as there are people, for humankind tends to attach onto false securities, thinking them to be real. Like this man with his fortune, he chose the path of seeming security (what the world would deem important) and only much later did he realize his error. Yes. Testing and encouragement are two sides of God's dealings with humankind. Is this helping your understanding, or do you have a more specific question?

CALVIN: That's helping very much. What I perceive you are saying is that Father is not manipulating or 'checking us out,' but He is actually placing responsibility for us, for our growth and own good; and as we are enlightened and responsive to that responsibility, we are tested - if we will act upon it or shirk that duty or responsibility. (Ham: Correct.)

CALVIN: One clarification question though: Is the Scripture accurate where it says: "If a man cannot hate his father, mother, son or daughter for my sake, he is not fit to be my disciple?" [Luke 14:26.] I know that doesn't mean that we should actually hate our brother and sister, and sons or daughters, but I think what you just said, that we are to love God more than the outward attachments - even over our own family.

HAM: Where there is God/love, is there ever hatred, really? I say no! Yes there can be confusion, doubts, troubles – and yes, even hurts, annoyances, jealousy, and envy. Many many things can exist in the human psyche alongside God-knowingness. But where God's spirit is truly flowing, then there is no more hatred, for this feeling cannot exist/co-exist with God's love. Your Scripture quoted is misleading, in a way, but when understood by spiritual intent, it is correct.

HONORAY: Father Ham, a couple weeks ago you mentioned that you would tell us something about the healing part of crystals. Could you tell us something about that this evening?

HAM: Yes, I can elaborate a little further. Each crystal has a vibration frequency which it magnifies from the vibrational frequencies of the many energies surrounding us. Each crystals' makeup is such that it will tune to a slightly different frequency – not only from material to material, but also with the size and shape of the crystal involved. Quartz crystals have a tendency to evoke or transmit and amplify frequencies which are spiritually aiding in the psychological aspect of healing. Mental calmness is greatly beneficial in aiding the body's natural healing abilities. And when crystals are employed for healing, the mind is calmed and the energies necessary can be directed to the ailing area of need with the aid of the body's own system, cleansing system. No disease is instantly made to disappear, but rather, is the body's healing and cleansing system activated around the diseased area. This healing is gradual but very effective, and the body tends to maintain its healthful equilibrium longer. Herbs are natural drugs, and sometimes these are also beneficial to the healing process by stimulating cells which produce certain chemicals, which in turn affect other cells and can affect their growth or production.

In our lesson-time is much ground covered this evening, and I am grateful for your persistence in spiritual growth. I am not going to take another question at this time for I am aware that Rebecca may soon begin losing good contact, and I wish to keep errors to a minimum at this time – especially concerning healing questions. I look forward to our next meeting and your questions will be further addressed then. I am sorry to cut short our meeting time. Farewell.

Our General Health and How Spirit Guidance Can Improve It

Back

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Our lesson this evening is concerning health. There are other ways of thinking about bodily health other than through material means. You are all in awareness of this understanding, for in spiritual 'heights' there is 'depth' also – meaning that when spiritually-advancing mortals encounter illness as an obstacle to further spiritual attainment, this obstacle can be removed in and through spiritual light. There, in this morontial existence, illness is practically non-existent and easily remedied in the early stages.

Disease, which is caused by micro-organisms existing on this planet, is especially difficult to remove from the body, for organic life here is all very similar and bodily defenses are imperfect. The similarity between the parasite and host make it difficult for the host body (human body) to readily distinguish and remove invader cells. As such, our immune system is very specialized toward certain common bacterial and viral invaders which is developed over the childhood lifetime; and when a foreign strain is introduced, the immune system is unprepared.

When populations are isolated and free from inter-communication or travel between other populations, they develop fairly disease-proof systems. However, when there evolves contact with foreign populations (which have developed immunity toward different viruses and bacteria) then are there carriers that cross over; and the populations exchange these bacterial viruses which can have a devastating effect on some.

At present day Urantia, there are many, many different people from all over the world mingling together so that your immune systems are greatly overly taxed by having to defend so many different strains. This makes it easier to develop an illness and not have immediate immunity response.

Spiritually, you (as a whole) are all very advanced in comparison to past generations; but this does not immune you from these common illnesses and diseases. Yes, spiritual progress does make for a more efficient bodily functioning so that health results in your general well-being.

But you can also help your health by using methods to reduce your stress levels – methods as I have elaborated upon in the recent past such as: meditation, helpful attitudes, and a worry-free outlook – those things which comes from giving over responsibilities to God and freeing yourself from needlessly worrying over things which you have no control over, but which the Supreme has complete control over.

Yes, children, trust is a prerequisite to living 'stress free.' The Master had many serious stresses placed upon Him, yes. Yet He chose to gain wisdom and replenish energy by helpful solitude and meditation. He continually sought for higher guidance and wisdom – which, when found, removes those worries from your consciousness.

Difficult it is to learn, yes, but by the daily practice of meditation you can advance your outlook in understanding. And with this advanced outlook you can increase your trust, yes, for in trusting you will receive much unerring guidance and even healing. This meditation/stillness practice will develop your trust which will decrease your stress and you will blossom as a flower upon the earth. Allowing God to help in your daily decisions will greatly increase the effectiveness with which you can cope with life. He awaits, yes! He is always near – ready to extend His help; but you must think to seek this help first, in order to receive it.

Remember to also enjoy a balanced diet, which for each person can be different in optimization. In general, when you eat properly and drink enough fluids your body will be able to extract the nutrients it requires, and expel the contaminants or extra nutrients it does not require. Maintain balance and regularity in your daily dietary existence, and this will also aid in your general health. These words are common sense for you, yes. If you heed your inner guidance and follow this sound advice you will noticeably improve your general health.

Spiritual healing works within the parameters which are existent. One cannot change the chemical structures nor the personal form which has been given each personality. You are all responsible for these great bodily temples and should wisely and judiciously maintain them to the optimum best of your wisdom.

This is the lesson for this evening, much of which I have explained before, yes; and yet, when it is seen to be wise we reiterate certain lessons for your understanding. This is not to be confused with an authoritative directive, no! but rather should be heard as advice and not prescription. I will receive questions.

RUNDEL: Father Ham, my question is about the Epstein-Barr, and I don't know if you have heard of that. What they have explained to me is that it is a virus that creates immune deficiency and chronic fatigue. Is there anything or any information that you could give me on this that could help?

HAM: Yes. This syndrome is a result of stresses which tax the immune system in general, much like the aforesaid stress phenomenon. Inner stress can have results that simulate infections also, which make the body think to fight infection which is not really there. The system will be built up again in time, however, and you will eventually regain your stamina. Have faith that your Lord is helping you. When you feel exhausted, rest. When you feel ready, work. You will eventually become more and more able to sustain activities which you enjoy. Allow yourself healing time and don't over-extend. Is this advice consistent with your understanding?

RUNDEL: Yes, it is. Would this also correct the thyroid problem too?

HAM: Different situation is this. Yes, all of the body's glands and lymph system work together to maintain optimum chemical balance. The thyroid gland can, when mal-operating, cause severe chemical imbalances which are serious. Continue taking medication for this symptom, for you would harm yourself unduly by seeking to progress too quickly.

RUNDEL: Thank you, Ham. I also want to thank you for the opportunity to have the healing. I used to not be able to get out of bed for more than an hour and now I am functioning pretty well through the day. I know that this is from the healings because I have seen many doctors about it. So I want to thank you for that opportunity to be healed and I really appreciate it.

HAM: Thank not me, but rather, thank Father.

JAMES: Teacher, you mentioned that a well-balanced diet might be different for different people. How can we determine what is the best diet for us individually?

HAM: This is an ever-changing need for each person. Over time one may vary and change their diet by noticing inner changes, discomforts, regarding certain foods. Each person can optimize their diet by really listening to their body and noticing differences in energy (or energies) which may contribute to mood changes. These inner changes are resultant from chemical metabolism. They affect other chemical balances internally, and these can affect mood, outlook, and disposition. When you learn to watch for these changes and you understand their associations with different foods, you can fine-tune your diet to enable you to maintain a fairly balanced mood disposition. Is this helping?

JAMES: Yes, very much so. I am going to have a hard time giving up chocolate.
[laughter.]

NORWOOD: Father Ham, we eat a lot of processed foods; and our air, especially at this time of the year, is full of harmful products floating around. Is there something that we can eat that would help us clear some of these harmful and negative poisons out of our systems to help us be a more healthy people?

HAM: Yes. Your health is adversely affected by pollutants, excessive chemical additives, and contaminants in water and air. You in this age, are surrounded by chemical pollutants which can adversely affect your health. Is there any simple solution? No! However, by generally improving your health your body is able to more effectively cleanse itself; and this will eventually come to a stasis level where you are no longer adversely affected by this continuous onslaught of contaminants – but, you are expending energy in maintaining this stasis. Each person is different in their tolerance levels and in their sensitivity levels. When you progress spiritually you become more sensitive to these chemicals and are aware of their adverse effects more readily. Everyone is constantly exposed; and this – short of a complete societal-made re-arrangement – cannot be changed for now. Keep your health-level good, as well as your stress level, and you can effectively cope with this constant cleansing which must occur. There is no easy solution for this. That is all.

RISDON: Father Ham, I have been taking a nutritional product for about a year and a half now that has really helped me a great deal – not only with my energy, but it has also seemed to balance my body quite well. Can you comment on this particular product, or other like-products, which are a help with our diets, please.

HAM: Yes. There are, in general, many dietary supplements which are beneficial for you. Your particular body type is well suited to the regimen you have chosen. Many people do not require extra nutrition if given a well-balanced diet, but usually, a well-balanced diet is lacking in modern peoples. Therefore, if you feel comfortable using dietary supplements this is heartily recommended. Use your own inner guidance and judgment concerning these products. One further question?

ONCLIVAN: I just had a question on a prevalent belief, especially over in the Orient, about the cleansing of the blood through 'giving blood,' like donating blood maybe once a month or every couple months, at least for males. They believe that this helps to clean the blood supply out and reproduce new blood cells and get the contaminants out. This isn't necessary for females, but for males (according to them). Would you comment on that? Is it really true, and could this be helpful or not?

HAM: All the blood system is constantly cleansed through the bodily organ of the liver. When the liver is functioning properly there is no need for artificial cleansing. No, this belief is inaccurate. When we speak of health issues it is important to remember for each person to use their own best guidance, for this highest Source is your best healer, your best guidance towards better health. Doctors and healers of various kinds can use experience concerning a particular illness, but they have not your experience in your body. You can easily use your own Thought Adjuster's guidance in these matters. You will know yourselves how best to deal with these illnesses, whether using conventional medicine, spiritual healings, or combinations of the two. Yes, you understand your own body, best; and the Fragment of the Eternal Father who dwells this tabernacle with you is best able to give guidance concerning its health.

I must close this meeting for now. I thank you all for coming and bless you with our Father's love. Until next week, farewell

Last Woods Cross Group Meeting With Ham as Group Instructor

Greetings. I am HAM. I am your Teacher. Our lesson this evening will entail an extraordinary dimension in our teaching for it is requiring of each person an effort at stillness. In order to effectively communicate our lesson this evening, the mortal mind is required in openness and stillness to receive an immediate presentation, which is also highly individual.

I, in times past, attempted a mindal transmission which portrayed an essence of myself. This evening I wish, in essence, to portray, to give essential understanding of our beingness. That is, I and Abraham. We are ready to begin transmission. We will begin now.

[There was a brief pause for several minutes during which time we entered into the stillness. Some people received visualizations; other people received headaches like something was being implanted in our minds. The tape recorder was turned off during this time.]

HAM: It is complete and I wish to add, this is not so much concerning imagery as much as it is concerning spiritual essence. I am truly heartened in recent weeks when observing you, my pupils/students. Greatly have you fought your inner struggles and have mostly come into greater understandings for having come through much trials.

Trials await you all in the near future, yes, for I will be unable to continue our weekly meetings for a time. This time is for you all to gain an increasing awareness of your own inner spiritual development. I have been your Teacher and am always your friend. However, my role is changing into one of caretaker and provider of comfort for those who follow. Amster will continue in her role as coordinator.

This mission is proceeding on schedule. The time for you all--this digestion time--may be a temporary setback or trial in your progression, for you have grown used to having a regular regime of spiritual sustenance. You must learn to feed yourselves. You must learn that you all have the ability to find communication from the highest source – the Father Himself. ‘His will be done,’ will become your watchword, your purpose. You will find purpose in finding God's will.

When you have reached this plateau of understanding what His will is, then can you truly begin your missions. I would prefer that you continue in your regular meetings besides this one. I ask that you continue in the study and learning of my previous lessons, and that you will persevere with each other in your understandings and in your faith, for it may seem hard to be alone in this interim. Continue your warm friendships. Continue your steady climb.

I have been an aide in your progress only. If I have truly helped you, I am eternally, humbly, grateful to our Father. My mission now is leading me elsewhere. You all will understand why, in time. I am saddened to be here tonight for the final time, for now. And I will gladly converse with each as time permits. My heartfelt love and earnest appreciation of each of you, remains eternal. Have you question for me this evening?

JOSHUA: Father Ham, I am dumbfounded and heartbroken. Will you again be our Teacher at some time in the future?

HAM: Be of good cheer, Joshua, for our real work is only beginning. Have no worries. I will always be available to all of you. I am here remaining on this world until our Mission is complete. This phase is ending, but a new phase is just beginning.

JOSHUA: I really don't know what to tell the other groups around the nation who look forward to receiving tapes and transcripts of your meetings. Will they also be losing their Teachers? or will they continue on for a while?

HAM: You are not losing anything, really. All will continue. New teaching groups will be started. Each one will progress as the Teacher sees fit. When you are all ready (this group), then your new phase will begin also. Our mission remains the same. Only my personal teaching will be ending at this time.

RACHEL: I, too, feel heartbroken. I also feel like one of your lost sheep.

HAM: Rachel, you have been our most steadfast and courageous pupil. This quality is part of you and shall remain a beacon of light for those who seek enlightenment. You are also only beginning your truly great mission calling. Have no fears at this time. All is well.

RACHEL: Thank you, Father Ham, and you know my love goes with you. This evening we have two guests with us that you have already met. One is Robert O. from Santa Rosa, California. He has been studying the Urantia Book for twenty years. The other one is Martin Q. and he also has been studying for twenty years. We want to thank them for coming to our group, and we tell them it's wonderful to have them here with us.

HAM: Yes. Your coming at this time was crucial to your bringing forward this work to your colleagues. Some life circumstances are sometimes fortuitous in this manner.

Our understanding is oneness with you both in this great and forward-marching work. Life on Urantia is tardy at coming into the new times which we endeavor to enter now. Some have entered early; some will enter later. The time for all to enter, is now. The real beginning of this great work, which foresees the coming of Michael to Urantia, is beginning to take firm hold all over this land. His Teaching Mission, so humbly begun, is now walking full stride and this is altogether due to the great work accomplished in this room by these people. Our vision is forward. You are all not left behind, no. Rather will you be elevated in your callings, for surely you have been awaiting this time, this time of beginning. That is all.

CALVIN: Teacher Ham, I want to express my gratitude for the last two years of your teachings. It has been most dramatic in changes of outlook and direction for me. I think we each could all say that. As I understand what Van El (a Secondary Midwayer) has asked us to do, Amster will play a role in helping to coordinate that. Would you have any changes or additions to what we had discussed prior to the meeting? Maybe our meetings with Van El even on a weekly basis instead of a twice-a-month meeting schedule? I'd be open for any clarification you might have for us.

HAM: At this time a weekly schedule may feel more secure for you so that you come together in brotherhood and fellowship more often. This would be my recommendation.

CALVIN: I thank you. I think what you are telling us in your disclosure tonight is that we use this time to increase our efforts in coming into the stillness, meditation, and reaching and understanding the will of the Father. And, to improve with our personal Teachers – that we come into more of a ‘morontial understanding.’ I hear you are suggesting that we continue in our weekly Mission meetings in discussion and review of your two-years of lessons.

HAM: Correct. This will be a time-period in which you will be awaiting your clear purposeful mission-callings. Yes.

ROINDA: Ham, I just wanted to express my appreciation for your love and support. I feel this is a great thing about to happen. I don't feel the anxiety that some may be feeling. It also makes me feel a little more committed to doing my personal transmissions, and I thank you for that.

HAM: You have correctly perceived this period of time. You are coming to a very clear point in your own transmission abilities. You have a very well-developed sense of your own self – and therefore, are clearly able to receive transmissions from your Teacher. You have the understanding of separation between your own thinking, and that of your Teacher's. And, I would wish for all to come to that point of awareness where you are firm in yourselves enough to trust another's supernal presence in your mind circuit. This circuit, which transmits messages through the mind, is something which develops in strength and clarity, by 'practice.' In the early stages of transmission-receiving, this circuit is not well differentiated in the mindal understanding so that it is easily contaminated by the mind of the receiver. When you have practiced for long periods in your writings, or verbal transmissions, then this clarity is strengthened; for this pathway is greatly strengthened and differentiated from the surrounding mental energy circuits.

It would be good for all of you to practice your transmission receiving at least two to three times a week, if possible, in order to strengthen this communication channel. You are correct that we are embarking now on an even greater mission, together. For almost two years you have been gathered together in order to receive my teachings. These teachings have prepared you for your understanding of what is to come. Your own individual roles will then come into focus and you will be greatly strengthened by the understanding which you have received through these gatherings. Is this helping? (Roinda: Yes. Thank you.)

WILLEENA: Father Ham, I simply want to share, and I assume everyone feels this, but at a time like this there are dualities occurring – there is the part of me that feels like the child that has adored holding your hand, and learning at your knee; and, I see that that time is passing. I cherish the preciousness of that gift. You have truly empowered us in our journey. The young woman, the power that is emerging in me and each of us, is excited because, as Roinda said, it is a ‘growing-up’ time; it’s growing into more of self and that communication, that commitment, that dedication, to self-reliance and to the Father's will. So yes, it is a joyous occasion as well as a sad and heartfelt occasion. For myself, I simply want to say that I have dearly loved knowing you, feeling you, and experiencing this weekly feeding of our souls. And I thank you – from all of me, for everything that you have taught which has opened the doors for us. I had one question, and I suppose it’s appropriate: I had wanted to ask where ‘our will’ comes from; if it was in connection with our mind? or our personalities? or our souls? or our hearts? Or, from the Father within us. In answering that, maybe we can gain a little more strength in bringing our will to this next new phase. I love you, Ham.

HAM: Yes. You have correctly chosen your question, for this is indeed, the core of the essence of existence – it is the personal ‘will.’ Will is inseparable from personality. It is the personality which chooses. It is the personality which exercises will-choosing. Your most inner and most precious core is your personality. All else is changing – character growth, soul growth, individual learning in the mind – but personality is what survives. Personality is a given, created by Father; and will is His gift, also. Personality and will, are one. Is this answering?

WILLEENA: Yes. It’s helping to clarify. So in understanding then: Father's will for me is Father's gift of my being. Is that correct? I'll specify. Each individual aspect of us as personality is Father's unique gift of our individuality; and so therefore, Father's will for each of us is to fully be the core of ourselves, which is our will, our personality?

HAM: Correct. Father's will is for each of His many many children to find themselves in Him; for to find that oneness, that inseparability of wills, is to find eternal life. When the individual personality/will is choosing whom to serve, she should choose Father's will. When you continually choose His will, where there is a choice, then you gradually become Him. You see, you now are divided, as it were, created with potential. And having the divine Source within, you have God's personal spiritual presence for your own personal spiritual experience. Choosing God's will, reinforces your being. Choosing God's will, gratifies and validates your being. Choosing God's will, actualizes your being. Choosing God's will is the highest privilege known in the universe, yes, for when you and He are ‘one,’ there is confirmation of all that you are, and all that is, at once. This new and supreme 'being' is actually understandingly a part of 'the Supreme Being' wherein you come fully into existence. This is where what was partial, is now whole. What was potential, is now complete, actual. All of life's purpose is in drawing us into this new emerging being. These concepts are far from your true abilities to completely understand at present; and, are far from Rebecca's ability to completely and accurately receive such transmission of this new complete self-realization – for it is far from you, still, to come into this oneness-perception. Suffice it then to say that you will see these realities through your newly given eyes when you are ready to; and then, all will be made new for you. [Willeena: Thank you, Ham. I look forward to actually meeting you, personally, in time.)

NORWOOD: Father Ham, I would like to say to you this evening that you have given me the best eight months I have ever experienced, spiritually. I feel like I have grown in this past eight months to understand everything that you just talked about the last hour. I love you. I will miss you. I am looking forward to the new challenge. Thank you.

HAM: Norwood, my son, all is well in your spiritual house. You have plainly seen truth and have acted accordingly. You have a steady mind and an earnest heart which will be your greatest assets. I look forward to seeing your progress in the future.

ROLAND: Teacher and my brother, Ham, I feel very grateful also that I have had these eighteen months of mind-to-mind experience with you. And, I'd like to express my willingness and my desire to serve in this Correcting Time mission, to continue to do so. I sense a newness about the direction of my life, and also the life of the group, which energizes me. I wish to play any part that might be of service, and I will to do the Father's will. One area of service that I can think of is perhaps such as with the two individuals that may be coming to Utah to receive private communications; I was wondering what we should do about those. My instinct is that if Amster, as you indicated, would continue to be the coordinator and Teacher, who has given many private meetings, through me. I was just wondering if that is the direction we should go? or should we cancel these meetings.

HAM: Amster is fully qualified to give these meetings. Have no concern over this. You have been a truly-seeking and truly-receiving son of Urantia; for sincerely have you sought after God, and this sincerity is your greatest strength, Roland.

JOHN: I wanted to say something profound or eloquent, but I think Willeena already did that, so I would just really like to express my gratitude to you tonight. It's been great to be one of your students.

HAM: John, you are coming into a new life in very many ways. You are growing into your shoes, for you have been foreseen to carry a great light into the world and you will need these shoes for so much walking. [laughter.]

DAVID: Father Ham, I too, would like to express my love and gratitude to you for helping me to get to where I can trust myself to the point where I am willing and able to go out on my own now with the help of my internal guidance. I just want to thank you, again.

HAM: You are truly a welcoming committee unto yourself. You have welcomed many who have sought entrance into this mission, and will indeed, welcome many many more. You are acutely aware of other's intentions, even when these intentions are hidden. You have been a great asset and will continue as such for your long life.

KARL (ARDEN): Teacher Ham, I'd like to say that you have a tremendous personality and it has been my great privilege to also be one of your students. I would like to thank Rebecca for her role in receiving your fabulous messages to us. And I pledge myself to continue the work that we have been doing the last twenty years since I discovered the Urantia Book. So I will miss you, and you know where to find me.

HAM: Arden, yes, I am aware of your sincerity, your willingness, and your sincere inner drive – or rather, your heart, which has been pulling you up a ladder for many years. You have followed in faith, your sincere inner callings, and have correctly perceived your own mission for years. Arden, you are a great son of this day and time, and you are always my pupil. Indeed, will I be watching you. Your mission is truly beginning now.

JAMES: Teacher, thank you for those beautiful words for my uncle. I too, would like to thank you for over a year and a half of challenge, uncertainty, growth, and true excitement. You have indeed, given us all a great gift and have touched our lives very positively. I want you to know that I think that you are a brilliant and great Teacher. I love you and will continue to love you. And regardless of what the future brings, I will never forget you. I will pray for your spiritual growth and success.

HAM: Thank you, James, for your kindness. You have always been my bright and willing, noble pupil, for you have surely trodden the sure but rocky road of spiritual understanding with me. You, of all of my pupils, have shown your sincerity with an effort to learn and grow in your understanding and spiritual awareness. If I could foresee your future world, you are very like Andrew of the apostles. You have been helpful in so very many ways, which has greatly helped many others while not taking credit yourself. You have shown others the path through their difficulties by your own hard experience. You are truly an inspiration to all for your quiet and unerringly helpful manner. Truly you are a great and wise soul. May your wisdom increase through the years and your faith make it so.

VANTEL: Teacher Ham, I wish to thank you very much for the opportunity to be here tonight. And thank you, from the bottom of my heart, for a year of what I know is your constant leadings to bring me much closer to this Mission. I know I've not been the best kind of student, and I appreciate the Teachers patience with me. I also want to thank you for the companionship that my friend and I have had in our journey each week in coming up here. We have felt the Teachers and their presence and have been enlivened by this; we are constantly marveled by it and you are held in great joy. We appreciate being welcomed so kindly into Ogden and we appreciate our meeting with you. I am thrilled to take this back to our group in California. Thank you.

HAM: Yes. You shall, in future, become an enormous benefit for those seeking Teacher-guidance. You are indeed chosen in this work and are welcomed with much heartfelt happiness. Thank you.

JEREMIAH: Father Ham, I also would like to express my gratitude, and I thank you for being our Teacher. I would say that in my life I have had many many teachers, and I say, you are the best. I am pleased to hear that we are ending one phase and going into a new phase. I look at that as a 'graduation,' and I thank you for bringing us to this level. I understand we are supposed to then get in touch with our Thought Adjusters, spiritually, and our own private Teachers, in the period upcoming. I look forward to Prince Machiventa in his leading us, personally. Of all the celestial beings that we have met over the last few years, you are the first that I personally got to know, and in that sense, there will always be a special place in my heart for you. I look forward into the future to serving and working with you on further missions for Michael's plans; and as well, those on high. And if you are familiar with the local river here, we can honestly say we have been together since the Jordan. My love goes with you. [laughter.] [Editor's note: There is a 'Jordan River' that runs through Woods Cross and is near where these meetings were held. It connects from the fresh-water Utah Lake to the Great Salt Lake - much the same as Israel's Jordan River that connects the fresh-water Galilee to the salty Dead Sea.]

HAM: Correctly and humorously put. Jeremiah, you are indeed, one of the first who responded to this calling, and you are counted among the first in the records. You are indeed, a willing and joyous person. I have been truly privileged to know you, to come to understand your way of understanding, and to be privileged to be your guide for this short time. You are loved by me, yes, and by many others. You are indeed our precious son who will ever remain faithful and courageous in this Mission. Our deep appreciation for your help and your courage. Thank you, Jeremiah.

JASON: Well, Teacher Ham, again you and the supernal staff have thrown me for a surprise, a complete surprise. I have tried many times to tune into your broadcasts of next events; and I admit that I have surely limited myself through my fears of what is going to happen next. So I guess you guys tuned me out, from my doing that. Three years ago I prayed for a spiritual event and I had no idea that this would be the event that would change my mind and my actions - but it has, it has changed me. I am not 'out of the woods' by no means; I still have a lot of frayed ends that keep breaking off. I hope that I can continue to serve you and Abraham the way that you would like. What I remember most is that particular occasion when you came and visited Rebecca and me. And of that day I was a complete stubborn human being; I had resistance in my heart and skepticism in my mind, and was just waiting to catch you in some form of a mistake. That day you approached me in a whole different fashion; and I knew then, that the supernal staff that I was dealing with was far beyond any expectation that I could put on them. Teacher, you've helped me come so far. I have dawned a view that couldn't have even been started without your assisting me. I hope that we are all ready for this next stand, and I hope that I can be a tool to help others in this new phase. I appreciate all your lessons. Thank you.

HAM: Jason, my son, you are chosen in deed and, in fact. You are going through a difficult transition time. Remember that, as in childbirth, there is difficulty in labor, there is trauma and pain and turmoil - yet in the end, there is new life. Take this understanding into your heart. Understand that you are coming into a new existence and that your rebirth into this newness is only a temporary condition. Look ahead with gladness and self-assurance that you can overcome any obstacle which is in need to be overcome. Do not persist in climbing mountains when you can take the road around. Often when we multiply our difficulties needlessly, this can cause much turmoil, pain, sorrow, and suffering. Take each obstacle one at the time and leave the others aside. Do not try to take on overly serious obstacles when it is not at this time necessary. Live your life in the joy and peace of the Lord for He is ever with you, pouring His spiritual blessings upon you. That is all.

JASON: Thank you, Ham. I am a great one at piling up all the pans in front of me and trying to knock them over with my head. I guess I should change my ways on that. I should let my hair grow out and quit seeking after the worldly things again and just eat beans. That's about all I can think of to say here tonight. [laughter.] As long as we are in a humorous state, I want to mention that I love good humor. I know that humor is the essence of safety, for it's the zone of safety. I love you, Teacher Ham. I hope to be with you again, and I know I will be, someday.

NOLUS: Teacher Ham, I just want to thank you for the association and the joy that has come into my life since I have known you and since I have been able to sit at your feet and partake of your lessons. And, I appreciate really getting to know the essence of your being. I also appreciate your being with Jeremiah and I as we have traveled through various areas to meet other people in the other groups. It was a lovely privilege to find you, wherever we were, at our side; I just wanted to say I am greatly appreciative for that. I really very much wish to thank you for everything that you've given to me in my life. Lastly, I wonder if the occurrence I had in my sleep the other night when I was awakened, was real; maybe it is a symbol of some of the things that are to begin shortly in our lives?

HAM: Yes. Oftentimes in sleep, the forces of spiritual guidance are working. You must understand that your visions are 'for yourself;' they are highly personal and are not meant for sharing with a group. Your desires for this, your noble cause, is commendable, for your heart is known. Your true happiness and fulfillment are truly prayed for by me. And yes, the privilege of working with you has been mine. I am truly grateful to you and Jeremiah for your much, very helpful, efforts. That is all.

HONORAY: Father Ham, I would be very ungrateful tonight if I didn't express my love and appreciation to you for what you have done and, how you have changed my life through your lessons. And most of all I appreciate your many visits to my home and the help and the love that you have shown me. I feel saddened, in one way, to get the news tonight, like all of us are. It was a little hard to digest there for a while, but I am sure we all wish you success in where you are going now. I know that we will still develop here in our class and do what you have taught us. I just want to tell you how much I love you and appreciate you. Thank you.

HAM: Thank you, my daughter, Honoray. You have shown such great and wonderful spiritual light for so very many people. Our debt is to you. You are indeed, a great and noble spirit who has, and shall continue to be a great inspiration for me. Thank you.

MESNEUR: Ham, I want to thank you so much for your teachings. As I was coming here this evening, I was telling Nolus that we have Teachers to help us become one with the Father, and that that is why we have Teachers. You confirmed that for me this evening and I want to thank you so much for adding to my knowledge that I have of that. I also understand, my Father has made it known to me that to be thankful and grateful is, in a way, having a real knowing of who we are. And, so loving ourselves and having love for one another, is very important. I want to thank everyone in this group that has added to my life and given me joy. These meetings have added to my joy in my life. I feel very much that one of my missions is to help people understand that joy that our heavenly Father wants us each to have, and it starts with knowing who we are; and, knowing who everyone else is as children of the same Father. And so, yes, I want to thank the people here – and yourself, Teacher Ham. This has brought a great deal of joy in my life, coming and hearing your lessons. Thank you so much.

HAM: Grateful thanks, Mesneur. My sincere and heartfelt appreciation to you and your great gifts, which are just coming into your focus even now. You will continue on your path. My love goes with you. Thank you.

SONJA: Ham, I too wanted to say thank you. I appreciate everything that you have done for me and for us. I just wanted to say thank you, and I'll miss you a lot. If you are ever in the neighborhood, please stop by.

HAM: Sonja, you have brought great happiness to me. I have watched you for many months and have been greatly heartened by your sincere and careful understanding of your mission, and our mission. Rebecca is becoming tired, and these transmissions may be somewhat flawed at this time. However, I wish to express my happiness with your progress. How wonderful it has been for me to be your Teacher and your friend. Thank you, again, Sonja.

TECTRA: Teacher Ham, I want also to say thanks. A lot of people here have said thanks in their own ways. I have been very filled by your guidance this last year that I have been attending here. I am truly honored to be in your presence as one of your pupils. Thank you for this wonderful spiritual water you've been raining down on us, and for opening up my eyes to the wellspring of spiritual water that is all around us on this planet. Thank you, that you have done this for me. Your mission is certainly working in my heart, and all of our hearts. I give great thanks for being here.

HAM: Tectra, you are my true spiritual son. You and I are very similar in ideas, in thoughts. You are my touchstone in mortal existence, for I see in you the reaction patterns of myself. Thank you for being so earnestly loyal; and thank you for being my pupil and friend.

I will always – this is for all, I will always be your friend and Teacher, even when not actively here. Remember you may call on me and I can answer. Remember, I am not far away; and, that I am only upstepped in this new assignment.

JOSHUA: Father Ham, the microphone is back around to me again. I also want to express my love and thanks to you for all of your tireless and unceasing efforts in our behalf and the growth that we have always seen because of your efforts and teachings. And, as I told you a long time ago, I look forward to the day when I am re-personalized on the Mansion Worlds and can really visualize you. I don't know that you can shake hands and hug or whatever that you do here – but if we can, I'm going to hug you and give you a big kiss. [laughter.] I have one last order of business. I was contacted today by a gentleman from Rochester, NY. His name is John P. He said he thought that you had contacted him in the last few days, and he was wondering if this was his own mind? or if you could confirm or deny this contact. Thank you very much, Ham.

HAM: Confirmed. Your efforts, Joshua, have brought the living light of truth to multitudes and will continue to enlighten many children of this Earth. You have constantly lived up to all of our high expectations and have always been a living channel of love. Be constant in your faith and all will become clear in time.

My heartfelt love and appreciation to all of you. I am truly touched by your many expressions of thanks and love. Long will I cherish this time we have had, and long will we remain friends. 'Friends' is not the full word-form I would need, for it falls so short in expressing my affection for you. I truly love all of you and will truly miss these times together. But I will always be available individually, and I will always be your Teacher. My love to you all. Farewell.

1) Personal Experiences

The teachers first touched my mind in the summer of 1991 when a friend sent me some transcripts of Abraham transmitting to a group in New Zealand. I was more or less nonplused by the seemingly less than Urantia Book quality of communication. The message seemed true but simply a restatement of truths replete in The Urantia Book and common in many other spiritual resources. I was skeptical. I was even biased against "channeling," at least in my limited understanding. It seemed unlikely that Abraham, the Abraham, Machiventa's Abraham, would suddenly pop up in New Zealand to deliver a message to a small, remote group of humans only mildly aware of The Urantia Book. Besides, deceased mortals rarely return to their native planets. (Technically, Abraham graduated in a previous dispensation, and could, as I understand The Urantia Book, return to Urantia [UB 1230:6, 1646:3, 1680:7].) Meanwhile, I was preoccupied with sorting out many other claims of revelation and prophecy alleged by other Urantia Book readers. Isn't there a lot of "stuff" out there? Seeking and sorting the myriad claims to truth and prescience can quickly become a full-time job. It boggles the mind. Yet, if I had not been both open and willing to plow through much superstition, confusion, and zillions of "spiritual" books, I might not have found The Urantia Book, with its lofty teachings that have so elevated my life. So, I have continued to pursue potential truth even when garbed in unorthodox raiment.

One brother, in particular, had caught my attention with his lengthy and comprehensive "prophecies" that seemed reasonably compatible with The Urantia Book. I sought the counsel of Jesus' Spirit of Truth, but as is often the case with me, not much seemed to be illuminated immediately. Discouragement comes easily when so much out there winds up proving to be another ego-bound delusional system punctuated with enough half-truths to catch the eye. Maybe I should just stick with The Urantia Book. But, in sticking with The Urantia Book, I find that it leads me to continue my search for Truth, within and without, in likely and unlikely places. Again, there is so much out there to be examined. Have you read The Scripts of Cleophas? I haven't; it's bigger than The Urantia Book. Yet, if I hadn't kept on looking, I would not have found the Course in Miracles, or Mary Strong's wonderful Letters of the Scattered Brotherhood, and many other sources of inspiration.

Eventually, I was guided to the conclusion that my would-be prophet brother, however sincere and well-intended and in possession of much truth, was tragically intoxicated with creative delusions. It was hard. I had spent many hours on the phone with this man and had developed a genuine love and affection for him despite his overly confident eccentricity. When I first heard rumors of the channeling in Utah, I thought, "not likely." These rumors came in the wake of my unfruitful exploration of this other supposed "prophecy." Besides, I was busy with still another situation.

A woman I had not met called me and left a message that she was a reader and felt led—that it was appropriate to contact me. I returned the call, and she unfolded her astounding story of psychic experiences since adolescence, initially unnerving her, and later settling in as a way of life. She had a doctorate from Julliard and had taught at M.I.T. She was coherent and articulate. She claimed that she transmitted for the Order of Melchizedek. I thought, "not likely." After the last prophetic cul de sac, I was a little impatient with her but painstakingly pointed out that, if she was a Urantia Book reader, surely she knew how improbable it was for her to be legitimately channeling for "real" Melchizedeks. We talked further. I tried to take a gentle, tolerant tone with her as I believed Jesus would. I asked questions. I listened. I took notes. We had four hours of telephone appointments. After studying my notes and reflecting, I decided that my truth bells had not been rung; her channeled material was not spiritually relevant to my life at that time.

Before long, a dear friend shared a broader horizon with me of the channeling in Utah. He sparked my interest. He sat me down and played a tape of a small group session he attended with one of these "teachers" speaking through a "receiver-transmitter." I was skeptical, but it was not long before I was responding to the clarity, love, respect, poise, and down-right personality charm of this "person." Since I know my friend well, it was easy to empathize with his questions and reactions as he asked questions of the "teacher." There was something about hearing the voice, the pauses, the caring, the deliberation, the subtle intonations of this "other" and "greater" mind that was irrefutable to my heart. This was really real.

I asked for more tapes, and soon early Ham tapes arrived from Utah. Ham spoke slowly with many long pauses. This was different from the flowing conversational style of my first "teacher" contact. But the truths Ham spoke were no less real. Of course, I had intellectual questions and doubts too numerous to mention. Okay, I'll mention a few: Why the name "Ham"? Celestial lunch meat? Why channeling (I had been turned off by the likes of Ramtha and Seth)? Why New Zealand and Utah? Why seemingly "favored" people? Updating the Reserve Corps? Why were some questions answered with such generic answers, others evaded altogether? Are some people deluded—going along for the ride? Why were words like "stillness," "correcting time," and "teaching mission," not emphasized in The Urantia Book? (Or were they, but subtly and by other names?, ["silent communion" (UB 1002:5), "New Age" (UB1860:5), "new teachers" (UB 2082:9)]), why didn't any of the folks at the Foundation or Fellowship headquarters know more about this?, like the church-lady from Saturday Night Live says, "Could it be, could it be SATAN!?" Why do I need "teachers" when I have a magnificent epochal revelation, a perfect inner Guide, and many spiritual resources? Perhaps, if I ignore it, it will all just go away ("not likely").

2) Encounter of the Celestial Kind

I feel blessed that I had the good fortune to have a meeting with a "celestial teacher" who allowed me several hours to experience his presence and unburden myself of many questions. The transmission occurred through a highly gifted receiver-transmitter whom I hardly knew. This transmission was articulate, flowing, conversational, personal, intimate, and touching. I know from The Urantia Book that personal experience has no substitute; it is "the master teacher." (UB1195:4, 2076:5, 1961:4) And I find that there is no substitute for direct experiential contact with this Teacher Corps. The reality of this private session was so real, so profound, so loving, so revealing, so comprehensive, that all doubts were removed regarding the reality of this celestial teacher. He is an ascendant son from the seventh mansion world and was (to my amazement) willing to speak to me. All my intellectual arguments and doubts were short-circuited to a heart-soul reaction of certitude. Even most of my intellectual doubts were abundantly answered. My intellect strained to penetrate this event; I could not, but my truth bells had been rung on multiple levels.

This teacher reached toward me with tenderheartedness, sensing my anxieties, putting me at ease.

"...not everything must be squeezed into this tiny temporal moment. It is merely a getting to know each other type of a meeting.... Just relax and ask any questions without censorship that might be on your mind and heart. And if I am able to answer and if my contribution helps to enlighten you or spark your spiritual quest even further, then it is I who is blessed."

I asked how to better discern my Adjuster's guidance.

"That is the quest of the human: How to discern the human mind from the Divine mind. This is your great challenge as it is of every other mortal on this planet. First, do not spend overmuch time in the examination and intellectual evaluation of your thoughts. Try to come from the quicker emotional intuitive level, not emotional in terms of feelings, but the gut, more instantaneous reaction which in truth is coming from the integration of higher mind with human intelligence and memory experience. It is a good compass, and you should trust it more than you do. Second, if confusion still reigns in your mind, consider the spiritual fruits and ramifications of your guidance: will it have a good effect on you, on your advancement Godward? Does it hold the spiritual values of good to your fellows?"

I asked how to get to better know my seraphim.

"The seraphim are the closest non material beings to you. They are quite similar in reactions and understanding of Deity and truly love you and friendship you. The emotions which push the seraphim away are the human emotions of fear, anger, and a distraught or unbalanced state. The seraphim cannot break through these emotions which they cannot truly fathom in the human, and you in essence erect a wall of negativity which repels your guardian angels. So, an attitude of inner peace and serenity, cheer and joy, love, hope, would be best."

I asked how to be more forgiving.

"Forgiveness does not depend upon the remorse of the person who wronged you. Forgiveness is a capacity in your own being. It is a gift bestowed by God to man. And your capacity to receive the Father's and Michael's merciful forgiveness is and bears a direct relationship to your ability to forgive your fellows. To truly forgive you must foster soul growth and fruits of the spirit in yourself. As you grow in understanding the true scope of your fellow humans, it is not hard to forgive, but it becomes the natural order of a spiritual being. Fully evolved spiritual beings have no need to forgive, for no offense is ever seen by them, as they can see the heart-soul-potential-desire of their fellow sojourners. We are not so fortunate as to be in such a high place. Yet, pray for you to forgive yourself, and as you grow, it will become easier to see your fellows through the spiritual eyes of love, tolerance, and understanding."

I asked about this mission and how the teachers perceive us mortals.

"I have traveled through the seven mansion worlds but have not fused. I have not seen Michael but have studied your planet for many, many hundreds of years, and there was great competition to be chosen for this mission. I was quite honored to be amongst those chosen because of my similar background...and my study of your planet and peoples. How do I see you mortals? Not as differently as you would think. I have down-stepped to a more morontial form to be able to make contact. So, I perceive a Light emanating from the head region at times which is your Adjuster. I can, if given permission, search your mind circuits for memories or knowledge of other humans of which I have none. I gather information just like you do, by meeting the human or searching the mind memory patterns of a human who knows the individual in question. Travel for us is quite fast, and we are aided by seraphim and midwayers. The Life Carriers help to effect the necessary connection for transmission and receiving as well as first and secondary midwayers. We hope to achieve in the next thousand years of the Correcting Time a spiritual upstep, using transformed individuals to ultimately transform this world. We are a continuation of the Fifth Epochal Revelation. We are not a separate bestowal, but this phase of the revelation was planned from the beginning. However, it was decided not to reveal this to the original contact personalities because of the danger that would place the revelation in-over emotionalism, non belief, dismissal—the book had to stand and root on its own. Now we proceed to take the humans who are ready and activate them out into the world. We will contact on a world-wide basis to readers and non-readers alike. We begin mostly with readers as there is less groundwork to lay. Does that answer?" I asked many more questions, too voluminous to quote, and wound up asking how to discern legitimate channeling.

"How to tell? There will be a network amongst the true transmissions. For yourself, judge the spiritual content, use your Spirit of Truth.... Truth may be gathered like a bee from flower to flower from sources which are human inspired. Celestial or non-corporeal beings do not have a monopoly on spiritual insight. So, whether a transmission is from us or is from the human higher mind is really just a speculation which humans and we like to engage in—to speculate about what could be. The message, if spiritual, will illuminate."

Amazingly, this experience was on one level very ordinary, just like you and I chatting, and on many other levels it was very extraordinary—truly awesome. It was reassuring to my soul. This experience was a cherished privilege which I hold dear. However, the teachers are no respecters of persons. They desire to get to know each one of us equally. They honor us immensely and see our true virtues through spiritual eyes. They never judge us. Some might think that this type of experience would lead to ego inflation. Not necessarily so. While on the one hand I feel blessed and deeply reassured, on the other hand I have a greater sense of my limitations and smallness. I am far from perfect and have a long, long way to go even in this life and must struggle daily with my flawed human character. As this teacher said to me,

"The struggle against anger, fear, envy, lack of love, anxiety, etc. must be done in the trenches of day-to-day life through reality experiences with others and the world.... The true fields of spiritual growth [are] disappointment, conflict, despair, etc.—uncertainty. Your uncertainty will last, as will every human's, until you are repersonalized on the mansion worlds. This is a life-long struggle, and much growth comes from doubt versus faith struggles in the human heart."

The fruits of this encounter in my life were immediate. I felt a new buoyancy, an enhanced desire to discern my Adjuster's will, an enhanced desire to be more conscious of my seraphic guidance, renewed energy to reach out and love, and augmented willingness to seek daily communion with Father.

3) "Be still and know that I am God." (Psalm 46:10)

I remembered the teaching of Jesus to remain for a time in silent receptivity after prayer to allow the Adjuster to speak to the listening soul (UB 1641:1). Over the years I have tried to practice this stillness after prayer but ashamedly have not regularly sought to fully quiet my mind in prayer and worship. In my prayer life, I am guilty of perhaps talking more than listening. The emphasis on silent cosmic contemplation (UB 622:4) and silent communion with the Father are certainly replete in The Urantia Book, not to mention Jesus' living portrayal in his own life of frequently going apart, alone, for solitary communion (cf. UB 1754:6), as well as the times he sent the apostles out apart and alone to find the answer from within. So, I began the "stillness practice." I found this difficult and frustrating. At first it seemed I could not cease my mind chatter for more than a few nanoseconds at a time. Occasionally when I did reach a point of stillness, my mind would have to start a commentary on the process, "Gee, I guess this is the stillness; I wonder if I will hear voices." Then I would space on in more thoughts despite myself. Some days I felt such emotional-physical agitation that I would have to stop and get up and go do some "very important" thing I had just remembered. Soon I learned that coffee (caffeine) is an anathema to the stillness—I'd be "futuring" or "pasting" but was rarely in the present.

I think each person is different chemically, and each has to learn experientially what works best. White-knuckling through the stillness with gritty discipline did not work for me. The key is to relax, to let tranquillity descend naturally and fill the body and mind. We know Jesus' teaching of "non-resistance," and I found resisting thoughts didn't work very well either. So, I did what I had learned in Transcendental Meditation but without the mantrum. I allowed thoughts and feelings just to pass by, and when I became aware that I was spacing off, I would gently stop myself and attempt to re-focus on that quiet place within where the Monitor resides, where the answers to all questions exist, where the Source and Center of my being is. It was hard not to chastise myself for my spacey tendency not to be in the here and now. Gradually I learned just to matter-of-factly re-focus without berating myself for failing. Slowly, too slowly for my temperament and impatience, my stillness times became easier, more nurturing. There was still variability from day to day, but more often now I would have twenty or so minutes pass without much time consciousness. Sometimes, not always, I felt relieved or refreshed after this quiet seeking meditation.

My stillness times improved as I took advice from the teaching mission transcripts I had available. Teacher Daniel suggested imagining a still reflective lake or a white ball of light. But my ball of light would not stay still, and in walking down the memory lane of my travel-log of still lakes, I found I couldn't keep them very still either. Somehow there were always ripples or waves, and if I succeeded at quieting these, a fish would pop up. I took much solace in the words of Daniel that even a few seconds of stillness with intent to find God were worth more than can be imagined. I persisted. I struggled. I was jealous of my friends who seemed to easily take the stillness and achieve teacher contact. I heard teacher Ham say that auditory stimulation was especially distracting. So, I purchased 28 db sound attenuators (plastic ear muffs) and wore a blindfold. Ah ha! This was better, but no magic panacea. I continued to beseech the Father for help. Eventually, I began to have contact with "otherness" by asking questions after I had given thanks and established a degree of silent communion. The sense of "otherness" for me was very, very subtle. At first it was like my alter ego answering my own questions. But occasionally there would be a hint or clue of higher contact. Sometimes it was the quickness of the answer to my inquiry. Sometimes it was the wording—just a twinge different from my style. Sometimes it was the character or timbre of the "voice" in my mind. Often it was the feeling-tone that accompanied the stillness time. I should add, I don't hear voices. My contact is intuitive or else word-thoughts in my mind. Everyone is unique, and the style of teacher contact seems to be unique to each mortal. Some people hear voices outside the head, up and to the left side, or behind. Some hear inner voices. Some have thought-words. Some see visualizations. Some experience a complex array of intuitive communications for which I am at a loss for words. Some people have more strong gut level reactions. Seeking is what is important and even teacher contact may be of little value unless the fruits are shown in soul growth. It is not words, but the sense of God's love that really counts. Has your spiritual life been richer lately? Perhaps you are having teacher contact, and simply don't realize it yet.

4) Could it be the Devil?

Caligastia is said in The Urantia Book to "still be free on Urantia to prosecute his nefarious designs." (UB 610:1) Is he insidiously working to destroy the Urantia readership through the "sordid practice of spiritualism"? Is the teaching mission another devilish scheme to take over your mind?

No. To know the teachers personally is a certain antidote for this fear-dominated belief. I know wherefrom I speak. I know that I know. I do not mean to sound presumptuous, just experiential. Such personal knowing is also the antidote for all the "explanations" for the teaching mission that invoke: mass hysteria, communal delusions, archetypal upsurges, group "needs," and all other manner of psychological speculation. How could Caligastia succeed in seducing us into wickedness by teaching us to seek the Indwelling Spirit daily, to live in allegiance to Christ Michael, and to constantly seek to love? As Jesus pointed out to his adversaries, if the devil casts out the devil, it is a house divided and must fall. (UB 2085:4) If this were Caligastia (and it is not) I would suspect that he has serious indigestion and must gnash his teeth with sleep disturbance. Allegedly being the source of the "channeling," he would have to constantly laud The Urantia Book, propose that we do daily acts of kindness to others, respect the will dignity of our fellows, advocate the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, and relate to us as a loving friend. Poor devil, he must have a nasty case of cognitive dissonance by now.

To follow the fear-mongering Caligastia theory to its logical extreme, let us assume that Caligastia is behind the channeling phenomena. What should the attitude and conduct of a faith-son or daughter be to such an impossible encroachment? Did not the Master teach and practice nonresistance to evil (UB1950:5)? Did Jesus not teach that we are to love even our enemies (UB 1134:1)? If Caligastia were still around, are we not enjoined to love even him, just as our Master did? Was it not Jesus' nonresistance to evil and divine love for his sons Caligastia and Daligastia and the other rebels that our Lord placed above even his own mortal life? Was it not His mercy that allowed this insane Lanonandek pair to continue to roam Urantia free to prosecute their nefarious designs? And with regard to the apparent strangeness of the teaching mission, how did Jesus treat strange teachers? Consider the Kheresa lunatic, or Kirmeth the trance medium. "...Jesus intervened and allowed him entire freedom of action for a few days. All who heard his preaching soon recognized that his teaching was not sound as judged by the gospel of the kingdom" (UB 1666:3). Should skeptics not follow the Master's policy? When Jesus was faced with teachers of partial truth, he always emphasized the positive and made no attack on the error. We know that fear, suspicion, and intolerance are mind poisons (UB 1575:2, 1204:3). Is not the way of Truth to abandon fear and distrust in favor of faith in God's love and his assurances that a sincere soul is never in jeopardy?

Some relevant facts presented in The Urantia Book about Caligastia are these. His power was curtailed by the incarnation of Machiventa Melchizedek (UB 753:1). He has been comparatively impotent since the cross of Christ (UB 610:6). "Even before Michael's bestowal on Urantia, neither Caligastia nor Daligastia was ever able to oppress mortals or to coerce any normal individual into doing anything against the human will." (UB 753:3) He is shorn, finally, of all authority on Urantia. (UB 753:2) "...He has absolutely no power to enter the minds of men...." (UB 610:3). I emphasize this passage because my understanding is that if you really desired his wicked presence (however absurd) he could draw near to you and tempt you, but still could not enter your mind. Check page 610; what is your interpretation? And finally, Caligastia is "servile before the divine majesty of the Paradise Thought Adjusters and the protective Spirit of Truth...." (UB 610:4)

Let us unveil this Caligastia theory to reveal the lattice-work of sophistries that it is. First, does this theory misinterpret page UB 865:7 to mean that all "spiritualism" is sordid? Please read it again. I see no such logical implication. Some "spiritualism" is sordid; the logic of this algorithm does not necessarily imply that all "spiritualism" is sordid. But this is a "straw man," since the teaching mission is not "spiritualism" at all. "Spiritualism" in our common usage seems to me to conjure up seances, melodrama, and contacting ghosts, like dead uncle Ed, a speaking spook, invoked by the supposed powers of an entranced medium. In my opinion, the sordidness of such mediumship is its duplicity. Preying on the needs of ignorant mortals for dishonest gains (money-power) is a scam. My 1933 edition New Century Dictionary includes these synonyms for "sordid": base, low, self-seeking, mercenary. If you are paying a fee for "channeling," compare the teaching mission—the price is right, no charge, a gift from above. Second, we must believe that hundreds of sincere Urantia Book readers and truth-seekers suddenly developed the desire to be cursed with the wicked presence of the devil, or are fooled and incapable of sensing his iniquitous presence. What an affront to the Spirit of Truth. What an injustice to the goodness and sincerity of those brothers and sisters choosing to practice daily communion and acts of kindness as taught by these new heavenly teachers. Third, Caligastia, who was never able to oppress mortals, is now oppressing them; who was servile before the Adjusters, now dominates them; who has been comparatively impotent, is now mighty; who has no power to enter the minds of man, is now doing so. For this "theory" to be valid, The Urantia Book must be seriously in error. Moreover, what allowance should we make for the new revelation of the teachers speaking through many different transmitters that the rebellion is over and that all the wicked ones have chosen extinction? If it serves soul-growth to believe in this devilish buffoonery, I honor your free will choice. But the truth remains, "The devil has been given a great deal of credit for evil which does not belong to him." (UB 610:6) To me this "Caligastia theory" is one more example of this.

Is it plausible that the Lucifer Rebellion would be adjudicated in our lifetimes? From The Urantia Book, it seems that the adjudication was begun during the times of the Urantia revelation. (UB 529:1) It was virtually settled by Jesus on Mount Hermon. (UB 1494:3) Teacher James comments, "...you must understand that up until the time Lucifer ceased to exist, he still had free will and had not agreed to the adjudication. The adjudication could not happen until he agreed that it was the right thing to do and that this date could not have been known precisely by anyone until it came about." (James, 10/4/92) This statement of James agrees with The Urantia Book in that our heavenly Father requires that no action be taken until the sinner himself approves of the justness of the verdict. (UB 615:5, 611:6)

Over the years I have not given much energy to worrying about Caligastia or the wicked things he might be up to. I have found much reassurance in The Urantia Book. However, the announcement by Ham and others that the rebellion is over did give me a feeling, at first of skepticism, then of sadness and relief. What happened to the rebels? "We are sorry and also happy to report that they have become as though they had not been. None repented. It was a hard combination of reality feelings when we received this information," (Ham, Woods Cross transcripts, 1991, p. 1). I am sorry that all the rebels chose extinction. So much love and effort by our beloved Sovereign was extended to them. It is incredible that they would reject His mercy. "Patient is God, and He waits until eternity if that is what it takes, just as He did for Lucifer. This was such an unfortunate case, where one so brilliant could not be reclaimed back into the fold. He was, however, allowed to make that free will choice, and it must be respected. Our Father wept with the news of this decision,...." (Will, 1/4/92)

An Unseen Helper says, "Caligastia has not been on the planet since approximately 1984-85 your time. All rebellious spirits from Lucifer to the lesser participators of the rebellion have all chosen death and are as if they never were. Only their negative lifeless energy is on the planet. Some will give it life through personal beliefs, fears, and emotions, but it will gradually dissipate and cease to exist...." (Aflana transcripts, 1/27/92)

Why a will creature chooses to reject love is truly unfathomable to me. Nonetheless, I believe that Caligastia is naught. My soul soars as I realize that the torturous hand of the wicked Prince is gone. As I look out upon the world, I see that the numbing spectacle of pain and anger is at worst the momentum of the past, that destructiveness from here forward is entirely human choosing. It is the infinite Father's desire that not one shall be lost, but He is so respectful of each of us that no creature is forced to continue life against his own will. What a cosmic coup de gras is the Father's merciful obliteration of those who choose not to be. What a wonder of cosmic justice, this adjudication by the Ancients of Days, the fulfillment of God's great gift to us, freedom of creature will.

5) "Fear not." (UB 1103, 1582, 1820)

I found that there is no need to fear a hostile take-over from within. It is the Kingdom of heaven that is within. It is God that is within, not celestial corruption, "...you may rest in the assurance that there is one inner bastion, the citadel of the spirit, which is absolutely unassailable...." (UB 1096:5) (I especially like that word "absolutely;" that's pretty unassailable in my opinion. And yes, I have dedicated my soul to God's keeping.)

Surprisingly I haven't had much conscious fear in this process of making contact with Michael's celestial teachers. Occasionally, I had a twinge of fear that I might be afraid. No, I am not fearless. I fear pain. I fear isolation from feeling love. I fear being sick and friendless. I fear decrepitude and the process of dying (not death). The list goes on but is unimportant in light of the Father's precious gift of faith which is available to all who reach up and trust in the Father's down-grasp. I do experience reactionary animal fear. After all, this teacher contact is a new experience. Is it not ironical that the animal body fears that which the heart most desires? So, most of us have had our twinges of reflex defensiveness when we sense heavenly contact, but it passes quickly in the face of the warmth, gentleness, and caring that accompany this "receiving." Faith and patience have aided me greatly in accepting this new form of communication. It just takes a little stillness time and patience to begin to sense teacher contact. The teachers are in no rush. Jesus was never in a hurry. Why should I be?

I discovered early that the responsibility for determining the truth of any given transmission or part of a transmission is mine alone. Each mortal must rely on the Spirit of Truth to verify or falsify any aspect of the teachings. The teachers do not claim to be perfect; errors do occur, and it is up to me to discern them. So, often I take a "wait and see" attitude. For some things, time alone reveals the fruits. I have found in general that the spiritual teachings of the mission are excellent and close to error free. As transmissions relate to the material level, human longings and emotions seem to enter in more. However, it is the spiritual that counts; material disillusionments are a part of life.

The teachers are clearly here to teach us more about spiritual living. They are not here to work wonders or provide empirical confirmation of their reality. That is the work of the Spirit of Truth. I am rather impressed by how consistent the teachers are in not working "wonders" or "proofs" of their functioning. I remember that Jesus was repeatedly pressed to show the people a "sign" that he was from God, but he steadfastly refused to appeal to the miracle-seeking nature of humankind. The teachers seem to follow a similar policy. They very rarely answer questions about politics, social issues, science, and other worldly matters. We must learn and earn our own way through faith and daily struggles with the grit of life. I see the teachers as respecting us so much as not to diminish our agondonter status nor our right to progressive soul growth through free will decisions.

6) Preconceptions based on The Urantia Book

In December of 1991, I began to listen to tapes of Ham's transmissions to the Woods Cross group in Utah. I was surprised at how many preconceptions I had developed from reading The Urantia Book. I thought, if "celestials" are contacting us, surely it will be this way or that way, more perfect, not an isolated communication with unknown people. Why wouldn't the celestials visualize as Gabriel did for Mary, the mother of Jesus, or as had happened on the Mount of Transfiguration? Why would contact be made via humans where unconscious material from the transmitter might contaminate the message? Why didn't they use computers or some other technology for accuracy? Why did some people call Ham "father Ham"? Why did so many of the messages seem to be a "pablumized" version of The Urantia Book? The Urantia Book is so precise, comprehensive, and eloquent. There seems very little in the mission transcripts that adds to what is already in The Urantia Book. Even the teachers admit to being imperfect and making errors, yet clearly acknowledge The Urantia Book as nearly error free.

"Most of the receivers of our teaching are eventually and purposefully brought to The Urantia Book, for it is extremely accurate. In things of our teaching lessons there are some new occurrences which are inevitable when you consider this type of communication. The Urantia Book is a bedrock of knowledge for you to build upon, and we are encouraging its further study and understanding. Yes." (Ham, LA, 2/1/92)

Later, Ham answered this question.

Q. "...Are there also inaccuracies in the writings of The Urantia Book through the personalities which claim to have written it?"

Ham: "Very few and these are all very minor as to be negligible. It is very accurate."

As I continued listening to tapes, I realized that my preconceptions based on The Urantia Book were simply my idealizations and biases. In fact, I didn't have the foggiest notion of how celestials might contact Urantians. I began to open up to Ham's teachings and was often touched by his charming lessons. I still found myself critiquing the human questions during Ham meetings. I would listen in the car and find myself saying out loud, "Hey, why ask that? It's in The Urantia Book," or "Why ask such an abstract question? Get relevant!" Then when I began to converse with teachers via receiver-transmitters and listen to my own recorded questions, I was regretful of my judgmentalness of others' questions. I often found my own questions to sound foolish and irrelevant. Soon it began to dawn on me that it was not the content or eloquence of questions that mattered. What the teaching contact was about was living interpersonal contact, human to morontial, morontial to human. The value was not so much in the content of material but in the intimate personal experience, the sensing of a higher presence. The transcripts are like the fossilized remains of a living experience, but like The Urantia Book, can be greatly inspirational. To me the Woods Cross transcripts are spiritually rich. Here are a few sample quotations. I love the ending to the lesson on the Fatherhood of God.

"And now I will leave you with this thought. There is a certain tree which grows in the wind. It is gnarled and bent and small and hearty. On the crag of the cliff, it looks down at the ocean and receives the mist from the tide. It looks up at the sun and receives the warmth of her light. It clings steadily to the rock's face and is secure in its place there. Having grown amid so much wind, there is not a wind which can bring it down. Shalom." (Abraham, p. 33, 1991 Woods Cross Transcripts)

I much enjoyed Ham's comments on laughter.

"Laughter is the best medicine. Laughter is a healing and curing activity which greatly uplifts the attitude of the mental mind which is beneficial in seeing the full nature of the situation. In worry, we tend to look at our feet, so to speak. In laughter, we tend to throw our heads back and look around us. Worry is inner consuming, laughter is outward releasing. Therefore, I say to you, laugh. Laugh fully and often." (Ham, Woods Cross transcripts, 1991, p. 42)

Ham has this to say of the morontia life.

"The morontial life is much more enjoyable than your toiling and stressful earthly experience. You will see with Divine clarity the purpose of your ordeals in this life, and will appreciate the ordeals themselves and the guidance which brought you through them. This appreciation will be a great unburdening of your worrisome self, for you will be able to know your purpose. You will be able to foresee your future purpose, and all of this together will be a great relief as well as joy in your innermost core." (Ham, Woods Cross transcripts, 1991, p. 45)

(Start here on April 25th 2025 class) Ham's announcement to Urantians

On February 1, 1992, I heard Ham make the formal announcement to Urantians of the teaching mission. To say that this event in Los Angeles was strange and bizarre would be an understatement. Human emotions were diverse and intense. In a cavern-like room at the Quality Inn the vibes were inexplicable and complex. There was an interminably long pause before Rebecca, seated lotus-like under a spot light on a large paisley couch, began to transmit. The rumble of planes taking off at LAX filled the long pregnant pauses like a cosmic drum roll.

"The love of God enfolds us. The power of God protects us, and the presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are he is. My profound and sincere greetings to you all this evening. I am Ham. I have been commissioned to bring the light of truth and the understanding of our Father to Urantia. I am one of many teachers. All of us are awaiting the greater reception of our words and we are desirous of placing many teachers among you. Great is our mission. Understand this in your hearts. The time has arrived for expanded level of truth to begin correction. We come, not for ourselves no, indeed, rather only in service of Michael. This day is, marks, the beginning of the Correcting Time. Machiventa Melchizidek has arrived and has been duly inaugurated as acting Planetary Prince of Urantia, an assignment he has accepted from Michael. Long years we have waited this day. The Lucifer rebellion is officially ended in Nebadon. The circuits which have isolated your world are being reopened. All these changes are occurring. I am in accord with the plan of Michael. Happy and joyous is this day, blessed in the sight of our Lord. Gracious listeners, I bid you welcome to change. We mark the beginning of the reign of Prince Machiventa on this day. Questions are welcome, indeed happy am I to serve you...."

Had I not had the previous confirming experiences with a teacher in private, and many tapes of Ham, I think I would have been as nonplused at this meeting as many attendees seemed to be. Later, I was surprised at how different my impressions were of what Ham said in person as compared to my experience of the tape recordings and transcription of this ceremony. What Ham actually said, and what I thought he had said, were amazingly different. As I poured over the tape and transcript, Ham seemed much more coherent and clear than I experienced in the vibe-charged room near LAX.

Requesting a teacher

In December of 1991, I asked for a teacher for our area. The procedure seemed to be to call one of the people in the Woods Cross group and ask him to ask Ham. I did this and was admittedly a little put off by the protocol. However, I had met some of the Woods Cross folks in Los Angeles and found them gentle, unpretentious, sincere, and down-to-earth. Before long I received the Ham tape with my request and was delighted that Ham said "Yes." Actually, I had never heard Ham say anything but "Yes" to the many heart-felt requests of people wanting teachers.

More recently this protocol has changed (remember, "welcome to change"). It is no longer necessary to call Utah and ask Ham for a teacher. It is no longer necessary to attend a group with an on-line transmitter. Any human child of God may simply ask the Father during pray-worship-communion. This is personal, private, and between you and God, as I believe it should be, in light of the teaching that God is no respecter of persons. The teachers are no respecters of persons either. They want to get to know each of us equally. "Your thoughts and feelings and desires are known. We wish to understand all of you equally, yes," (Ham, Woods Cross transcripts 1991, p. 14). In a time-space frame, sequences are common and there may be the appearance of preferential treatment, but if you look deeper, this is not so. In fact, our teacher, Jared, has told us that any human being who sincerely wants a personal ascendant teacher need only ask in the privacy of prayer. I asked, If all five billion people on Urantia sincerely asked for a personal teacher, would one be assigned to each mortal? The answer was "Yes." (Jared, 10/92). Likewise, the teachers are so respectful of our will dignity that they do not contact the minds of mortals who choose not to receive this gift. No judgment is made. Each mortal has a different path to Paradise. Your choosing not to participate in this mission is respected, and there is no judgment of your worth or soul growth. You are always welcome, and always free to change your mind.

Transmission errors

I went back to reading transcripts, listening to tapes, and practicing the stillness. Soon I received transcripts from a variety of teachers. I was impressed by the consistency and high degree of correlation between messages in various transcripts. I was vigilant for errors, inconsistencies, and differences from The Urantia Book. There were minor inconsistencies and errors, but to me this did not outweigh the beauty, truth, and goodness, overflowing from all of the teachers I had experienced. Besides, the teachers are most tolerant of human skepticism and taking a "time will tell" attitude.

"...A system that is built upon free will choice is also a system which must withstand the inevitable appearance of conscious and unconscious errors. Particularly when you ask us questions that involve predictions of events on your planet, there is great opportunity for error to enter. The rules bar the pre-emption of any creature's free will. Between the prediction and the predicted event, an infinite number of creature choices may change the result of the chain of events upon which we relied in making our statement. 'Chain of events' is an imprecise term to describe this process. Rather is the reality better described by the movement of an ocean current, like the Gulf Stream current in your immediate vicinity. Along its margins, top, bottom, and sides, there is continual interplay of waters, yet the whole is moving inexorably on to some further destination. Because of the changeability of fact sets, questions calling for predictions are disfavored, and only aggravate the human tendency to doubt. It is only secondarily because we fear that you will rely on our predictions that we hesitate to predict. The inescapable margin of error, and its consequences on the human mind, are the primary justifications for our distaste for predictions." (Will, 12/6/91)

Most apparent errors seem associated with less spiritual teachings, issues where strong human longings and emotions might bubble up. Teacher Will refers to this type of situation as a juggernaut. Since human volition is inviolate, the teachers must allow the longings of human transmitters to well up, emerge, and take their natural course, even if human disillusionment and disappointment temporarily follow. Once I began to understand the tender and intimate relationship between a teacher and a transmitter, I began to understand why teachers don't always or immediately correct human contamination of a message. In my own very limited experience as a transmitter, I know how humiliated and pained I would be if the teacher transmitting through me were to criticize or overly correct me. My doubts are great enough anyway. The transmitter-receivers that I know are typically humble about their abilities and often think early transmissions are only a product of their human minds. The freedom to make errors without chastisement is essential to growth, and, in the long run, either the previous errors don't matter or are corrected. "... all errors which may be transmitted will be corrected as trust and confidence surely evolve. You will recognize these transitory errors as mere blips in the continuous stream of Truth," (Ham, private meeting, 5/31/92).

How does a person become a transmitter?

The talent for being a transmitter is referred to by Jared as "luck of the draw." Some people seem to be innately endowed with the biochemical-brain-mind-field suitable for receiving teacher communications more easily than others. Some people just seem to start off transmitting rather easily. The teachers also tell us that there is prior unconscious preparation of transmitters who are willing mortals. Some of us, like myself, are not so gifted, but it seems that anyone who truly desires can learn by persistent stillness meditation. Again, having this talent is no judgment on soul status. Likewise the point in time when a TR (transmitter-receiver) comes on-line is no measure of soul worth or spirituality. I have practiced the stillness persistently for over a year and still am able to transmit teachers for only a few words before I lose contact or reflexively block transmission. Another person came to our group with no previous experience with the book or the mission. Her naiveté and innocence were complete, yet within just ten days she began transmitting extensively and clearly for Ham and other teachers. (By the way, she is eagerly reading in The Urantia Book now).

Cosmic psychologists

Each transcript is a lesson in the nature of human-morontial, morontial-human interaction, and is also a lesson in group dynamics. The teachers are marvelous psychologists. I never cease to be amazed at the gracious manner in which they juggle the diverse emotions and needs of group members. As a psychologist with much teaching and small group experience, I am deeply impressed by what I see, and I know I see only a narrow spectrum. Teachers are masters of not fostering co-dependency. For me, there is not even a hint that the teachers are initiating a "Teacher/Priest Class" in our society. They are not so much the giver of answers as guides to our finding our own answers from within. Their uniform fairness to each individual is remarkable, all the more so to me knowing, as I do, the typical challenges of group dynamics, rivalry, envy, hurt feelings, anger, withdrawal, manipulation, enmeshment, ego inflation, and deflation. The teachers are subtle in the tapestry of goodness they weave in a group. But as the transcripts unfold session after session, it becomes easier to see love and group bonding emerge. The teachers are able to honor and praise humans without pretense or exaggeration, yet do this in such a way as not to foster pride. I have never known them to criticize, yet in their gentle understated way they allow us to be aware of our limitations and shortcomings. At the same time, there is no judgment. Sometimes it is hard to believe how accepting and tolerant of human weaknesses they are. I believe contact with teachers is healing.

The teachers are a marvelous projection mirror for students. It seems every question a mortal asks allows for a measure of soul opening. The mirror is pure and free of the legacy of dysfunctional family dynamics so present even in the most advanced of therapists or closest of human friends. It becomes easier to trust these invisible teachers as no comment or answer to a question is ever intended to hurt or depreciate the human. Their humor is delicate and light, never tinged with insult or bigotry. Although above us and beyond us, they never act with an attitude of parental authority. They are not our parents. They are teachers. They are friends. I have learned to be less judgmental because they model such unwavering and unconditional acceptance of us. I see my own tendencies to judge or complain about someone in bold relief. About the time I am feeling grumpy toward someone, a teacher may treat them with such esteem that even though I might want the teacher to chastise a seeming wrongdoer, I come away rather desiring to clean up my act, to become more accountable for my attitude. I am constantly reminded that the Father loves each and every one of us with an infinite love, even the supposedly unlovable. Their interventions are gentle, so understated as to be missed by one who does not seek. Yet, I have never been aware of a teacher being swayed or pressured by a mortal manipulation. If a question has been answered and the mortal demands more, the teacher may simply say, "the answer has already been given, there is no more to say." Their use of pauses and timing is a study in communication mastery. They use pauses and silence boldly and with great power. They do not come from a fear base, so they do not fear us. They are not afraid to take a long pause or speak directly or challengingly, or steadfastly refuse to answer if they so choose. They are never rude.

A unified team, a community, a network

One of the advantages of reading transcripts from different groups is to glimpse the marvelous teamwork of the teachers. In our world I am so accustomed to hierarchies of authority. The teachers seem quite fraternal. There is no hint of elitism or status preoccupation. They refer to each other as well as humans as brothers and sisters. They ask that we view them as friends. Their teachings are consistent from group to group, albeit the variety of expression of the same fundamental truths is delightful. What are their common teachings? A transformed world through transformed individuals. And how will the transformation of the individual human take place? The teaching is deceptively simple: seek guidance in stillness daily; do little acts of kindness to people we contact, strangers and friends alike. This simple sharing spreads from person to person—the benign virus of love (see UB 1098:4). They do not make demands beyond our abilities. We are not required to suddenly be Gandhi or Mother Teresa.

They are in total support of The Urantia Book; they refer to it constantly. They claim allegiance to the Father. They are in service to Christ Michael. Their concern for the dignity of human free will is paramount. Their goal for us is to lead us across the dangerous ground of discerning the Adjuster's will for ourselves, to become more attuned to the will of God. The consistency of these themes among groups is not just apparent but astounding.

Peace within

I continued to seek daily stillness time with my inner guidance. Sometimes I could get my mind to settle down a bit, but times of silence were still short and rare. I took inspiration from the many teachings about stillness.

"...For all things a beginning is necessary. Therefore we ask you to try to compose yourself. Clear your mind. Don't think about anything. Don't think about not thinking. I like to use the example of the water in the glass. The more you try to calm the water, the more it is stirred. Just allow it to fall into the bottom and come to rest naturally and you will find that there is a stillness which has great vitality. You will be able to discern the vitality of God Himself, even in what you formerly thought were the empty spaces. Those who can find meaning in the empty spaces are truly on the right path. Do you think you can do that? (Will, 12/15/91)
"Practice the stillness, go into the quiet every chance you can find for at least 10 minutes each day. This is the most valuable discipline you can attain at this time to help us. Giving us your permission just before sleep is also indicated if you are not already doing so. We are limited only by your free will. You must choose to be our expressions, our hands and feet, if you will. Through you we can carry a message of Truth to all corners of your world of Urantia. We desire to do just that."(Aflana, 3/3/92)

"The greatest single factor in the well being of mortal man is to achieve peace within. 'This peace I leave with you,' was the Master's salutation. Your continued effort to seek guidance from your Thought Adjuster by seeking the stillness will provide a fertile ground to the establishment of a permanent peace and centeredness which will permeate your physical body and maintain healthy balance."(Ham, private meeting, 5/31/92)

"More time each day should be spent in the quietness--in stillness. This is an effective way to making communication. You are disappointed if you do not hear small, still voices inside your head. I would tell you that this is not the usual method of communication. All of you have felt urgings, have known the things that you should be doing. You have felt the need to aid your brother, to go to worship services, to love your children, to love your neighbor's children, to love the children of the backward countries who have nothing to eat. You indeed are communicating; these indeed are not just of your own making. These ideas are prodded and encouraged, implanted by your guides. You expect so much when already you have so much. You may indeed hear that small, still voice if you listen. Many do, many do not. You must trust yourself. Trust your inner guidings. Believe that we are here and that we are aiding you." (Clois, 11/1/92).

"If you spend time each day in quiet, in a place where you retain the joy of a happy or more relaxed moment, when you give up all worldly concerns and let the mind be free and the heart open, you can release much tension and much aggravation, anxiousness in this process. It is not bad to feel anxious or to worry, however, it is just that it is a waste of time, especially when there is so much to be joyful, or to be at one with, such as the sound of rain, the song of birds, the light of day; yes, there is another way, if you choose." (Astara, 12/11/92)

This wonderful freedom of choice, this gift from the Father is so precious. I continued regular stillness even if I felt frustrated or felt that it was unsuccessful. I learned to look to the longer run, not to expect too much in any one session.

Traveling to Utah and Idaho

In May, 1992, I traveled to Utah, met with Ham, and attended a meeting of the Woods Cross group. Every group has group dynamics of emotions and viewpoints. This was true of the Woods Cross group. I was rather surprised at how many people had been willing to move from a strong Mormon background to acceptance of The Urantia Book and the teaching mission. I found these people culturally different from my California culture and extremely delightful and genuine. I found very little pretense and very much sincerity and truth seeking. I traveled up to Idaho and met a number of people in those groups. Vistas were beautiful and the people were friendly and charming. Meanwhile back in Utah, I had an opportunity to ask Ham more about the teacher requested for our area.

"The time of the arrival of your teacher is dependent on those preparing and prepared for his eventual communications to your group. I am, however, at liberty to tell you that the teacher who is assigned to your group is Jared. Jared is an extremely capable teacher who is even at this time amongst those who are now in the group and will become part of the group.... There are those in your group who have already sensed the contact. Their will creature acceptance is dependent upon the elimination of fear, faith in the process, and the love of Jared, your teacher. This method must preserve the requirement of faith in those who react and act as receiver-transmitters. We are proscribed in this, that it is so subtle a direction that the contact person must have faith...meditation and quiet time is essential...." (Ham, 5/31/92)

By apparent chance, our study group increased to triple its previous size. The summer was a time of spiritual questing and much excitement. Some of us could sense the presence of Jared's teacher corps during our group prayers even though a speaking transmitter had not yet emerged. There was a crescendo of good feelings perhaps reaching a peak at our Jesus' birthday celebration in August. Our first spoken transmission came on August 25, 1992. Our first transmitter, Lisa, is one of those sweet, understated people who, while not having read The Urantia Book, lives the teachings in her daily life. I have known Lisa for many years and I know that it is not her style to seek glory or even speak in groups. She shuns anything pretentious and is a busy working mom. Let me quote (with her permission) some of her story.

"Beginnings: experiences of a transmitter"from Lisa's Journal

"Sometime in February or March, I gradually became aware of a voice in my head talking to me about everyday things, gently directing my thoughts and actions. Mostly the voice told me about my kids, things I already knew but confirmed good approaches. It was very positive and loving. The voice mostly spoke to me in the shower, before falling asleep and when waking up.

"As time went on, I got more comfortable with it and heard more.... He told me neat things about my children, things that worked well with them, regular stuff. It is actually hard to remember specifics; it just became a part of my daily routine. I talked to [my spouse] about it a couple of times and decided it was my conscience or my Thought Adjuster. (Lisa knew of Thought Adjusters from conversations with our Urantia Book readers).

"The voice tended to get stronger and more defined. I was clear that it was a man's voice coming from outside, above my head and to the back, left. I got really used to the voice; we had nice comforting conversations daily. It naturally seemed a part of me.

"During the spring, I did attempt to listen to some tapes of Ham's teachings. I found it very difficult and only listened to parts of a couple of tapes. I felt overwhelmed; I could not do one more thing....

"On Wednesday, August 12, in the evening, I asked [my spouse] about Gennie's trip to Utah where she spoke to Ham and asked about Jared. Ham said Jared had attempted to contact everyone in the group. I suddenly sat up very straight. My mind was whirling. How did this relate to me? Was I part of the group? I was terrified; I cried. I asked [my spouse] if my voice could be Jared. My reaction also surprised me. I had not been attending the meetings--why would I respond?

"Thursday morning, 8/13/92, I awoke early, which is very unusual for me. I felt very quiet and peaceful. I asked:

"Are you Jared?"

"Yes."

"At that moment I had no doubt, the answer was very strong and clear. It wasn't until later that my intellect kicked in and I questioned my sanity....I had not been attending many meetings, done much reading, or even listened to many tapes. I did not know much about this. Bob helped confirm many of my perceptions and reassured me.... After all, he had asked for the teacher.

"...I continue to be amazed at how presumptuous I felt and yet equally compelled to share this information....I continued to wonder why I was the one to hear Jared, our group's teacher; as well, I continued to question if it was real. I got some pretty clear answers....I am fairly "clean" in that I don't have as many emotional distractions—I don't have many emotional scars from my childhood, I don't consume substances like alcohol or caffeine. The biggest thing: Jared could relate to me about my children.

"Friday morning, 8/14/92, I realized that the voices were more distant. It is up to me to choose to continue to hear the voices. I must make a conscious, willed, choice to continue hearing. I didn't want to lose them, to lose this opportunity, this gift, so I chose to continue....At the same time, it scared the living daylights out of me. I wanted some confirmation of the reality of it and didn't know how to get it. At the same time, I did not need any confirmation, I knew it was real and I just needed to trust my own feelings....

"September, 1992. During the beginning of September, I am sensing more and more spiritual presences.... The voices become stronger as I come to accept more and fear less. The feeling is always warm and loving and patient. They have all of eternity.

"Saturday 9/12. We had another practice session at Bob's....It took quite a while to establish contact. ...I was being "plugged in." It felt like it was a pretty good connection and I was able to transmit for 45-60 minutes. I could really feel Jared and was able to transmit his messages. The contact felt stronger-better. I was able to laugh and be more aware of the people without losing the connection with Jared. As is usually the case, I don't remember much about what was said."

Psychological, sociological, historical, and other explanations

In my heart, experientially, I am convinced of the authenticity of the mission and its supernal teachers. In my mind, of course, I continue to ask questions. I have had many doubts, especially early on. Now, I occasionally look for doubts but just don't find any that penetrate my heart-conviction-certainty. This is not to say that many aspects of the mission are not a mystery to me. This is not to say that I do not reflect on apparent inconsistencies, contradictions, and seeming errors in transmissions. However, most of these seem unimportant for my spiritual growth. The tendered explanations for the transmissions that I am aware of require more assumptions, suppositions, speculation, and logical gymnastics than the belief that transmissions are really from celestial personalities. I have yet to hear an explanation that explains anything. I have yet to hear a theory that is in any way comprehensive. To me, most so-called explanations are simply labels, buzz-words like "mass hysteria" or "multiple personality." The trouble is that most psychology that deals with mind dynamics is itself an art, hypothetical, or at the root, simply conjecture. During twenty-five years as a clinical psychologist, I simply have not seen any client manifestation or pathology that comes near the consistency, depth, or has the spiritual qualities of these transmissions.

The power of beliefs, even erroneous beliefs, is great and is known in psychology. Festinger's book, When Prophecy Fails, is an excellent chronology of the social and psychological dynamics of beliefs that fail in objective predictions and how people tend to rearrange their outlook to incorporate dissonant data into the old belief system. As William James said, "When most people think they are thinking, they are just rearranging their prejudices." There are natural dangers or pitfalls of the human mind. I do not suggest that it is appropriate to be foolish or blissfully gullible, to accept every unusual thought as from teachers or the Adjuster. The Urantia Book is clear on this. "This is dangerous ground, and every human being must settle these problems for himself in accordance with his natural human wisdom and superhuman insight." (UB 1208:6) Indeed, in our secular and scientific society any belief beyond the dead level of replicable empiricism is often looked upon with disdain, including a belief in the authenticity of The Urantia Book. Present-day scientific psychology still has no place for God.

Although I have served as a hypnotherapist, have occasionally had to hospitalize psychotic brothers or sisters, and have sat many hours with many disturbed individuals, none of these experiences ring similar to the teacher transmissions. The types of pathology involving auditory hallucinations and complex delusions are typically paranoid schizophrenia, bipolar mood disorder, and dissociative personality disorders such as multiple personality. I have worked professionally with schizophrenic, borderline, and manic-depressive individuals. I find little similarity between these individuals and the receiver-transmitters of the teaching mission. Although DSM-III-R allows for multiple personality, even individuals so diagnosed do not manifest the types of behavior found in the teaching mission. And we know from The Urantia Book that true personality is not multiple and is not even the same construct as is used in contemporary psychology. Involvement in the teaching mission necessitates an accompanying belief system which may have transitory delusional components. The same is true of The Urantia Book. The Jungian concepts of "archetypes," "a collective unconscious," and a "personal unconscious" have little or no empirical basis, depending on whom you talk to. Many theoreticians regard this all as sheer speculation. I personally am enamored with Carl Jung and hold the opinion that some of his theory is corroborated by The Urantia Book. However, no psychological theory, much less rubrics like "mass delusions," or "upsurging group needs," even begins to satisfy me in explaining the phenomena of the teaching mission, much less my personal experience (cf. UB 1107:7-8). I think any theory that claims to invalidate the reality of these transmissions must account for the following (a partial list): the consistent and coherent Urantia Book values emerging from transmitters at diverse geographical locations; the same values emerging from TRs who have no previous knowledge of The Urantia Book; "teachers" that function and manifest as an integrated team; people emerging as receiver-transmitters who not only don't know of The Urantia Book, but have no history of any interest in or belief in channeling, or are opposed to it; spouses, relatives, and close friends that quickly recognize that the "transmission" is not coming from their friend, relative, or spouse; people "hearing voices" who have no previous history of hallucinations or pathology; people experiencing "teacher contact" who are totally surprised by the experience and had no knowledge or expectation of it; thousands of pages of transcripts with nearly identical messages despite the fact that many of these groups have no knowledge of one another's activities; remarkably high inter- and intra-transcript consistency; the reported fact that teaching group members can readily identify the same teacher transmitted through different receiver-transmitters by personality and style rather than name; teachers often convey information that the TR has no knowledge of; often the teacher will know who wants to speak next or what question is on someone's mind, even if the TR's eyes are closed; the same reported goal of the mission whether it emerges in the USA, New Zealand, France, etc.; astounding experiential congruence among all the mission transmitters; the rapid growth of the mission; and most important, the testimony of an ever-expanding corps of sincere seekers who have directly experienced the teacher personality presence.

The Urantia Book does verify that humans can sense personality presence. "Man's own personality awareness, self-consciousness, is also directly dependent on this very fact of innate other awareness, this innate ability to recognize and grasp the reality of other personality, ranging from the human to the divine" (UB196:4). The teachers instruct us that beginning contact may be detected by the awareness of "otherness" (their word).

The teachers repeatedly refer to the transmissions as "a new form of communication." So, historical explanations for the transmissions are greatly limited or nullified. There is almost no historical precedent for this phenomenon which the teachers say is dependent upon the opening of spiritual circuits, closed up to the present by the quarantine of the Lucifer rebellion.

Books could be written, filled, with psychological-social-historical attempts to explain the teaching mission as psychic, diabolical, pathological, fraudulent, human, and so on. Lengthy rebuttals could also be generated. But the true answer lies Within. The teachers and The Urantia Book have offered us a way to validate the mission. Try it for yourself. Subject it to the unfathomable crucible of direct experiential validation. Use the criteria on page 1458:3 for when an experience is good. Consider the practical test of strange religious experiences given on page 1000:6. Practice silent communion daily; seek the Father; seek the answer from your Spirit of Truth; look for the fruits of the spirit. Be patient, for not all answers come quickly or easily. What does it matter if you don't find "teachers"? This is not what the mission is about. The mission is about seeking within and loving one another. It's very simple, feeling God's love and passing it on to another.

"I charge you that this is your purpose, to pleasantly infect all those around you with the Truth. At the same time, I would caution you to go about it in the same way that your Creators do. Many of His disciples wanted drum rolls and trumpets, and to declare Truth to the world, and He chose not to pursue this method. And I charge you to take this lesson to heart. The word will be spread quietly by each of you. You each have unique opportunities.... Some of you will be traveling to other parts of the country, and of the world. Take the Truth with you and gently, gently, infect those around you. Much is happening now. Many people are being awakened. Many people are finding the Truth. This will be a quiet revolution. There will be no trumpets. There will be no drum rolls. There will be a wave of Truth that spreads, spreads, ever so gently, across the nation, across the planet."(Esther, 8/30/92)

The Urantia Book context

"Our Father is well aware of the hard work and the dedication you have to The Urantia Book and its teachings."(Fundore, 1/22/92)

Thankfully, as free will creatures each one of us is at liberty to interpret The Urantia Book in our own way, according to our own light. You may find other passages or interpret those quoted here differently. I recognize that there is always danger in taking quotations out of context. I offer you a perspective that intrigues me in possibly foreshadowing the teaching mission. I respect that you may have a different interpretation and prefer other passages.

"Urantia is now quivering on the very brink of one of its most amazing and enthralling epochs of social readjustment, moral quickening, and spiritual enlightenment." (UB 2082:7, cf. also 1259:1) Of course, The Urantia Book conditions us to think in terms of centuries or millennia, but how far away could "the very brink" be? "All Urantia is waiting for the proclamation of the ennobling message of Michael, unencumbered by the accumulated doctrines and dogmas of nineteen centuries of contact with the religions of evolutionary origin. The hour is striking for presenting to Buddhism, to Christianity, to Hinduism, even to the peoples of all faiths, not the gospel about Jesus, but the living, spiritual reality of the gospel of Jesus." (UB 1041:5) Is this new proclamation limited just to The Urantia Book, or could there be more? How would the billions of illiterate people be reached? The Urantia Book is not translated into even a handful of the hundreds of languages on Earth. How will "the peoples of all faiths" be touched with Jesus' Truth?

"It is understandable that you would be concerned about the availability, the affordability of The Urantia Book. The Urantia Book has touched many hands and through the hands that have held the book and absorbed into their being the knowledge that is contained within this book, there are many fertile human beings alive on this planet who are able to disseminate the information and understanding of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. It will, in time, find its way into more hands; but for now the important thing here is to be a living book, living the truth and spreading the word through your humanness. Human action, even your thoughts, are means of transporting into others love inspiring faith." (Astara, 11/15/92)

How crazy is it to think that celestial beings are making direct contact with Urantians at this time? If you are a believer in The Urantia Book, I will assume that you believe: that Ratta gave birth to invisible children; that Adam and Eve were eight to ten feet tall, glowed violet, and communicated with each other by telepathy; that there was an invisible planetary Prince with a staff of human-looking but superhuman beings; that the female of a pair of non-speaking primates gave birth to two completely human children; that an invisible Melchizedek incarnated as a visible human and lived near Salem for ninety years; that once a human couple had offspring consisting of nineteen children with skin colors of either orange, green, red, blue, yellow, or indigo; that brilliant, high, invisible beings went berserk and created a galactic rebellion in our corner of the universe; that calcium atoms can hitchhike across the heavens on sunbeams; that demons once existed and could possess the minds of mortals; that humans of the distant past could fly five hundred miles non-stop on talking passenger birds; that seers through the ages have received contact from invisible beings; that God lived on Earth as a human, raised a man from the dead, and after his own mortal death returned and appeared to hundreds of people; that other planets are inhabited; that we evolved from frogs; that we have an innate capacity to sense personality as well as the directions of the compass; that unseen beings are the permanent inhabitants of this planet; that Amadon, a primitive Earthling, ate of the fruit of the Tree of Life and lived for over 100,000 years; that ethereal beings spoke through a man who was sleeping and generated the contents of The Urantia Book; and that we have invisible beings following us everywhere we go. Why is it so difficult to entertain the belief that higher beings are contacting us and speaking to us through human transmitters now in the twentieth century?

"Divine truth must not be discounted because the channel of its bestowal is apparently human." (UB1733:1)

I was especially struck by what teachers Daniel and Ham say compared with the following passage in The Urantia Book. "If Christianity persists in neglecting its spiritual mission...the spiritual renaissance must await the coming of these new teachers of Jesus' religion who will be exclusively devoted to the spiritual regeneration of men. And then will these spirit-born souls quickly supply the leadership and inspiration requisite for the social, moral, economic, and political reorganization of the world." (UB 2082:9 - 2083:1) "Not only will there be more spiritual uplifting, but there will also be guidance and help given in social, political, environmental, and other scientific areas to help this planet which is in a state of crisis...." (Daniel, 2/2/92) "... Spiritual enlightenment and individual and group and national and planetary progress is anticipated. Also too, along with the spiritual uplifting, we are anticipating and desiring cooperation in other areas of human life endeavor as well, chiefly economic, political, social, environmental and technical changes. Of course, we are anticipating many years duration of this initial phase of our mission." (Ham, L.A., 2/1/92) "This new and oncoming social order will not settle down complacently for a millennium." (UB 1086:4) The teachers have referred to the Correcting Time as 1000 years (see above). "That centuries have passed with no signs of the appearance of the 'New Age' is in no way out of harmony with Jesus' teaching." (UB 1860:5, 1146:4) "Mortal man is passing through a great age of expanding horizons and enlarging concepts on Urantia,...." (UB 1146:4)"The quickest way to realize the brotherhood of man on Urantia is to effect the spiritual transformation of present-day humanity. The only technique for accelerating the natural trend of social evolution is that of applying spiritual pressure from above, thus augmenting moral insight while enhancing the soul capacity of every mortal to understand and love every other mortal." (UB 598:2) I have always wondered what was meant by "spiritual pressure from above." I am inclined to believe the teachers are applying that pressure now. "This, if you want to look at as spiritual pressure...it is in fact that."(Tarkas, 12/23/92)

What likelihood is there that Machiventa will appear on Urantia in our lifetime? The Chief of Seraphim of Urantia, a primary supernaphim from Paradise, writes, "Some believe that Machiventa will not come to take personal direction of Urantian affairs until the end of the current dispensation.... Still others, including this narrator look for Melchizedek's appearance any day or hour." (UB 1251:4) And, a Melchizedek writes, "...it is altogether possible that Machiventa Melchizedek may again appear in person on Urantia and in some modified manner resume the role of the dethroned Planetary Prince, or else appear on earth to function as vicegerent Planetary Prince representing Christ Michael...." (UB 1025:2) These are, in fact, the claims of the teaching mission (see above, Ham's announcement in LA, 2/1/92).

Certainly I would agree that Urantia does not appear on the surface to be nearing the Age of Light and Life. Yet, as compared to a very advanced culture on a neighboring planet, "The pouring out of the Spirit of Truth provides the spiritual foundation for the realization of great achievements in the interests of the human race of the bestowal world. Urantia is therefore far better prepared for the more immediate realization of a planetary government with its laws, mechanisms, symbols, conventions, and language--all of which could contribute so mightily to the establishment of world-wide peace under law and could lead to the sometime dawning of a real age of spiritual striving; and such an age is the planetary threshold to the utopian ages of light and life." (UB 820:4)

"This world has never seriously or sincerely or honestly tried out these dynamic ideas and divine ideals of Jesus' doctrine of the kingdom of heaven. But you should not become discouraged by the apparently slow progress of the kingdom idea on Urantia. Remember that the order of progressive evolution is subjected to sudden and unexpected periodical changes in both the material and the spiritual worlds." (UB 1863:12) So, despite the general slowness of evolution, there may be sudden transformations as well. Compare also, "When physical conditions are ripe, sudden mental evolutions may take place; when mind status is propitious, sudden spiritual transformations may occur...." (UB 740:3) "The hour is striking for a rediscovery of the true and original foundations of present-day distorted and compromised Christianity--the real life and teachings of Jesus." (UB 2083:2) "The time is ripe to witness the figurative resurrection of the human Jesus from his burial tomb amidst the theological traditions and the religious dogmas of nineteen centuries." (UB 2090:3)

A Melchizedek of Nebadon writes, "At the time of this writing, much of Asia rests its hope in Buddhism. Will this noble faith, that has so valiantly carried on through the dark ages of the past, once again receive the truth of expanded cosmic realities even as the disciples of the great teacher in India once listened to his proclamation of new truth? Will this ancient faith respond once more to the invigorating stimulus of the presentation of new concepts of God and the Absolute for which it has so long searched?" (UB 1041:4)

Start here -- April 30th zoom meeting:

Regarding China, an Archangel says, "This ancient culture has contributed much to human happiness; millions of human beings have lived and died, blessed by its achievements. For centuries this great civilization has rested upon the laurels of the past, but it is even now reawakening to envision anew the transcendent goals of mortal existence, once again to take up the unremitting struggle for never-ending progress." (UB 888:6)

Speaking of the later evolution of religion on Urantia, a Melchizedek comments, "Religion progressed from nature worship up through ghost worship to fetishism throughout the savage childhood of the races. With the dawn of civilization the human race espoused the more mystic and symbolic beliefs, while now, with approaching maturity, mankind is ripening for the appreciation of real religion, even a beginning of the revelation of truth itself." (UB 1003:7-1004:1) It is interesting to me that The Urantia Book raises the possibility of the benign virus of love so pervading the sentimental emotion-stream of humanity that all civilization would be encompassed by love—the realization of the brotherhood of man (UB 1098:4). Is this what the new teachers intend to bring about?

It seems to me that the great religious civilizations of the world are gearing up, now, in the twentieth century for a kind of spiritual renaissance. References to things that will or could happen in the twentieth century occur at least twenty-three times in The Urantia Book. Why so many references to this century in a revelation that is alleged to have its golden era hundreds of years in the future? Notable passages can be found in connection with The Urmia Lectures and Secular Totalitarianism. Consider, in just seven years all those references will be history. Could it be that, with the advent of The Urantia Book and now the continuation of this revelation in the teacher corps, Urantia is being prepared for one of those sudden spiritual uplifts mentioned on page 1863?

The book refers to these as dangerous times (UB 765:2). It says, "And such times of great testing and threatened defeat are always times of great revelation." (UB 2082:8) Even greater than The Urantia Book alone? Why were we instructed by headquarters in the early years to form thousands of study groups? Study alone is hardly the living gospel alluded to so frequently in the latter sections of the book. How could the figurative resurrection be limited to small groups ever increasing with cerebralizations of cosmic facts? How do we move from study groups to the living gospel, the living brotherhood? From a religion about Jesus to the religion of Jesus? (UB 2090:3) Is the teaching mission a critical link? Jesus referred many times to "an age to come" (e.g., UB 1229:1). "Although Jesus referred one phase of the kingdom to the future and did, on numerous occasions, intimate that such an event might appear as a part of a world crisis..." (UB 1863:13), it strikes me that we are in a world crisis right now in the 1990s. "He promised a new revelation of the kingdom on earth and at some future time...." (UB 1863:13) Is the teaching mission part of this new revelation of the kingdom?

The teachers tell us that they are just a little above us. This follows with a theme in The Urantia Book that those above serve as teachers to those just below (see UB 498:2, 812:4). It seems evident from The Urantia Book that there is a local universe corps of teachers that serves even down to individual mortals wherein morontia mortals (teachers) are assigned to still lower orders of mortals (us). Notice how this is implied in the following quotation regarding certain angels called The Teaching Counselors. "These angels are the invaluable assistants of the spiritual teaching corps of the local universe. Teaching counselors are secretaries to all orders of teachers, from the Melchizedeks and the Trinity Teacher Sons down to the morontia mortals who are assigned as helpers to those of their kind who are just behind them in the scale of ascendant life....These ministrations extend on down to the individual worlds." (UB 428:7-429:1)

The rebellion on Urantia had its origins back in Dalamatia, city of the Prince, with his corporeal staff of one hundred ascendant mortals. (UB 574:4) It does not surprise me that, with the inauguration of a new dispensation, and post-rebellion healing, the Correcting Time would mirror the Dalamatian model—but with a loyal Planetary Prince. So, Prince Melchizedek has returned now with a staff, consisting initially of one hundred ascendant mortals. This time the staff is not incarnating but is touching us via spiritual circuits recently opened, and the number of teachers is increasing daily to fully accommodate the spiritual openness of humanity.

Experiences with teacher Jared

It is my greatest desire to share with you my happiness about this new endeavor. Our teacher is a fused ascendant mortal with origin on a nearby planet and is many thousands of Earth years old. We do not know much more about the history of our teacher. He has been wise enough to deflect most of our curiosity questions and urges us to search and ask about more spiritually relevant issues. We are told that he is a teacher of teachers and has many beings with him when he transmits. Jared is unwavering in his gracious simplicity, rigorous in his urgings to seek within. Perhaps the best way to introduce Jared is to share some of his words.

"I am Jared. I am your teacher. Welcome to all of you who have come seeking. I am delighted that there are so many present here who are interested in our teaching mission. We have much to share, and much help is available to those of you who wish for it. We wish also to reassure those of you who are unsure of the origins. We are here only for those who wish to come, and we will contact only those who wish to have such contact. There is always choice available, and even should you choose for contact now, you may later choose not to continue receiving this contact. We have chosen to come in a way that we hope is less frightening. We speak to you in the same way you speak to each other. We come, though, to share God's great love with all of you and ask that you share it with one another. You will find much coming back to you and much that will spread out and be shared with others as they share with others, too. I hope you will be open to these teachings and hope we can assist you on your path toward God's will. Are there questions for me this evening?"(Jared, 1/7/93)

Jared speaks with simple eloquence. He is disciplined about referring us back to our inner stillness for the answers to our questions. Yet he shares many truths, some so simple they are easily overlooked. Visitors sometimes shrug and yawn at his many versions of the same message—seek within; do small kindnesses to others.

"For each of you to search within yourselves and find God's love and share it with another, it is helpful in changing many things in this world. We hope that by coming to you more concretely and more clearly, you will find it easier to follow God's will. If you mix it some with your own thoughts in your own head, it does not matter as the result is the same; you will be performing God's will. Those people who choose to be transmitters are assisted and cautioned in being more careful in hearing separate voices and being clear of their own part, but each of you is encouraged to listen within and find the assistance available in doing God's will.

It is not overly important to distinguish the exact source."(Jared, 1/7/93)

For me, the most important thing is the personality contact, the interpersonal interaction. I experience asking questions, regardless of how silly they seem, and the receiving of answers, as inherently uplifting. Here is an example interchange.

Q. "...the study group that I go to and the area that I'm associated with—the people are very negative on the mission and communications of this kind.... What can I tell them the goal of the mission is?"

A. "To bring great change in this world by each person sharing small acts of kindness with another...."(1/7/93)

Q. "Good evening. I wonder if you would say something to us about the value of studying the tapes and transmissions of yours and of the other teachers."

A. "I was delighted to hear the conversation this evening. The tapes and the transcripts are very important. There are many parts of my message and they require frequent listening to be absorbed. Some people learn better by listening, by hearing the intonations and the phrasings. Others are more visual and absorb best by reading the materials. A combination of methods is probably most helpful to most people. I strongly recommend that each person take time to listen and to read as you will be surprised what you will learn...."

Q. "In what way is the searching as important as the hearing?"

A. "It allows you to search for God and search for God's will. It is a search of faith and a search of trust and many times teaches you to quiet your mind and to learn to see the beauty around you. It teaches you to listen within and to believe in yourself and trust in your own feelings. It is important to know that, as you truly trust yourself, trust in the quietness, trust in the gentleness that is within you, you will find God's will and be able to perform that will with more ease."

Q. "So, it is really the growth through the experience of doing it as much as it is the answer that you get?"

A. "Yes. It is important to remember that many people will never hear a teacher's voice within themselves. It is not the goal of the mission for you to hear us. The goal of our mission is for you to receive our message, receive God's message through us. There are many ways of doing that. For some it has been important that they are able to hear us so they may transmit our message to others. Many people will find their place by listening to the mission and incorporating it and by doing God's will as opposed to hearing it only...."(Jared, 10/15/92)

"You are requested to seek stillness to allow us entry, to allow us to speak through you, to allow us to speak to you in ways you can hear. Not everyone will hear us; it is not important that all of you do. It is only important that you seek. Stilling the mind and reaching for us has been found to be very difficult for you. Your efforts are commended, nonetheless. We suggest you continue to try and not be frustrated with your failures. They are not failures. Perhaps your standards are too high. Your seeking is important. Sit quietly and seek for us, for our teachings; think for what you can do this day to help another. Remember also what you did yesterday to help another. Be proud of yourself for your efforts.

"Stillness is also encouraged when you are going about your daily activities. You can find the stillness even momentarily in daily tasks. This is also very helpful. As you are out watering your garden, quiet your mind, do not concentrate on all the things you have done that day. Instead, enjoy the moment, enjoy the flowers, and enjoy the trees, and enjoy the grass. In that way you are also seeking, you are quieting your mind from your daily anxieties. If possible, give yourself some time each day when you will not allow your anxieties to intrude. In that way you are finding the stillness, in that way you are searching.

"Many times, also, you are not sure what you should do at the moment. Perhaps you can sit quietly and see what is most important. In that way you are also seeking because you will learn to listen within and that will help with your ability to hear our guidance. Does this help?...." (Jared, 10/1/92)

"Perhaps it is time to share with you all the first step in our lessons. In learning to do God's will you must first know of God's will. There are many avenues to that finding, many ways of searching. You are all searching as you have chosen to come. There are many others who are also searching, but who have not chosen to be here.

"The first step for each of you is to calm your mind in such a way that you can hear us. There are many, many ways of doing that. Seeking the stillness is our first recommendation. It may work for you to sit quietly and allow your daily cares to leave. Allow peace and tranquillity to descend upon you and allow yourself to relax. In that way you are open to us. It helps many to pray quietly and give thankfulness for what is available to them. Others find stillness very difficult. There are other ways of achieving that calm. Find something, find a quiet activity that is soothing and appealing. For some it may be watering a garden, for others washing dishes, for others laying quietly—whatever you can do to allow your mind to rest and be calm.

"The next step is to allow that calmness to become a part of your life. In your daily activities allow that calmness to be part of you. As you achieve each bit of calmness you will be open to more and more and will find it easier to achieve. Those are very major steps and take a long time. Many things get in the way. Illness, anger, frustration, busyness all are disruptive of this process. Patience is required. It takes a long time. It may take a long time to achieve a calm within yourself. As you seek this calmness, ask for God's assistance. It is available to all of you and will make it easier.

"There are many in the world not able to embark on this search. Many who begin searching will go no further than achieving more calmness. It is, however, to be applauded whenever progress is made, whenever the search is begun, whenever calmness is increased. It will make tremendous strides in this world. Others are more receptive and able to hear us. Many who seek calmness and achieve some measure of calmness are able to hear us without awareness. As they are truly searching, they will be guided and begin doing more of God's will. That much is a great step and much hoped for by teachers.

"There are others who are more receptive and able to hear a voice consciously. They will get more guidance and be able to share with others. Lisa was able to hear me as a distinctly separate voice and in that manner grew comfortable with me and accepting of me and eventually learned to acknowledge me as her teacher, as the group's teacher, and because of her trust in me, and her trust in God, has been able to share with the group. I am grateful for her ability to do so as it is the only way I have of affecting many lives. I hope to be able to share God's love and God's teaching with many, many people. I too work one step at a time. I have gained her trust and she in turn has shared with others. I feel your beginnings to trust me and then you will be able to share with others as well. Our mission is to share God's love and God's goodness with all beings. There are many who will, who may not be open, who may not choose to listen and that is, of course, their choice. I hope to be able to touch many lives, those who are willing, those who are seeking. I am grateful to you for coming. I am gratified by your desire for the word of God as shared by the teachers. I am looking forward to many more teachings." (Jared, 10/8/92)

It is difficult to put into words the experience of weekly sessions with an ascendant teacher. It is so experiential. Probably the most important things I have learned haven't been expressed in words. There is the time spent reflecting on transmissions, the all too human emotional reactions, the subtler spiritual insights, and always the daily silent prayer time. The greatest change I see in my attitude is a shift in emphasis from asking Jared to asking within. I began more preoccupied with the group. Now, I find my preoccupation is with deepening my stillness, seeking my answers there. And, of course, with this goes the desire to reach out and love.

The mind of a teacher

When I read The Urantia Book, I often try to penetrate the minds of the authors, to discern their frames of reference, to sense their outlooks and attitudes. In this way I feel I know these high beings a little. The same is true of the teaching mission. I have noticed that teachers do not seem to forget or lose track of veins of conversation. They often seem to know a question before it is asked. Sometimes the latency between a question and answer is lightening fast. Often the answer is so big in concept and comprehensive that I forget the beginning by the end. I know that I could not generate such lengthy and complete answers in the fraction of a second between some questions and some answers. There are occasions when a question has multiple parts. I often lose track, but the teachers don't seem to. Even after a lapse of time beyond my short-term memory span, a teacher will bring up the remaining parts that even the questioner may have forgotten. Some teachers seem to know who wants to speak next, even though the TR's eyes are closed. Some answers are so long and involved that I cannot track the mind of the teacher the full course. It is nearly essential for me to study tapes or transcripts in order to grasp a communication. Transmitters often garble words in attempting to paraphrase an internal message but are able to transmit without vocal flaws. In my experience, teachers do not manifest ego preoccupation, impatience, fatigue, lapses of consciousness, or loss of poise as we humans do. Their knowledge of The Urantia Book content seems always available to them, notwithstanding the difficulty some TRs have in transmitting names, numbers, and certain factual material. There is a steadiness to teacher presence that, for me, goes beyond human capabilities. At this point the minds of teachers are inscrutable to me. There are many other aspects of teacher communications that convince me of their enormous mental capabilities. It has taken repeated contact for me to become sensitive to these extraordinary nuances. Just one experience may not be that impressive. Personal inner contact with teacher presence may be more impressive. Teacher minds certainly intrigue me, yet I cannot fathom them.

"By their fruits, you shall know them...."(Jesus, UB 1572:7)

What are the fruits of the teaching mission? This is a difficult question since time must be allowed between planting and harvest. The mission is still very new. I can only share how things appear through my eyes, my own experience. Time will tell. I see many more people in the Urantia readership talking to each other. I see a great upsurge of new people led to the mission and then developing a hunger for the "backstory" provided in The Urantia Book. I see the teaching mission stimulating a real and broad sense of community. I see the higher purpose of study groups beginning to blossom. I see many people seeking guidance more determinedly than ever. I see people dedicating themselves to daily silent communion. I see more people having first hand rather than second hand spiritual experiences. I see people thinking and wrestling with issues of Truth. I see new friendships forming. I see more brotherhood and less of the elitism that has tragically infected some reader organizations. I see new openness and new intimacy emerging; the genuineness and open-heartedness the teachers show us is contagious. I see a new hope emerging for individuals and the entire planet. I see a conspiracy of goodness leaking forth between the cracks of a bleak and distraught world. And I see The Urantia Book being brought to life.

Teacher transmissions

One way to become acquainted with this mission is to read excerpts of transmissions from the various teachers. To me the similarity is remarkable.

"'Remember me,' asks our Father, 'for I love you and will deliver you to my side in eternity.' Great is our mission to bring us all closer to remembering the Father daily in our lives. With love and gratitude we have come to serve you. Remember, we love you and are keeping you in God's care through your Faith." (Ansol, 9/18/92)

"The campfires of your world whether on plain or forest warm their visitors on one side only. But when you stand by the fire of the Father's love, it warms through and through. The Father's flame is a flame that you may carry with you in your hearts no matter how far you travel from your fuel source. You may share its warmth with all whom you encounter. As that flame transfers itself from one fire brand to another, so shall the Father's flame transfer itself from one heart to another. Nothing more is required from each of you than a degree of proximity. We ask that you approach near enough to your neighbors that the Father's flame is allowed to pass." (Melchizedek, Will transcripts, 4/5/92)

"Here is the framework which we propose as a hierarchy for application of our teachings: (1) communion with the Heavenly Father; (2) family time; (3) applications of our instruction to your daily interaction with your earthly brothers and sisters; (4) the ordinary maintenance of material concerns. This is a hierarchy of quality, not total hours...." (Onanecalek, 1/13/92)

"I am Ham.... Our group in Woods Cross has been instructed as you have been instructed to go within yourselves, to search for your teacher. We are all equal in the eyes of our Father. He wants us all to be instructed, if we so desire, with a personal teacher. Each one has that privilege. Each one has that opportunity open to him if you so desire it in your hearts. This is a new form of communication as your teacher, Jared, has told you. It is difficult. It does take practice. It does take searching. You will have doubts. You will overcome those doubts as you share with each other. Our group is also in Salt Lake experiencing the same problems. But if you are willing, this will work for you. It is a beautiful new form of communication. Remember that you are all, that we are all, equal in the eyes of the Creator. Our group is also writing. Sometimes it is much easier to write than it is to speak the words. If the thoughts come, take up your paper and pen and write them down unto yourself where you may review those in private. Sometimes this is much easier and less threatening. As time goes by, these thoughts can then be transmitted through the form of the mouth. This is all your free will. This is a wonderful gift that is being presented to mankind. I am pleased to be with you here tonight.... Let your doubts flee. Try if you so desire. Remember, you are precious children of our Father. Christ Michael is your Teacher, also. He is ever with you. He is there for the asking to help you whenever you need. He is loving. He is kind. He is there for you also. He is no respecter of persons. You are all equal in his sight. Spread his love to all mankind. That is the message. See his face in each man that you meet. Know that he is your equal. Each man is your equal...." (Ham, Santa Rosa, CA., 9/17/92)

"AVOID 3-D THINKING. Doubt plus denial equal despair. All humans experience 3-D thinking. It is painful for you because it causes you to turn your backs to the Father. You must safeguard yourselves from these pitfalls. How? By practicing your stillness daily. This is good news!

"Would you be so grand as to ask the Father only to share your burdens, lighten your loads? Do you not believe the Father wishes to share your joys as well? He would have you bare yourselves to Him—your most shameful acts to your loftiest of feelings. Do not seek the Father only when you think you "need" His help, for without Him, you do not exist. You are mindless in your wanderings, an empty shell without His light.

"Daily practice of your stillness gives you a foundation for reaching for your Father. It is helpful in times of despair to have already established a knowledge of your own rhythm for spiritual seeking. Familiarity with your path to seeking stillness will help you in difficult times. You will have confidence in your ability to reach for the Lord.

"You must learn to let go of your fears, to reach for the Father with faith. You must give yourselves to Him and trust that He will provide reward. But, you must be careful not to test the Father. Do not seek Him one second, then stop to test for His answer the next. You cannot know when or how relief-reward will come, but you must surely trust that it will. The Father's ways are quite often unimaginable to you and will provide you with great surprise and joy, if you allow them. This is a most important act, to reach for the Father when you cannot see His arms are there to catch you. It is like a leap from a giant cliff. You must risk yourselves spiritually! It is a great measure of your faith.

"So, safeguard yourselves from 3Ds with daily stillness practice. The more you know your Father, the less you will doubt or deny His Presence. When the 3 Ds are upon you, erase your thinking! Take your giant leap of faith back into the arms of the Father. Allow your painful feelings to strengthen your faith in this way. Do not try to intellectualize or rationalize your way back, just close your eyes and jump!" (Will, Sebastopol, CA., 1/19/93)

"Now, go forth practicing loving service in brotherhood to all who touch your life experience. Do not neglect those closest to you. They contribute to who you are and how useful you can be, so see to their needs, comfort, and become alert to means of increasing their ability to trust you, rely on your commitments, stand on your loyalties, minister by your side." (Aflana, 3/2/92)

"Go forward into your daily life without fear. The Father is with you. No gaps exist in His plan. You cannot fall; you cannot fail. If you but turn your face to His light, all will be seen. His company is matchless, and He lives in the hearts and lives of every person you shall ever meet. Go out amongst them, for they are awaiting you. God goes with you." (Thicandor, 1/10/92)

"The Correcting Time which is now beginning—correction, which is now begun, may last for many years, perhaps a thousand, perhaps more, maybe less, in your terms of measurement. This length of the Correcting Time is dependent on humankind's capacity to understand and accept God and be willing for change to occur, for light, truth, and beauty to reign supreme on Urantia. At this particular time as the Correcting Time has begun there are celestial beings gathering. They have been gathering, watching, caring for you all for many, many centuries. They wait, patient, watchful, careful." (Abraham, New Zealand, 10/4/89)

Q. "Can you elaborate on the meaning of our personal lives and how this is important for the mission and our spiritual growth?"

A. "You have asked for the world. I will try to give you a piece. Your planet, Urantia, has been in isolation. You have felt alone and adrift in the universe. Mortals look at the stars and pray that there are others out there. This has been the curse of Urantia and of your life. But now your planet is rejoining the cosmic community.

"We are your first wave of friends that you can sense. While your planet is being re-incircuited, you will come into contact with more and more beings who co-inhabit the Father's universe. We are merely the pilgrims of this time. We are the first off the boat. You have always had scores, teams, armies of angelic assistance.

Surrounding you at all times are the Primary and the Secondary Midwayers, guardians of Urantia. Each one of you can communicate with Michael via the Spirit of Truth—a unique gift to this planet in isolation. And of course, each of you, and each of us, has an indwelling fragment of the Father Himself.

"But these helpers have not been so apparent as the burgeoning contact with our group of individual teachers. We are preparing you for your initiation into the citizenry of the universe. You will work side by side with beings seen and unseen, heard-unheard, in the days to come, this is the meaning of the Correcting Time.

"That is one element of the impact of this mission on your life. But there is more. You must be made familiar with the tools of the agondonter. You must be taught and led to recognize the voice of the Father within you. You will be taught to discern the gentle nudges of your guardian angels and you will begin to see the fleeting glimpses of the midwayers at work in your world and around your life. As you strengthen your connections, so will your soul strengthen, and you will begin to live more morontially. We will help you. We will guide you. This is the goal. The goal is to have a corps of mortals who live morontially on Urantia, and we foresee great success in this part of our mission. Does that answer?" (Rayson, 11/14/92, Sebastopol, CA.)

"All spiritual teachings must be evaluated by their content, and not followed or rejected because of the celebrity of their supposed source. The time is long past on this planet when religion can be promulgated by asserting the authority of the teacher; that system of religious instruction was effectively demolished by the Master in Palestine and the later Protestant Reformation in Europe. Neither do we seek to create a 'Star System' of religious instruction; 'If he said it, it must be so!'

"Such acceptance of any teachings does not lead to the kind of sincere searching and proving for one's self that we seek to promote. Again, it must be the teachings themselves and the effect they have on the students' lives, and not the claimed authority of their source that must be the final determinant in evaluating any religious teachings." (Seraphim, 1/28/92)

"Doing the will of the Father is the ultimate goal. That 'will' is to become one with the Father and in the process become one with all beings throughout all the Universes; for there is only the Father ultimately, and each of you is as one with the Father...this is your goal...this is your destiny." (James, 10/4/92)

"But the Father works as He always does, one human at a time; heart by heart, the people will be turned to the love of the Father." (Ramsey, 1/26/92)

"You have a textbook which was to prepare you for this stage of the revelation. Do you have any idea of how fortunate and cared for you have been on Urantia? To receive such a revelation before lifting the quarantine is impressive to me! I've lived a long time and had many experiences during my training, but have never beheld what I see happening here on Urantia—anywhere in the Local Universe! You are blessed among many...!

"I leave you with this. No longer fret over the pettiness of misunderstandings. Go forward and discover Truth. Look to motive and intention and let go of success and failure. You plant the seed and we will nourish it. Let's join our energies and creativeness and stretch Urantia into the next stage of Light and Life! Upward and Inward we march on wings of efforts and decisions. I am here to guide you and teach you." (Lor-El, 6/19/92)

You may choose to participate or not.

It is not necessary to join a group to have teacher contact, if you so desire. The mission is not primarily about groups, but about each individual finding the Thought Adjuster. "...Is it necessary for individuals to be involved in the teaching mission to gain enlightenment? Absolutely not." (Bertrand, 12/7/92) The teachers honor our free will completely. No judgment is made if you choose not to be involved. Each mortal has a unique path to Paradise. You are entitled to your free will without question or prejudice. Who is to say but that you may have another path to God?

"But you must know that the most important thing in this life is for you to discover our Father, to feel Him in your being, to know Him in your mind, and to love Him in your heart. All else will come to pass. By knowing the Father, you will know yourself. You will know your brothers and sisters. You will have unraveled the greatest experience of material living. Do not worry about tomorrow, for our Master told you that his Father knows you have need of many things. The Father loves you and will provide for you. Make your decision, stand firm in your resolution, and go forth now—today." (Welmek, 8/10/92)

"At this time, in this world, on Urantia, on earth, there is an acceleration of information descending into the earth plane, taking many forms: enlightened books, channels dotted across plains and mountains, across the seas, beings who have invited into their lives speakers from the realms.... Take time daily to look within your heart, for in your heart resides, what is termed, the faith connector, what is known as a path of illumination. Listen to your heart, your feelings. Heart centered people are needed to bring the light to all. Though the mind is a valuable tool, it is not so dependable as the heart.... And so be ever aware that there is no specific path to enlightenment, to God, other than through the path of love, through the heart." (Astara, 11/15/92)

Complete Acceptance

There is much about the teaching mission that is difficult to express in words. There are subtle nuances that emerge slowly, week by week, in a teacher group. In the Daniel transcripts, for example, there unfolds the delightful genuineness of the participants as question after question reveals the innermost heart and soul of the person. It is easy to love these people even at a great distance since their openness about personal, intimate matters is so evident. Time and time again group members unburden themselves of concerns and issues that might not serve status seeking or image making or ego gratification but that do serve soul growth. I believe that this kind of openness can emerge because the teachers are so completely accepting of us mortals. Most of the teachers had mortal origin so they can genuinely empathize with us. Daniel's lessons are so sweet, like primer lessons of love. Among humans, even dear friends, it is difficult to find consistent acceptance from others. Among the best of friends, unconditional love is still more an ideal than a reality. And so there are parts of our selves that we are reluctant to share for there may be the sting of rejection. Not so with the teachers. They tell me that we tend to idealize them. The teachers remind us often that they are not perfect, just a little above us. But in my experience I have found the teachers totally accepting even of our worst attributes. We are told that our Lord, Michael truly loves even our character flaws. It is a blessed experience to be in the presence of such total and, indeed, superhuman acceptance. It is such a relief to be totally accepted by another. The teachers model this behavior, and it is contagious. Writing this paper is my expression of my loyalty to my own experiential truth. I think we each have a responsibility to be loyal to our own personal experiential truth, even if it disagrees with another. To me this is one form of unity without uniformity. My desire is to share my joy with you. Regardless of your point of view, my fondest hope is that we can be friends and to a degree extend the kingdom of heaven on Earth. It does not matter whether you are the C.E.O. of URANTIA Foundation, the president of The Fellowship, the most wealthy and powerful person in the Urantia movement, someone who gives away computer indices, or the most humble and unknown citizen of Urantia. It does not matter whether you have read The Urantia Book, have a different life-style, are a newcomer to the book, or are the most crazy and obnoxious person on Earth. The Father loves us equally. Our job is to be brothers and sisters, to love one another, to be tolerant of each other's beliefs and practices. "Throughout the vicissitudes of life, remember always to love one another. Do not strive with men, even with unbelievers." (Jesus, UB 1932:3) I am confident that the teaching mission will not be the first or the last great test of our loyalties to these high values. What may initially discomfort us may in time be a blessing in disguise. My prayer for you is not that you believe in the mission, but that you experience the spiritual uplift, the heightened receptivity, that can be had experientially by any child of God on Urantia, regardless of doctrines and beliefs. For you, my sister, daughter of God, my brother, son of God, my agondonter friend, I pray for you that you (and I) feel the love of the Father. I leave you now with my profound respect for your free will. May it be pleasing in His sight. "To develop the relationship with the Father, the Thought Adjuster, is the single most important thing you can do. Nothing replaces this responsibility. Far better that you do this and entirely ignore the teaching mission, than that you seek a teacher but forget to communicate with the Spirit within. There is no question about this. Seek the Father first, and then all things will come. This is the highest Truth."(Linnel, 12/25/92)

Acknowledgments

I wish to thank all the people in teaching groups across the country who have most graciously granted me permission to quote their teachers. I have chosen to protect the privacy of individuals and not mention names or locations, but there are many of you and I salute you all! Most of the quotations presented herein are from different groups; a few are transmissions through the same transmitter-receiver in one location. Above all I want to express my gratitude to the teachers themselves for the gift of their words of instruction, inspiration, comfort, and love.

NOTES: ver. 2.3

"God's wake will wash across this universe. It is the tide that raises all boats." (Melchizedek, Will transcripts, 3/29/92)

"Seek, you are sought." (Ham, 5/31/92)

The Urantia Booksays, "Religion must provide itself with new and up-to-date slogans." (UB 2077:6) I like this one a friend told me recently: "The devil is dead; Armageddon has been called off; the gates of hell are closed."

"Welcome to change," is quoted from Ham, 2/1/92.

"Service of God is a sacred honor. When you enlist yourself in his service you align yourself with the great powers of the universe." (Signa, 10/30/92)

"Please pray with me for a moment. Heavenly Father, maker and ruler of all, help us all to recognize your service leading. Help us all to go forth with your spirit of love in our hearts in order that we may serve our brothers and sisters to the best of our capacities. Help us to increase You, Your evolving Supreme Being, with our loving service. And help us realize that the most wonderful server we have ever known is Jesus of Nazareth, Christ Michael. Amen." (Bertrand, 10/12/92)

I think you will recognize the authorship of this last quotation.

"My lesson for you is brief but crucial. Love your fellows by knowing they are my creations. See me in each face you see. Know there is not one that walks on this earth that I love less than you. I am smiling, I am gentle, I am all loving. I nurture, I heal. Speak with me....Seek me. Seek me daily. Put me above all else. I will not fail you." (Christ Michael, 1/14/93)

[Editor's note: This entry is not in any chronological order but is dated as it is to place it just prior to our 1995 resuming of transmissions. This document/entry is updated October 4, 2024; it includes some general background/history and a prelude to the upcoming era of our group's teachings from our celestial Teachers.

Brief Background and History

Per Ham's instruction/suggestion, the Woods Cross, TM group continued to meet, weekly, to review the two years of Ham's and Abraham's teachings. During this time, many of the original group, for various reasons, stopped attending. Rebecca, our 'group transmission-receiver' (TR during Ham's lessons), had moved to Nashville, TN where she married Hal Bynum. By the end of 1994, there were approximately 15 core-group members remaining who were attending weekly.

During the two-years of Ham's lessons there arose several in the group 'wanting' to fill the role as group 'transmission-receiver;' and, as par for the course of being human, some 'fluffy transmissions' (as we referred to them) surfaced - which, to many of us, were not seeming to be genuine or accurate. We had been schooled well enough on how to use the Spirit of Truth and the group-voice of logic and reason to decipher truth from error; reality from mysticism; truth-seeking from wishful-thinking; Father's will versus ego-mindedness and personal-agendas.

At the last week of 1994 and the first week of 1995, two group members received like-transmissions from Ham and Abraham that it was time to resume regular weekly instructions/teachings - and that Abraham himself would be our group-teacher. These messages were received and welcomed by the group. Abraham announced, in essence: though there were many in the group who 'could' receive his transmissions/teachings, he felt Nina (Ellanor) would be the TR (transmission-receiver) best received and accepted 'by' the group; and that he had full confidence in her to receive his transmissions clearly and with the least amount of human interference.

Ellanor was one who had 'no' ambition to TR - at least on a group level. Yet it became very clear to us why he selected her. She was adamant from that week and forward that - "if I don't hear any words, I am not saying anything, even if we have to sit here all night."

There were distinctive differences between Rebecca and Ellanor's method of 'transmission-receiving.' Rebecca had a technique wherein she would 'see' the transmitted words in her minds-eye with eyes closed ("sort of like ticker-tape fashion") and usually wearing a dark bandana over her eyes. She had described this as like being inside a dark theatre and seeing the words come across the screen from right to left in a slow procession. This proved to be a very accurate method and did minimize her own human interference and errors.

Nina (Ellanor), on the other hand, could literally 'hear' the transmitted words. She described this experience as similar to putting one's ear up to a seashell - or the 'sound of water before it comes out of the tap.' Her words heard were in the same slow 'word-for-word' fashion as was Rebecca's delivery.

Each transmission was recorded on cassette tape. It was sometimes difficult for the transcriber (in most cases, Nina's mother, Faye/Ellen) to know where a sentence ended and when another begins. Therefore, after each transcribed lesson the transcript would be presented to Nina for her review. This draft copy would then be read before the whole group the following week preceding the new upcoming lesson/transmission. This gave each lesson three reviews in an effort to ensure accuracy. It also reminded the group each week of the previous lesson for continuity into the next lesson. This was the format the group used in all group transmissions thereafter.

Rebecca continued on as TR for Ham in Nashville, Tennessee with a Urantia Book/Teaching Mission-based group there. The 'Woods Cross Group' - even though not meeting in Woods Cross from 1995 and forward (but in various locations in Salt Lake valley) we elected to remain known thereafter as 'the Woods Cross Group.'. The group still meets periodically, at Abraham's request as of the date of this editing - October 4, 2024.

Other 'Associate Teachers' to the Woods Cross Group, in tandem with Abraham, were Emulan (beginning November 1999 and forward); and Mary, known in history as Mary Magdalene, from May 15, 2005 and forward. All further lessons/transmissions, from 1995 and forward, are categorized chronologically in these Woods Cross Transcripts as Mansion World Teachings. The name was derived from one of Abraham's earliest transmission/lessons (January 1st, 1996) wherein he proclaimed: "It is my goal to bring to you the early lessons that you discover on the Mansion Worlds." The Woods Cross transmissions/lessons from 1991-2021 are available online at www.MansionWorldTeachings.org]

[This Background and Early History condensed presentation of the Woods Cross Transcripts / Mansion World Teachings is dedicated to our beloved Universe Brother/Father - Michael of Nebadon; our Universe Mother; and their subordinates who were sent here to help Urantia in its recovery. Special appreciation also to those now deceased Woods Cross Mission-initiators: Thern Blackburn (Joshua), his sister Ida Young (Rachel), John Wormeck (Jeremiah), Honoray, and Bill Stevens (Roland). All were most enthusiastic participants in these first few years of Ham' and Abraham's teachings but were deceased by the end of the first decade. We thank you, each.]

Preface to Abraham Lessons which resumed starting the 29th of January 1995
The following transmissions are the beginning of Abraham's teachings to the Woods Cross Group as the 'group Teacher.' There were occasions in 1991 through 1994 that we did hear from Abraham (mostly through other Teaching Mission (TM) group's transmissions) but those were in his supervisory role over the Teachers throughout the Teaching Mission (Teachers such as Ham).

Abraham had begun his tenure as Director of the Correcting Time to a group in New Zealand, about years 1985 through 1990. The "Teaching Mission" then transferred to the US - starting with the Woods Cross, Utah, Urantia Book Study Group in early 1991, and spread rapidly throughout the world from there. Within the first five years (1991-1995) it is estimated between twenty to thirty other 'known' TM groups sprang up around the world, mostly from the receiving of Ham's recorded '91 and '92 Woods Cross group lessons.

Abraham had announced from the start in New Zealand that he was under the direction of Michael and Machiventa. His specific role was as Director of the mortal 'reserve corps of destiny,' and all 'Correcting Time' Teachers commissioned to Urantia were under his supervision and training.

The Woods Cross group's first Teacher was "Father Ham" as we liked to call him. His tenure with the Woods Cross group was early 1991 through November of 1992 wherein he (Ham) transferred with his mortal "transmission-receiver" companion, Rebecca, to start the Nashville, TM Group beginning in 1993. The Woods Cross group members were advised by Teacher Ham, upon his departure, to meet weekly to absorb/discuss the first two years of his teachings, and that "when ready" a Teacher would resume further instruction. [The picture shown here was taken about 1998 and represents about half of the typical weekly group attendance for Abraham's lessons].

The Woods Cross group did meet weekly, as instructed, through all 1993 and 1994. The following transcripts are the beginnings of our group's lesson resumption – with Abraham being announced as our group Instructor. Emulan joined as associate group Instructor in 1999. Mary Magdalene joined as an 'associate Teacher' beginning May of 2005.

Both Calvin and/or Roinda acted as interim group transmission-receivers until this point (beginning 1995) wherein it was recommended by Ham and Machiventa Melchizedek that – even though many within the group had TR ability, Abraham had selected/requested Nina (Ellanor) to be his 'group TR' (transmission-receiver) for the upcoming lessons to the Woods Cross group, stating that she would be the "the best foot forward" and also one which would be "most accepted by the whole group.

Nina reluctantly agreed to "try" but emphatically stated that "if I don't hear any words, I'm not saying anything even if we sit here all night, waiting." It was evident that this attitude was the very reason why Abraham did recommend her.

A Time For Higher-Mindedness and Increased Awareness

Ham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-26-1994

Back

[Editor's note: The Woods Cross TM group met weekly since Ham's last lesson in November of 1992, to discuss his lessons. We had been told by Ham to continue in our study of his 1991 and 1992 lessons already given, and when ready they would begin our new lessons. This evening's lesson seemed to be the first of such as was announced in the following weeks beginning 1995 – with our new group teacher, Abraham. Transmission-Receiver for this evening: Calvin.]

[Transmission-Receiver for this evening: Calvin.]

Greetings, my brothers and sisters, the remnant of our beginning Teaching Mission group. I am HAM, your friend always, your brother in truth. I am pleased and gladdened to say a few words, for we have enjoyed your conversation this evening.

Your minds are indeed expanded in your weekly gatherings, and this evening your minds are expanding to reach even higher levels of truth and understanding. Yes, confusing at times these new truths and realities can be. Rest assured, my dear friends, all that is important is your inner heart's search to find your connection with our Father, and to receive of His love, which is abundant.

As you receive, and at your level of reception, then can you give. You grow in small, small increments, yes. To look at yourselves you may not see the strides and growth as even we observe, but yes, you have grown much and have learned to trust your feelings greatly. Long is the path ahead, yet far have you traversed already.

It is a time of year where many have various ideas of tradition and worship, yet it is good that Jesus is a focal point of this Christmas-time celebration. It is a time for all to reflect upon their true beliefs in His life and His goodness. Therefore,

I would ask you each to reach out to Him in Spirit. Find Him in your inner selves. This will bring you an increase of peace within and will further your connection of love with our Father.

All is proceeding even faster than what was anticipated for many such as yourselves. I wish now to leave you with my love and thank you for staying. Farewell.

Change Is Inevitable | It Is Your Purpose for Existence To Perfect Yourselves
A Melchizedek, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-09-1995

[Jan. 16th and 23rd still not found. Transmission-Receiver for this evening: Roinda.]

Greetings. I am a Melchizedek. My name is of no importance, but it is of special importance that I wish to speak with you this evening. It has been a while since your group has had weekly communication directly, in connection with the Teaching Mission. We do not wish this. We seek one in your group who will be willing to transmission-receive our teaching. We ask each of you to look within yourselves and see if this commitment is something you would be willing to do.

We realize the loss of Rebecca [she had moved to Nashville, TN] has devastated many of you and we do not wish to place added pressures on any of you. It is simply our desire to communicate more directly with your group. You are our beloved children and we wish to continue your growth in this tremendous cycle of life.

You seem to be floundering about without much direction, and this concerns us. Your group has many diversities, which in our eyes is a blessing. You must continue to reach out to each other, learn to accept and love each other without trying to change the others. This is possibly your hardest task at hand. It is a challenge for each and every one of you to overcome your prejudices, your pride, your ego, your desire for self-fulfillment, and be what Jesus taught - a gift of love.

It is with these words that I believe you will follow your heart, your soul, and you will be able to bring about changes from within yourself with such speed that it may be frightening to you. But fear not, for change is not to be feared. Change is a journey toward your heavenly Father for you. Yes, change, with the knowledge of becoming as He is - perfect.

This complete change to perfection is not expected to happen in this lifetime - it will take many, many lifetimes; so many that you cannot even conceive of the length of time it will take you. The reason we ask for your diligence is for your happiness, for your fulfillment, so you may pass this on to your brothers and sisters in this lifetime.

Yes, this is mere practice for those lifetimes ahead of you in which your service will be invaluable. It is our honor to serve you in this way. You cannot comprehend the joy it gives us to see and watch your growth, your understanding, your compassion, as life unfolds before you.

You may make changes with leaps and bounds or at a snail's pace – they are still, triumphantly, your changes. There is no one to tell you how fast or slow you can go; you must determine this for yourselves. It is, with all due respect, your goal here in this lifetime -- to become happiness and joy. You shall see the rewards reflect on those around you.

It is with these words that I leave you: Be blessed, be considerate. Think about my offer. Many Teachers are willing and waiting for any one of you or all of you to respond to my offer. We shall be in touch with those of you who are willing. Farewell.

[Editor's note – June 2017:

The group did meet on Jan. 15th and also Jan. 22nd of 1995, but those notes/transcripts are not yet found. In the first weeks of January (1995) some in the group had received personal transmissions that Abraham had recommended Nina (Ellanor) to be his "transmission-receiver" (TR) to the Woods Cross, Utah Teaching Mission Group, stating that though others did well at the TR process, she, Ellanor, would be the best received by the group-support. Of course, Ellanor was hesitant and even very reluctant. And within the next two meetings (15th and 22nd) did agree to accept the assignment with the understanding that – "if I don't hear any words, I am not saying a thing – I don't care if you all stay here all night waiting." It is apparent that this attitude was why Abraham had selected her, as we had come to realize that it was all too prone for mortals in this Teaching Mission to try to tilt messages toward their own agendas, or wish-fulfillment, or even for some self-grandiosing reasons. It was obvious that Nina (Ellanor) would have none of that! She has been the group's TR since 1995 with the support of her mother Faye (Ellen), faithfully by her side in each meeting – lending support and love. It was this support of her mother, and the upholding of the group that, according to Ellanor, has given her the spiritual strength to carry on in this role as 'transmission-receiver' for Abraham and the Woods Cross, Utah Teaching Mission Group. As of the date of this edit, June 2017, the group (now called the Salt Lake City TM Group) still meets on the first Sunday of each month at 1 pm – for the continued lessons from Abraham, Mary, and Emulan. This, after about a three-year hiatus from 2013 through the end of 2015. The group-transmissions resumed January of 2016.]

First Meeting With Abraham | Lessons Will Not Be As Before
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-30-1995

Back

[The is the first of several-hundred to come, transmissions/lessons from Abraham as Woods Cross Teacher, with his selected group-TR, Nina/Ellanor]

Greetings. I am Abraham. I am happy to be here among you this evening. I have seen your struggles and achievements with the passing of time/years. I have watched you grow. With the passing of time you have overcome many obstacles, and each time you have learned from them.

Although I am not Ham, I am now your group Teacher. This will not be like before. It is now a new era in your training experience. Do not expect this teaching to be like before. This might be a little more rough/difficult. You may be asked to apply certain lessons to daily living and share it with all of us if you wish - lessons brought to life. I will be here anytime and speak to you who desire a group Teacher. We desire your comfort, your trust.

It has been as it should have been. Nothing wrong have you done. This time that has passed has been as it should have. Now we see it is time for more learning and direction. I, Abraham, am ready to teach. Let this be another step in our Mission's purpose. Let our guidance be tempered with love.

We are ready to keep moving toward Michael's goal. No, you have not been lost. You have not been out of this humble calling, no; you are right where you should be. Having lived Ham's teachings, personally, you have experienced memories that have stayed with you from him. I look forward to communicating with you each. I must bid you farewell and shalom.

Your Greatest Lessons Come From Your Own Experience

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-06-1995
Back

My greetings to you all. I am ABRAHAM. This evening we will discuss 'learning.'

When you were a child the teachers you had - being parents, grandparents, adults - taught you in their own specific manner, maybe in the way that they were taught. As a child, you learned by their example and you went on to learn their many habits, mannerisms.

Over time you felt your examples set to you as a child were not always quite correct - something in you just knew. You felt like almost rebellious for not always following that set example. You had, all along, a greater teacher/friend in the Thought Adjuster, the Spirit of Truth, and many other influences.

Many times you realize your greatest Teacher is within your very being. Yes, your greatest lessons come from your own daily experience. You cannot really live and learn from others' experiences, mistakes - you must be on your own path. Lessons are best remembered when experienced firsthand. And without a great many lessons it is hard to progress. Some have to go through the lessons more than once; some take longer to go through the same lesson - it matters not, as long as there is willingness to learn.

You can help others to seek out their own light within, yes, and that may be the extent of your teaching. You can share your experiences to help guide others in their decision-making, but you can only suggest, not advise. Those with many college degrees may not have the same knowledge as a janitor and yet, the janitor may have more knowledge in the lessons on compassion, love, kindness.

No one person knows where another person might be in his or her learning. Therefore, I would suggest not to judge anyone, but leave them to their own experience in learning. Do not hinder yourself by judging so harshly. You are each still a unique child in the universe wherein there is no hurry. Judging another can also hinder you in your own progression; it can only put you behind in your own struggles of learning.

This is a time of spiritual discovery – it can be an exciting adventure. You can meet your daily life with enthusiasm; or, you can meet it with an ease-seeking attitude – I would suggest the first. There is a great sea of knowledge for you to sail upon. Every now and then hitting waves higher than your ship; facing the wind and the rain. And every once in a while coming to a calm water, with the reflection of a beautiful sunset, knowing that you braved the rough waters to yet again be rewarded with the satisfaction and peacefulness of your accomplishment.

Sometimes teaching someone, maybe a small child, has some ego glorification that this child may look to you as an authority; the child feels that trust in you, a trust which you may have initially received from an adult. Therefore, take not pride nor self-gratification in teaching. Remember what you are teaching was taught to you. It is fun and good to teach as long as you remain the learner. That will be our thought for this week. Until next week, shalom.

The Group/Family Now Prepares Us For Our Place In The Family of All Father's Children

Greetings. I am ABRAHAM, your friend and Teacher. I wish to express my thoughts on your understanding of one another. I am glad to hear your open-hearted expressions of your experiences, each taking a chance laying their feelings out for all to see. If that group 'trust' was not present, many would not lay down their armor and expose their true feelings.

The 'group environment' should have a certain safe and accepting atmosphere where you can all feel comfortable in just being yourselves. It matters not 'group unity,' meaning all believing the same thing, as long as you accept one another as your brother or sister. A group is a great example of a family, each having their own specific roles. Each can help or console or encourage the other without fear of rejection or down-casting.

In your family, you can even admit mistakes and failures without critical examination. One can be unafraid to be embarrassed because you know no matter what your mistake or embarrassment may be, your family loves you, unconditionally. I cherish the family, sometimes referred to as 'the kingdom of heaven/God.' All smaller families/groups belong to a greater family/group – the kingdom of God. You start small, but in reality, you are a brother or sister in a larger family.

Your group experience now prepares you for a later time when you are seated at a great banquet with the Father at the head of the table. You may see Michael seated next to you; you might see the Divine Minister (the Holy Mother Spirit) seated across from you; you may see us Teachers, the seraphim angels, and other mortals like you, gathered. Each are in knowing that all are included, no one is left out. All who want to attend are welcome.

From this small gathering each week you take with you skills which will be helpful in ages to come. Biological families may not always be so safe, so un-judgmental. Biological families may lack the skills to communicate, they may fear laying their feelings out for all to see. Biological families may even judge its own members more harshly than a stranger.

Yes, it is a great comfort to be in the family of the Father's kingdom – you know that all are understood; all feel free to open their hearts to the Father of all fathers.

This week, keep in mind how you may react to your own family, friends – are you listening to them? Keep in your thoughts about your own group meeting associates – are you listening to them? Are you loving, unconditionally? Are you being open enough to give and receive? 'What is the true reality/meaning of group/family' will be the focus for this week. My love to you. Shalom.

Furtherance on The Group Family | Are We Stuck In the Murky Waters Or Crossing Through

Ham & Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-20-1995

Greetings. I am HAM. I, too, can always feel comfortable returning to this branch on my family tree. These past two years have been a long and difficult test of our endurance; it has been filled with many lessons of trial and triumph of the spirit. I am overjoyed to see that you have held up. I wish you joy in your upcoming tasks ahead; look to them as a challenge rather than an obstacle. Many blessings go with you. I leave you to Abraham. Farewell.

Shalom. I am Abraham. I wish to impart to you a furtherance on the group/family. You may well know of your difficulties in communication and understanding. You may have learned something about judgment, being judged or judging. You may have family members who roll through life with one problem after another – you may be one with one problem after another. I can tell you these family members always caught up in turmoil are crying out; they feel something is lacking, and therefore may seek out one difficulty after another to bring a cover over the actual crying out of the soul – putting the focus on a material problem rather than risking exposure of the soul's true needs.

Many may live their lives wading through a river of muddy and murky water not actually seeing the benefits of simply crossing this river. And to you my students, I say – have some sympathy for these problem-ridden fellows, yes. But too much sympathy can be a detriment to them; they may believe all their difficulties are a reality, when in fact, it is a covering up of the souls' true desires. I would say, the true souls' desire would be love. That is really what all souls wish for, something as simple as 'love.'

I am saying, when you listen and sympathize with one who may go on about their daily misfortunes, you can give them what they really seek – love. You can be tactful in your dealings with those with seemingly numerous problems, yes, but it would do them well for you to be truthful as well. You can support them in their feeling, yes, but you should not encourage or validate their fears or 'blown out of proportion' problems.

When you listen to such family or group member, seek not to play into false feelings of fear. You may love them so much, wanting to spare them from the pains of truth – but I say, it would be far worse to agree and let them continue in their cycle of imagined problems. You can remember the Master sympathized not with those who would lie down before their troubles. The Master taught with questions. Questions to your troubled friend or family may reveal to them a lighter side, perhaps a solution that may lie within their own being.

This week in your dealings with family/friends, think about not over-sympathizing but let them know of your love for them. You can support them in their feelings, give them your understanding – perhaps you have been there; but try not to validate their feelings of fear. Tactfulness ‘with honesty’ is also beneficial to this friend or family member.

Something to think about: Are you one who wades in a river of imagined problems? Are you one that stirs the mud under the water, on purpose? Sometimes in the stillness when you let the mud/dirt settle you may find your souls' true desire. You may find what it is your soul cries out for. Take these words with you into your week and I'll be here again to hear of your dealing with your fellows. Shalom.

Relying On The Son | Take Your Place In The Kingdom With Your Brothers and Sisters

Back

Shalom. I am ABRAHAM. I am your Teacher and friend. How did you apply the lesson from last week during the week? Was it as simple as you expected? or more difficult. As with any lesson, time is required for the learning to become natural. You cannot learn any skill or lesson overnight. The great group/family lesson will be life-long and beyond this life.

This night I desire to teach you a little more about relying on the Son, our universe Creator – Michael. Some believe that they must go through this life dealing with daily obstacles alone. Some know not of our magnificent Spirit of Truth that longs to help and guide. Many know not of the majestic power of the Universe Son. He is only limited by the Father's will.

If we could only discover Michael's longing to be close to us, how could we not be able to face such daily difficulties knowing His presence is with us. As we Teachers understand His love for us it is such an honor and pleasure to serve one so beautiful. As you too discover His longing to be with His universal children you may feel His presence more and more.

It is difficult sometimes in your mortal state – you have to believe without seeing; you have to trust that kingdom of helpers with whom you cannot see. I vaguely remember my time of doubts on Earth – I do know I survived them, as you will. You can also be benefited from your doubts after a period of questioning. As difficult as it may be you can always look back and note that you also survived that spell of doubting.

As you grow closer to Michael you may be comforted from your periods of unbelieving. He said: "I am the door." He said: "I am the bridge from one world to another." He came here to reveal to us something so precious - something you can't buy with money, something that has given many great comfort, that has given the weak-hearted, confidence, and the discouraged, hope.

Michael came here to reveal the greatest gift, and that is the knowledge of our son- or daughtership with the Father. No greater gift can humankind receive than an equal place in the kingdom - and I say, Michael, His Spirit, is the door. Your closeness to Him would be of great benefit to you in your steps to understanding.

When I think of my Creator, I feel energized by His goodness. I feel almost unlimited with one so glorious that graces my path, my life. I am renewed in the thought of His powerful and loving presence that knows each one of His children. Some may feel unworthy, undeserving of His magnificent presence, but I say, He was once one of you who walked the Earth. He experienced what you experience. He knows of your feelings of unworthiness. This is understood.

It is much desired that you would take your place in the kingdom along with your brothers and sisters and accept His love, accept His help. To claim yourself unworthy or inferior to receive His presence, His love, is almost offensive. He desires to know you and to reveal Himself to you. Ham has taught on this subject before. It could do no harm to re-read the lesson.

Jesus said, "I am the door." This week, focus on this door of which you may knock. You may notice His presence during the week, and next week some may wish to share their experiences of our Father/Brother, Michael. Until next week, shalom.

You Are Not Isolated Any More. Seek Me And You Shall Find Me
Michael & Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-06-1995

TR Ellanor (Nina): Oh, I don't know if I can do this. I think it is Michael.

Yes, I told you I am not far off. I am MICHAEL. This may be hard for some to grasp. Why wouldn't you believe or think that you are important enough that I would not be close? You are not so small that I would forget about any of you. You know not of your value in the kingdom. I am here to tell you that each and every one of you is of utmost importance in Father's family. Not one is forgotten. How can some think I am so far away when I make every effort to reach each child?

What the Son desires and the Father wills, is. Father's will is to be close to each child. My desire is to know and love each child also. So children, believe that I am in your midst and that you dwell not in isolation. We are so near you; we are almost becoming you. You and your open hearts and minds bring me and my Father to this world. Yes, a step of faith and an open heart brings me closer.

I ask you to feel free to seek me, my guidance, my help, my understanding. I delight in serving my children. Worry not of past mistakes or mistakes yet to be made. I serve with legions of helpers and hosts to this world. It may seem hopeless at times. It may seem you are alone. I ask you at those times, please knock and I will be waiting for you. Please take a small step of faith and I will show you I am not far. Go from this day knowing your Friend, your Brother/Father, is among you. I leave you to Abraham.

I am ABRAHAM. I am in awe of the love that Michael has for you and all of His creature personalities. During this last week did you find the Son's presence, our beloved Michael? When did you knock – was it during times of conflict? during times of doubt? Maybe you thought of Him during times of joy. I say to you, you would do well to always feel free and communicate with Him. Your own indwelling Adjuster may guide you in the divine ways, but also I say, Michael, Jesus, may help guide you in your ways of the human path should you seek him.

Tonight I will say a few words on isolation. You who were isolated for so long, it may have become a habit, a way of life, thinking you were alone. You may have grown accustomed to the idea that the Father, or Michael, is so far away, but I say – that is all changed now. With the Correcting Time your world has almost fully been re-encircuited, almost fully restored. Now comes the great awakening! This will be mentally and physically known, and the world will reconnect back with the Father and His Son.

This is a most exciting time to be here on this world. You who may drone through the everyday tasks really have no idea about the underlying excitement we, the unseen helpers, feel. It is a great time in your history. Many in isolation forget that they are really cared for. Sometimes the isolation is self-imposed – and friends and family may be severed from a person's life.

I say, do not impose this isolation on yourself or your world any more. Just as an elderly person may feel unwanted and useless, they isolate themselves to drown in their own sorrows – until maybe one day a visitor, a friend, a family member, may stop by. They may ask this elderly person for advice. They may just show the elderly person that a visitor enjoys their company, and once again the elderly person feels a part of the world, reconnected.

That is what I want to say to you – Christ Michael is that visitor to your world. He enjoys your company. You may need to be asked a favor for He wants you in your world to once again feel reconnected, a part. When times are hard, try not to isolate yourselves but think to invite Michael to talk.

Also I ask, can you think of one who may feel isolated? Can you reach out to him/her? Can you bring your visitor – Michael, and this isolated person together in a way to just talk; to help someone to reconnect; to feel a part; to be a part?

This week, rather than to think on this subject on a wide scale (the world, the universe), think instead on a small scale, such as one person in need of a visit. Until next week, shalom.

Back

I am with you. I am ABRAHAM. I am happy to be here again this week. Many ideas and suggestions have you discussed regarding this Monday night meeting. This week I ask you, the group, to think on subjects that might be of interest to you 'as a group.'

Groups, personalities, vary from city to city and state to state. What might be needed here in this group might not be needed or desired by another group. You all know each other fairly well. Perhaps you desire some help on a certain subject. We Teachers, ask that you discuss topics that may be of interest to you - personally, and as a group.

Also, we ask you to consider and ponder over your inner feelings on the present group format. Is it your true desire that I, or we, teach here to you, weekly? Our intent is not to force this on you. Our present intent is to minister to you each - individually and collectively. Our desire now is to teach you, your group.

It is not meant at this time for your teachings to go to others who might not understand or have the close communication that you have between you. One way or another, every person will receive their own personal lessons whether in this life or on the mansion worlds. Yes, you will receive your own personal lessons - with or without me. Is it your true desire for these teachings to continue? Please discuss this at a convenient time.

If teachings are so desired, I would ask you to then look within to your soul's needs. Perhaps there is a subject I can further enlighten you on. I do not make it my business to read your minds. As you will experience, to discuss group desires brings you more together - mindally and spiritually. This is your opportunity to look within and to receive help where it is needed. But I say, this is for you who come here, who are seeking personal correction.

I would like to say a few words regarding 'personal agendas.' Motives can be unintentionally selfish; they can come up behind you without warning. Although it is not your intention to be selfish, sometimes your secret agenda may slip in unknowingly. Although it may be your intention to do Father's will, your underlying wants may interrupt the flow of communication from Father. This does not mean you are bad or backward or regressing, no! for you see, this is understood; this is natural human tendency.

Yes, your underlying personal agenda may hinder you in your spiritual path. Therefore, I ask you to look closely and honestly at your true inner feelings and motives; be not too hard on yourself. There is nothing wrong with inner desires and feelings, they are natural - but I ask you to lay these inner feelings into Father's hands and wait on Him.

Father knows your heart and your path that you must travel. So I say, look honestly at your personal agenda; give it to the Father. Know that nothing is hidden from Father - therefore, be also honest with yourself. When making decisions, ask yourself: "What are my true intentions? Am I in accordance with Father's will?"

If the Master were sitting with you, face to face like the apostles long ago, what would be His words of wisdom to you? What words of my friend/brother, Ham, may surface in your mind? I say then, worry not about past hidden selfish intentions, for now you have the ability to recognize them and lay them in Father's hands. I remind you to discuss my proposal. I will be in touch. Next week we may answer a few questions. Until next week, shalom.

[The group did discuss Abraham's proposal. The consensus was that we all desired to receive further instruction and teaching that was in alignment with Father's will for us – as a group and individually; not what 'we' might want, but what Father wants for us.]

Becoming More Morontial | A Question About The Treatment of Children

I am here. Shalom. I am ABRAHAM. Last week we discussed some on the group format. I am a little more clear on which direction to take in teaching your group.

I would like to say a little on my understanding of the needs of this group. It is known that all of you desire to be closer to Father and His kingdom of various helpers. It is my understanding you desire to attain more of the Master's attitude and mannerisms. What I am understanding is that you desire to become more morontial. I wish to express my dedication in helping you reach your goals.

There are so many daily human tasks that seem to take from the growing morontial being within, and at times seems like too much work. I say, when you are wanting to improve on a certain area in your life, start small. Don't become overwhelmed with all the possible potentials of your being. Don't try to do too much – this can only bring confusion and a desire to give up.

We have been taught 'it matters not what you are at this moment, it only matters what you are becoming.' See this [Urantia Book link.] Much of the time your Father Fragment will show you your areas of need for enlightenment or improvement. So I say, be patient. There is no time-limit for becoming more morontial. I will answer a few questions.

CALVIN: I want to say, thank you, Abraham, for your concern for us – both as a group, and as individuals. It is a marvel to witness how we can receive such kind and loving help, and benefit so much from your coming and teachings; in our discussion with each other here, it is evident we all feel that. I know everybody is happy and likewise appreciative to have you here.

ABRAHAM: I would say, you're welcome. And I would also thank you, Calvin. Your persistence has helped to bring about this new teacher/student contact.

ROLAND: Abraham, I've expressed this in this gathering tonight, and you probably already know my question of the heart better than the words I will express. In the process of attending to your words of caution about personal agendas, which are selfish and interfering with Father's will – in sharing love with our brothers and sisters, what part of that selfish agenda is sexual attraction? It is my question that as we become more enlightened, and in thinking of those who have gone before us who have been masters and enlightened beings, and who have chosen in their life at some point, celibacy – is it a worthy goal or decision-making process to become a celibate being in order to serve as a pure vessel of God's love? Is there a way to balance sexuality and spirituality to do the will of the Father within that framework? I leave you with that question, knowing that it has many holes in it.

ABRAHAM: Roland, my friend, your willingness to give up a part of your humanism for the sake of the Father, truly shows what a dedicated and loving individual you are. The Father doesn't ask you to sacrifice any part of your human existence. I would say, your natural reactions at a moment of spiritual intention are just that, natural. It is not bad. It is part of who you are. It is part of the human learning experience. The Father knows your true intentions and your efforts to discipline your own mind. I would say, don't be too harsh with that mortal mind, it is still in training. Seek not to flee from your human experiences, but to traverse them with your constant companion, Father Himself. Does that answer?

ROLAND: Yes, very well. Thank you very much. As a follow-up question about the spiritual and material world – we know the history of your life; you had much material wealth and lived a very spiritual life. Is it possible for us now, in this very materialistic world, to have the abundance of materialism and maintain spirituality, as you did in your day; and, would you change it in any way?

ABRAHAM: Abundance may not have the same meaning for all people. Some who have little may find abundance in their family setting, or in the benefits of good health. Some may find the abundance in lessons learned and knowledge earned; yes, what person would honor material goods over these blessings? I would say, you can have abundance and spirituality if the material wealth does not interfere with the spiritual. Does that answer? (Roland: Very well. I thank you very much, again.)

JAMES: I have a question, Abraham. First of all, I am really grateful that you're taking questions. This is most interesting. One of the things that really grieves me about life is the suffering, the tragedy of innocent children having to suffer for the mistakes of their parents – or the mistakes of society in general. It seems so unfair; and it seems like a tragedy to me. I wonder how you – being farther along the spiritual path – view these types of inevitabilities from this planet. And, how may our Father view these inevitabilities.

ABRAHAM: We cannot express our heartbreak for the children of this world. The angels, and other helpers to this world, mourn the tragic treatment of the children. Much of their horrible treatment was not foreseen, had not even entered our thoughts. It is unknown to us how a society can produce uncared-for children. We find hope in the Spirit of Truth who tells the world of the injustices done to children, therefore allowing society to recognize specific problems and address them. At this present time, there is a great upheaval of emotions from our youth. They only cry out for what you would want for yourself. They too want to be just as important as adults, not seen any more as a burden. Many youths have come forth in a rebellious attack calling for attention. Though their ways may be destructive, they still send the message that the young are very important to our culture and society. Many know not of what we can learn from a child. The many know not of the wisdom, the pure wisdom from a child; but I can say, this matter is of much importance to us, yes, and we find that Father is in control. Does this help?

JAMES: Yes, it does. You say, "Father is in control." What do you mean and could you expand on that just a little bit?

ABRAHAM: I would say much of our worries or concerns are magnified when we lose sight of the overall watchcare of our world, our universe. We sometimes feel overwhelmed and discouraged by all the changes needed, and we forget that 'One Source' of all power, of all control. Mortals may sometimes forget that they are not in charge. Yes, you have your free will over your own human existence, but I say, in all universal matters our Father has His will. My point to you is - worry not, for nothing is too big for the Father to handle. Does that answer? (Roland: Yes, thank you.) Abraham: One more question?

CALVIN: Can you help me understand what happened with Joshua and the healing exercise - I can take an abbreviated version since it's late, but what happened and why he is still there in his pitiful condition, and what was wrong? [Editor's note: In the previous months, Joshua had developed a serious health condition which caused his body to store his water content rather than regulate it and discard his water. His legs and feet became swollen and yellowed. He did seek all medical attention available, but still his condition persisted. The group decided to do a group healing exercise - according to our understandings with Ham's teachings. Some of us expected and hoped for an instant healing rather than a partial improvement - which is what Joshua did experience.]

ABRAHAM: Yes. Joshua, our beloved student, performed a great service with much dedication. This healing exercise was a very real and meaningful moment for you and those involved. Sometimes the outcome you hoped for, somehow, does not take place. Sometimes all we can do is ask for help for others, and then release it to Father's hands. The group's desired outcome for their friend/brother may not have occurred in the ways the group desired, but I say, many other extremely beneficial occurrences took place that evening. Yes, Christ Michael was present. I cannot respond to the reasons why Joshua's health is not fully restored. I can only ease your mind when I say, your love and concern for your friend was felt beyond the space of that room. Does this help?

CALVIN: Very much, yes; and thank you, Abraham. I think I understand the dilemma that you have in explaining it to me.

ABRAHAM: Next week it may be beneficial to think more on your direction for desired growth. Look for me throughout this next week. Shalom.

Rest And Relaxation | Set Aside A Day Each Week For Rest

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-27-1995

Back

I am here. I am ABRAHAM. I am surprised by your lack of understanding regarding our last week's assignment. I believe a little clarification is in order. What I previously purposed was not meant to confuse you. Although this confusion has occurred, my main point to you has also happened, you all are communicating openly like a family.

During the daily grind, many things occur that can take their toll on the spirit. Coming together as a group is like coming home after a day's work, kicking off your shoes, sitting in your favorite chair and relaxing, knowing there are those who are also arriving who have also been out in the busy world. Each of you are in understanding of one another's tasks and demands made out in the workforce. You all understand that daily living can be a burden; this is one common ground you share.

Yes, each of you are in understanding of each other's efforts to become more like the Father. You have experienced so much of the same things, and coming here is like a refreshing nap. After a nap one feels energized and once again ready to meet more tasks. It is through your connections of experience that you are able to communicate and minister to one another. It is through your contact with each other that you learn skills beneficial to take to your fellows who are not attending this group.

They say "two heads are better than one." I say, your group is overflowing with ideas and wisdom. I would also say, don't be afraid to remove your personal barriers to share with the group. This is a goal of many Teachers - to begin to see the members within small groups taking care of each other. It begins in small groups, yes, but it extends worldwide.

This evening it is my heartfelt desire to urge this group to think a little about rest, relaxation. It was taught long ago that one day should be kept holy for God. Jesus taught that one day should be devoted to rest and reversion. Many times did the Master retreat to the hills to be in uninterrupted communion with His Father. I would say this communion with Father would also be refreshing to a tired soul. Many times the mind also requires some peace. Not every minute needs to be devoted to learning or improvement of the self.

You would be amazed at the benefits you receive from a short rest. You may witness a sharpening of the mind; you may also find you have a higher tolerance level. Sometimes it's the little things that can wear on your tolerance level. Rest or diversion from routine can greatly improve your attitude. Perhaps a creative moment may remove your mind from the minor aggravations of life to reveal a lighter side - perhaps a feeling, an opening to possibly receive Adjuster guidance. I will take a few questions.

CALVIN: Abraham, I think I see a little differently of what you want us to do. It's like coming together, here, as a family and kick back and talk about what is going on in our lives which possibly greatly helps each other; and then receive some direction from yourself. If I am perceiving that right - is it that you would like us to do that casually and then you fill in casually? Or to come to a consensus after that for more formal questions of what we want from you in our meeting?

ABRAHAM: My goal or purpose is simple - just to talk, to share in a way that reconnects you. This assignment reminds you of your purpose for attending these meetings. No, not all need agree on one question. My desire would be to see you all take comfort in each other's company. After talking, you feel once again at home with each other. Tension is high when you first arrive. Communicating relieves this tension and you are better able to receive my words. Above all, we wish you enjoyment. Are there any other questions?

CARI LYN: Abraham, I am fairly new to this group and a little nervous asking questions. I want to ask if I have a Teacher. Or if not, if I can have a Teacher assigned to help me with the problems that I have in my life. Secondly, could I know what my spirit name is? I also have a question about marriage and what happens to us after our mortal death – if we can see our partner that we were married to here, and be with them afterward if we want to? Or, if that is no longer needed as a non-mortal person.

ABRAHAM: Jeana, yes, this is your name; it is as close as you could understand at this time. Spiritual names are somewhat difficult in this human language. My Daughter, you already have a Teacher, a Teacher so close, so concerned with your path of spiritual attainment. Everyone here also has this divine Teacher within. This Teacher knows you like I, myself, might not. I would say your Teacher is most reliable; and I would say, He has been with you many years since a child. This Teacher I refer to is none other than your indwelling Fragment of Father. Other teachers may come and go, yes, but I say to you, your divine Father within is with you always. Your question about marriage can be more easily answered from the Ham transcripts. He spoke on this. I would say none of your human associations are wasted. They may not continue in the same fashion you knew them to be here in this life. Much will change. Many answers will be given. I would say it is the Father's choice to choose the appropriate time when all your questions are answered. All your answers may not be given here in this lifetime. More questions?

WILLEENA: Father Abraham, could you simply give me some words of encouragement or direction at this time?

ABRAHAM: My daughter, Willeena, long has the road been for you. Much have you overcome and much is there yet to overcome. You see, it is the same for all mortals. At times we can only ask the Father to traverse these rough waters with us. You would do well to ask the Master for some insight. You may ask the Master for His attitude; His attitude was not one of ease-seeking, it was filled with strength from His Paradise Father. Jesus overcame such horrible experiences. He did not complain. He did not lie down and let His troubles overtake Him. Yes, He was divine, but He was also, human. Sometimes I wonder how He overcame such difficulties and still continue to love this world as He does. He, many times, communed with the Father, and I believe this is partly where His strength was acquired. Life is not meant to be a burden, a constant burden, no. Learning, yes, hard lessons, yes, but not overbearing. Said He: "I have given you life because I love you." I say, life is not torture – it is for us, for what we need. As a good parent you will provide your child with what they need; at times this may not be pleasant, but it is hoped that someday the child may look back and see how much the parent loved and cared for them. More questions?

ROLAND: Abraham, I seek instruction in improving my meditations to hear the voice of the indwelling Spirit. The method that I most often use to clear my mind is a prayer of gratitude and asking for my mind to be exchanged for the mind of Christ. And, in the process of clearing the mind, I ask that I might hear the inner voice of the Father Fragment. Sometimes this is effective, but there are other times when I have not been able to get my fearful thought processes out of the way. Could you instruct me in those things, please? And also, perhaps give me further technique that would assist me in that meditative practice.

ABRAHAM: My question – are you seeking to hear the communications of the indwelling Adjuster? (Roland: Yes, that's my purpose in meditation.) Abraham: Out loud?
[laughter from TR and the group.]

ROLAND: Though I understand that the indwelling Spirit speaks through an inner voice – not the outer hearing mechanism that we normally communicate with, as we are at this moment through Ellanor, but it dawns on me that was probably said in jest.

ABRAHAM: Roland, I perceive your method of your stillness-time is adequate. I know not if you will at that very moment desired, receive Adjuster communication. I do know however, that you communicate much with your Adjuster. Many normal daily activities include your communication with the Father Fragment. I would not limit you by saying an audible contact with your Adjuster is not a possibility; rather, I would say your communication with your Father Fragment appears very casual, very normal. Father would not frighten His children; therefore, communications are best when felt quite naturally. In your stillness-time, your willingness and dedication is good. I would add, that peacefulness and a feeling of love does make for quite a sufficient meditation. More questions?

ROLAND: A follow-up question on that. There have been times, and even during this week, where I'm discussing spiritual matters with others; and occasionally there is a sensation that the words that I am speaking to that other person out of love are coming from the Father Fragment within. Is this happening?

ABRAHAM: Yes, more than you know. Many times you think about having the right words for the right person at the right time. I say, many Adjusters are at work and it may be surprising that this is not especially a spiritual feeling/emotion; it appears perfectly normal. Another question?

CALVIN: Not a question, I just want to say that you are appreciated very much – your time and commitment to come back to this world to help and teach us, is very much appreciated. That is all I have.

TECTRA: I have a question, Abraham: In Roland's question, you seem to be saying this is a new way of hearing – this communication with our Thought Adjuster. I was under the impression it was something we came to during the meditation time. You seem to be saying that we have more communication with Father than I was aware of – like in daily happenings and events; that it is a natural kind of thing that goes on between ourselves and the Thought Adjuster. I guess I was not aware of that. Am I perceiving correctly – that we do have more communication and understanding with our indwelling than I had perceived?

ABRAHAM: Yes. So much miracle-seeking is sought by mortals. Something 'out of the ordinary' is expected. I say, anything is possible, yes, but to 'be open' is to allow Father to work. Father's work is not meant to be in 'miracles' but in ordinary everyday living. Father asks us to believe without seeing. That may be your hardest task yet. Most of our Thought Adjuster communications may seem so natural you might almost believe it is just you. Therefore I say, take not pride in teaching, for the information you receive and give could possibly be from the Father Fragment.

Thought Adjuster communication appears to be a subject of interest. Perhaps we can talk further on this subject another time. This week I would ask you to make time for a little rest, a little diversion from your daily routine. Until next week, shalom.

[A great example of a close-knit group, as Abraham speaks of in this lesson, is the Arcadia Teaching Mission group depicted here. This picture was likely taken sometime between 1992 and 1997. Dozens of such 'Teaching Mission' groups emerged throughout the world in the decades following Ham and Abraham's initial teachings in 1991 and 1992.]

Our Urantian Sisters. The Male|Female Differences

I am ABRAHAM. My fondest greetings to you this evening. Your discussion concerning rest was most interesting. Even now in my spiritual status, I find it difficult to rest. I have my many companions and associates who help me achieve periods of rest and entertainment. How many do you know who are in need of a period of rest? As I receive help from my companions concerning rest and diversion from the routine, I ask you, is there someone you might help to also receive rest or possibly distract them from their mundane routine?

I would now choose to reply on a subject that has been in question for centuries. I, along with Michael and others, do hear the pleas for help concerning your female population around the world. My friend/co-worker, Ham, spoke on the male/female differences in your world. [see below excerpt.] It has been called to our attention that our sisters of this world are in need of a little understanding, perhaps a little encouragement.

Our Urantian sisters, from the beginning of human evolution, have fought, have struggled, for a place in this world. Michael (Jesus) greatly helped uplift the female population announcing that women are equal with men in the spiritual kingdom. Jesus, to no avail, attempted to persuade his brothers, His fellow men, to allow women, mothers, sisters, to take their place in society and in the kingdom of God.

It has been a mighty struggle for the women of the world; but I say, so much has improved; and, so much is there still to understand. I say to you, my sisters, now is the time you may stand tall in the kingdom, side by side with your brothers. I tell you, projects are best, more efficiently completed, with input from both men and women - as partners, not competitors.

My sisters, the time is over for blame, and for battling for your place. Now is the time to embrace your fellow sisters. So critical are sisters against sisters. Many women view the male as her oppressor when women's greatest oppressors are either themselves or their fellow sisters.

Motherhood is not looked upon as a privilege by many; some may view it (motherhood) as a down-casting position. I would say to you, however, motherhood is a 'must' in your spiritual evolution. Motherhood may not be biological so much as it is an attitude of love and nurturing to those in need.

How many do you know that could use a little mothering? I would say, when the role of mother is viewed as important, then will we see improvement in our children. When the role of motherhood is viewed as a necessity, then shall the fathers of this world view fatherhood as an important role.

I will try to express more on this subject at a later time. This week I would ask, is there a female friend, mother, sister, daughter, wife, who could possibly be acknowledged as a needed person in our society? Next week I would like to discuss fatherhood and a message to our brothers. Are there questions?

ROLAND: Abraham, you said that – in the spiritual status you have now attained, that you still need rest or reversion. As I understand it, you must be in a morontia body presently. Is it the morontia body that needs rest? or is it the mindal circuits, spiritual circuits, that need rest. I'm asking for a fuller description of what your rest consists of as a morontial being?

ABRAHAM: This world is in a state of emergency and priority. Many work/teach non-stop, as so much work is needed. Those who care for this world find it hard to pull away, to stop working long enough for a moment of leisure, a moment of rejuvenation. My need for rest is more mindally rather than physically. Although I cannot comment too much on the morontia form – I can say, a moment of worship is perhaps most rejuvenating and energizing. A moment of humor, laughter, can make a large project seem smaller. More questions?

ROLAND: A follow-up question: In your ascension through the Mansion Worlds, as we understand them from the Urantia Book, may we know from what sphere you returned to the Earth? and what preparations you had?

ABRAHAM: I have hailed from many spheres/worlds. My training in the Correction Time has been with Machiventa Melchizedek in training from the ascension training schools. I have had other training in a core group with Michael as our Teacher. Many Teachers will also attend this training class of Michael's. The Correction Time has been long thought-out and planned; but not everything has gone as expected, predicted. Yet I can say, all is on track. More questions?

For Excerpts from the Urantia book regarding these ascension training schools of which Abraham speaks—click [here. Or see UB Paper 45: 7.3]

WILLEENA: Yes. Thank you for your comforting words in regard to we sisters. As I understand – because we in the Correction Time are healing our perceptions of ourselves and each other – men and women. So if I'm understanding you correctly, the way we have viewed each role is about to expand – and I am just grateful.

ABRAHAM: Correct. Understanding and appreciation of the roles are expanding more and more. Women and men are in need of a little encouragement, a little appreciation for their different aspects in this mortal life. Not so much is it an issue of equality as it is an issue of acknowledgment for each other's roles in this world. Small understandings here in the mortal life may help you on the Mansion Worlds, yes. There, (on the Mansion Worlds) it is not so much issues of 'male and female' as it is 'brother and sister' - it is more of a family association. Are there more questions or comments?

CALVIN: Abraham, I am glad you brought that up because I can be more appreciative of the mothers of my kids instead of the way I am. I have used that one word we often use on this world, and it really is deplorable. I understand we do irritate each other a lot in this life - the male and female. The problem I have seems so complex with trying to stay alive and afloat that I almost have no time to have association, let alone be a good father anymore. I am sure that is part of the Correcting Time, where we have more time to be associates, fathers and mothers. Thank you.

ABRAHAM: Yes, your time is so demanding. It appears that the children may hurt a little without your attention - yet I would say your children know they are loved and cared for. I would not say down-casting remarks about their female role-models to them. Your efforts are known. With the demand on your time (as is with many mothers and fathers - working, providing food and shelter) it is difficult to really spend a good amount of time with your children. That is one reason why we say, embrace all children, even though they may not be yours. Be accepting of their budding personalities. One comment from an adult to a child can be remembered throughout a child's life. Try to make it an uplifting comment. Let the children know they are standing with you in the kingdom. Are there further questions?

ROLAND: I have another: In the early transcripts of our meetings at Woods Cross it was mentioned that your role in the Correcting Time was as the "commanding officer of the corps of destiny." Is that something that you still continue to do? and are we mortals here, as students of your teachings, members of the 'mortal reserve corps of destiny' that you are in charge of?

ABRAHAM: 'Commanding officer' is somewhat of a strong term made for mortal understanding. I co-command with my associates and fellow Teachers. I receive my instructions and directives from Michael - and I pass them to my associates, and to you my mortal students. Corps of destiny, yes, many are in the corps of destiny. We are fortunate at this time. Many, each day, are becoming aware of their spiritual path. Is there another question?

ROLAND: Just as a comment: I would ask, as I have done many times in my meditations, if there is anything that I may do to facilitate the Correcting Time, that you know directly? I am willing to do that which you ask.

ABRAHAM: Your willingness is known. You have already fulfilled many tasks of the Correcting Time. Your willingness is noted.

CALVIN: Abraham, you said a couple weeks ago to look for you during the week. I looked but didn't see you. I know of your lessons and our meetings as tonight, but I'm not sure really what you meant, and we've all talked about that. I wasn't expecting to see you with material eyes, but I didn't really know what that meant, to "look for you during our week."

ABRAHAM: I was there. This is a leveling of your spiritual growth, a balancing time. You communicate much with us, and much with your indwelling Fragment. At times, spiritual activity may seem slow – this always passes. There is a reason for this slowing down time, for much must you absorb. Much do you learn to put to daily use. Much do you teach. One more question?

ROINDA: I have a question, Abraham. Earlier I commented on how this week I hadn't gotten very much rest because I watched my nephew and my granddaughter who came over. In reading your last week's transmission, you mentioned that rest, or diversion from routine, can greatly improve our attitude. I was wondering, because I noticed that by the end of the week that I was tired; but I noticed that my level of patience had gone up. I was wondering if that is kind of a diversion that was kind of shown to me this week.

ABRAHAM: Yes, yes. This diversion, especially children, can help improve tolerance levels. A tiring week it may appear, but the memories of the children will long outlast your tiredness. Your attention, your care, your love, was greatly appreciated. Does that answer? (Roinda: Yes, thank you.)

Next week I hope to hear more on your weekly notes from Father – of your daily witnessing of Father's hand in your life. Until next week, Shalom.

[Editor's note: This insert is an excerpt from Teacher Ham [March 15, 1992 lesson] regarding the differences of the male and females of our world.]

ROLAND: I think it is very clarifying for me. One question I have from my studies in the Urantia Book goes back to the default of Adam and Eve. As I read it, it indicates that there is enmity between the man and the woman. It seems that is stated in another section of the book about the relationship between man and woman – that there are natural hostilities and antagonisms stemming from the advent of the 'default.' Is that a natural state of all mortals? and, is it unique to our world? Is it a common problem amongst the evolving worlds? Can you address this?

HAM: Yes. There are certain differences between the male and the female of your species, which are biologically predetermined and affect all areas of personal development. Temperamental qualities, yes; and yes, qualitative differences abound. These differences we must look at as not antagonistic but rather, as the spice which causes life to be enjoyable. Often these differences create a dynamic of personal interchange which can be amazingly fruitful in all areas of life: home building, child rearing, working relationships (intimate and non-intimate). These differences of mind are there for a purpose. Usually, the working together of the two is better than the working between the same sexes in many respects. As it states in the Urantia Book, complete and total understanding of one sex by the other, is impossible, for so much is involved in mental temperament which is associated with one's sex. There can be, therefore, no complete understanding between the two, but this does not mean that there cannot be sympathetic tolerance between the two. Do you have anything more specific?

ROLAND: Then the enmity was not created by the default of Adam and Eve?

HAM: Correct. And this 'enmity' has evolved for the better, in general, throughout the universe, as far as I know.

ROLAND: Then we don't have a, for lack of a better term, "a curse" that has been placed between men and women to create the apparent differences that we see in our modern society, from the disobedience or the default action of Adam and Eve?

HAM: No. No. That would be misunderstanding. There is no curse on mankind at all.

Roles of Our Mortal Brothers/Fathers

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-10-1995

I am ABRAHAM. I am happy to be with you this evening. I desire to speak a little on the roles of our brothers/fathers. A long time ago men would do most of the physical work. It was instinctive for them to hunt, to build. But somewhere down through evolution man's work was more valued than women's. A lot of value was placed on material goods. Women, having control mostly over child-rearing, seem to somehow be placed at a lower value.

With the evolution of time and the pursuit of equality between men and women, women began to bring home the material goods, therefore women took their place alongside man in the work field. With this new uprising of women's quest of equality, man was somewhat moved out of the family picture; women could provide for their family now, and often fathers were made to be seen as unneeded - this began the breakup of the family.

With this break up so much damage has been done to our children. This war - this struggle between men and women - has seriously damaged the spirit of our youth. The fathers have been left out.

I say to you, please begin to once again include the fathers in the family unit. Instead of this struggle, we could have togetherness; we could have physical and mental well-being. I say to you, please bring our brothers back into the community. Instead of pointing out their faults, try to appeal to their sense of fatherliness. Appeal to their sense of duty and honor that lie deep within the heart of our mortal brothers.

Women/mothers can provide a nurturing loving place in the home, yes, but I would say that is not complete - a father in the home can provide safety and a secure environment for his family; the two examples in a home are more complete. This is not to say this is all of a biological nature, no! This is to say, let our male population once again resume his role as a caretaker and security provider. Yes, let each man and woman realize the importance of their own roles in this society, and let them also understand and accept the roles that one another plays.

This week I say to you, my fellow brothers, let no one hold you back from your fatherly place in the world. To my fellow sisters, could you reach out to a brother and include him? Are there questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, I hope I am not misunderstanding these last two weeks' lessons. Last week it appeared that women were to stand up and count themselves as equal and look to one another as equals with men; and for men to realize there is no inequality between the two. This week, I think you're saying we have separate roles – one as a motherly caretaker of the home, and one as father and provider of security. How does that fit with women feeling a need in our society to be a "provider?" I'm asking: is the provider role, on the women's side, maybe not so good in our society?

ABRAHAM: With the dissolutions of marriages, many women may have no choice but to provide for their family. I do not mean to say our sisters are not good providers. I mean to say, both man and woman are, together, more efficient in child rearing. An example might be Mary, the mother of Jesus – she tended to Him mostly His first five years, teaching Him, loving Him, caring for Him. Then Joseph (Jesus' Earthly father) took over His training and education. Although His Earth parents were not perfect, they provided Him with a balanced ideal of family life. Mary may have shown Jesus to be loving and kind and fair, whereas Joseph taught Him strength and acquired skills needed in the world. Does this answer?

CALVIN: Yes, it does. It seems you're pointing out there are different natures: One is more motherly, a softer touch than the harsher male touch. I see you are asking us to see those two roles/natures, and use that to complement each other also in child raising.

ABRAHAM: Yes, but the male touch is more than physical strength. It is strength in character, strength in faith, strength in compassion. More questions?

ROLAND: Abraham, as I look at those relationships that I have had in my own life, and I perceive relationships of married people outside of my own experience, I see very few relationships that are truly based on spiritual mutual supportiveness. Rather, they seem based on seemingly ego-needs and dysfunctional enmeshments. I may be rather cynical in that, but I see it that way. Can you give us instructions as how to approach relationships that would be healthy, that would be functional, that would be spiritually benefiting?

ABRAHAM: Yes, many relationships appear dysfunctional. This has come about over several years. Much much healing is needed; this is a part of the Correcting Time, and this is an important issue. I can say that no couple can join functionally until each individual can be satisfied with their own inner selves. To pledge yourself in marriage, in a commitment, is not easy; much work is required on both sides to stay together. Spirituality would be of a great benefit, yes, to any relationship. Spirituality would be a solid foundation to stand on, together – but not always is this enough. Your world is recognizing this need for brotherly love – and for all, male and female, to share in the beat of one heart. To expect to commit to a person with your 'same' beliefs and personal qualities is not reality. This is where room needs to be made (opened up) within the hearts of this world's brothers and sisters. Are there more questions?

ROLAND: Then I take it you're saying that it is unrealistic to think you will be able to find another person with the same intensity of spirituality and personal beliefs – it would be too idealistic? So then to compensate for that, one necessarily needs to think of giving plenty of space, plenty of room, for the other person's differences. Am I following that correctly?

ABRAHAM: Yes, but I would not say your ideal mate is non-existent. Spiritual intensity, yes. Common ground, yes. But to have too high of expectations may have you overlook your ideal mate. Does that help? (Roland: I think so. I am going to read that more carefully.)

JAMES: Abraham, I have often noticed that when we mortals are faced with inevitabilities that seem tragic or unhappy in our lives – for example, when a loved one gets elderly and ill, we might say to “let God's will be done” as to whether this person recovers from their illness or not, implying that we hope that whatever happens is God's will. Then if the worst turns out, we console ourselves by saying, “this is God's will.” Is everything that happens on this planet God's will?

ABRAHAM: Up to a point, yes. Some things override God's will as far as mortal decisions are concerned. It is difficult for me to say that everything that happens is God's will. In death (in the case of someone dying), asking for God's will to be done is good, but the letting go of results to God's will can be difficult. I also would not say ‘every’ death is God's will. I can say that though death appears as such a final closing, I would tell you that where I am it is a wonderful beginning, a continuance. In matters of ‘God's will’ I am unqualified to speak, but I can tell you a mortal path is made smoother by attempting to choose our Father's will and releasing the results. Does this answer?

JAMES: It is very helpful. It is interesting to me that a being such as yourself, much further along on the path of spiritual evolution, even still struggles with the mystery of God's will. I guess it takes even a lot longer, maybe even till Paradise, to fully understand God's will. Is that correct?

ABRAHAM: I know more now than I did when I walked the Earth, yes. It does become easier to understand God's will once you have been through the training of the Mansion Worlds. Like spiritual growth, the discerning of God's will increases. One more question?

JEANA: Abraham, I haven't been allowed to see my kids for the last four months and I am really concerned about how that might be affecting them. They have been with their dad and step-mom for the last few years. I have been really concerned and miss them a lot. I was wondering if you had any advice for me or know what I can do to be able to see them again, if you know anything on the situation.

ABRAHAM: Do your children know your feelings? (Jeana: Yes, they do. I have talked to them on the phone and written letters to them.) Abraham: Then I say worry not; just continue your contact with your children. Do not give up your persistence in seeing, reaching your children; it means a lot to them. Does this answer? (Jeana: Yes, it helps. Thank you.)

I wish to end this meeting with a prayer: Father, your children of this world beseech you for your guidance in the understanding of person-to-person relationships. My friends here honestly seek your presence with them in all matters, human and divine. I would petition for your strength and goodness to be upon them. Father, we thank you. Amen and shalom.

Our Place in The World ~ Not Feeling Outcasted or Separated

I am ABRAHAM. I feel energized by all the enthusiasm here tonight. Yes, it appears that all stand ready for new steps toward enlightenment. My last two lessons were seemingly controversial causing much untangling of the thought process.

Relationships are an extremely important step in your spiritual attainment. I would ask, did everyone find a way this week to better include our fellow brothers and sisters? Were you impressed by certain examples of either the motherly or fatherly roles? It would be beneficial for this group to make an effort to provide good parental examples to your fellow brothers and sisters.

Tonight I wish to speak on 'your place in the world.' I would ask you: Do you really feel at home in the world? Can you walk into a public setting and feel that you are an equal child of God? When you observe other people, do you look at these fellows as an equal child of God - your brother, your sister?

Many, every day, find it difficult to feel they belong in the world; they see themselves as so different that it leaves them with a feeling of separation. Be it man or woman or child, all have experienced this feeling of separation. It is said that "we are not of this world," and that is true; but also I would say, there is a greater purpose for our existence in this world.

Many mortals that feel this separation from society may find it is partially self-imposed - this feeling is, mostly, imagined. Such feeling of homelessness in this world is mostly taught from generation to generation; it is a feeling of 'not belonging' and is learned as a child; and many times, children unknowing of the consequences, will inflict another child with this feeling of separation.

Also, many adults tend to separate themselves from what they believe to be as normal, feeling not common and 'not fitting' in the average mold of society. Those who have traveled their own path, those who have 'marched to a different drummer,' appear to be cast out from the so-called 'average' in society.

Urantians, having been through this isolation period, have a worldwide feeling of discomfort on their home planet. I would like to say, this feeling of homelessness, this feeling of separateness from your fellows, will soon come to an end as we learn we are an equal and loved part of a grand universal family of the same Divine Parents.

This week I would ask you to make an effort to feel more at home in the world; feel that you belong. Look at your brothers and sisters as though they also belong. Abandon your feelings of transience. Abandon your feelings of unworthiness or not belonging. Let not another person's ignorance make you feel separate, alone. Also I would say to you, along with feeling at home 'as yourself,' to include a brother or a sister in that same feeling of belonging, 'as they are.' Individuality, yes! Acceptance, yes! Unity in diversity, yes! A feeling of not belonging, not included, not a part of the world, no!

When this world can feel at ease in their place of birth, in their world of origin - when the people of this planet are accepting of one another's place in the world, then shall we see a giant step towards brotherhood on Urantia. Are there any questions?

NORWOOD: Abraham, I just had a thought I would like to go over with you. We just celebrated the resurrection of Christ yesterday. As you know, it has been almost two-thousand years, and the thought I was thinking was that man's acceptance of his brothers and sisters to live on Urantia, to have the same rights, seems to be as it was two millennia ago with the same problems, just two-thousand years older. Nothing has really changed, in some respects. Well, I can't say that in the finite, but in general terms it seems that we have not advanced very far. Secondly, with that statement, you said something about "there would be a change soon." I would like you to expound on that if you could, please.

ABRAHAM: Yes, evolution is slow. In the days of old, people, groups of various religious orders, various political parties, would feel superior to their counterparts, thereby excluding them. Today we find the Urantian citizens to retreat or exclude themselves rather than the superior doing the excluding. This is why we ask for all - man, woman and child - to feel at home in the world. Could you repeat the second part of your question?

NORWOOD: You made a statement that soon there would be a change in either attitudes of the people, or maybe the system circuits opening up, that would get into people's brains where they would want and have the free will to make a change and accept people; and people would feel like they belong and feel at home on Urantia instead of being separated from that. If it wasn't two-thousand years ago, and it isn't today (it doesn't appear to be so today), then what is going to be the thing to change it? Is it going to be all of a sudden people are going to wake up and say, "Hey, you know, I got the idea I belong here today." What is going to change this? Is it going to take another two-thousand years, or five-thousand years, for man to get it?

ABRAHAM: Hopefully not. The change takes place at this very moment through teachings such as these. The embracing of fellow brothers and sisters is occurring more and more each day. At another time we may discuss the delivery of thoughts, which helps in a more swift change of old ideas, old habits. Possibly next week we will discuss this thought-delivery further. Does this help. (Norwood: Thank you very much. Yes, it does.)

WILLEENA: Father Abraham, to continue on the thread that Norwood began: Is this change occurring on an individual basis? As we are opening up to heartfelt communications with our brothers and sisters, sharing in a more truthful, personal, revealing, feeling, connection - is this in line with the change that you are addressing? creating more safety, I guess?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Ham once described a rock/pebble being thrown into a pond and the ripples that come out from the pebble/rock. [see excerpt below.] This acceptance of each other is spreading like the ripples on a pond – individually, yes, and with small groups too. The reserve corps also aids us in these worldwide transformations. Are there more questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, your lesson was quite intriguing because I have noticed just what you are saying – a starting with one, two, three and then a group of people. There seems to be a great difference in embracing a brother and sister (as in one another here), rather than tolerating or even in ‘just accepting’ them. This embracing is a bigger word and has a much more rippling effect out of it.

ABRAHAM: Yes. Tolerance and understanding are important, but not necessary steps to actually embracing a fellow brother or sister. Accepting each other’s differences is – knowing that a person may have some strange quality about them, yes, and yet, being able to overlook the strange qualities so we can literally and actually embrace ‘the child of God’ in that person. More questions?

ROLAND: Abraham, along those lines, it gives us an opportunity for a question that Calvin and I discussed last week: That is that both of us have been approached by people who are not necessarily heavy readers of the Urantia Book, or even readers at all, of the Urantia Book, and who would like to attend this meeting. We thought rather than to try to second guess what you thought would be a good thing, we’d ask you to give some guidelines about invitations to new people who would like to come.

ABRAHAM: If space is adequate, I see no reason for them not to come. Your judgment, your assessment is trusted. You decide. If my presence and the group fellowship would be beneficial to them, then, by all means, invite them. More question?

CALVIN: Are our meetings proceeding in the direction you would like? Would you like to see more individual, personal things coming out – kind of like they are here tonight? That’s a question a couple of us had last week.

ABRAHAM: If you are receiving my messages, and if you find them helpful to your daily living – I would say then, the meetings are proceeding sufficiently. One more question?

NORWOOD: Abraham, I have a question. It is kind of personal. There are times when I feel like I need a correction, a ‘course-change’ correction. I don’t feel like I am going down the right spiritual path, the morontia path, or working in that direction. I feel I am not achieving those goals. In one sense, I feel like I have gone backward. It seems, try as I might, at times I just can’t get past the void. I was just wondering if you could give me any suggestions, any help, any guidance. I tried to go within, find the stillness; sometimes it seems to work, sometimes it doesn’t. My outside life, my professional career at this time, has a lot to do with that because it is a very difficult situation at best right now where I am employed. I think I am trying to analyze this while I am talking to you. I don’t feel like I am heading the way I want to go. It’s okay if you don’t understand what I am saying, because I am not sure I do, either.

ABRAHAM: Common is your plight. Many mortals feel as though they are spinning their wheels. Spiritual growth is not seen until time has passed. I would say this feeling is not regression. But if this is appearing to you in this way (a regression) and you feel there is a problem, then yes, there may be. I would recommend not doing the same thing over and over again; not trying to fit the same piece of one puzzle into another puzzle. Like a record player with the needle stuck, sometimes we need a little tap to get us going. (Norwood: Do you have a tap?) [laughter.]

ABRAHAM: That would be Father! I also recommend, don't be too harsh with yourself or too concerned with your spiritual path. Your essence that is your soul, is fully capable of recognizing the direction in which Father's compass points.

With that, I would wish you much joy in your discoveries, in your search for traces of the Father. Shalom.

* Excerpt from Ham's teaching--February 16, 1992

WILLEENA: Yes. Thank you. On tonight's teaching - I have been seeing several times now a pebble being dropped into a clear lake and the concentric circles that ring outward from it. Did I understand in your teaching that as we visualize this picture of concentric circles and relate it to the ever-present love of the Father, that it will help in the integration process that you were just discussing with me?

HAM: Your indwelling Father Fragment is the one who conducts and brings together these elements. This is a manifestation of the Fragment of the Father. The love of the Father is also universal and manifests in many ways. The visualization of a pebble dropping into the still waters does create waves which could symbolize the power, expression, and energy-surges of Father-presence. However, as the water is the medium by which the surges of (or waves of) energy are radiated, it is the vast water which is more representative, analogously, of the Father-presence.

Your Place in the World | Negative and Positive Thought-Sending/Receiving

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you. How was your week of practicing feeling at home in the world? I love to hear of your experiences with the weekly lessons. I must say, these lessons are ongoing and are to be interwoven into your daily experiences. Once effort has been made to practice these living lessons, they become natural. These skills are unconsciously done, daily.

I would like to speak on thought receiving and delivery. Every day you may receive ideas and thoughts which you may claim as your own. Some of these thoughts you receive are given to you by your Thought Adjuster. Many thoughts may be delivered by the universal circuitry; these thoughts may be received by you and then also delivered outward on a planetary circuit. Yes, many mortals are mentally equipped for receiving morontial thought sages, and it is easy for them to 'receive' and then to 'send out' verbally to friends and family. I say, it is also easy to send out mindally on this thought circuit.

It is wondered how the world, so filled with destruction and negative emotions, can move closer to Light and Life. I would tell you, Christ Michael, His Spirit of Truth, His staff and His planetary helpers, also work with this 'mind-to-mind' sending of thoughts. This is how we can reach the many mortals of Urantia. A shift of mind is needed to further the evolution of this world. No, this is not brainwashing or mind coercing, for thoughts are only delivered to those who desire them.

When Jesus went alone into the hills to commune with His Father, many things were made clear to Him. Many thoughts He received, and many times was His heavy heart lifted up by Father because He was open to receive. Jesus thought not only planetarily, but He thought universally. In this He was able to better know the Father's will; He was better able to understand which direction His Father in heaven would have Him take.

Yes, the Master helped this world take a giant step forward in understanding. He was able to receive thoughts and then to give out again in His teachings and in His ministering to His fellows.

At this time your nation mourns the tragedy that occurred last week. [Oklahoma City bombing.] I also mourn for this planet and its seemingly senseless violence. But I can tell you now, the thought circuit is alive with powerful positive thoughts. Out of a tragedy, minds and hearts join in reflection of their own individual lives – and, their lives together here as fellow mortals.

Yes, out of a tragedy, many more do openly accept their neighbor's personality patterns, habits. Out of a tragedy, the world has become more connected, more aligned, with the thought circuit. This is not to say tragedy is good, no! This is to say there will be tragedy, there will be pain, there will be grieving, yes! but also, there will be an outburst of thoughts of love, service, caring, and healing.

I would ask you to focus on some of the positive things that might possibly come out of negative occurrences. I would also mention – a good time to receive celestial thoughts is during a time of stillness, or perhaps during a moment of creativity. Thus, I would say the receiving of these thoughts are also ideal at times of self-reflection.

I have spoken of changing the worldly paradigm; but I would also add, this thought circuit also serves individual learning experiences as well. As previously stated, your human minds are equipped to send out thoughts. These thoughts can be positive or negative. Perhaps you have thought of a negative thing only to see it occur the next day. That realization is on a more individual level.

You would do well to practice entertaining thoughts of positivity. You would do well to recognize a negative thought and imagine this thought in a raging river to be swept away by the current. Negative-thinking is a habit, and this habit (negative-thinking) can be a magnet. It can draw negative things to you just as positive thoughts can draw positive things to you.

For us to reach as many people as we do we rely much on the indwelling Father Fragment. The Father 'fragment within' can assist in filtering out negative impurities which can harm the soul – and, which can harm the forward progress of this world.

This week I ask you to engage in this practice of planetary thought-receiving – perhaps by sharing it verbally or just by pondering on this thought. I would ask you to watch for the negative thoughts and let them be swept out by the raging river. Perhaps a conversation with a fellow would help to add to the mind circuit. As such, a positive conversation would be of great benefit to the changing of spiritual progress, evolutionary progress.

A brother or sister who may be on a negative path in a conversation, perhaps you could help them to see the lighter side. Perhaps you might say: "Yes, I agree that is bad, but many good things could result." This thought reception and delivery will not come easy at first. This will take practice. This world needs much help, and with your own mindal power you can help it to progress. A few questions?

WILLEENA: I have a lot of questions: You said that thoughts are only delivered to those who desire them. So if we are praying for greater understanding, say for military groups of this country or people that are practicing violence, mindally – are they being served? Are they receiving?

ABRAHAM: Sorry to say, the negative individuals do attract like-individuals, and they are also somewhat empowered to send negative ideas. But I would say these negative individuals don't receive much good thoughts. I would also add they are a small minority. The majority of this world are good, possibly not all 'spirit-led' but nonetheless, goodhearted. Does this help?

WILLEENA: It does. And to clarify: As we are praying for greater peace on our planet, would it serve us best then, to pray for the majority of the goodhearted people to come to a greater understanding in terms of feeling more protection for ourselves/themselves against the negativity?

ABRAHAM: Yes. As you feel more at home in the world, better are you able to socialize; and, better able are these goodhearted individuals to see they are not alone in their hopes for goodness in the world. If the honest and goodhearted people were to unite, this thought circuit can override these small negative groups. Once people unite in a common effort to achieve peace, then will you see these small negative groups being more exposed, brought to light. Next question.

CALVIN: Abraham, I take it you are saying that we, ourselves, can change our surroundings. As it becomes a bigger pool of people engaged in changing their surroundings then it magnifies and really expands outward at a faster pace than maybe we realize. I also perceive that, for instance, when I am driving and talking to my son, I'll start explaining things and I have a real clear mind of some things that I have never consciously thought of before. It's like I am learning while I am saying things. Is that part of what you are saying in receiving circuitry, thought circuitry, from celestial beings and from our indwelling Father?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Your indwelling Fragment, being the doorway for these thoughts – your Adjuster organizes and assists you in your understanding of spiritual concepts. I would also add, many in the world are very good receivers of these spiritual thoughts, and therefore this helps in teaching. Next question.

JAMES: Abraham, I have a little confusion about positive-thinking and negative-thinking. It seems to me it is hard to reconcile being an ‘honest thinker’ with being a ‘positive thinker.’ Because of negative perceptions in the world there certainly is a great deal of immaturity, evil, and even sin that goes on around us. If we are to think positively, it seems to me that we would need to have a selective perception about the world around us and perceive only half of what's going on, which would be the ‘positive’ half, and filter out the ‘negative’ half, which seems to be removing us from half the world we live in. Could you comment on that?

ABRAHAM: Yes! but this idea of positive thinking is not to overlook the evil; not to deny the negative. What you say is correct. Yes, we must view/perceive this world with honesty. My direction is in the sending back out of these thoughts – hopefully, these thoughts will be positive. In the sending of these positive thoughts there is great reception and response. When you speak with a negative person, this person may drain you of your energy, make you feel empty and sad. Conversation with a positive person lifts you, feeds your energy with goodness. You contribute to their energy and they contribute to yours. Take the media, for example: To show destruction and devastation is an honest look, yes, but not the whole story – for the whole story may be filled with inspiration and hope and the joining of communities. The media would do well to also show the power of the human spirit – to not just talk about those who died, but perhaps also those that lived. Does this answer? (James: That is very helpful, yes, and interesting. Thank you.) Abraham: One more question?

TECTRA: You spoke about mortals that are mentally equipped for receiving morontia thought earlier. Is that more-so in this day and age? or has it kind of been the same throughout the ages. Are we more mentally equipped now for morontial thought?

ABRAHAM: With the breaking up of dogma (old religious authoritarian practices), the mortals of this world are more free to trust in their own thinking, and less pressured on how to think. And because of this, today's mortals are all the better equipped for receiving thoughts and then also transmitting them out. Does that help?

TECTRA: Yes, it does. It brings to mind another question about system circuits being restored now: Is that also another reason why we are able to receive more morontial thought coming in?

ABRAHAM: Yes. This opening of the circuits has greatly assisted in this ‘thought transference.’

With that, I shall leave you with this thought: Father is like your shadow. You can see Him in hours of light, therefore easily believing He is working in your life. I would also say, during the dark hours, although you are not able to see your shadow, keep in mind that soon the sun will rise. Shalom.

Visualization and Focusing. Father, What Should Be My Focus

I am ABRAHAM. I am happy to be with you tonight. How was your week of thought receiving and delivery? Many will find this practice will take time and much patience. It is difficult to release that negative inner chatter. It would be helpful to begin the practice of focusing and visualization.

When your negative thoughts seem to overpower you, I would ask you to picture a peaceful scenic valley. I would ask you to visualize a clear blue sky, a calm lake perhaps. Imagine there is nothing pressing you must do. And at that moment you can just sit and absorb this beauty, this peacefulness. Visualize the deer grazing, the squirrels running, smell the pine trees. Absorb the energy from this peaceful visualization. Feel no burden upon your back. At this moment, believe all is in God's hands. Believe everything is working out as planned.

Upon feeling more at ease, having your attention drawn away from negative thinking, talk to Father; ask Him: "What would you have me focus on?" Perhaps you may ask: "Father, what would be best to focus on at this time in my spiritual growth? What can I accomplish today that could perhaps further not only my own spiritual growth but possibly enhance the community's progress – or possibly the state, the nation, the world? Yes, Father, what should be my focus?" Are there questions?

RACHEL: I'll ask one, Father Abraham. Quite some time ago you told Jason and Joshua that you and others were using me as a switch box. Is this the type of reception that you are referring to? or at least one of the types you were referring to last week in the lesson? Because I gave Joshua a message from you on Wednesday that you wanted to speak to him, which you did.

ABRAHAM: Yes. As I have explained to others, we do what we can to reach our mortal friends. Yes, we may even assist in various thought-transferring (from us through you) – that we may reach our brothers and sisters. Rachel, you do well to include your brother, Joshua. You remain a shining light in his life. Yes, we do communicate with Joshua, but human-to-human communication is critically important at this time. Sometimes what we can see, feel, and hear, is more helpful during periods of illness; but even better is a loving friend to point out the lighter side in the dark days of illness. Rachel, my friend, you do well.

RACHEL: Thank you, Father Abraham. I thank you for giving me the opportunity to try to help out in that way. I have thoroughly enjoyed doing it. I think it is wonderful that you are here with us now at this time. I am enjoying your lessons. I thank you.

ABRAHAM: Thank you and we also enjoy your company. Another question?

ROLAND: Abraham, in regard to your lesson this evening in focusing on what the Father wills us to focus on: Some of my recent lesson readings has asked us to surrender to the Father our character defects – to have Him remove the character defects. I am wondering whether we need to focus on those things that we perhaps do habitually out of many years of practice, and try to eliminate those by focusing on those behaviors that demonstrate our character defects. I don't know if that is well put, but I am sure you understand what I mean.

ABRAHAM: Yes. When you recognize or catch yourself in the midst of these habits – stop! Take a moment to clear your mind, perhaps a visualization of a beautiful scenic view – then ask for help. If you should recognize what seems to be a character flaw I would ask you, do not be too hard on yourself. Do not add to your already bothersome idea with self-judgment and critical self-examination. Your Father Fragment is quite capable of informing you when a change in your character might be needed. A common desire among mortals is to do good. This desire sometimes can be overwhelming – making you feel impatient, perhaps wanting to hasten the process of learning. I would say you have, as mortals, more time than patience. This is not to worry; this is to be glad in your steps that lead you to Father. More questions?

ROLAND: A follow-up question on that: I try to take breaks in the day when I seem to lose touch with the flow of what I think I should be doing. Quite frequently I try to meditate in the moments of decision about what's the next thing I can do that would be a continuation of doing the Father's will. There are times when there is great clarity about what that should be; I do it immediately, and hopefully it didn't come from me, but the Spirit-indwelling. But sometimes there is no answer, not a direction, not a sense of purpose about 'what's next'. I am wondering if you could help me understand that, or turn up the volume when you want me to do something so I can hear it clearly? [laughter.]

ABRAHAM: Many moments taken during your daily activity are just yours – yours to decide; yours to plan; yours to work out as you wish. Of those matters that are possibly pressing, your Father Fragment, or your assigned Teachers, will inform you. Many things that seem to have no direction are fully directed – just seemingly unconscious to you. Yes, the moments of meditation, reflection, are beneficial. You may find it helpful to go with your heartfelt instincts. More questions?

CALVIN: In the Urantia Book, we remember where it tells us that sometimes our own thinking out of our head is just that – out of our heads, and is not Adjuster-sent. It seems like now you are wanting us to be more aware that there is circuitry going on; that thought circuits can be sent to us to both receive information, and then also this information put to benefit by sending it back out, expressing our understanding of what we've received. So, at what point though do we, at this stage in our understanding, really say: "Wow, that is a make-up of my own mind!" or: "That's an enlightenment from my Father Fragment or from a Teacher." The reason that I bring this point up is like last night going to sleep after watching an impacting movie – I had a trip of incoming thoughts of information regarding things I could engage in to effect change. It was like I was on peyote or something. It makes me wonder this morning, especially after your last week's lesson, if this is some stuff in my head from a divine source – or, just caused from the movie showing me things I could engage in; or even if just from something I ate! I think you understand what I am saying.

ABRAHAM: Yes. This is why mortals are endowed with intellect. If your common sense tells you: "Yes, I have learned something good," then keep it for your own to use as you best see fit. If your intellect says this could be a little 'off', then do not take it seriously. If a situation – possibly a message – continues over and over again, then yes, listen.

CALVIN: Like in the same night, or week after week, or both?

ABRAHAM: I would say over a longer period of time. If your thought experiences bring about good, and they appeal to your intellect as well, then perhaps ask the Father for more enlightenment. If doubts should continuously plague your mind on this subject you ponder, then let time pass. One more question?

CLAIREESA: Abraham, do you have any words for James and Roinda at this time of sadness? [Editor's Note: This past week, they experienced a loss of their unborn child.]

ABRAHAM: This will be hard to answer without Ellanor's input. During times of sadness and grieving, it seems as though no words can comfort or make up for any loss. My words to James and Roinda: Worry not. Let not this time of sadness hurt or delay your future plans of happiness. Your many friends here, mortally and celestially/spiritually, grieve with you and hold you in their hearts.

It is on this note I shall take my leave. I remind you to ask Father: "What now is my focus?" Until next week, shalom.

Unity on The Thought Circuit | The Group Positive Energy Moves the Masses
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-08-1995

I am ABRAHAM. I am honored to be in acquaintance with you. Many of you have met with adversity this week and I am impressed with your courage and steadfastness. Last week my lesson on visualization and focusing has led us to this week's exercise.

I would ask that you join me in an exercise on individual and group wellness. I ask that we connect hearts and minds and join the thought circuit. I ask you to remember something you thought to be wonderful or beautiful.

Now picture this in your thought, your mind's eye. Perhaps it was an outdoor scenery; perhaps a parent's smile. It could be your first experience of God-consciousness. [pause.]

I ask for this visualization to be of comfort and security. For this moment in time it is alright to let go of your worries. Begin to bring your focus on yourself, your relationship with Father. I ask you to really make an effort to feel His presence, His love. At this moment try to fully accept that you are His child as if you were His only child. Know that you are loved and cared for and watched over. [pause.]

If you can please imagine your Father, your indwelling Fragment of God, only desires good for you - your good health, a sound mind, freedom from financial worries, and communication with Himself. Know that your Father is on your side, calling you, comforting you, teaching you, and staying with you no matter what. [pause.]

These thoughts of individual relationships with the Father are traveling on this thought circuit throughout the world. Picture if you can, the faces of your brothers and sisters around the world, each realizing the love that their Father in heaven has for them. Imagine the world's people realizing the love bestowed upon them by Christ Michael and the Divine Minister. [pause.]

Now I would ask you to unify your thoughts and focus on your group, your circle of friends. I wish I could find the words to describe the love that is emanating from this group. This group, yes, has seen many hard times, has learned much. This group has built a solid foundation. Always do people feel welcome. Always do I feel welcome. Always do people feel free from judgment here. [pause.]

I ask you to focus on your circle of friends, your group, and visualize the many influenced by this group, the many people you've spoken to about my teachings; also, about my brother Ham's teachings, and about our text, the Urantia Book. So many this group has reached; so many more will you yet reach. So much good, you as a group, have accomplished. Yes, the time that these accomplishments take is seemingly long to you. I must say, this group works well together.

During the week I ask you to focus on your individual relationship with Father. I ask you to truly focus on His love for you – not just to say it, but to really feel it, to really know it. I would also add, to remember during the week – this group, and how might you help contribute to the energy that goes out from this group. Yes, this week I ask you to focus on your individual and group relationships to Father, to the universe.

Next week I will ask you to join me on the thought circuit concerning the world, the planet. Are there questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, I would like to formally introduce, and I am sure you have already met, a couple friends of mine, Monique and Linda. I thank you for the lesson and ask these two if they have any questions in case they feel shy to break into the new meeting?

ROLAND: Abraham, with me tonight is Sonja. First of all, let me apologize for being late. I was trying to put too many things in the hours I had. Thank you very much for the lesson you have given. I ask Sonja if she has any questions? (Sonja: Not at the moment.)

CALVIN: I have one myself. If I have someone that I am really angered at, and you know me by now, I have a hard time getting over that. I already know the answer to this – to pray for how to get over this thing. It was a tough situation this week. I don't think I handled it very well, but I really don't know what to do in the situation, as far as how to handle my confusion and anger over it. Any help on handling my anger?

ABRAHAM: Many here know this anger. Many know the self-disappointment of not handling this anger well. During this moment of anger was there thought given to my lesson last week? (Calvin: Probably not during, but after – quick after. [laughter.]) Abraham: This is why I ask you to visualize something familiar, something comforting, something beautiful, to sever those negative thoughts and emotions, and to completely pull your mind off the subject. Allow space for incoming thought-messages from your indwelling Father Fragment. Yes, anger is a difficult subject for those in this material body. I would ask during this time of anger, ask yourself: "What am I really angry at?" Possibly ask the Father for help with that answer. I might also add, during times of anger don't act too quickly so as to regret actions taken by the desire for immediate resolutions to problems. Does this help? (Calvin: Very very much. Thanks, Abraham.)

ROINDA: Abraham, I don't know so much that I have a question as I think I just would like some words of comfort from you concerning my grieving. I think I have been handling it quite well and allowing myself to grieve. When I got really depressed, I went to my Teacher, Savanna; she really helped in giving me some comforting words. If you could just comment.

ABRAHAM: Roinda my daughter, yes, you have dealt with this situation courageously. I must say, if thoughts were food, this group's good thoughts for you would feed you for a lifetime. In grieving, sometimes there are no words that can help. No one can know what you must be experiencing. You have done well to contact Savanna. I must also say, your Divine Monitor within feels this aloneness, this grief, along with you. He reaches out to you. It is your choice to be angry with Him or to embrace His comfort which He offers. Grieving is necessary. You must feel it now, sort through it, allow time to pass, and try again. Do not give up. Yes Roinda, strong has your spirit become. Yes, you are a model citizen of this seemingly harsh world. You have wonderful motherly qualities that have yet to be shared. Yes, do stay in touch with your Teacher. Another question?

WILLEENA: Abraham, I am not sure how to ask or speak but I need some help here with what's going on. I am definitely not handling these panic attacks. I am really confused with how I am supposed to get through them. I feel very disjointed in those times with regard to my spiritual connections, and find that even when I reach out they feel empty and hollow. I just want someone to help me through because I am not doing this in a way that I feel that is working. I don't understand. I don't know if I am doing something wrong or if somehow it is just part of this healing process. If it is, I want to know if I am making progress.

ABRAHAM: No, nothing wrong are you doing. My recommendation would be to seek out medical attention. We must know if this is a chemical imbalance. You must wade through this river. You must find the root of this unhappiness. My sources inform me you are not doing as poorly as you perceive. Sometimes Father will knock, but we cannot hear Him; we are caught up in our material world; we are possibly centered on ego-related subjects - so Father, in His concern and watchcare for us, will knock a little harder. He waits for His child to open the door. Sometimes we must stop and say, "What is this, Father, which you are trying to teach me?" Sometimes we must just say, "Okay, Father is all-knowing. He can see my path long before I reach that particular point." Sometimes we must not do anything and say, "What is this, Father, you're trying to teach me?" Willeena, you know you have a Teacher. She is available to you. She awaits your questions. She longs to aid you in your struggles. Does this help?

WILLEENA: Yes. I had been working with Danielle; and when I started the panic attacks it's like I have lost touch with everything. So I guess I want to know if during those times, if I give permission ahead of time, if she could just assist me, freely?

ABRAHAM: Yes, granted, along with others who attend you.

If there are no more questions, I would like to thank you. I am honored to be a part of this group. Until next week, shalom.

Exercise in Thought Sending | The Chick Breaking Through the Shell

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-15-1995

Back

I am ABRAHAM. How did the week's focusing lessons go? Were you able to learn more about your closeness to Father? Did you make an effort to feel His loving presence? Did you give thought about your group and how you can contribute to the energy of the group?

I must say, many this week were contacted by Teachers, various helpers. Although some do not recognize this Teacher help, I tell you many wait to serve and are available to help you with personal issues. Questions that can't wait until Monday can be asked to your own Teachers for they are more equipped to understand and handle your mortal problems.

Tonight, I ask you to join me in an exercise of thought-sending: many individuals tonight will join us on the thought circuit for this planet. Last week I discussed individual and group thought, hopefully bringing unity with individual and Father; and also, group and Father. Tonight, I ask you to join me in sending a message to your brothers and sisters of this world. Thoughts have power. As we pray, our thoughts come from our Paradise Father – He knows our road we must travel. [pause for mental preparation through mediation.]

Please picture if you will, your planet is like an egg. The contents of this egg are perhaps like a forming baby chick. In this egg there is darkness, there is fear, there is confusion about the outside of the shell. This world is maturing, and the mortals are ready to end their loneliness. The baby chick prepares for birth. With birth comes pain. I say, the mortals of this world are ready to be free from this darkness of the shell. Picture the baby chick breaking the shell. Imagine the mortals of this world breaking through the materialism, the selfishness.

Imagine the cracking of this shell and the first light. Feel this excitement that this darkened world would feel seeing the first light, knowing there is something beyond this material existence inside the shell. Feel the heart of every man, woman, child. Feel the hope of finally breaking through the shell. See the empty pieces of shell on the ground rocking back and forth. See the baby chick. The feathers are wet. It is trying to stretch.

This is your world. The shell has broken. We are now baby chicks seeing this vast panorama before us. The God-consciousness has begun. The baby chick feels the wind dry and lifts his feathers. He sees the sun and feels the warmth. Like this world in realization of its Paradise Father and the loving watchcare of the Creator Son, this world realizes the bounty that awaits them.

Can you see your fellows in England with this sunlight upon their faces? Can you see your fellows in Asia realizing that those who created them also loves them? And in Africa, can you see the relief on the faces of your brothers and sisters that true help has finally come to them? The world awakens with this new birth, this new opening of eyes.

I thank you for assisting me and others on this thought circuit. With this exercise, we may reach many. You see, it is in your hands – the power to change the world. Yes, your parts are small, but many small parts working together can move mountains.

This week I ask you to think about in your spare time – what are the positive aspects of a worldwide awakening? Are there questions?

WILLEENA: Abraham, I have a question. Where so many recognize we are in a time of great change on this planet, it appears there has been a consciousness shift in our recent years in terms of people looking towards metaphysics and spirituality in different ways from the old traditional religious ways. In some of those prophetic channelings there has come information that we are facing great cataclysmic changes on the Earth. We are certainly seeing some of the changing effects of weather, and events along those lines. I am just wondering: are those kinds of cataclysmic events necessary, or as we put our attention and our best intention out there for the healing of this planet, can we help to avert some of that? Is that in the will of Father that we use our power to bring more peaceful changes?

ABRAHAM: Natural disasters are not planned; most destruction is more human-caused. With a great awakening, those humans that cause so much destruction may awaken to this abundant love from Father. But I also would say, disastrous events are made the most of by the spiritual hosts. And yes, I would say your good thoughts do help expose those that crave human power which leads sometimes to war and destruction. Are there more questions?

WILLEENA: Can you clarify something with that? Are things like our unconsciousness regarding those industries that pollute our waters and our air – do they have an effect on things like the ozone layer? and is that part of what causes things like volcanoes or Earth changes? And if so, is there something we as individuals can do to affect that positively? Prayer, I suppose?

ABRAHAM: The Earth will do what it has to to survive. Yes, it is known by your scientists that volcanoes do help repair the ozone. Many mortals do not realize this Earth is a gift on loan. Many mortals live here a short time; they damage or hurt the Earth without regard to future generations. In reality, this planet does not belong to the mortal inhabitants. It is just on loan. Once this is realized – then industry and people might begin to take care of this planet. This world is not yours, but your Creators'. Once humankind can get past selfish motivations they can begin to think about the future generations. But when all is said and done, the Earth will take care of itself. Are there further questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, in these exercises, two or three weeks now, I perceive you're getting us to enlighten our minds and stimulate our minds to realize that our individual and group collective thoughts can help uplift the thoughts of those around us, even though they are not participants here; and hopefully mushroom into a big change. I think that is what you are saying. Are we ready to burst out of the egg as a world, as a group of people? Or are we (the students of your teachings) the young chick that has already burst out of the shell here? I missed that part.

ABRAHAM: It really is not for me to say where you are. It is for me to teach you that this visualizing and focusing can create change. This exercise was aimed at the sending of thought – and that thought was ‘of freedom.’ Yes, some parts of this world are still in the shell while some feel the wind in their feathers; and still, some are able to feed themselves. Next question.

RACHEL: I have one Father Abraham. For the last several weeks, have you and some of our spiritual brothers and sisters been monitoring us in our homes? I have felt different presences really strong. I can feel the presence of different ones. Is this what is happening?

ABRAHAM: Oh yes, yes, we are always around. Sometimes, you are more open to feel our presence; other times, some may be too busy, but we are with you. Are there more questions?

CALVIN: Just a note on what Rachel said. I know you are not in the perfect state of existence, like many above you might be; and we ourselves are even far less than perfect still. But at your vantage point – can you tell, in observing us during the week, how we are growing from your lessons? Can you perceive that without our discussion here in this group?

ABRAHAM: Yes, reports are given by some Father Fragments on the effectiveness of lessons. Other times, Teachers can observe lessons in action and can assist at the moment when they are needed. Just one more question?

ROLAND: Abraham, I know that it has been quite an experience in my life when I have noticed certain people who show up in my daily living to teach me a lesson. I believe that is part of the indwelling Spirit's blessing to us, yes, is to put on our paths those people to teach us the lessons we need to learn. Are you, as Teachers, involved in that process of bringing people to us that we need – and then to help us to apply the lessons or learn the lessons from them? Can you comment on that?

ABRAHAM: Yes. We are involved, somewhat. We are given orders by our superiors. We do not have an overall view but we assist when asked.

And it is with that, I shall take my leave. I remind you, several Teachers are available in your daily living, for personal questions. God be with you, today and every day. Shalom.

Our Correcting Time is Beginning to Bear Fruits | Be a Light of Encouragement
Machiventa Melchizedek & Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-22-1995
Back

I am MACHIVENTA MELCHIZEDEK. I bring you greetings from on high. I also bring to you encouragement and good news concerning this Correcting Time. Countless hours, days, have our spiritual hosts labored, and much have our mortal contacts contributed. I am here to report to you a universal broadcast message that took place earlier. We were informed that our struggle with the Correcting Time is beginning to finally produce the first fruits.

I must report that this world has taken a giant step forward in their progress toward Light and Life. Many mortals now have some form of communication with the Teacher staff and/or their indwelling Father Fragment. I am making the rounds to several mortal groups to express my thanks and my gratitude for their efforts in this Teaching Mission. I must report, your diligence and forbearance have greatly helped in our cause. I further encourage you to continue in your efforts to further the progress of your world. My thanks to you, to you all.

I am ABRAHAM. We are overjoyed at this news. It is most exhilarating to hear all our efforts have been worthwhile. What should have taken many many years has already occurred through the efforts of the celestial hosts and their mortal friends. I would say, still much work is there to do. Much seed-planting is there still left to do.

It was my superior's choice to inform you of this good news in the hopes that you may be encouraged, that you may find the energy to continue Michael's work. Yes, a little encouragement can go a long way. A little faith in someone can give them such confidence. Like a child unsure and unknowing of the results of their actions, an encouraging word can greatly build their confidence - that they might know the results of their actions themselves.

Machiventa has encouraged you to continue your good works. I ask you to make an effort to show faith in someone who might need a little uplifting. As we know, encouragement will not always be there in a mortal's daily living - encouragement cannot be counted on. During times of discouragement, I ask you to truly open yourselves and realize the Being that dwells within you - your personal Monitors, your indwelling Father Fragments. If you stop to ponder: 'who is this internal Guide?' you realize it is our Paradise Father.

Yes, our indwelling Fragments are God. God is love. This love may help you through times of discouragement should you allow it. Yes, knowing of His love for you can help rejuvenate you. Many times you may not receive the encouragement you desire from your fellows - expect this! But I tell you, always can you count on your Indwelling Father's love and encouragement. And, each of you can be a light of encouragement to the downhearted, the hopeless, the discouraged; your show of faith in them can help to produce Adjuster contact and energy.

You know where guidance comes from. You know the depths of the Father's love more-so than the hopeless and the discouraged. Share this encouragement, this love from our Paradise Father. Take a moment this week to encourage someone that needs it. Are there questions?

ROLAND: Abraham, I am not sure I understand what the encouraging news is. Are you guys looking at the same world that I'm looking at? I feel a little confused by this announcement. I'm not encouraged.

ABRAHAM: This is not for me to divulge the details. The overall picture and plan for this world is most certainly viewed by my superiors as bearing fruit. It was they who informed me that my time of laboring was well spent. I do not have an overall view, but I trust my co-workers, my Creator. Let me ask you: Look back on your years; personally, has not much changed? Have you not grown? This is the same with the world. Worry not. Your view may be confined, but the changes in this world today are great. The mind-shift has far exceeded our expectations. Does this help?

ROLAND: Yes. I don't want to leave the impression that I'm not aware of my own personal change. If I look back from the time that I began this path, and to now, there has been a tremendous amount of change. I want to express my gratitude to you, Teachers, as well as to Michael and Machiventa, and ask forgiveness of my limited perception. (Abraham: That's not necessary.) Roland: It was for me. But to take a look how this group is right now, this is just a remnant of the many people who were once with us in this group – people I had grown to know and love. I know there are problems, but it seems like we are losing ground rather than gaining.

ABRAHAM: Your discouragement is common and understood and felt by many. Yes, there are terrible problems that exist and which cause separation, descent; there always will be such on a mortal world.

WILLEENA: On that note, I guess a little sideline from Roland's thinking, and with regard to what I heard from the message from Machiventa: I am asking if I am perceiving correctly – that there is a leap in the connection of mortals on a wider scale with spiritual assistance, or at least a recognition of spiritual connection. My question is in regard to the fact that there is so much going on on the planet right now with regard to the flooding, and the disasters of many kinds, including wars; there is so much testing, if you would. And due to my own process, my own journey, I am wondering if I am understanding correctly that those kinds of experiences do bring us to a greater need in ourselves on a personal level; and therefore, a really deep soul-searching quest for some help from Father, from Spirit. Is the 'bad' news, in effect, assisting the good news that is happening in the spiritual connection?

ABRAHAM: In a sense, yes. The spiritual helpers go through any open door. If it is an open door in a disaster, then yes, they will go through it. Sometimes that is exactly what it takes for people to connect with Father. A surrendering, yes, a plea for help. Also do the Adjusters take advantage of this moment of opening of the heart. Does this help? (Willeena: Yes, it does. Thank you.)

CALVIN: I want to express my appreciation for Machiventa's addressing us. It is a great honor to have him, the spiritual host of this world, address us here. I think I connect a little bit with what he is saying – that so many minds are opening and becoming ready because of the disasters and hardships that have been happening for centuries, and so on; but now, minds are opening to receive higher truths. It seems like our old hard traditions are becoming foolish and people are ready to listen to reality, maybe more-so now than they were not too long ago. That's not a question, is it? [laughter.]

ABRAHAM: Well said, yes. It was also desired by Machiventa that he connect with this Utah group who are a big part of this Mission. He wishes to stay in contact with all the mortal students. Another question?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, someone that we haven't heard from for so long, and that is Ruby and her friends in New Zealand – the ‘mortal’ initiators of the Teaching Mission. I would like to inquire as to how they are doing?

ABRAHAM: My information is they still continue the work. Yes, like this group, they started as a root; and from there, many roots began. More questions? (Rachel: Are you still teaching them, Father Abraham?)

ABRAHAM: No, I may visit from time to time. I may help direct. (Rachel: Please give them our love and thanks.) Abraham: Yes, I will.

TECTRA: Abraham, I have a question: About ten years ago I read a book called Messages from Michael. I thought it was quite interesting, there were lots of seeming truths from that book. Just recently at work, I saw a pamphlet called The Progressive; it was a pamphlet of a group of people, who are worldwide now, that say they get messages from Michael. In this group, it seems the Michael entity they speak of is not as I know ‘Michael’ being ‘the Creator Son of this planet.’ Their Michael was a group of beings, like a group of ten beings I believe is what it was. I am just curious if there is any connection between the two, the Michael we know? and these Michael entities they speak of. Is it something we haven't come across yet? What is it? [Editor's note: Tectra may be referring to the ‘Abraham-Hicks’ marketed material from Texas.]

ABRAHAM: I am somewhat limited in my knowledge of this. I would ask you of your opinion; you are well equipped to judge this. [Tectra's response inaudible.]

Abraham: I would also say, this Correcting Time has infiltrated many spiritual and religious groups. Although names will always be confused, it is the context of the words that concern us. It is the fruits that are produced that concern us. Yes, many groups shall come and go. Many shall confuse the names, and even have differing ideals of spiritual living; but I say, the truths that linger from year to year are the ones you can rely on. Does this help? (Tectra: Yes, it does. Thank you.)

WILLEENA: Abraham, I recently was introduced to some information around a subject that I feel a little awkward about, but which I want to understand, about extraterrestrials. My question is: Are they mortals from another realm? a part of our universe, but assisting in some way? Are they supernals of some sort? or are they fictional or delusional? Are they real? and if so, who are they? (Abraham: I am unable to comment.)

WILLEENA: May I ask that in a private session? (Abraham: I must get authorization and information.)

WILLEENA: Would you do that? I guess my real question is: Is there any reason to consider all of the news that is starting to come in around here, concerning them? Is there anything to be concerned about? (Abraham: No.)

NORWOOD: I read a book some years back called Communion. For those who haven't read it, it is a story of extraterrestrials entering people's environments. They talked about two different types of beings that would enter their abodes or establishments/homes, whatever. One of the beings wore a piece of clothing and on it was the concentric circles. Did that have anything to do with, or any tie-in with the Urantia concentric circles?

ABRAHAM: Again, my information is limited on what I can say, but it's possible, yes.

NORWOOD: Also, the Urantia Book talks about entities coming from Mansion Worlds and how they get here – it's on the energy circuits. Could that be construed as part of the alien or UFO visitors from other life forms? I just won't leave it alone, will I?

ABRAHAM: Even we Teachers have been confused for extraterrestrials. [laughter.] Let me research this and also, seek permissions. I know it is a topic of great interest to your world.

I thank you for the joy and faith you give to me. I ask you, please allow me to continue to encourage and enlighten you with hopes of Paradise. Shalom.

Rather Than Resistance, Meet Struggle With An Attitude of Challenge

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-29-1995

Back

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you this evening. Tonight's lesson will be kept short for any questions you might have.

My lesson tonight is about resistance. Resistance is a natural emotion among humans. As time goes by, it appears mortals struggle and fight out of habit. Many are so used to resisting, and are so opposed to having their will impinged upon by others and/or circumstances. Yes, struggle is a part of your human existence, but tonight this lesson on resistance applies to your lack of willingness to meet struggles with an attitude of challenge.

More times than not, mortals dwell in their troubles with an attitude of 'why me?' They may find it more natural to resist, than to move through their troubles slowly – each step learning and accepting. Like children who need certain medications or injections to fight disease, they do not understand the implications of the disease; they only know that the shot is painful. They would rather resist than to take a deep breath and relax and receive this little pain that will benefit them in the long run.

Yes, struggle at many things you will, but I ask you to ask yourself: "Is this resistance appropriate? Am I closed off to a lesson Father might be trying to provide me with?" I ask you, during your next struggle – take a deep breath and relax, and know that the pain will benefit you in the long run. Are there questions?

CALVIN: Teacher Abraham, I can very clearly hear what you are saying, but what I am not clear on is how to 'take that deep breath and relax,' as you say. I try, but the pain is still there. It is not a physical pain, but a hurt, you know, like a hurt inside over the loss of someone, or a situation. It seems like at these times all I can do is ask for Father's help. Is there something else that is helpful?

ABRAHAM: Yes, my words are asking you to think about the benefits in the long run that will result from the trial; I am referring to those moments of feeling stuck and frustrated and not knowing what to do next. Yes, my words are to be thought-over during that moment in which you ask yourself: "Is this pain and struggle magnified because I resist? Would this feeling of being stuck cease or lessen if I were to accept the Father's will?" Try to imagine a boat on troubled waters. The boat is bouncing and swaying. Wouldn't the captain be more likely to steer into the tide, into the wave patterns of the sea? Would the captain attempt to go into the wind? Sometimes it is more beneficial to accept this struggle straight on, accept this lesson Father has provided for you, and know that this pain will pass. Are there more questions?

ROINDA: I have a question, Abraham. I know when I'm going through spiritual turmoil it's very easy for me to turn to Father and ask for help in my everyday mortal existence. I don't usually tend to think about turning to Father when I'm just having what I consider normal mortal problems. I'm just wondering if there's something I can do to remember to turn to Him always, not just when there is turmoil?

ABRAHAM: I understand. Yes, your question is also asked by many. Is there any problem so trivial you cannot take it to the Father? There is no possible way you can keep your problems from the Father, for He dwells within your very being. He shares every moment with you. Yes, He is like a good friend; He does listen to your complaints and comments, and He does assist when He feels it appropriate. Are there more questions?

ROLAND: Abraham, in some of my readings I've come across the concept of surrendering the situation or the problem to the Father's care and keeping. That seems to be somewhat of a different strategy than to perhaps turn the boat into the waves, but perhaps just totally giving that problem over to the Father for His resolution. Can you comment on these two perceived paradoxes, please?

ABRAHAM: Yes. You are correct in your perception. Handing your problem over to the Father, is correct; but what the Father hands back is where resistance may possibly come in. Our Father teaches us what He feels we are ready for, and He does provide us with the lessons we are to learn. The lesson of resistance is for you to be able to more readily accept the Father's will. Resistance sometimes can just become a habit, perhaps a form of ease-seeking. This is not a serious problem, but resistance can slow down your growth progress. But yes, you are correct in 'laying the problem at Father's feet.' Be ready for when He hands back what you are in need of in your spiritual growth. Are there more questions?

ROLAND: I'd like to know this. During this weekend that Calvin and I spent together there was tremendous, I felt, a lot of spiritual beings present in the experiences that we had in our assistance in the car accident we encountered today coming home from Lake Powell in southern Utah. Is it permissible for you to comment on how you viewed that experience - for us to get a better/clearer picture? Perhaps how you perceive that?

ABRAHAM: Yes, I am aware that my modern-day apostles did follow their guidance. What you gave out this weekend will spread like radio waves, and although you might not be able to see all the results, know that we are gladdened to observe you spread our teachings and set the examples of Michael's life here on Urantia. Are there further questions?

ROLAND: If nobody else has one, I do. We were very much aware, just before that accident, Calvin and I were talking about our guardian angels being in the process of protecting us by keeping us out of harm's way. Of course that's a bold and maybe even an egotistical thought; but there seemed to be some real power insulating us within seconds after that. And, within minutes following, we were in the midst of a horrendous time/space accident. Could you comment about how perhaps our guardian angels work, and were they present with us in that capacity today?

ABRAHAM Yes, they are, and were, with you. Yes, guardian angels do attempt to alter the accidents of time. They do attempt to reach their mortal friends, provided that it is Father's will. But the angels cannot pick and choose who will survive an accident and who will not. They work in conjunction with other celestial personalities, along with Michael and the Divine Minister, to assist the mortal in Father's plan of destiny. We find them to be very pleasant, loving, and concerned for their mortal friends. We know at times you can feel their essence if you are aware. They are overjoyed to serve and to know their labor is appreciated and worthwhile. Another question?

ROLAND: I'd just like to thank you very much for the lesson tonight, and the comments and answers that you've given me. I want you to know that I appreciate this ability and this opportunity to speak with you. (Abraham: You're welcome.)

CALVIN: Abraham, today after that accident it made me very aware of, and appreciative of, these guardians' protection of me in life. The girl, Angela, who was traveling with me – after the ambulance came and we resumed our journey, we pulled over to stop and think about what happened, and expressed our overwhelming appreciation for our angels' watchcare, and Father's watchcare. I'm sure this watchcare is taken for granted too much. Words can't express to my guardians how much appreciation I have for their help – for not only me, but my loved ones.

ABRAHAM: They are aware and thank you. More questions?

ELWOOD: You said that it's difficult or impossible to withhold something from our Thought Adjusters. I have become more aware of the Thought Adjuster's awareness of what's going on. It seems like the more aware I become, the more I'm aware of the Thought Adjuster's awareness. I was just wondering if that's part of spiritual growth or if that's fairly common?

ABRAHAM: Yes, you are correct. It is you that becomes more aware, and your acknowledgment of this is quite pleasing to the indwelling Fragment. At each step when a mortal can subject to and abide to the Thought Adjuster's requests, you can possibly also feel the Father Fragment's joy. Yes, your perception of this is correct. More questions?

ANTHONY: Abraham, the lesson tonight has really been helpful for me in my problem with my relationship, but I still have two questions. The first one is still about my fear. I have an easier time giving up that resistance to giving her space so she can be where she needs to be. But I still am afraid she'll find someone else too easily and not remember what I thought was a fairly spiritual relationship we had. But more than that, my twin brother reminds me I'll find someone else too. His perception is that he hopes I just don't lead her down the same wrong path, being not so Bible-grounded; he thinks my Urantia Book path is a bad path. Can you help me with those?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Your anxiety in this matter is apparent and your fear is understood; but I must say, if this relationship is to be, then it will be. Difficult is the man/woman mortal relationships. Much learning is there still left on this subject. All you need do is honestly expose your feelings to yourself and your friend; and if your honest feelings are rejected, then possibly your relationship is not as spiritual as you perceived or hoped for.

ANTHONY: Thanks. That helps. Is that as well in the next part about my twin brother?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Your brother has very strong beliefs, and it is difficult for him to understand your beliefs. In his love for you he would do his best to advise you, and again I would say look within your own heart and mind, and to your own belief system, for therein lies the best possible advice. Yes, I would say, let time pass. Be open and accepting to Father's will and to His path He has planned out for you. I would remind all, that resistance takes a lot of energy, probably more-so than to 'flow with the problem.' Does this help? (Anthony: Very much. Thank you.)

JAMES: Abraham, this may seem like a silly question but it's something that I've noticed ever since this Teaching Mission began: The Teachers, including yourself, quite often make a sentence beginning with an adjective, and then the noun that it describes follows, which is not typical for normal conversation in English. I noticed this as well - and this is the silly part - in the Star Wars series, which to me was very symbolic of spiritual issues. If you're not familiar with this, it is a series of movies that came out a few years ago. One of the spiritual masters in that story was Yoda. Yoda had this peculiar habit of beginning sentences with adjectives, the same way you, our Teachers, often do. I'm wondering if there may have been some Teacher input to the writers of that movie where they might have been familiar with the way you Teachers express yourselves sometimes with that peculiarity. Is this a coincidence? Is there some connection there that you're aware of?

ABRAHAM: Silly, this question is not. [loud laughter.] Yes, many movies, plays and books have we assisted in completing, but also this particular way of speaking was applied long, long ago. As mortal language changed, I do suppose some of us Teachers did not; and we will still speak the best way we can for mortal transmission-receivers to understand. Does that help?

JAMES: Yes, I think I understand you correctly. I guess that was the essence of what I was getting at – to what extent do the Teachers participate in artistic creations in our culture. And I'm understanding that, probably, they participate quite a bit, right?

ABRAHAM: Correct. Yes, much of your plays, movies, entertainment that leaves you with some sort of familiarity – these forms of entertainment or writings have not only Teacher input, but also others, as well, such as – angels and Michael himself. Even your medical field is assisted. Yes, we deliver our message in the most simple way we can. More questions?

CALVIN: I'd say, excluding the Forward of the Urantia Book – for its simplicity? [laughter.]

JAMES: I'd like to make a comment. Maybe you can get a question out of this. One of the changes that's happened to me through my experience having been exposed to the Teaching Mission for the past three or four years is that earlier in my life I felt like I had exaggerated feelings of self-importance. The Mission has sort of unraveled those for me. I feel I've sort of lost those feelings of self-importance to the point where I don't feel any more important than any other being on this planet. I know I'm not, and it's a relief to feel this way; it takes a certain burden off of me. But at the same time, I wonder if it's a positive development in my life? I think part of it is that I'm not motivated by things that seem to motivate most mortals – like status or money or excessive recognition. So, in a way, I feel like maybe I'm too complacent with where I am in life, and too accepting of my own human fallibilities. I wonder if I should have more of a burning desire for perfection than I do anymore. These are some of my thoughts lately, and if you want to comment on them, I'd gladly hear your comments.

ABRAHAM: Yes. Yes, possibly your perception of self-importance was lessened, but more-so was your perception of your 'brothers and sisters' importance, heightened. Now you realize that you and your fellows are of equal importance. Yes, your lack of motivation is not due to your lack of honesty, for I see you truly applying yourself, your knowledge; and, I perceive you may be motivated through teaching or sharing your knowledge. An attempt at applying yourself more to subjects that may interest you would perhaps elevate your level of excitement and enthusiasm toward life. Granted, you are a wonderful example of an intellectual and spiritual son, and at times your lack of self-application may discourage your feelings of excitement for living. Yes, I truly believe this would be best answered by you. Does this help? (James: Yes it does, and I appreciate it. Thank you.) Abraham: You are welcome. One more question?

ANTHONY: I'd like to generalize my question before, regarding my brother – how to deal with people that are so fundamentally founded in the Bible? They believe that this Urantia Book and Teaching Mission movement would be something of a demon cult; and that is how he believes.

ABRAHAM: Yes. He is not alone in his beliefs. Mostly, all you can do is assure him of the joy that you have found on your path to Father. I would say, do not try to sway him over to your path – and in turn, maybe he would agree not to attempt to bring you to his path of beliefs. Assure him you are safe and he need not fear anything. Yes, a feeling of mercy for him may apply. And in time, as he sees your joy, your growth, his fear will lessen, and his trust will be greater. Yes, this is a task some Teachers have been assigned – to begin to remove the fear-tactics in some religions. Just assure your brother you are safe and that you understand his concern for you. Also tell him that at any sign of trouble you would talk with him. Keep the line of communication open with him. Do not put down his belief system. Continue to live by Michael's example. Does this help? (Anthony: Very much. Thank you, but I feel selfish for taking the last question.)

CALVIN: It's nice to have you asking questions though, Anthony. [laughter.]

ABRAHAM: This week I ask you to be aware of your patterns of resistance and begin to watch for the lessons Father lays out before you. Until next week, shalom.

The Master Was Never Passive. Do Not Lay Down Before Life and Expect Life to Come to You

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-05-1995

I am ABRAHAM. I am happy and pleased to observe you working on my lesson. Yes, as you discussed, the lesson of resistance is hard and at times, confusing. This subject will be of further discussion this evening.

Last week I spoke of the mortal resistance to the divine path, the inner struggle that goes on in the human mind. Last week we learned to take our struggles a bit more slowly with more awareness and more focus on the Father's will. Tonight I wish to discuss the flip side of resistance and that is passivity. To be passive is not relative to resistance. To be passive is to go overboard, opposite of resistance.

Yes, the Master, gentle though He was, He was never passive. He never allowed something He knew to be wrong forced upon His mind, His beliefs. To be passive is to lay down and just let life happen to you – this is an incomplete picture. Yes, you say you are willing to be subject to Father's will, but also I say to you, you must also be willing to act.

Jesus was not passive when it concerned the passions of His heart. He was not passive when it called for action. Jesus did not allow His troubles to overtake Him. Struggle, yes, He did. But He also acted when action was appropriate and called for. Jesus was always in line with Father's will. Resistance to Father's will did not enter His thought patterns.

Yes, at times resistance to His fellow co-workers/apostles was called for. Jesus viewed resistance towards His fellow human beings as 'logical.' But resistance toward Father was never entertained in His mind; in this, action is different from resistance. To act within the Father's will is, for some, not very discernible – they have to go on instinct, on gut feeling, if you will. Yes, the Master always first sought the Father through the stillness, through His meditation, therefore acquiring a better idea of Father's divine plan. Jesus would then put that plan into action. No, He did not leave His work 'for Father' to do.

Many people who are passive may be confused with the gentle nature of the Master, and fear to stand up for their passions. Yet I tell you, Jesus was a superb example of strength and intelligence; He could always find a way to put these attributes into a plan of action. Therefore I say, do not lay down before life and expect life to come to you. Seek first the Father's will. You are fully capable of setting the divine plan into action. No, this is not hard work. Without much resistance, you may find this work completely joyful and fulfilling.

I understand these subjects I speak of are confusing. You may wish to take it upon yourself to define these words on your own: resistance; passivity; struggle; action. Yes, words on paper can help unscramble your thoughts. A dictionary or much research is not necessary – just your own understanding is the best definition.

This week, I ask you to be aware of your passivity towards others and towards taking action in your life. A few questions?

CALVIN: I have a harder time seeing it in myself what you are saying, but I see it easier in people around me. A couple of days ago a guy at work had a very hard time with an issue he had with the boss. He would tell me all the stuff he wanted to say, but he didn't have the guts just to go up and confront the boss about it. I felt and did tell him, "Why are you telling me? It's something you need to tell him. Just let him know how you feel about it. Just go confront him." I think that might be what you're saying here?

ABRAHAM: Yes, very sound advice. Many are filled with fears when confronting authority and it may be easier for your friend to bounce his words off of you before the authority, but I say, your advice to him was appropriate. Yes, I say, fear plays a major role in being passive, the fear of disapproval of others. Everybody wants to be accepted. Some care more about this feeling of being accepted than do others, and their passivity 'makes no waves' in others' feelings about them. But I say, this passivity internalizes and possibly reemerges as ill health. Are there more questions?

ROINDA: I have a question, Abraham. Lately, I've been feeling frustrated and having anxiety about just feeling overwhelmed. When that happens, instead of taking action and doing things, I freeze up and end up feeling more anxious. My mind just kind of races. I don't seem to be able to know how to get out of that mode. Can you give me any suggestions?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Have you, in these moments of frustration, thought that you may be in some way resisting a lesson? (Roinda: Possibly.) Abraham: Yes, this feeling of spinning your wheels, going nowhere, adds to this anxiety. Many others know this feeling. Yes. One example I might give is to talk with others about this feeling. More than likely, they will know what you speak of. Another step you might possibly like to take is a quiet moment with the Father, or engage in something that brings you close to Him whether it is music, perhaps art, perhaps laundry. (Roinda: That's funny. I have been doing a lot of laundry lately.) Abraham: Whatever that is that brings you close to Him can certainly adjust your mind and still the waves of anxiety and confusion. A third step you may take is writing. To write is very freeing to the mind. To put your problem on paper, set there before your eyes, would perhaps give you a larger view and make the problem look more surmountable. Yes, writing. It matters not if you speak with a Teacher when writing your thoughts. This method would be helpful in purging your mind of confusing thoughts. Does this help?

ROINDA: Yes, it does. I get that, obviously, there are lessons that I am resisting – and by writing them down will help me to see it more clearly. (Abraham: Yes.)

Roinda: Thank you.

RACHEL: I have a different question than pertaining to the lesson. Father Abraham. Some time ago we were told that Caligastia was responsible for the Aids virus. Is he also responsible for this Ebola virus?

ABRAHAM: No. I have it in my information this virus is partly caused by man and nature. I have it on good authority that Caligastia is not able to wreak havoc on this world. (Rachel: Thank goodness for that.) Abraham: Yes. We will see much medical breakthrough in this decade, but many man-made mistakes with nature will create many more viruses. I am told these viruses, or these earthly upheavals and medical breakthroughs, are all a part of evolution. Are there further questions?

RACHEL: On the medical breakthroughs – are these persons being guided by the Life Carriers or some other spiritual beings?

ABRAHAM: Yes, Life Carriers, Teachers, and Thought Adjusters – all assist, and only break through if human minds are open and willing to receive for the good of the whole, and not for personal aggrandizement. More questions?

ELWOOD: A lot of people believe that when Jesus was here on Earth, He knew exactly what the Father's will was and what people were thinking, and so on. Yet He would actually ask the Father that if this is consistent with His will, then let it occur. I kind of get from the lesson tonight that we need to do a similar thing, in that when we are confused how to handle something that we ask for guidance, and then respond to that – and in doing so we are working within the will of the Father. If Christ Michael would ask for guidance, I think it would even be more appropriate if we would ask for guidance, as well. Is this right?

ABRAHAM: Yes, correct. In Jesus' earlier days, this knowing, this automatic understanding of Father's will, was not present. As His trust and knowledge grew, this knowing became automatic, therefore putting the Father's will at His fingertips where He could easily put Father's will into action. I tell you, this knowing this automatic response to Father's will is also at your fingertips. As time passes, your trust and your faith will undoubtedly become stronger and shall be more easily recognized. Yes, your perception on this is correct. Are there more questions?

CALVIN: A side-thing that keeps on happening over and over again at work – is it just me having this? or is there something on a higher level to it? I seem to see things happening in patterns of three all the time and I make light of them at work. It seems to be a subject of enlightenment at work when three things go by or three people of the same hairdo come in or whatever it is. And now my co-workers will say, "Look, Len, there's another – there's your third." Am I just seeing what always was, or is something new actually happening here? It happens all the time now.

RACHEL: Along with that, all throughout the years we were always told that things do happen in threes – that if one person dies in a family, for instance, there will be two more die.

CALVIN: Rachel, do you mean in your lifetime that you were told that – nothing to do with these teachings? (Rachel: Yes.)

ABRAHAM: Yes, it is a little of both. You are more aware, yes, and possibly looking for this phenomenon. But I say, I am not at liberty to divulge any secrets the angels might have. [laughter.]

RACHEL: Father Abraham, anytime you put anything that way, then I take it that answer is yes.

CALVIN: These occurrences are too overwhelming to discount that something unusually beautiful is going on; I don't know what it is. For instance, one day there was a T-bird that pulled up to our business, and someone would say, "Look there is an old T-bird." And I said, "Well, there will be two more, watch" – and sure enough there were two more parked in the same spot within two hours. I had three customers named Rick in a row come in today, and etc.

ABRAHAM: If you are aware of this, this happening which is in your thoughts, then possibly you may be delivering these thoughts, and this does make this occur. This game of yours helps bring attention from your co-workers to the supernatural and I say, the supernatural is a wonderful door to Father. Are there more questions?

JAMES: To those of us who work in jobs like mine, Abraham, sometimes it seems that there isn't very much room for the operation of the Father's will in an unusual or an interesting way. Such a big portion of my days are spent at work just sitting at the bench using my hands to create something (constructing dental bridges, crowns, etc). Then I come home and there are usually a few routine things to do such as eating, cleaning up – things like that. There doesn't seem to be much opportunity in my life for sort of a creative expression of the Father's will. So much seems routine and just humdrum interactions with various acquaintances in my life. Do I just have to wait until I'm retired or on the Mansion Worlds or something to really have that kind of leisure time to let the Spirit lead me where it will?

ABRAHAM: No, no! Your observation on this day-to-day ordinary existence is recognized by others who also find this life at times ordinary. There are also those who have retired that dwell in their houses and wish for employment, wish for contact with other people. I say, this phase will pass; and this phase will come again, and again pass. Much of it is how you perceive it. The little time you have for leisure time, plan something you find exciting. Make the most of this short time. Sometimes we just have to let some of the ordinary things of life go. Maybe one day you don't do housework – and instead, you do something that you find relaxation and enjoyment in. These plans of enjoyment always do re-energize you and make those so-called humdrum phases, shorter, more easily tolerable. Yes, it does seem to be the average routine is to work while you are young. It also seems to be the average to dwell alone when you are old. I would say, make the most of what you have right now. Enjoy good health and family, friends, and even employment. Many, even not just the elderly but also those of ill health, do not enjoy even ordinary days. Yes, many are always seeking adventure, a change. You, God-conscious children, are extremely blessed, for your fulfillment comes from Father. You know this! Others, not knowing of this Father who cares for them always, do fill their time with mind-altering drugs, perhaps dangerous sports, all in the name of living life to the fullest. Yes, life can be plain for you who believe in Father; but I say, you also know of the adventure that awaits you. As it says in the Urantia Book, "Harness your energies and bridle your passions. Worry not, for a great adventure awaits." I would also add, 'patience.' Nothing passes you by. One more question?

ANTHONY: I'll ask a question. Last week was very good advice about not resisting, and it led me to read in the Urantia Book about trying to gain the kingdom with action, which is what you are speaking about tonight; instead of regretting the past, whining about the present and aimlessly hoping for the future - but to take action. The apostles, and even the evangelists that He was speaking to, had a bitter cup of disappointment to go through. And, hopefully, you're telling us tonight that we will find joy, instead. So I am hoping you can encourage us along those lines so that we will find joy. For my particular situation, well I thought I was taking good action in communicating with my girlfriend. You told me to be honest and open, but only by phone was I allowed to talk to her, not in person. I wondered if I misinterpreted your words, and now it feels as though there is really not much action for me to take. She wants me to let her take the time for when she is ready. So I guess I am looking for some encouragement as to the joy ahead by actively taking action. I'm not sure what action to take.

ABRAHAM: How does her attitude affect you?

ANTHONY: She is distant and needs space. So I feel I should give it to her, but that is not taking action.

ABRAHAM: This causes you pain? (Anthony: Yes.) Abraham: I am in understanding of your pain. To take action would possibly show disrespect for her wishes and get you nowhere. I believe you must perhaps get in touch with your own pain and find that break from your illusion concerning your friend. In times like this, no words may be of comfort or encouragement, and only time will tell. I would say, write her a letter and express all your pain, feelings, hopes. Do not mail it right away. Take time to understand your own pain and understand what it is that is really hurting you. Perhaps your focus need not be so much on your friend as it should be on your own understanding of your place in the kingdom, and your understanding of the will of our Father. Does this help?

ANTHONY: Yes, it does. Thank you. I didn't mean to get so personal, and I understand your words are more about encouragement for everyone, and about getting back to our receiving of the kingdom. Thanks.

ABRAHAM: Understood. I hope each of you find fulfillment in what you seek. May Father's blessings be upon you. Until next week, shalom.

Shame and Guilt Have No Place In The New Kingdom Believer
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-12-1995

I am ABRAHAM. I welcome you all here this evening. My greatest desire has come to fruition – I am overjoyed and pleased to see my student friends in an attitude of lightheartedness and humor. This humor and lightheartedness is where we all connect.

I ask you, how was your attempt at defining my four words last week: resistance; passivity; struggle; action? Many see there is a great deal of meaning behind each word. There is also a big difference between each word. My point of these lessons is to help prepare you for teaching positions. It takes a great deal of learning to be a teacher. I make an effort to coordinate these lessons with your life experiences and that brings me to tonight's lesson concerning shame.

In my own personal opinion, I find shame a total waste of time and energy; I find shame to be very detrimental to the mental and physical health of mortals. As we grow from child to adult, we are unfortunately motivated to live our lives by the amount of shame that we have been taught. On the other hand--and which has proven more healthy--is conscious obligation. When we are aware of our obligations of ourselves to our fellows, we are knowing of right and wrong.

The knowledge of conscious obligation comes from our indwelling Monitor. It is He that teaches us a healthy amount of self-knowing. If our personal Monitors do not help us to be aware, the world would be even more chaotic. It is through this healthy amount of self-discipline that we learn of our own relation to our Father, and the relation of our fellows; but on the other hand, shame drives us to hide, to withhold our real selves. It can somehow keep us anchored, feeling isolated, and alone.

When there's an unhealthy amount of shame it separates us – not only from our fellows but from our Father and the universe. Shame keeps us from breaking out of society's mold and from feeling freedom. This emotion is very strong in some – more than others. This feeling of shame keeps you feeling unworthy of our Father's attention and watchcare. I must say, mortals do find the most ludicrous reasons to be ashamed – take financial status for example, and how about personal appearance. Perhaps physical habits create shameful feelings.

One with an unhealthy amount of shame does make them judge others more harshly, for they feel they themselves, are judged harshly. This shame starts off as a small hill, an unsightly hill you try to hide – and this shame keeps you from telling others, sharing, exposing your weakness; so still you attempt to hide this hill that has now grown into a mountain; and in the meantime, you burn up much energy trying to hide this mountain.

Therefore I say, this shame is futile in your attempt at soul growth. I say, what is wrong with conversing with a friend, a relative, and exposing your true self. Speak openly of your emotion with this problem that causes such feelings; chances are, this person you speak with has possibly been through the same thing.

I would also suggest – if this shame is feeling like a heavy burden, it would be wise to think it over, do not try to block out any details. Work through this because behind this shameful feeling could possibly be a message from Father in assistance. Converse with Father; ask Him, "Is my shameful feeling appropriate?"

I would also add – one who feels like a child of God, a worthy and valuable person in the world, knows and understands that mistakes are made every day and that these mistakes are understood. This child of God knows his body is temporal but his lessons are eternal. This person is aware of Father's understanding and forgiveness. If all mortals really knew and understood each other, shame would be very much decreased. A few questions?

NORWOOD: Abraham, thank you for that lovely lesson tonight. I really enjoyed that. When you are talking about shame, are you talking about the same thing as guilt? Am I in understanding – is shame and guilt a parallel?

ABRAHAM: Yes and no. Shame is an overpowering emotion causing you to feel buried, out of control. Guilt also produces these feelings, but with guilt you have a little more control over this emotion. Both guilt and shame are products of ego, but where shame produces a helpless feeling, guilt seems to be a little more of a matter of choice. Another question?

NORWOOD: Thank you. Can I stay with this just a minute? You talked about shame being a total waste of time and yet, you just said a moment ago that we are almost helpless with shame. At the beginning of your lesson, you talked about how we kind of inherit shame, that it is placed upon us during either our childhood or somewhere along the line of our growth, and we end up with shame. Can you talk about this just a moment, why you said it that way and where it comes from?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Shame and guilt appear to be a learned emotion. Parents with good intentions attempt to teach their children right from wrong, and in this process sometimes there can be an over-amount of shame induced on a child. The child then takes this into adulthood and then lives a hidden life, with a closed mind and heart, not truly exposing his inner self. Shame and guilt are the potential causes of a wide variety of personal and social dysfunctions, but I did not mean to imply you are helpless against shame. My meaning was – helplessness is the feeling shame produces. Does this help? (Norwood: Yes, thank you very much. I really appreciate this.)

CALVIN: I have an example. Some of my children are very conscious of undressing in front of others. They will even go into a separate stall in the bathroom making sure nobody is around to even take their shirt off. I wonder how much shame and guilt they feel by doing that. I think I am making them feel more shameful and guilty because they seem to have those feelings. I really don't know how to address it with them other than tell them, "hey, your bodies are great, there is nothing wrong with somebody seeing you with your shirt off or in your swimming suit."

ABRAHAM: Yes, this behavior appears to be a learned trait of their personality, but also I believe people appreciate privacy and whatever they are trying to hide is a burden for them. They do not want to be ridiculed, so therefore they keep hidden.

CALVIN: Yes. I'll do more reflecting on what to do, if anything at all.

ABRAHAM: You have already done it. Express your opinion and then let them be. They will make their own decisions. You are of much help to them. Next question?

JAMES: Abraham, I have a comment. If you want to comment on my comment, it would be most welcome. [group laughter.] I think part of the problem as a human being with shame is that we are reminded through our religions that the Universal Father gave us the mandate to be perfect even as He is perfect. It seems most, if not all of us mortals, fall far short of that ideal. It just seems natural that we feel guilt or shame when we fail to live up to perfection. It seems to me that it would be better if we could accept that 'being human' means also 'being imperfect,' and realize that the Father loves us – imperfect as we are. Self-acceptance is so hard for so many of us in this mortal state.

ABRAHAM: Excellent comment. I fully agree. This shameful feeling in religion has also been somewhat of a benefit to our Correcting Time. With the churches teaching shame and guilt and unworthiness, many people are choosing to step out of traditional religions. With the spiritual hunger they feel, they will seek out other avenues to Father. But yes, I am in full agreement of your comment. Another question?

WILLEENA: Abraham, are we moving out of that consciousness in our history where shame was used as a control-measure by churches, governments, and people in authority, to keep people obedient; and now we are stepping into more understanding – and our hearts are opening up and we are coming to more joy? Is this shift occurring on a wider scale? or am I just perceiving that it is?

ABRAHAM: Yes. With this conscious awakening of mortals – you mortals of this world – many of your dysfunctions will be addressed. You are perceiving correctly. One more question?

WILLEENA: I have another question if no one else has a burning one. As in my recent experience, this is very much in line with the workshop message recently about shame and being human and just making mistakes – not needing to hide but just accepting that it is okay to be human – to make mistakes and yet to go on. One thing that I am learning right now, and I am really excited about this, could it possibly be as simple as a process sometimes to simply shift our focus – from feeling bad about ourselves, feeling guilt or shame or whatever, to like just not giving attention to that direction? and just going over to the direction of being a child of God – just like a child would be – happy, playful, alive, enjoying? Is it possible that by shifting our focus like that, we could change our circumstances?

ABRAHAM: Yes, it is possible. But I would ask you to take a short time to ponder this shameful feeling to possibly figure out its origin so as not to block out or override a lesson. Yes, this shift in focus you speak of is something that takes much practice, yes. But when this shift is achieved, you find you can take the route through a problem with less inner-turmoil. Does that help? (Willeena: Yes. Thank you.)

I ask you this week, be not ashamed of anything about yourselves – human or divine. Work on this. Take your place in our Father's kingdom. Know that none are left back, all are included. Until next week, shalom.

The Loving Personality of Our Father. The Same Creator of the Universes Dwells Within Each Person

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-19-1995

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you, this evening. From where I stand, I perceive your comments and what you learned on shame is very impressive. I know my lessons appear simple and short, and there are reasons for that. My brother/coworker, Ham, began the seed of information through Rebecca; his words were more of a variety and quantity. But Ham began with the seed that would start this Teaching Mission, and from there the tree grew and began to take root.

From my friends' words, I now pick up where he left off; I add more roots, shall we say. My roots are small for now, but nonetheless required for a firm hold in the soil, a firm hold in the foundation that is our spirituality.

My lesson tonight will be short to leave more room for questions. Next week my lesson will wait for the purpose of answering questions, any questions personal or perhaps just something that has been on your mind. Next week's lesson will be devoted entirely to questions. Tonight, I wish to bring to your attention the loving personality of our Father and how it leads us to true worship.

Long ago when I walked the Earth, I worshipped Father out of a sense of duty. I worshipped Him so I would be pleasing in His eyes. I worshipped Father to find favor with Him. As time passed, I learned a new and different concept of the First Source and Center. With a little help from my friend Machiventa (Melchizedek), I learned of Father's generous attributes – slowly, through life experiences. And it occurred to me – His goodness draws me to Him; His kindness drives me to recognize Him.

In my recognition of Father, I am touched by His powerfulness, His magnificent overcontrol of this world, and the universes, and all that is. I am then drawn to worship and appreciate this loving Father who has so carefully guided me. Although the way has not been smooth, I am in the realization that this same Father who creates the universes dwells within my own being. As time goes by, I still stand in awe and wonder of the Father of the universes. Now, I realize the road Father had planned out for me is the best road. I wouldn't have taken any other as I look back.

My friends, I realize it is difficult in the material form to feel His closeness – Father's love, Father's concern. But I ask you to make an effort to recognize His loving watchcare over you. Recognize His closeness, His kindness, His concern for every living thing that contains soul. Stop a moment to ponder the greatness and grandeur of our loving Father who builds the universes, who hangs the stars at night.

Yes, I tell you boldly – this absolute personality of pure love and life-energy, fragments Himself and He dwells within you; His love for you is complete and pure; He truly needs nothing from you in return. But I tell you, the Father desires to know you, and for you to know Him. He desires for you to give Him back your love; and I say, the more you know our Father the easier it is to love Him. I ask you each to take a short moment that we may thank our Father, together: [a few moments of silence.]

Our Father, you know us through and through, and we know that you love us no matter what. We need not hide from you. We stand in awe of your magnificence. We know of your great tasks you have performed. But we are here tonight to bid you thanks for your contribution to our individual personalities. We are small; we are young beings just recognizing your awesome love and strength. We who recognize your Indwelling Self are overflowing in your radiance and light. We extend to you our deepest gratitude and we send you our unending love. Amen. A few questions?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I certainly want to thank you for a beautiful testimonial of our Universal Father and it certainly enhances our understanding of Him. Also, thank you for enlightening us as to your early life here as a mortal. Thank you. (Abraham: You are very much welcome.)

VICKIE: I have a question, Abraham. How can we learn to know God in a true sense? Some of us come from an organized religion that has painted a picture of God's personality as being judgmental and condemning and angry. I am coming to realize that this is not true. But without the influence of organized religion, how can we come to know God and His personality, and thereby learn to love Him, to enjoy loving Him? Also, by the way, may I know my spirit name?

ABRAHAM: My daughter, if you had not come to know the true nature of our Father you would continue to be involved with organized religion. Somewhere along the line your inner heart revealed to you that this fearful image of Father is not reality, and that it is certainly not attractive. The indwelling Fragment of Father within you, reveals Himself to you when you are ready – and then does He reveal to you a little more when you are more ready; and once again lets you know of His love for you. Like I said, my first image of God was not correct, but it was what I was taught. The name that you are known on high is Cammyne – C. A. M. M. Y. N. E. Another question?

ELWOOD: Abraham, I have been reading about the Thought Adjuster in the Urantia Book. It says in that section that one of the first things we need to do is separate ourselves from the need for 'mortal reality' for our very existence and well-being; and once we do that – then we can start having more 'spiritual growth.' As we increase our desire to do the will of the Father, if our attention is less on the material aspects, and more on our commitment to do the will of the Father and we go with that, our need for the material life would become easier because we will be inspired to do the appropriate thing. Am I understanding that right?

ABRAHAM: Yes. You are correct. It will become quite natural. It will become quite logical as if that is the only solution. It does appear that Father's kindness naturally leads us to embrace His will. You are correct in your understanding. Another question?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I would like you to comment on how faith and hope are intertwined. I can see how we can have faith without hope, but is it possible to have hope without faith?

ABRAHAM: It all depends on what you hope for – if you are hoping to improve your life's meaning it cannot be done without faith in the Celestial kingdom; if you are hoping for a new car, faith is not required. [group laughter.] You are correct – faith and hope are intertwined and somewhat impotent one without the other.

RACHEL: When I asked the question, Father Abraham, I wasn't thinking of a new car. I was thinking of our Universal Father. I thank you. (Abraham: That is understood, and you're welcome.)

ROLAND: Abraham, to follow up on the faith and hope issue: It seems to me that if we are in immediate contact with the indwelling Spirit that neither hope nor faith would be necessary; it would be living in the eternal now without the requirement of having those two elements of desire present. Can you comment about that?

ABRAHAM: Yes. You speak of 'advanced levels' of the spirit, but I agree, yes. Constant contact with your indwelling Monitor already encompasses faith and hope. Yes, you are correct. One more question?

CALVIN: In drawing closer to the Father – and I really appreciate how you displayed your early mortal-living experiences with your higher understanding – I think it teaches us the difference of 'duty to the Father' versus an 'appreciation for the Father' and our 'wanting' to be there in that mode. I don't know how to ask you this but I'll try: I noticed I can get a very, very high energy just by imagining my hands pulling open my inner soul and just allowing something to come in there, into the chest cavity area; and I can feel that no matter what place I am at; it's like allowing some love energy just flowing in. I have noticed when I have done that it's like I'm on a high. Nothing matters, nothing is wrong anywhere. Is that an actual 'living spirit energy' to consciously allow that in? or am I perceiving something different?

ABRAHAM: Yes, visualization is a very powerful tool to clear the mind; to drop your preconceived ideas; to remove the ego; to stand before Father as just yourself and know that you are enough and adequate just as you are. In your little ceremony, you make yourself open to also receive Father's love – and with this love comes His energy. You are open to receive, and this can create a wonderful feeling. Needless to say, this feeling does not last, and for a very good reason; for in these moments of feelings of well-being you are not reaching or learning. This is why we teach that balance in the spiritual life is extremely important. Yes, times of worship is just as important as times of study and searching. Times of feeling euphoric are just as important as feeling the burden of a hard lesson. I commend you on your exercise in becoming closer to the Father.

This week any questions that are on your mind, feel free to bring them next week. I ask you to remember the limitations of our transmission-receiver. [TR: Hey! (group laughter).] We hope this week you find time to recognize our Father's works. Until next week, shalom.

Personal Questions

I am ABRAHAM. It is very encouraging to see so many new faces. This past week were you more aware of Father's presence? Were you more able to recognize His goodness? and did this recognition lead you to express your appreciation for Him?

Tonight we will postpone my teaching so you may have the opportunity to ask questions – any question is welcome; whether I can answer them has yet to be seen, but I say, our best effort will be put forth. First question?

JEANA: Abraham, I have a question that I have wanted to ask for a couple weeks. I am not sure if you can answer it or not. It's a question about death, in particular, the death of a baby that has been miscarried and the death of someone who has committed suicide. If we have miscarried a baby, are we going to be able to see that baby again after we die? Also, regarding friends who have committed suicide – I have a friend in particular that we are not really sure if she committed suicide or not. Her name is Kim. I was wondering if you could enlighten me at all whether or not she did commit suicide, and what has happened to her. If she did commit suicide, is she okay and happy? Just whatever you can tell me about her, and babies that have miscarried, would be appreciated?

ABRAHAM: Yes. My friend Ham has spoken somewhat on these matters, but I can also give you a little information on this. In situations of a child-miscarriage or a stillborn child: A baby not parted from the mother – before or at full term – but not receiving the Divine Minister's 'breath of life,' does not survive. A baby carried full term, having parted from the mother and received spirit personality – and then by circumstance dies (after receiving the breath of life) – yes, that mother will again be reunited with that child. As for suicide: This is not a choice way to part from this world, but suicide does not suffer a heavy penalty from Father. Those who commit suicide will receive the choice – to continue their spiritual quest, or to deny. The act of committing suicide inflicts such pain on friends and family. We should also realize that to overcome the guilt from inflicting this pain on friends and family is torture for the one who committed suicide when they realize the ramifications of their action. Your friend, I am unknowing about her circumstances. Does this help? (Jeana: Yes. Thank you.)

HELEN: Abraham, I haven't been here for a while. I have a question I want to ask, and then a confirmation: We are taught always to love one another and never give up on anyone, especially ourselves. Sometimes we know we're loved but we don't feel that love inside. How can we learn to feel that love, and how do we know when to step back from someone that we don't want to give up on them – how do we know when to let go? Also, I believe I had a visitor March 16 at my house – could I get confirmation who it was, or if it was of my own subconscious mind? Could you shed some light on that?

ABRAHAM: I am happy to see you again, Helen. Yes, the control of emotions is often difficult. One minute you are overflowing with love, and the next you are feeling empty or nothing. At times like this, unable to feel love, it may not be a time for emotion but a time for logic. The indwelling Father Fragment is helpful in this area. To rely upon Him and His will is a good step toward understanding your emotional side and your intellectual side. To rely upon His will would perhaps give you the balance you seek. Human feelings, human emotions, are perhaps like a mechanical device – sometimes you can turn them on and off – but sometimes there appears to be a short-circuit and the human emotional system runs/operates without control. You talk of letting go; this is a great obstacle for mortals, very difficult. If and when you decide to step back and let go, then make an effort to release this person or thing into the hands of our Father. I tell you, Father absolutely knows what to do with what you release to Him. With this ‘letting go’ you have to make a decision to give up on the results of your choice to let go. Your visitation was a gift from Christ Michael, yes. Does this help?

HELEN: Yes. I thought there were two people. I thought it was my father and my brother, and it seemed as if there were more. Is that just in my own thinking to give myself comfort from subconscious mind?

ABRAHAM: No, this was for you from Michael, a projection of them. They were not present.

ELLEN: I have a question, Abraham. My granddaughter saw a man with a white hair and beard look in on her one morning. Was this man a spiritual being or was it her imagination?

ABRAHAM: I am certain this was a celestial being with a message for her to remember. This visitation did occur. This is to aid her in the continuance of our Teaching Mission. The man is her teacher, Norson. Tell her to fear not, for she has witnessed what many have not. Yes, the faith of a little child is a very important attribute. Adults could learn from children. Relay to her this message: Be joyous in your walk with the Father and always keep intact your true self. Change not the seed that will become a beautiful blossom in Father's kingdom. Does this answer? (Ellen: Yes. Thank you very much.) Abraham: Another question?

VICKIE: Abraham, I have a question about prayer. I was taught in organized religion to pray in a certain way, in a certain form. Then I left those ideas. It has been many years now since I have prayed. I wonder if you can talk to me a little bit about the purpose of prayer, and a form of prayer that is appropriate, please. It is confusing to me to think that there may be two people, maybe both with the same need – the first person had people helping him, praying for him, but the second person doesn't happen to be fortunate enough to have people praying for him. Would the Father treat these two people differently – simply because one was fortunate to have many prayers said for them, and the second maybe didn't have prayers said for them? Why would the Father withhold blessings or enlightenment from the second person simply because they didn't have prayers said for them? This is confusing to me. So I wonder if you could enlighten me on that subject.

ABRAHAM: The Urantia textbook extensively explains prayer and providence, but I shall tell you a little of my understanding. In prayer, yes, Father hears our petitions and He answers accordingly. But I must say, prayer mostly benefits the individual praying, for this puts the individual in touch with faith and hope and acceptance. Prayer has been known to, many times, improve the health of an individual – mentally and physically. But this is not by divine providence; this is by individual mind-adjusting and the acceptance of Father's will. Father would not heal one who has been prayed for and not another. When you pray directly with an individual who is ill, you give this person your energy, your love, your faith. Your example set before the ill person is an inspiration to this person. You aid in the healing of the person being prayed for, the person you are praying for. This is why we find it beneficial to tell the person in need of prayer that you are praying for them. The Urantia Book and the Ham papers discuss prayer much more adequately than I can describe. Jesus, the Master, while in the material form, walked this Earth; He sought not to pray with His fellows but would rather retreat to the privacy of nature where He could truly commune with His Father. It was not formal. It was not eloquent. It was just Father and Son. A talk with Father should not cause anxiety or feelings of inadequacy. A talk with Father should feel perfectly natural just as He was your closest friend – because He is. Does this help? (Vickie: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: Another question?

ROLAND: Abraham, as we are taught these spiritual principles, and are able then to be the instruments of teaching other people who come across our paths, what are the most important concepts to convey to them of those spiritual truths, knowing that each person needs something different, and knowing we are led in those teachings?

ABRAHAM: Yes, a very important spiritual truth. I would perhaps say the most important thing you can convey to them is that the answers they seek are within their very being. The best answer for them on their spiritual path lies within their very own heart. Yes, teach them about the presence of the Father within their own beings. Yes, you can tell them of your experience, but show them that they have their own destiny to fulfill. And, I would tell them their destiny is not a journey of ease, but place emphasis on the joy that can be found while on this spiritual journey. I perceive you have done well. Another question?

ROLAND: Thank you. I find that telling of experiences seems to be of interest because the story behind each experience shared conveys daily reality. The thing that has changed, in my experience that has transformed me, is meditation. To allow the indwelling Spirit to communicate at some level in the conscious mind, to give direction of the spiritual path – that is a concept that is foreign to the western mind. Do you have some suggestions as to how we can approach that?

ABRAHAM: Yes, the word 'stillness' may perhaps be too foreign, whereas the word 'meditation' is more recognized. Just as with prayer – the simple talk with the Father and a moment of receiving from Him is really all one needs to start with. Yes, you are correct that the stillness is very important to contact the indwelling Father Fragment. But I would suggest that with this stillness exercise, inform the newcomer/beginner that this exercise is not supernatural, is not mysterious, and is likely not going to be miraculous. This, stilling the mind to be with Father, is simple and does not require much effort. Mortals are attracted to simplicity. If the stillness becomes a difficult exercise, then it will not be practiced. Does this help?

ROLAND: Very much so. Before I pass this opportunity, let me introduce you to one who you might already know, my good friend, Mark, who sits next to me tonight. I invite him to ask a question if he is so inclined? (Abraham: Greetings.)

MARK: Thank you. I would like to learn to think, act, and be more abundant in my approach to the world. How can I do this?

ABRAHAM: The first question you must ask yourself then: "What do I wish to be abundant in?" Abundance appears to come in many levels. Perhaps one day a man does not appreciate his small home and desires a larger home, and the next day he has lost his job and may possibly lose his small house. This man has now changed his thinking about abundance. Now he desires not to lose his small home and he appreciates it. To think abundantly, one must rely on the will of our Father, for it has been told, "The sparrows know not where their abundance comes from but they trust that it will always be there, for the Father in heaven lends His watchcare to the sparrows. How much more are you than a sparrow? How much more does your Father watch over you?" With that, I would also add: A positive attitude draws abundance, and an attitude of thankfulness leads to your distribution of your abundance – such abundance is not just material goods, but your goodwill toward your fellows. Does this help? (Mark: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: Another question?

LINDA: I have a question, Abraham. Everyone tonight is so heavy in spiritual and physical questions – this is going to sound like a UFO conversation. [laughter.] Do you know of the work of Dr. Raymond Moody? He works with people who tell stories of having near-death experiences where they hovered over their dead bodies, and where they went through a tunnel and met a glorious being of light. Their stories are very similar... (Inaudible.) I have been told that he can even get a message to us from someone on the other side. Could you comment on near-death experiences?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Many near-death experiences are almost accurate. Some parts of these stories are products of the dying material brain, but many are very close. Years and years ago this planet did not have the medical technology that it does today, and this medical technology has proven to be very beneficial in our Correcting Time. I am saying, many would not go on faith alone, and many of these near-death stories attract new believers. Yes, these stories can be used as a wonderful door for people to step through to learn of their own spiritual pathway. Does this help? (Linda: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question? May we make this our last question? My connection grows weak.

CALVIN: Abraham, are there times in our lives when you, and the Teachers that are helping us, ever say, "oh gee, we are disappointed" – or, "one step forward and two steps back?" Because I feel that way a lot about myself.

ABRAHAM: No. We are never disappointed in our students; we are in total understanding of this dilemma. We are sorry that many mortals are so hard on themselves, given their little setbacks. If you understood the way we view you, you would find how much we value the friendship and love and humor you provide us with. [group laughter.]

Before I leave, I ask you if you found this evening beneficial. And, if you want to continue it another week? Or, would you have me resume my regular lesson? Discuss this. I leave you with my love and thoughts, my good thoughts for you. Until next week, shalom.

To Perceive Beauty Beyond Visual Beauty Lies A Deeper Experience

I am ABRAHAM. I am enjoying your conversations. These stories are like Father's fingerprints on your pathway. This evening I will be discussing beauty within the individual and how this beauty manifests into the world around you.

I once thought beauty to be something that was for only my own pleasure, something to be perceived through my eyes. It was sort of a selfish attribute that I had learned. My first real understanding of beauty was through my friend, Machiventa; He taught me to see beauty with my heart and inner self.

I had learned that beauty was not only perceived through the eyes, but it was also a feeling. To me, in understanding beauty, I must almost become one with the object, person, or deed. I have learned that the truly beautiful things I must see or know, my indwelling Father Fragment assists in my ability to perceive them.

Think of the most beautiful thing you have envisioned here on the Earth [pause.] And now magnify that visual account a thousand times. My friends, this is what awaits each of you – beauty that transcends your five senses; beauty that you are so connected to that you cannot possibly describe.

Yes, beyond visual beauty there lies a deeper experience. True beauty is in that generous deed performed without thinking. True beauty is that impulse to do good to another. Beauty is facing your adversities with an attitude of steadfastness. Beauty lies in that moment you realize that your Creator walks by your side and you can understand why He leads you in a certain direction.

Confidence in your own inner beauty bestows a feeling of freedom – freedom to understand and know that your own inner beauty is a gift from Father and that you are His child. Knowing this, undoubtedly frees you of limitations put upon you by others.

Beauty is not an object to be held and guarded. Beauty is living, just as truth is living. To understand and know that beauty is everywhere and in everything, is to know that “where there is beauty, so also, there is God,” for He is the source of true beauty.

I can say I have witnessed some truly beautiful moments in this group; and yes, some moments not so beautiful. Yet, I can also say each one of you is filled with a beauty beyond description. As the soul grows, so does the beauty of the soul.

In your world, beauty is not so commonly recognized. The ugliness of disastrous events seems to be of more interest. Without focusing on the beautiful deeper meaningful things in this life, the acknowledgment of beauty dwindles. But with a positive attitude, and when a recognition for the beautiful by an individual is shared with another, this acknowledgment of beauty can spread, can grow.

This week I ask you to acknowledge your own inner beauty, and how you can share and attract attention to the beauty in this life. As for visual beauty, such as art, for example – I ask you to be at one with the art; feel the colors, notice the shapes and textures. I also ask you to pay close attention to the beauty which our Father bestows in your life. A few questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, in trying to acknowledge the beauty of our own selves, how is it that we can acknowledge that without getting into conceit or something, especially if one is expressing that? I can see how one can appreciate the goodness that comes from within and that we are growing and learning, but acknowledging it or expressing it would be a different thing.

ABRAHAM: Yes, in acknowledgment of inner beauty, this could be witnessed through good deeds done on impulse without having to think about it. This shows that you are acquiring attributes of your Paradise Father. Recognizing inner beauty takes much time. You can look back five years, perhaps, and realize you are not the same man that you are now. I would say, you have grown in beauty and God-consciousness. But as I understand your question – I say, to go overboard with perceiving your own inner beauty is not to worry about, for a child who truly desires to be corrected by Father will be corrected. And if you are off-balance in your self-perception, Father will surely let you know. Good question.

ELWARD: Abraham, I'm increasingly becoming aware that when you talk to someone and there is goodness and truth, there is also beauty, regardless of how they physically appear. Is this an accurate perception?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Truth and goodness intermingle with beauty. Where you have truth, goodness, and beauty – therein lies our Father. You are correct in your understanding. Yes, beauty goes beyond visual perception. Does this help? (Elward: Yes.) Abraham: Another question?

LINDA: Abraham, I have very little trouble seeing true beauty and love in other people – but when I look inside myself it is very difficult to see it. A little bit is there, yes, but I just see kind of my own life and my self-centeredness, and very little love. Even though I want to have love for other people, a lot of it seems to have died with the loss of my son.

ABRAHAM: Understood. You are not alone in your individual perception of yourself. This is why my lesson asks you to search for your inner beauty and not so much the beauty in others; because, as you have said, to see this beauty in yourself is more difficult. You need not feel bad about your feelings – they are perfectly understood. I can say, Father sees your true beauty and He knows your true heart and your desire to love. Your inner beauty is there already, and the search for it need not cause anxiety or impatience. Does this help? (Linda: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. One more question?

MARK: Abraham, recently I have been following a path of Sita Yoga and it entails approaching meditation through chanting, and a repetition of mantras. Today, in Paper 100 of the Urantia Book, I read that religious daydreaming can be dangerous.

It cited these sorts of things. Should mantras and chanting be avoided?

ABRAHAM: Of course this choice is totally up to you; if they are helpful to you then feel free to use them. But my recommendation would be just a stilling of the mind, a relaxing of the body, and the faith that Father makes contact through your inner desires and not through chanting. This custom is very old, and as the world evolves, we find that the old customs were not necessarily needed; but that the stilling (quieting of the mind) is through your own desire and not a taming of the mind through repetitious chanting. Does this help? (Mark: Yes. Thank you.)

ABRAHAM: You're welcome. I thank you each for being here tonight. I leave you with my love. Until next week, shalom.

Obsession | Let not Obsession Rob You of Your Energy
Divine Minister & Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-10-1995
Back

I am the DIVINE MINISTER. I bring to you my greetings, and I wish for you to know my close and personal attention is with you each, individually. I am coming to the many groups of the Teaching Mission to inform the students that, in cooperation with Michael, I will be close at hand to help provide further assistance in the Correcting Time. I am honored and overjoyed at this assignment.

Many of you here already know me quite well. Although I have been on this particular assignment for a while now, I am to make my presence more known on this world. I am looking forward to working with this group and other mortals who are willing. I leave you for now to your Teacher, Abraham. Farewell.

I am ABRAHAM. I too, am overjoyed at the presence of the Mother Spirit. It is such a wonderful and blessed event for Her to announce Her personal ministries to this planet.

How was your week of learning about inner beauty and its effect on your immediate surroundings? Yes, this lesson is ongoing and takes time to learn.

Tonight, I wish to say a few words on obsession. 'Obsession' is that overpowering yearning to possess something. It may be a material yearning to possess; it may be a person you wish to keep control over; it may be a spiritual level you have yet to attain. The feeling of obsession leaves you feeling as though you are controlled by the thing you obsess over. This negative feeling is not healthy. And I would tell you first - to relax; let not this item you obsess over rob you of your energy. It is a difficult thing to release a specific yearning to Father, yes; but I tell you, you must make your best effort to try.

I must say, all obsessions are not negative - some come in forms of creativity. Some driven emotions that overwhelm you are possibly a message from Father. Many mortals who are in this Correcting Time feel so driven to do good - and that complies with Father's will, yes, but I must say, when your 'expectations to do good' are too high, many times they cannot be accomplished and this leaves you with a discouraged frame of mind.

I know that you have been taught that 'balance' is a valuable personality trait to possess, and I agree. I would add that it is acceptable to act upon your driven desires if you perhaps foresee a positive outcome. And I would also say, your obsessive feelings are not iniquitous; they are perfectly human. There is so much rapid living in this world that there is not enough time set aside for the pondering of the self – who you really are, what makes you the way you are, and where an obsession stems from. It only takes a few moments to honestly look within and intellectually discover what it is that drives you.

I know that the phrase 'turn it over to the Father' is easier said than done. So, I would also suggest daily writing would be most beneficial in your understanding of who you really are and what motivates you to pursue the path you have chosen. I am aware that too much of any one thing is not helpful in your quest for spiritual enlightenment. I would include that in your study of spirituality/religion – too much in this area leaves your cup overflowing and causes confusion.

I can remember a time when I had first grasped the 'One God' concept and discovering the Father's true loving nature – and I tell you, I could not learn fast enough. I had this overwhelming desire to take in all I could. Over time, that balanced out and I learned that the spiritual, the intellectual, and the social – all interconnect to provide a balanced life.

In your attempts to release negative things that have hold of you, resist them not. Take time to reflect and search your mind for this inner yearning. I would remind you to try to relax, feel not anxiety-ridden because the child that truly desires answers will receive them, honestly. Do you have questions?

PENNY: I have one. The Urantia Books says, "Since this inner life of man is truly creative, there rests upon each person the responsibility of choosing as to whether this creativity shall be spontaneous and wholly haphazard – or controlled, directed, and constructive." I am sure that means creativity in the broad sense, but is it also true of creativity in the specific sense? such as painting or writing or drawing or whatever? If it is true in the specific, how do we tap into this inner creativity and control it and direct it in a specific means, such as writing or whatever, for something constructive?

ABRAHAM: Yes, this is an excellent question. Creativity comes like waves on the ocean. At times there will be desires to be creative, and this is an excellent time to do so. At other times there appears to be no waves of creativity. This is not the mortal's fault, no – this is just a natural occurrence. To become more connected with creativity you may have to trust more in your intuitions, for it is in that mind-frame that the circuit transfers creativeness. I would say, this is not difficult, and creativity may not always be artistic. It may also be an attitude in which you live your daily life. I would recommend the best time for creativity is when you feel the first wave. Does this help? (Penny: Yes, sort of. I've got to think about it. Thank you.)

WILLEENA: Abraham, last Sunday night at Rick's memorial, his brother, Wayne, concluded the memorial with Rick speaking through him. I am curious as to whether that was actually Rick saying good-bye in concluding his life? Can you explain exactly what that was? What are your feelings? That even though Rick had died the week before, he was completing and saying goodbye and going off, or that his Thought Adjuster was communicating through Wayne's Thought Adjuster to finalize for Rick or something – I don't know.

ABRAHAM: Do you believe people were helped? (Willeena: Very much.) Abraham: Then I would say, why check the authenticity of a positive and uplifting moment – for you are qualified to determine this message. As for my information, I am certain you are correct that Rick is fine. Worry not. I am certain that Rick would be more at ease if his friends and family would be at peace. Does this help? (Willeena: Yes. Thank you.)

CALVIN: Teacher Abraham, this is so very nice having a message from our Divine Minister here tonight, and I understand that through Her agencies, the guardian angels exist. There is no doubt how the last two days they have kept me alive on the road because I have fallen asleep thirty or forty times, I think. I know they wake me up before disaster hits. Tonight, coming down here it was a new jolt. It is nice to have Her influence directly with us tonight and I personally want to thank Her, and her Guardians.

ABRAHAM: You're welcome, and thank you for your accepting attitude toward Her. But I would ask you to take heed – the angels do what they can, but they require your assistance. Understood?

CALVIN: Understood. I consider myself spanked. [group laughter.]

ABRAHAM: Yes! They also thank you for your acknowledgment for their persistent work. Another question?

ROLAND: Abraham, I appreciate the lesson. This has to do with the Divine Minister's announcement. It was a very moving experience to be in that immediate contact. The way I have understood – that the changes of attitude, or changes of perception, has been to invite the Holy Spirit to change our mind, to allow for the Spirit to act within that mind/decision activity. So I ask: Isn't that Her pervasive energy throughout the universe? Isn't the Holy Spirit, Her pervasive influence? which allows for us to choose new perceptions, new attitudes, through the Spirit – such as obsessions?

ABRAHAM: Yes, She does assist along with the seven adjutant mind-spirits; and also, the Spirit of Truth. Does this help?

ROLAND: Somewhat. I thank you. This is a follow-up question. It seems to me that She has been on Salvington as the director of the seven adjutant spirits, as the Mother Spirit; and to utilize the Spirit of Truth to focus Her energies here on Urantia certainly is a precedent – in at least my understanding; and certainly needed. If there is anything we need, it is a change in attitude toward love instead of fear. Can you comment on that?

ABRAHAM: You are correct. The Mother Spirit provides a different perspective of love. Like a diamond – the different sides each casting its own ray of light – the Mother Spirit teaches us a more nurturing and more gentle way to handle our daily problems. It is with the Mother Spirit, and Michael, that will remove the shadow of fear from this world. You are correct in your understanding. Another question?

WILLEENA: In trying to understand the Divine Minister's message, Her greeting – is it available for us to call upon Her and receive direct communication from Her? (Abraham: Absolutely.)

WILLEENA: Including our daily affairs?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Your daily questions that affect your immediate world will mostly be addressed by the Mother Spirit; especially those daily tasks that involve social contact. It is also Her ministry to elevate mortal's perception of their responsibilities to the Supreme Being. Does this help? (Willeena: Yes, thank you.)

If there are no more questions, I would ask you to let not anxiety stand in your way. You have eternity, try not to rush through it. Shalom.

Overcome Rejection by Taking A Chance | Help Spread The Good News
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-17-1995

I am ABRAHAM. How was your week concerning obsession? Did you learn that you may obsess overmuch? Did you realize the things you obsess over are really not so important as to cause you anxiety? Did any make attempts to hand over their obsession to Father? Yes, it is a difficult lesson to learn.

I am happy to be here this evening among my friends and co-workers who endeavor to make a change for the better in this world. In your efforts to make this world a more loving and God-conscious world, you may have to learn to 'take a chance,' and that is the topic of my lesson tonight.

At times you, in the midst of socializing, find an opportunity to speak in a manner to bring about God-awareness. But you soon learn to expect rejection from those who you speak with about your beliefs in our Father. Therefore, sometimes it is easier to remain silent wherein you withhold your inner self for fear of rejection from others. And I will not tell you there will not be rejection – but I can say, sometimes you just need to take that chance in the hopes that we may lead one more soul to the light of our Father.

Rejection brings fear because mortals take much value in fellow mortal's opinions, and some cannot bear rejection from their friends, family, and acquaintances. Yes, it would appear to be wise to sit and wait for a friend, an acquaintance, to bring up the topic of spirituality; but too often it is not brought up by the person you are speaking to. And at times you must go ahead, go out on a limb, and let another see inside your heart. You must learn that if you live your life according to other people's definitions, you are blocking off your contact with the One who truly knows you best and values you for who you are; who you are becoming.

I am not implying you to be totally uncaring toward your fellow's opinions, no. I am saying; don't let their opinions dictate your actions. You have your own source of enlightenment, the one true Source, and to let your fellows limit you with their definitions of what they think should be is a setback to your own soul-growth. To 'take a chance' means to honestly expose your inner feelings and beliefs without fear, without the worry of rejection. With this feeling of indifference, it allows you freedom in your endeavors to add to the kingdom.

I say, worry not! There is no contest to bring souls to Father. Father does not totally depend on His children to recruit new believers. Father has His own lifeline to each child. But I suggest that you hide not your true inner self; that you take a risk and worry not upon the results. Try not to be embarrassed to reveal that Source which brings you true and everlasting joy. The world awakens more each day; and mortals can (and should) seek out others with similar thoughts and beliefs.

It is quite possible when you take a chance you may find the one with whom you speak is quite interested. I do not recommend pushing your beliefs on just anyone, no; I ask you to look for that smallest opening of their door wherein you may catch a little glimpse of their light. And it would be unwise to keep conversing with one whose door is completely closed. I say to you, it is a joyous feeling to stand up and be counted in the kingdom. A few questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, it seems like we do have to take a little personal assessment on this topic. I perceive that what you are saying is - 'don't be ashamed or hide what we are feeling inside, for who knows where it might land and open a door.' It seems like, in my experience anyhow, that Father is always opening these doors anyway, somehow. But at some point, we have to be wise to know when to share, and when to just back off because maybe our comments are not welcome. In a sense then, is there a judgment-call to make here?

ABRAHAM: Exactly. It is like you said, Father is there assisting you and the individual you speak with; and I would advise you to be not afraid of trusting your inner feelings, your instincts. Another question?

ROLAND: Abraham, the Master taught us--in His example of healing the blind man who was blind at birth--He used symbols to encourage the faith of that blind man to receive sight again, and that was the clay and the spittle of a Rabbi. This 'clay and spittle' was known to be a powerful symbol to heal, as was the sacred pool where the blind man washed his eyes. It seems to me like He was teaching us to use the symbols of those who we approach in order to bring the faith and to listen to words of truth. Perhaps the modern-day symbolisms of spittle and clay could be tarot cards, which I have used as door-openers to allow in that process - of reading cards to let the spirit voice speak through me, knowing that the cards carry no power, except for opening doors. Advise me if you will, and I am open to hearing if I err in my judgment?

ABRAHAM: Do you find this safe for those you read to?

ROLAND: I would say that their safety is not in my hands, but in the hands of their own indwelling Spirit's recognition of the truth.

ABRAHAM: I am trusting in your judgment to accept whether these cards may be successful in opening doors. I would only suggest you explain the spittle and the clay to these individuals you read the cards to. You are correct in your study and assessment that the Master, in His intelligent and gentle manner, indeed had to use a prop in order to help this man accept his gift of sight. But I must say, this was the custom of that day and age. I do not know if the Master would use a prop in the present day. I am certainly convinced that your own life experiences are a wonderful way to open doors, and you have certainly accomplished that. You are gifted in speech and common sense, and I believe your own techniques of apostleship are quite effective. Does this help?

ROLAND: Thank you very much. So the experiences that I have had recently, it feels like I have been directed to individuals who are ready to hear gospel truths. It seems to me like those experiences are becoming clearer. And it seems puzzling that we would hesitate when our inner beings tell us to talk about certain things regarding gospel truths. It may be that I am overstepping perhaps on the other side of the scale, taking too many chances, being too outrageous in the things that I do. I open that up to be corrected if it is necessary.

ABRAHAM: I would tone it down. [group laughter.] You are wise in your acceptance of overmuch flamboyancy. We also find you creative and trust your judgment to adjust to the situations as needed. Okay? Another question?

MARK: Abraham, when I was born my parents gave me the name Ira Marvin. My whole life I was uncomfortable with that, and several years ago I decided to change it and for whatever reason I chose Mark to be my name. In meditation a few days ago I got a notion that perhaps Mark is my spiritual name. Can you concur with that, and if it isn't, perhaps share with me what my spiritual name is?

ABRAHAM: I would be happy to address you as Mark, but on high you are known as Aaron. Another question?

JEANA: Abraham, I have a problem that has bothered me for a long time. I know I shouldn't let it bother me, but I don't know how to overcome it, and it keeps reoccurring in my life. It is something that my stepdad told me when I was a kid - 'that I will never make anyone happy,' and I took that as no one will ever love me. I know you said that we are not to take what other people say about us too seriously and live by what they say we are, or should be, or what they think we are. Every time I do have a close relationship with someone--and they do love me or at least I think they do--I feel like I don't deserve it and do things 'unconsciously' to cause them not to love me anymore. This isn't what I want to do, or I mean to do - it is the opposite of what I want to happen. I wish that I could stop believing what my stepdad told me was true. I know it's not, but it still keeps coming back to me and causes so many problems for me. I was wondering if you have some advice on how I could stop believing this; and instead, to realize that I am worth being loved by someone, and to not hate my stepdad so much for saying it. And, to not hate myself so much for believing it. I don't know what else to say.

ABRAHAM: Understood. I am aware this causes you great pain. I am first directed to say - the stepfather spoke primarily of himself. Although it was directed at you, it was a fact that he thought this of himself. In his ignorance, he has scarred you, and this statement you have carried around for years is sabotaging yourself and relationships. Jeana, this is a great step in your soul-growth. I cannot give you answers, but perhaps only a few suggestions. To give you the answers would rob you in your morontial growth. Jeana, do you find any time for a moment of stillness or meditation?

JEANA: Yes, I do, especially when I am hurting and in pain. And sometimes--I admit, not as often as I should--when I am thankful. But yes, I have been meditating.

ABRAHAM: Yes, a wonderful step, the first step. Step two: Have you ever attempted to perceive yourself as your Creator does? Your Creator views you as His learning child. This does not mean incomplete. This means 'totally and unconditionally,' you are His child as if you were His only child. In your true Father's eyes, you do no wrong. You are still learning, yes, and these steps you take can be painful. The Father reaches to help guide your steps, but He cannot take the steps for you. But I say, the Father walks every step with you. Cast off your stepfather's opinions, for they mean absolutely nothing, and cloak yourself in the light and love of your true Father who showers you with nothing except acceptance and love. Step three: Until you can change your own self-perception, you are seemingly stuck in this same behavior pattern. I recommend that you write/journal. Lay your thoughts and feelings out on paper for you to view them honestly. Your problem is like a tree - you can see the trunk as the problem; you can see the branches that act as the smaller symptoms of the main problem; But I say, dig down to the roots hidden from plain view; fear not to expose these roots - to explore, to understand where your problem originated and how this problem branches off into other areas of disappointments. And I ask you to also discuss this with friends and spiritual co-workers, for it is certain that they understand.

It is with that thought that I must take my leave. I pray this time for you is educational, and also joyful. Until next time, shalom. [There is no meeting July 24, 1995.]

Our Circles of Light Promote Soul Growth and Enhances The Supreme

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-31-1995

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. I trust you enjoyed your vacation day last week. I am most impressed with that beautiful song. Music can be a terrific mood enhancer. Thank you.

Did you find any opportunities throughout the week to open your heart and take a chance? This week did you find you may have had the opportunity, but fear kept you bound? You will see as time passes you will deepen your faith and find courage abundant.

I am happy with your progress for the celebration of our Creator's Urantian birthday. This project may well have you put to use much of your apostolic training. A joint venture such as this could present many mixed emotions when a group has pledged their dedication to each other and the good of the whole. Even the apostles of Jesus found many menial subjects to squabble over; their old traditions brought much confusion when they tried to mix them with the teachings of Jesus.

Although the apostles of old met with much turmoil they were totally dedicated to the Master and to their cause, with some exception of course. The apostles found energy and strength within their common circle of brothers, each assisting the other without thought, without apprehension, or concern of 'being bothered.' Much in this circle of men were examples of juvenile behavior, but I must say, the love between members did much to overcome irrational behaviors.

Picture if you will, this Teaching Mission group as a circle of light. Every now and then this circle increases and at times decreases, but nevertheless it always has remained a circle. Your circle of light has not separated, has not been distorted, it always remains the circle. It may increase; it may decrease, but for now, I do declare, this is a profoundly strong and loving circle of light.

Imagine your circle connecting with other Teaching Mission groups. Imagine circles of light connecting to form a strong and lasting chain of light. This chain that is being completed, wraps around this world informing the mortals of this world that you are safe within the kingdom of the Father of all.

Ponder for a moment this loving and secure feeling within the heart of every man, woman, and child – not only feeling the connection with our Father, but also in feeling the loving support of fellow mortals around the world. When Earth's inhabitants realize their responsibility to assist their fellow mortals, then do they accept their responsibility to the Supreme Being. Recognition of your duty to do 'good for the whole' brings you one step closer to the age of Light and Life.

Yes, small circles of light do definitely make a positive change – in not only your own soul growth, but that also of the Supreme Being. Take comfort in your space of the circle. Remember, all contribute to the brightness of this circle. I am overjoyed with your dedication to Michael and His Mission. I am thankful to be connected with your circle of light. A few questions?

APRIL: Will we remember this life?

ABRAHAM: All that is worthwhile, your inner God Fragment takes in for you to learn and remember and understand. Your inner God will be the judge of what He finds most valuable in your life. Much of your memories that you take in will extend on for more training on the Mansion Worlds. As for family, acquaintances, friends – yes, you will remember for as long as you desire. Much of the useless things of this life will fall away; but again I say, your indwelling Fragment is the keeper of your valuable lessons learned here on this world. Does this help? (April: Yes.) Abraham: One more question?

AARON: Father Abraham, I have been reading the Urantia Book – and I have not just started at the front moving toward the back, but have read some in front and then in the back, going back and forth – and I find in the first section, particularly in the introduction, that the person presenting the paper is very concise, very oriented toward semantics and very precise. I find in the story of Adam and Eve, for example, the person relating the story is much more concerned, seems to me anyway, with the rightness or wrongness of what Adam and Eve did. Then I find later in the book – in Paper 100 for example, and also in Papers 139 and 140 – I find an amazing amount of love, compassion, and an understanding of all the foibles that go on here on Urantia. I see that there is something of a personality to each of the people that are presenting these papers. It occurred to me that – and I ask of your understanding here – along with that personality, is there also some form of prejudice that goes along with that personality? Is there a way of looking at things as “the way?” or are each of these people looking at things from their own perception and perspective – and therefore, perhaps open to some interpretation?

ABRAHAM: Many of the spiritual beings who presented the papers were also connected with Father's plan to assist the world in the upgrading of the races. The downfall of Adam and Eve was also disappointing to these beings who were all in conjunction with the plan of Father, and perhaps this is what you are detecting, a bit of disappointment, a bit of sadness for those involved in the mistake. The spiritual beings who do present these papers are each so completely honest; and, to the best of their ability, repeat the moments that explain the history of Urantia. Yes, I do agree, the beings are extremely loving and non-judgmental – for that is their job; they do their best to present the history of our world so that you may comprehend it to the best of your ability. Does this help? (Aaron: Yes. Thank you.)

It is my prayer for you that you all grow stronger as a circle and help bring Michael's Mission into fruition. Be not afraid to communicate and accept each other as your sisters and brothers. Until next time, shalom.

Announcements. Youth Ministry In The Correcting Time. Teach Them They Have Much Value

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-07-1995

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you. I am amazed with how well you each communicate with your divine guidance. It helps me with my weekly lessons.

In your week did you experience how you affect your circle of light? Did you realize the importance of everyone's place in the circle? I continue to pray for your support of one another. I realize this world appears to be filled with darkness, leaving many of you to feel hopeless. To bring light together to a world filled with so much turmoil is easier done with the support of your fellows. I would like to make a few announcements:

The first announcement: We have been informed that the Urantian youth ministry is in full force. Many of your youth have been contacted, and there are many still to reach. Yes, you are the forerunners of this Mission. You will clear the path for the next generations to continue to usher in Light and Life.

I say to you, your treatment of Urantia's youth is extremely important, more-so now than ever. The Holy Mother Spirit is assisting in the youth project and will assist the Urantia adults to teach the younger generations that they are much valued. There will come a day when value has no age and all are recognized as God's children.

Guardian Angels will also assist in this new youth movement. This will be a movement toward positive growth. Having endured such negativity in family life, mortals now are ready to rebuild the family in a more relaxed and positive way.

I say this with authority, that to truly set this world in the correct direction we must protect and raise our youth as you yourself always desired to be brought up. Is there anyone who did not desire love, acceptance, kindness, laughter, and an atmosphere free from fear? Yes, I do realize much of today's adults are still working on their own inner emotional and mental healings – but as I have said, when you begin to heal another, you are also healed in this process.

Announcement two: The Teaching Staff desires it to be made known they are available. They are willing and await your call. It is desired by the teachers to assist you in helping the youth movement proceed. A reminder: The longer you go between stillness practices, the more difficult it becomes to make contact with your divine guidance or a Teacher. This is not to say that if you do not do the stillness you do not have Adjuster contact/communication – this is to say a little practice goes a long way.

Announcement three: Personal meetings may be requested – providing time and location are convenient for all concerned. It is my desire to speak with each of you – it is helpful for me to plan the direction of teachings for this group. Yes I do know you, and we have met, personally; but I do find it helpful for you all to receive personal attention from me. This concludes my announcements. I would gladly take questions now.

HONORAY: Father Abraham, I have been to your class the first time last week. When we were sitting here talking about making interviews with you, my desire to have a personal interview with you was unspoken, but you picked up on it. I want to thank you for giving me that interview on Tuesday morning, it was wonderful and I feel very much loved by all you Teachers. Also, I appreciate the wonderful kindness that they have shown me. I don't have a question but I did want to thank you, personally, and to let the others here know that you don't have to speak a desire out loud to have an interview with you. You seemed to sense mine. I thank you.

ABRAHAM: Honoray, my daughter, you are completely welcome. I am overjoyed to know you and to see you with those in this group that cherish your friendship. Thank you. Another question?

WENDY: Father Abraham, I want to especially thank you for the lesson tonight; it was moving. I have struggled with when I should start sharing the Urantia Book with my children. It answers many questions. My question tonight would be if I perhaps am blessed with a spiritual name and what would that be?

ABRAHAM: Amarissa. This is as close as I can put it into your language. I am happy to see your enthusiasm to share this good news with your children. I say it is never too early to begin. You are their primary role-model and they shall surely follow your examples. I have full faith in you, my daughter. Yes, your children are included in this Mission. Another question?

CORY: Abraham, when you had a meeting with my dad yesterday you said that we had worked together before. I would like to know – is there a specific time when that was? and also, what is my spiritual name, as well?

ABRAHAM: Yes, I have been with you on occasion when times were difficult. You use my words to speak to others. I assisted your earthly father in helping you to understand your own inner spirituality. Yes, we have worked together much. One moment. [pause.] Cameron is what you are called on high. Does this help? (Cory: Yes, and thank you.)

AARON: Father Abraham, I have often heard in the past years, recent years, that there are no accidents, that there are no coincidences, and that all things in the material world happen synchronistically. I am wondering, is this true? are there really 'no accidents?' Is there a specific lesson intended with each alignment of material objects?

ABRAHAM: Yes and no. On one hand your statement is correct – many events occur for a specific lesson to be learned; but on the other hand, there are many accidents of time in which your divine Adjuster proceeds to make a lesson out of. I must say, the universe is not as accident-prone as one might believe. It is a universe with great detailed order. Father is wholly capable of maintaining order, yes – and yet, what He deems to be 'order' might appear to us, chaotic. A good question, Aaron. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, in that first announcement you made of the Teaching Mission being opened up full-scale to the youth – is this something we will see unfold with further direction on your side throughout the different groups? Or are you saying to us that it's now accepted, and for us to get busy thinking of what we can do – that there will be assignments made, and so forth.

ABRAHAM: The 'youth ministry' has already begun. I am asking your group, your circle of friends, to uphold and support the youth. I also ask you to assist in restoring to them any loss of self-value. Instill in them the knowledge of their son- or daughtership with our Father. Reveal to them of how, even in the slightest inkling, they are enabled to partake and participate in this Mission. Do not overload their minds with detailed items – make it simple; and as they grow, feed them a little more. For example, upon teaching them of our Father, say to them, "I just know Father has great things for you to do. I just know it. I can feel it." And as time passes, explain to them a little more. Tell them of your own spiritual journey, the positive and the negative; and let the young decide when it is they are ready to hear more about the spiritual life. Does this help?

CALVIN: Yes, thank you. I understand that much teaching on your side is being directed to the youth. I can see that very clearly around my situations. Thank you. (Abraham: Yes, correct. You are welcome. Another question?)

MIMI: Abraham, you speak of 'Father.' Is there a 'Mother?' If there is, does she have a voice? Does she have something to say?

ABRAHAM: When I say 'Father,' I use your own worldly terms so that you can conceive of what our Father may entail. Father, the God Absolute of all that is, transcends both Mother and Father – perhaps encompasses both Mother and Father. In answer to your question, yes, there is a female influence, the Holy Mother Spirit. She directs the angels and is in equal partnership with Christ Michael. Very definitely does she have something to say. She is very close to her Urantian children. She will assist in the youth ministries and shed light on family ideals to the inhabitants of Urantia. These are small tasks in Her enormous responsibilities. May I ask Elward to speak with you on the Divine Minister – which has much explanation in the Urantia Book. As well, you can review her words of comfort to this group just four weeks ago. Does this help? (Mimi: Yes. Thank you.)

If there are no more questions, I would like to express my deepest love and appreciation for each here tonight. Please keep in mind that any age holds value and appreciation within the kingdom. Father's children are ageless. Until next week, shalom.

Definition of a Miracle. Change Toward Godliness and Increased Faith, Is A Miracle
Back

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you all. I am overjoyed to see how well you interact and apply the lessons of Christ Michael which are presented by my friend, Ham, and myself. When you see the lessons come to life, when you note your own thinking process change, then do you witness a miracle.

Many small miracles occur each day; they come with no spectacular event. The miracles I refer to are more on a smaller scale. These miracles are your own self-realization that you are becoming more God-like. A miracle is when you perceive yourself partaking of the fruits of the spirit – those fruits being: patience, tolerance, forbearance, kindness, understanding, wisdom, and perhaps intuition, yes.

The miracles that we on the teaching staff desire to see are that our students (our fellow co-workers) apply these lessons and reap the harvest of the fruits of the spirit. The definition of miracles 'to mortals' may be somewhat aggrandized. Many are looking for much more spectacular occurrences; many wait in expectation of these grand miracles, and their expectations are usually dashed leaving them with small holes in their blanket of faith.

I have witnessed many grand events, and I have learned to neither hope for them nor expect them to happen. I've learned to take them with an attitude of worshipfulness of our marvelous Father. This is not to say that grand and extraordinary events will not occur; this is to say, the small steps in your spiritual growth should be met with a rejoicing attitude and a word of thanks upon your lips.

Many ask in this mortal life: "Where lies the joy?" "Is this life a constant burden?" "Where do I search for joy in this mortal existence?" I say to you, your joy is right here with you; it is the recognition that your indwelling Monitor has finally broken through the wall of animalistic tendencies and was able to reach your mortal mind.

In the small changes you note in your demeanor (the small positive changes) is where your joy lies. For then, to see these changes is to recognize that your understandings of the Father's teachings are reality. This witnessing of small changes in yourself is to believe that God lives within – and what you have learned is real, and what you believe is real. This is a most dynamic feeling to know that your cup of faith is full and overflowing.

I was where you are, yes, and I know there is no stronger joy than to be one full with faith. Upon recognizing one's faults (or character flaws) this should be a moment to rejoice and praise God; yes, for He has reached for you and you have reached back; He called you and you've answered by your undesired character-flaw recognition. To realize a shortcoming is not to be a moment of self-chastisement, no, it is a moment to be joyful and say, "Yes, I understand." This, my friends, is my definition of a miracle.

The Master tried to persuade the apostles He was not on the Earth to perform miracles or seek self-aggrandizement. Yet, the apostles never did relinquish their hopes for miracles and for the kingdom of God coming in great glory. It is as true today - the Master will not perform miracles, spectacular events, just to gain the faith of His children.

I say, the glorious events are small, yes, but no less important, for it is the small happenings that will usher in Light and Life on this world. It is important not to overlook the small spiritual growth-progressions, for you may also overlook the joy that lies therein. I say, this is truly meaningful and gratifying to recognize this joy, for your indwelling Fragment also knows and shares this joy with you.

Perhaps the re-establishment of the kingdom here on Earth will not come in great glory and spectacular events; but I say, the will of our Father in heaven reigns supreme over the management of a universe. It is the 'human will' we find challenging, for it is the human will that accepts or denies assistance from the spiritual hosts.

Build not your expectations on grand and visually-brilliant occurrences to suddenly appear. If you truly desire to do the will of the Father in heaven, then your expectations are: "Whatever Father wills I accept and support." It is then you can expect your blanket of faith to remain intact. I do not state that this life is just an existence of doldrums and drudgery, no! for I say, with God, yes, all things are possible. I am saying, we might be careful not to overlook the small miracles in our lives.

I would leave you to resume planning Michael's birthday celebration. We, on this side, are looking forward to a marvelous time of worship and fellowship. I will see you there. Shalom.

It Is In Those Small Tasks Wherein We Serve Father and Our Fellows

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. I am happy to see you on this historic day on your world. Although many celebrated over the weekend, still many Urantia Book readers are paying tribute to Michael, today. We hope your celebration was a great learning experience for you. It was deemed by Michael that this celebration would not only be festive, but also, educational and experiential.

Many on this day of celebration found themselves in the midst of their personal apostolic ministries. Yes, this day also served as practice in apostleship. It was our hope that no one walked away without learning something about serving in Father's kingdom. I am humbled to be in such a marvelous group eager to be fed the words of truth. I am happy that you have capacity for accepting the work Father has for you.

This work is not glamorous, memorable, or even without difficulty, no. This work can be dull, monotonous, and test our level of tolerance. This is why many are called by the Master, but few choose to endure this duty of apostleship. Many seek a more magnificent task in the kingdom, a task that may perhaps bring much self-glory; but I say, it is the most humble of humans that the most magnificent tasks go to. Those seeking self-glorification will be sadly disappointed, for this is not what Michael's work is about.

The more common tasks from Father or Michael are hidden tasks behind the scenes, tasks that bring no self-credit, no glory, not even much excitement. These are the tasks that you perform without much self-thought, something that you do because of your love for your fellow mortals. Yes, they are small and for the most part go unrecognized by human eyes, but I say it is these small tasks that bring the Father in heaven much glory, much happiness.

It is the small things that glorify our Father, for it says: "This is my child who has learned well, and I am pleased." This is not to say you cannot feel good inside for a good deed committed – yes, of course you can; you can relish in this good feeling with your indwelling Father Fragment, and know that He has taught you well because of His love for you.

However, I do want to clarify between this good feeling of a good deed done, and self-pride. Self-pride gives not credit to the one who teaches you, who has taught you truth, beauty, and goodness. Self-pride has no room for anyone to share in this joy of a good deed committed. You are learning the difference between 'self-pride' and, rejoicing in the goodness that you have learned.

It is with great joy that I say, so many of you are willing to perform the small and seemingly unimportant tasks for the kingdom – without want of self-aggrandizement. It is these little tasks that go unnoticed that lead us further into Light and Life.

To me, no task is unimportant, because it needs to be done in order to progress.

Yes, I do recall a time where I would rather choose the more outstanding duties – to be in the public eye to win affection. This was not wrong, this was human, but as I learned to be more divine, I did not crave this human recognition and affection. It was in my education that I learned of Father's closeness. The closer I became with Father, the less I desired human acceptance, for Father loved me just as I am.

Without the small duties performed by those of your fellows here, your celebration would not have had much meaning. In our Father's kingdom, no task is unimportant and meaningless; it is just another step in your progression. To our Father, all duties, simple or difficult, are meaningful. It matters not if your fellows accredit you with their so-called praise; it matters that you served and you served well – for then do you and your indwelling Father Fragment rejoice in your effort to do His bidding. Are there any questions?

RACHEL: One thing that I would like to say, Father Abraham, I wish that you would accept our love, affection, and appreciation for being our Teacher. And by the same token, please relay our love and affection to Christ Michael, on this day, the anniversary of His birth.

ABRAHAM: Yes. Thank you. I return that affection to you, my students/friends.

CALVIN: Teacher Abraham, as we recognize this day as Michael's anniversary of His birth, are we the first generation to do that? For a time after His passing here two thousand years ago, did his followers recognize August 21st as a special day? or was it ever known – the actual day of Jesus' birth? I am pretty sure that in the recent hundreds of years since, it was probably not known until the Urantia Book. Did He celebrate during His life? or was his birthdate celebrated after His death, is my question.

ABRAHAM: This day is really a day of mortal recognition for Christ Michael. It is mostly dedicated to remembering His life here in the flesh. He is aware of all the wonderful thoughts that come to Him on this day, and He is pleased; but that may be as far as His celebrating goes. You are correct that most mortals do not recognize this day as Michael's birthday, but it is recognized as the books of old say. It is really not so important as to when you celebrate or remember Michael – as long as you think of Him daily as a Brother/Friend that clears the path with you in your journey to Father. Does this help?

CALVIN: It does, except right after His death, did anybody know and carry on His birthday then?

ABRAHAM: Yes, those that wrote about Him did endeavor to spread the knowledge of His life, but it was not until many years after His death that mortals who recognized His presence and knew of His trials in the flesh began to find a day to honor his birth. It was mostly known by word-of-mouth that He was known to have lived and died on this world. And through these stories it was deemed that in celebration of His life, they had chosen a day which fit in as closely as their scriptures accounted. Does this help?

CALVIN: It helps very much, thanks. And, I much enjoyed your lesson. It focuses on our purpose – more of our responsibilities to Father's work and gives us a checkpoint in our lives as of where we are.

RACHEL: Father Abraham, was it from the scriptures that most of the Christians started to celebrate Christ Michael's birthday on the 25th of December? I really don't know how long they have been celebrating it on that day.

ABRAHAM: Yes, this was as close as they could determine. His birth was not as well known as was His death. Another question?

TECTRA: Abraham, you talked quite a bit in your lesson tonight about the common tasks we do, the hidden things that we do in our daily lives in doing Father's will and doing Father's work. Can you give us some words of how to remember that no task is unimportant that we do? How do we remember that in our daily lives? It seems like the daily tasks just go on unnoticed, even by ourselves, and we forget about it.

ABRAHAM: Yes, understood. Perform your task as if the Master was right there with you – as if He had trained you and you were demonstrating to Him of the excellent manner in which He taught you. This, I know, is easier said than done. Look at your task as the low, bottom stair on a steep staircase. This staircase leads you to your Paradise destination. For each task you perform, you take a step. For each dull task you are doing, think to yourself: "This is another stair I can climb, and I am getting closer and closer to my Paradise destination." Yes, I understand this sounds simple. Does this help? (Tectra: Yes, very much.)

JEANA: Abraham, how do we know when we are maybe helping someone too much? It might even be hurting us by overly helping them – whether it is costing us too much money, or if they are taking advantage of us. How far should we go to help other people? Should we worry about being taken advantage of? Or should we put our foot down sometimes and stop, knowing we can only do so much, and quit enabling? Sometimes I don't know when to quit doing something for someone else when it might be hurting them or hurting me by doing too much for them. So I'm asking, should we always just keep doing good for others? or should there be a stopping-point where you just say no sometimes?

ABRAHAM: Yes, you are correct. The Master would always go an extra mile for His fellow man, but the Master was also a man of intelligence. He did not enable a person to lie down before their struggles by over-helping. He also overcame evil with goodness and honesty. When He was in the throes of being taken advantage of, He would shower a person with His love and then be on His way, for He was no longer available to be taken advantage of. He was forthright and honest with His fellows. Those that understood Him accepted His love and did not lie down before their troubles, but did cloak themselves in the Master's confidence and love for them, and did stand and battle their struggles without complaint. Those that still attempted to take advantage were confronted by His honesty, and they would usually flee from Him. If you feel you are taken advantage of, then I say, confront this person. Let this person know of your feelings and that you will neither enable him to lie down before his troubles – nor, will you stand for this indignant behavior to be thrust upon you. Does this help? (Jeana: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: If there are no more questions...

CALVIN: I have a simple quick question from Wally; he is a guy at work who seems to have a lot of discussion with me. You may want to save it for another meeting, but I told him I would ask. He wanted me to read this like he wrote it. "Why you had him say what he said in Virginia about his brother?" Whatever that means; he thinks you would know. I don't know if he is trying to find a man behind the curtain, or what.

ABRAHAM: [Long pause.] Say to him, he is invited here to ask me in person. I leave you now with my love. My prayer is that you will be patient with yourselves and know that you do not shoulder the burden of this life alone. Shalom.

Exercise in Disillusionment. Connect With the Master To Help Move His Mission Forward

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you all. I especially enjoy your stories about your daily learning of Father's lessons that occur during the week. My lesson on transitions in your mortal life, as well as your divine path, will take much self-conditioning to become used to change, to accept changes more readily and not to fear them.

As time passes, you will look forward to these changes and greet them with enthusiasm. I am even now always uplifted by the changes the Father has for me; I have learned to be open to His will. These transition times are more simple, and I am most honored to be included in the transitions of this local universe.

These last weeks, I have spoken much on serving as apostles. I let it be made known that this work for Michael's Mission is not at times very exciting or brings glory to individuals who serve. I am praying that those who serve Michael and His Mission will not be discouraged or deterred from the desire to serve and assist in ushering this world farther into the stages of Light and Life.

My purpose for these last few lessons is to assist you in finding the correct course to take to help further this Mission and your individual growth. I suppose I look at these lessons as sort of a time to disillusion the mystical essence some may hold regarding these lessons and our apostolic training, when in fact this whole production is rather normal and without spectacular events. I say, those left standing after this exercise in disillusionment will be those most effective in serving in this Mission.

I am aware of the many pitfalls and stumblings you have endured; but I say to you now, these stumblings were quite necessary to bring you to this moment in learning how to assist in uplifting the spiritual capacity for this world. It is not my place to disenchant you or take from you the excitement of serving as an apostle - it is my hope I can bring more reality and assist you in integrating your spiritual education with your human endeavors.

I say, this communication is not magic. This form of communication (transmission-receiving) is quite normal, for you see it is done every day, all the time; and whether mortals are aware or not is not the important factor of this communication – the important factor to understand is, yes, God has reached them.

I find it (this Mission) like your armed forces basic training: You volunteer; you enter basic training. The drill sergeant may remove your previous notions about the military – he may even remove your misconceptions in a rather harsh manner. When the mind is free to receive correct perceptions about this new soldier's duties, he is then well prepared to receive, for his old ideas have been disillusioned, and the new recruit is ready to be trained in the manner that will best suit his duties as a soldier.

In a manner of speaking, the soldier's mind was somewhat like a chalkboard wherein the old ideas were erased to make room for new ideas and maps that would assist him in the future. I say to you, this is a part of our Mission – this disillusionment is appropriate now that you have experienced many expected illusions.

I hope to bring heaven right before your eyes. I endeavor to make your apostleship a reality. I hope to make secure the foundation for this Mission to be built. It is my purpose to remove fear in your training that you might better serve your fellows. To make your apostleship more of a reality I am to first remove the mystical ideas; this mystical-thinking does not make for a good foundation, it is too far from your reality, from your realm of thought processes.

To make your apostolic service more of a reality I must also help you to connect with the Master. Those that have studied His life know that He was not in favor of erroneous mystical-thinking. He, the Master, was very solid. He knew whom He served. He knew why he served and therefore, He was taught how. The Master was human and divine just as you are. The Master did not have the same pitfalls that you have experienced, but He does know of the ideas that can be subjected onto believers.

Yes, the Master was firmly grounded. He lived day to day knowing that the joy of the universe filled Him and those connected with Him. He knew the source from where His joy came. This joy the Master experienced is only possible through the learning of spirituality and making it real in your lives.

To hang on to old ways of thinking is to close off any incoming ideas. Those ideas that stay with you are indeed realities for you, and they will stay with you without any effort on your part to remember them. You will find, the closer you draw to the Master, the more your spiritual life becomes real. Yes, learn from Him. He was divine, yes, and yet His intellect served Him in His bestowal to this world. Yes, the Father endows us with many gifts, and we would be wise to utilize each gift He has given to us. A few questions?

CALVIN: I had a thought during your lesson about the Master and His life here wherein he had a lot of brothers and sisters. This is way off the subject of your lesson, so I apologize for it, but from these brothers and sisters, does he have a lot of descendants alive today. Since most of the world does not recognize that he had brothers and sisters they probably wouldn't even know of, or think about, any descendants.

ABRAHAM: Yes, but I say, the strain that could possibly be left by any of Joseph's and Mary's children would be very small, very untraceable. Does that answer?

CALVIN: Yes, it answers everything I wanted to know about it. Also, you talked about the Father's many gifts and etc., and in past lessons from Ham and yourself, you have talked about 'gifts that we have not yet known of.' Are these unknown gifts, gifts that we currently have? that we are not conscious of? or are you referring to gifts available that we have no realization of yet?

ABRAHAM: You are starting to realize these gifts gradually and to clear the fog of illusion. The new senses you receive will become more clear and seem extremely ordinary. These gifts, yes, they will appear as if you always had them, but the inner joy you receive in knowing this will tell you, yes, this is something new. Does this help?

CALVIN: Yes, it helps a lot. I perceive you are saying - that as we see more clearly, we understand the gifts and appreciate them more clearly. (Abraham: Yes.)

CLAIREESA: Abraham, could you be a little more specific about the mystical errors you were talking about?

ABRAHAM: I will give my best effort. Yes, the Urantia Book describes many of the erroneous mystical expectations that hinder your spiritual development. With this Mission, a number of new mystical expectations have occurred. It is my hope that I could assist you in the release of expectations in the areas of abnormalities - things that appear extraordinary, things which produce feelings of fear for the unknown instead of feelings of enthusiasm for what Father may have planned out for us. I do not wish to remove your excitement for Father's mysteries, no. I wish to make them more of a reality; and with some expectation of odd occurrences, this is difficult. I am perhaps explaining regarding the last few lessons as to why we are learning them. It is known that exercises in mysticism can lead to fear that can block off any of Father's realities. I say, this small group right now may appear out of sorts, but at a future date these groups will be countless and appear very average. The Master never did want His kingdom, His Father's kingdom, built on miracles or erroneous thinking. Most of you have experienced this erroneous thinking and are knowing of the difference, and are quite capable of distinguishing between Father and fanaticism. I perhaps teach this tonight also to assist you in your endeavors to teach others - that Father is not strange and unknown, but He is loving and real. Does this help?

CLAIREESA: Yes, somewhat. Is it wrong for me to consider God's involvement in my life and His love for me, as a miracle? Is that an error in thinking?

ABRAHAM: No, no. This refers back to my lesson on my definition of a miracle. You are correct - to witness Father's fingerprints in your personal life, and to rejoice, is absolutely your miracle. Yes, good. Does this help? (Claireesa: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome.

CALVIN: Abraham, maybe I can see a little bit of what you are saying. At first, like a few years ago, I would tell others about the evidence of these new awakening days being real, such as: "Wow, look at the Urantia Book, can anybody think up such a book?" "This and that is going to happen, and when you see it happen then you will know," etc. Now it seems as though the evidence is simply the experiences we all have and the little things we have learned from these experiences. Instead of lording an expectation over that new friend to teach, we are shifting to sharing some personal connection we may receive from the Father and knowing that that's the only real growth, soul growth, that there is. That it is not in us 'seeing' something, or even coming to a meeting and hearing great words, but that it is through our experience we have in our daily lives, which is making a lasting and real change.

ABRAHAM: Yes, correct. You can listen and attempt to understand, but until you experience, you are incomplete. This is like our Teaching Mission - Ham came with many great words and teachings, and you listened to say, yes, I agree - just to find yourself later experiencing what he spoke of and truly view his teaching in a new light, becoming more complete. Yes, correct. Another question?

If there are no more questions, I would request that you review my last couple lessons. And, I would also ask you to attempt to locate this subject in the Urantia Book. Yes. I am deeply honored to be in your presence, and I thank you for allowing me to work towards furthering this Mission. Shalom.

The Heavenly Gift of Mind And Intelligence. Use The Gift Of Intellect, But Not Overly So

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-11-1995

I am Abraham. Welcome. I do believe you, my friends, have already begun my lesson without me. It is quite marvelous for me to sit back and be witness to such wonderful teachers.

I am quite hopeful that last week's lesson on disillusionment did not discourage you from your positions as Michael's apostles. I am surely encouraged by your strength and reliability in this Mission to know that you, my friends, can ride out certain storms and stand with an unshakable faith. Your endurance in these storms has secured for you an attitude of steadfastness and strength that only comes from our Father.

I am also wishing to share with you a little about a gift that you have received from our Father that will continuously be helpful through your mortal sojourn here on this world.

Many gifts our Father has bestowed upon His mortal children: We have the spirit which houses the body, which would be useless without the mind. Yes, the mind, your intellect, is a wonderful gift that Father has bestowed upon you to assist you in balancing the various aspects of your mortal life. The intellect is like an anchor that keeps your ship from just floating about the ocean with no direction.

Yes, the mind; without this wonderful gift from our Divine Minister, nothing would be of any use - for it is the mind that houses, so to speak, your indwelling Father Fragment. It is the mind that integrates the material with the spiritual. It is the mind and intellect that deters you from non-survival.

It is in this place of intellect where the Father gets acquainted with His child. When I speak of intellect, I do not measure this with college degrees. When I speak of intellect, I speak of the capacity one has to receive – to stand with eyes open to receive information and filter out non-truth while keeping what one would believe as truth.

It has been said that some forms of spirituality can lead to fanatical mysticism. In my opinion, I believe this occurs when one does not receive spirituality through the intellect, but possibly only through the heart. You see, when mortals forget the intellect God bestowed upon them, their imaginings become their reality.

There is much more meaning in the phrase 'common sense' than you may possibly realize. Without intellectual pondering upon spiritual realities, the mind may become off-balance; realities may be distorted, and animalistic tendencies come to life. Yes, to be spiritual, to be close to Father, is good. To utilize the mind which Father and the Universe Mother endowed you with, is even better.

When you think about the Master, when you study about His life, you find that He was filled with this common sense. When He received some information, this information would filter itself through the intellect. And from there it would perhaps branch off to His divine self – and yes, branch off again to His human self. But I say, it all began at the place where His intelligence joins with His indwelling Father Fragment.

The Master relied upon this heavenly gift of mind and intelligence to discern Father's will. He utilized His intelligence to decide universe decisions. This place where the intellect joins with the spiritual is where you will best be able to discern Father's light upon your path. Your intelligence is extremely important in your endeavors to re-spark the kingdom. I also say, your intelligence is like a shield against fear – your intelligence tells you: 'Father is all the power that ever was and ever will be,' thus your shield deters fear as it trusts our Paradise Father.

I must also admonish you not to come too far over on the side of intellect. This creates an imbalance with your spirituality causing terrible episodes of doubt and confusion. An intellectual person may reason 'there is no God – I cannot see Him, therefore He does not exist.' This intellectual person has become imbalanced. A person balanced with spirituality and intellect might say: "I cannot see God either, but I can feel His presence. I can see His magnificent work in the world, and I can view the world as a whole." This person is open to endless possibilities. This person is more balanced.

So you see, your intelligence can be an ally, or an enemy. This is why balance is very important. To maintain good spiritual growth there must be an intellectual influence. Are there any questions?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, if we commingle faith along with spirituality and our intellect, and make it a three-way possibility, would that suffice? Would that provide balance?

ABRAHAM: Yes. As a tree branches off, faith is a branch. Many things in this mortal life will come from this branch. Intellect (being perhaps the roots of a tree) feeds into the trunk which acts as a spiritual filter and, from there, branching off into different aspects of spiritual education. As you progress to the morontial worlds, spirituality (your relationship with Father) will be first. Your spiritual life will be more established and the intellectual will go second. Yes indeed, faith is extremely important in balancing and maintaining a human and divine life. Does this help? (Rachel: Yes, it does and I thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome.

JAMES: Abraham, if I understood you correctly, earlier you said that our intellect should act as a brake for our imagination. Now if that is what you meant to say, how does that reconcile with the statement in the Urantia Book that the Thought Adjuster works efficiently when we are in a state of creative imagination?

ABRAHAM: Yes, this is yet another branch, another direction. Creative imagination leans more towards the spiritual aspects of your life – this has no anchor. But to discern what is fanatical mysticism is another area of which to be on guard. This will lean heavily upon your intelligence – which is bestowed to you by the Divine Minister and her adjutant mind-spirits, who will assist. Does this help?

JAMES: Yes, it does. When you are using the term 'imagination' you seem to be associating that with mystical or religious fanaticism. Is that correct?

ABRAHAM: I understand now. I mean not to imply your creative imagination, but your imaginings – something you imagine to be real but perhaps is only from your imagination. As it is with those who believe Caligastia still exists and governs this planet – this belief will cause them to imagine his influence in their lives. If this person was to filter this information through their intellect, they would reason that Father is maintaining control over this planet and the devil has no power. Creativity, pure creativity, is such as this process of transmission-receiving – it is alive with energy; and I say, intellect is not so much used in this area, but one is to allow the flow of divine inspiration. Yes, it is used somewhat in creating a piece of art; but to reason with creative imagination would almost be to stop it; it would be to doubt it is actually occurring. As it is with this process of transmission-receiving, the transmission-receiver leans toward the side of creative imagination using intellect as a sort of back up. To lean on the side of total intellect would be for a transmission-receiver to reason that this process, this form of communication, is not reality. Also in the category of creative imagination, is worship. In worship, we lean mostly toward the side of spiritual receiving, yes; and the worshipping, and using the intellect, comes second. But I say, in worshipping, the intellect is very important so as to maintain balance. Yes, the balancing of the spiritual and the intellectual is an important lesson for mortals to learn. Does this help? (James: Yes, thank you.)

CALVIN: Abraham, I had a thought during that. It is one thing for us to follow the will of the Father – like some people may think to put one's self in neutral and tune in to Him with His incoming will, and then just follow that – and it is another thing to do as you are saying, to reason what you should do in what His will is and follow your reasoning. Does that make sense? So following the will of the Father is....

ABRAHAM: Understood. Say you, Calvin, were to perceive you received some divine inspiration and yet it was very strange, perhaps harmful in some way, would you not filter this through your intellect? Would you not take this information to the point where your intellect and indwelling Adjuster meet? My point in this lesson tonight is to help you to maintain a level platform on which to build your spiritual growth. And I say, to go off-balance too far towards the spiritual, or toward the intellect, is to interfere with the Father's blueprints. Let me say this: the mind (the intellect) is a gift from our Father and our Divine Minister. If you seek His will, then it is not a problem to confirm Father's ideas with your intellect. Do you see, that it (your intelligence) is from our Father; yes, it all ties together. Does this make sense?

CALVIN: Yes it does, very much. And I would just like to say for the record so it will be typed and on this tape recording - welcome back, to Joshua. For the past two years he's been walking around with tubes hanging out of him, and now no more tubes and he's looking pretty darn good.

ABRAHAM: Welcome Joshua. (Joshua: Thank you.) Abraham: I have been expecting you. Another question?

JOSHUA: May I ask a question that is not related to the lesson? (Abraham: Certainly.) Joshua: Could you give us an approximate number of how many Teacher groups there are?

ABRAHAM: It is in my information that this number is not known now because along with new and budding groups, other groups are dissipating, fading out. I am informed that the groups that are staying are in a fairly large number. It is these groups that will assist in ushering Light and Life to this world. I would also like to say that along with our Teaching Mission groups are there many individuals that are not group members but serve as apostles of Michael. You may perhaps want to think of all those in this Mission as one group serving in one common goal; and there are others in other groups having their divine-led goals. Does this help. (Joshua: Yes, Father Abraham, and thank you very much.) Abraham: You're welcome. Any more questions?

CAMMYEN: Abraham, seeing the enlightenment that is coming to a lot of intellectual people in all different capacities, such as in medicine and in technology - in many areas on the earth now, it seems to be growing very very quickly the amount of knowledge that is coming to us in many different areas. I have wondered often if this is just 'their' intellectual progress? Or, if there is spiritual enlightenment that is helping them to gain this knowledge so quickly, and that is becoming very beneficial to us.

ABRAHAM: Yes. Spiritual enlightenment is for everyone. The intellectual groups are finding that this intelligence comes from somewhere, and without attempting to locate the source of this intelligence is to live an almost meaningless life. Yes, the spirit moves with them also. Does this answer? (Cammyen: Yes, thank you.)

Abraham: One more question?

JAMES: Okay, I'll ask one. There are a lot of people who claim to be Christians, as you know; each professing something a little different and are often at great odds with each other. I don't know how specific I should get. But I'll try this: I think of people who associate with, for example, the Christian Coalition – they believe with all their heart that they are bringing the teachings of Jesus and the morals that He taught to the political arena to uplift our country. And yet other Christian's don't feel that way at all – they perceive the Christian Coalition as being fanatical and even destructive in some ways. How is it that all of us people on this planet who want to profess our love for Jesus – how is it we see Him so differently and see His ideal as being so different? Are we even worshipping, so to speak, the same person? Any comment you have on that, I would appreciate. It gets a little confusing.

ABRAHAM: A very intelligent question. There are so many different sources of religion – each with their own dogma, doctrine, and creed. All mortals wish to be totally devoted to their beliefs and religious organizations. But I say, right now (as far as groups go) I do not recommend mixing church and government. Government is one group. Religious groups are too varied. Wars have been fought over the many beliefs. But I say, the Master is not relying on the religion written on paper in books. The Master, His religion, is a living religion, and becoming more of a reality every day. I believe the Master would perhaps advise to respect these different organizations; not to lure one group to believe as you, but perhaps focus upon the positive aspect of each religion. I say, not too long from now those that are awakening within this era will out-number those in organized religion, and the scales will begin to balance out. It is heartache for the angels to witness mortals fight amongst themselves over their beliefs. Also, the angels do know that mortals are basically goodhearted and are each desiring what they think Father would want. It is our hope in this Mission that mortals will realize they all live on the same world and experience the same sorrows and the same joys; we hope they learn to respect each other's diversities – and above all, cease to be so judgmental of one another. Does this help? (James: Very much. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome.

I thank you all for allowing me to be with you this evening. It is an honor to serve with you who are both spiritual and intellectually balanced. Until next week, shalom.

Questions About Trust. How Does Our Mortal Mind Coordinate With Spiritual Growth
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-18-1995

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. How was your week in learning of, and fulfilling your apostleship duties? I found our apostolic students were in full service. I must say I am pleased at the happenings in Idaho. At our gathering, my main point, my message, was delivered and well received. I view that as a mark of success in our ongoing Mission. We, the Teaching Staff, have desired to see more group unification within the Teaching Mission; and as such, we give a mark of success from our weekend's gathering. [Editor's note: Some members of the Woods Cross group had, over the weekend, traveled to Pocatello, Idaho to share a message from Abraham to their

Teaching Mission group.]

I find that such spiritual insights fill me with such a gratitude that I have no words to describe. I feel such thankfulness that I have attained this spiritual knowledge which I have sought. At times I can hardly control my glee at seeing the Father's fingerprints in my mortal pathway. I know you also hold this same feeling of gratitude towards our Heavenly Parent.

I would like to make a few comments and give possibly a few suggestions: This type of communication (the transmission-receiving process) can at times become a little too much, too lengthy – and therefore, losing some of its substance. It is my desire tonight to keep my words short and possibly ask you to study on those things/subjects in which we have already covered – of course using your Urantia text and possibly the teachings of Ham. It is my desire not to throw too much at you all at once. Therefore, I would ask you to research more on the subject of the mortal mind and how it coordinates with your spiritual growth.

I would be most happy to answer any questions you might have tonight. Please feel comfortable and free to inquire about anything.

ROLAND: Abraham, during last weekend some things became clear to me in respect to meditation and my seeking the will of the Father. I would like to check that out with your perception. In this mortal life it seems we have a very difficult time finding the will of the Father for us in our activities. For me, I am out searching for that sporadically. But what has become clear is that we can't know that (the seeking of Father's will) as a long-term experience; we can only know it in the moment of knowing, and that is a different perception for me. I thought if I started on the path of knowing the will of the Father, I would know it all the time – or even 'generally' know what it was all about. For us to seek the will of the Father continually, I would be in a continual prayerful attitude asking for clarification about that throughout the day through prayer and through meditation. And in the stilling of the mind we receive intuitions and inspirations of what that is for us that day. And that is a kind of a change of perception for me. I wonder whether that's correct. Could you add or comment about that in our seeking to do the will of the Father?

ABRAHAM: Yes, you are mostly correct. The will of God is ever-changing to suit His child's needs and educate what this child needs to know. The will of God is like truth – expanding. It is unlike a pond that sits with no fresh water ever being added or ever evaporating, no, for Father's will is living and moving. The only thing that stands in the way of Father's will is His child's will. Without a continuous surrendering to the Father's will it is quite difficult for Father to reach His child, and for the child to know what the Father's will is. So yes, surrendering is important. The acceptance of Father's will is also as important. If you are unwilling to perhaps follow through with the lesson Father may have, it is not possible for you to reap the joy that would have come upon completing this lesson. If you are unaccepting of God's decisions, this does build a barrier between you and your Father – a barrier in trusting, that our God is in complete control of the universes, and none other has this absolute power and order. To trust our Father is to say, 'Yes, my Father knows me better than anyone. He sits the lessons before me, and I accept what He puts before me and will give it my best effort.' This is just as the Master spoke, for He said: "Yes, you are capable of drinking of my cup. The question is: Are you willing?" To be 'willing' and 'accepting' is to also 'have trust in your universal Father.' To trust Him is to be in His will. Does this help?

ROLAND: Probably more-so when I re-read it. It seems to me - when I recognize my infancy, my smallness, I think that my being in this mortal state is ninety-nine percent flawed, and one-percent perfect. I am a son of God, yes, but a very very embryonic son. One just barely becoming aware of His power within my life, and so when you said perhaps there was an unwillingness to drink of the bitter cup, that's completely right. Whenever it is set before me I look at it and think that maybe I'll just take a sip. I recognize my incompleteness of consecration to the full-hearted drinking of the full cup which I fear to be full of difficulty and challenge. And of those lessons to be learned, I know that I am not learning them because I short circuit them, and I am fully aware of that. I guess what I am really seeking to do is to find the balance between having to plan my life in the intellectual way of trying to put together the pieces and parts to make it flow in a material world to maintain my material self, and to be doing so in coordination with what I perceive to be God's will for me - granting that my perception is so flawed and so distorted by my experience in this dark world. I am really looking for a way to be more in tune with God's will for me, recognizing that I may not be in complete harmony with it. I see what you are saying and I seek more direction of a simple way because I am a simple mind.

ABRAHAM: Is it difficult for you to believe that you cannot do everything perfectly? Does it trouble you to fall short of your expectations?

ROLAND: Actually, yes, it is one of the things that I have come to learn, from this Mission-experience in the last four years; recognizing that in my imperfection I am becoming comfortable with being imperfect. I am becoming comfortable in knowing that God has already forgiven me for the things that I have done errantly. Yes, it is very difficult to see that I have not completely surrendered to God's will. It is difficult because each day I am faced with decisions that have to do with a material life. I would really like to get to a place where I could completely surrender to His will. It is the most joyful place I have ever been when that happens.

ABRAHAM: My perception is that the 'trust' that should be there with your Paradise Parent, is lacking. This is quite normal at this stage of mortal existence. Many are afraid to 'let go and let God,' for their faith wavers and they are scared they will be let down; and this is because you have been humanly let down. When your faith in God has been built up is when you realize, 'this is my Father who is unlike any human example, He will not let me down.' You may not always understand what God sets before you, but you can certainly learn to trust that He sat this before you for your own spiritual education and because of His total love for you. Learning to do the will of our Father is like trying to reach the top story of a building - there are many floors that you must stop at before you can reach the top; trust being a very important floor, and one you must spend much time at in learning and understanding each successive level. You cannot just ride the elevator to the top. You must stop at each floor, spending time on each one, learning:

1. You learn you are really not in control of your divine path.
2. You learn God is.
3. Acceptance for God's path is another floor.
4. Fully trusting Him (our Father) is still another.

It is difficult for me to explain our perfect Paradise Parents. I don't know how to tell you – they are so unlike anything you know here. They are fully worthy of your trust, and this is a wonderful step you take in your spiritual attainment. Does this answer a little more?

ROLAND: Yes, it does. Just in summation: It seems to me like what I should be working on is acceptance of the lessons that I should learn on these floors. In the allegory of the building – perhaps rather than my trying so hard to seek to do the will of the Father, maybe it is simply that His will is that I learn these different facets of getting to this place He has already placed me, so that I may actually be in the harmonious flow of it. Yes, that makes a lot of sense to me in my own level of understanding. And yes, 'trust' is one of those things which I must develop more attunement to in learning the lessons required of me on my path. Thank you. (Abraham: Yes, you understand, and you are welcome. Another question?)

JAMES: I have a follow-up – to pursue Roland's line of questioning. The idea of having trust in God is a little bit confusing to me because when I see the circumstances of the world, I see the apparent chaos and tragedy and the suffering that is so prevalent on this planet. And I ask myself, "Is this God's will that there should be this suffering? and if so, then is that the scenario that I am to accept in my accepting the lessons that God has laid before me?" It seems to me the mess this world is in is man's doing, and that God would be a little unhappy about the situation down here. And therefore, given the state of the world right now, which does not reflect His will, maybe I shouldn't be accepting of the circumstances before me. Just listening to myself describe that, further convinces me that I am confused. [laughter.] Can you address this confusion?

ABRAHAM: Might I begin by asking you a question? (James; Yes.) Abraham: Have you ever, in the midst of trouble, put your full and unwavering trust in Father that He would see you through?

JAMES: I would say, I have put my hope in Father, but I wasn't assured in my own mind that things would turn out okay. I 'hoped' that they would, yes.

ABRAHAM: Understood. An experiment for you: Upon your next experience of conflict, say to yourself and to your Father: "My Heavenly Parent, I am unable to understand and deal with this conflict. I put my full trust in you to see me through." Yes, I find that many times when mortals have no choice, they will finally lay their problems in God's hands; they have to be almost forced into this decision. Very seldom do Father's children come to Him when all is going well and say, "You are a God of greatness, and I fully trust in your ability to guide me." Yes, as you said, "human will reigns supreme in the hearts of men and women on this world;" but I say to you, that time is coming to an end. With this planetary awakening, the mortals of this world will align their hearts, their wills, with those that created them. Some things that occur are God's will; and some things are not, yes. I cannot say what is and what should be acceptable to believe. As a fellow sojourner I cannot say to another, 'This is God's will, and this is not.'

JAMES: If I attempt to trust God, I have the feeling that it won't necessarily protect me from hardship, from pain or sorrow. Is this true?

ABRAHAM: Yes, this is true. It is the cup that Michael speaks of, but it is a cup you do not drink alone. A full trusting attitude in our Paradise parenting does, however, protect us from mental agony, and from strain and punishment on our physical. Said Jesus: "I cannot traverse the waters of adversity for you, but I can go with you, step by step, through them." This trust is a difficult thing for mortals. They put their trust in each other and are many times disappointed. They are untrusting of their mortal acquaintances, and therefore they are conditioned to not trust. Yes, it is unbalanced to have faith and not trust. To have a blanket of faith with your threads going one way and the threads of trust crossing over them, is more complete, is filled with strength and durability and comfort. Without the threads of trust, the blanket of faith is just threads. I say, God is unlike any human you have ever encountered. He is most reliable, and it would be wise to disassociate God with any human example in your lives. Yes, we will study more/further on the issue of trust. Did this help? (James: Yes, very much. Thank you for your kindness and explanation.) Abraham: Another question?

ELWARD: Abraham, each morning when I have stillness, I try to dedicate that day to doing the Father's will and let my will and His will coincide. I found that if I don't do what is most appropriate then I can experience difficulty. But when I realize that difficulty is the result of my lack of doing His will, and I am willing to take responsibility for that, it makes things seem to get better. Is this the right approach in learning to do the Father's will?

ABRAHAM: You are in understanding. It is quite obvious you have much trust in God's overcare in your daily dealings. Yes, good. Does this answer? (Elward: Yes.) Another question?

ROINDA: I would mostly like to hear from you, Abraham, on 'my feelings of being unworthy.' I do trust, yes, that if I ask, Father will be there for me - but I have a hard time actually 'asking' when I feel so undeserving. I just need some encouragement; if you could address that?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Some view petitions to Father like a certain amount of coins in a bank. They view this bank as limited. They say, I want to save my coins for a really important petition I may have someday, so they save their coins. They wait until they are desperate for Father's love and watchcare. This is imbalanced thinking. I say, it is perfectly acceptable to ask for His guidance in all that you do - for when you ask, you are surrendering your own desires for a specific outcome and are relying on God's will. I say, there is no bank of limited petitions you can ask of Father. I say to you, it matters not the importance of your petition - what matters is that you are sincerely seeking God's will and His guidance. Father does not choose which of His children are more needy, more affected by conflicts or disasters. He does not pick and choose what child to assist. Father answers all His sincere petitioners who are making an effort to do everything humanly possible to resolve their human struggles. Yes, Father is no respecter of persons. He answers each and every one. He is always there to guide you when you have asked. Does this help? (Roinda: Yes. Thank you.)

ELLEN: Abraham, Bill Kelly of Pocatello, said he would put your teachings on the Internet, and I was wondering if you would want us to do that or not?

ABRAHAM: I am willing that he do this. Acceptable. (Ellen: Thank you.)

ANTHONY: Yes. I have a couple questions: I have been talking with my brother about the Urantia Book where it mentions that parts of the Old Testament are altogether human in origin; it troubles him very much. And also, the sections where it talks about Jesus having lived up to the requirements at the time of His baptism so that the next section of the Master's life could begin – being His personal ministry. Could you shed some light on those, please?

ABRAHAM: Is this your question, or your brother's question?

ANTHONY: His, yes, but I think it is my question, as well. I would like to share with him an understanding without disturbing him so much. As you know, he is my twin brother and is quite Bible-based. He thinks I am going to hell for believing in the Urantia Book.

ABRAHAM: I am in understanding that what would make him most comfortable is to tell him what he already believes; this is common. You fully know your brother and you are best able to discern the words he is most comfortable with. Once these conversations become disagreements or quarrels, the subject needs to be left alone. We have assigned a Teacher for you both. You must have patience and choose your words, and your Teacher will advise you both – on how to believe differently and still have harmony as brothers. Anthony, could you bring these two questions you asked, back to me next week, for my connection is lessening.

Know that I will be with you in your studies throughout the week. Shalom.

Human Worries | If One Believes Father Rules A Universe Then Why Worry | Tithing and Sacrifice

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-25-1995

I am ABRAHAM. I am happy to be with you tonight. As you discuss these topics of our lessons amongst your group of friends, my associates and I also discuss our own viewpoints. We are pleased with your understanding, and even more-so are we pleased with your willingness to remain the learners.

How did your study on the mind and its relationship to spirituality progress? I realize this area of study is extremely wide in variety and it at times appears to be too much. I fully recognize your susceptibility to be overwhelmed by not only the spiritual factors but also the scientific and philosophical factors. Yes, we will start on a smaller scale than what many of you have discussed.

The human mind is filled with many varying degrees of worry, fear, and the stresses of daily living; it takes a certain toll on your physical well-being. If your mind is plagued with worries it is difficult for your indwelling Fragment to assist you in your struggles. One thing in particular I have witnessed, and that is the human reaction of 'impatience for conclusions.'

Many times we are in anxiety over 'results,' and desire immediate conclusion to our daily struggles. Yes, even when it is most desired by mortals to do as Father would have them do - mortals very much desire to do that thing quickly, and then move on. This impatience creates a mental agony that then creates an outgoing radio wave, so to speak, a radio wave of negativity and the fear of looking bad, looking as though they are less than what their mortal counterparts perceive them to be.

The image of oneself is a desire to be good and without flaws; and when human flaws are obvious, mortals tend to withdraw or to cover-up. This is a worry that takes a lot of energy from the body and mind. This is an unrealistic image to portray to your fellows.

It is known by the majority of your planet that no one person is absolutely perfect, but perfection is absolutely desired by all. To be released of the worry of having to hide any imperfections would be to free humankind to proclaim, "We are one family with one Father." To be free from worry is to say: "Yes, I trust in my Paradise Father who knows me more than I know myself, and He leads me Paradise-ward."

It is my lesson tonight - to take one branch of our tree in the areas of the mind and our spiritual growth, and help to make this branch stronger by pruning off the smaller branches that are entangled with it, and which affect this branch's growth. Yes, this branch shall be called 'human worries.'

Worrying, many times can't be helped; it is part of who and what mortals are. At times this worry is seemingly just a habit for an idle mind, and at other times this worry can be linked to fear and not trusting in the Paradise Parents. To truly believe - "Yes, I am a child of God; and yes, I am here on this world for a purpose, and I truly believe there is a God within me." - to proclaim this is to be free from worry, anxiety, and certain stresses on the physical.

Your physicians are quite aware that constant worry and anxiety causes much of your health problems of today. The physicians just are not qualified to help reveal each individual's God within. I say to you, it is the individual's responsibility to discover their Father and trust in His ability to guide and care for them.

It is known that as infants are cared-for, they revere their parents as the sum of their total existence. Parents provide love, nourishment, shelter. This infant is familiar with this parent's face, scent, physical emotions, and moods - this infant knows nothing else. This infant is reliant upon this parent for everything. As this infant grows into a small child it realizes the hardships they must face in life. They look to their parent: "Where are you now!" they ask, "Why can't you stop my pain?" The good parent responds: "You must learn this, my child. I cannot do this for you; I can only advise you on how I would do this. I can even go with you, but you must take this responsibility on for your own."

This is like our spiritual infancy. God has provided us with the necessities to get started on our spiritual pathway, and at times on this spiritual pathway we come to a rough spot – we ask our Father: "Where are you now, Father? Can you not just lift me over this rough spot and I will be on my way?" And the good Father responds: "You are my child whom I love deeply. I am unable to lift you, for my love tells me you must learn to traverse this path. I can only show you how I would go about it if you so desire. I can even go with you if you will allow."

Yes, it is because of our Father's deep and abiding love for us that we traverse these many lessons. I say if Father was to have your full trust, you would find yourselves rejoicing in His watchcare over you; you would find there really is not much to worry about. Said Jesus: "My yoke is easy and my burden is light." This remains true to this day.

Jesus trusted in His Father's abilities, and He worried not, for Jesus knew in His heart He most desired to do the will of His Father in heaven. His mind was free from worry and anxiety. Jesus knew He did not have to worry about discerning Father's will, for He knew Father's will 'just happens' – it is nothing we can make happen or even be aware it is happening; we can only trust in our Father's abilities and know Father's will is happening. It is my desire to receive only a few questions.

WILLEENA: Abraham, I would like to ask about tithing. I am not familiar with Urantia's views about tithing. Could you address that?

ABRAHAM: It is in your Urantia Book text. Your brothers and sisters here may be able to direct you to the correct pages; but I can say, tithing to a specific organization or person or cause needs to come directly from the heart. If it (your tithe) is a task that appears to be easy and without a lot of thought going into it, then I say, feel free. If this tithe given is felt to be in the best interest of the receivers, and not given out of seeking self-glorification or possibly the thought of what one may appear to be if they do not tithe – then yes, feel free. The apostles took care of one another to further the growth of the kingdom. I would say if your donation would further the growth of the kingdom in any small way, then please feel free to give. Does this help? (Willeena: Yes, thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. One more question?

HELEN: Abraham, I was wondering if there is anything I might do to be a more effective servant to the Father? I am having a hard time putting it into words. I have been trying to make myself as clear as possible, to be a clearer conduit, and to be a healing servant from the Father.

ABRAHAM: It is my opinion you do well. Many obstacles have you overcome and you are very much trained in the area of compassion. You have been very effective. What makes you think otherwise?

HELEN: Sometimes I am just unsure of what I am hearing – you know, are they my own thoughts? or thoughts that I should just go with. Should I just let that concern go, and go with whatever comes in? I just feel like sometimes I could be more effective.

I feel like I am kind of just muddling through my day in not any clear direction. I guess that is part of the learning process, but I'm not sure.

ABRAHAM: Yes, understood. I would advise or suggest you take your spirit inspirations and weigh them with your intellect; attempt to foresee the outcome of your divine intuitions before exercising them. Yes, the intellect is extremely important in assisting your fellows. Yes, intuitions are many times right and very helpful, but not always; therefore, I would advise to filter them through your intellectual understanding and attempt to foresee the outcome of actions taken. If you foresee a fruitful ending to your actions then I say, this is good. I say to you, Helen, you do well, as do the rest of my friends and students in this circle of light.

I wish to address more of your questions next week. Until then, I ask you to keep a check on your level of worry and ask yourself: "Do I believe my Father is really the Father of all fathers? Do I believe He is capable of creating superuniverses?" If your answer is 'Yes' then I ask you to trust Him with your human worries. Until next week, shalom.

Spiritual Envy And Pride. Where There Is Love There Is Not Envy Nor Pride

I am ABRAHAM. I am delighted to be with you here this week. I am intrigued by your conversations and amazed by your open attitudes. How did your week of learning to lessen your worries and anxieties turn out? I know this is more easily said than done and it really is a conscious decision to declare: "I trust my Father Fragment and I wholeheartedly turn my worries over to Him." Much worry only adds to your numerous health problems and hampers your spiritual growth.

I am honored to be known as your teacher/friend. I sincerely hope I have assisted you in your human and divine endeavors. I always pray, "Father, if I can assist at least one parent to help their child, let it be so. Father, if I can assist at least one spouse to treat their spouse with love and kindness, let it be so. If I can assist one child to help and aid a parent, let it be so." I hold you all within my heart and I pray for Father to endow me with His wisdom with what He desires you to know.

My friend, Ham, discussed many topics to help you to start this Teaching Mission. His words made a profound difference in your lives. [Ham's lessons which Abraham references are the 1991 and 1992 entries of these MWT.] His example of love and kindness to you did assist you in learning to set this same example for your fellows. It is my sincere desire to assist you; and, like ripples in a pond, my assistance to you would result in you helping your fellows.

Machiventa has proclaimed that this Mission to re-spark the kingdom of heaven, is traveling full speed ahead. Nothing or no one can limit us in our work. You, my friends, have remained steadfast; and you have accepted your seat at Michael's banquet table.

Back to our topic at hand: I wish to say a few words pertaining to the mind and its effectiveness in spiritual growth. Last week we spoke of worry and anxiety. This week I choose to say a few words on spiritual envy and pride.

As a mortal, it was quite easy for me to sit and say: "I am closer to Father than that person." Or, I would say: "That person is closer to Father than I am, I must give all my effort to be the closest I can be." Little did I realize I was quite active in either spiritual envy – the desire to be like my associates (close to the 'One God'); or spiritual pride, where I imagined myself to be the envy of my fellows.

Working in such close connection with Machiventa, I felt I had God at my fingertips. I assumed in some way I was spiritually superior; and therefore, 'Machiventa came to me.' As my association with Machiventa grew closer, he taught me: "Where there is love there is not envy or pride." "Where Father dwells there is not jealousy or conceit."

Upon learning Father's goodness, I felt no need for envy nor pride. When I learned that all the mortals who walked the Earth were also children of God along with myself, there was no room for jealousy nor conceit. My friend, my brother, my mentor (Machiventa), taught me that truth, beauty, and goodness are always Father's goals. Father is love – love equals truth, beauty, and goodness.

As we learn to believe we are all God's beloved children, we stay away from the idea that a certain person is closer to Father than others; so therefore, this person should lead. This is not reality! all are close to Father whether it be consciously or not consciously – the difference is that awareness we have; and it matters not how aware we are of our brothers' awareness of God, we need to focus on our own awareness.

In your Urantia Book text it says, "The race for perfection is on." This race is not between mortals, not a competition. In my understanding, this quote means you are attaining your own Paradise understandings individually, not in competition with your fellows. Yes, as worry and anxiety can affect your health, so can envy and pride affect your mental capabilities. If you are focused on these poisons of the mind, then perhaps you are less focused on our Father.

Yes, the Divine Minister is remarkably helpful in these areas of the mind. She is ever willing to assist anyone who requests assistance. She is the water of life. She ministers to the children of time and space just as effectively as Michael. Yes, our Universe Parent's nearness to you would probably astound you. These two living examples – the Creator Son and the Holy Mother Spirit – are so magnificent. They assist one another. They are not in any competition for 'who shall do more for the kingdom,' no! they feed into each other's energy supply – they are as one functioning unit.

This is our goal for this group: to act as one functioning unit connecting with others in this Teaching Mission – all acting as one functioning unit. Once you realize the importance of your oneness, then shall you know the Supreme Being; then shall you understand. A few questions.

CALVIN: Abraham, from my viewpoint in our little meeting here, I feel a tremendous oneness. Yes, we may have some rough edges to smooth off as a group, and I appreciate very much your kind words to help us do that so very effectively. Your words are very helpful in my life every week, to reflect on them – and say, yes, I can see it. Maybe I am not changing, but I am recognizing the need to. I am sure that, even slowly, this has to end up in a change as long as that recognition is there. So I thank you, but that is not a question.

ABRAHAM: I am delighted with your balance in conversation. Your seemingly harsh assessments are with a balance of emotion and intellect. This is good. Rough spots, there will always be rough spots, but from what I see, you all do quite well. Thank you. Another question?

JAMES: I have one Abraham. First of all, thank you for a beautiful lesson. My question is about beliefs. It seems like every individual on this world has a unique belief system. We all overlap in some ways, but I'll bet if we sat down and explored our belief systems, sooner or later we would find that we differ with anybody that we would happen to sit down with. So the question that comes to my mind is that when we are trying to share our spiritual belief system with someone else in the sense of spreading the Teaching Mission or spreading the gospel of Jesus – what is it that we're attempting to change in another person's belief system? Because sometimes it seems like in your lessons, and Ham's lessons, that we are supposed to be tolerant of other people's belief systems. It almost leaves me with the impression that we really shouldn't attempt to change anybody else's belief system then, so all beliefs systems are okay? If so, then I don't get what we are supposed to be doing in our sort of proselytizing in a sense. Trying to enlighten other people seems presumptuous to think that anybody can enlighten anybody else if all belief systems are basically on an equal playing field. If that question makes any sense at all to you, I would appreciate any comment.

ABRAHAM: Yes. Correct are you in your summation of religious beliefs. This is a gray area and hard to put into use as an apostle or seeker of Michael's lessons. It has been said 'do not attempt to sway anyone from their belief systems.' What I do recommend is that you be yourself as completely as God had created you to be! And, to let the joy of your learning, your spiritual education, be upon your face and within your countenance of being. Yes, all you can ever do is give your own spiritual testimony and your honest feelings about how it has affected your life. Be not afraid to wear this joy for all to see. This joy is quite attractive and will draw many, like moths to a flame. To recognize the presence of the Master is to become revitalized in your beliefs. When I am in the presence of Michael I am within His enthusiastic joy of our Father's work. This joy that Michael wears upon His whole being is quite contagious, yes, and I also become contagious with this enthusiastic joy of Father's. It is this joy that men/women will recognize and seek to have this for their own. It is not the intellectual stimulating words that may fall upon their ears – it is the joy of your Father's love that you wear for all to see. Also I say, yes, there are many paths to Paradise, we will all get there one way or another, should we desire it. It matters not if you can persuade a fellow to go with you upon your path – but it matters, yes, that you may inform your fellows that their path awaits them. Yes, you are correct – if all mortals knew how alike their belief systems were, they would be in total amazement and many religious barriers would be broken, yes. Does this help?

JAMES: Yes, it does. One other follow-up related to this: By the time a person gets very far into the Mansion Worlds, I would assume all people will recognize 'Michael' as being the Creator Son. Are there still people that will still consider themselves to be Buddhist or Hindu or some of the other non-Christian religions that are so prevalent on Urantia today?

ABRAHAM: I say, when mortals reach the Mansion Worlds they take with them what was valuable in their mortal life. I would say, very little of their religious traditions do they remember. But what remains is the truth within that particular religion. Good question James. One more question?

CALVIN: Just to clarify that answer - it seems, as stated in the Urantia Book, Jesus and the apostles did do a lot of - not just being in front of the people, but teaching and expounding, explaining. Is what you are saying then, is that yes, they are sharing their understanding and feelings out there, but what changed people was what they saw in those messengers of truth or those representatives of truth?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Peter was quite the public speaker. His enthusiasm for the Master's teachings drew crowds. He filled them with an energy, unlike anything they had known before. Yes, at times Peter may have overdone it, but his enthusiasm certainly drew people to wonder, 'what is he saying that is so exciting?' Does this help? (Calvin: Yes, very much so.)

On that, I wish to leave you for this evening. I will be with you during the week to assist you in your questions. Also will our Holy Mother Spirit assist you with questions about the mind and its necessity for cleansing. Until next week, shalom.

Scales of Justice | Balanced vs The Imbalanced Justice

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-09-1995

I am Abraham. Your prayers are almost visible to me. I am certain that your prayerful attitudes are of great benefit to those that you pray for, and yourselves, as well.

I ask you, was your learning in spiritual envy and spiritual pride fruitful this past week? I can attest that this lesson will continue possibly even beyond the Mansion World's training. If Lucifer had learned this particular lesson completely, he may have not gone astray so easily. Had he not been the son of self-love, and instead had his blanket of faith weaved with trust in his Paradise Father, he may have had a chance to be one of God's loving and helpful sons instead of a disloyal servant.

Yes, a healthy amount of self-love is good as long as you also realize your fellows are as equal within the kingdom as you are. I am in understanding that the scales of justice for this world are quite imbalanced. This imbalance may be caused by an over-amount of self-love without regard for one's fellows.

Say for example, the race issue. A certain race is perhaps tormented by past injustices, and in order to atone for these injustices, a particular race may become imbalanced by overmuch self-pity and self-love. This is possibly where the scales of justice become imbalanced. Yes, overmuch self-love and self-pity is one who tries to atone for misfortune heaped upon them.

I say to you right now, we as a people cannot atone for the past sins/injustices of our ancestors. We can only learn from their mistakes. We cannot right the wrongs of our ancestors; we can only record their history and sift through their mistakes and mix them with our own understanding of truth. I do not say the past is all in vain, no! I say, the past is part of your evolution, your learning to become a spiritual people.

To you that are spiritually aware, I say injustice does strike your hearts more deeply and it is hard to reckon with such unfairness in the world; it is hard to understand your fellow mortals' refusal to open their eyes, their hearts, their minds. You question: "Why can't they see what I see?" "Why can't they all understand?" Yes, this injustice is painful for those who are God-knowing. It may leave you with the feeling to immediately correct the imbalance on the scales of justice. This urge can be overwhelming, confusing, and leave you feeling somewhat helpless.

Yes, the God-knowing individual seeks to right all injustices in the name of their God, of all injustice that is unrighteous and unholy. But I also say, the God-trusting individual knows that God is in control of His universes and that His justice has no space or time; they know His justice is lasting and complete, absolute, yes. When all perhaps seems lost or hopeless, the God-trusting and God-knowing individual relaxes in their Father's perfect peace.

I say to you, the mind circuits this week have been so busy with mortal thoughts of morals and virtues and decisions. It would be such a wonderful idea if the whole world, each day, would set aside ten minutes for the stillness and await our help, our Father's perfect peace.

I am knowing that this particular lesson seems possibly a little shallow, a little slow, but I ask for you to listen to my words and think on them as 'positive ideas to the cosmic mind.' This is a time of choosing. The Mother Spirit is available to help with this mortal choosing of meanings and values. I ask you, even though the scales of justice are seemingly out of balance, I pray that you would not let anything interfere with your individual relationships with your fellow mortal brothers and sisters, regardless of race, religion, wealth, status. I am honored and happy to be here with you and to be able to assist you in anything I can. A few questions?

ROLAND: Abraham, does the Spirit work within us to give us insights into those who would hear us?

ABRAHAM: Yes. I would say, this is more on an ordinary scale, and at times does appear a little average or uneventful until time has passed and you realize the Father had worked through you to help another. This happens all the time and is, on the average, not too exciting. It does, however, leave the helper with a worshipful attitude, a gratefulness that Father had trusted this helper with His words wherein he exclaims, "Yes, it is with gratitude that I speak and to know that those on high trust me with this position I now hold. I feel worshipful and I feel like rejoicing and praising God. He has trusted in my abilities. He has always had faith in me when I did not have faith in myself." Yes, you are correct. The Spirit does work through mortals and it is a wonderful idea to trust and know He has faith in your abilities as His child. Now you are possibly looked on as servants of God – but I say, also are you His sons and daughters. Does this help?

ROLAND: It does. I am not sure where this is written, but this is as I remember it. The Master, speaking to the apostles – He, in reference to the miracles and healings and things that He did, said to them as I remember it: "These things that I do, ye shall do, and even greater things shall you do." Does this mean that given the right capacity, and acting as a channel of the Father's light and love, we can expect in this lifetime to see miracles performed that are very unordinary and very eventful if they are done for the glory of God? Am I misinterpreting what you are saying? I know that there are a lot of ordinary events that are very important that we continue to do, but there will be things that will be very unusual, very eventful, if I interpret His message correctly. Can you comment on that?

ABRAHAM: Jesus, His message, was entirely spiritual. His meaning was – that all would be endowed with the Fragment of God and each would be assisted by His Spirit of Truth. Yes, the "greater things" will be purely spiritual. I cannot say, greater things will be material or miraculous. As well, Jesus was not on this world for too long; most of you will spend a lifetime, much longer than Jesus, and have much opportunity to do great things. Had Jesus been afforded additional time He would also have accomplished much greater things, purely spiritual things. Does this help?

ROLAND: So that I am interpreting your words correctly: What Jesus did in His life was purely spiritual – so does this mean the things that He did (what you are referring to as purely spiritual), the apostles would do even greater purely spiritual things? I am not getting the distinction of things that are not purely spiritual and things that are purely spiritual. It begins to be fuzzy and I don't know the implication. I think I'll meditate on it and search within myself. It does help to hear from you, having had life experience here. It's been a struggle for me with that. It helps me to expand my mind while in the mortal existence to struggle with the ideas you presented to us. In that way, it does help. I am appreciative. Thank you for the lesson.

ABRAHAM: You're welcome. You are correct in that Jesus did do great spiritual things, as will you do great spiritual things, through the gift of the Spirit, yes. It will not be a job for the weak-hearted or the glory seekers. It will be a task for the average human with trust in their Paradise Father. You are not too far off. You are understanding. Yes, good question. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, am I too far off in thinking that on the flip-side of this earlier discussion – would it be effective to the 'new hearer' out there if we, as Michael's extended apostles, use words such as 'God has shown me this and tomorrow you will see that,' and so on, as Jesus did? I mean that sounds like the things that Jesus did, and perhaps even the apostles of His day did. Then are we to exercise the faith that we are also to present truth that way? or are we to be taught a little more average way? I think I have put it clear enough so I'll stop there.

ABRAHAM: I would say there is no one set rule for teaching, and there are no 'uniform concepts' for you to teach with. Yes, it is up to each individual and what he truly desires. Does he truly desire to assist his Father in heaven? Does he truly desire to be pleasing in God's eyes? or perhaps in the eyes of his fellow mortals. Does he wish to be of true help to his fellows? or does he wish to be a spiritual icon to them? It is all about choices. It is all about mastering the mind. It is about remaining the learner. It is known that God-seeking individuals truly desire to do right – and this intent is understood. Know that Father will build upon your intentions. I hope this helps. My connection is weak. I would suggest you to study on the Seven Adjutant Mind Spirits and their contributions to mortal spirituality. Until next week, shalom.

Man Asks `Whom Shall We Follow` | Trust Father To Lead
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-16-1995

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I welcome each of you here tonight. I am touched by the outpouring of Spirit here. I am feeling very much at home. I thank you. I ask you, did anything happen during the week to help you understand and deal with the injustices that are so apparent in your world?

As these injustices continue on through your time, the more you learn that it is extremely difficult to be a fair judge of truth. Many will perhaps learn that judging is better off left to those on high. It is difficult to judge a situation or an event you are not directly involved in; at these times it is more effective to turn one's judgments over to Father and request a clean and clear mind.

In your history, as tribes began to form as families and groups began to take shape, there has always been a question in the minds of those within each unit – that question being, "Who shall lead us – whom shall we follow?" In earlier times it was the strongest, physically strongest, that would head the tribes.

As time moved on it became the 'elders' of certain groups, being they had much life experience and seemingly much wisdom. As further time moved on, those that would lead a group would become the one who brought to the group the material goods, which more than likely were the men. Yes, it always appeared that the masses would inquire: "Whom shall we follow?" "Who will guide us in our earthly struggles?"

Over the last three decades, this world has been truly disillusioned. It is becoming more and more clear to the human race that you cannot depend on a mortal to lead without being disappointed in one way or another.

In this world is there one man with whom you can trust with all your heart to help see you through your earthly struggles? Is there one woman so righteous that you would put your faith and trust in her to ease your worried hearts and minds? You are in the realization that your own government is not fully understanding you as a member of society. It seems there is always someone who asks, "Who will lead us?" On the other hand, there are those that proclaim, "I am most qualified, I shall lead the masses.”

Within all this searching for those fellow brothers and sisters who will lead, there is one who is not thought of as being a proper leader in worldly affairs. This leader, He is not seen with human eyes. He does not go from town to town courting His voters. He does not make promises He can't keep; and yet, this Leader, He dwells within your very being; He understands you more completely than you understand yourself.

It is time this planet wakes and turns its trust over to those that created the very world they inhabit. Never shall you find a leader more capable of understanding your human situations. It is up to each individual to discover – the source of all love, lies within. The answers to all questions, are within. All the guidance anyone will ever need, is within.

To put your faith and trust into your mortal counterparts is to be disappointed over and over again. To trust and look to Father for leadership is to give Father back His world, to give Father back His children who have seemingly been lost. I do not say, don't trust your fellow brothers and sisters. I do not say, don't follow your human laws. I do not say, your leadership is totally inadequate.

I do say, it is time as a people to raise your heads and look to Father first in all things. I do say, your human leadership is needed; and if aligned with those God-seeking individuals, this world would just sail so smoothly upon the waters of Light and Life – with the breathtaking sunset before you and the past problems behind you.

Yes, this world is learning quite fast who is really in control of the universe. Someday soon I can see families gathered – they are in thought about a certain situation that needs to be decided upon. I see this family asking the One who is at the head of their table, their Paradise Father. A few questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, on the subject of government: We have an unseen planetary government, so to speak, that is to help lead us in this movement toward Light and Life. We are beginning to realize that there is once again a connection from our realm to this planetary morontial or spiritual government – your realm of planetary existence and involvement. And apparently there is becoming more and more connection of the unseen side with our human side – perhaps even contact with our mortal government. The Urantia Book talks about a Governor General. Are you the Governor General at present? or can you tell us who is?

ABRAHAM: I am not. I am not permitted to give you a specific name at this time, but you are correct in that this planet is learning a more universal technique to govern its people. I would say to you, those who are in tune with the cosmic mind are more likely to be more effective leaders and counselors to the masses. I am sorry I cannot answer directly. Another question?

CALVIN: Is it a permissible thing that is soon on the horizon – to be more aware of that portion of our planetary spiritual government? or is it a long time down the road? (Abraham: Not too long.)

JAMES: Abraham, what is meant when the Urantia Book says the Most Highs rule in the kingdoms of men?

ABRAHAM: I am uncertain of your question. Could you elaborate?

JAMES: Yes. The Urantia Book makes the statement that "the Most Highs rule in the kingdoms of men," which seems to suggest that there is a spiritual force that somehow has things under control on this world when it comes to, I take it to mean, national affairs, governmental affairs, mortal kingdoms, nations and so forth. But to look at the way this world is being run doesn't look too good with all the wars and mismanagement that seem to pervade our world down here. So it is hard for me to understand how the Urantia Book can reassure us that these kingdoms are ruled by the Most Highs, spiritual beings way above us.

ABRAHAM: First and foremost, God is in complete control of His universes. That shall always be so. It is more a matter of mortal freewill that slows your so-needed assistance. It is a battle for the 'position with the most glory and honor' (among mortals) that hampers progress. It matters not to Father the time frame. It only matters to mortals. If men shall decide not to accept our assistance, then shall we wait and pray and hope for the next generation. Those 'On High' rule the kingdom of God in mortality; it is their desire for each child to join this kingdom and make it their own. Your assessments are correct, and it is only a matter of mortal freewill-decision as to when those On High will assist them. We know that more and more of Father's children are calling out for Him. I say, soon it will be a call that all will make, and the majority of the world will allow those On High to make their kingdom on Earth, God's kingdom. Does this help? (James: Yes, thanks.)

HELEN: Abraham, if you could, I would like you to address drug addiction and if there is something that would be more helpful, a message to give to someone, or for someone like myself, to help someone who is addicted? John's other son, Eric, is having a real troublesome time with this. Is there a message that I could say or do?

ABRAHAM: I truly wish there was one sentence I could give you to help those chemically addicted. But there is only one way for an addictive personality to survive. They must ask God to invade their soul, mind. They must be brought down to their knees mentally, emotionally. They must fully realize: "I cannot accomplish a true recovery without God and His hosts of spiritual assistance." This searching for mind-altering experiences for escaping harsh earthly realities is temporarily induced by these chemicals, when what people really search for is true and lasting love. There is not any one thing you can really say other than to lend your support and love. It is up to the individual. The individuals who have survived such trauma have suffered much heartache; they are more than likely wanting to overcome their addiction and to cloak themselves in the blanket of faith that is woven with trust. Those that are truly strong will overcome. Those that are not confident in their abilities, or who seek an easy way, will face truly traumatic times ahead. Reassure them, Helen, they are children of God and truly deserve to be loved and accepted just the way they are. It matters not what they have done - it only matters that they can survive through the day ahead. I would admonish you to remain emotionally detached if you can. To feel another's pain is quite normal. To cry with another is good, yes, but there is a time you must stop and reveal your inner strength. The only way to reveal this inner strength is to remember who you are. You are not them! Remain detached emotionally, but attached spiritually. I have no doubt you are quite a blessing to those who are in this situation. You are very effective in your efforts. But once again I say, the real effort to be free from addiction must come from that person who is addicted. Does this help?

HELEN: Yes, it does very much. Eric is who I refer to who has the drug addiction; I am asking because I am sure you are aware that it is the one-year anniversary of his brother, Brent's, death/suicide. Eric is carrying the guilt of that suicide tremendously – it's crippling him; it's killing him. Is there anything I can say or do to help?

ABRAHAM: You have already stated this. Bring this pain out. Bring this out. Expose this, and tackle this as a family. Yes. (Helen: Do you mean to make him bring it out?) Abraham: Yes. All of you need to expose your true thoughts and feelings. To be free you must be unchained. Another question?

CALVIN: Which is worse – a drug addiction like she has just described, or a trusting-in-man addiction as you have described in your lesson tonight – the condition our country is in right now? Which is easier to break?

ABRAHAM: That's a hard one. Drug addiction, alcoholism, any sort of physical addiction, is very much more difficult to overcome rather than societal habits. Yes, physical addiction goes much deeper than just the physical. But I say to you, Calvin, just as you have been disillusioned by one source of religion, so will others be assisted in acknowledging that the light of God is within their very being, to bring disillusionment from untruth to truth; unreality to reality – yes, in earthly affairs as well as spiritual. One more question?

If there are no more questions, I would like to extend my love and gratitude to you as part of my family. I hope to further assist you in your liberty from the traditions and conditions that bind you. Until next week, shalom.

Intuition, A Sixth Sense, A Gift From Father

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-30-1995

[There was no meeting the week before, as Ellanor was sick.]

I am ABRAHAM. I am your friend and Teacher. I have missed you. I have missed speaking with you. I would mention the meeting with me last week could very well have taken place with or without Ellanor. I say, most anyone here is quite capable in this communication process.

I would like to say a few words on the subject of leadership. As we have discussed previously on this matter, it is not just a few that keeps the torch lit. This means – as far as this group is concerned, all are able to keep the flame lit in this torch which is our Teaching Mission. All are called. All are able.

If Father is truly at the helm of your ship, then I say, He has empowered each to fulfill His calling. One or two should not be relied upon to keep the torch lit. All must bear responsibility to keep this flame alive. I cannot express how much you are needed. Each of you fulfills more of your duties, spiritual callings, than you realize.

In keeping with the course of lessons on 'mind,' I should like to say a few words on 'intuition.'

A man who cannot see, his hearing becomes more intense; he learns to recognize certain sounds and becomes extremely sensitive to these sounds. A person without sight and sound has but to rely on the feeling of touch. This person knows that touch alone cannot assist him properly in his daily dealings with life; he learns to go deeper within his mind to rely on instinct for an 'inner' feeling.

Imagine yourself such a person without the necessary five senses. Could you imagine a world that could not rely on these five senses? Where would you turn? What choice would there be? As animals become adapted to certain climates, so does the human mind learn that beyond what you can see, hear, touch, taste, and smell, is there a 'sixth sense;' some have said it to be instinct, perhaps "a gut feeling." This is 'intuition,' wherein somehow you just know; somehow you have listened, and you just know.

The indwelling Father Fragment does indeed play a role in the area of intuition. You could say He is somewhat like a transmitter helping to guide you in certain directions. With the re-establishment of the circuits, this feeling of knowingness will become quite natural. It will seem quite ordinary to experience a certain feeling and act upon that feeling, yes.

Often, those who have been severely injured come to learn that they are much more than their material body; they are perhaps forced at times to turn within and listen and trust that there is a loving God who loves them like no other can. Yes, some do discover this gift of intuition, and they go with it and find it helpful. And yes, some have feelings of intuition and yet feel their feelings seem to be in error – they fear the unknown, having over-much experience of distrust with their fellows.

I would say, there is nothing lost if you are to follow feelings of intuition – if logic is applied. Yes, the Creative Mother Spirit and her Spirit of Intuition are busily teaching and instructing on how best to utilize the resources of intuition. As time passes, you will discover certain steps you can take to further this gift. I would perhaps like to suggest a few now:

- 1) Humility. One who is intuitive has a good grasp of humility, knowing they are still a student in the vast cosmos. A humble attitude opens the door to intuition.
- 2) Trust. The trust a small child gives to a parent is that same simple trust you should bestow upon your indwelling Father Fragment. To truly believe you are a child of His, and that He has your best interest at heart, then you are trusting that He is in control of your world.
- 3) Faith. Faith not only in your Universal Father and His array of vast hosts and helpers, but a deep and understanding faith in yourself as a child of the 'One God.' To know that Father has full faith in your abilities as His child; to be unafraid to take a chance and to be unworried about looking foolish; to have confidence in yourself and know that Father has enabled you with His power (which is also known as His love) – this is faith! This inner faith and confidence – in not only Father but yourselves as well – opens the door to intuition.

4) Liberation. Liberation from fears and anxiety. Yes. To be free from fear is to set the mind in a flight mode. To free yourselves from worry and anxiety is to set your spirit soaring. To understand you do not carry the weight of the world is to open the door to intuition. A mind filled with useless worry is to feel incompetent; is to close the door to intuition.

5) Ask. To have an attitude of asking, "Father, what is my focus?" is to open the door to intuition and inner-knowledge. You will see as you become consciously aware of Father's leadings, that these experiences are quite normal, and you will understand you have already been experiencing them quite frequently. But I say, to recognize and witness Father's creative works in action is cause for praise to Him and rejoicing within your heart.

A few questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, thanks for the lesson. I feel it is tons of insight for myself. Sometimes I wonder if I am being a little over-anxious, or a little bit too sure with these inner feelings. So maybe I am being both. Your lesson gave me some insight to analyze that.

ABRAHAM: Yes, some leadings can be difficult to interpret. I would suggest to you – weigh them with your logic and attempt to foresee an outcome, and then decide if this would further advance the kingdom of God or the brother/sisterhood of mankind. Always go to Father with a humble attitude.

ELWARD: I have a question on awareness. I personally feel like awareness comes as a result of spiritual growth. It is not based on the five senses. It greatly exceeds that. Is this right?

ABRAHAM: Yes. On various worlds throughout the universe (local universe) there are others with many different environments in which they live. They are designed, so to speak, for that particular environment, as are you designed for this one on Urantia. Yes, the spiritual senses do exceed your physical senses. And you shall see, with the passing of time, more and more morontia senses will be available to mortals.

AARON: Abraham, I have a very personal question that has to do with work. The woman I was living with died almost five months ago. In the past months, I have had considerable difficulty in applying myself to work on a daily basis. I am now coming to the point that I feel I have healed enough that I can get more diligent; and yet, I am still having difficulty in applying myself to the hours that I need to apply myself. Can you give me some suggestions, some direction, some advice, as to how I could focus to be more productive in the business that I do?

ABRAHAM: Yes. May I ask you a question? (Aaron: Yes.) Abraham: What is your hope for the end results of your labors – what do you work towards? (Aaron: Assisting people buying and selling their house.) Abraham: Beyond this, what does it do to benefit you? (Aaron: I am not sure.) Abraham: Beyond financial assistance, I wonder if there is a deeper meaning – perhaps all the hours you think you should work, you feel should be spent on something else. A man should choose a job that would not only benefit him financially but to assist him in the deeper spiritual meanings in this short life. If your heart is not in a particular task then your level of desire to perform that task 'with quality' is not there, and perhaps you are needing to explore other avenues. A man is not his work, but a man is his life, his deeds done, his actions taken. Be not afraid to explore. Does this help? (Aaron: Yes.) Abraham: One more question?

HELEN: Abraham, lately I have been trying very hard to have faith on a daily basis and really trust that intuitiveness, the instinct inside of us, in just trying to live God's word every day. At my work, it seems like more and more parties have canceled; something has come up with the people, which has made my time a lot freer. And I try to keep myself away from the worry and stress of the money lost by not having this party; and I just keep telling myself that Father must have something else for me to do. Inevitably there seems like something always does come up where I have been needed. But still, I fear sometimes that my faith is really just me being slothful or lazy. So, is it really, really faith? When I have an attitude of: 'well I am not going to worry about it because I can't change it,' and to just accept it the way it is – is that faith? or is that denial? I am having a hard time in finding balance with that.

ABRAHAM: Yes, your faith is quite strong I perceive. You do possess much faith along with much intelligence. You are in understanding that these two must be integrated to discern the path that Father would have you choose/take. No, you are not in denial, but you are hoping to not experience the feelings of financial burden. This may cause you some worry. Yes, the Father will certainly lead you. But I say, even the apostles made time to fish so that they could sell their catch for the money they needed. Yes, I am certain that you do quite well and when it is time for you to fish you will know it. Do not dwell upon this. This is not too important. Continue to follow your intuitions and filter them through your logic-system, and you shall be empowered with the correct decision-making. Does this help? (Helen: Yes, it does. Thank you very much.) Abraham: You are quite welcome.

I am so happy and so honored to be with you tonight. I wish to truly and sincerely express my deepest love for you each. Until next week, shalom.

Flexibility of Mind | Being Fluid To Enhance Father Communication. Earth Disasters.

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-06-1995
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Good evening and welcome. I am most honored to be here. I thank you all for coming. It is my desire to see you all benefit from these meetings and the teachings. Has anyone seen improvement in their intuitive skills? You will find the five steps will need to be rehearsed for a time but upon your improving the skills of intuition the need for rehearsing will cease, your intuitiveness will become quite natural. On the Mansion Worlds, when lessons on intuition are taught they are usually followed by a lesson in flexibility of mind – and this is my lesson tonight.

In a world where freewill reigns, it is taught that 'if a soul does not see to his own needs no one else will.' It has become a common standard to 'look after one's own best interests.' This thinking has become so imbalanced, and time has brought about a regression in many areas of this world wherein they preach and believe that only the strong will survive.

Much selfishness has been bred into these generations of mortals. Most of these mortals live in a world of fear and therefore always hold up their shields of defense. This has become a world where a brother cannot trust a brother, where a sister cannot rely on another sister.

Over the last few decades, in the midst of confusion, a rigidity has become dominant in the minds of mortals; there is not much flexibility between fellow mortals. This world's people have become a severe judge of character defects, always on the lookout for their fellows' mistakes. Seldom do we find a mortal with a true understanding of his fellows' shortcomings, fears, and ignorance. This worldly inflexibility has caused humankind to become much too harsh with one another.

Some have said to their fellows, "This is the right way." Unbeknownst to them their fellows indeed have their own mind, their own experiential path. One can claim, "I am flexible" and yet criticize their fellow brothers and sisters. This is not flexibility. This is not having the understanding for your fellows that your Father in heaven has for you.

I can remember many nagging struggles when I walked the Earth. My mind was set. Things were to be done a certain way, and I was determined to complete them in that manner. It was through my association with Machiventa that I learned of his flexibility in problem-solving. I learned of his ability to pour himself as though he was liquid into a situation and smoothly iron out many problems that those with anxiety and rigidity could not.

On the Mansion Worlds they teach a specific exercise that I will share with you: Upon entering a difficult situation, visualize yourself as fluid. Fluid is free moving, is penetrable and light. When you visualize yourself as weightless, free-flowing and flexible, it is almost like doing the stillness without actually taking time to find a quiet place away from the busyness. To imagine yourself as 'flexible' is to have immediate contact with the indwelling Father Fragment. When you are flexible you say, "May God's will be done; I can accept God's will; my flexibility enables me to more readily accept and understand Father's overall vision."

For example, those that are ill find themselves in a state of resistance and are more likely to be closed off from Adjuster contact. If those that are ill would perform the exercise on being fluid and flexible they would realize that it is much more easy to accept 'what is' and that the human body is not yet quite perfect; and, they would know that many also struggle with illness. Yes, those that can remain flexible are more likely to let an illness take its course and release the illness. Those that can remain flexible are less likely to be overwhelmed by anxiety and fear. Mortals fear the unknown. If you are a mortal who is flexible, then you are willing to accept Father's will and be empowered to follow His will.

Many mortals experience undue difficulties in everyday life. There seems to be many tasks to complete and it seems as though there are not enough hours in a day. I would suggest to you, upon arising in the morning, declare yourself fluid and request that Father pour you where He may. In all your struggles it is more likely to be a little more peaceful if you are to remain in the will of Father - which is to be accepting of His plan - which is to be flexible.

In the midst of your struggle, and upon making a conscious choice to remain flexible, look at your problem - take small steps toward solving this difficulty, complete each step before moving on; and if possible, allow yourself enough time so that you do not have the added burden of a deadline. Those that move like fluid throughout their days are becoming keenly in-tuned with intuitiveness. You see, those that are flexible are almost prepared for anything, and are assisted by their intuitive abilities.

When I speak of being fluid and flexible, I mean not being passive or conforming to the will of others, no! and, I mean not conforming to certain social standards. I do mean - moving through this life with your material body as though you were already in spirit form. In a world with time-limits and deadlines and qualitative standards, it is difficult to remain light. I do say, humor is a wonderful way to remain flexible and accepting and understanding life's everyday difficulties. To make a conscious decision to remain lighthearted is a wonderful antidote to a world with so many limitations.

This week I ask you to move through your week as pure spirit beings - beings who are able to be poured into any situation and be able to see the whole picture. Attempt to be lighthearted and unafraid of humor during all your seemingly important difficulties. A few questions?

CALVIN: In the newsletter from one of our Florida Teaching Mission group friends there is a lot of claimed teachings such as: "Beware! great changes are coming" - predictions of earthquakes and so on. It is kind of hard to accept wherein they put it, in essence, to 'be afraid and watch out for something.' Is somebody getting over-anxious down there in their transmission-receiving? Could you help us, here? Should we remain 'fluid' in their teachings?

ABRAHAM: It is true that since my time here on the Earth there has been always someone that would proclaim doom and disaster; I do not fully understand why. Earth changes are perhaps like watching a horror film - you are thrilled and excited because of the fear. So it is with predictions of Earth disasters; many fear the powerfulness of the Earth; and all would certainly like to be prepared when a disaster would take place, yes. We would like to inform you when these disasters might take place, but we don't know, as mortals would expect of us.

CALVIN: Well, that is kind of what their newsletter claims to be doing, from their group-Teacher – “informing us.” It is saying to “beware, here comes one.” A ‘get ready’ kind of atmosphere. I am wondering why there were so many messages in their transmission that was tilted that way?

ABRAHAM: My friend and co-worker, Ham, has stated most changes will be purely spiritual. Earthly disasters have come and gone, but human life has been sustained on the spiritual truths. I say, if you live in an area where hurricanes are inevitable, then by all means, build your house underground. [roaring group laughter] This is really all I can comment. Another question?

ELWARD: About fifteen years ago I read a book that talked about similar changes as what Calvin has presented from the Florida group. And in that book, it said that if a person wanted to survive that he would have to learn to be in communication with his higher self. At that time, I started changing my attitude about this kind of possible disaster, and I've realized the more that I can interpret the will of God, the more I will be able to do the appropriate thing, no matter what happens. I feel that this is still true; and that, in reality, there is nothing to be feared. Is that right?

ABRAHAM: Exactly! Earth disaster or no disasters, it is the spiritual lessons that will sustain you in all things. Very good. Another question?

JON: You spoke of humankind's hostility. In my school, it seems to me that many of the students are very hostile to each other in words and actions. I was wondering if there is anything I could do or say to possibly influence them?

ABRAHAM: It is in my understanding that you already have. But I say to you, your attempting to assist your brothers and sisters into a more peaceful light is to take place on a small scale, one person at a time. This works like ripples in a pond. If you can reach one person by setting an example of your own kindness then you have done your job. By remaining steadfast and loyal to your inner beliefs do you show outwardly the same example that the Master set for His followers and apostles. Again I say, this hostility is mostly misunderstanding. If people could truly relate, honestly and openly, they would all understand that they are all children of God and equal with one another. While this hostility seems negative to you, it is perhaps, in reality, a positive learning experience –for you recognize this hostility and are willing to help. Others will also know the difference between hostility and flexibility because they have experienced it firsthand. Yes. Does this help? (Jon: Yes. Thank you.)

If there are no more questions, I should like to offer my humblest gratitude to each of you and send you forth into this week with my love and confidence. Until next week, shalom.

Extreme Sensitivity | Exercise In Uncrossing Our Wires For Greater Balance

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-13-1995

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome and I thank you for coming. It is my greatest privilege and pleasure to be here with you. It is my desire and assignment to lead you further into the Mansion World teachings. It has been my goal to assist you in the discovery of your true selves, your true origin. It is my goal for you – to discover your real self is of pure Spirit. For that reason, I have attempted to teach you – morontially.

Last week I taught a little on flexibility. To be flexible is to be accepting of Father's will and to remain open to intuitions. To be flexible is to remain unshaken by difficult events that may happen to cross your path, to be enabled with the morontial skills to handle any struggle that may occur. I am happy to declare that most here are indeed flexible and are accepting of what Father has in store for you.

Along with this flexibility, you need to practice courage. One that is able to 'roll with the tide' is more courageous for ignoring societal expectations. One needs to take a step towards bravery to come closer to the morontial skill of remaining flexible and fluid. It is my concern that I might explain a few things that you will likely experience – things which you may feel you are alone in.

With the upstepping of God-consciousness comes many branches of new learning. At times these branches can cross and cause confusion. One of these branches we may refer to is 'extreme sensitivity.' With the isolation on this planet at an end, and the re-encircuitment completed, Urantian's find themselves extremely sensitive in many areas – mind, body, and spirit. These sensitivities can cause you much concern and confusion, and possibly even fear.

What you are experiencing – the re-encircuitment, a re-connection to those caretakers of this world – is completely common to a world receiving full spiritual benefits. And this is why we ask you to practice the stillness. Practicing the stillness is a wonderful way to uncross your wires. To disconnect yourself from the world and reconnect with Father is a time for further instruction and understanding from Him. This sensitivity can be physical in the ways of electrochemical reactions (or interactions) within the brain; this is perfectly common for this world that is now experiencing being out of isolation, and for the first time discovering what it is like to have full spiritual benefits.

Do you see, the circuits and the electrochemical transmitters in the human brain all tie together. This is Father's original plan. This is how it was supposed to be all along. So many mortals often feel physical changes, such as extreme sensitivity to pain and changes in the material body.

With regard to the mind, the mortal mind also has become extremely sensitive to the ways of the world – the moral issues, and the complicated seemingly answerless solutions to worldly injustices. Those who are prone to this sensitivity are almost overly-emotional when they uncover injustices; it is as if they take on this injustice as their own. To be witness to injustices against their fellow brothers and sisters becomes painful and almost unbearable.

This is where there is some confusion. Those who witness such unfairness in your world ask: "Where is the God that is supposed to love and watch over us?" These moral virtues and societal injustices become a tangled web within the mortal mind.

Those that are feeling this extreme sensitivity are often angry and defensive, and wish to find immediate solutions; these mortals often are somewhat overly emotional. This is part of what I term 'a crossing of the wires.'

With regard to spirit, there is a spiritual rediscovery that this world has not experienced in many years. There is a spiritual awakening that is new – something which has not occurred on this planet since before the times of Adam and Eve. This world is experiencing a spiritual renaissance that has opened so many new possibilities to the curious Urantian mind.

Yes, mortals now experience a surge in spiritual feelings that have not been felt since the time of Pentecost when those that were gathered felt the Spirit of Christ poured out upon them. This is somewhat like that experience, in which you will know, you will experience, many new feelings; you will experience morontial mota, firsthand. With this new discovery of sensitivity to the cosmic mind, many again shall unintentionally cross their wires and perhaps go to unbalanced extremes. Many who are feeling and experiencing this God-consciousness for the first time may become overfilled with ideas and energy that could indeed lead them to possible dangers.

This is why we, the Teaching Staff, have requested you to practice the stillness – not long, five to ten minutes per day. This, to open a line of communication directly to your Father; to uncross your wires to remain balanced. This world has now experienced extreme sensitivities unlike ever before. It is important that you hang on to your life-raft that is this group, and stay in touch with your Father and His vast legions of helpers. As time passes, confusion about this new sensitivity will become so beneficial in your lives.

After this confusion passes, so many different areas will be affected by this new understanding of spiritual and mindal sensitivity. Understand that this is quite ordinary for a planet that is passing from isolation. This is nothing to be feared. This is something to be aware of and to consciously take time to understand.

It is my goal and assignment to assist you in discovering your full spirit potential. When Jesus was a boy, He was filled with curiosities that went beyond what His elders could explain. As time went by, He began to see a little more of His divine self. Every day, every year, He began to know who He really was; He had to come into the full realization that He was divine.

This is what I hope to teach you – you are not just flesh; you are also divine. This week I wish you to contemplate on this statement: "I am not just human, but also, divine. My brothers and sisters are also human and divine." I would believe myself an adequate Teacher if I could help you to understand that yes, you are not only human and mortal, but you are also divine and eternal. A few questions?

HONORAY: Father Abraham, I would like to ask a question; but before I ask I would like to officially welcome you to my home. I am so happy to have these meetings here now. I was thinking as you were talking about sensitivity, I can remember growing up as a child that I was so very sensitive on so many matters, and I think that I overcame a lot as I came into adulthood. Have you noticed much difference between the generations now (we old-timers you might say) that didn't have the problems these young people have? Is it harder for them to become more sensitive and fly off the handle than it is for some of us older people? Do you notice any difference?

ABRAHAM: That is very perceptive of you, Honoray. Yes, we have found the generations of the past did experience much more difficulties, much more physical labor, much more financial burdens, than do recent generations. We have found this older generation to become almost abrasive and be able to withstand much emotional experiences than would the younger generations. But on the other hand, we find that the younger generations are more open to new ideas, are more flexible to changes within the world. Does this help? (Honoray: Yes. Thank you.)

CALVIN: Abraham, when I was a kid, I remember feeling so devastated in rejection from a loved one or even from having a childhood crush on someone. This is a silly thing but I had an experience with it recently, and now I am age 40, and I think it ties in with your lesson: Maybe I am missing the point here but when I was a kid, when something inevitably happened and I felt it's not right, I'd get this big emotional sensitivity and go all off-balance where I couldn't think straight. As I grew older, I'd think, well I should grow out of that. Yet even now, I see people even older than me get tilted with this experience. What is this 'love thing' that we get too close to maybe, and get tilted easily if something doesn't go right? Is it some human problem, or what is this? My experience was okay and I learned from it, but the shocking thing is I know it still exists when I thought I would be over this type of pattern.

ABRAHAM: Love in relationships is almost like a narcotic. It can fill you with strange and euphoric feelings and may perhaps blind you to the person who you are in the relationship with. Once personality traits are discovered in one another, expectations are perhaps broken and you are disillusioned. This emotion of new love is temporary. If this love does not become on more of a deeper level, then this love is not a lasting love. Yes, sensitivity is on a higher level when you are not as familiar with someone as you would like to be – much pretense is allowed between two parties. This human 'love' between couples, especially at first, is highly sensitive and remains so for years. It is only after some of the self-centeredness has dissipated do couples become on a more stable level of love, and this love leaves more room for understanding one another and allowing your mate to make mistakes, allowing a partner to be mortal. Yes, this love needs to also be based upon a love for their Father in heaven. Also helpful in this is self-forgetfulness, which couples do not usually find until many years have passed. Does this help? (Calvin: Yes, very much. Thank you.)

HELEN: Father Abraham, I am not sure how to address the question. I don't want to appear to be sexist, but do you think the difference between men and women and their sensitivity, just being of male gender versus female gender, is having different chemical and hormonal makeup and whatnot? Sometimes it seems like – and it's not all men, and I don't want to sound prejudice here – that sometimes they just 'don't get it' on love; the parts of love and the importance of sensitivity. I admire the man I am with now very much for he shows the sensitivity – but is this just something that varies from person to person? Or is there a real difference between men and women? I hope that made sense.

ABRAHAM: Yes, yes. It is an internal difference but also a social difference. It has been said that "a real man does not wear his heart on his sleeve," meaning he does not show any emotion. It is this thinking over the many years that has alienated men from their sensitive emotional side. Men are equipped to be sensitive, yes, but at times their need for logic may perhaps block this sensitivity. This is perfectly understandable and natural. Blessed is the man who can find strength in his own sensitivity. Concerning 'female' sensitivity – due to several body changes, women are overly-sensitive. Women also have learned to thrive on this over-sensitivity to perhaps sway their male counterparts. This has been useful in the female struggle for equality. This is not an exact science, but it is the best I can do.

HELEN: Thank you. It is just that I believe that we all have the same potential. We are all equal. I keep hearing, "Well it is just the way men think – it's just a man thing." I am having a difficult time believing that because I believe we all have the same potential. If anything, it would be a societal influence, and they choose to use that. Is this correct?

ABRAHAM: Yes. This is correct. In the familiarizing of yourselves with this new world, men will learn that women accept them 'as they are' – they will no longer feel the need to hide their pain and sorrows. Likewise, with women – they will also be welcomed by men to be intellectual and accepted without having to be so emotional. Does this help? (Helen: Yes.) Abraham: Is there one more question?

JON: Father Abraham, just recently I have felt as if I am going through a big change, one that involves going from adolescence to adulthood. I was wondering if you could help me – is there any advice you could give me as to following the will of the Father as I am doing this?

ABRAHAM: Just a minute. I am informed that you are on the correct path. You search with an open mind. You intend to fully carry out your inner beliefs without hurting others. It is a difficult journey, this adolescence to adulthood, and one with many choices. So many paths there are to choose that may delay you from your spiritual opportunities. It is my information you are well balanced at this time, and your own inner Father Fragment guides you. And, I am told you listen very well. That is all. Linda, do you have a question?

LINDA: Yes. You said that as the circuitry of the planet has been opened and completely re-established, that it is connected directly with the electromagnetic impulses within our minds, our brains, physically. Is that what you meant? I guess I am asking the question because I wonder how the drugs that we take – the antidepressants, all of the things that affect the electromagnetic, electrochemical workings of our minds – how would it affect our connection with the circuitry? Did you mean that very literally?

ABRAHAM: It is physical in the sense of, for example, electricity – you cannot really see it but it is there, nonetheless. With this new sensitivity, many are mistaking their 'confusion' for 'depression' and are treating themselves with chemical substitutes. Yes, many drugs do cause certain alterations to your capability to receiving. But when mortals realize there is a God within that loves them for who they truly are, they have a good chance of not being dependent upon drugs, for they are learning to trust their Father who dwells within their very being. Yes, some drugs can affect certain connections with the circuits, but I say, this world is under a so-much-needed spiritual invasion, and nothing can stop our forward momentum.

And with that, I send you forth into the week reminding you to take a minute to uncross your wires and reconnect with Father. Until next week, shalom.

The Use of Charm To Diffuse Anger. The Master's Example
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-20-1995

I am ABRAHAM. It is my great privilege to meet with you this evening. I am pleased to be witness to your organizational skills. Yes, it is beneficial to have a certain amount of group focus. Last week I spoke of the strain that comes with planetary awakening. I spoke of the confusion that can happen while a planet is receiving full spiritual benefits. This sensitivity will become apparent in your fellows.

A certain amount of anxiety is inevitable when communicating with the unseen celestial realm, and when dealing with a new earthly existence. It is my purpose to help you in this adjustment. This world is feeling a great amount of spiritual pressure. This pressure can persuade many mortals to stand and awaken with fresh eyes; or, this pressure can cause mortals to be fearful and go against one another. You will find many of you will assist in guiding your fellows to open their eyes and see this new world laid out before them.

It is important when counseling mortal contacts that you attempt to truly understand what level they may be on and to understand what their mindset is. To state your beliefs boldly is to interject fear and cause your mortal contacts to flee. It is quite beneficial to imagine yourselves in the shoes of your mortal acquaintances. If you can understand your fellow mortals then can you best counsel them.

Jesus had such an honest straightforward attitude that He immediately gained the trust of those He spoke with. He was always with a happy and light countenance that He drew people (attracted people) to Him. But what might most stand out in the minds of mortals who met Jesus was His charming manner, He was endowed with a wonderful charm that naturally softened His mortal acquaintance's hearts.

The Master could reason with honesty and forthright charm in the face of anger and doubt. This charm was a gift He received from His Father in heaven. This gift, he discovered slowly, over time. As Jesus grew, He discovered that to best communicate with His fellows, it was most wise to use this gift of charm and kindness. This charm was a sincere love He radiated to His fellows. This charm was not used for deception to perhaps win souls for the kingdom, no! this charm came forth from the Master's honest love for His brothers and sisters.

Right now in this world, the hostility is almost overpowering. Too many souls operate on anger, and this anger ripples out from this world like waves. This anger is felt by we who endeavor to assist you. We would like to teach our mortal students to better relate with their mortal contacts. It is our goal to help teach you that you, my children, are not only human but also divine. It is our goal to help you discover your true selves and the personalities that created you. It is our goal to teach you the skills to relate with your fellows and send you with these skills out into your immediate world.

We have found anger to be too easy for mortals to succumb to its lure. It is such a natural emotion among the animal kingdom. To those with survival personality, survival potential, we are asking you to strive not to seek the easy route of anger. I understand this is difficult and sometimes uncontrollable, but also I say, this emotion of anger is easily mastered if you make it your goal.

Upon becoming angered, it is wise to stop and ask your inner Father Fragment: "Help me, Father, I am unsure of what to do next." It is also wise to visualize the Master in your position and think about how He would handle such a situation. Jesus was the master of many things. Mastering the art of communication was His specialty. He knew the hearts of His human contacts. He endeavored to understand His fellow's mindset.

Jesus, through simple communication, learned to understand on which level to relate to His fellows. He was always honest and could be relied upon to be straightforward with His friends, yes, but the key to winning His fellow's hearts was His loving charm. His show of sincere concern for His fellows opened the door to communication, and it was then and there that He revealed to these fellows the idea of the 'kingdom of God.' Through His sincere and loving charm. He was able to minister to His fellows, and they in turn lovingly responded to Him.

I would make my plea to you that although it is seemingly easier to take the route of anger I would ask you to endeavor to, instead, take the path of charm and sincere kindness. This is not only helpful to your fellows but allows your mind to be at ease for clearer communication and assistance from celestial beings.

Jesus was born as you were born. He knew not of His divinity for some time. Once He discovered His divinity, He embraced it wholeheartedly and learned to rely on His Heavenly Father each day. I say to you, you shall soon see your divinity in a new light; and I would say, hesitateneot to embrace it. Are there questions?

CALVIN: This was a wonderful lesson for me. Like most of these lessons, Abraham, I am sure you know that they come out 'word-for-word slowly' and they make more meaning when we read them back again. Perhaps we'll have some questions about this lesson next week, even. We are planning to discuss these lessons before the meeting and even after if we have time. I can see clearly that what you are doing is trying to help us be more sensitive, more in touch with the morontial and celestial assistance that is around us. And, that this new circuitry can connect us all wherein we come to realize your reality, your existence, on the plane that you and your realm do exist just as much as we, being in a material body, exist.

ABRAHAM: Yes. You are correct. It is my goal, as said. And the overall benefits are much greater to the cosmic mind and the growth of the Supreme Being. Have you more to question?

CALVIN: Per your lesson tonight – in my new life as a student in learning, I feel I've been getting real one-sided into these teachings and Ham's prior teachings regarding how I should react compared to the way I have always reacted. I see now that my pattern in reacting has been in an over-serious and not very charming way. And maybe now I am more the other way, the flip side, in my relationships – probably too one-sided in the opposite way with an 'anything goes' and 'whatever' attitude. So I see from your lesson that I could use perhaps a touch of charm or humor more often here and there, yes, but I perceive there has got to be a balance. Can you advise me on that, please?

ABRAHAM: Yes. You are in understanding. With the mind set on overcoming negative with the positive, you can overcome many personal aggravations. You keep your mind set on the positive while you focus not on how others may have wronged you. It is with this use of charm that you are practically shielded from other's negativity. With the practice of this charm, you are becoming a soldier of truth, beauty, and goodness. I would think it wise of all of you to review some of the Master's experience with people as recorded in the Urantia Book. Does this help? (Calvin: Yes, very much. Thanks.)

ELLEN: Abraham, I was wondering is this awakening you speak of – is this going to be a slow and gradual thing? or is this going to be a sudden God-conscious awareness that is going to happen? Will we be aware when it happens?

ABRAHAM: You are already aware. It is happening. It may appear slow to the mortals of the realm, but to us that are not time-bound, it is as it should be. We must attempt to reach what mortals we can. Some choose to answer readily – and some, we ask you, our students, to help reach. As you can see, it is a team effort. Know that this awakening is gradual at times, and overwhelming at other times. Everyone not aware in this age will be quite astounded in the ages to come. This 'new,' may be too abrupt of change for them now. It is Father's way to not shock his children, but a gradual transition – which is a lasting transition. This awakening will be so natural to the youth – it will be for them as natural as it is on a planet that has not experienced rebellion and isolation. Does this help? (Ellen: Yes. Thank you.)

CLAIREESA: Father Abraham, I am real confused about using charm instead of anger. What do you do with the anger? Does it just go away? Do you deal with the anger some other way? I feel real lucky to have just figured out that I am angry, and maybe what I am angry about, let alone try to be charming about it.

ABRAHAM: In dealing with your fellows – those that tend to grate upon your nerves – to be shielded from them by charm is to assist and generate positivity within your own mind, yes, a charm in dealing with your fellow mortals. Anger held within, is not positive. With that said, all anger is not negative; some is very constructive in understanding yourself and others. When I suggest holding up the shield of charm against those who hurt you is to repel the negativity from them and from yourself. Yes, the anger many times does dissipate. This is what the Master taught – to overcome evil with good. I understand you to be on a correct path with your discovery of yourself. Continue in the same direction. You do well. Another question?

HONORAY: Father Abraham, I have something that I could share with the group; maybe you could agree with it, I hope, because I found it true. In our psychology classes we learned that our subconscious doesn't have an escape hatch. If you hold your anger in, hold your resentment in, it will get you down just like putting a lid on a garbage can, and then it has got to finally explode. So we were taught to vent our anger a little bit at a time – but not at somebody else; rather, to go where somebody can't hear you and scream, yell, or whatever. I found out that that works pretty good, and it releases anger. Do you find that also true? Do you think that we can't just swallow anger and get rid of it, but we have to release it?

ABRAHAM: Yes. You are correct. These rituals of ridding ones-self of frustration, can help release this anger. I would also suggest – to communicate this anger with a friend is to put this anger in plain view, and be able to dissect and understand where this anger stems from. Yes, we understand this is a world with much confusion; and much anger and fear stems from this confusion. In balancing with the scales of sensitivity, you will begin to understand your fellows, and they will understand you; and the anger will decrease. Yes, much of this anger is from incorrect perception. Does this help? (Honoray: Yes. Thank you.)

CALVIN: I just want to make a comment. I have seen a major change where I work in the last few years. I don't really know what is causing it except maybe this thing in the air – the circuits opening, perhaps. Our Saturday sales meetings are almost like a church session. Last week we had a little discussion, the general manager talked about 'are we worthy of God's love and are we willing to love and share with one another,' so on and so on. That's not like the car dealership I knew beginning in 1989. Do you have an overview of that?

ABRAHAM: Yes. It is a part of this awakening. It is happening in small groups – doctors with patients; teachers with students; corporate executives with customers and employees. Yes, this is wonderful, and your discussing this helps spread the good news and generates positive feelings of hope. Yes, it is time for the children of Urantia, all children, to stop being so afraid of their own divinity within, and to have no fear of the changes that will come to this world. If everyone fully believed that they are a divine being, closely connected with heaven, they would know that heaven is not a-far off.

I look forward to these meetings with you. You are a great source of joy and love to me in this branch of my family tree. I am in awe of your strength and determination to carry on. I am honored to co-work with you in this, our Creator Son's Correcting Time. Until next week, shalom.

Anger, The Leading Cause of Declining-Health | Learning To Tame Anger
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-27-1995
Back

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings and welcome to all. I am overjoyed to be witness to your interaction and fellowship. I am thankful you have found focus within your group. You have discussed my lesson on the value of genuine charm. You know not how your discussion in this group does propel your spiritual growth; you know not how your discussions link you with the cosmic mind.

I say to you, your interactions on spiritual values are not only of benefit to you personally, but they also link your circle of light to the cosmic mind. I am saying, this growth not only benefits you personally, it also enhances the growth of the Supreme Being. I realize this subject on charm is somewhat confusing. Yes, insincere charm feels deceptive; but as you have read, this charm that the Master possessed was genuine, yes, and stemmed from the love He held for His fellows.

In this lesson on charm, I suggest that further study on the Master's life may be of assistance. Jesus taught that to have a real and genuine love for your fellow brothers and sisters it is essential to attempt to understand them. "The more you understand your fellows, the more you love them," said He; and the more natural will this charm appear. The lesson on sincere charm is somewhat secondary to the major subject I am instructed to focus on - anger.

Anger is the leading cause of declining health in your world today. Anger is one of the most misunderstood emotions mortals face. From anger stems so many branches that it becomes difficult to define anger. Most of mortal anger occurs through misunderstanding, through wrong perception. If the children of this world could be truly honest, the anger would lessen by approximately seventy-five percent.

Through sincere truth-seeking do mortals begin to understand one another. By taking a step toward courage, toward truth, do we begin to feel at home in the world. How sad it is that a people who are so much the same, hide, as though they are from different worlds. How sad it is for mortals to hide behind the mask of ego. How sad it is to view a world so unforgiving toward one another, toward their own kind - humankind.

There is seemingly no room for mistakes in the minds of mortals; no room for self-mistakes, or errors on the part of others. It seems so easy to quickly sum up a total being (personality, mind, soul), and label this total sum as insufficient, inadequate - when in truth, when you dwell in a material body; you are not meant to be complete. You could say 'all are insufficient;' or, you could say 'all are in the process of becoming.'

If you could view your fellows and yourself as becoming, there would be room made for unintended error, room made for mortal mistakes. In the throes of your next experience in anger say to yourself, "We are all children of the First Source and Center and we are all becoming; we all are acquiring Paradise potential." With this new understanding are you able to leash your anger and understand that mortals require room for error.

With this newly re-encircuited world, emotions are confused and used for selfish gain. It is time for mortals to understand they truly do have the power to master their emotions, thoughts, and mortal struggles. It is said, the mortal who can create anger can also tame it; you are not beings haphazardly strewn together. I say this with authority, you, my friends, were carefully planned and loved from the very beginning.

It is our Father's wish that you love one another as He loves you. It is not hard to understand someone in whose shoes you have been. And I would ask you, even though you may not understand another, you may still make your best effort to imagine yourself in their shoes, in their position. There is peace in understanding. Yes. Have you questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, thanks for the brilliant layout of this lesson on anger. Hopefully we will take a look at this in our lives and as we become angry, we can instead begin to dissect it out to see how we could diffuse it, per your lesson. Very, very helpful for me anyway. I would like to welcome and introduce Bob, mine and John's friend from work. (Abraham: Welcome.) Calvin: This week, Abraham, we saw this new movie called 'Powder.' Your lesson tonight talks quite a bit about the same premise as in the movie. If people here haven't seen it – the guy in the movie was far beyond our time, as a human; and it was enlightening how he didn't show anger. In the movie it depicts some mortals as quite animalistic and cruel in this world. This superior human ("Powder" person) was far beyond the natural human emotions, and the movie shows how his fellows just kind of picked him to pieces because he was different. I can see maybe what happened to Jesus when He was here being a far superior human, and how they just picked Him to pieces till they eliminated Him because of their anger. Have you comments on the production of that movie and, how well that was put together and brought into this world for many people to see? I guess it was the fourth most watched movie in history this last week.

ABRAHAM: Yes. Lessons in anger are not so intensively taught on advanced worlds. These beings have evolved so far ahead that with each generation, anger becomes more and more unrecognized. Even within the educational system on the Mansion Worlds it is not necessary – for you see, gone is the material body, and gone is the tendencies to be animal-like. It is mostly through your human struggles here, that you learn about anger and its effects. It is closely related to the animal kingdom, yes. It is a basic inherited instinct in which, over the period of your mortal life, do you learn to either tame, or not to tame. I do not make light of this emotion. This is very real and can be very painful. I do not, in any way, put you down with animals, so to speak. I am extremely familiar with the emotion of anger; and I understand, as does Father, completely. You are perceptive in and of the changes taking place within the minds of mortals and the outworkings therefrom. Another question?

HONORAY: As I look at the difference between when I was growing up, to now; it seems like one place where anger is so prevalent these days is in our traffic. I know you are aware of the problems, the traffic situation. And it seems like nowadays, the way to solve a problem – if one gets cut off in traffic, you know, they take a gun out and blow you away. That must be so hard to see this among us! Do you, as supernals, see that that propensity might come to an end? and about how soon do you think? Do you think there will be a solution to this in our day?

ABRAHAM: The decision lies within the minds of mortals. Some things have to become quite atrocious before they will be given attention. Some things have to become extremely violent before someone will speak up and demand this to be handled. I too hope that this topic of which you speak will also improve; but I say, it is mostly up to those who are involved. I do pray that it does not have to become much worse before action is taken. Another question?

CALVIN: On that note, what you just answered ties in together – you said that anger is a negative emotion; but yet when something has to be done for a correction, it seems that until someone stands up and demands it, and with some indignation perhaps, a change may not get done. In this regard I am thinking that if we use charm about this, maybe the issue won't even get attention. Maybe some controlled anger is needed? How would you address that, to get attention in getting things changed – is there a place for violence and anger?

ABRAHAM: The man Jesus often portrayed an angry attitude when in fact, He was at the very core of His desire for justice. There was not much that could shake the man Jesus, but at times His sincere desire for truth drove Him to take action. And at times this firm action appeared to be out of anger. But, no, this was not anger – this was His genuine inner desire for truth and justice and the will of the Father. I do not label all action, all passionate action, as 'anger.' There are many things that would drive the minds of mortals, and what may be termed as anger may be, in fact, a sincere desire for truth and fair distribution of justice – this would be what I would term as a positive action rather than displaying anger and rage. No, not all action can be labeled as anger. Some action is given as a gift from Father to provide lesson-enhancement on the spiritual values of mortal existence. Is this confusing?

CALVIN: No, it's not confusing to me. I can see some situations where some directed anger is needed, as you say. It is far more clear to me now. For instance, where a mother's child is hit by a drunk driver. I'm pretty certain she is not going to go use some charm on the situation to make the laws stricter and people more aware. She is going to use some displayed honest anger. I really think there needs to be a different word than anger. It could be very helpful in that situation. There are a lot of situations I can conceive of where anger could be a constructive thing in order to make change, perhaps an honest anger helps toward bravery to stand up and do something about things that need a change. (Abraham: Yes, exactly. Another question?)

CLAIREESA: Father Abraham, this is kind of off the subject a little bit, but next week our whole office is going to spend a whole day discussing teamwork and communication. Can you offer anything that would help us in our discussions on that day?

ABRAHAM: Yes. One suggestion that could prove positive would be for all to lose their pretense of one another; to remove the mask of false insecurity; to truly learn to be yourself and be glad with that. Yes, to be accepting of your co-workers' true selves. The work arena is an excellent example of human interaction – mortals attempting to learn to work toward a common goal. It is time for people to say: "This is who I really am. I accept you as you, as who you really are. I would find it wonderful if you would accept me." To work in an office that is free from condemnation is an office that would produce top quality workmanship. Yes, this word 'teamwork' could also be termed another way – 'family.' For co-workers to treat one another as a family member is to produce an atmosphere of liberty and creative thinking. I find you as one already knowing whereof I speak, and are highly skilled at teaching. I would not only communicate this message with my co-workers, I would attempt to live it. To live by example is a wonderful inspiration for co-workers to witness on a daily basis. Does this help? (Claireesa: Very much. Thank you.)

Abraham: You're welcome.

My words are slipping. I would choose to take my leave as I wish you a productive week in learning the skills to aid you in taming your anger. My love be with you all. Until next week, shalom.

Embrace Your Mortal Self | Learn From Our Mistakes and Rejoice In Knowing You Are Father`s Child

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. I am helping you to adjust to our mind-to-mind communication. I am attempting to not only speak with material voice but also to each of you, mindally. It is my great pleasure to know each of you. I must say, I find you easy to know and love. You, my friends, are adorable in my eyes; I find it easy to love you each. You know little about how adored you each are to us and to those on high.

I would think myself a wise Teacher to be able to educate you on your value as a child of God. I have taught you on the negative effects of anger, how detrimental it is to the material body. I have spoken on anger directed outward toward others and the negative effects that escalate from that. One thing I have learned - much of the anger you perceive to be directed at another is, in reality, anger at yourself. You can believe yourself to be angry at others and tend to lay blame onto others when in truth this is a covering up of the anger you feel for yourself.

At times, mortals tend to be angry at their own ignorance or thoughtlessness or rash decision-making; there seems to be little room for self-understanding; there seems to be no self-forgiveness. There is much self-debasement and chastisement, but very little understanding that you each are individually 'becoming' - there is very little understanding that you each are a learning child of God.

There is much competition in this world today. Many believe: 'To be the most valued in society you must be perceived as blameless, you must be looked upon as being error-free.' Also do many believe: 'To be valued you must be the most knowledgeable.' This is where an imbalance lies - within 'competition.' In this competition, one works to make others seem less valuable. This is unhealthy competition; and those that believe themselves to be of less value are holding much self-hatred and anger.

Yes, mortals that believe themselves to be inferior tend to beat upon their every human mistake, which is a negative cycle of self-abuse. One who tends to believe themselves as un-valuable, surely does not envision themselves as a child of God. I say, it is wonderful to be born of the Spirit, to believe there dwells within the human mind a supreme consciousness that encompasses all knowledge. To believe in this divine Source is only half complete. Without truly believing you are the created offspring of this divine Source, you won't be completing the process of being born of the Spirit.

Many mortals live their life as though they do not matter or make any difference. Once a mortal has discovered that Father in heaven is real, and loves them more than words can express, then does this mortal long for closeness to Father. Yes, sometimes a mortal born of the Spirit longs for this closeness to Father so deeply that they begin to detest their mortal state; they do not fully live and learn in their mortal state for they are longing for what lies beyond.

Mortals so often berate themselves for being mortal, for making mortal errors. They may feel: "Without this mortal body, I would not make so many mistakes." With this thinking, they learn to be miserable in their mortal state and waste so much time detesting their time in the flesh. But I tell you here tonight, your mortal state is a gift. Your time in the flesh is something so personal and precious. To be anchored with your material body is to receive eternal lessons that otherwise you would not receive.

Many overlook their own personal joy they could receive while in the flesh. Many born of the Spirit tend to say: "I cannot wait to see what lies beyond this mortal life," when in fact, if you are believing yourself a child of God you can see what lies beyond this life, right now in this life. Do not detest your mortal state, embrace it and believe this is a true blessing. Once you 'embrace' your life in a material world, a material body, you yearn to celebrate, to rejoice in the knowledge that Father has placed you in a very honorable position.

Once you can begin to believe your mortal state is a blessing, you can make room for your own mistakes and know you are a child that is becoming. Once you can accept you are with error (and understand all mortals are likewise with error) you can begin a process of self-forgiveness, which, in turn, can dissipate your self-anger and loathing. I say to you, this is your only time to really feel what it is like in the mortal state – you will not be at this moment in time again. Must this moment be filled with self-anger and unforgiveness? Or can this moment be filled with self-understanding and rejoicing in the fact that Father has blessed you at this moment in time?

Yes, use this time wisely because I say this time will not be back. Waste not a moment longer on beating yourself with what you deem to be punishment for unwise actions taken. Don't waste another moment trying to atone for your errors. I say, embrace your mortal state. Learn from your mistakes and rejoice in the fact that you truly believe you are a child of God. Are there questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, last night I remember laying by the fireplace and the thought came to my head – I was talking with a friend about the short time since our birth in relation to our existence forever – which is like a speck of nothing as compared to 'forever time.' And yet, how much importance we seem to place on these things that make us angry and stressful. We seem to always be with the thinking that 'time is running out so we have to hurry.' In reality, we have barely started. We are like not even babies yet in comparison to forever-time; yet we somehow seem to think we have to get everything right, and feel so bad if it isn't going right. I think that quite ties in with what you are saying here.

ABRAHAM: Yes, well said. Much time is wasted on 'self-battering' when, instead, one could spend time in a positive state of understanding and love. To spend time in a positive state propels you forward to the next lesson. Time spent in self-debasement is like adding wood to a fire, feeding and keeping the self-loathing alive. Another question?

ROLAND: Abraham, in the 'western psychology' there is the thinking that much of our self-degradation, or the patterns of self-degradation, is perhaps because of our upbringing; perhaps our educational systems; perhaps our traditional religions. How is it best to release those old patterns of thought, and to adopt a positive outlook more toward your way of teaching?

ABRAHAM: The best way I could tell you to release old patterns is to recognize 'that they do occur.' One who has experienced these patterns knows the difference between them being experienced 'firsthand' or just hearing about these patterns secondhand. Once you have experienced them, and begin to recognize their occurrence, then can you begin to re-focus your attention toward a more positive way of caring for your soul. It is our hope that parents, teachers, caretakers, and government officials, know that self-loathing is not a correct form of education. To teach a child to be harsh and unforgiving towards their mistakes is to teach them that this is the way that Father in heaven must be - and I say, Father does not teach with these methods. I say, it is upon the shoulders of this generation of adults to recognize their self-anger and self-loathing, and to correct their own mind patterns. It is also up to this generation to teach their young that all are valuable; all are acceptable; and all require love. Is this answering? (Roland: It does help. Thank you.)

HELEN: Abraham, I have a couple questions. My sister-in-law in Michigan was asking us about dreams. I forgot about it until I was thinking about how much time, with your lesson, how much time we waste trying to understand things. She has been having this dream about this big old house, and it is a reoccurring dream. She keeps having it over and over and it's the same except each time there is more detail to it. She feels like there is something evil in this house. She has been reading the Urantia Book and your lessons and whatnot, and is asking Marlin and myself what this might mean. My understanding is that we shouldn't try to interpret dreams because they are kind of like in metaphors, and we shouldn't waste a lot of time trying to interpret them because sometimes they are communications that are trying to come through, yes, but when they are coming through, in the electrical/chemical manner through our brain, it can be distorted and whatnot. Can you shed some light on this?

ABRAHAM: That is correct. Yes, this dream is a rather common dream for all mortals. If she is not receiving insight regarding this dream then I would advise her to worry not. Positive insight from dreams is acceptable to take as correct messages from Father. If a dream has assisted you in human or divine ways, I would say this is good. Does this answer?

HELEN: Yes, it helps. Then not all dreams should be disregarded? There are dreams that could have good information if they are in a positive way? and if they are not - if they are in more of a negative or confusing way - they are to be disregarded? Am I correct in that? (Abraham: Yes.) Helen: My other question: I was speaking with a friend of mine and she is in a same-sex relationship. She has been battling with this on how to not hide this with her family and with others. In my talking to her this evening I was saying that, for myself, I believe that if your love and intent is true, then 'sex' doesn't matter. I expressed that as long as there are no hurtful or harmful things going on in their relationship that their relationship would be good, yes. But more than anything – not to waste a lot of her time and energy and efforts into trying to mask over or dwell on the negative from the social point of view. I felt a little reluctant because I am no authority on this topic. Could you shed some light on that? Am I correct in that thinking? I don't want to say that 'God says homosexuality is acceptable' if it is not, but I think it is more along the lines of He would like it to be opposite sex relationships for the reason of procreation. This is a subject that keeps coming my way, and I am wondering why it does keep coming my way – am I not thinking correctly on this? Am I offering the correct information?

ABRAHAM: Your answer to that person was wonderful, very unbiased and correct. Love is most important, yes, but this person also has to live in a society where being different is not accepted. This person has to reap the ramification of disclosing her sexuality. It is up to this person to know who would be accepting and who would not. I believe mortals like this are, in a way, tormented by their secrets – and yet, somehow kept from harm. It would be wise to focus on this statement: A person is not their job, status, or sexuality. People are first, a child of God. Is this helping? (Helen: Yes, I think so.) Abraham: One more question?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I would like to go back to the dreams about big old houses. Years ago, when I was about sixteen years old, I dreamed I was in a big old house. To this day I can still see it. I remember the room arrangement. I remember how many rooms we had to go through to where we turned to go up the stairs to the second floor. I remember the room arrangement on the second floor. I had never been through it at that time. At a later date when I needed to borrow an old-fashioned dress for a school play I was in, I went up to what happened to be my aunt's house (that is what we all called her – she wasn't really my aunt); she took me through the house, through the rooms, and up the stairway – right to where I had dreamed was the exact spot where she got the clothing. That is still vivid in my mind today, Father Abraham. At that time, I certainly didn't know anything about my indwelling Spirit or who could be helping me. But I have had quite a few experiences like that in my lifetime.

ABRAHAM: This may seem strange to you, but I say, it is not strange at all. Occurrences as this will begin to happen more and more without any thought to the extraordinary. This is a part of the mind-to-mind communication. Mindal communications will be indeed upstepped and thought of by mortals as ordinary occurrences. You see, a world receiving full spiritual benefits are accepting these happenings to be from Father as 'for their good.' Yes, more experiences of this sort will you all be witness to. Are there any more questions?

CALVIN: Well, a friend of mine wanted me to ask you why she feels so insecure – maybe that is why you're asking if there's another question; so if you have an answer for her, I'll take it back to her.

ABRAHAM: She could answer this better than I could. She holds the answers within. She knows her life experience and she can very well trace the roots of her insecurity. Insecurity is also an avenue for Father. Tell her to ask for assistance from Him and I guarantee her a sufficient answer.

It is my time to leave. This week I would hope you all attempt to embrace your mortal state, and by so doing you will see that what you long to see is right in front of your eyes. Until next week, shalom.

The Giver Of Comfort Stands By | We Need Not Traverse The Waters Of Adversity Alone
Abraham & Christ Michael, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-11-1995

I am ABRAHAM. I am happy to meet with you this evening. I am excited by your willingness to communicate with me and, each other, and to keep the flame in our torch lit which continues to light these truths in our Teaching Mission. Without your dedication and desire for Father's will, the steps towards Light and Life would be much more steep. I am thankful for our contact and our friendship.

The lessons on anger are difficult, yes, you still have much to learn. I am happy to continue to assist you in the ways of mastering the self. I understand you all are much more aware of your anger patterns; this awareness is a giant step towards mastering your emotional human side. The Master wishes to speak.

MICHAEL: My greetings to each, I am here by your request. I am personally reaching out to each of the branches on our family tree that is this Correcting Time. You, my children, have endured much inner-turmoil and have overcome many interactive difficulties with one another. I am in understanding of your concerns. Doubt not that I know you strive to assist me in this upstepping of a so-called backward planet.

You, my children, are to be commended for your willingness and dedication to my Father and myself. This road we travel will not be for the weak or the halfhearted believers. This road we travel has been designed to hold the footprints of those that refuse to quit, those that refuse to lie down and be overtaken by their human difficulties. You who have maintained our circle of light do not struggle in vain. Doubt not that your efforts are well known and appreciated.

This evening, I come here for one reason - to make it known that I am available; you need not traverse the waters of adversity alone. Think not on "How can I do this?" but rather, think: "With Father all things are possible," even that which you cannot fully fathom. And, you can trust I am with you. I am one who can assist you in your mental and spiritual energies and emotions. I am the giver of peace. I am the giver of comfort. I will proclaim to you as well as to other worlds that I shall not fail you. Trust that your world is in the hands of those who carefully watch over and love this world as if it was the only world. Carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. We are honored to be in the presence of one that radiates pure love. It is in my information that many are unknowing who to direct their petitions. I say to you, this is the purpose for Michael's message. He asks you to call on Him in that moment when anger has overtaken your sensibility. The giver of comfort stands by.

It is my goal to reach each one of you – to relate to you the message that you are a child of God. It is my goal that you believe this to be true about yourself, personally. Embrace this status. Yes, you must come into the realization that God, our Father, knows you and completely understands. He asks that you acknowledge your son- or daughtership to Him. I say, to fully experience being born of the spirit you must see yourself as a child of the First Great Source and Center.

This week, I recommend that you come to some understanding on the meaning of your role as a child of God. What does this mean? My second recommendation is that you keep in the forefront of your mind to call upon Christ Michael when you are experiencing uncontrollable emotions, such as anger. I say to you, it is not strange that the Creator of a universe would assist with human difficulties; I tell you this has always been so. A few questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, it is surely the highest honor to have our Creator/Father/Brother address us. If we were to consciously realize the actuality of that, I think we possibly would be consumed in our human body, here and now. We must not really realize what is going on, or not letting it soak in, because obviously, we are not consumed. Does that make any sense?

ABRAHAM: Yes. It is thought of by mortals that Michael is too great of a presence to know about personal human suffering; that while wars rage on in parts of the world, 'why would Michael tend to assist someone experiencing anger or inner confusion.' Mortals do not fully understand that with the assistance of the Creative Mother Spirit, He, Michael, is not bound. He is not like one being, one presence, that travels from problem to problem. Michael is like the wind – the wind can be everywhere and yet, still moving, still having an effect. What I would like to help you to understand is that communication with Michael is not strange or overwhelming. It is deeply personal and makes the way for changes. Another question?

ROLAND: I'd like to express my gratitude about His presence here tonight. It is an important time for me. And I would like to know what you would have me do in this near future – I guess what you would have us do to become more conscious of His presence among us?

ABRAHAM: You all are receiving morontial instruction and it is a lot to absorb and put to work in your life. I would say, this group's focus right now is to absorb these teachings and utilize them in your personal life, teaching these skills along the way to others. To best open up to Michael is to truly desire His presence, His counsel. To know that you are using your human resources and desire Michael's presence for direction and peace is cause to rejoice. Michael is present here tonight in part because there is a group desire for His presence. Yes, it is said, He knows what is in your heart. One more question?

JEANA: Abraham, this is more on a personal matter, but it is something that has been bothering me. If there is anything that you can say that might be able to help me out, I would appreciate it. I just need some advice what to do about my recent breakup with my boyfriend and him not wanting to see me again. It is so crushing... [the rest of the question was inaudible.]

ABRAHAM: It is obvious this is painful. What I would like to inquire from you is: 'What is your true desire?' Then consider: 'Why is this your true desire?' – and you need to be completely honest with yourself. Patterns that have accumulated during the course of one's lifetime can create many difficulties concerning relationships. You must understand why – what you are feeling, and why you are feeling this. I cannot tell you to follow your heart because at times the heart can be deceiving. I must advise you to filter your heart's information into your intelligence system. Know this, my daughter, you are a child of God, and this is all you need to be. You need not compromise your inner feelings for another's approval. You are complete as you are, and the love of others cannot add to your completion. The love of others does so often fail you on a human level, but I say, your acceptance of your daughtership in the kingdom is proof that you need not live up to anyone's expectations. Yes, you are a unique personality. You need not apologize for that. You need not change. To keep your eyes upon the giver of all comfort is to stand bravely and face your pain without fear.

I am in awe of the love I feel for you each – those present and those absent. I will meet with you again next week. Shalom.

We Learn Most

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-18-1995

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you. I am filled with enthusiasm and hope as I witness you all here tonight. I am overjoyed by your welcoming attitudes and your sense of family togetherness. I ask you, this past week did you remember to call upon the giver of peace and comfort during those times when anger has overcome your rationality?

It is most effective to think of the Master and ask for His assistance during those times of anger. It is most fitting to release your subject of anger to Michael and wait upon Him to re-sculpture this anger, and give back to you a clearer thinking, problem-solving attitude and mind. Yes, anger is such a controlling emotion; at times it controls you and you feel helpless against its grip. To call on the Master is to regain control over the issues of anger. This subject will be a long time in learning how to master it.

During this festive season, it is quite easy for mortals to experience a full and colorful rainbow of emotions. Many are caught up in the purchasing of material goods so as to fulfill some emptiness or an attempt to communicate their love to others.

Some of your fellows experience stress and anxiety beyond your comprehension and completely miss the reason of this time of celebration. Some mortals become overwhelmed by their feelings of emptiness; perhaps they are without family or companionship; perhaps they are let down by things that were expected to give them fulfillment.

Much emphasis has been lost on the purpose for this time of celebration. Yes, many mortals do celebrate the birth of Christ – some do spread goodwill and extend their hand in brotherhood. I say, most of the spirit of this season has been made to sit in a department store window and advertise to mortals - that true happiness can be purchased.

I say to you, my associates and I will take full advantage of the season trying to reach as many hearts as possible. We would truly desire an attitude of goodwill to persist all year long, but many times the attitude of goodwill disappears with the rushing of everyday life. With this rushing of life, many opportunities are missed opportunities to plant the seeds of God-consciousness; opportunities to fellowship and truly reach out to a soul that possibly just needs to talk.

Where your focus is, is the yardstick which will measure your amount of spiritual intake. If you are focused on material goods, for example, this will block your inlet of spiritual experience. To focus on anything other than the sharing - fellowshiping and service with your fellow mortal friends, family, and co-workers - is to miss spiritual opportunity and experience.

You understand not the importance of your contact with one another. Coming here to learn from these teachings is only a small part of your spiritual education. I say to you, through your acquaintances and fellowshiping with one another are you expanding your spiritual ideals. Through your communication do your fellows know you, and you, them. Through your patience and understanding do you feel at liberty to be open and honest and accepted by each other.

Yes, these teachings are but a small part. It is your friendship and dedication to each other that can move mountains. It is in your communicating that you understand your friends may require assistance - or, be able to assist you. If you choose not to share your human experiences, then you cannot expect your fellows to understand.

Your friendship is like the ocean - the water may circulate and go in different directions, and some may evaporate or perhaps be washed on the shore and on to other beaches; but I say, the ocean is deep and wide, and no one can separate the water from the water. I say to you, your friendship is the ocean - and together, your faith can support a ship. Through you, and through all you know, you continually feed each other - faith, and love, and the desire to be God-like.

It is through your human contacts that you will learn the most. This 'mortal interaction' is not a class that you can skip, no, but a required course for all of Father's children. It is through your giving and receiving of communication that will assist you in this course of human interaction.

The Master was highly skilled in this area; He was not easily manipulated by others; He was not afraid to be Himself around others; He did not allow shyness to overtake Him. Jesus was a gentle man, and yet in His eyes, people could see His enthusiasm for life; He let no one stop Him from experiencing His zest for this life.

Be not lost in the quick pace of this mortal life. Remember Jesus, the Master, performed some of His greatest works 'as He passed by' His fellow mortals. He was a man genuinely concerned for all of Father's children, and His contagious joy spread to those He touched with His kind words. Have you questions?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I'll ask one. It is not concerning your lesson tonight. On Saturday, on television, they had what was supposed to be a show about your life's history. First: I'd like to know if you saw it? Secondly: I would like to know if it was fairly accurate, or not? Thirdly: I would like to know if the way they portrayed you, Abraham, if you look anything like you looked in your mortal life?

ABRAHAM: I would ask you, what was your thoughts on this?

RACHEL: My thoughts were that it was a spiritual show. It was a God-loving and worshipping show on your part, and on your followers' part. On the other hand, there was cruelty. You know what I thought!

ABRAHAM: There have been many portrayals of my life's history; I am familiar with some. I cannot vouch for the authenticity of these earthly accounts. I am permitted, however, to teach of the spiritual experiences in my life – just as the Master did; it was important that His apostles relay His message and the experiences that pertained to the spiritual kingdom. I am not permitted to give a lot of details about my life unless they assist you, spiritually. My daughter, you have spoken of the most important factor of this spiritual story, and that is – it made you feel spiritual and focused your mind on Father. History can be very interesting; but I must say, draw the good from history what you have learned, and make that stand at the forefront of your mind. As to my appearance, you shall know this personally at some time when we are to meet face to face. Is this acceptable?

RACHEL: Yes, it is. I'll tell you, for several years I have had a mindal picture of you and Father Ham, both of you; and you are completely different. And I know that you and I speak mindally because you're using me as a switch-box in order to get to Joshua and get messages to him.

ABRAHAM: Yes. I doubt not that you are aware of many things. Can you testify that your life experience has assisted you in your inner knowledge? (Rachel: Yes sir, I can.) Abraham: Is there another question?

HONORAY: Father Abraham, I guess I am just as curious as Rachel because when I see a lot of the pictures that we have of the twelve apostles, the oldest one was only thirty-three, which was Andrew, and yet, they are all portrayed as older men. It is a natural curiosity that all of us have, so I guess that is just the part of us that we're curious about. We do value your lessons very much and appreciate your beautiful words, so that is the important thing. Thank you.

ABRAHAM: Yes. You are welcome and I completely understand this human curiosity. Another question or comment?

HELEN: Father Abraham, I've been thinking back on some of your other lessons on our human emotions – anger being one of them; and that there are other mood-altering conditions. Our bodies, being of chemical make-up, we know there are other chemicals which we put into our bodies, which are prescribed. With my health condition, the doctors have been giving me a lot of different medications, and are constantly changing them. I am wondering – should I try and steer away from more medications? or continue changing medications to find what works? Should I try and do it through natural homeopathic type ways? or should I stick with the doctors? It concerns me that they are just manipulating some of the symptoms and not the real issue.

ABRAHAM: It is your opinion on this that matters most. I do say, should you choose to continue your material medical treatment, rest assured this decision is up to you because you are fully aware of your human symptoms and sufferings. I would ask you to re-evaluate your personal feelings and fears because I say these also are connected to your well-being. I have much confidence in your abilities, Helen. I understand that you and your inner-God are your best physicians. I am unqualified as a medical doctor, but I would certainly assist you in your exploration of inner feelings and fears. Does this help?

HELEN: Kind of. I am hearing that I should listen to my inner self and listen to my own body because I know my symptoms and my situation better than anyone. It just makes me nervous when they try and introduce other medications. I am uncertain because I don't know. And I don't know who to ask to get a good honest answer. I don't have a lot of trust in mortal doctors at this point.

ABRAHAM: This is highly understandable. I would say to you, examine your own best judgment – see if it is free from mental anxieties and fears, and aligned with the Father's will for his daughter. I would say, if you are untrusting in your physician's advice, then move slowly and with caution. Be direct with your caretakers and demand proper medical care. Do you see, I am to help you with the spiritual aspects of your dilemma. I am sorry I cannot do more. (Helen: Thank you. You have helped.) Abraham: You are very welcome. Another question?

LINDA: Abraham, may I just introduce my mother-in-law, Shirley. She has been here a few times before but I didn't get a chance to introduce her.

SHIRLEY: Linda suggested that I ask if there is a group in Little Rock, Arkansas, where I will be moving? I am interested in this Teaching Mission and would like to continue with it.

ABRAHAM: Not directly in Little Rock. A group is just outside of Little Rock. If you search, your efforts will not be disappointing. Yes, you have acquired enough knowledge to carry on our work. Your efforts in this work will be fruitful and yet, you may not comprehend how. But I say, you shall certainly know the joy of doing our Father's work. Does this help? (Shirley: Yes.) Abraham: One more question?

JOEL: I have a question. You talked about relationships, friendships – that they're necessary, and that this is something that we have to do here. You said that Christ Michael was not fearful, and not shy. But isn't it true, that in some ways that we have to be a little fearful or extra cautious; and shy, or careful, or we could get hurt? How do you overcome that? I think you understand the question better than I can say it.

ABRAHAM: There are times in your life that you meet with another that you feel you know, even though you do not; and yet, there is a feeling of kinship and likeness. When you remember these meetings, you are likely to discover that you yourself, on this particular chance meeting, you were being just that – 'yourself.' You were without caring if you impressed this person or not; you had no expectation of friendship or investment of feelings if they liked you or not. This put you at liberty to be 'yourself.' The person with whom you feel this kinship can sense this ease in your being, and he (she) is at ease to also be just himself or herself, and that you find this completely acceptable. Jesus, who was so dedicated to the doing of His Father's will in heaven, completely thought and believed Himself to be the Father's child; there was not a doubt in His mind that He was a child of God. This acknowledgment gave Him the liberty to be accepting of Himself and to dare put Himself out there for all to see. No, He was not shy, He was the master of self-forgetfulness. Jesus' focus was not on Himself, but on His fellows and the Father's work. He was not focused on others' opinions of Him, and therefore He did not care what opinions people might hold of Him. He was entirely focused on the love of God and how to reveal this to His fellows. Being a man – human and divine – this was quite acceptable to Him. And yes, this is what He asks of us: to accept our humanity and our divinity and have this be enough – a child of God.

I would like to express my thanks to you all. I truly adore each of you and I am with you many times if you so desire. Remember it is your friendship that keeps the boat of faith afloat. Until next week, shalom.

Looking Back Over Our Personal Hardships of Living | Our Unity Will Carry Us Forward
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-25-1995

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, and welcome. I would like to begin by expressing my gratitude to you each. I thank you for your steadfast attitudes and open hearts. I am grateful for our friendship and I pray that you will all begin to understand the bond between you and myself.

Last week I spoke of your continuing support of one another and your friendship being much more important than you had previously understood. This group has experienced many things in our time together; you have witnessed certain events that would probably be devastating to others. Through it all, this group has remained as is the ocean – parts of the ocean may go, may evaporate, but I say, the rain comes and the ocean is still the ocean.

With this body of water, there is strength. This ocean has weathered many storms, yes, but this ocean still can support the largest of ships.

I have watched you, my friends, experience death, new life, illness, healing, separation of families, separation of partners. I have been witness to the joining of couples in marriage; the happiness; the sadness; the disappointments. Yes, I have been a part of your ocean; and you, my friends, and myself, have remained just that – the ocean. Just as it is with everyday mortal living – events take place that do affect you in one way or another, and you have survived. You have struggled, yes, but I say you have gained in spiritual education, and that does not come easy.

Many individuals toil through this life and are affected by every minor event that occurs. Some say: "How bad is this life, how am I to carry on?" Some say, "How strange is this life, I shall attempt to carry on." And still, others say: "How adventurous is this life, in what creative fashion shall I tackle it?" Many mortals are traumatized over painful events and tend to blame others for their unhappiness. Unknowing are these mortals that their life is just that - life, life on a material planet. Life is not against them (although, they may believe it is), but life is just occurring, and it is not to be hidden from.

Our Heavenly Parents know quite well our path and have laid it before us; it is quite an adventure for those who perceive it that way. Others may feel highly sensitive to their human struggles and choose to not look at them; they understand not that we (those who live here in this world) have an education to complete.

Yes, the length of time this particular mission group has stayed the course testifies to the fact that yes, Michael and His associates do indeed know what they are doing. Without a doubt they have planned the course, yes; and you, our mission fellows, have stayed the course. I say to you, our gratefulness goes beyond description, and we are looking forward to another year filled with the waves of this ocean.

We look forward to our association and friendship with you. We are thrilled at this work in which you help to carry on. The effects of this mission may not seem so clear now but I ask you to look back to when this all began - did you foresee the spiritual knowledge you have received? Did you believe you would experience so many different aspects of life's experience?

I repeat, the ocean cannot be separated. It is your unity that has carried you on through what appears to be human sufferings. Your common ground has firmly planted you in the soil of faith. I look forward to continuing to assist you in developing your morontial education. Have you questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, in your lesson you have drawn out a lot about this being the ocean and 'the ocean can't be separated from the ocean; water can't be separated from the water.' Are you saying 'the honest in heart, true believer and seeker of truth' can't be separated? or are you meaning that 'all of our human family' can't be separated from each other.

ABRAHAM: Yes. That is a part. I speak of your group in connection with other teaching Mission groups; and, those that seek to be God-like. My point concerning the ocean is but a small part of a larger lesson in which I plan to teach. Don't get too far ahead of me.

CALVIN: I noticed your lessons do that, tying in several concepts and points and making the larger point after several lessons. It is really beautiful to see it. I'm glad to have my son, Lance, with me tonight. He has been wondering where his dad has been all this time on Monday nights. (Abraham: Welcome, Lance.)

CALVIN: Regarding my presenting these transcripts to Mr. Woodard, we're not privy to where he is going with them - does he read them? or does he just chuck them aside? Is there anything you might want to say? Maybe I should get back with him to see what is going on? [Editor's note: A Mr. Woodard, from another part of the US, had requested weekly copies of Abraham's lessons.]

ABRAHAM: Yes. My son, Calvin, you have done a fantastic service for those reaching out for our teachings, and we are happy with your dedication and perseverance. I would ask you to release the results of your labor. Take an attitude of detachment and know you have served and have served well. Feel no anxiety or apprehension over this. Please feel free to resume your regular spiritual studies. Does this help?

CALVIN: Yes, other than I should probably make an appearance back, since I told him I would, or are you saying drop it from here?

ABRAHAM: No. I am simply suggesting to care not about what results. You have completed a wonderful service. I would ask you to worry not on these results for they shall serve their purpose. Know this, your carefree attitude would best further this project onward, and I wish to help you maintain balance. This project is but a small part. You need not worry. Does this answer? (Calvin: Yes. I understand what you are saying.) Abraham: Another question?

JOSHUA: Father Abraham, in your reference to water evaporating in the ocean, are you saying we may lose some of the members of our group?

ABRAHAM: All water that is evaporated goes somewhere to serve some purpose elsewhere. Some, yes, have already gone; and yet, it has rained again. Water is always moving and sustaining life. I am saying, worry not on where the water may go, for the rain comes soon. Another question?

CALVIN: In a lot of these lessons I am going through, a lot of reference is addressed to "the Father." It seems a little bit removed from 'our Father.' Is there a better way of saying that phrase? "The Father helps us all" versus "our Father who helps us all." Does that make any sense?

ABRAHAM: Yes. That reference to 'the Father' is made to express the First Source and Center, the Father of all fathers – a reference made in which to express His omnipotence; it, however, mostly is just words. Language is always binding. Of course we mean to teach that 'the Father' is truly everyone's Father. Does this help? (Calvin: Yes. It is kind of like a title, then, to distinguish Him above all others.) Abraham: Yes.

I perceive time has come to take my leave. It has been a pleasure to relate with you each. My love to you. Until next week, shalom.

1996 MANSION WORLD TEACHINGS

Lessons Typically Given On The Mansion Worlds Are Now Available To Mortals

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-01-1996

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. I am happy to speak with you this evening. These last few weeks have been extremely busy for me and my associates. We have continued to elevate the concept of the kingdom of God and help to implement acts of goodwill in the hearts of mortals.

We find certain times of the year are ideal for seed planting. I am honored to assist Michael in the sowing of these seeds. [Editor's side note: The Old Testament has a statement that Abraham was told that 'through "his seed" the world would be blessed.' Abraham's words in the above sentence regarding "seed planting," and in paragraph six of this lesson perhaps does shine a whole new light on that Biblical statement.]

I have spoken to you on your part in this family of Father. As well, I have attempted to bring forth your sense of family togetherness within this group and other mortals you have contact with. It is my goal to bring to you the early lessons that you discover on the Mansion Worlds. I have said, these teachings are to propel you forward in your spiritual learning that you may teach others.

I say, signs of a world stepping forward into Light and Life are beginning to shine. I rejoice and give my gratitude to a Father who is so watchful of every universal detail. Many mortals have yet to learn that they belong to this great ocean that is the kingdom of God, the Father's family. The ocean is a mystery. No human can estimate the depth or begin to understand the square miles that is the ocean.

The ocean sustains life and nurtures and protects its inhabitants. The creatures of the ocean know not how they are sustained, they only know that they are; they are completely trusting in their environment to feed and house and protect them. The creatures of the ocean ask not who provides this sustenance; they worry not if the ocean will disappear; they think not the ocean is incapable of fulfilling its duties to them.

I tell you, those on the First Mansion World are discovering that this lesson on the ocean is like the kingdom of God. These students are now understanding that their true sustenance lies within their trust for their Creator. Those on the more advanced levels of morontial education are perhaps like the inhabitants of the ocean – they ask not if the creator of a universe will still be capable of overseeing their survival. These students are in knowing; these students are trusting – just as if they never knew what the concept of 'distrust' was – it is that natural.

It is simple for me to speak on trusting your Creators for I have met one such Creator face to face. Yes, it is so simple for me to speak about trust for I have met the entity that is the embodiment of all trust. I can only plant the seeds of trust, but it is you that has to reach for the sun and rain and nutrients within the soil to ensure the seeds of trust grow robustly and hardily. Once you have begun to establish trust, then shall your true spiritual powers bring forth the fruits of the spirit.

I have not always known this trust. I have not always known such confidence in a spiritual force that I could not view with my eyes. Trust is evolving and always changing, growing; you may not even realize the change/growth. Trust may grow out of the most dreadful times of spiritual doubt.

Unwavering faith is perhaps like water to an untrusting plant. You see, it is your questioning, your asking, that brings you the light of truth. With this truth comes the fact that Father is a loving and responsible caretaker to all His children. Yes, it is perfectly acceptable to question your spiritual steps of learning. But I say, it helps to light your path if you fully believe that the Father of all fathers watches over you as if you were His only child. Father knows your heart, your mind, your desires, and it is His desire to have you believe that He is fully capable of assisting you in your steps to Him.

I ask you to try an experiment: Upon awakening each day, look to your Father and say: "Father, this day I shall put my life in your hands. I shall fully trust your decisions. I am knowing of your power to shape me and my life into a successful spiritual student." Yes, I understand that to fully trust in your Father is perhaps like feeling your way around in a dark room – you move slowly, you take small steps. I am happy to receive questions.

ROLAND: Abraham, thank you for that beautiful lesson and instruction. During the last ten days, I have spent some time, as you know, with a woman who is known by the name of Guru Mi. During those ten days there was a process called 'Shakti.' It is a process in which the enlightened guru transmits God-consciousness to her students' psyche. It is a pretty amazing experience these people have during that particular intensity. I was amazed at the energy that I received from the experience. In your knowledge, can you help me understand what actually occurred there? I am at a loss to reconcile that with some of the other things that I have learned. Do you have a comment, perhaps assistance?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Yes, transmission-receiving, correct. I am understanding that when the shades of a window are fully open, a room can receive more light. Yes, the power of this conference was highly energized for there were so many windows that were receiving a more full light. You see, this opening to spiritual consciousness was adding to the information you were receiving. The more you are trusting, the more you are allowing light to enter in – and the more light you will receive. Yes, I am aware that this individual you speak of has allowed herself to be a lantern for which the light of God can shine therefrom. Does this answer?

ROLAND: Beautifully. What occurs to me is that we are each sons and daughters of God; and that as we become closer to perfection we are able to transmit this 'shakti' to each other; and we do this on many levels. This particular individual, it seems, has purified herself to the degree that this light is transmitted in great abundance. Could that be one of the lessons of this experience? Does she have a special calling or a special anointment of transmission-receiving this God-consciousness, that is exclusive to her?

ABRAHAM: No! She is, yes, a child of God. She is an open individual who desires to serve. And those that believe in her do supply her with the energy to receive much spiritual enlightenment. She is assisted by those who share in her beliefs. Am I understanding you?

ROLAND: It seems to me that you do. My notion at this point is that we, also all equal sons and daughters of God, as we purify, or as we approach or strive for perfection, as she has, we will also be able to give 'shakti,' or be channels of the light of God, to people who will actually feel energy in the moment.

ABRAHAM: Yes, certainly. As you grow in faith and trust, you will receive the amount of spiritual knowledge that you are ready to receive. Does this help?

ROLAND: Yes, very much so. You must also be familiar with a Julie Garfield who was in attendance from Albuquerque, NM, who is very interested in the Teaching Mission. Twenty-six years ago she was touched by the Urantia Book. It is my notion that they will be people who will carry on the Teaching Mission work in Albuquerque. Are you familiar with Julie Garfield or the spiritual name that she is known by, Ganid, which was a curious similarity to the same name in the Urantia Book. I'd be curious to know if you know about that connection?

ABRAHAM: I am in understanding. My co-workers are familiar, but myself, I am not. It is wonderful that you can listen to her with such understanding and assist her in her understanding of the Mission. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, in your lesson you talked about trusting like the creatures of the ocean do. They don't worry, but totally trust they are provided for; and I know it takes daily living experience to have that full trust. But in our lives of having to pay bills, and in our 'fight for survival' it seems like – if we didn't have this monetary system it would be so much easier; easier to just live off what is there and rely on our assisting each other in life. I think your bigger statement is that Father will provide for our spiritual needs, yes, and also for us not worry so much of our physical needs, but trust that He is there for us in all things. And in the 'not worrying so much' maybe we are taken care of even better than we had thought possible? But for me, this is so hard to do. I have gained a lot more trust since this Teaching Mission began, yes, but I'm still not there yet regarding my 'plight for survival' in material needs.

ABRAHAM: Yes. I fully understand. It is difficult as agondonters [those who believe without seeing] to go about their daily business believing that Father is truly concerned with each and every little detail. Many mortals believe Father to be like man, and these mortals have learned that man cannot be relied upon to fulfill the space that was meant for Father. Those who believe that God is like man will never be wholly trusting of Father. Those mortals, however, who pay attention to Father's fingerprints are knowing of His power and overcare of the world; they learn little by little to trust, and know that Father has power beyond any human concepts. It is a sad state to minimize Father's power with man's limited view. Once a mortal has taken a step towards faith and trust will they begin to experience the very unlimited power of God. Does this help?

CALVIN: Yes, very much. Are you familiar with Mindy's situation up in Idaho this last week? (Abraham: I am.) Calvin: I'll leave it all in your hands then what you might want to express on this situation – either through Marlin and Helen, or directly to Mindy. [Editor's note: Marlin's daughter-in-law, Mindy, in Idaho, had some alarming experience wherein she claims an encounter with "evil spirits," which caused some fear/anxiety.]

ABRAHAM: Have them speak to me directly. I will be there for them. They need not fear the imaginings of the mortal mind. I will be honored to assist this family, personally. They are a family looking for answers and grasping at straws. Mindy, you, my child, are loved by one who holds the very source of all power in the palm of His hand. Our God is a responsible God and would never allow mischievous rebels to roam and harm any of His children who put their trust in Him. Where do mortals receive the idea that evil is more powerful than good? How can evil within one, overpower the Source that created all beings? Mindy, you have to ask Michael to enter your heart, your mind, your soul. You need to accept that you are a child of God and fully worthy of survival. If you are to help your children, you must ask for yourself to receive Father's light and be accepting of His love. This is fitting with tonight's lesson. Send her the last couple of lessons. I suggest Marlin [John C.] inform her on the stillness practice. I will be there.

I remind you each, to dare to put your trust in Father; dare to lay your very existence into His hands and watch what unfolds. Until next week, shalom.

New Doors As We Put Our Trust In The Very Force That Gives All Things Life

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. Thank you for coming. I am honored to assist you in your attainment of our Paradise goal. I trust that you all had an active week in learning to trust our Father, the Father of all fathers. Those that take a chance trusting a God which they cannot view with their material eyes find that many doors are opened to new morontial experiences.

Many of you have stumbled in the dark and have felt fear, and many of you have stumbled in the dark and have relied upon and trusted Father for safety and guidance. Trusting is not as common as it once was between mortals; to trust, is now, to almost go against the grain. Learning to trust takes time to grow, just as a small plant must struggle to survive.

While it is true you cannot at times trust your fellow mortals, it is also true that your Father is not like any mortal. Once you take a chance and trust Father to place you on the path that He has chosen, and which you have accepted, you will discover many new branches on the tree of mortal experience. Yes, on the tree of mortal experience, once you have established trust - you then realize that Father has many more discoveries than you've anticipated. To trust Him is to open your line of communication with Him and His army of various helpers.

To believe that negativity could have a place next to trust is not reality. To trust in your Father is to be shielded from the negativity. To literally trust is to be empowered with a strength that can only come from God-knowingness; this spiritual power is nothing other than the pure love that radiates from our Paradise Parents, the pure force that creates the universes. To trust is to be open for more spiritual understanding. To trust is to accept more spiritual responsibility - you are trusting in Father's destiny for you, therefore, you are aligned with His will and empowered with the tools to carry out His will.

As you realize and accept your place within the Father's kingdom, you are learning to trust in the very Force that gives all things life. This is why I place much emphasis on your understanding of your son- or daughtership within this kingdom; your son- or daughtership goes hand in hand with your trust in the rulers of the universes.

I say to you, with this new realization comes new responsibilities – and, new power to perform your duties. Responsibility may unnerve some, yes, but I say – with new responsibilities there are new levels of joy that are experienced only by those who are in understanding of this concept.

With the forward movement of this Mission, we are giving our students the tools to press on. Those students that trust in their own inner knowledge of God will receive the training and the tools to further this Mission. I say, these responsibilities are not a burden, no, they are a privilege. If you were to have such faith in yourselves as your Father has in you, you would certainly move mountains.

I am responsible for certain duties, and I do not feel they are a burden but I feel honored to be trusted with such responsibilities in the kingdom, and I am energized by the trust that Michael has in me. I have been trained and given the tools to perform my duties, and I am filled with the love that is the true source of all power. The more I serve, the more I crave to serve.

I've described this Mission as 'the ocean' regarding its strength and powerfulness. With that, I mean to say the water can either heal or be quite destructive – the water can 'sustain' life and yet, a tidal wave can 'destroy' it. Nevertheless, the ocean is more grand than you or I, individually. The ocean is the sum total of believers; and these believers can unify and sustain life – or, cause feelings of separation resulting from petty disagreements and become destructive. If all believers could stand upon the common ground of trusting their Paradise Parents, they could create a force of good that would be the very force needed to heal much of this world's pain.

The common ground of trust is like the calm winds that create small ripples in the water – with the beautiful sunlight reflecting off and restoring goodwill in the hearts of humankind. Instead of judgment toward your fellows, divert your attention to the trust you have for those who rule the universes. With that first little thought of judging another, say to yourself: "Father I trust in your abilities to show me what you want me to know; help me to believe you are involved in everyone's life, for everyone is a child of God."

With the changes you have experienced within these years of the Correcting Time, you will begin to experience morontial lessons at a much faster pace. This is not to be imposed upon you, no; this is by your own choosing, by your own desire. Those that listen to us will help to advance Michael's plan for upliftment and planetary healing.

The lessons on trust are just the bottom stair to a giant staircase of realizations that have, for the most part, only been experienced on the Mansion World, until now. This world is catching up to where it should have been. I repeat, when you are trusting your Father, His will, you are given more responsibilities; and with that, the spiritual tools to complete them. Are there questions?

JOSHUA: I have a question, Father Abraham. Last week I was watching a show on TV and it showed a person that was responsible for a cure for Aids. Is this true? Are we any closer to coming up with a cure for Aids?

ABRAHAM: I am certain that medical technology improvements are all included in the planetary healing, specifics I cannot reveal. But I can say, those mortals who seek not self-glorification are being contacted concerning medical improvements, and answers to the destructive ailments that plague this world. It has taken many years to bring about such medical improvements. I can say, these improvements will certainly be upstepped even more as our Correcting Time moves forward. Another question?

ROLAND: Father Abraham, in regard to the lesson, you spoke of calling upon Christ Michael to assist us in our finding a trusting way through this life. Also, in our adversities, as well as our looking to do the will of the Father, we were to call upon Him in that request. I am having a little bit of difficulty because my prayers have been so uniformly 'calling upon the Father' – our Father in heaven, the one who dwells within me and assists me in this mortal experience. How should I call upon the Father and Christ Michael in an appropriate way? I have struggled with that. I would like some instruction.

ABRAHAM: I understand. In the ways that are divine, I have instructed you to speak with your indwelling Father Fragment. He is always lighting your path to Him and He is best suited for your higher spiritual learning. I have referred you to the Son concerning human matters. Michael is fully understanding in the human emotions, such as anger, and may assist you in answers to controlling these human emotions. Michael is a great buffer against the winds of anger and He fully understands your efforts in self-mastery. I say, let this not confuse you for "if you have seen the Son, also have you seen the Father." Likewise, if you speak with the Son, also have you spoken to the Father. Yes, always should you go to your inner understanding when petitioning your concept of what God is. Always should you trust your feelings in the way in which you wish to pray. Michael mastered His mortal emotions and was fully enlightened by His Paradise Father. I refer you to the Son for your own benefit in that you have studied His life and possibly have a better knowledge of how He lived it. He is a smaller, more easily understandable, approachable, fragment of deity. Yes, concerning human emotions – it is of great comfort to petition Michael. In matters of spiritual and universal understanding – it is best to directly petition your indwelling Father. But all in all, words are just words, and I can verify your heart is fully understood no matter who you ask. Is this helping?

ROLAND: Very much, and very beautifully. In addition, it seems to me this is another element we may want to pay attention to, that I would like to pay attention to anyhow, and that is to know that our Creative Mother Spirit is often in residence on Urantia, and that she is here for a purpose. Is there a time or an appropriateness to pray or petition Her for a specific human need, spiritual need?

ABRAHAM: Mother is not bound by time or space any longer. She can hear you as easily as Michael. She is an effective and wonderful minister to those who call upon Her. Mother is ministering to those groups who find themselves in adversity, such as minority groups. She is assisting in uplifting the consciousness of all who are perhaps biased in their feelings of 'who is a child of God, and who is not.' She is diligently working to correct the imbalances of societal ills, yes. But I say, Mother still answers those who ask for Her assistance, no matter where she is in residence. Does this answer? (Roland: Yes, thank you.)

HONORAY: Father Abraham, talk about being tested on our trust and our emotions. Worrying about all the violence and everything that goes on around us – we were all tested a little last week. Were you aware of what happened right outside when you were giving your lesson last week – that the young man was killed out in our parking lot? The next day I had a hard time trusting those that are around me. It was pretty hard to keep from shaking all day and not giving in to just wanting to barricade ourselves in when things like this are going on. It really put me to a test.

ABRAHAM: Understandable. (Honoray: Were you aware of that last week?) Abraham: Yes, but I know only as much as you. That is not my area of work. Violence is truly a test for mortals. I am wholly understanding of your need to be safe and feel safe. This is why I ask you to exercise your trust for Father because He is unlike any mortal you have ever known. He is completely responsible and desires your trust in Him. He is watching over all His children, but many of His children are not looking back. If they are not understanding of His love for them, they will not be understanding of His watchcare over them. You, however, who are in understanding of Father's watchcare, you are in knowing of His powerfulness. Guns may rule man, but they cannot influence God. Your trusting in Father to always be with you is to absorb His power, His courage, His love; and then can you step bravely forth into the world and teach this concept to others. I completely understand, yes. You are in an exercise of trust, as are many. This is not to be feared. Another question?

RACHEL: I just have a comment, Father Abraham. You were describing a beautiful faith and trust that our Creator Father has in you. I want you to know you gave me goose pimples all up and down my spine, and I just really and truly feel like I could feel your presence, and I wanted to make that comment. (Abraham: It should not be new to you. We have spoken several times. You know me just as I know you. Another question?)

CALVIN: In your lesson, I feel that you are asking us to take a sincere look of how willing we are to be responsible in this Teaching Mission. Surely, we don't have the kind of trust in ourselves that our Father has in us, or as you do, in asking us to trust that we are capable of being a great help to the world and to ourselves. Before Jesus left His apostles, He did say: "Greater things shall you do." I am getting the feeling that that wasn't meaning greater miracles and so on, but greater things for effecting a change in the world. In light of what you are saying tonight I can see that – that no miracles are going to change people; but light, truth and love, would make great changes.

ABRAHAM: Yes, correct. Even though self-trust may not always be present, your basic foundation should be trust – trust in the Father. It is the Father that reveals to you your abilities and empowers you with the knowledge you need to fulfill His will. Yes, trust in Father is the first step in the staircase of many steps: such as self-trust, faith, courage, endurance, tolerance, and so on. Yes, it begins with your faith; faith intermingled with trust – trust in a Deity that created the universes, and all life. Does this help?

CALVIN: Yes, it does. The whole basic element, then it seems, all boils down to how much trust we have in our Father – putting our full trust in His watchcare, His help; and knowing that He will show us in every little part of our way. Thanks. (Abraham: Yes.)

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I would like to present to you this evening Marcese, who is here with us, and ask if you have a comment for him. And also, he wishes to make this comment: He is leaving soon to go back to Ireland; and when he does so, he is asking that you make good use of him over there.

ABRAHAM: Yes, we are knowing of each other, Marcese, greetings again. I am delighted in your association with Joshua. You are certainly a Spirit-led individual. We are happy at your willingness to serve. Have you a question?

MARCESE: Yes, Father Abraham. If I offend you in asking anything, please forgive my ignorance. What I want to ask: Like most Europeans, I am very concerned about the conflict in Bosnia. The 'peacekeepers' that are now there will number sixty thousand in about two months' time. In a year, they are supposed to be gone. Will the three denizens of the area – the Croats, the Muslims and the Bosnians (they don't like each other just as the Irish Catholics and Protestants in Northern Ireland) – will they, as we have learned in Northern Ireland, learn to live in peace and mutually exist? Or will blood continue to be spilled. I repeat, as most Europeans, I am very concerned about this because this could spill over into all of Europe.

ABRAHAM: Understood, understood. Down through history has man fought one another only to find that there is no light at the end of this tunnel. This area of the world of which you speak is at a stage of evolving as a people. I say, and with regret, that some things have to become unbearable in order to get better. It is horrifying for the angelic beings that assist, to witness such misunderstandings between mortals. God could intervene with one wave of His hand and stop this war, but this would not teach His children that peace and tolerance comes through understanding. I say, there will definitely be a day when war is no longer deemed as power, and 'understanding' will be the peace-keeper. It is through understanding that we learn to love and accept. Your concerns are known. You are amongst many who have prayed and have deeply desired for an end to this suffering. Believe me when I say you all have been heard and that the Father reaches each of you, and all of you, with His love. He calls to all and tries to make understood that He hears their prayers. He asks back for His children to listen to Him. He awaits their answer. Again I say, those who have left this world are completely safe; they will understand everything, in time, for these men, women, and children, will experience far greater happiness than they have ever known. Yes, the killing is sad, but I reassure you that those that have gone are in the hands of the One that created them. Worry not. Does this help? (Marcese: Very much. Thank you very much.) Abraham: You're welcome. One more question? [there are none.]

I am happy to be of service to each and every one of you. I will meet with each one during the week. Until next week, shalom.

Listening And Understanding Helps Your Self And Your Fellows

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-15-1996

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you. It is my privilege and honor to know each one of you. I am always looking forward to our personal time together. Did you notice my presence during the week? Did you find you were unexpectedly assisted with a problem? Did you feel comforted at a moment when you expected anxiety?

I say, this is basically how we communicate with you. It is absolutely natural and nothing to be feared. Communication between us is not to be rushed, is not to cause you mental anguish. Spiritual conversation between you and me is to be of your benefit and mine. I strive each day to meet with several students in the hope that Michael's work will ripple outward to those you know.

As I have spoken before, the kingdom of heaven is like the ocean and all components make up the whole. I am a drop of water within an enormous body of water. I strive to assist the whole, yes, but in order to do my job, I must take small steps to reach the few students that I can. The students who allow my words and learn spiritual truths, and who desire to serve, do also assist in serving the whole. Do you see - we are each, many small parts that create 'the whole.'

Mortals at times dwell upon their own unimportance not knowing they assist in serving the whole. They feel that since there are so many drops in the ocean that one drop will not be missed. I can tell you, our Father knows His ocean beyond its molecular level - and yes, one drop is deeply missed. It is this one drop that Father strives to bring back to His vast ocean. He is concerned with each and every part of the whole.

Mortals who can trust and move freely within their area of water are likely to attract the rays of the sun; they are likely to bring more light into their small area within this vast ocean.

When you review your life, can you not observe Father's fingerprints along the way? Even in your darkest hours, can you believe that you are not totally alone in our great universe? Always are mortals searching for proof that God exists. When you review your life and mark Father's fingerprints upon it, you will conclude that this is the only proof that you can record.

We have spoken much about trusting the Father and His legions of planetary helpers. We have been opening the door of truth very slowly so as to not blind you. Trust is the bottom stair in a great stairway of understanding. To risk your ego, and take a chance on trusting that in which you cannot see, is to open the door of truth a little wider. As you learn to trust, you are given more responsibility along with the spiritual tools to perform your responsibilities. One of these tools could perhaps be entitled listening and understanding.

In the world's history, it has often been mortals talking about themselves. One and all are involved with their own life and very few stop to listen. If very few stop to listen, then very few are understood. We have passed beyond the era of mortal 'self' involvement. Yes, humankind is coming forth from the cocoon of selfishness into the light of service.

I have spoken before on the subject of communicating with your fellows. I have said, if you are not willing to speak, then you cannot expect to be understood. It so goes with listening; if you cannot listen with an open heart, then you are missing understandings that could help you help your fellows, or yourself.

Listening and understanding is 'your' helping the part to move the whole. Those armed with the small components of understanding are like seeds blowing in the wind. Father knows who they are, and He has enabled them with the tools to move the whole. An exercise in really 'listening to gain greater understanding' would be appropriate at this point in time. You will see those many small things you miss frequently because of failure to properly listen; you will notice you are without motive for serving 'self,' and instead, are you moving the whole.

It is difficult at times to listen to others when you feel you are not listened to. Let this not discourage you in your desire to serve – I would remind you to return to the bottom stair of trusting in your Paradise Parents. It is Father that always has His ear open to His children. Yes, I instruct you in this lesson so that you will not miss the small understandings that will move the whole. Have you questions?

RACHEL: This evening we have Susan with us. She is a newcomer to our group but certainly not a newcomer to you, Father Abraham. We want to welcome her, and also state that she has some questions she would like to ask. (Abraham: Welcome to you, Susan.)

SUSAN: Abraham, I would like to have some assistance in helping me make a decision in regard to treatment. And I wonder if this could be done through a personal session by you? or possibly asking for further assistance from another healer that might be able to help me. Could you comment on this, please?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Are you concerned with medical material treatments? (Susan: Yes.) Abraham: I am aware that the human medical technology is deemed useful. I ask, have you other questions besides medical treatments?

SUSAN: One issue with this that comes to mind is, is this a hereditary issue that I am trying to heal from my family? or is this just a medical issue that I am dealing with just from me? I think that there are also hereditary issues that I feel I need to try to stop so that this doesn't continue on in my family.

ABRAHAM: I am attempting to understand if a personal meeting is needed. Do you feel comfortable asking right now, right here? (Susan: I feel comfortable.) Abraham: I can explain to you this much, I am unable to foresee the future. I am unskilled in genetic possibilities. I am informed that if your situation is genetic then is there not a lot you can be responsible for. I am in understanding you are doing everything you need to do. You are concerned about others and wish to lessen their pain for you – this too, is not your responsibility; this desire you feel 'to lessen other's pain' is not aiding in your own healing. My daughter, your greatest physician is within, and you indeed hold His power in your hands. You assist in your own healing with your continued trust and belief that 'the Father, the very One who created all beings, does indeed hold my destiny within His hands.' You are indeed learning to trust. I would suggest in learning to trust that you dedicate your will to the doing of Father's will. In this, you will be accepting of the plan of divinity Father has in store for you. Yes, continue medical material treatment – but I say it is your own feelings and your internal Father, your internal Physician's advice, that you need to heed. Think not you have deserved this illness, no. Let not this weigh your heart any longer. Accept your wings from Father and by all means, use them. Do you have another question? (Susan: No. Thank you.) Abraham: Is a private meeting still needed? (Susan: I don't think so.) Abraham: Please be comfortable to ask me anything. More questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, I know your lessons are also, in large part, trying to get us to be more trusting in Father; and I don't know to what degree I am – whether it's ten percent, or ninety percent. I just know I am not there where I 'could' be, yet. I know I need to look at more than just trusting in Him to provide for my physical life. Other than asking: "Father help me to learn my lessons of life, to be more trusting," what else would be helpful? It doesn't seem like I am making any big strides.

ABRAHAM: You know a child that has not yet received education on the ways and handicaps of the material world is so filled with faith and trust – it is so natural in children and is the way that mortals should be born with. Over time, negative factors are fed into the minds of trusting and faithful children; and they, in turn, learn disappointment after disappointment. Instead of learning that disappointment is for a reason, for the learning of spiritual truths, they are likely to believe that they have somehow wronged an angry God. God is completely responsible for His many children. He is unlike any man or woman you have known. If you could see His inner workings in nature you would begin to understand how He is responsible, perfectly! It is sad but true that God has to 'earn' the trust of His mortal children. His children witness His fingerprints upon the paths of their lives, and they have seen God has been there all along – but once again when disappointment strikes, they are all too often believing that Father has forgotten them. This is not right to believe that God is irresponsible. He forgets not the least of His drops of the ocean that is the kingdom of heaven. At times you must locate that child-within that had not yet discovered life's disappointments. This child had all the trust and faith that he acquired upon birth. It is necessary to look deep within your soul and know that God knows you and, that He trusts you. He is asking that you not worry if He is with you or not, just assume He is, because it is so. He is always with you. He is always knowing of your destiny, one step ahead of you. You will see. Take a chance and know He is, and I can tell you, you will begin to witness change and be entrusted with those spiritual tools that are needed to perform your duties as a son of God.

RACHEL: Father Abraham I'll ask: Are you going to be with us this week like you were last week, individually?

ABRAHAM: Yes. You will see that my lesson is also involving 'listening and understanding' in my individual visits. I look forward to assisting you in your morontial training. I will see you during the week. Until next week, shalom.

Frequent Stillness Practice is Not a Long or Mystical Process

I am ABRAHAM. I am honored to speak with you this evening. I find it hard to express to you the joy I receive from teaching this group. I have longed for a position of this type for a long time but there were several things I had to experience first. Much training have I completed to be here with you for these teachings. I say, the effort I made was absolutely worth the joy I experience now.

Yes, I have spent time with each of my students this week. I have assisted my students in the technique of receiving my communications. I am helping you to discover your direct line to Father. I labor to dispel fear and mystical-thinking that students may apply to their understanding of our Father. I have spoken concerning listening and understanding.

I say, benefits from these skills are manifested one-hundredfold when one can recognize inner peace, and the 'source' of inner peace - our Father. We are learning to trust Father to weave our faith into the threads of trust to create a secure cloak of inner peace. So much is lifted off our shoulders when we are listening for Father - trusting Father to guide us and believing that He is the source of all comfort and inner peace.

The Teachers have instructed you to take a moment of stillness each day to renew your connection with your origin, to reconnect with the source of all living things. The stillness is not a long process, no. The effort to perform the stillness is quite simple, and yet it helps you to locate the source of all inner peace.

To walk in this life day-by-day takes a toll on the body and mind. Life can become 'too much trouble' and some mortals may wish to withdraw for periods of time - they are too affected by ordinary adversity conditions. Without the exercise of reconnecting with the source of all peace, many find it difficult to handle even the simplest of tasks.

You are learning to trust Father. You are beginning to know Father is unfailing. You are beginning to see new horizons that you did not know existed. With your trust, you have turned to Father for guidance on a moment's notice. With your trust, you have learned to trust your own judgment. Do you see, when you are trusting the Father to guide you unerringly and to do His bidding, then this is where your heart lies! And in trusting your God this definitely brings self-trust. Do you see your intentions? Do you see the circle of faith created by your trust in Father - and, His trust in you? And completing our circle is your own self-trust?

Tonight, my lesson is short. I am asking you to reconnect with the source of peace through stillness practice. If you can locate this peace, you become re-energized and feel more competent to handle what life may have in store for you. A few minutes, not long. Do not make this difficult. Stillness is like a man in a hot desert searching for the well wherewith to quench his thirst. Your stillness is drinking from this well, you are quenched with the peace and clarity of mind needed to send you on your way to further spiritual learning and growth.

This week, focus on 'listening' during the stillness. Expect to hear with your soul and not your ears. My friends, we indeed have eternity; let not the burden of time be upon you. Let your time spent at the well be a gift that you share with the One closest to you – just you and your Father. Are there any questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, your lesson is very timely because I have been reading transcripts from the Arkansas gathering wherein it is quite the theme in their lessons of the importance of the stillness also. For years now I've heard you and Ham speak of the importance of connecting with our indwelling Spirit for just a few minutes a day. I know most of my problem is not regularly taking those few minutes. But can there be physical reasons why there is a frustrated connection sometimes? Or, just that I need to 'calm down' maybe?

ABRAHAM: I am certain that many make this practice to be a big event. They are making the stillness practice to be 'a chore' and not a drink from the well of light. Many times each day does the stillness practice come to you, no matter your location, your attitude, or even the noise that may surround you. Stillness is within and not so much without. Many times do you find yourself in the midst of calm. It is an appropriate time to say, "I am here, Father; I give thanks for this drink at the well, which is your love and peace." It is not easy to find a quiet moment in this fast-paced world; but I say, your mind is more than you know. You all are endowed with a mind that possibly escapes your understanding. Do you see, a mind trained in the ways of self-mastery can perform stillness in the midst of chaos. This is why there is need for practice. Stillness practice is to be recognized as it comes to you. No, this is not hard. This is a gift in which the child looks to see if his hand still holds his Father's. You will see much of learning the stillness is an attitude. It is not necessary to make this a mystical practice. To recognize stillness as it comes upon you is to be enabled to serve your fellows as the need arises. Do you see, stillness is not just sitting in solitude, no; advanced stillness is opening the channel between your God and your fellows. Does this help?

CALVIN: Very, very much. I thought I had to go sit in a certain way and hold my hands in a certain way to really connect. I can see I can do just what you are saying in driving down the road, or reflecting while looking out the window at work. (Abraham: Yes, correct. Another question?)

ROLAND: Abraham, I appreciate your lesson tonight. I feel benefited by it. The East-Indian tradition of meditation is, of course as you know, long, and asks that in the meditation the goal be a connection with God-consciousness. They speak of an energy which is 'kundalini energy' that rests at the bottom of the spine. Many of the masters are able to raise this energy from the base of the spine through the crown chakras of the head, with practice, and have become illuminated in the process in a mindal way so much so that their prose and their poetry becomes of a very high state. Does your teaching on stillness have any bearing on what they are doing? or a bearing on what you speak of as 'in the silence?' Or, is this a different practice entirely?

ABRAHAM: As with stillness practice, you are opening your human will to be led by Father. You are putting aside your desires so that Father can be of service. It is Father who manipulates the energies that you speak of. Man can only be 'open' to this manipulation. It must be man's will to align with Father's in order to understand the benefits of this energy. God is energy. He is the source of all energy. To integrate with Father is to begin to understand this energy and how to put it to use. Is this at all answering?

ROLAND: It does answer. I guess the distinction I can see at this point is that for the world, in general, to understand that reaching the stillness is a simple process of quieting yourself each day; and, that there is a tremendous amount of power and direction in that. My further question then: Is it – the practicality which we achieve by a few minutes of this practice – is it then 'enhanced' or perhaps even 'refined' through the Eastern-Indian tradition of longer periods of time in their particular methods of meditation? Is it beneficial to pursue those traditional forms of Eastern-Indian practice to achieve even higher enlightenment?

ABRAHAM: Long stillness practice is to misuse your energy. Too long of stillness practice is to drain you of that energy that might be put to use through service. This meeting, for example: During the first part of my lessons the words are fairly strong, but towards the end of our meeting the words are fewer and less understood by the transmission-receiver. We recommend short stillness practice because when you begin to always allow God to live your life with you, you will find you are always in somewhat of a stillness practice. Stillness is a reconnecting and allowing Father to reach you. Advanced stillness then, is to use this practice in everyday living. Does this help?

ROLAND: It does, and I appreciate what you are saying, that eventually the stillness practice will appear in everything that we do whether it be a material pursuit or serving another person in a spiritual way, and I don't even know if we can separate those. (Abraham: Yes, correct.) Roland: I see that in my stillness practice, and having others be involved in stillness practice such as occurred on last Dec. 25th, Christmas morning, where two people were brought together in time and space exactly at the right time for a message to be exchanged – that it was in stillness that we had both released ourselves to the will of God. And it was in that releasing ourselves that we were brought together – and that was so precise; it might take years to do exactly the same if we did it under our own power. So I see that it was in the stillness how we coordinated to assist each other. And that seems to be manifest in the lives of those people who spend years doing it – they are also well coordinated in their pursuit of being of service or the will of the Father. So my notion is if it's easy, and if there is an easy way to do it, then certainly that would be my way. I'm not sure if I'm getting what you are saying, completely, but I'll continue to work on it. I thank you very much for your response.

ABRAHAM: I think you understand very well, Roland. You are welcome. Anything else I can assist with this evening, please feel free to ask me anything. Another question?

JOSHUA: I don't have a question, but I'd like to make a comment. I would like to thank Father, Michael, Machiventa, yourself, and Ham and the other Teachers, for all the effort they have put forth to bring we, mortals within this Correcting Time Mission, to the place where we are today. We have three new visitors tonight. I would like them to introduce themselves if they would.

RON: I go to school with Jonathan. He has told me a lot about this group. I wanted to experience it for myself.

JONATHAN: This is my friend, Kayleen. She has been to the group before as well.

CALVIN: Abraham, you said you were with us during the week. I know I am not a very good listener, but do you have any further insights on how we can be better prepared or connected – not only with Father but also with you, the Teachers? I can see in my study of the Arkansas transcripts that many Teachers are assigned to be with us, daily, to be an everyday help in our lives for assistance. I am understanding that it is part of the Father's work – that our intended connection is to be more on a reality level with you, our Teachers, our guides and helpers. Do you have anything new to share, after observing us this week, that we could be more aware of?

ABRAHAM: Yes. I would first welcome our visitors and accept Joshua's praise for our efforts, and also give you all my gratitude for your unfailing dedication and desire to serve. My observance this week has led me to put emphasis on this stillness practice being as normal as possible. Before this world was thrown into rebellion and its resulting setbacks [Lucifer rebellion], many were evolving towards this practice of interacting naturally with those unseen celestial guides and teachers. To receive celestial transmissions would have been like taking a bath, a normal daily thing to do. Yes, this practice would be thought of as natural as breathing. I wish to dispel any mystical ideas my students may hold as far as the stillness goes – in both your connections with Father, and, of His unseen agents assigned to assist this world. I am extremely pleased with your willingness to learn. Your questions help me teach and is the format for your lessons. I am fading in my clarity to you.

RACHEL: Father Abraham, let me help you out a little bit; I am going to be my own normal self and add a little lightheartedness, I'm going to tell you a joke. From what I understand, you and your associates all like humor. It starts out with a question: How come everybody is turning to God these days? The answer: Because it's a lot more fun to walk on water than to tap-dance on red coals. [group laughter.]

ABRAHAM: I am quite amused, Rachel my daughter, as are my associates. We are very lightened by your humor and would desire to see more of it. I leave you each with my love and gratitude. Until next week, shalom.

Not Just Desire to be God-like, but Decide to be God-like

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP

01-29-1996

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you this evening. I am happy to be here in service to you, my students, and to my Father in heaven. I have found great joy in serving. I have come to realize that to serve is to be at one with Father. To be in such close contact with my Father is to discover joy on many deeper levels of understanding.

I thank you for allowing me to experience this joy by assisting you in your understanding. I have been with you each this week. I find you all so unique and I stand in awe of your courage and endurance to carry on. I am honored to work with such unique citizens of our universe.

Many are improving upon their technique concerning stillness practice. Many of you have learned to relax and trust. You are discovering that stillness is not ceremonial and formal but is a renewing of Spirit connection with Father. In time, you'll see improvement in your direct channel of communication with Father and His subordinates.

I would say, please attempt to integrate the stillness practice into your daily routine as a natural part of your human experience. Stillness is quite natural and simple. With practice, you'll find constant connection with Father. He will reveal to you His will and you will have a clear understanding on what steps to take.

I have taught many students various truths that they have integrated in their daily lives and have witnessed the benefits thereof. I have endeavored to reach those students who require extra help in understanding their own relationship to Spirit. I have witnessed much joy on the part of some students who are discovering these teachings to be real.

I have attempted to minister to other students who struggle with doubt – and guilt over that doubt. I have experienced so many relationships and have worked to understand each individual. This understanding does not come so easily. I had to be educated and exchange my will for Father's; and, exchange my mindal thinking for Michael's. But I can say, through experience do I have a better understanding concerning individual personalities.

In my memory there are various personalities with whom I have been educated on how to deal with. My yearning to understand took much desire and effort on my part. I truly desired to be God-like. With this desire came my education – my education in understanding my fellows, understanding my students, myself, and my Father.

As you grow in Spirit you discover an island in the midst of the ocean that can keep you above water. This island is a safe place in which to center your spiritual understanding. This island is your desire to be God-like. I say, your desire has carried you this far in your spiritual education.

Deep within the human soul is there a place of knowing – knowing the Paradise Father, knowing the Creator Son, knowing the Mother and Her many angels. Deep within the human soul do you recognize what it is to really be God-like. You know this; this is what we all strive to be. Let me say, your desire to be God-like is the key that opens the door to your spiritual education.

Desire to be God-like is good, yes, it is your intention. But I say, there needs to be a moment of solemn thought – that you must decide to literally be God-like. To 'desire' is good, yes. To 'decide,' however, is more of a commitment on your part, an opening to the door of spiritual learning.

One can say, "I wish to be God-like" and hold within, fear of this actuality. This is not opening the door. This is showing good intention, yes, but not opening the door. One can say, "I have made my decision to be God-like and I am committed to receiving lessons that will help me reach that goal."

Do you see, the decision and commitment is not always easy? You are to be educated in learning to be God-like. You are opening the door. You are viewing what's beyond your average realm of learning, thinking.

This is why I express to you my joy. I have decided to be God-like. I was educated on how to attain that; I am qualified to teach and serve, and I reap the joy from that. I am so filled with the light of God. He has trusted me to extend His hand to others. I am filled with such desire to give thanks and praise to my God that has so carefully guided me.

I am so comforted in the fact that I am a child of God and that my place in the kingdom is secured. I give thanks and love to our Father who has always reached out to us. I am without words to express my love. I desire to return to our Father. My joy began with my decision to be God-like.

Those that stand firmly in their decision are to be educated in whatever form that Father deems most beneficial. This is not to bring fear, no, this is to bring the excitement and enthusiasm that a mortal can find within this humanly ordinary life. This decision is to bring you new challenges and train you in the ways to be of service if you so desire and decide – to be God-like.

You know little about how much power is within each one of you. God is the source of all power. God is love. Love is power. You seem to have little self-trust and confidence, while within your very being there is the source of all power. To trust your Father is to believe His trust in you, and to discover your own self-trust.

I am a Teacher. I have been assigned to this position to help with this time of Correction. I am to help move the whole. We all are dedicated in the upliftment of this world. I am so honored to be counted among Michael's Teachers, and I wish to express to you – this world is not alone; it is lovingly watched over and being assisted in moving closer to Light and Life. This I know to be fact.

We will reach our goal without fail, I want you to know. Be aware of how much help there is for all of Urantian mortals. Tonight I will receive a few questions.
[none.]

If there are no questions, I would ask you to review your commitment status and closely look at your decision to be God-like. Continue practicing stillness, and this week I will attempt to show you each the joy I speak of. Until next week, shalom.

Wounds of Fear May Block Our Decision To Be God-like. Fear Not Exposure From The Spirit Of Truth

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you this evening. It is always of supreme importance that you receive my transmission messages regardless of the number of people in attendance. To have one mortal receive my words is as important just as a thousand mortals receiving my message. I am always appreciative to participate in Michael's Correcting Time; you are all extremely valued, and I shall act accordingly.

What a wondrous time we have spent together. We have learned many morontial truths and have overcome numerous human obstacles. My instructions were to teach you what was appropriate for your group personality.

My main message has always been – believe yourself to be a child of God, trust in your divine overcare, and serve your fellows according to what you have been taught. In these truths are the core desire to be God-like; to believe you are Father's child; that you dwell within Him and Him within you. I find my desire and decision to be truly God-like continues to grow, just as it did when I first believed.

In accepting your status in the kingdom do you receive new responsibilities. Part of your responsibilities are to know Father's basic truths and perform them to the best of your ability. When you have made your decision to be God-like, you are committed to His will and learning to activate His will – you are learning to act upon your basic knowledge of Father.

At times you feel a selfish side of you say: "I know this is God's will, but I trust more-so in my own will. I choose my will." In deciding to be God-like, you are committing to go forth with courage and trust that Father's will is supreme. Without trust, you are diluting Father's power; you are making your God small and ineffective.

Trust must be a primary factor in making your decision to be God-like. Once you have made your decision to go forth and strive to be like your Father, there is really no turning back. Yes, you will stumble, but once you have decided, you will continually move forward.

This decision to be God-like can expose such fears deep within one's emotional reservoir, such as: fear of failure; fear of appearing unacceptable; fear of appearing less than you really are. I say, for a wound to heal it must be cleaned, disinfected. You cannot just bandage over an old wound and expect it to heal. The Spirit of Truth is your disinfectant. He will assist you in cleansing of your deep-seated wounds and help you work on them.

I say, if you have decided to be God-like, then will your fears rise and catch your attention – rather than to stay hidden in denial. To go forth bravely and cleanse these wounds of fear is to be assisted by the vast hosts of heaven. Yes, these fears and wounds are quite valuable. They are not to be covered up. These wounds can remain covered and stay an underlying painful trauma – or, they can be exposed to the healing light that shines forth from our Spirit of Truth.

In your decision to be God-like, know that in all afflictions, Father is also afflicted. He is your source of courage. He is the source of all courage. He is not about to let His child lay wounded and alone, no, He is to help His children help themselves in their own healing. You who have decided to be God-like – there are now no more excuses to strive for anything less; you are bravely going forth to acknowledge your wounds, which are your fears. You are to stand firmly in the soil of faith, yes, with the Son-light of truth upon your skin, and the rain from our Mother as needed, completing your connection for spiritual nutrition.

My lesson this week is to ask you to fear not – to trust in our Father who is unfailing in power and love, and who is unbounded by time or space. To view yourself as a courageous citizen in our universe is to understand that worshipful joy I have mentioned before. You may not be able to see the horizon now but I can say, I have viewed bits and pieces of this horizon – and I say, it is beautiful beyond description. I am filled with excitement when I ponder upon your discoveries. Have you questions?

RACHEL: Yes, Father Abraham. You said that we are to stand firm and not cover up our wounds or our fears, so my question is: Should we discuss this with the group, or with our Teachers, or with you – or, just with our indwelling Spirit? Some suggestions, please.

ABRAHAM: You can discuss your problems with the group, and you can discuss them with a Teacher – these are acceptable, yes, but I say, yes, the one who knows you beyond your own comprehension of your human frailties is your indwelling Father Fragment – and Michael, who is acting as a disinfectant. Michael assists in opening an infection and letting you see it; and you and your Father shall begin to act as the antibiotic. Most important is how you feel about perceiving your own fears; and then, in the sharing them with others. There is nothing wrong with that – in fact, it is helpful for others also. But the major work will be done by you, with the aid of your Father and Christ Michael. You can relate tonight's lesson to the world as a whole. Christ Michael and His vast legions of helpers are exposing all infections (or darkness); and mortals, with the aid of their Father, will begin to heal. Does this help?

RACHEL: Yes, it does. It helps a whole lot. But one thing I wonder: I may have a whole lot of sores that I don't realize I have. But to be honest, I have not felt like I was full of fear. Maybe I am and don't know it.

ABRAHAM: I understand. You have not always truthfully been so fearless. Much have you achieved to overcome and move forward. If you are not perceiving any wounds, do not look for them. When they arise, it will be clear and guided that you are needed to work on these wounds. You have experienced much fear and gathered around you a shield of courage, and you press on. Yes, your experiences have taught you that fear is nothing other than a course in spiritual learning. Yes. Is this helping? (Rachel: Yes, it helps a whole lot, and I kindly thank you.) Abraham: You're very welcome.

Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, thanks for your lesson and your insight into our personal needs in our lives, which you can only know by being so close to us, personally. I feel like lots of defects seem to surface about how I can cope personally with different situations – especially of late in the 'trusting' department. I think the lessons have helped me gain a lot more trust, but from your viewpoint, I guess I'd like to know how am I doing in the growth-process from your teachings?

ABRAHAM: Yes, it all depends upon your decision to be God-like. If you are choosing 'yes,' then you are to accept Father's will and perform as a child of God. Much lies in if you are 'hesitating' on your decision; if possibly there is some pulling back, then you are to continue to spin your wheels in the soil of human uncertainty. This decision need not be rushed. It is to be of your own choosing and feelings of readiness. To be in the midst of human turmoil is not to be viewed as such tragedy. As you make your decision to be God-like are you intrigued by turmoil rather than defeated; and, like a detective, you are curiously and enthusiastically digging for clues to solve such mysteries? Does this help? (Calvin: Very, very much.) Abraham: I say, you do well. Another question?

ROLAND: Last week you indicated that the desire to be God-like and then the decision to be God-like was, I suppose you could call it, a two-step experience. I feel like I desire to be God-like, but my commitment to it is shaded by the fact that I think, my goodness, what an incredibly high goal – am I worthy? or am I presumptuous to think that I could actually be God-like? Because you have said that such is within our reach, I believe it in a greater way now. I guess the thing that is really affecting me, at this point in my spiritual journey, is that I am having such a difficult time with what I call 'character defects,' or behavioral things that throw me off the spiritual path and definitely don't look to be God-like behavior. I am wondering if you have any kind of a suggestion you might make to me, generally? It might help in overcoming habitual patterns that is not God-like. Can you comment on that?

ABRAHAM: Yes, understandable. As you are accepting your son- or daughtership with the Father and truly believing you are a child of God, a cosmic citizen of the realm, you feel a need to begin to be God-like. This is your desire, just as you said. When the character defects arise, you are saying: 'I want to be God-like, but my emotions overtake me.' and your emotions are given more power than is our Father. When you 'consciously commit' to aspiring God-likeness, then are you immediately searching for His will, and there is no other answer than to search for His will. Yes, when you have decided to be God-like you are not relying on the weakness of emotions and mortal shortcomings. In deciding to be God-like – committing your life to making your best effort to strive to be God-like – you are relying on God's will, and there are no excuses for falling back to your uncommitted ways. Yes, when you have deeply and truly committed yourself to being God-like, then are you empowered with strength to go forward in a courageous manner. Do not believe you are not going to stumble – of course you are, that is natural. I am speaking of a real commitment to consult your Father Fragment with each of your mortal undertakings. Does this help?

ROLAND: Yes it does, very much. Is there any service I can perform that you might relate to me – a place that I might go, or to meet with people, that would be helpful in those times?

ABRAHAM: For me to direct you in where to serve is to do the work of our Father, and I am not qualified. I am certain you are extremely close with your inner Father and you are skilled at discerning His directions. You are quite dedicated in your desire to spread light and brotherly love, and I foresee no problems that may impede you. Are you understanding? (Roland: Yes, and I thank you.)

JOSHUA: Father Abraham, may I ask a question not related to the lesson? (Abraham: Certainly.) Joshua: A few days ago I received a call from Robert B. regarding Marcese, who was in Chicago. His left lung had collapsed, and he was operated on. Will he make it back to Ireland safely and maybe start a Teacher group back there?

ABRAHAM: His reason for learning of this Teaching Mission was to relay its messages wherever he resides. I am unable to say if his return to Ireland is probable, but I can say, my assignment, as far as your friend is concerned, has been successfully completed. He is a wonderfully enlightened son and I am quite grateful to know him. He is going to go forth with our Mission. Does this help? (Joshua: Yes, very much. Thank you.) Abraham: You are very welcome.

I am slipping. I wish to leave you with my deepest gratitude and love. I shall be around to help you in your education. Until next week, shalom.

Furtherance on `Desire to be God-like And Decision to Commit`

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-12-1996

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you this evening. I so look forward to meeting with you weekly. I am feeling we, together, stand on the brink of new discoveries. At times I feel overly anxious, and I tend to move quickly.

Last week I assisted you in discovering your own courage to face your personal fears. I must say, I am quite amazed at your willingness to learn higher spiritual values and be not afraid to trust in the universal overcare. You know well that fear has moved you to take certain actions that were not God-like; and, fear has held you back from doing what you thought to be God-like. I say, this 'commitment to be God-like' will remove many barriers of fear in your earthly and spiritual life pathways.

I labor not to lure you into spiritual privileges and higher means of divine living. I seek not to force you to decide to be God-like. I have nothing to gain from your decision. I have been instructed to teach according to Michael's plan of correction. I do not ask you to commit to being like God with the promise of spiritual rewards, no! I ask you to look deep into your total self and ask yourself: 'What is it about me that embodies all goodness and truth?' Also ask yourself: 'Without Father, who am I?'

Many times we face bitter self-disappointments; we chastise our mistakes and loathe our ignorance when all along, the goodness was there and not being utilized. I ask every day: 'Father make me like you.' I recognize the source of all goodness and I crave to be like that Source. I desire to know God and be like Him. I have made the conscious choice to be God-like and Father has responded.

This evening, I ask you to converse with one another on this topic: 'My desire to be God-like and my decision to commit.' Discuss committing to God-likeness and your idea of Father's attributes in which you strive to attain. This is all for this evening. Until next week, shalom.

Father, Make us Like You. Becoming God-Like Is Why We Exist

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, and welcome to you all. It has been an interesting week for myself and my associates. Our work has been upstepped to help this world back on course. We have endeavored to reach as many mortals as will allow. We are happy to report that the numbers of mortals we have reached has far exceeded our expectations.

We find mortals are indeed recognizing the need for Father to assist in mortal living. Somewhere deep inside the human experience is the acknowledgment that Father is needed. Unfortunately, at times mortals only call upon a higher understanding due to the traumas of daily living; but I say, Father answers regardless of how He is summoned.

You, my students, my friends, have assisted in our efforts to forward this Mission with your willingness to serve. You have not only served materially but also mindally. Your thoughts have traveled the universe circuits and have created a forward momentum that cannot be halted.

We that have labored to reestablish the kingdom of heaven on Earth are grateful for your faith in us. Do you understand that your perseverance and faith in myself and my unseen associates, was quite God-like? At any time you could have brushed aside this Mission and went about your own business. Yes, you, my friends, have resurrected me, so to speak; you have accepted my lessons and put them forth in your personal daily living. Yes, and I can say this was quite God-like of you.

Many of you have endured personal doubt and spiritual misunderstanding, but you have set aside your painful thoughts for the good of the whole. You have remained steadfast to Michael's Mission - all the while, attempting to understand your own personal duties in the Correcting Time. Even through confusion, you have kept coming back - and this I say, is quite God-like.

Ham had helped you to attain the tools you would need to practice being God-like. I have attempted to lay out the blueprints to guide you in your steps to becoming God-like. Your indwelling Father Fragment does provide the light to view all you need to understand, yes, and you have provided the willingness to work for what you know; and, you have done so without promise of compensation. You, my students, are faithful and have acquired strength beyond your own comprehension. Yes, willingness to be God-like is what brings you here. Willingness to be God-like is what drives you to serve. God-likeness is overlooking your personal gain in favor of the good of the whole.

My friends, you are closer to being like the Father than you know; it is a most natural, simple, and unrecognized way of being – meaning you seek not for recognition. To be God-like is truly your origin and destination; it is where you began your God-consciousness. I cannot say you are like God, but I can say our Father is apparently recognizable in all of you and is your destiny in attaining your perfection.

This ‘becoming God-like’ is not difficult to understand, for this whole mortal ascension plan is completely a natural way of becoming like the Father. This may not be recognizable to you now, but with your commitment to knowing your Father and striving to be like Him, you are asking to receive the spiritual tools to perform the will of Father – to become perfect, as He is.

In your decision to be God-like, you are accepting your responsibilities and are being endowed with the liberty to face any obstacle. You are asking for the courage and strength to go about the kingdom, always believing you are a child of God. You are increasingly recognizing that you are becoming a new spiritual being, one with untold strength and courage to go about lending a hand to other children of God, helping others to recognize they are valued and loved in the family of Father, which is known as the kingdom of God.

This night you shall experience a widening of your understanding, you shall feel of the excitement I feel when I ponder upon all God's possibilities. You are enabled to see a little farther down your spiritual path and be intrigued by the new understandings that will come your way. I would take this moment to show my gratitude to the one that makes all things possible.

Father of all fathers, we in attendance convey to you our deepest gratitude and unending love. We are deeply moved by one who cares so much for us. I would say, on behalf of the Teaching Corps and students thereof, we know that your love is our heart's desire, and we shall not fail you. We are empowered by your faith in us. And we ask you, Father, make us like you. Amen.

I will take a few questions this evening.

ROLAND: Father Abraham, we have with us tonight for the first time one who needs no introduction; but as a tradition to introduce to you, Victoria, a sister who has become aware of her membership in the corps of destiny most recently. She has known and had great desire to serve Michael, throughout her life. It has been a great pleasure to know her, and it is my great pleasure to introduce her tonight. If she has any questions, I would certainly encourage her to ask at this point.

ABRAHAM: Thank you, Roland. Welcome, Victoria. Is there anything I can answer for you tonight?

VICTORIA: I am impressed to offer up my deepest gratitude and once again my heartfelt devotion and my willingness to serve as I have felt it throughout my life. It is a great privilege to be here and once again confess my heart and my willingness to serve once again.

ABRAHAM: This is known, my daughter, and graciously accepted. Thank you. Another question?

ROLAND: To follow up on the idea of the 'mortal corps of destiny;' What has been illuminated to us in the Urantia Book is that we have been prepared, as corps of destiny members, to serve certain functions. It seems like there has been an evolution within the reserve corps of destiny – those people who are Corps members but are unconscious of such, to those of us who are at a conscious level who are aware of their training and knowing that we have been prepared from youth. What has actually changed, since the publication of the Urantia Book, for us to have conscious knowledge of our membership?

ABRAHAM: This Mission is what has changed. In the embracing of all mortals, the calling to all, the mortal reserve corps is being revised. The reserve corps will be open to the recruiting of those who answer the call. The reserve corps is now expanded and hoping to recruit a great many diverse groups – racial, cultural, various religious organizations, non-gender based – these are the groups we strive to recruit into the reserve corps. Does this help?

ROLAND: Yes, it does. Thank you very much. I am impressed to tell you how close I have become to you in my own consciousness, and how easy it is to love you as a brother. And, how much I appreciate your guidance and instructions to me in the face of my extreme humanness, thank you.

ABRAHAM: This is known and I likewise feel the same for you. I am in complete understanding of 'humanness,' yes. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, thanks for your understanding of our humanness. I'm sure it makes us all feel better 'being human.' I think that is why the universe administrators sent us help from those who were not so long ago, mortals, as yourself. I'm saying it is so helpful to us mortals of this Teaching Mission knowing you are so experienced in our mortal living, and so close to where we are. And yet, I understand this day and age may bring a different set of problems than yours. I was thinking on the way here tonight: I remember not long ago how a lot of times in my daily routine talking with Father saying: 'Father, forgive me for this, and forgive me for that.' It seems I previously was with a constant feeling that 'Father is disappointed in me.' I noticed today that I haven't been doing that, or feeling that way, for quite some time now. I am sure it is not that I am not still doing the same stupid humanness error things, but I think it's that I have come to accept that I am understood and loved and am okay in them. I don't need to keep saying 'I'm sorry, I'm sorry' at all anymore, but understand that I am growing, and that time and growth is quite a forever-process to perfection. Does that make sense? I know it is because of your teachings, and of my understanding of your teachings, that has helped me realize this for myself.

ABRAHAM: Yes. Understood. You are understanding. Your God-likeness is occurring; it is just happening. You are recognizing this, for this is your desire and it is happening. You understand your Father to know that He is a God of love, not punishment. It is not necessary to ask for forgiveness. It is more appropriate to say: "Teach me Father, for I am listening and ready to learn and understand." Yes, good observation. One more question?

ELWARD: You said that our thoughts have traveled the universe circuits and created a forward movement that can't be halted. I was wondering if you could enhance that thought a little bit?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I have instructed you that thoughts are 'living.' Your thoughts, along with the thoughts of the majority of this universe, are working to enhance the God-in-time. Yes, you are adding experience to the Supreme Being. The Supreme Being grows out of your experience; and, the Supreme Being is helping to propel our Universe Mission forward. This is all I can comment for now; as we learn more, I can reveal a little more. Does this answer? (Elward: Yes.)

ABRAHAM: I am asking you each to look for the God-likeness within yourself and attempt to recognize it in your fellows. I will assist you in your efforts to view the widening of your horizons. Until next week, shalom.

New-Found Liberty Finds Us With That Extra Step of Enthusiasm Each Day

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-26-1996

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you that risk the hazardous weather to meet here this evening. I am honored to be in the presence of you who practice courage. I trust this week has been enlightening regarding recognition of God-likeness within yourself and, within your fellows.

Becoming God-like is not for the halfhearted souls that seek happiness without the effort of learning. I am certain you will continue to perceive yourselves Father-like as you continue your spiritual learning. I am grateful for my position in teaching this particular lesson for I have thoroughly learned it by experience; and, I am happy to relay this lesson to you – whether you have experienced it already, or have yet to experience it.

We have come to the point of no return. This is not to cast shadows of fear but to shine the light of joy. You have earned your spiritual knowledge, yes, and that can never be lost. You have strived to know God and be like Him. You are firmly planted in the soil of commitment to the doing of Father's will, and this can never be taken from you.

You see why there is no benefit in going back? There is no logic in retreating back to old patterns of halfhearted reasoning and thinking. You now set sail upon the waters of spiritual knowledge that sits before you like the dawn of a new day. As you release your selfish habits, you set your sails toward advanced spiritual learning.

I am permitted to speak to you concerning God-likeness, but am not permitted to define it – the definition varies from person to person, there is no one definition for being God-like. As you sail upon this ocean of knowledge you are concerned with the whole. As you leave your self-interest upon the shore, you become concerned with everything that affects the journey, yes, for you consult with other shipmates, you question the condition of the ship, you attempt to foresee the weather patterns.

You are aware that you are not sailing this voyage alone. To be only concerned for your own welfare is to jeopardize the journey for all. To be only concerned with your own best interest is to overlook your fellow shipmates, the condition of the ship, and the weather patterns that may cross your path.

To me, a shipmate is fully interested in all components regarding the voyage; this shipmate believes himself to be as valued as the next, and there is no one person that believes themselves to be superior to the rest. The good shipmate is one who embraces all that affects his voyage and cares how he affects others. To me, I find this quite God-like.

Do you see, a person that has abandoned their sense of selfish gain is like a snake that has shed his old skin to reveal new and beautiful growth underneath. You, my friends, are new and beautiful. You are a new being once you have made the decision to be God-like – made the decision to drink from Michael's cup. As I have mentioned, along with your decision comes the duties of being God-like; and with that comes the spiritual tools to carry out those duties.

Those committed to knowing their Father and being like Him, feel set apart from so-called 'normal society.' Many who are committed to God-likeness are skilled at keeping their commitment hidden; there is fear that your decision to be God-like and to utilize your spiritual tools will be unacceptable and ridiculed by your fellows. I say, just as the reptile has shed its skin, you also have left your fear of appearing unacceptable behind.

As seekers of truth, you possibly are set apart from the average, yes, but I say, you are endowed with a freedom that some will never know for a long time to come. You believe yourself to be a child of God; you are immediately freeing yourself from the bonds of mediocrity; you are breaking the set molds that have been designed by mankind; you are discovering a liberty to use your spiritual tools and walk with lightness in your step – knowing full well you belong to the kingdom of God.

No longer do you bow your head in feelings of unacceptance. No longer does your step lack a show of enthusiasm for life. You are at liberty to proclaim: 'I am a child of God and I am empowered to act accordingly.' To know God and strive to be like Him is to no longer hesitate when taking action to be God-like. You are at liberty to use your spiritual tools to assist your fellows in their beliefs that they too are valued and indeed have a place at Michael's table.

This week, in pondering your own definition of being God-like, I would ask you to take note of your new-found liberty. Are there questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, thank you again for the lesson. These lessons are so very helpful in our week because these things come up during our lives which correlate and verify your lessons. In my own circumstance, sometimes I think I fail the lesson; but yet I think that is okay as long as I realize that the 'bandage is off and the wound is open to start healing.' A couple times this last week I didn't know if I was doing right or wrong when a situation arose and the way I handled it. When you said that Jesus didn't lay down before His troubles, sometimes He had to hit them right between the eyes, so to speak, with truth. Maybe by doing that I did it too harshly, or the wrong way, or shouldn't have done it at all, or a different way. It makes me wonder 'where is the God-like approach here.' I think you understand what I am referring to. Perhaps you could comment on how to handle confrontations in a more God-like way.

ABRAHAM: Understood. Many can attest to this particular lesson in learning to trust the Father. Jesus, He spoke firmly, yes, and yet, when His acquaintances heard Him speak, they had not the feeling of chastisement. They came away from Him with the feeling that He was truly concerned for them. They felt His love. His concern was out of love and not judgment. You must not rush through these lessons. My lessons are recorded and available for future use. Be not discouraged with your level of understanding and actions you have taken. Those that have committed to our perfecting process shall find themselves in the midst of many lessons on trusting the Father – you trusting Him, and discovering His trust in you. Yes, you must also be confident that you are very much capable of receiving God's will and putting it forth in your life. You are in need of also learning self-trust. Note if mistakes are made, your spiritual freedom enables you to go back to this mistake and do what you will to help correct it. Does this answer?

CALVIN: Yes, I don't know how much more clear it could answer. Thank you. In getting on the ship that you are talking about – we're setting sail on a ship, and sometimes it's hard to let go. It is like one foot is – I want to be on the ship, but a ball and chain, an anchor, is dragging me back or holding me onto the shore. That anchor can be someone close in life, or perhaps extreme responsibilities in life. Are you saying to take those anchors on the ship with me? Or, through experience and time to do what I can, to take the anchors off. Does that make sense to you?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Are these anchors your own mortal experience? (Calvin: They can be, yes, some of them are. But the bigger ones are responsibilities of survival – material survival; and also, harmony in relationships.)

ABRAHAM: Yes, remember – needed mortal experience is crucial in spiritual learning.

These experiences are indeed part of the journey, part of the whole; and it is fully acceptable to embrace these experiences and know that they are a part of your journey. What appears to hold you back is your fear of loss, and your fear of being overlooked in the kingdom. Once you have made your decision to be God-like, your worries and self-concerns are left upon the beach and you set forth to sail freely with great trust in your Captain. Your Captain will undoubtedly see to your overcare, and always reserve your seat at the table; make this a known reality. Does this help?

CALVIN: Yes, I think so. Maybe to put it a little more clear: Most of my daily waking life is spent in digging out of past obligations already set. It's like eight to twelve hours a day I am trying to make it, and the rest of my day I'm worried if I am going to. I know from past lessons you are saying 'let go' of the worry about these obligations and to just trust, and this trust will make things fit together okay. When you say 'don't worry about things left behind or lost,' I am trying to equate that with taking self-responsibility for my own situation. It's like I am caught in the tasks of taking care of what I have to do because I said I would; that I owe it, or whatever – versus, I wish it wasn't there so I could go on and learn and be more free; that I can take more time off and have more time for other things that would bring me more spiritual enjoyment. I think that trust is what you are saying – to trust those things will be provided for; is that right?

ABRAHAM: Yes. The fulfillment of your obligations is absolutely God-like and is necessary to your spiritual education. Father is understanding of your desires, yes, and attempts to assist you when it is necessary. I say, if these obligations are outstanding, then I say this is quite possibly Father's will for you at this moment in time – to honorably take care of them. The road to spiritual enlightenment is not quite constructed how we would like it to be; but be assured your heart is known, and it is safe to trust that your Father gives you what you need. You are, for the most part, understanding, yes. Does this help?

CALVIN: Yes. You're right, I think I am ninety-percent understanding, and the other ten-percent I'll catch during the week. Thank you very much. (Abraham: You are very welcome. One more question?)

VICTORIA: I have just come from that place of 'letting go' of a twenty-year marriage and great material wealth. And looking back, now that I am on the ship, I can see that the relationship ended because of the God space in my husband who removed himself – because he knew that he was the focus of my mission, rather than my mission being 'my mission.' What I have learned about 'God-like commitment' is that willingness to trust. Last night I had a powerful dream that I was on a ship and there was a tremendous storm. Christ Michael slept on the ropes. It had been a long laborious many days and He had not had any rest. The vessel was tipping to one side and the disciples were frightened and said: "Wake the Master for we will perish in the storm." And in my dream, my indwelling Spirit said: "This is the time for all of you to trust the additional power that you each have. You have watched Him calm the seas many times. It's time for you to use what you know, and have faith." And I awakened from my dream in more emotion than I have felt for many years of my mortal experience. I knew for the first time in my life what complete trust was all about. It is not only – 'did I have the Master,' who was resting finally, and who needed my full support, love, and faith – but, I had friends that I loved who also needed my support and my love; and in this thinking, I activated this 'there is no turning back,' faith. So my question is: Last week you talked about an acceleration in our work. I have experienced more and more trust, and more disinfectant from my wounds of fear. And, I have felt sensations in my body that are more powerful than I have ever known. Is this feeling that I am getting – and this seems to be in my body, spirit, and mind – is this the feeling to trust explicitly in the disinfectant? which is the promise of Christ Michael to disinfect our wounds, and to activate within us things that we had forgotten so that we can remember all this, in this acceleration-time that it truly is upon us, so we might see and realize that some of the things that we hang onto are the very things that keep us back until they are removed in proper time? (Abraham: Yes.) Victoria: And all this is so we can begin to progress, to advance? Is my question clear?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Your decision to commit to Father, and your willingness to serve, has brought you to an understanding that faith woven with trust is a real and powerful experience. This is not only felt mentally and physically, but is known within the depths of your soul. You are correct that it is a time for acceleration. We endeavor to reach as many as we can. This world is practically suffering from a state of shock due to the rapid upswing in the amount of spiritual knowledge. I say, you are correct in your interpretation; and I feel you indeed hold a great many keys to the doors of universe understanding. I am honored to work with you and your mortal friends that attend.

I am slipping. I shall be honored to speak with you again soon. Until next week, shalom.

Make Our Commitment to Father `I Shall Move Forward.` In This, We Receive Those Tools Needed

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-04-1996

I am ABRAHAM. I am happy you have returned this week. Last week our lesson was somewhat direct and may have possibly frightened some. We discussed your commitment and dedication which has evolved beyond the point of return. I stand in awe of your courage to proceed. I am filled with excitement to be a part of your spiritual journey.

I have labored to spread Michael's vision of Light and Life to those that would hear. I have received appropriate training. I am qualified to teach and have been given the proper spiritual tools wherewith to teach. I can say, as it is for me so shall it be for you: I live, I experience, I learn, I teach – these are simple facts that most mortals can expect along their mortal journey. Without my indwelling God, I find it highly unlikely to be so qualified for teaching these spiritual truths.

I must say, I had many doubts and confusing thought patterns along my mortal spiritual voyage. At times I felt hopeless and out of control, for in my own life I had experienced horrible phases of doubt and faithlessness. In spite of these doubting episodes, I found myself repeating: "I shall move forward."

I was unsure in my moments of doubt, yes, but I vowed to continue in a forward motion, nonetheless. As I grew spiritually, I began to trust this attitude, and I realized this attitude is what pulled me forward through those times of confusion. There was no turning back. I vowed to stay the path.

As my spiritual thoughts developed, I found my trust for Father increased, my dependence on His will increased. And, I found my times of despair and confusion decreased, they were quite bearable. You see, my thoughts were always changing, always evolving, and I desired my thoughts to stay in that forward momentum. I desired truth and I never wanted to stay at a belief that was stagnating.

As we all know, it is quite difficult to believe without seeing. It is, also, difficult to be committed to moving forward without guarantee of the actuality of a loving Paradise Father. It is after many battles of doubt and perhaps even despair that you make your decision and commit to Father: "I desire to move forward."

Many mortals can only go so far before they are 'overtaken' by fear and doubt. Many choose to find a safe level of faith that they are familiar with, and their desire to move forward is not present. This is not bad, this is simply a delay and is acceptable. Still, we endeavor to reach these individuals even they are unwilling to move. Yes, this is acceptable; this does no harm for there are yet valuable experiences gained during these stagnant periods.

To you who have that drive to move forward, you will indeed do so. You have begun to understand your relationship with your Father. You are believing to be His child. You acknowledge His presence within you. You are accepting His will – be it favorable or unfavorable in your eyes. You are vowing to move forward without promise of reward. Yes, you are becoming God-like. You are drinking Michael's cup be it sweet or be it bitter.

To strive to know your Father and be like Him is to experience a domino effect in that once the first domino falls there is no stopping its forward momentum. In striving to be God-like, you are receiving of spiritual responsibility and receiving the tools needed for these responsibilities in carrying out of Father's will. In recognizing Father's works and assisting Him in them, you are receiving the liberty to carry out your duties as a child of God and feeling the indescribable joy that springs from your closeness to Father. You are teaching what you have learned without fear of failure, without worry of ridicule.

Do you see, with your determination to know God and be like Him, you are setting off the other dominos, or fruits of the spirit. Yes, my friends, it just happens! It is not to cause you anxiety but is to cause you joy, and, to keep your movement heading toward Paradise.

If I may add another domino to tonight's lesson, I would include worship. Yes, worship is that gratitude to our Father that sees to our watchcare. I would express my gratitude to one who has brought me this far in my steps to Him. [pause.]

This week, as you continue your learning on God-likeness and liberty to act

God-like, ponder upon His carefully-guiding hand that directs you. Take a moment to acknowledge His care and love. Set a time to return His love in a moment of worship. Have you questions?

ROLAND: Paramahansa Yogananda wrote in his book 'Spirit Quest' that the greatest success is a man who becomes God-like. He didn't use those words, but I think he said 'God-conscious.' He wrote: "There is a time when you can stand in the midst of adversity, chaos, tragedy, and still feel a sense of joy." Is that your experience, Abraham? And, is that something you could say that we could actually grow into - the ability to sense joy in midst of adversity? (Abraham: Absolutely.)

ROLAND: To follow up on that: As you speak of drinking of the cup of Michael in its sweetness and its bitterness, we only recognize bitterness now because we have not ascended to that place of sensing joy in the midst of adversity?

ABRAHAM: Yes, some may look at adversity as a curse, a stroke of bad luck, a nuisance. I view adversity as an assignment - that Father has blessed me with yet another assignment. He has taught me to deal with these matters and has given me the spiritual tools. Yes, He has entrusted me, yet again, with another assignment. I look to these assignments with great excitement. I am always intrigued by Father's mysteries. I am challenged to find missing pieces to solve His puzzles. You are correct, Roland, for as you all become more God-like you are all the more curious to see what Father has laid out before you - what is His lesson here, and what is this technique He uses. Father endeavors to make use out of most all your experiences, and He definitely keeps the journey to Him, interesting. As you say - some day, evolving mortals will view their adversities as something Father is trying to teach. It is difficult to work on a particular upset in daily life - and this is understood. It is very tempting to wish to pass-over without effort of understanding; without effort to learn. Yes, as work is needed in most areas of the mortal life, it is required also in the spiritual life. Is this helping?

ROLAND: Yes. Thank you very much. In the beginning of your discussion tonight you spoke of the similarity between your life of learning and teaching, and of your receiving the tools to teach. In the process of coming to us to teach, you are endeavoring to give us those tools, I assume, so that we also will teach those who we meet utilizing these tools that you give us now? Is that the process we are involved in?

ABRAHAM: Yes. I only point out these tools. It is up to you who gather them to decide how you use them; and this is through your understanding and desired commitment to be God-like. Yes, this is part of your experience now. Does this help?

ROLAND: Yes, it does, thank you. You mentioned that our indwelling Spirit is the guide, and that even in this moment of chaos and confusion He forms the words that are presented to us for our perfection. And in this manner of communication, is it through our indwelling Spirit that we teach others? and is reminding us of the way we are to teach? Or, do we need to absorb these ideas in order for the indwelling Spirit to be able to reproduce those words and idea-forms in a language that is understandable by those who we meet?

ABRAHAM: Yes, somewhat. To live by example, to show your mortal counterparts the technique in the ways in which you use your tools to cultivate your spiritual path, is right. It is not possible to share your understandings with those who have not yet asked your questions. It is entirely possible to teach when they have acquired a specific arena of spirituality and are seeking, for it is then that you will pick up your tools and help them to understand. It is wholly acceptable to share with those which you know will indeed be given their own tools. It varies from person to person – those that have committed to moving forward, versus those who are comfortable staying in one place. Does this answer? (Roland: Yes it does, and beautifully! Thank you very much for the lessons.) Abraham: You are very welcome, Roland.

JOSHUA: Abraham, you mentioned that you have received another assignment. Are you allowed to tell us what it is?

ABRAHAM: I was referring to perceiving adversities as assignments. When I am faced with a troubling event, I am perceiving it as an assignment – I am understanding that it is troubling to me, therefore I indeed have something to learn. Does this help? (Joshua: Yes. Thank you very much.) Abraham: You're welcome.

CALVIN: Abraham, you talked of the 'tools' that we, as your students, are to use. Are these tools you speak of – let's say, those of us who have been coming to your weekly lessons in which we are being taught and, hopefully, perceiving correctly to some degree – are these 'tools' consciously known to us? Or, are they largely subconsciously-accumulated tools that perhaps we are not conscious of yet? And if so, then is it in that moment then, when a friend is 'asking,' that our 'tools' will surface? Are we pretty well exposed to all of those tools we will need through your teachings, through your lessons?

ABRAHAM: We are barely scratching the surface. Yes, you are indeed knowing of many of these tools. And when you are searching God's will with an attitude of accepting His will, regardless of your feelings, then yes, you are receiving the spiritual tools of knowledge that you need at that moment. As we all evolve and move forward, we discover an innumerable amount of tools that await us. Does this help? (Calvin: Yes, it does help, and thank you.)

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I have one remark I'd like to make. How grateful and thankful we are to our Father for having you as our Teacher. I think it's wonderful with all the experience that you have had here on our same Urantia, our same Earth. I am indeed grateful, and I thank you.

ABRAHAM: I am indeed touched by your words, and I cannot fully express my gratitude toward you for allowing me to be here and do what I love.

RACHEL: Okay. And now a little humor: Father Abraham, right at this minute where are you situated here in the room? Are you right behind Ellanor? over above her? Are you sitting on her lap or on mine? Where are you? (Abraham: I am behind you.)

RACHEL: Oh good. No wonder I felt so good. [laughter.]

ABRAHAM: I am also grateful to Father for allowing me to become close with you, my friends and students. I shall check in with you this week to observe where I might direct my next lesson towards. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

The Forward Momentum of Nebadon. As We Patiently Move and Grow So Does the Supreme and the Universe

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-11-1996

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you, my friends. I am sorry for the delay. I have been giving each of you my personal greetings. I have been with each of you this week assisting in your understanding of God-likeness. It can be difficult to teach a specific lesson when each of you are on different levels of understanding.

I have this week done my research. I have studied the many possible routes in which to teach you, each one personally and collectively as a group. Upon completing my research, I consulted with those who assist me in my technique of teaching these lessons. My lessons may affect your understanding, but I say, you already know the inner-Teacher that helps you to understand all you need to know. I am secondary, and I am honored by that.

On your journey through to spiritual learning, you encounter many a wide variety of adverse experiences – and yes, many joyful experiences. As we know, it is sometimes difficult to understand and experience until you have traveled a bit further down your path. These diverse experiences teach you in a progressive manner in which you can move further. To gain one experience you must go through another; it is difficult to skip steps and yet advance; and, it is highly possible to trip. I am exceedingly glad to assist you in showing you these steps; it is the way of education on all worlds – those just ahead, assisting their fellows just behind.

I understand that we appear to be moving slowly, but I can guarantee you, this is for a reason. As Michael labors to uplift the planet He must be certain that we are in step with the Father's will. This is possibly why evolution appears to move slowly. Many are anxious and excited about this planetary awakening and may desire to skip steps. Father's will requires patience, understanding, time and experience, to make the most of those meanings and values each child must learn. I would suggest, direct your enthusiasm toward the One that makes all things possible. His plan will not be hurried.

This Correcting Time is like an operation, a delicate surgery. We must have the correct tools in which to perform this surgery. We must allow sufficient lighting in which to see how we will best perform our operation. We have our professional individuals trained for this procedure and they are scrubbed and prepared to work. To rush through our operation may possibly put this planet's health at risk. We are not pressed for time. We are fully focused on the area in which we will operate.

You, my students who participate in these morontial lessons (those now and in the future) are indeed a part of this team. You will assist in this operation. You are now being trained and given the proper tools, sufficient lighting, and are being properly scrubbed and prepared to work. We are in a forward motion that cannot be stopped. The surgery has begun, yes, and by the highest standards we are following proper procedure. We appear to be moving slowly, yes, but nonetheless, moving - moving forward.

You, my friends, have experienced doubt to the highest degree, and yet have vowed to continue in our operation. You see, it is not only this small room that is involved; it is not just the world that is involved - it is an entire universe. We are this moment, assisting in the forward momentum of Nebadon. We continually feed the God of this Grand Universe- we live, we experience, we learn, we teach - and in all this we give to the Supreme Being. You that have vowed to move forward, also move the God-in-time (the Supreme). You have vowed to be God-like, to drink the cup, to move forward, to assist in the growth of a universe.

We no longer refer to this planet as backward. We have seen enough mortals look upward and petition their Father for assistance. Yes, this planet moves forward. And, as this planet moves forward, so does the universe. You know not how many you affect; you know not of the hearts that go with you in your struggle to look upward. The universe watches and they cheer for you; they feel your excitement - and you, yes, can feel theirs.

The Supreme Being is best understood on simple terms. In time you will understand a great deal more about His contributions to you, personally, and to us, universally. We are on the edge of our seats. We watch in anticipation for those who hear and use our teachings. We are filled with the pure joy that flows out from Paradise and we are deeply grateful to our Paradise Father for being able to comprehend this joy - and, His guiding hand.

I say, Father, without you where would I be? Father, please know that I am filled with the gratitude of the universe and I wish to express to you my love for you. I ask that you know I am fully comprehending your love for me, and I am beyond words to express to you my feeling of awe and wonder for you. I would say it is your love for me that pulls me toward you, and I thank you from all that I am to all that you would have me be. Yes, I humbly thank you. Amen.

I would receive a few questions.

CALVIN: Abraham, I would welcome you again and express our appreciation for being our Teacher and our kind patient helper during each week. It can seem very busy in our mortal lives but it's sure good to know we are in a training course and we have all of the help from your staff and our divine Parents. I see that it is through these experiences of learning that we grow and realize things of spiritual value. Like Cory and I were talking about on the way down here - it's not in the Sunday church meetings as we once thought was the place where we would learn, but in our everyday living. You have helped us understand that, and to see that. Not too many years ago my mind could never have conceived of this. You have done a wonderful job in teaching us, I feel that you truly appreciate and love not only our potential selves but also ourselves 'as we are.' I say again, thank you very much. And yes, it does seem like it's a slow process, but now I don't seem anxious anymore to hurry it up.

ABRAHAM: You are entirely welcome and correct. My sons, Calvin and Cameron, many attend traditional religious services and leave there with as much as they want. Some religious gatherings are indeed fruitful, and I say, fellowship is important. You are correct in saying you have much to learn out of your daily living, providing you are conscious of the lessons being given. Yes, all religions have truth, but it is the 'individual' which holds the map to Paradise. Your words are well said, and I appreciate your open attitudes. I also thank you. Another question?

AMANDA: Abraham, I have felt either your presence perhaps several times during the week, or maybe another Teacher. Have I finally been able to make contact with a personal Teacher? or was that you? It really felt like more than one. If I have a personal Teacher, could I know that Teacher's name?

ABRAHAM: It is I that has accompanied you this past week. Before, you were noticing a Teacher by the name of Terron. Yes. Correct. He has assisted you in your training to learn this practice. May I say, one of the main purposes for learning this communication is for you all to become familiar with your indwelling Father. You shall see it is not as difficult as you may think. It is quite natural and not to cause you anxiety or fear. You have requested this help, yes, and you have been given help. Terron is a marvelous trainer as to successful techniques in this method of Spirit-to-spirit communication. I would not rule out other Teachers, or messages from the indwelling Father. Does this help? (Amanda: Yes. Thank you.)

ROLAND: In my contact with the Pocatello group and the Tallahassee group there are several transmissions which indicate that along with the twelve Melchizedeks who will return to the Earth, or who have returned to the Earth, there is a Magisterial Son that is due here in a short time. What is your understanding on this; and can you enlighten us as to these other transmissions?

ABRAHAM: I cannot confirm nor deny. I can only assure you that this planet is receiving the required help that is needed at this time. I am not able to make any estimates on who will be helping or when they will help. I am aware that when you are to be informed of spiritual events you will surely be contacted. This is difficult for me to become involved with speculation. I assume you have all experienced this and have been disappointed on occasion. In time, and as this world becomes more connected to Father and His universe helpers, this knowledge will be instant and unextraordinary. Does this help?

ROLAND: Yes, it does. I know that our mortal perception of you and your work is not seen the same as is those from your side who are assisting. If I can put my two cents-worth in, I think that the way MachiventaMelchizedek came to a shepherd and said: "I'm from God, what's for supper?" is better than speculating some event in the future – it takes our attention away from what can be done this moment, and any time we do that we turn our attention to an event that is outside of ourselves. So in my perception, I think that all speculative types of transmissions are less than productive, perhaps even counter-productive.

ABRAHAM: Well said. These are also my thoughts. Thank you. Another question?

ROLAND: The immediate difficulty I'm having at the moment I guess is to cease making judgments of other people. It seems like in the judgment, it creates my own unhappiness. Do you have any advice on how one can advert that natural pattern to wrongly assess and judge another person?

ABRAHAM: You are perceiving this correctly. You are becoming conscious of this, and this awareness is the effects from the falling dominos of those spirit poisons that easily beset us. You have decided to be God-like, and therefore you perceive this change needed in yourself. This is a wonderful step in moving forward. I would advise those who are particularly judgmental to look back and possibly remove some of the old bandages to where you had first learned this habit. Somewhere you have been hurt by being judged and you may possibly cover this shadow of pain with your own judgment of others. This is not bad. This is to find joy, for you are receiving an assignment. This is good. I would assure you that the dominos are falling and your desired change will certainly come about. Does this help?

ROLAND: It does. I would like to follow it up with just a brief question: Is it better when you have a difficulty of having this judgment for a particular person to stay away from that person so that it is not a present threat? or is it better to express our feelings?

ABRAHAM: It is difficult for me to find one specific answer without knowing the circumstances. I would always say that it is God-like to be honest without being hurtful. It is helpful to express yourself in a manner that is like the Master's - He was truly concerned for His fellows, and He judged them not. He was, however, in favor of truth. Jesus always put Father's will, first - He always consulted His Father, first. He never intended to hurt anyone. His truthful sayings were apparently hard, but I would have to say, His techniques were certainly God-like. He was a wonderful example of strength and compassion. Is this helping?

ROLAND: Yes, it is. When you mention the Master, His way, it certainly gives me a clear understanding of how it is that we should be, as difficult as that might be. I have one other question. Sorry to be taking up so much time. In the last thirty days, this process of getting the toxins out of my body, I feel like I have been pulled through a ringer. Is there anything else that is happening with my physical being? I guess what I'm asking: Do you have knowledge of anything?

ABRAHAM: I am aware that your mental transformation causes your physical transformation. As we all grow intellectually and spiritually, many different areas of material discomfort will be affected. This is not to worry. I say to let time pass and check back with me another time. Does this answer? (Roland: It does.)
Abraham: One more question?

VICTORIA: I appreciate your assistance this week as you have assisted me in reconnecting in the stillness-time. I appreciate your sweetness as you have taught me about your slow pace. I knew it was you who had been teaching me when you mentioned the importance of the fact that you may think we are moving slow; however, we are moving perfectly. I have known this week, greater love and greater peace than in my last forty-three years, and I thank you. Through that peace, you mentioned that we are surgeons, and in the 'stillness,' as we approach those who we are operating on, it's important that we do it slowly, with the right precision and using the right light. Am I correct in my assessment of the peace that comes through the stillness? the tools come through our daily connection with our God-source? Our direction is truly given to us 'moment to moment' in that time of stillness; and I have found that it's my greatest tool and greatest source of peace. Is this correct?

ABRAHAM: Absolutely. It is within the stillness that we are once again told who we are – children of God; we are reconnected with our source of origin, which is nutritional value to the soul. To take steps to nurture the soul is as important as caring for the health of the material body – perhaps even more so! When all is good with the soul it has a rippling effect throughout the rest of the areas of living. You are correct. Yes, the stillness is a drink at the well of God-connectedness. Are you still desiring a personal meeting? (Victoria: Yes.) Abraham: Very well.

I am happy to meet with all of you again this week in your understanding to be God-like. Until next week, shalom.

A Teacher Can Only Teach Where There Is One Who Seeks

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-18-1996

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. Your communication with one another appears to me as a bright light shining off the Earth. I am filled with joy as I listen to you each accepting one another's differences. I am perceiving you are being your true selves, the true personalities that Father granted you each with.

We have learned a great deal about the human emotions which are generated from human experiences. I have seen you use your spiritual tools to begin mastering your human emotions and learning to relate to fellow mortals. You all know the basic facts of spirituality. You know what is true, good, and beautiful.

You have spent much time in climbing the staircase to the mastering of the self. You have committed to becoming like God. You have labored to know who God is, it has not just been given to you – you have worked for your knowledge. Yes, you have strived to put forth these God-like attributes into your daily living; and needless to say, it has not been easy.

Those who are committed to knowing God and to become like Him, struggle for their understanding. This understanding is priceless. This understanding you possess means so much because you have worked for it. Knowledge that is freely given without effort to research is taken for granted. Knowledge freely given is not as valued and appreciated; it does not lead the individual to continue to search for Father. I say, you will know this is like our Mission – knowledge and understanding will only come about by your effort to search, to experience these lessons, firsthand.

Yes, to really understand, you must experience. A small child attends a class; this child must read, research, memorize, and repeat the desired lesson again and again. A teacher cannot simply tell a student a lesson and expect the student to remember without any further effort.

A successful student possesses the desire to research, to understand, to continue in this learning until he has good memory recall. The good student does not lay his head on the desk and cry for understanding. This student must read, even re-read; and, must ponder and relate equations with symbols he understands.

Yes, it takes persistence and drive, to keep going. You, my friends, well know this, by experience. You know that your indwelling Father, Christ Michael, myself or others, cannot lay your desired answers at your feet, for you see, you simply would not retain this information without having experienced it, personally. Those who search, find. Those who listen, hear. Those who try, succeed.

I am very honored to assist you in your education; and yet, I am permitted to only go so far. At times I burn with desire to tell you my understandings of the universal inner workings. I am restrained by my knowledge of the techniques on teaching in the mortal world. I wish to give you my joy and understanding, yes, but that is not possible – it would not be the same as your own discovery of this joy. Yes, this understanding of spiritual truth takes effort on your part. Do you see, this is a most effective way to teach, for you are not about to receive information that you are not seeking.

In your quest for spiritual knowledge, I must say there is a well containing an abundant amount of clean pure refreshing water of knowledge within this very group. Your interaction with one another is indeed, partaking from this well. Yes, to relate with each other is indeed, a labor necessary to spiritual understanding. Human relations cannot be passed-over in your education toward divinity. To understand your fellows is as important as speaking about your own inner feelings. Yes, you must indeed make an effort to be understood – as well as to understand.

I have spoken before on the subject of ‘you taking your place in the world.’ I am these days more-so with the feeling that you have indeed found your seat at Michael's table. You are believing and trusting yourself to be a child of God. You are assuming your positions, and accepting of others’ positions as well. You are believing there is room for all. There is no need for one to believe they must have the seat next to the Masters'. All are feeling valued and that they belong.

This is, yes, an opening to accept yourself ‘as you are,’ and continue to be that beautiful personality that God Himself had created. This information – acceptance of one’s beautiful and unique self – should indeed, remove fear and anxiety. This ‘new-self realization’ feels natural, and propels one to feel free to be honest and open to new possibilities; open to understanding one another, without judgment. In knowing and understanding your fellows, you are with knowledge that they stand ‘with you’ in the kingdom.

Yes, spiritual understanding takes effort; and relating with your fellows is part of that effort. Relating with one another opens that well of information with one another and gives you that feeling of belonging. I say you know well my lessons; you indeed have put forth effort to apply them; but I also say, understanding one another is a lesson beyond my own capacity to teach. The effort, as you know, will be up to you.

This week I would ask you to focus on communicating and allowing time to understand other’s communications to you. Have you questions?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, you said that you wished that you were able to give us your knowledge and your joy. I think you do some of both all of the time because along with all of these lessons and everything, that you are giving us a lot of knowledge, also. I also feel like your joy overflows to where we can actually feel it. I thank you.

ABRAHAM: You are very much welcome, and I also share in your joy and wisdom. Thank you. Are there more questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, thanks again for your lesson. There are many within our religious society who are afraid of what you are saying here. It does not resonate with them because they have been taught that 'revelation' is not available to just anyone, such as you are revealing truths to us. I'll say it in a different way: The religions of the world, those which I am familiar with, teach that we are not to seek for the mysteries of the unknown but to just live the rules, make an attendance, and pay the dues. They warn heavily that 'to reach out for higher understandings of things you don't know' is wrong and very risky, and opens one up to 'the devil's influence.' I have been in that seat before, and I now see how binding and blinding that thinking was and is. What would we say to such a religionist who is afraid to seek 'outside the box,' so to speak, for higher understanding of new things?

ABRAHAM: Not a lot. [laughter.] It is indeed up to each individual. You yourself, as an example - there came a point when you found the courage to seek for 'something more.' You accepted the liberty Father bestows upon His children to keep moving toward Him. This world is moving so fast. So many are realizing the bonds that traditional religions bring upon them, yes; and many will either reach for higher understandings or not reach at all. These individuals are not doomed by any means. Delayed, yes, but not doomed. As this world evolves, its inhabitants reach for higher understandings - just as a child's foot grows beyond its shoe and new shoes are sought. I recommend that you each live your understanding of spirituality, and set this example before your fellows. Let the radiance of Father show upon your face and I guarantee your fellows will curiously seek this source of your happiness. Does this help?

CALVIN: Yes it does. I know it doesn't do very much to worry about, or even wonder much about, the 'why.' The prevalent religion here in Utah was based on a passage of scripture which says: "If any man lacks wisdom let him ask God, who gives to all men liberally" - which has been the subject and emphasis of all your lessons, that if we seek and reach, we will find and hear. If I am understanding you correctly, you are saying that it is in the degree of desire that we 'want to know,' is the measure of which 'we will be fed.' I think the thing that binds the LDS Church down, like many other religions perhaps, is the prevalent thinking that if God wants them individually to know something He will go through their sanctioned leader to deliver that message. And I think those leaders are keeping them bound by that very teaching - the people really are convinced that revelation will come through their leaders, and they don't expect there will be anything new unless it does come through their leaders. Therefore, I think if their leaders would break open and say to their members something like: 'Hey, you can receive from God on your own, you don't need us for revelation;' and do so by reminding them of their noted passage, which was the very impetus of their church-beginnings: "If any man lacks wisdom, let him ask of God..." that surely there would be a lot more freedom, and a releasing of their fears of being 'led astray.'

ABRAHAM: Yes, you are correct, to a point. Many have this knowledge and live the rules; and yet, still hold fast to what they know deep within their soul. They find it easy to follow the set rules so as to appear righteous, but still, they know of their free will, and the Father Fragment, within. If one person in leadership position did choose to stand in favor of this concept you speak, it would be surprising to see how many others would also stand. You are correct in saying those that lead would definitely have to be the first ones to stand. Yes, good question. Does this answer? (Calvin: It helps very much, yes. And I do have a new insight from what you are saying.)

HONORAY: Father Abraham, I haven't asked a question of you for quite a while, but I appreciate your teachings and all that we are doing with our class to make ourselves better. I would like to say tonight how grateful I am for Elward and Joshua for involving me in these teachings. It was clear back in 1977 when we worked together at Sperry. It feels that all my life I had been taking a class, teaching a class, or reading a book searching for this or searching for that. When I finally went to work at Sperry, where I met these two precious brothers, we were working together, and because of Elward's persistence with me, he was challenging me to read this big blue Urantia Book. And at that point I didn't care if I read another book for a while because of all my intense studying and taking classes. But I want to thank Joshua and Elward here today for their persistence in getting me interested in the Urantia Book study classes. I started coming to Joshua's home for group-study all those years ago, and I don't think I have told them enough how I appreciate their persistence. Yes, finally I said I would read their suggested book if they say it's good - and it was because of their attitude, persistence, and enthusiasm which I saw in them. So yes, I believe when the student is ready the teacher will appear. That was one of the quotations that was taught. I must have been ready at that time because I really appreciate their perseverance with me. So I love your lessons, Abraham. And, I love the precious brothers and sisters of mine that have put up with me all these years. I just want to thank them.

ABRAHAM: Good example of tonight's lesson, Honoray. It was through communication that you were able to join with this particular group. These brothers would probably agree with me when I say 'telling someone about the Urantia Book' is hard work. It takes a great deal of love of this book to put forth the effort in telling others. It takes a great deal of courage to appear different in order to release information. Yes, I appreciate your comments and am thrilled at your participation in this group with these hands-on spiritual lessons. This group can at times be an anchor for your ship when there are storms upon the seas. Yes, and thank you. Another question?

If there are no more questions I shall take my leave. I wish to express my gratitude and love to you each. I will continue working with you in your understanding of God-likeness. Peace go with you. Shalom.

Understanding One Another is Multi-Adjuster-Mindedness

Machiventa, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-25-1996

Back

I am MACHIVENTA. My greetings to you students of my long-time friend and associate, Abraham. Long are the days we have spent working to uplift this planet. Abraham and I have discussed various plans of moving this world closer to an enlightened majority. We had many discussions over various techniques in methods of teaching.

I have appreciated our open communication with Abraham and members of the Teaching staff; but I must say, I deeply cherished those personal conversations with my friend – those conversations that surpassed thoughts, planning, and organizing. Our conversations that stemmed from the heart of our friendship were indeed personal ministerings to one another – with an open heart and an attitude of love. Even through misunderstanding, there was the love.

Upon meeting Abraham, I have labored to understand him, his position – a mortal man from an evolving experimental planet; a man mentally competent and tradition-bound. It was through many hours of conversing that we grew in understanding, and our friendship gave us unlimited levels of comfort and happiness. Long are the days we have spent together; and each moment I meet with him, still my heart is made lighter.

My understanding of Abraham has grown as he has experienced – experienced mortal death, experienced the morontial life, and so on. The man I knew as a mortal on earth is not necessarily the man I know now. Yes, he is still in a state of becoming; he still makes an effort to learn and grow through experience. I am privileged to have been present through his evolutionary growth, and I am in deep understanding of this person.

I know you, my friends. I strive to uplift this planets' values and endeavor to raise the consciousness towards our Creator. I may not know you as well as I would like to, but that is not my place to do so. You are very aware of the One that knows and understands you better than you could understand yourself. Your indwelling Father is so close to you, to your soul, to your true self, that He is almost appearing to be you – for it is so. This indwelling God has been with you from the start and without a doubt will carry on with you through your eternal destiny. In learning to be like this God, you are learning to know Him.

I do not claim to know my friend, Abraham, as his personal God knows him. I speak that I may help you to understand yourselves in relation to your indwelling God and the personal relationship you have. In learning to communicate with each other you are learning to understand God-likeness; you are open to the opportunity to be witness to your fellows putting forth their idea of God-likeness. In relating to one another you are also sharing in multi-Adjuster communication. The joining in communication is the joining of Father Fragment communication.

Yes, the joining of indwelling Adjusters is adjoining to the universal communication circuit. This seeming-unimportant conversing is likely to adjoin you to the universal consciousness; what seems like small talk may in actuality connect you with the universe. We teach the lessons of honesty, tolerance, being forthright and with tactfulness, so that your communications are prosperous toward enlightening the whole. Yes, your honesty and love for your fellows definitely does make a difference in world consciousness of universal meanings. Be not afraid to speak. Let not those who wish to remain in the shadows also pull you into those shadows. Again, be not afraid to speak – for you also hold a seat at the Master's table.

It is my request that we forfeit the questions; and possibly, for the time remaining, discuss this lesson. Abraham shall return next week. I am honored to speak with you and I send you with my love and peace. Farewell.

To Stand Upon The Foundation Of Truthful Love Opens The Door To Effective Communication

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. I am very much enjoying your discussion. Observing you demonstrating those spiritual tools which have been shown to you, it is a wonderful sight to behold, yes; and yet, fairly uncomplicated for you.

I wish to thank my friend and mentor, Machiventa(Melchizedek), for his lesson this past week. I can say without a doubt that his guidance and love has helped me to be what I am at this present time. My friend, Machiventa, appeared to be a complex personality to me when I first met him; I assumed he was beyond my level of understanding; and therefore, such friendship was not possible.

As I grew in understanding of Machiventa, I realized the most important part of my understanding of his being was the open honest love he put forth – not his intellectual knowledge, his spiritual status, or his understanding of the concept of the 'One God,' no! what connected us as friends was our mutual love for one another – honest love.

My co-workers, my fellow Teachers, also reveal to me this 'truthful love'. When we gather to discuss plans and teaching methods, we are all connected beyond the obvious purpose in which we gather. Our truthful love of one another enables us to accept our diversity. We may not always agree but we are always standing on the foundation of our truthful love of one another.

God is love, the source of all love. And I say, it is this love that binds us as a family – the kingdom of heaven. You are aware of these moments of pure and honest love. Such moments may appear to be few, but I say, as you grow in your spiritual understanding, you are indeed more aware of these moments of truthful love. In my work, I attempt to communicate with individuals in the hope that this world may be more God-conscious. To communicate with mortal individuals there are many items to consider:

- 1) Is the individual ready and open to these communications?
- 2) How might I help this person understand my message through their own life-experience.

- 3) Timing. An appropriate time must be chosen. I cannot reach one who is in anger or fear.
- 4) Position of individual faith. It is the individual's desire and belief that helps me to be heard more clearly.
- 5) My message – what message am I to impart to this individual to be of benefit towards moving the whole.

Yes, there are many factors I must decide upon. I cannot rush forth in anxious anticipation towards an individual. There is planning and always consideration of Father's will. There is, at times, needed authority-clearance before I can proceed. Many small monotonous details must be accomplished before I can proceed with my actual message. It is much like the way in which you communicate with your fellows. You must at times ponder over small details before you can put forth your actual message. Details such as:

- 1) Who is this person I am about to speak to?
- 2) What is their life-experience and how can I best help them to understand me and my message?
- 3) Are they open to honest statements that may come from me?

There are many levels of communication that you are required to learn. But I say, to stand upon the foundation of truthful love, indeed opens the door to whatever may occur during communication. This foundation is indeed, a wonderful place in which to build your scaffolding of ideas and insights.

Machiventasa said: "Truthful communication leads to multi-Adjuster assistance." This group is a wonderful place to learn and teach. With or without myself (or Teacher assistance) there is a well of information within these groups. This well is abundant with infinite ideas; and insights for this well is indeed the multi-Adjuster communication, which is indeed, our Father.

Yes, the foundation of truthful love is a sturdy place in which to build your spiritual understanding. I say, let not those who are downcast, ruffle you. The foundation of truthful love enables all to build upon the scaffolding of spiritual understanding; there, is always the foundation, no matter what might be built upon it. Have you questions?

RACHEL: I have a comment, Father Abraham. Speaking of love – when Father Ham was here teaching us I grew to love Father Ham very deeply, even to the extent that when he left and wasn't going to teach us on a weekly basis anymore, I really felt brokenhearted. Then, as you know, we went for so long without a Teacher. And now, what a wonderful experience it is to have you start teaching us on a weekly basis. Now my love for you has grown very very deep. It is growing by leaps and bounds and I thank you for being with us.

ABRAHAM: You are certainly welcome. My love is also with you. Ham indeed built a foundation of truthful love, and those that were involved with him will always be a part of this foundation. I now build my level of scaffolding upon his; and I say, I am connected to this foundation of truthful love. I am also connected in this multi-Adjuster communication. We are many times connected with the universe, and I say, this indeed affects the Supreme Being or the movement of the whole. I thank you for your invitation for me to teach. Doubt not that Ham often abides here with me as an assistant. Thank you. Another question?

ROLAND: Abraham, you spoke of understanding what the background and the culture of the person who is receiving the lessons has had in order to coordinate what you say to them that is specifically designed to touch their frame of reference or culture. I am wondering how that relates in this Adjuster-to-Adjuster communication, and to put it into a context of reality. Yesterday I was sitting with a woman, Japanese origin, at a restaurant. She had some questions and I sensed that what was coming out of my mouth was not anything to do with me forming the ideas or the content to meet her needs, and yet they were being met specifically and exactly. It seemed I had no control over what that was, so I didn't prepare myself. I didn't know her culture. I only spoke the words that were given to me. How then does that relate to this idea of preparing yourself to the cultural frame of reference of the person that you are teaching? Could you comment on that?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. As it applies to a group setting, and attempting to understand individuals and their level of tolerance (their openness for your message) it takes some thought. I at times desire to tell you what I would have you know, and yet I am refrained, by my teaching experience, on what and how to share. It would be of no use for me to communicate to you what you would not be open to. I know you. I have some knowledge of your experience. I am able to speak with you in a particular way that is most progressive. Group understanding (learning to communicate within a family unit) is at times more difficult than speaking with strangers. You are fairly knowledgeable about your family. You know what would be hurtful or helpful. Individual communication to one person whom you are not familiar with is more intimate and easier at times to surpass ego desires and put forth pure Adjuster communication. You are learning that this Adjuster communication is at hand, and is available upon demand. This occurrence is very natural and a wonderful way to benefit both parties – the giver and the receiver. I, tonight, speak mostly about group dynamics and the foundation of truthful love in which you can assist one another in building the scaffolding to spiritual understanding, and the Adjuster connection therein. Is this answering? (Roland: Yes it does, it clarifies.)

RACHEL: Father Abraham, with the multiple Adjuster communication, is there any way that as a group we could practice to enhance this communication among our group as far as the Adjusters are concerned? Do you have some suggestions there? or are we not far enough along even to get into any of that?

ABRAHAM: Yes, as I said at the beginning of our meeting tonight, your communication is quite wonderful and uncomplicated. Your communication is what ignites the spark of Adjuster-to-Adjuster communication – very simple. Your wonderful truthful conversing with each other is how Father may reach you all, collectively. Yes, communication is a required course in your spiritual education. It is that simple – to stand upon the foundation of truthful love, and each adding to the scaffolding of spiritual understanding. You see, you are all assisting one another to climb higher in your understanding, with the comfort of knowing that if one should fall, the foundation of truthful love makes for a soft landing. Good question. Another question?

JAMES: I have one Abraham. It occurred to me recently that I had an experience in about 1978 that was sort of a crisis in my moral development when I was faced with temptation. I recall, I must have been reading about you in the Bible at that time; and when I was seeking for strength, you were in my mind; and I may have even asked for your strength at this time rather than asking God for strength, or to ask Jesus. As I reflect on it, it seems kind of odd that that happened. And then there was a song that I used to listen to, also at around those same years, that mentioned your name. I had a very strong attraction to that song all these years. Of course it leads me to wonder if you were having an influence in my life back then? or if this was just a coincidence of me having been reading the Old Testament at that time. Would you care to comment on that?

ABRAHAM: Yes. I have known you all for many years. I did indeed assist you in your urge to look for answers. But you are correct when you say you received the Father's strength. I indeed have inspired a few with the version of my life in the Old Testament records, and this perhaps played a small part, yes; but I do say with confidence that I have known you and assisted you frequently, and especially upon your request. I must comment - to ask me for strength was not wrong for you at that time, for that was your understanding. I can guarantee your petition did fall upon the correct ear. I can say, I have involvement with many in the corps of destiny. I have trained for this particular assignment; and I indeed have known you and other corps members for a number of years. It is not strange to trust your intuition about such matters. Yes, you are correct. Another question?

JAMES: I'll ask a follow-up question if no one else is wanting: For about twenty-five years, maybe a little less, the Urantia Book has been the most solid, dependable, reliable anchor in my life. A few months ago by virtue of reading a book criticizing and questioning the Urantia Book at length, that solid foundation in my life began to crumble. I have been working through the last few months just being with that experience, looking for truth in other places. It has been difficult, but it is just now beginning to be enlightening to me because it seems that the Urantia Book is more of a compendium of truths that have existed all throughout history, rather than a revelation of new truth - although there certainly is a lot of new information in it. Anyway, I am sort of rambling. I guess what I am getting at is I could use any help or insight that you could give me now or later as I am going through my daily activities. I could use some assistance in this. It has been a real trial.

ABRAHAM: Understood. Throughout history, man has searched for truth. He has attempted to contain and preserve this truth. Without being able to see this contained truth, what has man got? What is left when all records, all books, are no more? What has mankind got to rely upon for spiritual nutrition? I can say with authority that spiritual growth and understanding does indeed surpass any words recorded within material books. Man really only has himself to rely upon for spiritual nutrition. Man must turn inward and seek that which is the source of all spiritual knowledge. All the recorded material on this world could never replace your 'inner source' of truth. It was time for you, my son, to indeed turn inward and rely upon the source within. You could easily read any recorded material, and either believe or disbelieve; but it is your inner source that reveals to you that what you read is either truth, or not. The Urantia Book is indeed a well that is filled with knowledge and truthful meanings and values, yes; but this tool is to be used in conjunction with your inner Father Fragment. The Urantia Book is not to take the place of that which holds you dear and precious in His sight. The Urantia Book can teach about love, but it cannot love. It can speak about truth, but it is your own soul and Adjuster communication that can reveal to you the actual truth contained within this book. You are growing, as painful as that may be; and you are beginning to trust in your own Adjuster-guidance; and to use the Urantia Book as a 'tool,' and not a 'map' to Father. I can say without a doubt that all is indeed well and on course.

With that, I shall give you each my love and promise that I will be with you as Father deems it necessary. I thank you and will be with you in this week to come. Go in peace. Shalom.

The Kingdom of Heaven Stands Upon the Foundation of Love | Love is the Desire To Do Good To Others

I am ABRAHAM. I am delighted to meet with you this evening. I am in awe of the leaps you have taken towards understanding universe realities. It has been a long tiresome journey, yes, but you have been blessed with the joy that comes forth from the fruits of the spirit.

I have stated that I would endeavor to make these spiritual teachings a reality for you, something substantial you can rely on. I have taught according to the plans put forth by our Creator Son and His subordinates – plans upon which you can use on a daily basis. I have put forth my best effort along with my personal prayers for you and your understanding of spiritual growth.

You are indeed studious and devoted pupils, which makes my efforts to teach, quite easy. Through our endeavor we have sat upon a sort of 'teeter-totter' in which we have leaned this way, and that. We have experienced a vast array of emotions; a fair amount of both negativity and positivity – and still, we move. Yes, spiritual understanding is always moving. Whether it is concise or confusing, your understanding is always evolving, changing; and at times that may not always appear to be progressive – but I can say, you can always count on change concerning your spiritual understanding.

I am amazed at the growth within this world. The changes that are taking place are rapid. Mortals are finding God to be a reality, and the basic truths that we labor to spread are spreading successfully. I am inclined to rejoice and give thanks each time I witness this movement towards God-consciousness. I am made to smile at my thoughts on the effects that this world has on the Supreme Being and our universe as a whole.

I have spoken that the kingdom of heaven stands upon the foundation of love. God is love. It is, in actuality, so simple. The world is beginning to teeter towards the side of love. Where there is love, there is also God. The giving and receiving of love is to put in motion the operation of Adjuster to Adjuster communication. To communicate with love is to guarantee God's intervention. To facilitate love in all things is to guarantee the Father's hands working with your own; the Father's mouth also speaks with yours, and the Father's mind thinks also within your thoughts.

Love is seemingly so simple; and yet, many mortals spend a lifetime searching for it. Why is the understanding of love so difficult to grasp? As I said, spiritual thinking is always evolving; and I can say this world has evolved through many trials and does hunger for this love, and mortals have indeed begun to seek it out. This planet is in understanding of the effects of lovelessness. The pain and despair of this lovelessness has taught many mortals to seek other avenues of happiness and fulfillment. No, this is not a bump on the course to Light and Life; this is a natural process of evolution for a young planet.

I have asked you to seek understanding on God-likeness. I say, to understand true love is to understand the actual personality of our Universal Father. Love is the desire to do good to others. I say, without an honest effort to understand yourself and your fellows, the desire to do good is not present.

Spiritual understanding will not be lasting, without substance. Everlasting spiritual understanding can only come through experience – and therein lies your substance! for love is quite substantial. Do you see – love can be felt, can be seen, can be heard. Love is what all mortals truly desire. God is love. To know love is to know the Father. To know spiritual reality is to utilize it, constantly. Yes, love is substantial. Love can be used, can be held onto, can be the foundation for all understanding.

I understand this term 'agondonter' – I have experienced this status, and through experience I can say that spirituality does indeed require substance if it is to be lasting. Do you see, love is the only actual thing that you can use and move upon; and I say, move out from there – with love as your base, your foundation! Yes, love is substantial. God is love. To 'love' is the giving of God. To 'be loved' is the receiving of God.

To understand another is to open the door to love. To love is to open the door to 'Adjuster to Adjuster' communication. To activate this communication is to open the door to universal understandings, meanings, and actualities. You, my friends, my students, hold the power of God within your very beings. This power is love. I say, you have indeed built a wonderful foundation of love in which you can all feel at ease to build upon. The presence of God is within you now and always; not sometimes – always!

This week you may wish to work on giving and receiving love, opening the door to instant 'Adjuster to Adjuster' communication and universal understanding. May I answer questions?

CALVIN: Teacher Abraham, thanks very much for your lesson. It seems that when we ponder back and reflect upon your words, and read them later, they seem to take on a deeper meaning each time – at least it does for me. I feel like I have very little capacity to love and feel loved, so I know it's something I need to work on. Your insight is very helpful. One question in mind, and aside from tonight's lesson: I have done a lot of talking at my work, with plenty of friends and people there about our lessons; and it could be a factor in whether or not I move on to a different career. I am really at sixes as in what to do. I am sure it is a human decision, but if there is any help you would like to give, it would be a good time. Or, would you recommend that I just do what I think best.

ABRAHAM: First, I know you to be an extremely loving individual, more capable of giving than receiving. When you are believing yourself to be a child of God, then you must receive any love that comes your way. All God's children are deserving of love. If you believe yourself to be a child of God, then feel comfortable in accepting the love others give to you. I am overwhelmed at times of the love you give to me, and I would be overjoyed if you would accept my love in this same fashion. I am confident you are quite capable of Adjuster contact, and I say, your hardest decisions are best made with Him, your indwelling Father. You are correct, to a point – that this is a human decision. Yet, I ask that you ponder on the simple truth that 'before you were an employee, you were and are, a son of God.' And I say, Father is to be kept at the forefront of your decision. Does this help? (Calvin: Yes. Thank you for your love also. I know it's there.) Abraham: You are welcome. Another question?

JAMES: I'll ask a question, Abraham. I, like what Calvin said about himself, also find it challenging to be open to other people and approach them with a loving attitude – in some circumstances more than others. It seems like one of the obstacles is that as we get to know people, we sooner or later find out that even though there are similarities, more often than not there are big differences between ourselves and the person that we might be trying to learn to love – differences in viewpoints and values. So it is kind of hard to – well, it gets uncomfortable – when we run up against walls between ourself and another person. When our values differ, sometimes it seems like there is no way to bridge that gap. Sometimes people just have entirely different viewpoints of the universe. I don't understand how a person can transcend that 'with love.'

ABRAHAM: Understood. There are many individuals in which one may come in contact with that appear to reflect certain distasteful elements. It is difficult to immediately love and be open to understanding such an individual. I can say, to be neutral is to remain open to future understanding of this individual. To call a judgment upon this individual is to close that door to understanding, therefore closing off any love that may develop. To remain neutral is not bad. It is God-like. It is remaining open. It is to say: 'This individual is this way, and I do not understand. I will not attempt to make a judgment of right or wrong, but I will continue to leave this door open.' One should not feel bad, guilt-ridden, for the lack of love towards a fellow. Know this, that all are children of God and deeply loved by Him. And remaining neutral in your emotions is an exceptional position to take. If love cannot be found, then acceptance of the fact that all are children of God leaves open the arena for future understanding and development for love. But I can say, efforts made towards love is still activating Adjuster communication. This is common between mortals; and I say, in time all things are understood and not to be worried-over or to feel bad. Does this help? (James: Yes, it does. Thank you.)

Abraham: Another question?

RACHEL: I won't really make this a question, Father Abraham, but I think on this subject you could talk for a couple years on it: According to the Urantia Book, yesterday was the anniversary of the crucifixion of Christ Michael – and that would make tomorrow, the resurrection anniversary. I would just ask if you would say a few words about it, not a full year's speech. [laughter.]

ABRAHAM: Gladly would I speak. What an enormous event this was. All of Nebadon watched as this story unfolded. Many great things took place at this moment in history, yes, when all the while mortals (much like yourselves in deep despair and confusion) rushed about hurriedly, searching for answers, for understanding – somehow they had forgotten the promises made to them by the Master. When the Master was taken from those who loved Him so deeply, they were unable to see Him, to seek advice firsthand from Him. All that they had learned was seemingly lost and they were swimming about in their despair. His apostles even refused to believe that some had seen the risen Master – still clinging to their desperation on what to do next. Little did they know the universe buzzed with excitement and events untold. I can say, this world has yet again experienced this despair and confusion – but once again are they opening their eyes to again feel the excitement of the empty tomb and the promise that 'Jesus has risen.' Yes, this world is in the midst of feeling this overwhelming excitement of these enlightening times. Urantians are on the road to regaining their composure and remembering the Master's promises, and once again truly feel the spirit of the Master moving within their midst. Until next week, shalom.

I Am Here, Now | Wait Not For My Feet To Make Prints In the Earth

Michael & Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-15-1996

[The transmission-receiver, Ellanor, was somewhat startled at the beginning of this message and took a little longer to begin the transmission.]

I am MICHAEL of Nebadon. [pause.] Welcome. I am Christ Michael. Be not afraid. I am with you. This is not to cause you anxiety. You know me well and I am not to be feared. Many times mortals have dropped to the ground in worshipful respect. I ask you to stand and speak with me as your Brother/Father.

For ages, men have twisted my message which was to be very simple. Over the centuries I have endeavored to untwist my message; and naturally, it is beginning to show forth the fruits. I am aware that I appear to be far from my mortal children. This is because my mortal children are perceiving me in that way.

Years ago I had given my promise that the inhabitants of this world would be assisted by my Spirit having been poured out upon the flesh of all, regardless of one's life status, life circumstances. I am here! I am here now, and whether you choose to know me is absolutely your choice. Whether or not your faith can withstand my assistance is entirely your decision. I assist you because I am. I love you because you are.

Our Father has made all things possible, and they are set right before you; this is not to entice you into the kingdom, this is to aid you in not stumbling over me or my Father. To know me is to know our Father. To learn of my faith is to create a handrail to assist you in your steps of spiritual education.

I say with sovereign authority of Nebadon, I live amongst you now. I walk with you now. I am without the fetters of material form; this is why I can assist this world as a whole. Why do some wait for my feet to make prints in the Earth when I live amidst you, now. Our kingdom goes forth, now! it has always been so, it will always be so. I pray that my mortal children would not choose to stumble over me when I am here now.

This is not a world of darkness anymore; not a world without divine assistance, guidance; not a world left to reap the harvest of evil. This is a small world that has journeyed naturally, as has many worlds in our universe; it is a world of remarkable beauty and goodness. I have deep affection for this small, but nonetheless, valued world. I have deep and abiding faith within you each. I am certain of your own affection for your world, that it is true.

I have asked you to love one another, as I have loved you. Therein lies the key to the door of universal meanings and values. Love is power, has a power unlike any power. Love is the answer to all questions. Love remains the single most significant proof that I am, that my Father is, and that you are.

I shall continue my close contact with you each if it is in your desire. I shall continue to look out over the land and continue to pour out my Spirit. I ask you to wait not for my feet to stand upon the Earth but to walk with me now, spirit to spirit. My peace I leave with you; and always, my unfailing love. Children, carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. I express my gratitude on behalf of my students, to our Sovereign Creator, Christ Michael. We are honored and humbled by your presence. We are grateful for your availability, and pledge to continue to uphold this beloved planet. We are always blessed by Michael's company and never do we tire of His words of encouragement.

Michael has taught us the true meaning of an often-used word, LOVE. He has said: "Love is a force that stands alone." To keep within the boundaries of love is to be free from the boundaries of human struggle. In our attempts to understand love, we would be wise to request the understanding of our Sovereign ruler, Michael. Until next week, shalom.

Love Is the Only Substantial Proof of Eternal Life | Misuse of Love Does Cause Much of Our Ailments

04-22-1996

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. I give you my greetings. Our lesson this past week has caused you to search. Yes, our Creator/Brother/Father has again challenged us to search our inner resources for spiritual understanding. I am happy to continue on in this series of lessons on love.

For ages, man has searched for real happiness and has strived to make his life easier. He has worked to find abundance in living; he has searched to contain beauty all in the hope that he could find lasting authentic happiness. It is true still to this day that mortals continue their search for inner fulfillment and happiness.

The search is still as primitive as it was long ago. There seems to be more options to find inner happiness in these days, but it still seems an endless cycle of repetition; mortals striving for 'more' – more wealth, more power, more freedom, and more ego-satisfaction. These mortals remain empty, always looking outside themselves for true happiness and fulfillment.

You, my mortal friends, students, co-workers, are quite aware of from where all happiness stems. You are knowing of the Source, yes, and still unsure how to obtain this Source. I have taught that this group can build their spiritual scaffolding upon a foundation of honest love. I have labored to help you feel at ease with myself and, one another. As Michael said: "Love is the only substantial proof that there exists eternal life." I say, love also takes us to the source of true happiness and fulfillment.

Love is an often-misused word on Urantia; which misuse leads one to create definitions that are not reality. Love is more than an emotion; it is a 'living' energy upon which all things exist. The true definition of love would be beyond words and ... [Ellanor, the group transmission-receiver interjects: I am having a hard time. I just feel there is something really strange. I can't do it. I can hear it, but I can't do it. I feel there is something weird. I can't do it. I feel that there is something strange, that somebody doesn't want me to do this. I can try again...]

ABRAHAM: I am here; you are doing fine, Ellanor. We can all see that the power of love, or lack thereof, is a strong force that can be felt, mentally and physically. Love is an energy that can either heal or disrupt mortal daily living. Ellanor indeed felt a lack in the group circuitry. This is not bad. This is an example on the power of love. Your understanding of love has been intermingled with the definitions of happiness and abundance. Love is like a double-edged sword and can be misused.

A mother watches her child play at a park. The child is laughing, playing carefree without fear. The mother is fearful of the child not exhibiting any fear or caution for their own well-being and therefore, removes the child in fear for the child's safety. This love the mother exhibits for the child is a misuse of the actual energy that is contained within genuine love.

An example of genuine love would be for the mother to communicate with this child the dangers of carelessness and let the child put forth into action their own understanding of the mother's advice. The mother loved the child enough to trust the child's own inner guidance. Yes, the mother still has some fear, and yet strives not to teach it to her child but to point out the child's own inner guidance.

Love is an awesome power that can heal or disrupt mortal living. To love is a matter of conscious choice, not a feeling that suddenly comes over you. To make a conscious choice to love is to expect the feeling to come after. Love is not mindless, is not thoughtless action. Love is God. God is pure intelligence. God is all-knowledge. God is love. Love is intelligence.

To desire good for your fellows is indeed putting forth love, putting God into motion. To direct love is to give healing. To leave a person feeling loved is to give healing. Love is energy, and energy has the power to move matter. Love is a power that can indeed manipulate matter.

To love is to release a chemical within your own physical system that is indeed healing. This direction of love to others can likewise release a chemical reaction within their physical makeup. Love is a force and can indeed manipulate matter. To misuse love in a selfish motivation is to not create anything positive, but to harm. To misuse love for selfish gain is to create cells of destruction.

Love is a conscious choice. To set yourself aside in decisions of love is to facilitate healing and spiritual growth. I indeed give you my love, and stand ready to assist you however I can. All is very well and not to be taken as a matter of life and death. Have you questions?

CALVIN: A couple of our eyebrows were raised on the matter of the 'life and death' part of your lesson just now. Maybe you could explain that a little bit more.

ABRAHAM: The feeling that I am perceiving presently in this group is overwhelmingly intense. A light heart is always an unburdening of the head. I repeat, your spiritual growth is not so serious that you would be caused such unhappiness. We have eternity, and I not only wish to teach spiritual realities, but also bring what joy I can. Another question?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, how many different types of love are there? What I am thinking is there are probably a lot of different types of love that we don't even know about as human beings.

ABRAHAM: It is perhaps like when I walked this Earth – there were many concepts of God; many gods. There is truly only one God, and we endeavor to teach that He is the source of all love – pure without condition; without price. This world has many ideas of love and knows not the power that it misuses every day. In our efforts to reach God-likeness and to teach God-likeness, know that love is a required course that brings you into the understanding of the personality of God. To know God, to love Him and strive to be like Him, is our main message. You are correct, there are perceived many types of love, and perhaps mortals do tend to stumble over the most simple and pure form of love. True love is the desire to do good to others without any compensation. To love another without the knowledge of any results is a form of this pure love that reaches this world directly from the Father's domain. As this world becomes more enlightened, this pure form of love will be easily recognized, and mass healing will begin. Does this help? (Rachel: Yes, it does. It was beautiful and I thank you.) Abraham: Another question?

VICKIE: Father Abraham, why are we as mortals so resistant to giving love or receiving love. What kinds of skills could we maybe learn to develop or increase to help us be able to love more freely and to accept love more freely?

ABRAHAM: Yes, love on this world is all too often attached to self-happiness and concern over one's self; it is to love others without concern for others, just concern for self. To love in the expectation of self-benefit is indeed a misuse of the power of love. To love another is being able to totally accept another's personality, habits, and mannerisms, no matter what irritation they may cause. Christ said: "I love you because you are." To be able to give freely without anything in return is to tap into the source of pure love. With trust in your Father, there is no need for attempting to misuse the power of love to manipulate others. To love others 'because they are,' and to understand each mortal to be a child of God is to accept another just as they are, because they are. The steps to be taken are simple – be conscious of how the love you give makes you feel, and what thoughts stem from the love you give. Does this help? (Vickie: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: One more question?

CALVIN: Two good things I learned from your lesson – and I'm sure more-so when I re-read this, but one: It is love that actually activates matter; and two: That it is a conscious decision to do – for instance when we think intentionally and project it out is like to give someone a good gift, a gift of love. A simple situation at work this week ties into this lesson. What do we do when a co-worker spitefully is against you? Sometimes I think to just let it go and that time will heal; and then there is the thought to 'not lie down before my troubles' and to confront the individual. I do know inside it's very irritating, so something needs to be done. Maybe letting time fix it takes too much irritation between now and then whenever that time comes. Could you comment on that?

ABRAHAM: Yes, to put forth the 'conscious choice to love' is to flip the switch to begin healing, to move matter. This world is filled with disease, and I would say that half of the world's disease is due to lack of love or misuse of the power of love. A physician can administer drugs, can bandage wounds, but a good physician goes beyond that to an actual show of genuine caring for the individual. Concerning the co-worker, you are correct in letting time pass if you feel it helps diffuse the emotional enmity of the situation. And if to confront with honesty is seeming to cause more confusion, it is best then to wait; but the truth is within you of what to do. You are already knowing of the answer. You are an honest person, and your co-workers expect you to be straightforward. It would be wise to be your genuine self.

And with that, I will indeed include you all in my prayer time and communicate to you my love. I ask that you check your love during the week – is it a force that you can build with or tear down with. Until next week, shalom.

As the Rain Falls The Light of the Sun (Son) Shines Forth From You

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you this evening. It is wonderful to see those that have been partaking of Michael's cup and strive to keep moving forward towards your divine destiny. Last week we discussed the power of love and the positive and negative effects thereof. I am a spiritual teacher. I endeavor to teach spirituality - spiritual reality.

This evening I wish to help this group become familiar with that energy which is known as love. Our celestial helpers are present and will assist in this exercise. I ask you, if you are willing to drink Michael's cup you are indeed capable of completing this exercise. This is not difficult but is to learn recognition of a pure and powerful force.

Concentrate if you will, with eyes closed:

Imagine the rain falling upon you. It is not cold or uncomfortable, it is warm and light. It is a feeling that you are loved as if you were Father's only child. Do you see, the rain of love falls on all souls? Father protects you. He seeks the joy on your face. He delights in your smile. He longs to be close to you. He looks upon you as His child.

Feel this rain falling upon the entire Earth, upon each person, equally; and ponder what possibilities may come from such an outpouring of the First Source and Center's pure unconditional love. Accept His love, freely. Know that you are known. You are precious, yes; He forgets not you are His loved and valued child.

Be open to this rain. Shield not yourself due to feelings of unworth. Let this love wash away your pain and sorrows for this moment. Know that Father gives you this, now. In this moment all is well. You are a vessel through which this love flows.

As the rain falls, the light of the sun (or Son) shines forth from you. As the rain falls, the love flows from you as a bright and comforting love. As the rain falls, you are a vessel through which the rain of Father's love shines forth from you. You are a vessel. This sunlight (or Son-light) can reach around the world. This light flows from you. This is so simple. The love falls upon you, the vessel, and is transformed into light going forth. This exercise is complete.

This opening of the mind and soul is to give and receive well-beingness, receive wholeness, to project wholeness, to project healing. This is so much more than mental. Love is an energy that can move matter and facilitate healing. If one is not open to the rain it makes the healing difficult; it can be detrimental to your mental as well as physical well-being.

If you find something blocks the rain of Father's love and care, you must strive to discover this blockage. Know that it takes a lot to stop a Father's love for His child. Know that you each are well-deserving, and you are discovering this source of happiness is within reach.

To understand this exercise is to step forward into phases of self-mastery and morontial understanding. To understand 'why would the rain come so freely,' I say Michael said it best: "Because you are." Know that nothing is hidden from the Creator of all life. He is absolutely understanding of even the smallest of life's aggravations. He is not too busy, for His focus is 'you' and your divine wellness. He is understanding of your place in the kingdom.

I would ask that you practice being this vessel in which gathers the rain and projects out this same pure love from Father, as light. Your understanding of Father's love is the amount of love in which you receive. If you are limited in your perception of Father's love, then you are made to feel empty and lost. If you are believing yourself to be a loved and valued child of God you are in understanding that there is no love ever withheld from Father's children.

Your faith is also a factor in the amount of Father's overcare. Faith is the dial upon which you receive His obvious works. Faith seems an unstable ground, always changing, always moving – but I say, one who enters the kingdom halfheartedly will possibly want to step out until he is willing to go forth and drink the cup, wholeheartedly. I would be happy to answer any questions.

CALVIN: Teacher Abraham, thank you very much, again. In that decision we make to say we are willing to drink of the Father's cup, sometimes I think I have made that decision, yes. But then I look and see my same old self again, and I think – no, I haven't made that decision yet. So I must have not made the decision or I wouldn't be thinking that – and perhaps this is my 'halfheartedness' which you speak of. That's my logical conclusion anyhow. Maybe I am not receiving in enough of the Father's light, and am too busy to do the things I know I should do to receive it more fully. Does that make sense?

ABRAHAM: Understood. When entering the spiritual kingdom, many things must come to pass; you might say there is a death, of sorts. You may feel that you are like a soldier being stripped of personal identity. At this point a new creature is born. All things are becoming new, and it is a wonderful phase in spiritual awareness. But those familiar with many spiritual lessons will feel as though they have completed a lesson; and yet, for whatever reason, they are experiencing a similar lesson, yet again. Do you see, with each experience/lesson you are a new creature. And yet, spiritual ideals are not so completely new and not met with the same enthusiasm they once were met with. It can feel as though there has been a repetition of certain lessons and can make you turn around and ask yourself: 'What have I done that requires me to repeat and experience something I am already familiar with?' This is not reality to continue to doubt your sincerity, to doubt your capability, or to find shortcomings. Spiritual understanding is always expanding, always growing, always moving – like a journey down a road where the scenery appears to constantly change; it does so because you are moving. Many things you will question and I say, this is to be expected, for it is natural and helpful in determining Father's will. Another question?

ROLAND: I have a question: You mentioned that there were celestial assistants in the room seeming to assist us in experiencing the flow of the Father's love through us. I had a sensation of warmth when you said that. Could you further expand on what the celestial assistants do for us in this experience?

ABRAHAM: They were helping to assist us/you mindally and physically with the directing of energy and the placement of pictorial scenery. I am aware you are all knowing of our friends, the midwayers, and those that assist in morontial techniques such as the Power Directors. I am taking this moment to express my gratitude to them and also give you my assurance that their work does not stop here. Their work is much, yes, and they continue to assist mortals in learning to recognize those strides and strivings that are moving us toward Light and Life. Does this answer?

ROLAND: Yes, it does. We have been told that when we make the decision to do the Father's will and in accepting an ambassadorship of Michael, that the hosts of heaven will go before us to prepare the way. I am getting the sense that this celestial body that is here are some of those who prepare the way. (Abraham: Yes.) Roland: I wish to thank them for their participation with me in bringing me a higher understanding of the Father's creation. And, thank you, for this lesson, Abraham.

ABRAHAM: Certainly, you are welcome. Another question?

RACHEL: Well Father Abraham, I don't know exactly what feeling that you were saying, maybe you could explain a little. When you are feeling the power and the love from this rain and from our Father, I don't know if it is more than what I am feeling, but I am feeling like I am so full I am almost going to burst. I don't know if that is stemming from that, or not. I feel like my chest is completely full. Maybe you can tell me.

ABRAHAM: Yes, you are already familiar. This exercise is not such a drastic change from what you already practice. Yes, fullness is a good description. Well-being, is knowing that you are taken care of, that you are known and being taught so carefully, knowing all is to be entrusted to Father. Yes. Another question?

VICTORIA: Father Abraham, I have a comment. I had an experience during the rainfall, a remembering of a dream when I was in an oasis, a place of great green and flowing rivers. There was great abundance and I was dressed with fine robes and precious linens. When the rain came, I would protect myself. There came a choice to leave the oasis. I went into the desert and one by one my robes fell off as I traveled and got deeper and deeper into the hot and barren desert. By the time I got to the end of my journey, my back was blistered with the sun, my lips were parched and my body was scorched – and the gentle rains came. And what rain I had once protected myself from, each drop I received now with tremendous gratitude. And now as I return with the blessings of gratitude – knowing about the desert and my journey in the heat, the sand, without food and water, without fine linens – I've learned that faith is important, yes, because that is the compass that guides me. I've learned that trust is another and equally important part. I found with this rain that with each drop I find a new gratitude. With those things that I once took for granted that were always there, now I rejoice in Michael, in the love that He has always given to me. And I thank you especially, Father Abraham, for your teachings of 'gratitude for each moment,' and that each step that we take is worth the journey. I express my gratitude to the members of this group and the Teachers who assist us in our work. I thank you especially for your teachings that taught me that gratitude is the way. [inaudible.] Those in the group are like raindrops for me. [inaudible.]

ABRAHAM: You are very welcome. Beautifully put. It appears you indeed have an acceptable openness for receiving this rain and manifesting it into light. Yes, your gratitude is accepted and is reciprocal – returned to you with my love. I am also grateful for my kinship with this group. I always look forward to our collective unity where we can all sit at Michael's table and just be. I would recommend in your stillness, to practice our exercise of accepting, receiving, and emanating the Father's rain – His love. Eventually, you will not require the practice, for it will be in your nature, a well-learned habit. I give you my love and my...

RACHEL: One more question, Father Abraham? Calvin has one. (Abraham: Yes, Proceed.)

CALVIN: Abraham, on the exercise last week where the transmission-receiver became off-centered, was that more from a generated feeling in the group? or an exercise projected from your side – your teaching a point for the lesson?

ABRAHAM: You can say it was a little of both – an imbalance in the group circuitry, and in your connection to me. Yes, it was a bit confusing and puzzling, for our spiritual energy is quite real as you will see. It is completely up to the freewill mortals to accept or reject the connection of the completed circuitry that graces our universe. I did indeed want you to understand that your participation in this method of communication is a great force of love, and your amount (of love) contributes to the accuracy of my words.

RACHEL: Well Father Abraham, I'm glad that we were partly to blame because I was going to say you were a damn stinker for doing that. It about scared me to death. My heart almost dropped clear to the floor. [group laughter.]

ABRAHAM: You would agree with me when I say, yes, this love is quite the reality upon which all things exist. You felt this beyond the mental and physical senses. You were also touched spiritually. I am pleased with your lighthearted comments, Rachel.

And with that, I wish you all to know your contributions to this group makes my teaching come to life. My love, I give you each. I will be with you again. Until next week, shalom.

God Loves You Because You Are. Exude That Love and Knowledge of it To Others.

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-06-1996

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I bid you greetings and thank you for your diligence in searching for truth. I am happy to be witness to your group ministry, all in participation and being open to ideas without the ego's interference. This group is devoted to partaking of Michael's cup, and together you stand in understanding of that experience. Your interaction is healing 'individually,' and does contribute to the overall wellness of your world.

This group is also exhibiting honesty without fear of rejection. It is quite a comfort to know that your fellows are understanding in your mortal conflicts, and also are accepting of your personal techniques in which you deal with those struggles. All intentions are positive and facilitate healing. Your communication is 'love without pretense' – not love just for occupying space. To be so accepting is indeed healing, even beyond this room. Yes, love is a powerful force that manipulates matter and transcends time/space.

Last week we performed an exercise in receiving the universal love and manifesting it forth as light – receiving love, giving love. Many find that there are so many conditions to mortal love that these 'conditions' are also expected from our celestial leaders – and this is not reality. God loves you because you are, as you are. Nothing can you do to earn this love! Nothing can you be! Nothing can you pay for the source of all love; it is yours for the taking.

Think not that God loves as a mortal loves. God is the one true source of all love, and He does not demand any payment for this love. He desires to know His children and does bestow this love freely. So many times in the mortal history is love traded for some cost. People have done all they could for this desired fulfillment, for the feeling of plain love and acceptance.

Some can say: "In order to be loved I must hide my genuine self; I must portray a lovable individual. I must be that person who should not exhibit any unpleasanties of myself, for I may lose love." Through the ages, mortals have strived for the best, to be the best, to gain power and control, to be respected, and possibly feared. This confusion has brought much devastation to this planet, when the true desire all along, has been love.

Father asks not for you to be anyone other than who you are. Do you see, you are already loved as much as you possibly can be. You cannot be loved any more than you are right now. There are no extra amounts of love to be earned. Father does not ask you to be something you are not. Said Jesus: "Love each other as I have loved you."

Why do mortals attempt to buy, sell or trade love as if it were a commodity? Why must some feel they must represent a certain desirable personality trait in order to be loved, or to earn the love of their fellows? Cannot you love another simply 'because they are?' Must another earn your love as a sort of payment for bringing you happiness? Can you love others 'just because they are?' Again, said Jesus: "Love each other as I have loved you."

I ask you to ponder this message going out through the universes, filling every heart, every mind, every soul, every intelligent being – each knowing there is no more love to be gained than what you have right now. Yes, you have this, you have this now. We ask that you give this to each other. Freely give love, yes, for freely it has been given to you.

Make it known in your associations that you freely give your love without the expectation of receiving it back from them; this 'receiving this love back from them' is not your concern. Your concern should be in knowing you already contain all the love you shall ever receive – that you have a direct line, and you truly know that. And to accept this love is to say to God: "Yes, you are my Father."

My friends, you are a vessel in which Father fills with the love of the ages, and freely you shall project this forth, yes. I guarantee, you will be as a lantern that many seek because you love without compensation. A few questions.

CALVIN: Abraham, thanks again for a very very helpful viewpoint giving us an increased understanding on love. The old way of looking at love is so different than this newer perceived way. It is incredible. In living daily life however, living with someone who cannot, or will not, see the bigger picture of love, but only sees the old incorrect way – are there words that can help? because we have to live with these people and it can be very agitating when they see that one's 'source' of love is not them and them only. It's as if they are jealous that one is receiving love from a source outside of themselves. So how do we help in the healing of this? I know that the actual 'living of this love' would be the best example, but are we to try to talk sense into them? leave them? or to just leave them alone. It can be very agitating when they think of love from another mortal as a 'possession' they must have to be happy.

ABRAHAM: Yes. This is not a problem you can help with other than to talk openly and reassuringly. These individuals who fear the loss of love are bound by a sense of loss. This sense of loss is overwhelming and tends to drive mortals to hang on with all they have. They are believing they are not enough to hold up their end of a relationship. They are drowning, and they hold fast to their partner as a life raft – only the drowning person is also pulling under what or who they believe to be their saving source. Until one takes a step towards faith and ask Father to fill you with this love, you might always attempt to retrieve this love from mortals; and I say with no disrespectfulness intended, mortals are nowhere qualified to fulfill the love that God bestows upon His children. Keep talking, keep communicating – this helps release some of the fear. When you are being pulled under, you must reach for that greater Life Preserver. Does this help? (Calvin: It couldn't have been a more perfect answer. I thank you very much.)

ROLAND: Abraham, in a world of Light and Life, what does relationships with all these characteristics, even personality attributes of males and females on that world, have? How do they interrelate with one another? I ask this, recognizing that I have not seen in this world a relationship between men and women that did not have a tremendous amount of specialistic tendencies, mythology, and delusional-thinking. I am wondering what a real Light and Life relationship looks like. Since you have that perspective, could you help us see perhaps some of the characteristics?

ABRAHAM: Yes. A relationship on worlds in Light and Life knows not 'fear of loss;' they know not the feelings of inferiority; they know not the feelings of superiority. Yes, for they are with feeling of being whole individuals to begin with. They are unable to join with another in the hope and thinking that they would attain wholeness, for they are whole to begin with. My Urantian friends, on the other hand, know these feelings of uncomfortable, painful, emotional, energy-draining games that they play with one another. It appears to be a waste of time, but these are necessary steps toward Light and Life. You cannot skip over evolution; we must evolve toward better. These mentally-draining feelings are acceptable – not pleasant, but acceptable. Mortals are becoming aware that they are not a 'lone intelligence' – that there exists a source where all love originates, and that is a force beyond their comprehension. This world is seeing the beginning stages of Light and Life, and they are all beginning with individuals putting their focus on love – love of others, love of God, love of goodness, truth, and beauty. There indeed needs to be a certain amount of love for self, meaning a certain amount of knowing that you are a deserving child of God, loved as any other child. A healthy amount of self-love is a good start to begin a relationship, one based on individual wholeness. An over amount of self-love is to set one off-balance, just as an inadequate amount is to set off imbalance. Another question? [Personal question is omitted.]

I am wishing to express to you of my love. I know you each, individually, and it was nothing that you said or did that made me love you. The fact that you are my brothers and sisters, son and daughters of the 'One God,' opens my heart, and I feel Father's love for you, each. I recognize in you what is really you, and I am deeply in love with you each. Until next week, shalom.

Recognition of the Giving and Receiving of Love | Love, The Single Most Important Truth That God Is

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome, my friends. I am delighted to be with you again. You can see the effects that the Teaching Mission has upon this world. Many are starting to recognize the growth among humankind. I have said, our work will be so natural that the effects of our Mission might appear to be slow. I say, look out among your fellows and know our Mission is in full force; you can recognize the results of love and non-love – I say not 'hatred' because non-love is more of a reality than the negative force of hatred.

A farmer knows the beginnings of a field's first sprouts. We my friends, are seeing these sprouts and knowing Christ Michael is amongst us. A good farmer sows his seeds with humble beginnings. The farmer must toil diligently within the soil to prepare for planting. The good farmer plants his field in the hope that it may feed many. He can foresee the results of a job well done. He can rely upon his own capabilities to feed many.

A farmer who sows seeds of non-love in the earth does so in the hope that he will bear enough vegetation to supply him for the entire winter. He tends to the new growth with the hope that the crows will not steal his vegetation. He protects and hordes his crop for fear he may be left empty-handed.

The good farmer reaps his harvest with more than he expected; he feeds many and his yield seems to not empty; his crop continues to bear more, and the farmer continues to feed more. This farmer is filled with such joy to know he is truly cared for and, that his good works go far. The good farmer reaps his joy from the giving. He worries not that his crop will wither and die. He is knowing many are depending upon the benefits from his fine produce.

Conversely, that farmer who has sown seeds of selfishness (non-love) has much anxiety over the guarding of his vegetation; he is fear-ridden that the garden will be unproductive; his mind is always working to find a solution to saving his field for fear he may be left lacking in the winter. This farmer is so fatigued with attempting to protect what he believes is his own, he is left with feelings of emptiness. He has not much of a crop and he must hold tight for fear he may lose what he has grown. This farmer knows not the joy of feeding others, reaping the benefits of bestowing love; he is in a cycle of fear; he is living in a mode of self-preservation – and this mode, is quite lonely.

And so it goes with love. To sow the seeds of love is to reap the harvest of honor for having been trusted by our Father. To feed others with the seeds you have sown is the highest honor and privilege one can receive. To hold back the fruits from which you so freely received is to witness those fruits to deteriorate. To put your love in a storehouse for fear you may need it someday is to be severed from that pure energy we call love. Love is moving, healing, and transcending all things. Love is living.

This week I ask that you look within and attempt to understand what type of seeds do you sow; and, are you willing to share the harvest openly with those who you know? Have you questions?

RACHEL: Yes, Father Abraham. You said that love is a pure energy from our Father. And if in turn we send back true love to our Father. Is that also energy? And, if we are trying to put forth love to our fellow human beings, is that energy?

ABRAHAM: Yes. All love is an energy that can heal or can be misused and an upset. Father feels the energy His mortal children return to Him. It is also true that you can, my mortal friends, also feel this energy, mentally and physically. It is a power which cannot be detected by the five senses, and yet, this love is more of a reality than what you can see or hear or touch. Love is the single most significant proof that God is. And this energy which flows through all living things is also to say, yes, God is moving through all living things. God is love, and love is moving through all living things. Does this help? (Rachel: Yes. Abraham, can you feel my love for you? You'd better say yes!) [laughter.]

ABRAHAM: Certainly, I do. And with the passing of time and our experiences together, my love will be quite recognizable to all of you. I am able to recognize the giving of love from specific soul personalities, and I say, this lesson – recognition of the giving and receiving of love – is indeed in your future lessons with me. Yes, I know your love; and I return my love to you also. (Rachel: I thank you.) Abraham: Another question?

AMANDA: Father Abraham, this is maybe a strange question, but is there a time in a day this week that we could set, not necessarily going through Ellanor but just at my home, that I can count on you being there? We could try to communicate so I don't feel like I am reaching in the dark thinking that I am communicating with you when it's just myself. Say, Wednesday night at 8:00, could you be at my house? Is that possible?

ABRAHAM: Yes, I will be there – Wednesday at 8:00 p.m. [laughter.] This is wonderful and we have made progress in communicating, worry not. Until Wednesday. Another question?

HELEN: Father Abraham, I want to thank you for the beautiful lesson; it has really helped me a lot in my own personal situation. Is there anything that I can do or teach in my given situation, with my home situation, that might help to bring a better understanding to the people that I am taking care of?

ABRAHAM: You are already putting forth that effort which would be most beneficial. Your lightheartedness and humor have indeed brought much sunshine into that home. Where you once were focused on personal difficulties, has now gone beyond – to concern for others; and, you are able to serve with the light of God shining forth from you, with ease. Your loving cheerful attitude brings healing – mentally, physically and spiritually. Your humor is indeed a gift to all. Another question?

ELLEN: We were discussing earlier before the meeting that maybe Ellanor might need a break or a rest and we thought we would ask you. Do you think that maybe Ellanor does need a break or a rest?

ABRAHAM: I am wholly comfortable with any decision she makes. As long as the desire is present to transmission-receive, then I shall be here. Ellanor is also in the midst of personal growth lessons and taking a break is not needed on account of my lessons. Coordinate with her and your life experiences. (Ellen: Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

JOSHUA: Father Abraham, you may not want to answer this question: You said that the groups are growing. Could you possibly give us a random number – I'm not asking for an accurate one, but somewhere in the neighborhood so we can understand a little bit better of how many groups there are?

ABRAHAM: There are groups numbering in the thousands. Many though do not consider themselves Teaching Mission. They are unknowing of who they serve, they are only knowing that they serve. They are numerous and I could not give a number even close for I do not really know. There are indeed many who work for us who are entitled by specific religious organizations and yet, they do Michael's bidding. Does this answer? (Joshua: Yes. Thank you.)

RACHEL: Father Abraham, while we are talking about groups, would you mind telling us of how Ruby and Charles, and their associates in New Zealand, are doing? We haven't heard from them or about them for a long time.

ABRAHAM: They are well and have adjusted their lives in ways that they may be of service to their fellows. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, the last couple lessons, you have talked about love being like a two-edged sword, either healing or destructive. Could you elaborate a little on that?

ABRAHAM: To love another should firstly be 'because they are a child of God,' not someone you can possess or rule over. When not loving another 'as a child of God,' this can be devastating in the fact that they are trying to have ownership over another, and this leads into the area of self-love – an over amount of self-love. Love, in all its definitions, is still not fully definable. Love is ever-growing and changing. It is the individual that learns about both sides of the sword, and one way or another all mortals will experience this sword. One more question?

RACHEL: I have a comment. Here on Urantia, they say there are two things we can be sure of, and that is death and taxes, but at least death never changes.

CALVIN: Abraham, I am not asking for a lengthy answer for I know the time is short. As growing up I never seem to like authority over me. I know that in my adult years, in the community where I grew up, the other adults around would say the problem with me was that I never respected authority or yielded to authority. I can see that in my life, yes. I understand that that was a problem which Lucifer had – not respecting or loving the authorities of our universe. What dangers does that present me? (Abraham: Understood. Do you consider yourself above the law?)

CALVIN: In some degree, yes, I can see how I do. But of course not as it relates to the 'law of the land' or the Constitution. The guys at work and even the boss, will say, 'hey, these are our rules' and they try to get me to adhere – but I don't seem to conform to them very well, especially when I see they are rules that seem unfair to the public, or those rules that take advantage of the naïve, or the vulnerable. So in that regard, I am not adhering to their 'law' or rules, but seek to make the needed changes by my defiance.

ABRAHAM: You are considerate of the well-being of the whole and I would say worry not; you are not a Lucifer. [laughter.] I understand your rebellious attitude comes from your own inner-knowing that above all the earthly authority stands the Father, and you are conscious of His reign. When your attitude ceases to be considerate of the whole and just for yourself, I would begin to look within.

I am filled with love and joy to know you each and to be able to be involved with helping you to recognize the good farmer. I will leave you my peace and love. Until next week, shalom.

Love as Pure Energy Moves The Whole. Manipulate Negative Energy Into Positive Energy

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-20-1996

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you each. I do so look forward to our gatherings. I am aware of your life experiences you had this past week – hopefully, you have learned from them. I will continue the lesson on 'love as pure energy.'

Last week we spoke about the good farmer who sows seeds of love and how his crop benefits the whole. All, are knowing of the benefits of a responsible farmer. As well, you have benefited from individuals you know that are considered to be good farmers. Likewise, you are knowing of the pain and frustration of knowing and being 'irresponsible' farmers – to be in contact with those who have withheld love or sown seeds of non-love.

You can all attest to the fact that the experiences of non-love are detrimental and appear to be overpowering. It appears to be difficult to deal with those who sow seeds of non-love. To be the recipient of this conflict is painful, yes, but I say, you are not losing anything in this process. To be so sensitive and believe that you are somehow lessened by others' unkind actions, is not reality. I say, to understand these individuals you must recognize they are withholding their love-energy from you in order to receive such from you.

Those that sow seeds of non-love do so because they are unaware of the source of all true love. They seek various avenues in which to fill their cup. These lonely souls go about sowing seeds of non-love in order to gain love, to gain energy. I say to you, this energy-seeking does not need to take from you. It at first may feel as though you are lessened by this, but once you are aware of these energy tactics you become immune to the painful feelings that are the harvest of these seeds of non-love.

To be aware that individuals treat you with an unfavorable fashion is to indeed open yourself to the direct source of concentrated energy. Your awareness of the fact that an individual is putting upon you a negative feeling is to remind you that you are directly connected with the source of all love. This, in turn, opens you to the will of Father. Father would have all His children know that they all hold a seat at the Father's table. Those that sow the seeds of non-love are unknowing, unsure, that Father has saved their place.

In this world, it is difficult to not feel the effects of negative output. I say you can not only deter these negative waves, but you can indeed change them into a positive output. You are not mindless followers. You are not powerless unintelligent inhabitants. You are, however, intelligent beings connected with the universe, and do possess the power to change non-love into love, hopelessness into encouragement, despair into joy. I am only able to give you my words; you are able to act as intelligent children of the First Source and Center.

You would be amazed at your abilities when you become aware of the spiritual tools Father has bestowed upon you. Love can manipulate matter. A world can be transformed by this love. Even a child has the capacity to overcome negativity with positivity, overcome evil with good. In your awareness, there is always the 'faith' factor. Without the courage to move forward and trust that Father is your source of love in assisting your fellows, then your knowledge of energy is practically useless.

This week, when faced with those that sow seeds of non-love: before even feeling any hurt emotions, connect directly with the source of all truth, beauty, and goodness, and manipulate this negative energy into positive energy. Do not say: "I hope I can do this." but say: "This is done." You will be surprised at how natural this comes to you with a little practice. It is the smallest groups that create the largest waves of change. Have you questions?

ROLAND: Abraham, thank you very much for that profound lesson. I found it to be extremely helpful to hear from you that our affirmations of being in a place of seeing and feeling the difference between love seeds and non-love seeds, that it is simply by saying 'it is so,' affirming that affirmation. My question tonight has to do with anthropology. We have come to a place on Urantia where we are now receiving these beautiful lessons from many different Teachers. How would you view, as a historian, as an understander of a tremendous amount of history which occurred during your lifetime – and, of the history of Urantia – how would you sum up the impact the Teaching Mission will have on Urantia, and the people who are at the beginning of this experience?

ABRAHAM: It is clear. This time in history can be summed up quite easily. It is comparable to coming out of the dark into the light. This Teaching Mission is comparable to the day of Pentecost when the Spirit of Truth was poured out upon all flesh. These recipients of the Spirit of Truth were immediately aware of a difference. The Teaching Mission is the same awareness of difference and yet, not so immediate. But I say, this is a time of worldwide recognition of the Supreme rulers. It's not so much that the world recognizes a Supreme deity as it is concerning what it does with the information that determines how this planetary awakening is handled. Many will become overwhelmed, and just as it was in the days of old, change our message to suit human desires – this is expected. And yet we remain confident in the new procedures, such as our mind-to-mind communication, the opening of the circuitry with the Teaching Staff, and awareness of the various helpers who are assisting in the awakening. This Teaching Mission is beyond a mental recognition; it is something that is deeply felt, although not so much spoken about. Does this answer?

ROLAND: To follow up on that question, in a thousand years from now do you suppose anthropologists will look at this particular point in time and recognize that the return of MachiventaMelchizedek to the Earth as the Planetary Prince, and the establishment of the Teaching Mission – that this was indeed a turning point in the history of the world, as it was when the man Jesus appeared on the Earth two-thousand years ago? Will it be that kind of impact? Will we be able to trace it back? Will these people see the volume of your teaching, that there was truly an impact?

ABRAHAM: Yes, to a point, not as much as when Michael walked the Earth in material form; but yes, to some degree, quite similar. And yes, this Teaching Mission will be recognized by mortals as a turning point in history. Another question?

ROLAND: I hate to take any more time, but I would like to introduce to you Greg and Lisa, who are studying anthropology at the University of Utah and are here as loving observers.

ABRAHAM: Greetings, and welcome. Please feel free to ask any questions. Are there any more questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, Randy at work, a friend of mine, approached me this week with his experience of a 'startling middle of the night shock from Ham,' he believes. Anything you would like me to take back to Randy?

ABRAHAM: I am aware that he has had communications with Ham and myself. We are not to be feared. We endeavor to soften the door of his heart for the one who knocks upon it, our Father/Brother, Michael. Another question?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, Teacher Rayson said: "In our Father's eyes all work is beautiful, and that includes any work that we would despise, detest doing, that we sweat and struggle and curse about – that it is still beautiful." Now I have always disliked scrubbing down walls and ceilings, which I have been doing some of, lately. I got to thinking all of a sudden, and caught myself thinking, 'Gee, I am glad at my age I can still do this.' And pretty soon I really felt like it was beautiful. Do you have a comment on the beauty of work?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Any work that is performed for the good of the whole is indeed beautiful. Work that is done for purely selfish gain is extremely dull and difficult. Work that you perform to benefit others is indeed beautiful in our Father's eyes, and it lessens not the beauty if it is not beautiful in your eyes. Our Father surely delights in watching His children serve one another. On the Mansion Worlds it is taught that to serve another is to serve Father; and this is not just something that is said, but is truly felt by Him. Does this help? (Rachel: Yes sir.)

LISA: I'll ask a question. I am taking two classes, actually. One class that I am taking is an environmental class and we are studying the problems of over-population, environmental degradation. I find it is very hard to come from love when there are people in the class who agree that these are problems, but aren't willing to do anything about it. In one sentence, they say: "over-population is a problem!" and in the next, they say: "but I am going to have eight kids." It's really frustrating and makes me very angry. I don't know how to come from love when dealing with that kind of situation.

ABRAHAM: Understood. The majority of the planet still follows a certain spiritual book that makes clear that Father has proclaimed "to multiply and be fruitful." It is popular to follow the heart and human fulfillment instead of what is best for the whole. They are unthinking of the whole when they subtract from the environment without thought to the repercussions it may have. These are not bad people, they are merely attempting to live life to the fullest. Those that appear to be uncaring about lessening the quality of life by over-population are not concerned for the whole and are somewhat disconnected to universe realities. Father also bestowed us with mind, and intended for us to use it to our fullest capabilities. I say, it is not so wrong to not feel love for these individuals, but it is your passion for this subject that will tip the scales toward intelligent population of the planet. You are not alone in your thinking. Anger felt towards others' attitudes only drives you to share with others of your ideals – that love rules in favor of quality in life rather than quantity. Your feelings are quite natural and acceptable, and not to feel bad about. Your passionate expression on this subject indeed sends waves of logical use of mind for the practical use of the planet. Does this answer? (Lisa: Yes, thank you.) Abraham: Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, if I understand the lesson correctly, let me put a scenario out. Somebody says: "Oh, I can't stand that person over there. I hate this and that about that person." This, whether the person deserves the comment or not – how would we change that from a 'non-love' to using a more positive loving energy to swing that person over, and to do this without becoming preachy or self-righteous?

ABRAHAM: Understood. This is difficult without creating bad feelings. My suggestion to the one who criticizes say: "Perhaps that person is that certain way because of past misfortunes, painful events in life." Offer understanding to the one who criticizes; help them to understand why that person may be sowing seeds of non-love. Help the one who criticizes, to open up to positive enlightenment. This opening to positive enlightenment also assists you in manipulating this negative energy into positive energy, and it hurts you not. Does this help? (Calvin: Yes, and thank you.)

RACHEL: Well Father Abraham, Ellanor told me that she and her mother, Ellen, talk about me all the time. Now, what should I do about that? [TR, Ellanor, laughing.]

ABRAHAM: Ellen says, "They do not!"

RACHEL: That's not what Ellanor told me. I can just love them I guess, Father Abraham.

ABRAHAM: I say they talk good things and are learning to overcome their gossiping habits. [group laughter.]

I do appreciate everyone's participation. I say it is a healing experience each time I am with you. I love you each and I shall continue to follow through with these lessons and share with you the seeds of love. Until next week, shalom.

Love as Pure Energy Moves The Whole. Manipulate Negative Energy Into Positive Energy
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-20-1996

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you each. I do so look forward to our gatherings. I am aware of your life experiences you had this past week – hopefully, you have learned from them. I will continue the lesson on 'love as pure energy.'

Last week we spoke about the good farmer who sows seeds of love and how his crop benefits the whole. All, are knowing of the benefits of a responsible farmer. As well, you have benefited from individuals you know that are considered to be good farmers. Likewise, you are knowing of the pain and frustration of knowing and being 'irresponsible' farmers – to be in contact with those who have withheld love or sown seeds of non-love.

You can all attest to the fact that the experiences of non-love are detrimental and appear to be overpowering. It appears to be difficult to deal with those who sow seeds of non-love. To be the recipient of this conflict is painful, yes, but I say, you are not losing anything in this process. To be so sensitive and believe that you are somehow lessened by others' unkind actions, is not reality. I say, to understand these individuals you must recognize they are withholding their love-energy from you in order to receive such from you.

Those that sow seeds of non-love do so because they are unaware of the source of all true love. They seek various avenues in which to fill their cup. These lonely souls go about sowing seeds of non-love in order to gain love, to gain energy. I say to you, this energy-seeking does not need to take from you. It at first may feel as though you are lessened by this, but once you are aware of these energy tactics you become immune to the painful feelings that are the harvest of these seeds of non-love.

To be aware that individuals treat you with an unfavorable fashion is to indeed open yourself to the direct source of concentrated energy. Your awareness of the fact that an individual is putting upon you a negative feeling is to remind you that you are directly connected with the source of all love. This, in turn, opens you to the will of Father. Father would have all His children know that they all hold a seat at the Father's table. Those that sow the seeds of non-love are unknowing, unsure, that Father has saved their place.

In this world, it is difficult to not feel the effects of negative output. I say you can not only deter these negative waves, but you can indeed change them into a positive output. Love Promotes Health And Healing / The Positive Use of Love As Energy

I am ABRAHAM. I am delighted to be here. How much time has passed since we began this endeavor? How this world has grown! In our short amount of time, we have all managed to tip the scales in favor of divine values. People are indeed seeing that good takes them much farther than bad. Good is becoming popular and people are always attracted to the latest fashions and trends. Mortals are finding that love is beyond a word and human definition. They are experiencing love as the single most significant proof - that somewhere, something rules the universe.

Last week we spoke about manipulating negative feelings into positive feelings. I say, this technique is now more possible than ever before. The circuits have been restored. This enables this world to experience morontial lessons at an increased speed. We are excited about all the new phases mortals on this world will experience. The circuits that have been restored may at first cause confusion, a restlessness within the human mind; but I say, in time, the world will all pause to recognize that God is at their fingertips.

God is 'positive energy in motion,' and mortals will use this energy to further this planets' progress toward Light and Life. Mortals everywhere will begin to jump off their fences of indecision and choose to be a traveler upon the path to Paradise. Mortals will choose to willingly drink the cup that Michael himself drinks. We have spoken of misused energies and of the negative effects thereof; also, your power to break up and rebuild negative energy into positive. I would speak tonight a few words on love as promoting health and healing:

Your scientists of today are finally making the connection of mind and body. Many clinics exist who are seeking wellness for diseases that have no name or cure for. Many mortals turn to one physician after another in dissatisfaction and disappointment because they could not receive what they were looking for. Therefore, many mortals are finding that the answers to vibrant health are from within. Disappointment in material medical technologies has driven humans to turn to the Source of all health and healing.

You, my friends, are designed chemically to react to certain energies. The energy of love is the most significant healing factor that exists. To be in connection with Father is to receive His divine love, which promotes your own chemical makeup to produce antibodies that are beneficial in fighting diseases. Your own connection with your Father is an important nutrient that without, is obviously detrimental to your emotional and physical well-being.

Yes, your openness to relying upon the will of Father is to bring about your own well-being; and, also empowers you to be healing towards your fellows. Your love and appropriate humor is indeed, healing. Your show of freedom to be joyous is an electrochemical distribution between two souls. Yes, to love and laugh freely is to assist your fellows in locating their own well of love and humor.

To be willing to be burdened by another who is needing assistance is to open up to that circuit of love which promotes good mental, emotional, and physical well-being. To be free to assist when you are needed is to be open to that direct energy and to know that a burden put upon you by your fellows is a burden put upon the Father to lead you in assisting them. Yes, your willingness, your attitude of abundant love and humor, is to be deemed a healer.

You are not only empowered to manipulate negative energy into positive energy, you are empowered to distribute this energy to promote joy and good health. This attitude is magnetic and will attract others who wonder what is the source of your good nature and how they may obtain it. You, my friends, are indeed, healers. Your contributions may seem small and simple, but I can assure you these contributions are felt even by the Supreme Being. Your positive use of love as positive energy is a forward momentum in which you move the whole.

This week I ask that you promote healing. Feel at ease to be lighthearted and humorous. Feel free to act as though nothing in this world can cause you any harm. Feel free from worry; and know that in this moment you are in the will of our Father. A few questions?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, that was a wonderful lesson and so much good information in it. I thank you. You said that love and 'appropriate humor' is good - and so I know my love is appropriate. But I don't know how appropriate my humor is; I certainly enjoy using it on you.

ABRAHAM: As do I also enjoy your humor and how you help this group to feel at ease with me, my presence. It is appropriate and promotes comfort for these seemingly odd techniques of this mind-to-mind communication. It is a gift to give laughter and feelings of comfort. We know that our beloved Creator, Michael, is indeed a fan of humor; and we find His humor delightful and in abundance. I thank you, Rachel. (Rachel: And I thank you, Father Abraham.) Abraham: You are welcome. Another question?

ROLAND: Abraham, Tomorrow evening I will be speaking to an anthropology class at the University of Utah. Do you have any suggestions or instructions to me and those who are here in attendance on how we should describe and teach about the advent of the Correcting Time and the Teaching Mission?

ABRAHAM: One moment. I would certainly use a lighthearted attitude to diffuse any thoughts of fanaticism. I would be almost unmoved by any negative comments that may be expressed. You, my son, know what is true, yes, and you are not going to change anyone's deep-seated beliefs; but I can say, your unshakable faith will be remembered. Care not about what others may believe; care only that you believe –and that is a good foundation to begin from. In your earthly universities there tends to be an abundance of over-intellectual disbelievers in things that cannot be measured. Those who over-intellectualize in human matters are overlooking the meaning of those matters. I say, you are most fitting for this talk, and I am quite confident that you are indeed detached from what others may perceive you to be. You truly believe you work for the Father, and you do so to the best of your abilities. Worry not. I shall see to it that you are assisted by those beings skilled in this area. Another question?

ROLAND: Thank you very much. My goodness, that's such a wonderful response. It just gives me all kinds of confidence. In your teachings on April 29th, Exercise in Energy and Love, I was going to take them through that imagination experience. You have indicated in here that there were midwayers and Power Directors that were involved in that experience that we had. If that is acceptable as an approach to give them a taste of what it is that we are being taught, I would like to do that if you think it would be advisable. I remind you of it, I am sure you don't need any reminding, but it is your lesson wherein we imagine the rain falling. It is not cold or uncomfortable, it is warm and light – sort of like a guided meditation.

ABRAHAM: Yes, I would also explain why we learned this exercise. For example, a few lines about 'love:' Love is the most significant proof that God is; Love is as real as any energy humans can experience; Love is more than an emotion. Yes, and give examples such as the good farmer and the farmers who sow seeds of selfishness. At the end of your talk, I would suggest to them to experiment with this love as energy for themselves. What have they to lose? For the overall topic, I suggest to steer away from any mystical-thinking, anything so far from their mental conditioning. This speech must appear to be of something real, not mystical. Does that help?

ROLAND: Yes it does, thank you. Obviously, I would think I should prepare for what I am going to say, so my further question is: Would it be better for me to go and speak from the spirit? or to speak from notes?

ABRAHAM: Both. It always helps to go prepared with notes, and be open to any appropriate thought transmissions. Another question? [none.] I shall check with you each during this week. Until next week, shalom.

Stillness Is Short and Simple With Powerful Benefits

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-03-1996

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I am pleased to be here tonight. Welcome to you, my friends. I am always made glad to meet with this branch of our family tree; I find it a great source of energy distribution and great wisdom. I spoke last week on using love as a healing energy, and to learn how to be a source of healing through love and laughter. Your group spoke of new changes within this world and the effects it may have.

I can say, the Teachers work incessantly to upgrade the thinking patterns to move this planet closer to Light and Life. I can also say, when the majority of this planet believes in a celestial Supreme Ruler, that will indeed bring you closer to Light and Life.

Yes, the time is nearing when all are believing in one God; it may be from various faiths, religious backgrounds – it matters not, but when the majority holds the faith even the size of a small mustard seed, then will you begin to see major evolutionary modifications, spiritually. Yes, I can say, this is happening as we speak.

I cannot confirm when this sway in belief systems will occur but with the reinstalment of the System circuits, communications to this world and on this world will be more readily available; and I say this is of great assistance to swaying the thoughts of Urantia toward a divine destiny. You have witnessed much change already; you have even participated in this change. Yes, you have all assisted in the upgrading of spiritual meanings and values. We are grateful for your dedication to the Correcting Time.

I have taught on using love as a healing energy and I say again, those skilled in this practice are indeed healed themselves. I can say, this practice is as natural as breathing. Your desire to be in the Father's will does lead you to love.

Over the years you have studied, you have put to use these lessons in your daily lives – but I say, little time has been set aside for stillness practice. You know that this stillness practice is quite short in comparison to other daily activities. It definitely aids in your use of love as a healing tool to take a moment to re-connect with that One who is so deeply in love with you, and who knows you through and through; He asks that you take a moment to recharge your energy, through stillness. Allow me to take a moment for us all to engage in a short stillness meditation.

My friends, the stillness is short and simple with very powerful benefits. To connect with Father is to make the most efficient use of your energy. You are less likely to become drained of this energy, you are less likely to experience moments of emptiness or hopelessness. To practice the stillness is to strengthen your faith to continuous higher levels. Yes, this practice is for you; it is one thing you can do to be assured that you are a loved and valued citizen of the kingdom.

Take a moment to recharge, often. Open up to Father and His healing circuits. To maintain your energy and God-like countenance, it is vital to practice this connection through stillness each day. To practice is to balance all new information that may come from the universe helpers.

Yes, you have learned much on love and energy. I will be moving on in our morontial teachings. I still suggest that you keep in practice with love - the most significant proof that God is. Until next week, shalom.

Reaffirming the Teaching Mission-Statement. Beginning More In-depth Studies

Ham & Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-10-1996

Back

The light of God enfolds us. The love of God surrounds us. The power of God protects us. The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are He is.

Greetings. I am HAM. I am so delighted to be here this evening. I miss our obvious material communications together, but I am gratified by our private moments that I am allowed to spend with you each. I am also allowed to work with Abraham on lesson planning and coordination.

We, the Teaching staff, prepare to begin more in-depth studies of the Mansion World Teachings. We endeavor to bring these teachings to those who are spiritually prepared. Those that are ready will absorb much spiritual learning. Those that need more time to develop spiritually may not find these lessons particularly interesting or helpful. I come tonight so that I may repeat and reaffirm our mission statement:

By the mandate of our Creator/Brother/Father - Michael, do we, the Teachers stationed here on Urantia, commit to the upgrading of spiritual understanding. We the Teachers have been assigned so that we may assist in teaching the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. It is our mission to assist each individual in locating their own Fragment of God, within. It is not in our orders to coax or manipulate mortals into finding God, but perhaps shedding a little light on the benefits of a God-knowing world.

I speak on behalf of my fellow coworkers when I say we are deeply honored to serve on such an assignment of such importance. Yes, we are humbled to be placed on such a top priority assignment. We shall strive to reduce the expectations in the area of 'mysticism,' and strengthen the area of 'individual confidence' in the search of knowing and finding the Father within.

This is a time for all things spiritual to become a reality. This is a time for all things that are not a reality to fade away. This spiritual education will be filled with significant proof that God is, and that we need not rely upon mystical promises and spiritual rewards. You, my friends, are beyond the dreamer state and are moving into spiritual substance. This is a time for spirituality to become an actuality.

I am always lifted when I am near you, and your devotion to our Mission is truly touching. I shall make it known that I am not so far that I cannot be contacted. Know that you are in my heart and hold the everlasting bond that is our friendship. I am always in gratitude for our association; and as you remember me, even more, do I remember you. I leave you to your Teacher, Abraham. Farewell.

I am ABRAHAM. On behalf of my students and myself, we wish to give our thanks to you, Ham. And welcome, my friends and students. It also gladdens my heart to see your openness with one another. Like I have said before, there is an abundant well of information within this small group. You have traveled a long road together and still, you remain. I say, you are indeed prepared to receive further morontial instructions. I am honored to be the Teacher to impart them to you.

On the Mansion Worlds, the life of Christ on Urantia is a beautiful and important part of the curriculum that is taught. Jesus the man, and His life, is taught universally. Michael, our Creator/ Brother/Father, is indeed an inspiration to all - from the highest to the lowest orders of beings. Michael's devotion to His Father led Him to forsake His personal desires and rely upon the will of His Father. Michael chose to be sculpted by the Father in order to become sovereign of His universe.

Our Creator/Father/Brother was willing to experience anything without regret, fear, or cowardice. He relied totally upon His communication with His Father to move Him through even the most difficult of times. He maintained an unbroken communion - and that alone saw Him through agony beyond your comprehension. His unbroken communion preserved Him, His Spirit. Michael was able to endure all things because of His desire for communion and closeness to His Father in heaven.

In the Mansion World training schools it is taught that stillness becomes obsolete when constant communion becomes prevalent. In your training now we begin with stillness teaching, meditation, yes. This is a beginning to constant communion with the Father of all fathers. Your stillness practice becomes so natural that conscious time-setting is not necessary, for the stillness is natural and is there without conscious thought.

Jesus, the young boy unaware of His divine destiny, maintained an awareness of His Father in heaven. Jesus endeavored to question the elders in His life on the truths of the Scriptures only to be told: "These are the laws in which we, your elders, live our lives." Jesus, the boy, respected His elders, yes, and yet within He was building His constant bond of communication with His Father, knowing that it was His only reliable source.

During the times of disappointment, Jesus - the boy, developed this bond with His Father knowing that all the answers He truly needed were at hand. As this bond of communication developed, so did His trust in Father. Jesus began to see that His Father was unfailing, unlike His human associates.

By the time Jesus was a man, this bond of communication was unbreakable. He relied upon this communication, exclusively! and without fail the answers were always forthcoming. Never did He waver in his faith but was reasoning with what His material eyes could see and what He knew to be true within His soul. Jesus the man, found strength and endurance beyond any other human that has walked the Earth. And on the Mansion Worlds we are taught: His strength and endurance came from His unbroken communion with His Father. Are there questions?

ROLAND: Abraham, in the lesson you talked about being closer and closer to our indwelling Spirit, that being the Father Fragment, and from the revelation from the Urantia Book it tells us that our Fragment has all the traits and characteristics of the First Source and Center. I know from my study of those characteristics, I have come up with three-word symbols that mean great things to me: omniscience (know everything); omnipotence (absolute power); and ever-presence (omnipresence). If we can get to that place where we communicate thoroughly, or even more clearly with our indwelling Spirit, then He can impart all knowledge, all power, and ever-presence to our conscious mind. And, what would that mean to us mortals?

ABRAHAM: Yes, but this is limited and dependent upon your faith 'capacity.' It is absolutely the goal to become God-like and it is quite possible to attain these attributes while in the flesh. I would agree with you that many whom have graced this planet, claiming knowledge that is from God exclusively to themselves, are not knowing what they are claiming. The mortal who truly knows Father's attributes, and emulates them daily, does so without conscious thought. It is as though this God-knowing mortal has always been endowed with the knowledge of the universe. It is true that an unbroken communion leads mortals to this direction, and this is where one can maintain constant consciousness of the will of God. Another question?

HELEN: Abraham, when Ham was talking, he said something about mystical promises. I don't understand what the mystical promises were.

ABRAHAM: Just as it was in the days of old, the Master had imparted to the apostles certain spiritual understandings; and in this process, the apostles were not accepting these basic truths without miracles and fanfare. These apostles believed that the kingdom would come in great power and glory. They also believed they would partake in this glory. Ham reminds us that our spiritual mission is just that, spiritual. It comes without miracles and proof that Michael is in charge of His universe. This mission is like a quiet undertow within a slow-moving river; it appears to be so natural that it almost appears to be of no substance. The mission appears to float along quite peacefully, even when significant changes come and re-routes the current. Our mission is to be in the flow of natural evolution, yes, while underneath – it moves with great speed, guiding Urantia to its divine destiny. Another question?

MARLIN: There is a young lady that I have been sharing lessons with. She experienced a presence. I was wondering if you could tell me who that was? And also, do you have any suggestions for me in giving her further guidance?

ABRAHAM: I am aware she is feeling some apprehension, possibly some fear. I say, fear not. She is like a lantern that is ready to be lit. Inform her on the stillness practice and guide her towards the loving aspects of the Father. He is not to be feared, and I guarantee she is well protected. As for the presence, I do not know, but with time and practice, she will know. Does this help? (Marlin: Yes. Thank you.)

Abraham: One more question?

CALVIN: I'd just like to say thanks to our longtime friend, Ham. It has been quite some time since we heard from him. It was very touching because I have been doing a lot of reflecting on his lessons and how they have helped set our base for your teachings, Abraham. You are helping us to slow down and realize our correct natures, not only as it relates to this Teaching Mission, but also as to who we each are to one another. I can see a lot of difference between the mystical expectations that I once thought of, compared to now. I don't think I am out of the woods and clear on them yet, by any means, but surely a big difference in personal growth in following the Father's will without expecting something that may not be. That's not a question, but thank you.

ABRAHAM: Understood, received and returned. We too are thankful for everyone's participation in this effort. We have seen great strides and are amazed. I can assure you that in your position, being mortal, you are usually not able to see the big picture. I did not say you couldn't, for if you are perceiving within the will of your Father then is the big picture revealed, and the small irritations of this world are not allowed to cause you grief. I do so appreciate our friendship, as does Ham, and we look forward to our time together.

This week, when you are overwhelmed by daily happenings, remember the Master's unbroken communion. He was never overtaken by His troubles. There was no opening for self-pity because of His constant communication with His Father. I give you each my love. Until next week, shalom.

Recognizing Broken And Unbroken Communion With Father

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-17-1996

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, and welcome to you all. We here tonight are all overjoyed with your efforts in your morontial education. Well done. I can speak with you on various morontial topics, I can speak with vivid detailed description, I can speak of morontial examples - but I say, you all know quite well that your greatest example is experience, regardless of my words.

You must personally experience this mortal life to progress spiritually. I say, your awareness in your morontial steps has greatly improved. Those that are willing to partake of Michael's cup are going to experience accelerated morontial lessons. Those willing to move along the trenches with Michael are to also experience greater levels of spiritual joy.

This week my assistants and I have provided you each with examples of broken and unbroken communion. I am allowed to say it was our purpose to assist you in your awareness of these examples. Those of you who experienced broken communion with their inner God, were you not aware of the negative effects thereof? Did you not experience inner mental and emotional turmoil? Did you note the fatigue that this broken communion brought on?

Did any who experienced this broken communion feel a general sense of un-wellness, possibly sickness? You, my friends, can see why this planet experiences such disease as it does; for a great length of time this world experienced such tremendous affliction due to the isolation of the planet. I can say, with the replacement of the spiritual circuits, growth will appear to be rapid. Yes, many are now discovering that their broken communion with Father is indeed destructive. With the planetary awakening, many are once again repairing their broken lines of communication with the First Source and Center and His hosts of divine assistants.

This world will see a time when all are made well. Sickness will be a page in history that children will only know by reading about it; and crime will become useless, unnecessary, for the citizens of Urantia will take care of one another. You see, this time is rapidly approaching. I say this is quite possible in your own personal lives, today. It all begins with your awareness that God is, that God loves you beyond your ability to understand at this present time.

The man Jesus perfected this unbroken communion while on Earth in His life; He began much the way you did – through determination, dedication, and a searching heart and mind. Jesus set the perfected example of what you may also attain while in this material form. He was always to put His Father first before Himself, his family, and his friends. This was a first priority with Jesus; He had no doubt that His other concerns were looked-after by Father.

Jesus rarely ever experienced any physical illness, mental confusion, and painful/emotional turmoil. He was a man who was made whole and complete through His communion with His Father in heaven. I say, my friends, this is absolutely possible here and now. On the Mansion Worlds, this lesson is reviewed throughout the morontial career just as you will need to review this lesson throughout your mortal career.

This world is indeed headed for major reconstruction – as the citizens continue to repair their lines of broken communion will you see major healing of the planet, along with its inhabitants. Change can be difficult, yes, and for some the unknown can bring about fear and confusion; this will appear to be destructive, yes, but I say it is all necessary and natural evolution.

These times of confusion should prompt you to turn to Father for guidance, not cause you to fear and flee from difficulties. You are all in understanding of this confusion through your own unique experiences; and I say, you are all well prepared to assist your fellows who likewise experience this fear and confusion. As the part moves, so moves the whole.

This week I ask you to note the mental and physical effects of broken communion with Father. Continue to practice your stillness exercise to keep your lines of communications strong and unbreakable. Take note and list the positive happenings in your community, your world, and attempt to see how unbroken communication with Father may have played a part. Have you questions?

RACHEL: I have a question, Father Abraham. During our meditation here this evening, was the communion between me and Father broken or closed at that time? And then during the lesson when you said: "You know Father loves you." – was it reopened at that time?

ABRAHAM: Yes. I would not say that you were closed-off in your communication, no, I would say your 'focus' was a bit off. Overall, you have a very good sense of open and closed communication. Does this answer?

RACHEL: Yes it does, up to a point, other than I certainly felt different during the meditation and in the prayer I was saying. I felt like maybe it was just the way the feeling was given to me. Even if it hadn't been broken, I felt like it was. And when you said: "You know Father loves you," it was a feeling that came over my entire body that made me think, "Well, it's reopened again."

ABRAHAM: Rachel, my daughter, you contain too much faith to be in complete broken communion. I do say, there are varying degrees, and your Father is aware of your need for a shift in perception. Does this help? (Rachel: Yes. I also thought you were experimenting with me.) Abraham: Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, are you saying to watch and to take note in our own personal lives when we see communication or communion – broken and unbroken? or the effect in the lives of others around us? or both.

ABRAHAM: Both. Your own personal experience is more of a realized reality, yes; but I say, to be aware of all goodness is to experience that deep and loving gratitude for our Father. To focus on – not necessarily even focus, but to be even aware of – this goodness, is to feed it energy. Our thoughts are quite powerful in bringing about good, or to bring about destruction. To be aware of this good anywhere is to walk with a grateful attitude and joyful countenance. I do not say, ignore the negative, no; I say, to feed the positive. To dwell in negativity is to increase this negativity and attract it into your own life. Just for this week, attempt to recognize the good brought about by someone's openness to Father and their courage to carry forth Father's will. Does this answer?

CALVIN: Yes. In a nutshell then – as we go about our lives, unbroken communion would be in walking in the goodness of appreciation of our Father's goodness and watchcare. And in those moments when we will probably go back to our old patterns, or when we are in the material world too heavily and in broken communication, we can then see the difference of how things work not so smoothly, not so healthy, and there are more irritations. (Abraham: Yes, exactly.) Calvin: And you're asking us to take note of the difference in relying upon our Father, or not.

ABRAHAM: Yes. Perhaps experiment with this understanding. Another question?

ROLAND: Just to follow up: In your lesson this evening you talked about some events that may occur, if I understood it right, that may appear to be destructive, in order to bring a greater body of the populace of the world to attending to the Father; and this, perhaps through these events being destructive. I don't mean to dwell on the negative of that, but we have heard of other teachings from various areas of the Teaching Mission that talked about 'Earth changes.' Would you like to elaborate on what, perhaps, those events might be? (TR: He is saying, no!) [laughter.]

ABRAHAM: I have spoken of the physical healing of this planet and its citizens. I will emphasize that these positive events will occur through the natural process of evolution. I cannot foresee anything you all could not handle. Does this answer? (Roland: Does this mean we shouldn't go out and get earthquake insurance?) Abraham: You know your true source of insurance, perhaps work to collect that. Another question?

TECTRA: Abraham, I guess I'm a little confused yet in what is communion with Father, versus broken communion. Is it possible to go through the day – say I'll be going through the day and all of a sudden I remember about Father; but before that, I was going through the day and working along and didn't have any kind of thought or anything, and then I'll think to myself: "How come I haven't been thinking of Father to be helping me in this day?" Now is that necessarily broken communication that I was just then remembering again? or can communion keep happening without realization?

ABRAHAM: Jesus, the man, held a constant communion with Father and yet went about His daily business. He did not constantly profess this communion outright. He simply was trusting that His Father accompanied Him constantly. It was not necessary to continually pray, it was only necessary to go about doing good. A sure signal that communion has broken is in recognizing all the poisonous emotions that stem from the ego. To be in confusion about your inner feelings and project out negative emotions, is indeed a signal that you may perhaps be drifting closer toward the ego. 'Communion' is a faith and trust that all is in the care of a Supreme Ruler. Communion need not be constantly pondered-over but lived in the daily routine of mortal living. If it is your will to be within Father's, then I say, communion is assured. Good question! Does this answer help? (Tectra: Yes, Abraham, it was very helpful. Thank you.) Abraham: Another question?

HONORAY: Yes, Abraham, I would like to just thank you for your beautiful lessons and the privilege of listening to them – and all of our Teachers I've had since I have been in this Mission. I feel that we are so fortunate to be able to have these teachings to help us because I have seen many changes come over each one around us, as well as myself. So I just want to thank you again for being here. There is one rumor that is going around, and I don't know if you would want to answer it or not: We are always hearing about this anti-Christ that is supposed to turn up in these last days. Is there such one individual called the anti-Christ? or would that just pertain to anybody that doesn't believe in Jesus? Is there one individual that you know of that is going to be the anti-Christ?

ABRAHAM: I absolutely do not know of such individual! The closest example to an anti-Christ would be one who has experienced the divine and then worked against it, knowingly. We do not foresee this to be a stumbling block to the true believer. There are too many believers in our beloved Creator and in our all-powerful Father. Does this help?

HONORAY: Yes, thank you.

HELEN: Abraham, in trying to stay in communion and staying clear, you answered Tectra's question, and it answered a lot for how 'to stay in communion;' but my question is: When you are 'out of it' (in the state of this unbroken communion) what is a good way to get back in. For an example: Where we are living there is one old guy who is a real challenge; he gets in these moods where he pushes everybody's buttons, and it is very upsetting. It is a lot of negative energy; and therefore, it is really hard to bring patience and practice forbearance. How can I try and bring myself back when he has pushed my buttons?

ABRAHAM: Understood. To strengthen the bond of communion one needs to view this life as an education and know that there is no pressure to immediately take in every spiritual lesson. To know that you are a learner in the universal scheme of things is to acquire automatic self-forgiveness – it does no good to punish yourself for being a learner. It is also helpful to know that you stand on the brink of all eternity; you need not rush through this life with a constant burden to bear. The spiritual life is joyful; and when mortals are perceiving their surroundings (or their life happenings) to be too serious is when broken communion needs to be forced to make a turnaround – and I say, communion with Father is impeded if it has to be forced. A light heart and applied humor is always an antidote for blocked communication. A look at your understanding of life-situations is always humorous. An attitude of 'eternity awaits me' to learn from my lessons and mistakes is a wonderful way to remove the pressure of daily living and restore the circuit of communion between you and Father.

I am honored to speak with you each. I do perceive my position here with you to be of some importance, but I know that I can rely upon the humor of my past misconceptions. It always lifts my attitude to be with you, my friends and coworkers in this movement, to uplift the spiritual understanding. I am with you during the week and available for questions. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

The Abused Boy And The Kind Man | This is How Father Is To His Children

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you, my friends. It is joyous to attend this meeting weekly. You make me feel welcome and I thank you.

Last week we discussed broken and unbroken communion. It is interesting to hear you review your weekly events and talk about your spiritual experiences as though they are quite ordinary and natural. Years ago this concept would have appeared to be out of reach, difficult to understand, and not used normally in daily living. Yes, these spiritual lessons are becoming a reality. Your logical outlook of these lessons make it easier to integrate into daily living. With the use of mind, you receive the divine which benefits the body and soul. I am to give you a story:

A man with a kind heart came upon a boy who had been severely abused and abandoned.

The man asked the boy what his troubles were about. The boy did not reply. He crouched in fear. This boy was afraid to speak because his past experiences of speaking with his elders got him punished. The kind man, knowing of his own status within the kingdom, knew he could not walk away and abandon this wounded child. The man persisted in asking this boy if he could help.

This boy, seeing the man's concern, decided to see what he could receive by taking advantage of the man and decided to go with him. This man vowed to care for this boy, to provide food, shelter, clothing, and guidance. The boy in his untrusting nature, thought he could very easily take advantage of the man's kind nature. The boy plotted to steal what he could to provide for himself. The man, day after day, showed the boy kindness and trust.

The man was not wholly ignorant. He knew very well this boy plotted to betray him, but the man was driven to help this boy and to be a loving support. The man would not give up. Each day the man told the boy: "My son, you have done well this day. I knew I could depend on your knowledgeable mind. You are indeed a wonderful boy who has surely brought sunlight into my dreary home. You, my son, have made me to smile, and I am truly thankful."

Each day the boy heard these words and yet he remembered the brutality shown him by his former caretakers. The day came when the boy would plan his largest theft from the man and flee his home. When the man greeted the boy once again, he said: "My son, I am made happy to look upon your wonderful face and know that I am truly blessed, for our Lord has brought you to be my friend."

It came time for the boy to leave and as he gathered the kind man's possessions, he heard those words of praise from the man ringing within his mind. The boy said: "This man who has cared for me, who appears to trust me, possibly even love me, is not deserving of my betrayal. This man is the only elder who has ever shown me this faith within myself. His kindness has softened my heart and I too feel love and loyalty, I cannot betray the kind man." and he put back the man's possessions.

The boy and the man continued their loving relationship. The man's kindness made the boy believe he was valued. The man continued to treat this boy with honor, and the boy continued to portray this honor in his life. This relationship was indeed healing and uplifting for both man and boy.

I say, this is how your Father views you, His child. Father is persistent, faithful, kind, and does not forsake any of His children. Father, like the kind man, would indeed risk loss than to lose even one of His children. Father tells us every day: "You are my child; I am made to smile when I greet you each day." My friends, it is extremely important that you accept your place within the kingdom. It is not that you portray the abused boy, but more-so it is, that you portray this untrust and lack of self-value.

Your Father, every day, encourages you each through this open communion with you. And many times you are made to feel this loyalty; and, to honor that Father has so much faith in you, yes. The Father is the kind man that does not flee when things become unpleasant. Father is not ignorant to His child's choices and actions. He is wholly cognizant of each and every decision you make. He is with you always, and always is His goodness bestowed upon you. In return, you are filled with gratitude and filled with desire to worship and show thankfulness for His faith He has in you.

Many times, mortals act quickly in unknowing; they rush into irrational thinking and behavior. Mortals are quick to find the shortest distance between two points – and in this, what you deem efficient is to possibly block communion. We have spoken of your place in the kingdom. We have endeavored to teach about the fruits of the spirit wherein you put to practical use, all that is taught. I say, with the urge to be in open communion – this at times, adds undue pressure.

As I have said, we stand at the beginning of eternity, and the lessons that are being taught are to be used in everyday living. To have enthusiasm is wonderful; and there is time for enthusiasm, yes, but let me say – in all the worldly excitement let us remember to be observant and reflective; to quiet the mind and absorb everyday mortal lessons, and to reflect their meaning and value. I can say, this practice is always assisted by the indwelling Father Fragment, for Father is always available to explain spiritual values. Spiritual knowledge is becoming more natural, more instant and immediate.

To be in an attitude of observance and reflectivity is to receive incoming spiritual information. This is wholly possible. It is not odd or extraordinary, no, it is what this world should have known all along. We endeavor to assist you in your spiritual upliftment and mortal education. We endeavor to bring this world to its proper spiritual status.

Yes, great things are occurring. Like the calm river with the swift undertow, you may not visually witness some things; but I can guarantee that just as years ago constant communion with Father appeared to be out of reach, you know now this regular communion with Father is entirely possible; and, is necessary if this world is to move into a new and better age. Any questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, in the story of the kind man and the boy: I recognize how that is the Father's way with us, yes. Am I to understand that this is to be our way with each other? If we were to see an injured and abandoned boy and take him in and treat him kind – and then if the boy does take obvious advantage of us, are we to draw a human life distinction between letting it slide? or to say: "Look son, I love you but you might have to leave; you can't continue to do that and disrupt our home like that;" and then let the boy go out and stumble, and to, hopefully, realize he can come back to a safe place when he can live rules that are good for the household? Does that make sense? or should we be like the kind man of the story, always?

ABRAHAM: The Father is not ignorant. He knows well the mind of each of his children. Mortals, on the other hand, must rely upon their intelligence in combination with compassion. No, you cannot continually serve one who betrays you, but you can express your faith and encourage this troubled one to 'seek within,' his own true Father. It is entirely possible to encourage, to show faith, to show understanding, to make possible for this troubled one to 'return within' to His Father. To express faith in another is energy-giving. To encourage another is to empower one to have self-trust. Does this help? (Calvin: Yes, it does. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

HONORAY: Abraham, I was thinking of the raising of children when they are teenagers; and in this day and age how they get rebellious and want to do their own things. So many parents will say, "As long as you live in my house you will obey my rules." I am sure you have heard that. Sometimes these children leave home because they won't obey the rules, and learn the hard way out on the street. I haven't had to do this, but I have seen parents that have done this, telling their child: "you can't live with me and do the things that you are doing" – and yet, they try to be kind and tell them they love them. So I ask, how much should a parent put up with these teenagers of today that might abuse the privileges in their home? Is it better to allow them to go out and learn the hard way? or should the parents make more effort to keep them home?

ABRAHAM: There indeed should be guidelines, yes. Many parents form ego-based decisions in how they set laws, and the youth has virtually no input into these guidelines – and this is demeaning; this is compared to tyranny. The respected teen who is trusted to make decisions and mistakes should be allowed to be included in the guidelines of living. The youth that is trusted to know that 'within, there is the answer to all questions' – is that youth who is capable of offering guidelines that are beneficial to the whole. Does this help?

HONORAY: Yes. I know that is the way I did with mine. And I trusted them and told them that I trusted them. I found that it did matter, yes, that they felt like they were trusted. But today it seems like there are so many parents that kick them out, and that is it!

ABRAHAM: Understood. These are hard lessons; and yet, the parents only want to spare the child from pain or even death. Many parents fear the loss of a child and set up strict rules in the hope that they may be spared the pain of an accident – only to cause more harm than good in the long-run. To make the child feel an equal participant in the family, even in the disciplinary methods, softens the harshness of the family rule and makes room for a learning environment when family rules are broken.

I am weakening in this communication. I remind you to be observant and reflective in your daily decisions. I give you my love. Until next week, shalom.

The Passionate Scientist Views With New Eyes And An Open Heart

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you. I view you all to be as children that are reaching up for your Father's hand. This is very beautiful. I see you--the sons and daughters who do not lay down helpless when hit by mortal burdens--I see you rise upon falling and fighting the good fight of faith. I am honored to be your Teacher. As I teach, I also learn – and I thank you for that.

Last week our lesson had many meanings, lessons within lessons. Each of you at your own level of development received the specific lesson that you needed. You can say that all did not receive the lesson in the same way. This is how such diverse groups of cosmic citizens are taught on the Mansion Worlds. No one is being pushed or hurried along. All are at liberty to pursue an individual spiritual path.

You may find it helpful to discuss each one's understanding of these weekly lessons. To speak with one another is helpful in expanding personal perspectives. To communicate without worry of judgment is to receive immediate assistance from the participating Father Fragments. We find that communication between mortals is helpful in understanding universe meanings; and yes, this also affects the Supreme Being.

Last week I asked you to be observant and reflective, to be watchful and aware of spiritual meanings. To be observant requires a calm mind, a desire to be open to Father's will. The hurried mind is impatient and not receptive to reflecting what is observed. The worried mind is also an obstruction to what you may know.

A scientist must observe elements on many levels – and re-observe after that, upon which the scientist may report his findings. The passionate scientist is in a strong desire to be at one with that which he observes; He is devoted to a specific goal. The scientist does not rush through his experiments in the hope that the discoveries will come sooner.

The passionate scientist must remain aware of every aspect of his experiment; He is not preoccupied with outside concerns because he may miss important aspects of his observation. The caring scientist not only reports his findings, but also what he understands about the meaning of what he finds. The good scientist is always complete in his study and is not distracted by his own personal wishes and desires for the outcome; therefore, leaving the scientist open to more accurate results.

You are this scientist. You are studying the elements of spirituality, and your goal is Paradise. You are observing Father's fingerprints and how they relate to your sojourn in the flesh. I say, you are this passionate scientist who observes mortal happenings and defines them with spiritual definitions. To be in this mode of observing and reflecting, you are in the midst of the will of Father. To be at liberty to observe without worry is to view mortal happenings with new eyes and an open heart. To be a learner is an invitation to be taught, and therein lies the will of God. Have you questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, in last week's lesson, I would just like to say how much that was helpful in viewing our Father. But also I would comment: It seems no matter how well we do with your lessons – or not show up even or not pay enough attention – still you seem as the 'kind father like in that story you told; I know you are going to be here for us no matter what. I appreciate that as an example we can relate with. You seem never to be upset with us even when we do something wrong. Even when we get a little too far out of line with our attitudes you are always there with that same 'kind love' and that is a good stepping-stone for us to view even more of Father's ways.

ABRAHAM: This is easy for me. I am in understanding of the paths you each travel. I also received this same loving encouragement from my friend and mentor, Machiventa. He never showed anger due to my misguided understandings. He had a view of the bigger picture. He saw that my mistakes were finite and my authentic-self was potentially eternal. He too was a loving, patient, and understanding Teacher. Another question?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I have one that I have been wanting to ask you for quite a while. In your mortal life did you have a son named Isaac? (Abraham: Yes.) Rachel: And was the request made by God for you to sacrifice your son Isaac as a test on you?

ABRAHAM: No! only within my own mind. I was led to believe through a series of dreams, events, and traditions that Father required the ultimate sacrifice as proof of my love. This was my own misguided understanding. Today we have many misguided individuals who still believe that their greatest treasures must be sacrificed in order to receive God's love and return love to God. Father has never asked us to sacrifice anything that would hurt us so severely, but many mortals believe that their adversities are just that – sacrifices made to pay debts or to atone for sins. You are in understanding of my words, Rachel?

RACHEL: Yes, you bet I am, and I am very thrilled with your answer because I didn't think the Father would really make that request of anyone. So when it gets right down to the Bible story then, it is just partially authentic?

ABRAHAM: Yes. (Rachel: Thank you.) Abraham: Good question Rachel. Thank you. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, were you around in my life when that same thing kind of happened to me? I got sidetracked in my search for truth with one of these self-proclaimed "this is the way and the only way" person claiming to be God's chosen; you are probably aware of that individual. In my searching of 'where is God,' I remember the biblical scripture saying, "If a man can't leave his father, mother, son or daughter for my sake he is not fit for my kingdom." I understand the correct meaning of that now – meaning 'to put the Father's work ahead of everything else.' But at that time, I thought that meant to do the same test that you felt was required, to sacrifice Isaac. I remember the day when I thought I was saying goodbye to my children for the last time. I wonder if that even came close to maybe what you experienced. I know it was a very tough decision for me; and yet, how beautiful it was when I realized that I was in error in that thinking, and since – they have been a very joyous and fruitful part of my life.

ABRAHAM: I am aware, yes. This was somewhat similar to my own experience. The mind is somewhat fallible when in pain – emotional or otherwise. The mind, when blocked from communion with Father, attempts to reason on what it thinks is logical. And many times, mortals believe they are deserving of punishment for wrongs committed. Atonement is still believed to be man's greatest process in which you believe to be cleansed free from sin and within God's favor. In an attitude of observing and reflection, you are opening yourselves to immediate open communion with Father; you are, in reality, co-creating your divine destiny; you are in unbroken communion. To trust the Father and know that all is taken care of is to be aligned with His will. To be at ease with Father's decisions is to receive immediate answers to questions you are asking. To be in this unbroken communion is to know that Father asks nothing from you except for your love. This is an easy request knowing the Father's goodness – are we in agreement there?

CALVIN: Yes. I do agree. If we love Him, we would surely have to have trust. How can we love someone that we fear? To know that to just have love for this 'all taking care of us Father' – that would have to include trust and faith. So love has to encompass all those words then?

ABRAHAM: Yes, the more we know about Father's goodness the more we are drawn to Him and love Him. To understand the Father and love Him is to then encompass trust and expanded awareness and faith, yes.

RACHEL: Then Father Abraham it was through your communion with God and through your indwelling Spirit that stopped both you and Calvin from doing what you had in mind to do, right?

ABRAHAM: Yes. My life in your recorded accounts is exaggerated. I had never gone so far as to lay my son on the table. Another question?

CALVIN: I have been telling people that story just as you told it. I knew that had to be the truth that you didn't actually put Isaac on the table for sacrifice. Traditions had made you think that you had to prove that you loved God, and through Melchizedek, your mentor, as you are ours, he taught you that you didn't have to do that. Is that what you are telling us? (Abraham: Yes, correct, Calvin.)

I am slipping. I want to express my love and gratitude to you each. I ask you to remain observant and reflective. Attempt to feel the presence of your Father during these moments of observing and reflecting, know that you are well taken care of. Until next week, shalom.

A Beautiful Field - An Exercise In Balance, Observing Ourselves a Part Of The Whole

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, and welcome. I thank you for allowing me to assist you in your morontial learning. You have made this communication possible through your faith and use of logic. You are shaping my lesson format. We have discussed the practice of observing and reflecting; and I say, as many observations are there to make, there are that many scientists also to make them; scientists all reflecting different views. Join me in this exercise if you will:

In our imagination we come to a field. In this field are there many flowers, trees, shrubbery, and animals. [pause.] A stream runs through this field. [pause.] We can stand back and view this entire field and take note of the various happenings.

Perhaps we spot a deer drinking from this stream. Perhaps a bird that has landed to consume seeds. [pause.] Possibly we can view the clouds overhead moving with the wind. [pause.]

As we stand back to view this lovely field, we are observing its beauty as a whole; we are in understanding of its connection to the various elements of time and space. [pause.] We are now entering into this field; we brush against the shrubbery. We see the various insects that fly from flower to flower. We feel the warmth of the sun and the breeze upon our backs. [pause.]

As we stand now in this field our observation methods are changed; we are viewing the inner workings of the field and pondering how this relates to our previous observation of the whole field. [pause.] As we venture further into this field, we notice the various flowers that are growing – there are so many and yet, there is room in the soil for each flower. [pause.] We are witnessing that each flower is part of the whole field. There are no flowers that are not needed or valued. Each flower adds its own particular beauty to the field. [pause.]

We can now feel a slight change in temperature – the clouds have moved overhead and it is beginning to rain. [pause.] We are yet witnessing another part to the total care of this field, another link in the chain that assists in the field's survival. [pause.] We can view the flowers in loving gratitude for this rain. [pause.] We can yet still observe this field on another level through the various natural elements that ensure the well-being of the entire field. [pause.]

We now step out of our field. Reflect on how this field relates to your world and its people, and its relation with the Father. [A longer pause for reflection.]

I would say that each of your reflections would differ; and all would be aware of a particular lesson that was needed to learn. In our reflection, we may view this field as Urantia. We may know that the world exists, yes, but we know little until we step inside to view its inner workings. We may reflect that the flowers represent Urantian citizens – all appear to be different; and yet, like the flowers, there is room in the soil for all.

As the harsh elements may occur to the field, so does adversity happen to the mortals of this world. We take a step closer in our observation to have a deeper understanding of our fellows. It is as we stand within the world and calmly observe the inner workings do we reflect upon the whole. As our ideas are expanded, we begin to incorporate the Supreme Being; we begin to understand that the effects of this world ripple out to the Supreme, and then back again.

I say, this world now is feeling the effects of the Father's rain upon them – the loving watchcare that all are valued. Yes, we are observing this world on another level and we reflect upon the Father's effects on us. This world experiences an awareness that Father is within our field. He nourishes us with His rain, and yet the stream that is constant goes right through the middle of our field. We all prosper from our knowledge of knowing where to find the stream.

I would ask you this week to reflect upon where this stream flows for you and its availability for use. I said there would be morontial lessons given – I am certain you are well equipped to understand them. I am open to receive any questions you might have.

CALVIN: Abraham, may I share my thoughts of this stream, or would you rather us do that after the meeting. (Abraham: Is there a particular question?) Calvin: Yes. Would this stream be the waters of truth? or is there more meaning?

ABRAHAM: Yes. There is truth in that, and yet we all contain within us this stream. It is a common thread that runs through all who contain mind. Yes. Our Father Fragment is with us; He is our stream that is so obvious and is so available; and yet, many find it difficult to locate this stream. I would also agree with the concept that the wind in our field is Michael's influence. The wind strengthens the various living things of our field, and this is becoming more noticeable, along with the sunshine that could represent the Mother and Her various daughters – the angels. This reflection is entirely open for you to define; and, has no limits. It is likely that your definition of this exercise in observance and reflection is subject to change as your awareness increases. Does this help?

CALVIN: Yes. In such a field, just as in this life, it contains weeds and thorns as well as the beauty. Is it a necessary part of our experience of life? I'm pretty sure people would go into this field and say there is sure a lot of weeds and thorns mixed in with the flowers. Others would say they don't see any weeds, they just see beautiful flowers. Are we to overlook the weeds of life and view all as beautiful flowers? Or, are we to see them as necessary hardships.

ABRAHAM: Good observation. As I say, there is room in the soil for all, weeds included. Many know that weeds serve a particular purpose in helping the flowers to maintain their health and vitality. Another question?

WILLEENA: Abraham, would you say more about how the weeds help the flowers maintain their vitality?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Weeds with a specific chemical make-up are designed by nature to attract various insects – thus, protecting the flowers. I say, mortals that sow various seeds of destruction also attract some negative feedback; and this is educational for those involved. I would also say that adversity is not always the 'insects' but lessons are learned just the same. Overall, there is room in the soil for both weeds and flowers, yes – just as there is a connection to one another in our survival and learning in this material life, yes. Another question?

ROLAND: Abraham, it seems to me that the stream is the nurturer of all things that appear on Urantia – the animals, grasses, the flowers, weeds, trees, etc. – those that could only symbolize the love-energy from the Father, which is the supporter of all. [inaudible.]

ABRAHAM: Yes, if that is your interpretation, if this is what you perceive. Myself, I would refer to the stream as our actual indwelling Father Fragments that are so close and available; and I would refer to the rain as our Universe Creator Father that indeed fills and maintains the stream. One more question?

HELEN: As I was visualizing what you were talking about, it was odd that as I was getting that visual, I kept landscaping it in my mind, like making paths; and, a large area with picnic tables and a gazebo so people could get down to the stream to enjoy it, and lay in a hammock and enjoy the breeze under the shade of a tree; and have flowers all around them in different colors – just places to get out of the rain all year-around throughout all the seasons. It was amazing how not just in the landscaping, but the sculpting of it, I was making it to share with others and be a peaceful place. As I was doing that I was thinking about the weeds and flowers and how it had to have balance to have it be just right. My initial thoughts were about managing the field and wanting it to look nice and have everything to enjoy; but yet I understand I have to let the field grow, even with weeds, to have it be all natural, that it might have a balance. But then I started envisioning some of the weeds taking over the beautiful flowers – and I got to a point wherein I realized my question: Do we leave something like that completely all natural to itself? Or, make an effort to keep balance by pulling up the weeds that are choking the flowers? Do we just let them do their own thing?
