ABRAHAM: Yes, Esmerelda, my dear daughter, I do see you in these trying times as one with grace and immeasurable strength. You need not feel that events have befallen you for one reason or another. You are a woman of faith and know full well that Father will correlate your experience with meanings and values. You would do well to become more direct in your discussion with others. To hold back because you believe it may cause turmoil or pain is really detrimental to you. Certainly, you are gifted in your way with words and you can find a way to be tactfully honest and open. Have not fear, for with each day that goes by, your Father grows closer to you. You are as you should be. Take comfort, my daughter, for in every mortal event there is great value. Another question?

CALVIN: A quick welcome to Dave Purdy, it is his first time here with our group.

ABRAHAM: Yes. Welcome. Questions?

DAVE: Abraham, you have played a very important role in my childhood. I have to admit I have come here tonight as one quite skeptical. Part of me also feels a little cynical because of the way I was brought up – to not believe in things that cannot be explained by science or in things of a religious nature. But I have not really given up; and yet, I have become quite cynical. What would you have to say to me?

ABRAHAM: I understand you, for I was indeed the same way. I held firmly to the teachings of my forefathers until the appearance of my mentor, MachiventaMelchizedek. I cannot change your cynicism, but most definitely can I offer you fellowship and love. You have had experiences that have brought your mind to where it is now – and that is not bad, but is a stepping stone to greater meanings and values. I can say, the painful events of your past are not destined to repeat, so you need not be so distrustful. Rather, renew your personal relationship with Father so He can show you a new and better way to be open to new ideas, new challenges. I do understand your concern of being led astray or falling for falsities. You, though, are the controller of your mind; and you can trust in that to weigh those things you 'see' with what you actually 'believe.' Cynic or not, I welcome you.

JOHN: Abraham, I definitely relate to what you were saying in the lesson about parts of our life where we want to include Father; and there are other parts of our daily lives where we exclude or even just forget about His existence. I guess my question is – besides the stillness, how do we get to a place where we can go ahead and allow Father into those places that we are not so proud of or feel worthy of?

ABRAHAM: Understood, John. You know you are not perfect and are in a state of becoming. Certainly, Father knows that, for that is indeed part of His plan. What other mortals may deem shameful, Father sees these things as opportunities to become closer with you. He knows you at your very worst and He does not love you any less, no. Once you have committed to bring Father even into your darkest areas, the levels of shame fade away and your co-creating partnership with Father excels. Many individuals cannot seem to overcome their past mistakes and their guilt is a barricade to God. The ego loathes to see its own mistakes and seeks to cover them up with excuses. But the divine seeks Father's guidance on how to correct or to find a better way. Yes, stillness is good – that keeps a close communion with Father. But real honesty, with yourself and Father, takes you to a new level of taking action towards really putting the divine way to work, yes. Father is not about atoning – or even redeeming, after deeds are done; He desires to be brought into every situation beforehand as if He was a partner in all your decision-making. Good question, John. Does this answer? (John: Yes, and thank you.)

MIRIAM: How was 'your' energy this week? What is going on with you and your staff?

ABRAHAM: We are also tying up loose ends, making ready for the new phase, preparing new lessons – and yes, even taking time for some rest and reversion, which I would highly recommend. Thank you, Miriam.

CALVIN: Abraham, I want to ask for Milton West. He has a question about a Teacher for his area, for his group?

ABRAHAM: I do know there is a transmission-receiver being prepared, but no Teacher assigned as of yet.

If there are no more pressing questions, I would take my leave. I would express to you, again, my gratitude and unending affection to you each. Until next week, shalom.

The Marriage Begins | Some May Not Hold Strong To The Mission-Commitment
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-23-2001
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am glad for the early start to tonight's meeting for we have much to cover. Beginning the second phase of the Correcting Time, it is wise for us to cover some of those tried-and-true techniques that have carried us this far.

We have discussed The Urantia Book as a measuring tool for all our incoming spiritual information. We have discussed the importance of the relationship to our indwelling Adjusters. We have touched on the importance of awareness on who we serve and the realities of our Paradise Father.

I will say a few words on the technique that brought you this Correcting Time Teaching Mission. Yes, the 'stillness practice' is a time of quiet openness that is specifically for you; it is for you and Father – to keep your relationship fresh and growing.

The stillness practice is an antidote for stress – mental and emotional confusion. The stillness is not about uprooting mystical happenings that proves God is real, no. It is not about showing yourself to be a 'dedicated child of God.' It is not about paying your dues to show you are worthy of 'child of God' status.

The stillness practice is balance for your mind and a cleansing of spiritual poisons. The stillness is reconnecting to Father, that all-knowing Parent who sees you for who you really are and loves and encourages you without end. The stillness (or meditation) is an equalizer between the divine and the human; a balancer of the ego; a line drawn between self-loathing and self-love.

Stillness was not designed to add to your guilt because you do not practice it, no, but it is a safeguard for you to become balanced in spirit, mind, and body. A sound connection with Father leads to clean and clear thinking which receives incoming divine information that produces overall benefits for the mind and body. The human body cannot repel ailments if the mind is in turmoil. It all begins with stillness, my friends.

The second thing I would like to cover is Teacher purpose and position. The Teachers have come to you out of the state of emergency for the planet as a whole. We have come to you in this Mission to assist Urantia back into the fold of Nebadon. We are to assist you in becoming acquainted with the new spiritual re-encircuitment. We have come to help uplift and create calm in these new changes.

As well, my associates and I have come to help you each make sound contact with the beloved Adjusters. We are not about mysticism or coming to a chosen people, no. We are not about proving God's existence – nor, of our existence for that matter. I am personally here out of my love for this world's people, and I find it my highest honor to serve Michael in this wonderful epic adventure.

Yes, it is a momentous time and yet, we must each remain small and usable to God. The Teachers and other spiritual assistants are not here for your mortal amusement, nor a sideline hobby. We are about change and real spiritual work. We are not to smooth-over bruised egos or poor self-esteem, no; those are matters for you and Father. In this Correcting Time, the age of courting is over and now the marriage begins.

Most of you understand the complexity of the marital union – there are so many new things to become accustomed to; there are habits and behaviors your partner has that you cannot possibly comprehend as to 'why.' A true marriage takes continuous maintenance, communication, and a willingness to see one's own mistakes. A healthy marriage does not point out one another's faults but stands in commitment to assisting a spouse with understanding and honesty – heartfelt genuine honesty; not as a superior individual who 'knows more,' but one who is willing to be open to new possibilities.

My friends, we have each entered this marriage with expectations; and there is no doubt we have faced great disappointment, yes, but also has there been tremendous growth and lasting bonds of friendship. There is a particular joy you can only receive from a committed, healthful marriage. Therein, is the promise that you are not alone in the world to face everyday harsh realities; you have a place where you feel safe to be who you really are and to know you are very much loved.

In a good marriage, you are allowed mistakes; you are allowed to grow from them. You have the support of one another instead of the ridicule you might find in other relationships. The time of courting is over; the non-reality that you show a prospective spouse to win their affections is phasing out and the reality of seeing who your partner really is will come in. Now our real work begins. Now we will see who is in this marriage for the long run. We will see if devotion and love can overcome trivial habits.

A good marriage, of course, always puts Father first and tries to view every situation through spiritual eyes. This is not to say there will not be disagreements or even arguments, hurt feelings, etc. We must be firstly committed to Father before we can commit to one another, yes. With any healthy marriage, there are sacrifices, there is a giving and receiving - there is compromise.

Among the brotherhood of Urantia, there will be those difficulties that arise, and many will not be able to endure. Many have not the faith or commitment to stay the course. This is to be expected. Realize though, the benefits from compromising with one another (the giving and receiving and sacrifice) are required to show forth any fruit. In this union of ours, what sacrifices are you willing to make? What are the costs of the Correcting Time? How much are you willing to release so you can receive?

A marriage is centered around the entire family, not just one person. All are considered; all are taken care of. What is your role in this union? Father does not ask you to 'give all that you have' but more perhaps asks 'give all that you are.' Be willing to lose self for His sake so that He may make you more than you are. Yes.

No questions this evening. I do want to express to you each that my love and dedication goes with you. I am honored to be entered into this union with you. Until next week, shalom.

Go Beyond Comfort Levels | You Have Made Your Mission Bed, Now Lie In It
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-30-2001
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I so much enjoy the group spirit here this evening. You each appear to have rolled up your sleeves and are ready to work. These past Mission years have only been preparation for the present time, a warm-up so to speak - the teetering between faith, doubt, reality, and mysticism. It is apparent the Teaching Mission is becoming more stabilized and founded in the reality of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, yes.

With any new marriage, there are needs to be met, rolls to fulfill, and positions to define. Now that we have established a commitment we will be called to certain duties. These tasks/assignments are helping each one of you attain experience that will serve your fellows. You cannot say: "I am with righteousness because I serve;" or glorify the self because you put yourself out, no! because you are also receiving valuable experience in return.

In a good marriage you give in order to 'care for the whole;' you don't give just 'to receive.' And for those who do understand the marriage concept, you will rarely ever receive any credit for your good deeds. Again, that is not why we serve.

I can say that most individuals going into marriage have expectations that never really come to pass – the lessons are hard and bringing a new consciousness. You will find that you must move beyond your usual pattern of behavior, yes, even at times compromise yourself. You learn to move from that place of self-satisfaction and comfort to making effort towards trying new things, doing different things.

This Teaching Mission appears to the outside world as a new thing, something out of the ordinary and strange. We are thankful that those Mission beginners did step out of their comfort zone to embrace the new without worry of ridicule. You have had these years to digest lessons, and always do you know you can fall into the safe arms of your Heavenly Parents should trouble arise.

Now we are asked to go forth from our self-satisfaction and comfort, to handling situations with spiritual maturity. "I am fine, but I am not complete," is a saying we will become acquainted with. Also: "I am valued and loved, but I do not hold all the answers;" and, "I am willing to step forth and drink the cup, fight the good fight of faith, view my fellows as brothers and sisters and, do what I have to for the good of the whole," yes.

We could say you have made your Mission bed – now lie in it. Go forth with courage and deal with your mortal circumstances with spiritual power. Do not recoil in fear as if you know not the Master nor have had the spiritual training. The spiritual path is not a path of ease, no! and situations will arise where you must step out from your comfort zone to handle situations.

The Master seemed to have a perfectly focused mind and a shielded heart; He could endure all things. The Master could deal with difficult situations because He allowed Father to work. Many were common to say the Master was "beside Himself;" and indeed He was – instead of jumping to emotional rampage or assuming the worst, the Master would consult with Father in prayer or stillness to receive clarification.

Many things that happen are really not as bad as you would think; they are subject to your human definition. So while you go forth with your new courage to move from your comfort zone to do new things, forget not to consult the divine overseers for clarification and direction.

It was quite rare for the Master to give way to emotional outbursts, and that was due to His time spent with Father. He was strengthened for everyday ordinary daily mortal happenings. He moved with spiritual power from on high because He was dedicated to allowing Father to work.

The Master worked not for self-recognition, no, but for the welfare of the whole. He found spiritual strength to do even the most difficult of tasks because of His Father-connection. The criticism He received was of no effect because He had tamed the mortal ego. The business of who He was and how He was growing and learning was only the concern of Father's. Said He: "I am made more when I have given all that I am to my Father in heaven. I fear not the ridicule of society. I dare to move beyond what I feel comfortable with, to be of service to Him that has created everything."

Friends, you will be called to certain tasks that you feel you are not equipped, or which moves you from your level of comfort. Allow Father to be at your side with His guidance and to bestow on you spiritual confidence and power. Do not take my words in through the ego's eyes and ears, no, but see them through the eyes of the spirit. This is maintaining balance. This is serving the whole.

Conflicts that arise within this marriage will need to be dealt with to gain closer bonds of trust. You cannot cover-over your difficulties with social niceties and expect healing, no. Michael's Spirit of Truth runs through the hearts of every man and woman. Nothing will be hidden for long. We must move from our comfort levels, to face the truth in whatever form it takes. We must move beyond the ego's cry for attention and remittance, and be about the business of truth and the desire to initiate healing.

I hope I am clear to you. A few questions?

WILLEENA: Abraham, I would like to ask about the stillness track I am on – if it is accurate or if you would suggest adjustments?

ABRAHAM: I perceive you to be in understanding, but I would suggest you to have balance with this. Do not make this a primary focus in your daily living. Do you see, the more you force effort towards attaining stillness the easier it slips away. But yes, I see you have a good understanding and, have a new sense of the practice, yes. Is this helping? (Yes. Thank you.)

SIMON: Abraham, I am really excited about tonight's lesson; perhaps too excited about it. I really have a desire to do some kind of Urantia missionary work all the time. The Mormon Church seems to be a big deal to me because we are in Utah, and seeing their missionary work – could you give me some direction along those lines. I suppose you know what I would really like to be doing, I would love to see somebody read the Urantia Book out loud at the LDS Conference or something like that. What do you think the best way to begin? Could you give me some direction?

ABRAHAM: You are speaking of missionary work, yes? (Simon: Yes. Teaching Mission missionary work.) Abraham: Understood. You already do a great amount of missionary work in your daily dealings with people. It is understood in the religion you spoke of that missionaries are glorified and held up as heroes or the self-sacrificers that will bring God's message to the ignorant – we are so far from that! Missionary work for the Teaching Mission would entail first, to attend to one's own family – that is first and foremost in the mortal adventure, no doubt about it. Your children, spouses, parents, grandparents are your first duty in serving. Not to force spiritual light upon them, no, but to give to them as the Master gave to His family. Jesus was the beautiful example of someone who knows God. Our Beloved was an example of one who is giving love, acceptance, and a sharing of personal experience – not as one who speaks as though they have a connection to Father that others do not. Your friends and acquaintances always benefit by your sharing. And the way you take an interest in their lives is a ministry unto itself. Jesus ministered as He passed by; He gave so that He may glorify Father. He gave out of His love for His fellows; He did not serve only to return home as the daring hero, no. Simon, my son, you already serve in so many ways. You do know you are in training for a future assignment, and that should be quite enough for now. Yes, well done. Is this helping? (Simon: Yes. Thank you.)

SARAUNA: [Editor's note: Tape inaudible. A question about Kimberly (daughter) doing the right thing for the good of her family, and dealing with her husband's alcohol problem.]

ABRAHAM: Yes. I understand. It is so difficult to reason with those who alter the mind and body with chemicals, and she is correct that sometimes relationships must be completely torn down to be rebuilt. She does understand the concept of enabling, and sometimes to flee from alcoholism seems more painful than just enduring. The withdrawals can be such a source of fear because that brings with it, change. I understand this problem to have gone on for quite some time, yes. I would say to you, my daughter, you know well what is the right thing to do, and have known for quite some time, yes. I understand you are afraid, but know that Father has many times created opportunities for you to seek a better way. You are not the weak woman you perceive yourself to be. You are indeed with strength, and well you should be for enduring this disease. Have faith, my daughter, your courage in taking action will bring about healing. Remember, you cannot cure the alcoholic, but you can certainly bring healing to your family by daring to take action, yes. That is all. One more question?

DIANNA: Abraham, I have a question about the lesson this evening. My focus has been to work on myself and clear myself of those spirit poisons that block me from being of service. What I see in tonight's lesson is that if my focus is purely on Father and focused in service, that I stand beside myself wherein I don't need to be concerned with that healing, that the healing flows through that. I am wondering if I am on the right track with that thought. Can you provide me with some clarification?

ABRAHAM: You are saying – in self-forgetfulness and focusing on service, you receive personal healing. Is that correct?

DIANNA: I am trying to distinguish the difference in focus from where I have been doing my process in growth right now, which has been – if I open myself up to Father I can learn how to forget my issues, and 'stand beside myself' instead. But what I see from tonight's lesson is perhaps my focus needs to be not so much on what those spirit poisons are within me but, on service and the rest will take care of themselves.

ABRAHAM: Understood. Many go through life believing they are so wounded, so injured, that they have not the capabilities to move on towards self-forgetfulness and into service. In this, nobody really perceives themselves in a state of becoming. They long for a perfection in the self – which is not evident; and this disappointment is overwhelming to the point wherein they lose confidence. Yes, recognize those spirit poisons as a part of your total makeup, but do not become so discouraged as to think that is all you are, no. Understand that these spiritual poisons are natural and going to be with you and everyone for a long time to come. In knowing the spiritual poisons, you learn to recognize and appreciate the spiritual fruits. Life is a balance of both. Yes, a focus on helping others is helping yourself. You do gain valuable experience in being open to serve. Many times, you are not the one who serves but you are served. Feel not that mortal life has made you weak and without confidence to go forward to learn, grow, and serve. Know that your place in the kingdom is secured and, that our divine caretakers have the utmost faith in you. You are learning a new self-honesty, and this is wonderful, my daughter.

Each of you are on a path of discovering self-truth; I have full faith that you each have the courage to face it – and, become stronger and inspired to become more, yes. I am slipping. Know that with each week that passes I find myself more in love with you each. Until next week, shalom.

The Errors of Assuming. Take Time To Understand. It Is Not Our Role To Correct or Fix our Fellows

Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 08-06-2001

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I must commend you on your interaction this evening. You had the courage to move beyond your level of comfort to bring your differences out into the open. Yes, it did create discomfort, but also solutions in how to deal with difficulties concerning your fellows. Well done. This is spiritual reality. This is where God resides. This is where lifelong bonds are made. God is not really out in the churches of rampant emotionalism, no. He is in the details of living. He is the guide to all healing.

I have discussed this before, but I will touch upon it a bit anyway: One of the common difficulties in marriage is the exercise of assumption. Partners never really allow total communication and understanding because there is always assumption occurring. You may mistakenly assume your friend/partner is thinking much worse thoughts about you than is really true. Especially those with little or no self-esteem will assume everyone has the worst intentions for them as if they are not really worthy of love, respect, time, and kindness.

During the course of an individual's lifetime, events will happen that shape the personality and also the ego. Some build a tremendous ego to cover-over their insecurity, and some feel totally unworthy of any good thing – so when events are occurring in the present time, these past negative memories come into play. And most likely, individuals will try to defend themselves as if it will heal the past. Some will build walls of defense as if it will deter all pain, and their hearts become hard. With every individual you interact with, it is more likely than not they are also attempting to heal past pain.

So you see, difficulties become a part of something much bigger. Circumstances that you would not find particularly painful, may be very much so to others. And this is where you can be an understanding helpmate; you can calmly ask questions that may find the real reason for the problem to have been overblown. Remember the Master – in His patience and kindness to His troubled fellows He sought to be a teammate who brainstormed to help bring out issues and begin problem-solving. He did not seek a place above His troubled fellows as if He knew all, no. He sought to stand side-by-side as a loving brother who found it His utmost honor to assist His fellows.

Remember in your difficulties with your fellows that some circumstances are really much larger than they appear. Offer them your ear, your time, not your attitude to correct or fix. Father seeks to create healing, and situations may arise to create opportunity for healing, and this takes time and experience.

You are correct when you speak of commitment – staying together and working through your difficulties. I understand there will be hurt feelings and emotional distress. But if you can remain calm, and focus on uncovering the real heart of a problem, you can begin to work towards healing. Try not to assume that you know what is in anybody's heart and mind, for you do not! This is why communication is so important. Discussing and really listening (and not worrying about another's underlying agenda) will get to the heart of a matter. Do not be so self-protective that you not only close out the threat of rejection, but also the life-giving force of love.

The ego seeks to be seen, heard, and to be always right, yes; but the soul seeks acceptance in its uniqueness. You can communicate with others most effectively when you show kindness and respect for them as a person/child of God; yes, surely, you can want for no less for yourself. You will always view things differently – just make effort to expect that. Do not make your difficulties out to be matters of 'right' or 'wrong' but opportunities to bring issues into the light for healing.

Again, do not assume you know what others are thinking because that is how you think, no. Allow time for communication and real understanding. The ego seeks immediate gratification and atonement for any disloyal action. Therefore, be watchful that your ego does not interfere with your opportunity for real communication, real understanding beyond any emotionalism. The light of understanding is the feeling that Father does know me and is involved in my life – and is guiding me to a new and better way as He is likewise guiding my fellows.

This week, find that freedom from assuming others' thoughts and intentions. Look at this week as a week of discovery. Still practice 'going beyond your comfort level,' in efforts towards creating a healing situation. Do something that you would usually not dare to do; of course, that must be within reason, and legal. [laughter.]

No questions this evening, for I am due elsewhere. But know that I am at your side as your group partner, and I feel most grateful for all that you have taught me. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Let Not Others Pressure Us Into Someone We Are Not | And Put Not That Pressure Upon Others

Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 08-13-2001

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I am your friend/Teacher. Greetings. How wonderful it is to behold the beauty of your fellowship. There are many different individuals here this evening with varying backgrounds and belief/faith systems.

It is beautiful to see the acceptance of each soul as a loved child of God without the burden of trying to change one another's beliefs. You can only speak from what you know. There is liberty to accept or reject ideas, but how wonderful it is to see the fellowship and the joy that springs from gathering together, yes.

We all have differing personality makeup that makes us each unique, and oftentimes we find the differences to be too much. It would be ideal if we could all view one another as the Master does – but in your short years in the flesh, that seems to be an unreachable goal. The Master viewed individuals at their soul-level – at their 'child of God' status. He allowed others to show themselves 'just as they really were.' He bound them not with assumptions or labels.

Like the unfolding of a blossom, Jesus did not coax his fellows into becoming something other than what they truly were. He pressured them not into becoming the very best that they could be – but rather, in a gentle manner he showed them how they could, should they so choose.

The Master made not judgments against His fellows, for even He was unqualified to do so. There are so many factors that make up the personality that builds character, that adds soul growth. The Master desired to learn who each unique individual really was, without imposing judgments or assumptions.

By your own experience of meeting new people, you can find distinct personality types, yes; but really, all the factors that make up a person do not align for one to make solid judgments about who their fellows really are. Environment, culture, media, and current fads – these, unfortunately, do put pressure upon one to become what others believe is right and acceptable.

The youth of this generation suffer confusion and are forced to bloom when they are not ready – mentally or spiritually. The peer pressure is brutal in that you need to measure up to certain standards to be accepted. Every mortal, every living thing, desires to be loved and accepted 'as they are.' This world is quite bound – contorted in spirit and practically stunted in growth.

In a marriage, you find a great deal of criticism that binds you from acting as you normally would. A partner/friend/spouse may feel no liberty to take personal initiative for fear of criticism. One may feel as though they must be what the partner finds acceptable and right – or, risk to lose their love; a person begins to be lost and become untrue to themselves and, to Father.

You cannot force a flower to bloom or impose your own standards of beauty upon it, no. Most individuals want to grow and become better with time. When there is the imposition of all these standards, the concepts of growth are confused and there is not liberty to 'find the way.'

Many of the more mature adults will scoff at, or even refuse to acknowledge their own youthful experience – as if they were already born with all the experience that has brought them where they are today. They forget about the daily lessons, the pain, the confusion, the long road it took to gain their experience.

Look not to others as if you must force them to bloom with your own ideals of beauty. You can perhaps only offer some light, some encouraging drops of nutrients, some fresh air and room to grow, yes. The Master was intrigued with the varying human personalities, minds, egos; and each individual story that shaped them into who they were at the present time, yes.

Many times in a marriage, the soul feels buried and the ego seeks exaltation. One friend/partner/spouse will compete in fields of knowledge to gain their loved one's attention, respect, and love. This competition is unhealthy, and the loved one is made to feel inferior. In a healthy marriage, individuals want a partner, a teammate – not a parent, a judge nor a superior, no.

This week I ask you to contemplate allowing freedom for yourselves and, for others. Find time to journal how you feel pressured into being something you are not. Write down how you might be imposing this pressure on others. Ponder this freedom of growth, my friends.

We will have questions at our next meeting. Until then, know that my love grows for you each time we meet. Until next week, Shalom. [No Meeting on August 20th.]

Live Your Beliefs Rather Than Preaching Them | Be The Same Person Indoors As We Are Outdoors

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-27-2001

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am deeply touched by all your concerns for this Correcting Time Teaching Mission. As the Master said, "This Mission is a co-creation – our child."

As parents, it is instinct to protect the child from harm, and much of the time parents act from an emotional standpoint. It is especially difficult for parents to stand back and allow the child room to grow. A good parent relies a great deal upon the Parent of all parents; but even the most Spirit-led individuals find it difficult to watch the child experience life only to stumble and become injured.

This Mission will experience a certain amount of stumbling but it is all for the greater purpose. With your years in this Mission-project, you will find there is a strong foundation which supports the essential truths of the Urantia Book by the Teaching Staff – but there is stumbling, yes. A child who stumbles and experiences pain learns to become more graceful in their walk, more cautious of their path.

We have discussed allowing growth within this marriage of ours. We have learned that every individual has varying degrees of abilities to learn. Some have more work than others. Some attain advanced levels only to fall to the ego. Father knows this. Life on an evolutionary world must learn to attain self-mastery, but you cannot achieve these goals without the value of experience. Father is the good Parent and He allows natural evolution to occur.

We find that in this mortal life, so many fail to really live what they truly believe. Individuals study books and pray and give their time to serve others, but they themselves do not live up to what they find to be true. Many know the damage that gossip can cause, for instance, but that does not deter them from doing it. Some believe they can trade a negative energy for repentance and prayer, later – as if to atone for their weakness in the moment.

Many parents have treated their neighbors better than their own children; and yet, they can be found at church service every Sabbath. The experiences you have are challenges to encourage you to live what you really believe. Your beliefs have no power when your actions are supporting something else. In this marriage of ours, we allow one another to learn and grow as we will. We also have the freedom to stumble and fall knowing that there are those who will lift us up, not hold us down or back with criticisms and superior attitudes, no.

Yes, to live what you truly believe means that you are the same person outdoors as you are behind doors. It means you do not go about preaching goodness, but you actually do it. To live what you truly believe is a glorification to Father – you worry not about what men might see; you need not others' approval for being who you are.

The Master truly lived what He believed and He did it in honor of the Father. He was indebted to no man. He worried not about impressing others so they would follow Him. In His self-forgetfulness, He lived a liberated mortal life. He grew for the most part without man's boundaries.

The Master was conscious of the laws of men and was respectful in that way; but yet, He knew when to speak up and declare His understanding. Mistake not my words, the Master loved people with a deep and abiding affection, but He would not sell out His ideals of truth to gain affection in return, no.

This week, attempt to put into practice living your spiritual ideals. Honor your child-of-God status by living to glorify our Father – and behold the natural positive energy that follows. Journal what it means to be true to yourself, and Father. That is all. A few questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, a known acquaintance you know about, who asks to remain anonymous for her own purposes, asks about Paul Kemp and Rob Crickett's ministries and, their injections into the Teaching Mission. Would you care to comment on her individual questions? or let the lesson itself address that. I can read the questions if you want. [Editor's note: These two (Paul Kemp from Canada, and Rob Crickett from Australia) were somewhat newcomers in the Teaching Mission, and were recent attendees at the Mission Conferences. Both had independent ministry movements that had infiltrated many individuals and groups in the Teaching Mission community. Their exuberance, to many, seemed to be hastily taking the reins of the Teaching Mission to steer the Mission in their own agendas' directions – starting a church, organizing disciples, conducting baptisms, etc.]

ABRAHAM: I have answered her in the lesson. (Calvin: That's what I thought.)
Abraham: My daughter, this is a challenge for you on when and where to become involved. You are like a guard in the watchtower. You have a great many perspectives – make those known. Your logical outlook will bring other supporters to the surface. Your intention is to bring about good for the whole. Do not be afraid to be yourself. Let your concerns be known. In my position, I must use caution with my personal opinion. I do believe that while impatience appears to be winning among many who have been approached – I fully trust you, and those who feel as you do, to tip the scales. Do as the Master did – settle not for niceties while the truth is hidden and others may be in spiritual danger. Use caution with your words. Appeal to others' minds with logic and brotherly love, yes. My daughter, you were meant to be heard. Another question?

DAVE P.: Abraham, I would appreciate it if you would comment – because this is something that has been on my mind – could you please comment on my interpersonal relationships with others in this group? I would appreciate it.

ABRAHAM: My son, I perceive you to do well for the most part. Your zealousness is a bit intimidating to some. While your effort to be open is commendable, your attempts to find ‘the man behind the curtain’ does cause some to be defensive. Have not worry though. As you dare to share yourself with others, a new understanding is born; and where there is understanding, there is love. Overall, I believe you to be sincere in your search. Another question?

CALVIN: I don't know if we have welcomed Bill Terry formally. I think we have introduced you, Dave Purdy. Is there anyone else? (Abraham: Greetings. Feel free to ask questions.)

BILL TERRY: Do you have anything for me?

ABRAHAM: My son, I find your countenance to be a light to those you know. Your attitude of sincere-seeking has brought you quite close to Father. You may feel though that you give more than you receive from time to time. But have not worry, for Father gives you lessons according to those tasks you are being trained for. Overall, you do well. I am available for more personal questions at another time should you desire. That is all. Another question?

HARRISON: Abraham, even though I am not available to be here every week, I've always felt like I've received the lessons even when I'm traveling – I am very grateful for that and I say, thank you. I feel like I just need a little encouragement, a little help on some personal matters. I'm not sure where to go? Perhaps you would have some words that would help me?

ABRAHAM: Can you be more specific, Harrison? There are many things I can say. What is really in your heart?

HARRISON: I seem to have a laundry list. My finances is one area; some of my personal behavior at times; my communication with my daughter out in North Carolina. If there is any one thing that I can work on, Abraham, I will take it and run with it.

ABRAHAM: Certainly, my son. You are a man quite driven by love and a sense of ‘doing right.’ You most of the time feel a need to be doing, taking action – and some of that is wasted energy, spinning your wheels, so-to-speak. I cannot give you specific financial guidelines, but perhaps I can say that some positions of employment come not with prestige or power from this world, no, but most definitely some positions come with spiritual purpose. Management is another thing I would have you focus on. Your behavior is in a state of becoming. You will experience a great deal of emotional upheaval because your daughter's rejection of your spiritual beliefs feels more like personal rejection as her father. She also loves you and fears for your salvation. She sincerely believes you to be following a dangerous path, while you see her path as narrow and binding. Allow her to be with her spiritual beliefs. Only add small morsels of spiritual food to her plate. Do not stray too far from her path when you are dispersing those insights from your spiritual account. Do not be offended by her rejection of your good words. Know that she also wants to protect you. Harrison, I do believe you do carry some past guilt 'as a Father' towards these girls. I ask that you contemplate on this and eventually forgive yourself. Have not worry my son, for in the end - all that matters is the love you share, yes. One more question?

SIMON: Yes, Abraham. This week, along with several other people, I've been sort of ill. I wonder if you can comment on how best to deal with that? I know there are times when it would just be best to spiritually go within, which does help us to personally slow down. What good is sickness anyway? [group laughter.]

ABRAHAM: My son, Simon, I am loath to say this: In your enthusiasm to understand your mission assignment you have drawn this sickness to you. Concerning the others, I cannot say, but your attachment to see results is causing you to receive the opposite. You cannot test God. You will not attain power that is not your own. You can only be a nameless conduit. Have not worry nor fear, the illness will subside. Learn to detach, my son. What Father has planned for you will exceed your own expectations. Remember the Master when he said: "Your faith has made you whole." That is all. (Simon: Thank you.)

My friends, what a joy it is for me to be with you each week. I am very much entwined in your lives and I find it my honor to be your friend and Teacher. Until next week, shalom.

Humility | Not Self-Loathing But To Remain Teachable And To Serve All, Equally
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-03-2001
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I find there is such a welcoming energy here this evening. I look forward to spending time with you in this co-creation of ours, yes. I am filled with gratitude this evening because of being able to view Father's works firsthand. He makes the impossible, possible. Even on my level you can feel sometimes overwhelmed and a bit spiritually lonely - in these times I am all the more grateful to see the Father's awesome works.

We are in the beginning stages of our spiritual union; and with that, we are learning what one another is like. I have seen marriages though, that have lasted a lifetime, and usually these couples have become as one.

Spending a lifetime together in devotion to one another and the family brings every lesson you can possibly imagine. The enduring marriage learns how to respect individuality coupled with teamwork. I dearly love to view these long-time united couples who have borne one another's burden and have shared every aspect of the mortal life. In this brotherhood/family of God (the spiritual kingdom), our greatest lesson would have to be humility.

Humility is the stripping-down of the ego to the bare-learning status. In humility, we find we are not God, but ever striving to be like Him. We are 'listening' in humility, instead of preaching what we believe to be true. In humility, we stand equal, side-by-side, with our fellows. We are not followers or leaders, no! just brothers and sisters – children of the Most High. I learned humility the hard way and still, I could not grasp the full meaning until after this mortal life.

Humility within a marriage says that no one has a higher seat than the other. Respect, love, and kindness – these go for each member of the family. A good father consults the family on family issues; he does not mandate nor threaten to bring about his will, no! but he listens to all sides and attempts to view issues with spiritual eyes.

The good father can admit when he is wrong or has made a mistake; to be seen as fallible is of no concern to him – this teaches his children that they have a voice; and, that they matter – individually, as well as knowing they are part of the family unit.

A good mother shows her family that they have choices, for they are not being ordered to 'do this' or 'that,' but they have a right to speak their thoughts. The good mother seeks to guide, not control. When everyone in the family is respected and well heard there is no need to create distractions that gets them attention, no, for each one respects the other; each one is heard – not always agreed with, but heard. This creates family trust. Each member knows that no member of the family strives for individual self-glory, but strives for the balance of the family as a whole.

Times are so much changed from my day in the flesh. For instance, women and children can speak without fear, most of the time. You can see how the hardships of women and children have brought about change – a good change; a progressive change. Also, we see the plight of many races has naturally evolved into progressive change. The difficulties the races have suffered has given them a voice and a right to a place at the table.

These things that occur within this Correcting Time are quite natural and to be expected. Do not try to control the momentum of growth, but be as the good mother – allow all a voice, and show the various choices. Be like the good father that seeks not a higher seat in the family as an authoritarian, but hears each member and give due respect without worry of anything being taken away or lost.

Most of the time the only way things can improve is to allow the natural outworking of time. Our Father does not sit on a throne and do nothing. He does not make it the assignment of one individual to lead all the others, no! He is a God of action. This particular time in the universe history is especially important to the growth of the Supreme Being. This is new experience to be attained by the Supreme Being; and yes, it is quite valuable.

I would like to offer personal meetings to each one of you. I find it would be a great honor to me to relate with you on a one-on-one basis. Please, at your convenience, set an appointment. We will begin moving from these lessons about the 'spiritual marriage' into lessons about 'personal ministry.' There will be no effective personal ministry without the understanding of 'humility.'

The Master lived a perfected life of humility. He needed not attention for His good works, no, for His reward was found in a close personal relationship with Father. His humble life attracted His fellows, and His words of logic led them to a new and better way. Of course this did not deter His fellows from miracle-seeking, but spiritual seeds were planted – and that is what made history.

This week, journal on the definition of humility and being humble: Is it to hide your light under a bushel to the point of self-loathing? Is it to be focused and aware in the moment on remaining teachable and being spirit led? Is it your duty to humble your brothers and sisters? or is it Father's! Remember, God is a God of action – have peace with that. Have patience. Know that He is fully aware of all there is.

"He that exalts himself shall be humbled." Journal your thoughts on that statement. Know that my ever-increasing love for you goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Balanced Humility | The Man Who Humbles Himself Shall Be Exalted
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-10-2001

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am happy to see so many new faces, as well as familiar ones, this evening. I am filled with such gratitude to Father for He makes every true thing real. Blessed are those who cannot only endure life's trials but who see Father actually working in them.

Last week we discussed humility and how the humble person is a candidate for personally ministering to their fellows. "The man who exalts himself shall be humbled." Why? Because this kingdom of God is a place of order!

Experience seems to bring chaos, but the kingdom of our Father is with organization where there are universal laws to uphold. Universal laws are natural outworking of experience. For a self-exalted one to be humbled is not the works of an angry Father who seeks to tame His children's egos, no! Experiencing humility is a universal law, and needed to create order and keep peace within the universe.

The man who exalts himself truly feels inferior and never finds that soul-satisfaction that you come to know as you build your relationship with Father. The man who exalts himself is truly focused on spending his energy on attaining that satisfaction from feeling accepted, respected, and at home in the world. The focus is kept on the pursuit of that feeling of exaltation – which never really comes; so naturally, does he find himself humbled time and time again.

Said Jesus: "The man who humbles himself shall be exalted." Is this the reward from Father to His listening children? No! A humbled man is exalted because of that soul-fulfillment he receives from having a close personal relationship with Father. What could be more exalting than that? That closeness with Father says: You feel at home in the world, no matter where you go. You feel equal with all people, not inferior. You are not in self-loathing but feel you are side by side with your brothers and sisters.

The man focused on being humble is a man who is listening and receiving guidance. He feels confidence to move about in the world. He is not held back by opinions, social mores, or current fads. The humble man is truly free. A wise person would do well to take their lessons on humility as guideposts to a more enlightened path.

One who exalts himself seeks to serve his fellows in a selfish way, a way that makes people look up to him. The self-exalted person cannot really minister to his fellows for he has not their best interests at heart, nor does he have Father in the forefront of his mind; his duties are self-serving and possibly damaging to a few trusting souls.

The humble person, first and foremost, seeks to serve and minister because he loves God. Love is the desire to do good to others. The humble person desires to serve God by serving God's children. Secondly, the humble person has an overwhelming need to serve out of love for his fellows. With balanced humility, you see the world as your home and you crave to do your part as a member of the family. You seek not to be put above your fellows as if you have something they do not, no. You seek not to be set apart as 'special' or as 'chosen by God' – rather, you will minister, and be ministered to.

The 'imbalanced' person receives not service from his fellows, for after all with 'his' wisdom, why would he need it? I understand those who feel undeserving might reject personal ministry, but that is a subject for another time. The Master went about doing good 'as he passed by.' He did not build a great temple to call all those who were in need, no. He did not disrespect his fellows by treating them as if they were beneath Him. He engaged them to participate in their own well-being, their own ministry. He also asked them for help when He needed it.

This week, I ask you to journal on this statement: "He who would be greatest in the kingdom must become server of all." Is that even possible in this mortal life? Think about when you do serve your fellows – what is the reason you do it? What do you receive from serving? What do you receive from maintaining balanced humility? Do you allow yourself to be ministered to – not only by your fellows, but your Father? Does pride or 'fear of looking weak' keep you from receiving help? How does allowing your fellows to help you – help them? A few questions?

CALVIN: I would like to welcome some people here for the record: Todd is back with us (John's brother from Atlanta), and Vivian – a friend of Ellen W.; Wendy, a friend of Tectra; and again, Heidi, Sarauna's daughter. I think that is all.

ABRAHAM: Greetings. Feel free to ask questions.

SIMON: Abraham, in 'serving for the right reasons' – I wonder if you would go a little more into that aspect?

ABRAHAM: Much of the time Jesus served out of His compassion for people, His love for them, yes. He could easily put Himself in their shoes, in their position, and truly feel what they felt. His love for them drove Him to bring them relief. He also wanted to teach by example – to do good to someone, and then for that someone to pass it on. He created a forward momentum of positive energy to those who would have it. He was also on a mission, or quest, to reveal the Father to men and women; to expose His lighthearted countenance and willingness to do good. He made people wonder what was the source within Him that so inspired Him. Is this answering? (Simon: Yes. It is a very beautiful expansion. Thank you.)

CALVIN: Abraham, there is much-heated discussion ongoing in the Urantia Book family these days toward this Teaching Mission, and much hypertension with many Mission participants with each other. How would you advise the Mission right now in our second phase of stepping out in our Mission callings – perhaps more acting out? Or perhaps another viewpoint being discussed is our remaining cautious and listening to these daily living lessons and applying them as we pass by? I think you know the impact of my question.

ABRAHAM: Are you speaking about when or if to take action concerning the Mission? (Calvin: In part, yes.)

DIANNA: Can I expand on that? What's the difference between being open and being teachable in reflecting Father? For as you were saying, Jesus served as He passed by – and being a living example of Father's truth, versus reaching out in feeling the need to correct another, or the world, based on those truths. I think this is what Calvin is asking – what is the best way to respond? Do we just live it as an example and just keep quiet? Do we read between the lines and then act to help? or just allow others to have their own experience and not interfere. How far do we counsel our brothers and sisters? What is your take on this, if at all?

ABRAHAM: Understood. I guess the first questions I would ask myself if I were to spot an injustice or situation that seemed to need attention is: "What are my motives for needing to react?" "Am I trying to assist? or control." "Am I serving from a fearful standpoint? or am I feeling spirit-led to speak up?" I do see some of these Mission situations to be taking too much energy and attention: "Will I speak up to aid my fellows in 'how I see' for it is what is fit and proper? or can I be patient in allowing spirit guidance." You must look at the possible outcome of your actions – do you foresee spiritual fruits? or further aggravation. Remember, you cannot really save or enlighten anybody – you can only express your own understanding. You cannot 'sway the masses.' You cannot 'bring people to their senses.' I cannot say when or even if you should take action in these situations, but if you truly believe you are helping the whole, then by all means participate. If you are acting out of a competitive nature, then allow time to purify your thoughts and motives. Am I answering the three of you?

CALVIN: I think you've answered perfectly, and I'm sure that so many others reading your answer can also receive great help. That is beautiful. Yes. Thank you. [All agree.]

ABRAHAM: Well done, for everyone's participation. I understand your deep and abiding love for Michael and His cause. I know you only want what is right and true. Understood. Yes. One more question?

BILL: How do you balance our God-given talents and expressing them completely, regardless of how others appreciate it or that they think you are possibly acting out of pride – or expressing our talents completely without stepping into becoming prideful?

ABRAHAM: I think I understand. How do you continue to express your talents without being held back by others' opinions? And how do you not cross the line of pride and ego by taking credit for your God-given talent? Yes? (Bill: Yes.) Abraham: Good question. It is difficult to not cross that line without understanding the actual talent and its God-given source. But yes, there have been many artists who were ridiculed and thought insane. Creative outlet is a spiritual expression; and if one is devoted to God, he creates for God. It matters not what his fellows say because his creation is for God. To take credit though for your spiritual inspirations is a good way to lose spiritual inspiration. When one verges into the ego it 'closes off' that creative circuit, and one becomes blocked and out of ideas. If one creates to bring joy and glory to God, he almost despises any praise from his fellows. That is a person with balanced humility – the antidote to pride and ego. Is this helping? (Bill: Yes.)

I will take my leave. I would express to you my unending love and affection for you each. I feel so blessed to be your friend and Teacher. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

9-11 Tragedy | Your Hour Has Come | Teach Others By a Calm Example and Faith In Our Divine

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-17-2001

Back

[Editor's note: This was our first lesson following the 9/11 tragic US event where terrorists used hi-jacked jet planes to crash into the Twin Towers of New York City, and the Pentagon.] I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How am I to teach with such wisdom in the room. Your shared feelings and comments are creating healing. I know this week's tragedies welled up within us each a great many thoughts and feelings. Are we all realizing the gratitude we should have for the simple understandings we have learned?

Many in the world are under such misconception about our divine caretakers. Many believe God is wrathful and angry, and that He does punish His erring children swiftly and severely. I am with the highest gratitude to be among you who know that concept is so wrong. You know that Father is a true Parent, one with supreme love and wisdom. In all His ways He is guiding us towards Him, not pushing us away when we are erring.

We are in overwhelming gratitude to be aware of the Correcting Time and to know that 'come what may,' the value will overshadow the negative. We are with hope and trust. We are with faith and tolerance. We are with growing understanding instead of stagnating traditional beliefs.

This past week's tragic events show the power of the animal self, the evil that resides in ego. I have said so many times, 'Your joy is my joy, your sorrow is my sorrow.' This planet will soon discover how true that really is, and how we are, really, one. I have known hatred; I have practiced it; I have been dominated by it. I have lived in my life from a place of hate. I cannot express the difference that I experienced when I began to know the living God – not the God of my ancestors, but the God within – as taught me by Machiventa.

I do understand, unfortunately, these terrorist's position, and for that I am regretful. I do understand how power and wealth can drive a person to smother other people so that they can rise above them.

Power was most sought-after by the sons of self-love. To belittle others to make themselves more was their scheme to attaining their hearts' desire. People's joy was not their joy. In fact, it was a threat to them; they could not share in the oneness. Your sorrow was their joy because that made you weak, and they gained power from that.

This is also true for those terrorists who seek to build self with the pain of others. They are truly misguided. There is no unity for them. There is no gratitude of real spiritual joy. They believe they are serving a spiritual cause, but really deep down they know very well they are an empty shell.

This tragedy is perhaps likened to those apostles who sought those higher seats at the table with the Master at the 'last supper.' This was not unity; this was self-serving. This was not humility; this was self-exaltation. Who was the one who knelt on the ground to wash His brethren's feet? Who was the server of all? Who in this world would run to attain the highest seat and, who would be first to volunteer to wash his fellow's feet?

This tragedy is really a small event in your history, unfortunately. This is why we have entered into this Correcting Time. This is why we have been here week after week, year after year. Your hour has come. This is where you will put into action all that you have learned, and you will do it because you love God; you love your brothers and sisters; you count yourself as part of the whole – not higher or lower than anyone else, but side-by-side in unity, in oneness. Grieve now, my friends. Be angry if needed. Share your thoughts and feelings. But I say, go toward healing, not towards hate.

Remember all are called but few will answer. The world's people will need a spiritually-sound practical voice in the chaos of beliefs having to do with the 'end of the world;' the 'second coming,' or 'rapture.' Be open to being spirit led. You must know by now Father will be there with those words you need to impart to your fellows to sustain them in the days ahead. Forget not to take time every day to be with Father to regenerate energy, faith, and strength. Forget not to allow Father to tend to you.

My friends, this is the realness. This is what we have been working toward. Mystical-thinking cannot save us now. Your sensible, spiritually-guided voice will be a light in the darkness. I thank you each for this unity, this brotherhood, this kingdom Family. Go in love and confidence that our Mission moves forward. Until next time, shalom.

Personal Ministry ~ Not For Self But For The Good Of The Whole
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-24-2001

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a wonderfully healing atmosphere we have here this evening. Every day I am amazed at the healing power of our Father. Even in our darkest hours we are made to see those rays of hope; we are made to feel that tender ministry that only Father can provide. Even when we appear to have stumbled, we see Father's hand reaching for us – beckoning to us to keep moving. This hope and strength in the mortal life is only attained through experience.

Even though savage events may befall us we are driven to find the meanings and values to become a better universe citizen. There is no greater love to behold than that of a man who would lay down his life for another. We are witness that when the small minority partakes in acts of evil, this brings out the very best in the majority – yes, we are witnessing each other just as the Father sees us. The pure compassion of Father's little children is truly beautiful and awe-inspiring.

Does a man need to lay down his life to exhibit that compassion, that brotherly love? Does it take a major catastrophe to bring the world's people together? No. This small planet is well within the fold of Nebadon, and for the most part does benefit from the universe ministry – meaning the re-encircuitment, the available Teaching Staff, the power of the Spirit of Truth, and the Correcting Time. Yes, you are no longer isolated as a weak planet, but enabled with spiritual power from on high.

"He who would be greatest in the kingdom, let him be the server of all." Does one who is server of all need such recognition? A server of all reaps great joy from viewing Father's works firsthand as he serves. There is no greater joy than to be with knowingness – not faith or belief, but with a knowledge of certainty that God exists, that "God is real and working right before my eyes. Yes, anything can befall me and I know without a shadow of a doubt that Father will help me to rise above; to become more than I am; to maintain my closeness with Him; to walk with confidence in a world of uncertainty."

Such a person who is devoted to becoming server of all is not, by any means, freed from life's harsh circumstances – but most definitely is he free from the mental burden of losing hope; of being in the unknowingness of fear. You have all around you excellent examples of selfless ministry – examples of those who can be so overcome with compassion that they lose themselves; they are beside themselves.

Personal ministry is not to gain respect from others nor for credit in heaven – it is about serving to make the whole, better; it is about being unified with your fellows – and, feeling that loneliness is by your choice and not because it is thrust upon you.

This week, I would recommend that you find rest and reversion for your minds. Partake of the spiritual feast that is going on at this very moment. Re-fuel, re-energize, for in your personal ministry there is a great amount of work to be done. Forget not to allow yourselves to be ministered to. Are there questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, I'd like to introduce a visitor, Scott C. (Abraham: Greetings. Feel free to ask questions.) Calvin: I have a question regarding your lesson last week about 'Your hour has come.' I've wondered all week what that really means. Does this mean 'be prepared to share what we understand and live the way we have been taught to those around us?' It's almost like there is nothing else I can do but to go to work and keep digging, and do the best I can. Or, are you talking about other than our daily routine, to prepare for our hour to come - meaning ...?

ABRAHAM: I suppose I am really saying that no longer can Mission participants bypass any opportunities to assist their fellows when they have been fully trained for these many years. When I say: 'Your hour has come,' I am meaning that you must live what you believe - not engage in unspiritual practices; because with your every action you are setting examples, setting a tone so to speak, on how certain circumstances will play out. This is a crucial time in the world's history where there could be many more divisions - or, more spiritual unification. To live your life on the fence of spiritual uncertainty is not adding to the forward momentum, no, but is showing your fellows your mistrust of God. Either you are devoted to Father - or you are not. You will make mistakes, no doubt, and this is natural - but to knowingly and purposefully fall on the side of spiritual ill health is truly steps in regression, not only for you, but for those who know you, especially your children. 'Your hour has come' is a statement which asks you to choose - are you just a follower of spiritual intentions? or are you a doer of the will of God and His good works. Are you living what you believe? Does this answer? (Calvin: It answers very well and I thank you.)

WILLEENA: Abraham, given the worldwide implications of this situation (recent terrorism to New York City and the Pentagon attacks) and how much I sense people praying for the circumstance to go well, can you address how the power of prayer can affect these terrorist's hearts. It sounds like there are thousands of these people that are believing that if they stamp out this evil that they consider us to be, that they will go to heaven. So my question is: As we the people of this world pray for them - to heal a little bit of their heart, to open a little bit - is there a possibility of our prayers having a positive affect? or are they just lost souls?

ABRAHAM: The terrorists believe they are fighting a good fight and that 'the rest of the world is lost.' They know for certain they are outnumbered and they truly hold little value for their own lives, let alone the lives of others. They have no real spiritual connection - no real faith - so they see not the value in living an honorable life. They see only that their value, or legacy if you will, comes from leaving their mark upon the world. The prayers heard have literally lit the universe with a new energy and spiritual power, yes. The benefits of those prayers are usually going to those who have prayed them. Those with closed hearts and minds rarely receive any value therefrom. Continue praying, by all means, because this is the forward momentum of good sweeping the land. And as we have been shown time and time again, good always prevails over evil. Is this answering? (Willeena: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. One more question

MIRIAM: Abraham, could you give us some advice on how to 'receive' from others?

ABRAHAM: Yes, certainly, Miriam. There are many individuals who feel that imposing upon others is not ministry in any way. To receive help from others (they feel) is a burden. However, I say - to receive some form of ministry from others does give them the experience they need to advance in spiritual levels, and also a closeness with Father that you can only find in selflessness. Some who accept ministry from others feel that they may be perceived as weak or needy, and will choose to bear their burdens alone. How much more bearable is this life when you have a friend close by! You each receive strength from one another to not only endure the mortal life, but to be so inspired as to treat each day as a new challenge. Also, we must remember to take a few moments every day to allow our Father to minister to us – to impart to us those words of wisdom; to bestow upon us that unconditional love we can only receive from Him. You can only spend so much of yourself before you become empty – and that is a dangerous place to be for mortals. Emptiness will drive people to find fulfillment in other, perhaps unhealthy, ways. Is this helping?

MIRIAM: Oh yes, and thank you. I thought I was going to have a rough week until I received a welcome visit this morning. I had gone to work thinking my day was going to be about myself being of service to others – and here comes a lady out of the blue and ministered to me so beautifully. She was so awesome. She picked up that I had a good week and she just shared from her heart, and it just meant the world to me even though I was in a good place. It was just wonderful. Thank you for the advice.

Abraham: Understood, and a wonderful example on how ministry serves two ways – to the giver and to the receiver. Thank you for sharing.

With that, I will take my leave. But first I would express to you each my deepest love and gratitude for all of you. You mean more to me than you know. Go in peace. Until next week, shalom.

We Serve Even When It Is Inconvenient | Never Force Service Upon Another | Yrma the Muslim Woman

Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 10-01-2001

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you. The understanding we have received here this evening brings us such peace. In this peace we can re-center our soul-selves to prepare for another week ahead. You each add so much to my understanding and keep me ever striving to give back to you. I am filled with hope and renewed in patience that this brotherhood is coming about.

Knowing that you love me as your friend and teacher makes me feel a connection – a responsibility to you. I feel with great purpose when I am allowed to minister to you. Knowing that you judge me not and accept me as I am, strengthens me to do more. You give me faith and confidence in my abilities by showing your unconditional acceptance of me. I thank you.

To keep to oneself, perhaps in isolation or fear, is such a sorrowful experience on the mortal path – you give not; therefore, you receive not. To believe you need to only care for yourself is spiritually stifling and lonely. To feel a responsibility to your fellows' well-being, gives one great purpose and the required spiritual experience.

The youth look at life with carefree eyes; they worry not about raising a family, paying bills, or even where their future may be headed; they truly are indebted to no one but are solely focused on themselves; not all youth, mind you, but some; and even in this experience, there is value. There are many thoughtful young people who tend to ill parents or younger siblings. But many of the youth have not thought for those around them – this is natural. The story changes however when they become parents. They are more likely to take care of themselves so they can give to their children. They live not the risky life they had before.

Do you see, my friends, how personally ministering to others brings fruit to your own lives? To feel responsible for the well-being of the whole is being a servant of God. If you are responsible for more than just yourselves – such as your children, spouse, and relatives – are you not more likely to make decisions that benefit the whole? Your fellow citizens are also your extended family.

Many fear personal ministry because they believe such task is too great for them – too much of a burden perhaps. If you ponder the life of the Master, you see that there was no burden too great for Him to bear. His love for His fellows made it an honor to minister, it was not an imposition.

Jesus lived the perfected mortal life, yes. He was with excellent balance – mentally, physically, and spiritually. He mastered self-forgetfulness but was tended to in every way. He looked at every man as His brother and every woman as His sister. He made time for everyone. The material things of life were secondary to Him, but even in this, Father saw to His material well-being. He felt a duty to uphold His fellows; and in this, He was in the midst of Father Himself.

Every mortal has particular gifts – whether it is the gift of compassionate speech, healing, or by other means, every mortal has gifts. They may not be recognized, but most definitely is every one person good at something concerning giving to the whole – personally ministering, yes. Each one of you varies in these gifts, and your added or combined assistance brings balance; it brings healing. Maybe you are gifted at helping to promote faith, or perhaps you are good at being encouraging to others.

All of us add to the well of spiritual goodness that serves the whole and quenches the thirst with the living waters. To force your gifts on others in personal ministry is not what I am speaking of, no. But to be there for others even when it is inconvenient for you – this is what we are speaking of when we discuss personal ministry. God gave you one another. When taking responsibility for one another's well-being, you have God; you bring out the best in one another if you so choose.

Mortals were not meant to be alone. Your experience together is required to advance spiritual levels. How awesome is our Father, that even with these recent events, [the September 11th terrorist attacks on the United States.] He helps us to transcend our points of separation, race, gender, social status, and religion, yes.

On worlds settled in Light and Life – for a mother to look upon a playground full of children, she feels equal amounts of love for each child. A community who witnesses a family tragedy feels it is their own tragedy, and steps in immediately to assist with an attitude of 'your sorrow is my sorrow and your joy is my joy.'

This week, think about your responsibility to your fellows. Journal how ministering to them brings you spiritual fruits or advancement. How does ministering to the whole, minister to you? In long periods of isolation, who is it you are solely focused on? Out amongst your fellows, is there self-forgetfulness? A few questions?

SIMON: Yes, Abraham. I appreciate your lesson. I have been thinking about the difference between 'procrastination' and 'putting faith into action.' I think you know what I am talking about.

ABRAHAM: Procrastination could mean many things in service.

SIMON: Perhaps I mean 'holding back,' allowing Father to do His will through others – or through waiting for the 'time to be right.' Sometimes I see that as procrastination in my lack of action to do something.

ABRAHAM: Understood. There is procrastination and there is patience. You know 'within' the feelings of 'you should do something,' but perhaps have fear or are apprehensive – versus these feelings of 'I will do something because it serves.' I have no doubt that you can examine your mind to find the real intention. Many times must you just step out in faith, without thought, and do what you are most believing in to be right and good. Sometimes actions are taken from an 'animal-instinct' side, yes. I would suggest that you see where your inner feelings are leading you, and if these feelings persist, then I would say that it is time to take action. If you feel driven toward something – allow time, journaling, and stillness to find the origin of this driving force. Is it pure? Is it serving the whole? Is it for self gain? Or, a form or ease-seeking? Yes. Does this help? (Simon: Yes. Thank you.)

CALVIN: Abraham, we welcome Yrma visiting for the first time. She has shared with us a bit about her Muslim religion.

ABRAHAM: Greetings, my daughter, feel free to ask any questions.

YRMA: I have a lot of questions listening to you. Why are you here, especially this night with these people, and not with others who are trying now to get together with you?

ABRAHAM: I have several groups and individuals that I am involved with. I am assigned to assist in this Correcting Time of Urantia. I am training individuals to go out amongst the people to help this world go towards Light and Life. I am not the only Teacher for there are many. And I can assure you that everyone who would have spiritual help will most definitely receive it. I do have great love for my students – they are of many faiths, many nations. No one is forgotten. In order to serve the masses, I am to teach a few. Is this helping?

YRMA: Yes. Can I ask another question? (Abraham: Certainly.) Yrma: Are you the Abraham that everyone claims as Father Abraham?

ABRAHAM: I am, yes.

YRMA: As a Muslim person, you know how we have followed your teachings through all this time. What is the relationship between Mohammed and you? You must have been pretty close because you were the person that gave instruction to him. How was your time when you were teaching him? What was your feelings? I think you know what I am trying to say.

ABRAHAM: Yes. I still have great love for Mohammed. Those teachings that I gave him were from my mentor and friend, MachiventaMelchizedek. Mohammed was very bright and open to receive new things, and I do believe he carried out instructions to the best of his ability. However, down through the ages some concepts were distorted, as was also in the Bible. I was a man of stern tradition. I was inflexible in my thinking until my own teaching began with Machiventa. We must each remember that along with Machiventa's instruction were commingled my own traditional beliefs, and for that I am regretful; but yet I understand now that it is all part of evolution. Mohammed continues to teach to this day, not only to Muslims but many of the world's religions. He is also with new and growing understanding, just as I am. He is also saddened by negative events in the world. He aids, as I do, in the overall correction and rejuvenation of the planet. Is this answering? (Yrma: Yes.) Abraham: One more question?

MIRIAM: Question from Willie in Columbus, Ohio: Please ask Abraham what it is that I can do actively to bring about understanding and acceptance amongst the three factions for which he is father of. I feel a ministry-pull to try to bring about a greater understanding among the Muslim, Jewish, and Christian faiths. What I have in mind is something like the Urmia School that Jesus attended where Cymboyton was a teacher. Do you remember that from the Jesus Papers of the Urantia Book? This is a tall order. I am mainly looking for something to begin work on. If it is simply just to pray - I can do that, and I will accept that as my special urge. If it is more, I would appreciate some reinforcement of that. This is why I would like to ask the question of Abraham because he is the obvious connection.

ABRAHAM: My son, right now when emotions are high and feelings are so sensitive, is a time when many wish to help and bring about healing. If you are to do anything, such as create a school, then I would wait for at least a year. New ideas or religions should not be built out of emotional response. You are quite dedicated to this Teaching Mission, yes, and the sharing of your experience with others is quite a ministry in itself. Your attention to your family, neighbors, community, is quite a large job in itself. My son, most people want what you want - and given time we will see it come to fruition. Be patient. Live your life as an example to others that God is real, He is working. You are gifted in promoting faith, and that is quite a lot. Set your sights on practical spirituality. You can make a huge difference - one person at a time. Allow Father to show you the grand design, and work therefrom. Is that all, Miriam? (Miriam: It is. I thank you and I love you.)

ABRAHAM: And I love you - all of you, and I thank you for your support and faith. I hold each one of you dear. Carry on. Until next week, shalom.

Celebration In Nebadon | Where Will Father Have Me Go Today
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-08-2001
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always uplifted each week to return to this branch of my family tree. I feel particularly energized this evening by all the current happenings in our universe. As this small planet makes changes, the universe has its own changes – of course on a much larger scale. Urantia has played quite a role in these universe changes and has added to the growth of the Supreme Being. As the Supreme Being takes in this universal experience, we see the benefits therefrom and it is quite a cause to rejoice.

We find that with the Supreme's growth there are new circuit connections made, and the struggle for universe solidarity is not so difficult. It is as if our eyes are opened wider; we can see more, understand more, and make a better correction. The scales of faith are very much tipped in our favor. This brings forth numerous celebrations throughout Nebadon. Celebration always includes worship and exhibits our deepest gratitude for those that make our joy possible.

With all our work, our struggles, our efforts, we become very business-like in mind. It is easy to overlook those small things that bring us rest for the mind and comfort to the soul. We find this a time to drink deeply from the well of spiritual serenity. We find this a time to breathe in deeply the satisfaction of our spiritual status as a child of God; and for a few moments think of nothing – and just be, just rest and feel not that anxiety to produce, to fulfill promises, to be insulted by time.

The mortal life is difficult – yes, no doubt, but it is also a source of joy, a sense of accomplishment, a producer of spiritual values, and a unifier between time, eternity, and the living God. To celebrate your mortal sojourn, you respect all the five senses. You make it a point to be fully aware in each moment – be it bad or good. You face the difficult trials and you take comfort in knowing that you do not ever give up.

My friends, find time to be in celebration of all of life. Do not awaken dreading the duties of the day, but awaken your inner-selves to the possibilities of the day. Where will Father have me go today? What will He be trying to show me? How can I be a cog that turns the universal wheel of life? Yes, in being mindful of celebrating life, are you then in an attitude of creating joy – not just your own joy, but for all. You become a part of the whole and join in the healing, not just another mortal struggling up the spiritual ladder.

To find time for a few moments of celebration every day – re-focuses your mind from handling matters in a business-like fashion, to handling matters by joining a forward moving circuit that travels far beyond your knowledge. In this circuit you are not so exhausted; you are not so drained; your countenance is lightened and quite an attraction to others. Find time to celebrate and show your gratitude. Speak with one another. Laugh and feel Father moving among you.

Being in a state of celebration keeps the low times from becoming too low, too spiritually crushing. You take not yourselves so seriously and you are finding direct spiritual contact. In acknowledging this, life is not just about running the race of time, but about having those moments when you feel the hand of God upon your shoulder – leading you to new and better ways. Joy is a source of power; you can do a great many wonderful things by spreading it.

This week, utilize your power to change dark situations. Lighten your own burdens by finding time to really notice the wonderful things of this mortal life. Feel how there is not room for fear when there is hope and joy. Feel that spiritual contentment as you move among your fellows with an attitude of self-forgetfulness; with a gratitude for having the honor of fully living the mortal life. Journal how this affects your personal ministry to others.

I am sorry, no questions this evening, perhaps next week. Know that as our celebrations take place in Nebadon, many of us will be thinking of you and your contribution to our reason to celebrate. As always, my love grows more for you each, every time we meet. Until next week, shalom.

A Questioning Mind Keeps Us From Spiritual Arrogance; Keeps Us Open For the Never-ending New

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-15-2001

Back

I am ABRAHAM. It seems the atmosphere here this evening is very open to receiving. Your questioning minds create an energy that brings forth new information. The mind that 'questions not' - is closed to receiving. Perhaps put another way would be to say the mind that believes it already knows the answers - receives not new information. Your humble outlook purifies my message in a way that involves Thought Adjuster participation.

I would have you know that many Urantians have looked heavenward with that questioning mind; and I can say that with the assistance of the Supreme Being, up-to-date information is forthcoming, abundantly. Know that as the world seeks comfort, the lessons on giving comfort are also occurring. I understand this week has been quite trying for many of you, and it was difficult to find those reasons to celebrate and worship.

With the new spiritual benefits from the Supreme Being, there will be some confusion. Many individuals fear these new gifts; some misuse them. We must remember, as the Correcting Time force, that we have to maintain balance, integrity, and realness. We must not be tempted to move towards mysticism. We must remember that we are in service to Father, and not that self who seeks a higher seat at the table.

We have found that especially with longtime spiritual seekers there is somewhat of an arrogance as if they have earned seniority in the kingdom. One that knows this path needs to be cautious of seeking the admiration of those who are not so familiar with the path. One that believes they know the path must not be so comfortable so as to not expect a few bumps along the way. It matters not how long you have been studying or searching, information will always be new and evolving - evolving in a revelatory fashion. What might be right for you and your spiritual journey today may not be for another - at their place in time.

You long-time sincere seekers, do not be so surprised when the path makes a sharp turn and you stumble and fall; it will always be this way. That is why a questioning mind is like a lantern - you are always searching the various avenues with it, trying new things, keeping what works and discarding what doesn't. The point is, that you continue on – you build those muscles of faith with the weights of adversity.

Even after meeting my mentor/friend Machiventa Melchizedek I continued on much in the fashion I had been raised to believe in. It took a great amount of self-willed release to receive new information. Of course I sought a higher place in the kingdom. Of course I sought the respect and fear from my fellows. With the gently persuasive words of my mentor and friend, I gradually came to see a new and better way.

Machiventa did not pursue me – relentlessly pounding information into my head so that I may 'see the light,' no. He gave me small bits of understandable information and stepped back, allowing me room to decide for myself. I could see the benefits of his way, but found it quite difficult to let go of my own. I did find, through experimentation of his methods, that he was indeed, correct; and I did implement his ways more and more into my everyday living.

In time, I certainly believed I was well on my way within the kingdom, and had gotten quite comfortable with myself. I took on the belief that I was above spiritual regression but soon found out different after Machiventa departed from Urantia. I became quite fearful that someone would take my beloved Sarah from me. I was paranoid and on the brink of mental breakdown several times. I realized I had lost that questioning mind. I believed I had the answers I needed to get by to survive.

My friends, the arrogant mind is a dangerous weapon for it cannot distinguish dark from light. Time and experience, coupled with living revelation, brought me back to a humble place where I began to open up to Spirit direction; my mind was brought into balance, back into reality, yes.

I do not feel remorse for this experience because I understand it is part of the agondonter's journey. It is to be used as education – not as a source of embarrassment to keep me humbled. It just is not that serious, children. It is only a lesson, only a 'step-up' towards the Father. Do not be surprised when the spiritual poisons befall you. Use these events as a time to return to the questioning mind and to the 'circuits of ministry' for higher understanding.

This week, contemplate what benefits you have witnessed as of late that are coming to this world as a result of the Supreme's growth. What is 'revelation'? Has comfort on your spiritual path caused you to stumble? What changes can you make to be aware that the ego seeks to stifle the questioning mind? A few questions.

SIMON: Yes, Abraham, we have had some events this week which has challenged me to call on those lessons on possessiveness. And also, I am curious about what we had heard last year about universal broadcasts? In regard to the growth of the Supreme Being, will we be having more opportunity to hear more of these universal broadcasts?

ABRAHAM: I would first begin by saying you have each experienced some delicate matters this past week that are really not fully understood yet. There are certain steps that everyone must take in order to reach certain destinations. Every mortal will most likely experience every emotion – every spirit poison from one end of the spectrum to the other. Experience is your most valuable teacher. Have patience, these things will be put into perspective in Father's timing. Regarding the universal broadcasts – there has been almost one per month since this announcement. Many of you have received. Many have heard, but are confused. These broadcasts appear to be so uneventful, so without mysticism or show of psychic possibilities. They are with a feeling of complete normalcy. But yes, these broadcasts are perhaps likened to your news media – they are not so much fantastic announcements but just up-to-date information on universal happenings. You can see trends that reflect these broadcasts if you look carefully. Have no doubt that these will become more apparent as you become familiar with the benefits of the Supreme Being.

LUKE: With these lessons on humility, we understand that we each have spiritual growth, understanding, and even the setbacks in arrogance so that we all experience; is it like that where you are? Is it still something you need to consider?

ABRAHAM: I still struggle, yes. I have better tools wherewith to work on the temptation to become arrogant in my thinking. The once brilliant sons, Lucifer and Caligastia, were prime examples of this battle with self. They were very advanced in status and still were overcome with an unhealthy amount of self-love, self-admiration. I do not ever feel chastised for my arrogant thoughts. However, I feel the abundant and unending love from a universe Father and His Sons that fill me with such a gracious love that I really need not seek anything else. I crave not. I want not. With a balanced life, I am full. I am with understanding and with tools to battle that side of me that seeks undue credit. Good question, my son. Is this answering? (Luke: Yes.)

ABRAHAM: Very well. I would thank each of you for your patience and dedication to learn and serve in this well looked-after kingdom of our beloved Father. Know that my love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Be Calm And Observant | An Open Mind Leads To Incoming Revelation
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-22-2001
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I do so enjoy these smaller intimate groups. The atmosphere is relaxed and the energies are at balanced levels. It would seem at times people are so quick to define the world around them that they give little effort towards being observant. In these fast-paced times, the attitude seems to be 'the more the better.' It is as if everyone operates at top speed; there seems to be no slowing down to be watchful.

These weekly meetings are a wonderful reminder to be calm and observant, to wait on your definitions, to wait before you make judgments. The rash definition is quite likely to miss details and choose a poor perspective. I enjoy these weekly gatherings because I too, feel it is always a new beginning, new opportunities, new possibilities for the week ahead. It is a time to release and be open for receiving the new.

Awareness is perhaps the most notable benefit bestowed upon us by the Supreme Being; in His growth, we receive His reflections of changes. You can view your surroundings and see that it seems everyone cannot receive enough information, enough news – it is as if people know there are new things occurring, and they look to their material technology to receive any and all information.

They say knowledge is power – and yes, it is! but so many think not to turn inward towards a spiritual source of information. Therein, is this awareness, a new awareness – and that is somewhat unsettling to many, yes, but also is it comforting to some; you can feel as though you know more but do not know how or why. Being so aware, you are in a searching mode and with a questioning mind.

This openness leads to receiving revelation – that is, information coming from a divine source. There are many forms of revelation; many ways to receive. The Supreme Being's growth has endowed us with awareness, yes, and also an easier and more understandable technique to receiving revelation or divine communication. This past week, for instance, many of you have been aware of seemingly rapid karma in that what you have criticized others for, you have been caught doing yourself. This is a form of revelation – a form of divine communication that aids you in your own self-correction. Yes, this is on a personal level, but does this not also add to the wellness of the whole?

The churches in today's world may speak of revelation as if they receive information because they are looked upon with favor by God. As in days of old, many of the so-called prophets are deemed prophets because they seem to receive divine revelation. It is as if these seemingly chosen individuals are the only ones that can receive. This practice is quite outdated – for everyone, even the smallest child, has equal opportunities to receive divine revelation.

Divine revelation is not the thunderous voice of God that tells of great things to come, or new commandments to obey, no. Most revelation is personal and aiding you in your journey Paradise-ward. Many individuals can receive the same revelation simultaneously, or varying bits of information that choreograph spiritual experiences to bring about certain results.

With the Supreme's new reflections, we see the circuits strengthened and growing to incorporate a common universal knowledge. We have to be observant though, children, we have to refrain from defining. We have to believe that some circumstances are being woven into a greater universe fabric – which is to be more completely understood later.

Back to personal revelation and correction: I would admonish you to not become discouraged by these seemingly ugly facts about your behavior for it is the very whisper of God into your ear. He is your loving devoted Parent, not a stern judge who looks for your every mistake so He can chastise you.

This week, practice being observant. Note the new levels of awareness in yourselves as well as your fellows. How can you better deal with the correction from personal revelation? Journal what this statement of old means to you: “Wait upon the word of the Lord.” Yes. A few questions?

SIMON: Abraham, I have a question about choreographing spiritual experiences that bring about results. Sometimes I feel like we are left on our own to see what will happen, and I wonder if that really is the case, or am I mistaken about that? I know in my heart that applying faith and then escaping with fear, that sometimes I am not applying myself to full faith. As we know, Father does the timing of divine assistance in our lives, but are we at times left alone, waiting?

ABRAHAM: Understood. Yes, it would appear sometimes as if you are left alone to make decisions; and that is true to a point because your freewill cannot be infringed upon. Father can only do so much before it is up to you to make a decision and take action. The problem, as I see it, is time. While Father sees time as only an eternal forward momentum, you see time as the enemy. It does create great impatience. During these impatient and frustrating moments, you especially need to be aware and observant. Take action from a calm state of mind. I understand the world does not agree with this theory, but you must realize that while you are never left alone by our Divine Overseers, they are greatly devoted to your progression; and too much involvement such as anxiety and impatience could take away from your opportunity to progress Paradise-ward. Choreographing, yes! We each know well of synchronistic circumstances that lead to growth. These circumstances are not always peace-promoting, but rather agitating to create reactivity. Therein lays the importance of being aware and observant, and not taking rash actions. You can see from past experience that time really does take care of many matters – the waiting is a bit frustrating to the mind. In this society, hard work leads to productivity, but many times we find that rash actions lead to mistakes. Is this at all explaining, Simon?

SIMON: In many dimensions it does. I suppose there is still the inner-desires to really know when actions are rash? or if they are finally coming out into the open after my procrastination.

ABRAHAM: Understood. Yes. There are always many factors to consider like perhaps: From what foundation would you make your decisions? Is it a worthy place? Is it pure? Is it ego induced? Is it out of fear? What is the basic mindset in which you would be acting from? These are good questions to ask yourself during these times, yes. Is there another question?

SARAUNA: Abraham, this has to do with the state of mind in which we pray in our Western societies versus the Eastern societies. I know there is great power in prayer. I know that God loves all His children. I have been concerned regarding the fact that Western civilizations are more of an emergency mode-based-praying people – praying willy-nilly any time during the day or night or when in need. And in watching the news I have come to think about the Eastern culture and how they have 'set times' which they devote en masse to prayer. I know that perhaps, from my point of view, the direction they are getting may not be from the best source, but then yes, God does love all His children. So I am wondering, how do the two different types of prayer compare and have impact – is one going to be more positive than the other. I have just always felt that when large groups of people are praying, those prayers are heard. I have a concern that a whole bunch of people in 'prayer against us' worries me. [laughter.] Is there something regarding prayer that we should be more concerned about in this area?

ABRAHAM: There are individuals praying in all religions that are for various reasons. Many are set prayers which are no different than mindless chattering. There are prayers which are to save the self. There are prayers in which to change others. There is praying out of fear. Basically, those praying in the Middle East, versus the others around the world, are almost equal in numbers. Regarding the varying types of praying: Yes, there is power in praying. But I say, sincere praying changes the individual, not God. Sincere praying is really about the intent in one's heart. There are so many religions, among all nations, that drag the past baggage along in their present religious life. Father does not so much hear words as does He see the intent within His children. Sincere praying is one who prays to be within the will of God. That is what will tip the scales. That is where change will take place. That is where good prevails over evil. Good question, Sarauna, my daughter. Is this answering? (Saurana: That helps a lot, Thank you.) Abraham: Is there another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I have wanted to ask this question for a long time. I am into the Trinity study lately. I've have gotten a stronger track-record with Father than I do with Michael. I am loving and cultivating the relationship with Michael. I know that I have the Fragmentpart of Father that helps. I have got Michael as an example, Michael's Spirit of Truth – just the fact that I can learn how to take Him with me. However, I don't know if I am pursuing the relationship with Mother. It seems as though She is connected to the circuitry, and a while back you introduced Her to me as a source of loving logic. My question is: In levels of awareness, the way that I approach them with levels of awareness, is that off-base? I am intrigued by circuitry. Do you understand what I am saying?

ABRAHAM: Yes, the Urantia Book says you worship the Father, pray through the Son, and work the details out with the Spirit, which is Mother. I perceive your outlook on this to be good and growing. Mother is one who does pay attention to details. She also activates thoughts and brings them to life. She has the network of the adjutant mind-spirits that use their resources to bring you up-to-date revelation in a manner that you will be most understanding of. The Trinity concept is a worthy goal for all to focus on and incorporate into our daily living – but with the most personal of thoughts and desires, many feel most comfortable dealing with the inner Fragment, which is the Father. To have this enlarged concept though, does bring comfort and expanding knowledge for you to become acquainted with the various personalities of each – Father, Michael, and Mother – each personality being quite different and most intriguing, yes. Good question, Miriam. (Miriam: Thank you.)

ABRAHAM: I am slipping. I will take my leave, but not without having you know how much you each mean to me. I am truly a part of you, and I most definitely rejoice in that. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Benefits From The God-In-Time Prepare Today`s Ambassadors | Personal Correction Through Revelation

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-29-2001

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. This evening I feel particularly joyful because it really proves to be true that 'through God all things are possible.' To gather with you here this evening makes my world feel a bit more intimate; I am with a feeling of being at home.

"Wait upon the word of the Lord" was a simple saying from the days of old, but doubt not that its meaning was quite significant. In the days of old, time seemed to be quite slowed. Even though many tasks were more difficult without the technology of today, people were more focused. They were focused in each moment whether it was hunting for food, or educating children. This focus opens many spaces in the mind for divine interjection. There was room for creativity, and time to really feel and enjoy the task at hand no matter the significance of the task, yes.

With evolution, the times of simplicity are fading away and the spaces in the mind are becoming crowded with many meaningless things. The 'focusing' is lost, to a point, yes. 'Waiting upon the word from Father' is hard to practice with such an overfilled mind. With the awareness-benefits, we are receiving from the Supreme Being; we are experiencing a mindal expansion, so to speak; we are finding spaces to receive new concepts about the Divine way on the mortal path.

Yes, new information is rapidly approaching and it is time for us once again to become focused. Allow those spaces; allow the worries, fears, and non-reality-thinking to fade away. Most things people fear really never happen, but to focus on these fears chokes out the new possibilities - these new benefits from our Supreme Being.

How can a mind crowded with the old receive up-to-date living revelation? How can a fearful or obstinate mind grow in the light of the new evolution? What beliefs may tend to cause you to lose your focus, and why would you hold so dearly to them?

This was the mistake of the apostles of old. They had their long-cherished expectations - and acted from that standpoint. They found it difficult to be patient and 'wait upon the word' - wait for new revelation. Unfortunately, most of their expectations fed their desire for ego fulfillment, so to speak - a seat next to the Master, yes.

These times call for those individuals who are not cemented into their old ways, but open to ever-renewing and updateable divine revelation. Things are happening in this world now, children, which have not happened before. Yes, you were once on your way to receiving such wonderful spirit connections before the Rebellion, but now, with the re-opening of the circuits and the Supreme's growth, these connections are even greater. They are different, yes, enhanced - and believe me, the universe is watching this small experimental planet that has fully entered into a Correcting Time.

Back to revelation. Yes, we have discussed receiving personal correction through revelation, and how that does benefit the whole. You may be more aware now of the various forms of revelation that you can receive. It is not only found as the small whisper from Father through the mind, but messages can be received from Father through your fellows. With this mindal expansion, and the discarding of old in favor of being open to new, you can very well give divine messages, or receive them from your fellows.

This does not make you a prophet or a 'chosen messenger of God,' no. This is not to have mystical overtones; or, be used to inflate the ego – for such is a sure way to extinguish this form of ministry. This is not cause to force your opinion, no! but to find compassion to aid your fellows, or even open yourself to receiving a simple message that would bring you solutions, yes. This is not so much 'new,' as one may perceive, but is more-so 'enhanced' – enhanced by the returning benefits from the God-in-time.

The damage that occurred during the Rebellion and the Adamic Default, is being corrected. With the enhanced benefits from the Supreme you will find yourself to be a new well of divine information; there are new concepts that are being discovered, there are new possibilities to bring to your consciousness. You will find yourself with gifts that you never knew about.

With this new awareness (new focus, new ability to receive revelation) the mortal senses are enhanced. Those who felt they could not receive of transmissions before will find themselves with a new gift. Remember, children, this must remain balanced and uncontaminated with old ways of thinking. You have your intellect to filter all these new things through. Be cautious with ego involvement – this could surely lead to disappointing results.

This week, find time to journal your newly received concepts. There is no need to have them published (laughter), just feel that this journaling time is between you and Father. Practice patience and waiting for the word from Father. Practice being open to receive – to minister to your fellows. Believe me, the correct words will be there for you. Be observant in receiving any messages from your fellows. Journal your thoughts on the many ways we may receive revelation and the benefits it will bring to the Correcting Time.

I am due elsewhere. I am sorry there is not time for questions, perhaps next week. In the meantime, I pray you also feel the joy in pondering the fact that all things are possible through God, yes. Know that my affections are with each one of you. Until next week, shalom.

New Supreme Reflections/Strong Connection To The Cosmic Mind Brings New Universe-Connectedness

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-05-2001

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How wonderful it is to be able to present ideas in this safe arena. You have demonstrated a form of divine revelation. In your discussion this evening, everyone felt welcome to participate; nobody, for the most part, felt fear of being ridiculed or chastised for their ideas; everyone was reaching for higher understanding.

Sometimes the surface of concepts are not really revealing total understanding or the true nature of it, no. How blessed are we that we can build on concepts through being open to revelation and sharing understanding, yes. How wonderful it will be when we can venture out into the world with the same feeling of safety and being welcomed to share.

Many great minds could have maintained balance had they been open to this building of revelation with their fellows. Judas, for example, could have bridled his anxiety if he could have ignored the hurt feelings of his ego and opened up to his brethren, yes.

It is a crucial time in the history of this world for all to unify in a brotherhood fashion – not so much in mind, but in heart, yes. With these reflections we are receiving from our Supreme Being, we are becoming more in touch, ‘in tune’ with the thoughts and feelings of one another. Yes, there is a deepening of compassion but, there is also logic to balanced emotionalism – there is expanded courage and willingness to speak truthfully to aid one another. Our daringness to be open with our fellows invites them to also be open. This leads to greater understanding, which leads to love.

Along with mindal-expanding revelation, the benefits coming from the ‘God-in-time’ also includes this greater knowingness of one another – an ability to understand your fellows’ thoughts and actions. In allowing the old to fade away, we are making room for new concepts. To allow the petty things of life to go by the wayside makes room for you to be better connected to the cosmic mind. Strong connection to this cosmic mind lets you know of your responsibilities as a universe citizen; this is quite important to this Correcting Time, and further adding growth to the Supreme Being.

The ego, however, fills us with fearful imaginings that would have us feel separate from the universe. The ego would have us feel either special and above others, or add poor self-esteem that would tell us we are below others and the universe is against us. We must be aware, my friends, of the ego’s design to fill those spaces with selfish thought – closing out room for revelation, new concepts, and the ability to truly understand one another.

The default of the Creative Son and Daughter (Adam and Eve) took from us a valuable form of mindal communication, but the Supreme Being’s growing reflections are helping us in other ways to receive back some of what we lost. There is forward-moving ‘thought energy,’ and the closer you are to certain individuals, the more alive this energy becomes. You can practically feel another’s feelings. You can receive another’s thoughts. This will be especially valuable among those in the Reserve Corps for it will help them to minister to those who are experiencing these new Supreme reflections.

Again, I admonish you to not add mystical overtones or become the neighborhood psychic. [much group laughter.] This is a gift, children, for you to work within the standards of the Correcting Time. Should you falter in these standards or misuse them, of course would you be released from this gift.

This week, focus on really listening to your family, friends, and associates. Do you receive a greater amount of information than what is spoken? Are you allowing revelation to build new ideas, concepts, and solutions? Find time this week to take a few moments for stillness. This is a wonderful antidote to the ills of the ego. I understand there are questions and I also have a personal request. One moment please.

Gary, my son, you are in understanding of what you have to do. First of all, own up to your mistakes. While standing firm in your beliefs you will find that this simple but genuine show of humility puts you at a place of integrity, yes. While you appear to have many of life's answers, you are still holding on to some stagnating ideas. Relieve yourself of this burden. What is true will not go away. What is real will stay with you. Take this time of upheaval to explore other avenues. There is a tremendous personal lesson in all of this that can also be put to work for you. I understand your anguish and worry, and now is your opportunity to put into practice all that you have taught. Also, now is a time to be in a mode of receiving new ideas, trying things you have always wanted to but have not had the time. Do not be so hard on yourself. There is no one judging you that can take anything truly valuable away from you. Be not afraid – rather, be intrigued, for our Father answers all prayers and exceeds all our expectations, yes. That is all. Proceed with questions.

CALVIN: We welcome a new person to our group tonight, Gibb. Also, Margarita is back again with us.

ABRAHAM: Welcome. Be at ease to ask any questions.

WILLEENA: Father Abraham, I have a question about ego. Can you tell us what the job of the ego is? So often it sounds like the ego is the enemy. In my belief, I just don't accept that. I don't know what the job of the ego is and why it seems to gets so out of hand.

ABRAHAM: Understood. Ego is a byproduct of the human mind. The average mortal was endowed with survival instincts; and in the days of old the ego was a survival mechanism. The world appeared (and still appears) huge to man, and the ego was a mechanism to make man appear larger and more in control of his surroundings. In early history, the ego served its purpose and enabled man to forbear and survive in a barbaric world. Those who seemed to be without this survival mechanism were weak and easily destroyed. As the world became more civilized, the goals changed from merely surviving to competition – to appear better-than one's fellows. The influx of various forms of spirituality fragmented these ego concepts. Culture, social mores, religious beliefs – have invariably created somewhat of a monster. Yes, in a way, the ego is an enemy if one so chooses. On the other hand, the ego can be reduced back to its original intent of 'survival mechanism' – only now we speak of spiritual survival, yes. This world is entirely too competitive; but we can see that the more individuals discover they have so much in common, the more desire there is to take care of one another. In this Correcting Time the scales of brotherhood and competition are, in a sense, bouncing from side to side. The recent tragedies (the September 11th terrorist attacks in New York City) are helping us all to focus more on the really important things in this short life of the flesh. Good question, my daughter.

CALVIN: Abraham, when you say there are ways we can help our fellows – let's say when someone says something that is very arrogant, racist or whatever, and we know of a better way – are you saying that we are to have the courage to say something? obviously using common sense and tact? Or, the other way of not being our ‘brother’s keeper’ and to allow Father to work that out between He and them?

ABRAHAM: You make effort to help ‘where you believe it will help.’ Sometimes it is that any action of correction will not help but cause further aggravation, yes. Complacency, however, has killed many opportunities for enlightenment. Through relying upon revelation, you can find the appropriate words to bring enlightenment or a momentum of new thought-energy. To come from a standpoint of ‘correcting your fellows’ will only alienate them, will make them defensive and stand more firm in their beliefs. The Master did speak with authority, for His pure connection with Father allowed Him instant revelation and, therefore, appropriate words to give aid where it would do the most good, yes. Good question, Calvin. Another question?

LUKE: Are you saying, then, don't cast your pearls where it does no good? and not to judge them but rely on Father for His inner voice to guide you? If one is battling with ego, like I battle with ego, and fear that ‘my understanding won't be understood,’ and that I am ‘getting into their business’ – then this is not the productive way?

ABRAHAM: Yes, absolutely! “don't cast your pearls before swine.” Where there is ego involvement there is always a temptation to show what you know and to ‘enlighten your fellows.’ To keep a tight rein on the ego allows those mindal spaces needed for incoming divine information that would show a new way without insulting, yes.

SIMON: Abraham, in making the most of the moment in being a conduit for Father's love and energy, could you speak about that aspect of it?

ABRAHAM: My answer to you, Simon, would be to allow a natural course. Do not force anything. Allow joy and humor to open avenues to further enlightenment. ‘Natural’ feels right, and ‘force’ is off balance. Feel at ease and be aware of bringing a joyful element into any situation. Does this answer, my son? (Simon: Oh yes.)

MIRIAM: Abraham, how does the newness of new revelation look from where you sit? What is your perspective of it? Is it manifesting for you? or is it something that is old school for you.

ABRAHAM: Regarding the growth of the Supreme Being? (Miriam: Yes.) Abraham: Upon receiving the announcements of the incoming benefits, there was quite the joyful celebration, for this was an upstep for the universe as a whole. I mean, we truly rejoiced with one voice. It seems to me this ‘new’ is like a small company who has struggled and finally is beginning to branch out and move into uncharted territory – this is also new for me. I have seen other events such as this, but not of this proportion, no. This is where we will really see a great deal of change, and most definitely require the human participation to further Michael's cause, yes. Thank you, Miriam.

With that, I will take my leave. I express to you each the depth of my ever-growing love for all of you. Until next week, shalom.

Enhancements From The Supreme Helps Us Live Each Moment With A Spiritual Outlook
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-12-2001

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Sorry for the delay. Sometimes we must allow for more time to pass to create a balanced energy. When emotions are strong there is static in these communications. To relax and be assured that each one of you is very much loved and well-cared for will bring us the balanced energy to carry forth, yes.

There is new and growing strength in this world. Many are taking steps towards newness that they have not dared to do before. Many are finding that a life without meaning is no life at all; therefor are many searching. Down through the ages, traditions were formed and most faithfully carried out. Beliefs are a major motivator in how mortals live. The benefits of the Supreme Being bring us mindal expansion and the courage to move forward to new adventures.

With this growth of the Supreme, all beings are enhanced, all beings are made more with this growth. Certainly is each Adjuster enhanced and less limited by their experiential circumstances. There is nothing so close to you as your indwelling Father Fragment. There is no one who knows you more. There is no one who works harder for your success in all areas – spiritual and otherwise.

With this new Supreme upstep do we find stronger communion with our beloved Monitors. In this connection there is enhanced spiritual power and courage – to face and fully live in each and every moment with the certainty that you are Father's child, yes, and very much are a part of His perfected plan. Be aware, children, of this new strength – for it is the catalyst to change. This strength is what will help direct the masses in these confusing times. This strength will empower you to fully live each mortal moment with a spiritual outlook.

You are not the weak and dark planet you thought you were, no, Urantia has played a major role in the growth of the Supreme Being and the new enhancements throughout Nebadon. There are many individuals who become bored with living and seek adventures that bring heightened emotions/feelings. With the strengthened communication with our Father Fragments, we find we do not seek outside sources for new thrills and adventure, no, we see it in everyday mortal living, we become fully present in it.

There is a unification occurring where you can feel at one with all living things and all mortal avenues – such as creativity, education, relationships. With the new reflections from the Supreme, we not only find enhancement with our wonderful Adjusters, but also with our awesome Spirit of Truth. The Supremes' growth is also Michael's growth. Michael is our Brother/Father and the heart of all that is true, beautiful, and good. We will further see His works on this world in that all things will be brought to light. Truth will carry power and definitely make unbelievable changes.

As we embrace Michael, we also embrace the truth and how this helps us to function in everyday living. If you think deeply on the subject of truth you may be surprised to find out that truth weighs equal on the scales with falsehoods in life. As we feel the heightened power of the Spirit of Truth, we first learn to come true with ourselves – to stop the self-deception and, to make effort towards an openness that gives Michael an opportunity to show you truth in all its reality.

The ego, however, is a great distorter of truth and at times would have you be in a place of denial when you should be making attempts at delving into truth to reach greater understanding and spiritual solutions. To close off or deceive the self is only a delay in spiritual progress. Not to worry however, experience will teach us truth in any fashion it pleases. Be willing first to be honest with yourselves and open to Michael's definition of the reality of truth.

Past experiences can certainly color your view of what you think is true, yes, and spiritual practices can help bring clarification to your concepts of truth. Spiritual practices meaning: stillness, study, fellowship, and worship, yes. In these changing times, courage and truth will not merely help you endure, but set you free – expanding your spiritual perception, making the Spirit life more of a reality concept instead of only a faith-alone concept.

We have such excitement for you; such hope, such faith in you. These evolutionary steps are quite inspiring to all of us who have watched this small planet take its first baby steps out of darkness and into the ever-expanding light of true vision.

This week, find time to ponder the augmented relationships you have with your spiritual Caretakers. What feels different to you? How have you put it into practice? What enhancements might we see from our dear Mother? Only a few questions this evening.

DAVE: Abraham, I have been under a lot of anxiety lately about a pressing problem that has been going on for two years. It is kind of coming to a head. I am feeling very anxious and very upset because I have a lot riding on the outcome. I would really appreciate some assurance that things are going to work out for me. I feel very upset about this situation.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Understood. My son, I perceive you to be more of a director type individual, one who is somewhat needing to control events and outcomes. You have lived a life of resistance, and this has undoubtedly taken its toll on you. A life resigned from struggle or resistance is a step toward following the will of our Father. So many are afraid to give over their hopes and desires to Father for fear His outcomes will not align with theirs. Until you can actually practice this way of non-resistance, you will be imbalanced by this anxiety. I do understand your need for order and predictability. This circumstance that occurs now in your personal life gives you greater opportunities to practice being courted by Father, to find freedom in free-falling, and allowing the outcome to be 'what it is.' To go with a natural flow, to quit making effort to force events, will free you up to greater spiritual possibilities. This can never happen, however, unless you can further trust the Father of all fathers, the maker of heaven and Earth, of all that is seen and unseen. True courage lies in letting go. This is easier said than done, I know, but life circumstances are assignments for you to draw ever nearer to your Father, yes. Are there more questions?

HARRISON: Abraham, could you help me with this statement. "No man comes unto the Father but through me." That is a statement that Michael made and is also used by a lot of Christians in the world today. How does that statement affect our relationship, or anyone's relationship, with Father?

ABRAHAM: Understood. Michael was, is, and will always be – the Door, our experiential Creator that paved a way for us to have comprehension of God. Michael, as the man Jesus, was a living expression of God. Man can relate with man – something on his level; but God the Father is almost incomprehensible in His all-powerfulness, His everywhere-ness, His all-knowingness. Michael is an introduction into these greater concepts. When this statement of which you mention was first spoken, Jesus was, for the most part, referring to the 'born-again' experience. He is the first you will see, of God. He is the go-between between you and God as far as the alignment of mortal living with spiritual understanding, yes. Always are we closest with our indwelling Father Fragment, and it is Michael who helps us to understand who that is. Is this helping Harrison? (Harrison: Yes, and thank you.) Abraham: One more question?

LUKE: When you speak, you offer so much. Thank you. Tonight you finished with talking about Mother. I don't know very much about Mother. Can you help us to try to understand what to look for with the aspect of Her reality?

ABRAHAM: I did not want to ask too much from you each by having you contemplate the enhanced benefits received from all three divine personages. Each one is so distinctly different and yet, work together in such excellent harmony. Mother, yes, She is the spark of life, the beginning to many things. She is an equalizer in the struggles of injustice. She brings attention to those that have no voice. She brings grace to soften the harshness of this mortal life, and always and forever has endowed each of us with Her sense of family togetherness – yes, unity. Feel free my son, Luke, if you are up to this challenge, to journal your concepts on the enhancements of our three wonderful Divine Overseers, yes. Good question.

With that, I will take my leave. Know that I would be more than honored to meet with you each to answer any questions or help bring comfort. I am your friend and brother. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

In The Striving There Is Exhaustion | In Surrender There Is Help From Father and His Universe

Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-19-2001

Back

[Editor's note: Tonight's lesson was on the heels of a harsh and hurtful relationship-breakup for a husband/wife couple within our group. The pre-discussion had to do with both's commitment 'to the group,' nonetheless.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I thank you for your all-inspiring discussion this evening. With such wisdom in the room, what need have you of a teacher? I am the one who is learning. What an honor it has been to serve this planet for these many years. The changing times are quite astounding to me. The evolving mind of mortals helps us to know that Father is real and ever striving for our wellness.

I am contemplating changing tonight's lesson in order to meet the needs of the group. Your daringness to be your true selves with one another is beautiful to behold. I give you, Emulan.

EMULAN: Greetings, friends. It has been a while since we have been together. I can remember in my mortal existence how I dreamed of a particular life pattern, a pattern that seemed to be the most common in mortal living. I worked, I married, and I fathered a child. I was always intrigued by what was most popular in that day and age. I put forth most of my energy into living my plan of that mortal pattern. I had goals to meet, expectations to fulfill.

I spent very little time just in the comfort of knowing that I was already blessed and watched over. There was always this 'life-striving' in everyday living. The striving took tremendous amounts of energy and I was forcing my life's plan of action. I thought this to be a true and good strategy; I thought this to be a comfortable reality. But indeed, I was overlooking those things most precious, yes.

I did, however, experience a terrible awakening when I discovered the loss of my wife and daughter. The experience was unbearable. I knew thoroughly every mortal emotion anyone could ever experience: anger, despair, confusion, and loneliness.

I hated God for allowing this to happen to me. 'How unfair was this mortal life,' I concluded. With this mindset I cared not about valuable lessons. I did not arise to meet the challenges of the day, no, I deserted any spiritual light that was trying to reach me. From that, there was a continuing downward spiral into insanity.

Yes, I was broken. I felt damaged beyond repair. The reality of living with a constant ache and longing had completely taken me away from those spiritual guardians who were trying to assist. Time did pass; I had completely given up and was institutionalized. The days went by and everything I had ever believed in or thought was important faded away from me. Yes, I was empty.

In my broken state, in my releasing and trying to make sense of everything, I heard these words: "Fear not, my son, for in every dark moment I am with you. I seek to give you light and a new life. I have always loved you and I always will."

This was a parting of the clouds. This was my first rays of hope and healing. Do you see, I had to be stripped of my old, unusable ideas. I did not hear the voice of help until I was completely silenced. I had to face the truth about myself - the way I lived and pursued meaningless things. I felt guilt and had tremendous self-loathing.

I did receive wonderful psychiatric assistance, yes, but that could never have pulled my soul from the depth of despair I was in. I did not, at first, believe Father could help me - no, for I felt I was left behind to be punished for my actions. Time is the most difficult teacher, but in time came healing and understanding. I learned our Father was truly merciful and kind; truly all-knowing and all-powerful.

I never expected to be a whole person again, but as experience had shown me, Father beat my expectations. I became interested in the inner workings of the mind wherein I was educated and became a doctor of psychiatry. I feel my practice was so much more than it could have been had I not experienced what I did.

I did not forget my family, no. I continued to work on my issues with guilt and regrets of choosing meaningless priorities. The healing work was ongoing; it was managed by a spiritual team – individuals I could not see; but nonetheless, I viewed their fruits in my life, daily. I had often wondered if these circumstances were destined to be? or were they only accidents of time. I came to the conclusion that 'it did not matter for I have today; I will experience pain, no doubt, but I will also know joy and comfort beyond my comprehension.'

Time may have its way with you, but Father does have His way with time. Do not flee from the light as I had. Do not mistrust those who have hung the stars and put them in motion. Do not forget that the one who dwells within knows your every desire and seeks your happiness. He also seeks to be at one with you someday and will minister to you in a way that leads you to Him. I leave you to Abraham.

ABRAHAM: My children, my friends, my co-workers, I too know firsthand this mortal despair. I can vow to you that you will receive perfect understanding in time, and it will seem as if these ways of life were always meant to be.

Concentrate this week on allowing spiritual evolution to unfold. Push not the mortal design, but allow yourself the freedom of relying not on your own understanding. The comfort is there. The light is there. You cannot flee your mortal lessons, but you can receive fantastic enhancement from them. You can take off the sharp edges of pain to allow a spiritual definition.

I am uplifted by your willingness to carry on, to face disappointment, to walk away from upheaval, and rebuild. I am sorry, no questions tonight, but I will be back next week. Until then, know that your friends and Teachers are numberless. My love goes with you. Shalom.

Truth Brings Correction | Correcting Time Brings New Gifts For All Who Will Receive Abraham & Christ Michael, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-26-2001
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am inspired by the energy here this evening. If all you ever learn here in this life in the flesh is that 'everything is in a constant state of evolution,' this will most certainly carry you through to the next life. All living things are constantly changing and moving toward some goal, some destination.

Those with personal-willed goals may miss a more grand adventure. There are those of you who will assist others because of your experiences in living. Adversity is a terrific trainer providing that you reap the value therefrom and help others who are experiencing what you have already been through.

We have been discussing the growth of the Supreme Being and the benefits we have received from that. We are finding that mindal expansion can be a bit overburdening or creating some chaos. With those events that are seemingly out of control, many will turn to higher power. As mortals we all crave the same things – comfort in mind, body, and spirit; we have all learned how to do that 'materially,' but finding that 'spiritually,' is another story.

These new enhancements from the Supreme are creating more of a reality in the spiritual life. With this there is some upheaval in deeply-rooted belief systems. There has to be room for new incoming information. I realize the tendency to become discomforted by this uprooting, but it is brought out for you to see.

You may find what you valued before is now changing. Although it seems fearful (being in the 'unknown') it is also opportunity to realign with this new reality in the spiritual life. You may hold various habit patterns that are not in spiritual alignment, and these will be brought to the surface for you and Father to evaluate.

With the Lucifer Rebellion and the Adamic Default, and those misconceptions that spiritual organizations have taught, there is a tremendous amount of correction to be done. The spiritual guardians of Urantia are striving to steer the planet towards Light and Life. Without cognizance of this correction needed, old habit patterns will keep repeating. This is why we must bring all darkness out into the light. My friends, I give you our beloved Sovereign:

MICHAEL: I am your Brother/Father, keeper of truth, bringer of light. I sweep my hand across the world to relieve you of this veil. I am with you as a brother and helpmate. I do not seek to brutally shake you from the darkness, but gently call you to partake of all that is true, beautiful, and good.

Our Father does not seek to drop you to your humbled knees – not at all, no. He is a Director to you, children, ever drawing you to Him. I am your Purifier, your 'parting of the clouds' your Counselor in confusion, your Teacher of truth. We are side by side working for good. The mortal life is not a cruel puzzle to figure out, but a stairway to perfect understanding.

You that can feel are truly blessed. You that can see with the eyes of the spirit are truly blessed. You that can hear with the heart are truly blessed. When you have finished this days' work in the flesh you will know just how blessed you were to have experienced existence from the ground up.

Take not this life lying down. Seize every moment and really feel, learn, and act from your true self, your divine self. You are not a victim subject to life's brutalities, no. You are a participator in the mortal experience, in the cosmic mind, in the growth of our God-in-time, and in an eternal career leading to our Father.

Rise up, my brothers and sisters. Allow the darkness to purify in heart and mind. Allow the old to fall away. Allow yourselves to be reborn. I always, and will ever, go before you. Follow me.

Truth brings correction – and that may bring discomfort, yes, but love brings healing that goes beyond all boundaries. Know that my love for you is unending and always clearing a path for you. Carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. My gratitude to you, Michael, our divine Compass and Brother who stands by our side. We are ever striving toward your goal and continually recommitting ourselves to the cause.

This week, allow what is covered to be uncovered. Be not afraid for the imperfections. Please believe me – all is understood and in favor of your progression. Find time for real gratitude. Focus not on all that is so wrong. Give time to think of all that is right and good. Journal on how changing focus changes reality. Allow this purification to begin by cleansing those old wounds, yes. One moment. Are there questions?

CALVIN: We thank you, Michael, for your message today. What an honor to be witness. Abraham and Emulan, we welcome Heidi back with us and Patrick; and my boy, Matt, is here with us. Thank you so much for your help this week.

ABRAHAM: Greetings, children. I am always inspired by these youthful minds with their fresh outlook and new ideas. Calvin, yes, you are each most certainly welcome. A question?

ANICIA: Abraham. I am very grateful for the lesson tonight. It targets everything I am going through right now, of course. I hope this is appropriate to ask: I recently moved back in with my father, and he sees everything that is wrong – and that is what he focuses on. This makes it really challenging for me to focus on everything that is right. I was just wondering if you have some advice in my communication with him.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. When I suggest focusing on what is right, it does not mean to deny what needs correction, but there are individuals who have had a life-long negative pattern and are quite embittered and somewhat scarred. It would be difficult at this point for your father to have a sudden change of heart. While he may appear to weaken your spirit, you know very well that good overcomes darkness. You do make a difference in his perception, but he also sees you as somewhat of a blind optimist. Let him know that you are in understanding of life's realities and the seriousness thereof, but also show him the practical reality in spiritual thinking. Show him the proof of his own life. Is it not true that all he has focused on has come into being? Do not be disturbed by his attitude, for when all is said and done there will be perfect understanding. Is this helping? (Anicia: Yes, very much. Thank you, Abraham.)

WILLEENA: Father Abraham, you say to allow this purification to begin by cleansing those old wounds. In our communication these past few weeks about how 'when people are in the throes of stuck energy, it is most difficult to actually move through those old wounds to receive the light. What does that look like to cleanse those old wounds?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Soil has to be properly nourished for new seeds to take root and grow. When there is this overwhelming turmoil the body systems are disturbed. Mortals tend to pacify symptoms with unhealthy temporary aids such as:

Diet, for example: When the mind is disturbed, one can have food cravings for food that creates only temporary energy, yet has no nutritional value. Therefore, you must have a nutritional food intake.

Exercise: Emotional upheaval tends to release various chemicals in the brain, which can settle in the muscles and create various ailments – from arthritis to depression. A dose of exercise during this time is helpful to create movement in all the body's systems.

Light: In a discontented mood one tends to stay in darkness, which further adds to depression and hopelessness. All living things need light.

Fellowship: Burdens are best borne when at the side of a loving friend. How healing it is to share with an understanding friend who simply listens and challenges you to arise through difficult occasions. How wonderful it is to be reminded of spiritual values by a trusted friend. Said Jesus: "Where two or more are gathered, there also am I."

Worship and gratitude: This is always an attitude-adjuster wherein you can become as a little child in the presence of your Creator-Parents. A loving Parent can break through the toughest exteriors. Finding things to be grateful for helps to direct your focus to new faith levels. It helps you to believe in the forward momentum of all living things. Nothing really ever stays the same except for a loving, all-knowing, all-powerful, precious Father.

Yes, you can take an active role in freeing yourself from mortal cloudiness, but know that all wounds take time to heal, and all experience takes time to understand the value therein. Is this helping? (Willeena: Yes it is, so much. I thank you.)

ABRAHAM: This week, please know I am in understanding of your mortal experience. I would comment that these gifts are direct results of the Supreme Being's growth and a small glimpse of what is to come. There are further adjustments to be made the older you are, yes, but for the children who have been born into this Correcting Time you will find these new gifts as a natural part of living. There is much mindal conditioning to overcome, but absolutely are these gifts free to all who would receive.

There are awesome changes occurring and most definitely, my friends, you will want to be a part of them. Know that the youth of today are filled with a new wisdom in which all can benefit. I will end there. I am slipping. Know that you each inspire me to become more. I am with ever-growing love for you. As Michael said: Carry on. Until next week, shalom.

Energy Moves Matter, A Driving Force | Thought Leads To Action

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-03-2001

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am amazed at the loving energy in the room here this evening. It is as if we are all of one mind.

Energy moves matter; and thought leads to action. If I was so permitted, I would give you a glimpse of what is to come. The Father, however, in all His wisdom knows that to have any comprehension of this glimpse you must go through certain experiences. We are in a state of continual experience. We are taking steps toward an eternal destination. In the midst of experience – have not fear, for it is only steps in the forward momentum of an eternal career.

Yes, energy moves matter. Where your energy of thought goes, you follow through with action. In holding on to past wounds, your thought-energy travels in that direction. Deep within, there is always this driving force to find relief or solutions; you act out this driving force in everyday living. A baby will cry at discomfort because that is the child's only tool towards finding the solution.

This Correcting Time has endowed you with several tools. We find the key to actually opening the tool chest itself, is honesty – honesty with Father and yourself. To deny yourself 'honesty' is a cause for static in the energy of thought, which almost always leads to irrational actions. To cover-over without actual healing is to feel that restlessness of being driven towards some 'thing' that you believe will bring you fulfillment.

There is a driving force within the soul of man that seeks to carry him through correction towards progression. To appear to have flaws is not weakness, no, but steps of opportunity for growth. To commit to self-honesty is an opening for a spiritual driving force to give you a more precise thought-energy pathway, leading to a more correct action.

You, our Teaching Mission participants, have been well trained to teach others about these spiritual tools. You are counselors. You have learned to direct with patience, not force. You are learning to serve for the glory of our Father and for the upliftment in the kingdom. This does not mean you are finished with your own correction and learning – no, but you know the basic steps to take towards a positive path of thought-energy.

This week, contemplate – where are your thoughts leading you? Is there a covered wound that leads you to incorrect action? What are the tools you use on a daily basis to progress in mortal living? Which driving force within, is stronger – spiritual or material? A few questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, we welcome our old friend back with us, Ridsen. (Abraham: Welcome.) Calvin: It seems like I am trying to find that spiritual connection, which I have found a time or two. I know there is a great difference in the material pursuit in daily life versus that constant spiritual connection. It seems like only when things are in a crisis that I can find the drive for that strong energy force you are talking about – that spiritual connection. How can I take that with me all day every day, not just when in crises?

ABRAHAM: In the life in the flesh, you will find it rare when someone has a continuous connection. In your status as agondonters you are not really shown any proof that the spirit life is real. An individual makes his own proof by seeing the fruits in daily living. By faith in an unseen Father are you made to relax with a knowing confidence that this life is not a game of dramatics. This life is not a cruel joke to show you how foolish you can be. It is not an individual battle to be fought and won, no. This life is a lesson in true humility which leads to listening, trusting – and knowing those unseen forces work for your overall success. My son, it is a matter of exercising patience in the unknowingness, and not being driven by an unknown force towards creating the reality 'you' desire, versus Father's. reality

'for' you. It is a matter of perception. Also I say, old wounds can definitely modify how you see reality – this can lead to distortion of thought and taking rash actions towards relief, or fulfillment. A commitment to remaining calm, even in the unknowing, is a clearing for Father to work. The Master knew not from one day to the next where He would lay His head each night or how He would find His next meal – and in a material world, that is calmness and trust in the midst of mortal unknowing. The Master, with His connection to Father, however, moved with confidence; each day He believed He was well looked-after and loved by the Supreme Overseers. Do you see, He trusted those who could see far beyond what He in His mortal form could; and by doing, He fulfilled His mortal destiny. He found comfort in upheaval. He found love in the midst of hate. He found good where there was evil. Energy controls matter, yes. Another question?

SIMON: Abraham, so in reacting to events, nothing then is so terrible? You mentioned to me to find humor in events. Sometimes that is really hard to do, and sometimes it is a lot of fun.

ABRAHAM: Yes, humor is a wonderful equalizer in mortal living. It can bring balance to chaos. Mortals become paralyzed in fear, and to see the lighter side does lessen the pressure and brings clarification to the mind. No, you cannot force humor where you do not feel it, but even putting forth your thoughts in that direction is leading toward enlightenment. Laughter releases chemicals in the body to combat depression, fatigue, and an overactive ego. Is this answering Simon? (Simon: Yes, thank you.)

LUKE: You said three times tonight: "energy moves matter." Exactly how does energy and thought affect the outcome of matter pertaining to what happens in our lives?

ABRAHAM: Great things have occurred down through the ages because people had vision. People could foresee a reality to their dreams. So on one hand, you can materially make your vision a reality. In the spiritual realm, there are Power Directors, among others, who make effort towards your vision – especially if the vision serves the whole. There are circuits upon circuits that carry thoughts and energies that are filtered through these Power Directors, who deem thoughts worthy of spiritual influence. You can be glad to know that fearful negative thoughts are, for the most part, diffused in the spiritual realm; but of course, with your own fearful or negative thoughts you can even subconsciously make them happen. Thoughts have energy. Adam and Eve could communicate telepathically for miles away because they were quite gifted in this thought-sending. With the opening of our system circuits and your advancing spiritual enlightenment, you each also have the same opportunity, and you can create good, yes. This is not to say you can escape required mortal experience, but most definitely you can accelerate your learning. Is this helping? (Luke: Yes.) One more question?

WILLEENA: Regarding the self-honesty – 'honesty with Father' you spoke of. Is it the lies we tell ourselves... is that what blocks us from communicating telepathically? We are so harsh on ourselves sometimes – is there a way we can be gentle? If we are stuck in these 'negativities,' is there a gentle way we can support ourselves to be in communion with Father?

ABRAHAM: Understood. It really depends on internal motives and a somewhat tamed ego. The ego wants perfection without effort, and not to be shown anything else. The soul, however, is a child – always discovering, always learning ‘by experience’ – bad and good. The ego cares about ‘how it appears to others.’ The soul cares about what Father has to teach. Self-honesty is somewhat of a fine line – for you can be either coddling the self or punishing the self – that is why the spiritual tools are so important. You have your indwelling Father Fragment, you have your Teachers, you have your books, you have your prayer and stillness – but one of the greatest tools you have is one another. If you can be completely honest with a friend, and not fear ridicule but only expect upliftment, then are you in understanding of how Father is. You have the opportunity to be an expression of Father – and, an opportunity to express yourself to Father through one another. You that can find this love and closeness in the world are truly blessed. When pondering this self-honesty, ask yourself: "What are my motives?" "Where am I hoping to go with this?" "How is it serving the soul?" "If not serving the soul, then is it serving the ego?" Is this helping? (Willeena: Yes. Thank you so much.) Abraham: You're so welcome.

As we draw our meeting to a close, please know that I am always and ever devoted to you each and, always my highest thoughts are with you. Until next week, shalom.

Reality Of Being Human | For What Are You Striving
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-10-2001

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Sorry for the delay. I cannot be heard until I am really listened for. There needs to be an allowance, so to speak, a decline in personal will, a type of indifference, if you will. The busier the mind the more difficult it is to make contact.

For the next few lessons, I would like us to focus on the reality of being human. I would like us to find the true spirit of being mortal. Not only are we always in a state of ‘experiencing,’ we are also always in a state of constant ‘striving.’ I would ask you – for what are you striving? So many individuals, when they are very young, constantly strive to become older and more mature because that seems to come with certain benefits.

There is a time in childhood, however, that the child delights in just being a child, in just being shown. For the child, it is not about the struggle of striving but about adventure and the wonder of everyday-living. As mortals mature, they sometimes make effort towards pushing back time, dreading the inevitabilities that are to come with time. With that thought follows that energy, and the sense of adventure and desire to only be shown the wonders in everyday-living, is practically lost.

On worlds settled in Light and Life, each stage of mortal life is a celebration, yes, a right to passage. Each stage is filled with gratitude for the experience already gained and the experience to come. There are not labels attached with maturity. You are not growing older – becoming feeble and without ability to be shown, no.

Being more mature on these settled worlds is not a ‘higher seat in the kingdom,’ as if one has earned seniority, no; there are not limits as you move towards the spirit world. The lines of age are blurred and insignificant. These individuals on such worlds are in somewhat of a state of continual striving, yes, but that striving is in an attitude of wanting to be shown, enjoying that anticipation and discovery of what the next stage of life will bring. How precious it is to watch these older individuals minister to the younger individuals in an attitude of excitement and inspiration – not an attitude of superiority or seniority that says: ‘I have been there, done that.’ Rather, there is always one hand reaching forward to be helped up while the other hand is back pulling up their fellows.

Today’s society is so accustomed to moving into new life stages with foreboding, as if their best days are behind them – and that is exactly what they get, their spirit is stifled and in a fearful state. These mortals become used to being on guard at all times so that nothing surprises them, nothing hurts them – but also, practically nothing makes them happy.

How easy it is to move on quickly from an unpleasant (although educational) ordeal with an attitude of ‘I survived that. What is next?’ There is no internal celebration and joy for the new-found learning; there seems to be only dread for its reoccurrence. There is not gratitude for the new tools gained but more insulation as protection. While the insulation may guard you against pain, it also keeps you from that awesome state of wonder and anticipation of adventure.

As I think back to my life in the flesh, I wish I had more courageously faced those mortal inevitabilities. I wish I would have felt every aspect of emotion instead of protecting myself. To know the fulfillment of a quenched thirst you must travel through the desert. To have real spiritual joy you must define your mortal experiences through a spiritual perspective.

Just as we had difficulty in beginning our lesson this evening it is all the more difficult to be in touch with that Father Fragment when you are in a state of self-guarding or preoccupied with trivial things. Stillness practice is keeping those lines of communication open; without this practice, it becomes somewhat difficult to be spirit led. A few moments of silence every day increases trust in Father wherein you feel protected, you feel watched over and cared for. With such a secure feeling you need not build your own wall of protection that keeps away pain, as well as happiness.

This week, journal what you hope to accomplish in this mortal life. What are you striving for? What is consuming your energy? Find a few minutes every day to be quiet; to allow; to rebuild trust and faith. What stage of this mortal life are you now? What have you learned? What benefit is there to feel that anticipation of adventure for the next stage? Can you be that child who puts not so much effort into the striving, but just open to being shown. I am going to take a few questions.

SIMON: Yes, Abraham, thank you so much for the lesson. Again, I am very excited about the learning that will be going on because of it. Iyana has been on my mind and I wonder what message you might have for me or from her. [Iyana has been Simon’s (unseen) personal Teacher.]

ABRAHAM: The message is of a personal nature. Would you want to save that for another time? Your choice. (Simon: That is okay. Go ahead.) Abraham: I am perceiving you to have some unsolved issues that have brought you disappointment, which has created some anger and resentment. It would do you well to journal these thoughts. Be honest with yourself and take appropriate steps towards bringing them out into the open. I perceive you to feel some self-disappointment that has been difficult for you to bear and has weakened your confidence. This, however, is truly good in a way that humility is becoming your teacher. Iyana is fully aware of this and will continue to work with you in solving these issues so you can move forward in a more pure mind and intention. That is all. Another question?

ROINDA: As of late I have been struggling with both mental and physical health. I would just like some guidance as to how I can get reconnected so that I can start to get back on a path to improve both.

ABRAHAM: Understood. I perceive one condition is causing the other. Roinda, my daughter, it is understood that you have always been a woman of great faith. I understand that somewhere along the line the logical part of you pushed forward and demanded to fit your faith within a logical frame, and this took away a great deal of possibilities. Your experience, however, has been just as it should have been. I perceive that you are somewhat lost in identity. You give a great deal of yourself and that is beautiful, but difficult to nurture that growing spirit within. You have done well, believe me, and the time has come for you to be free from that confining frame of total logic and that safety-net of always being within the knowingness. Do not lose sight of that 'child of God self' who also needs to feel that comfort of a Father's love. While logic and practicality are important in this mortal life, it is dead without faith and trust in a being that loves you more than you can comprehend. To become uplifted in spirit will aid you in your depression and those mental instabilities, which should also aid in your physical healing. You are on a correct path in seeking fellowship with like-minds. Is this helping? (Roinda: Yes. It helps a lot. Thanks.) Abraham: You're welcome? One more question?

TECTRA: Abraham, you talked earlier in the lesson about 'the more busy the mind is the more difficult it is to make contact.' As you know, I meditate twice a day. I get pretty still and I don't really hear anything; but, I feel contact from the Father, a loving energy. I guess I'm just saying that I would like to hear something, some type of words, to hear a teacher – or something like that. Is there something, some words you can give me of what I can do, that would facilitate that?

ABRAHAM: My son, everyone will receive Spirit guidance in the way that is most comfortable for them. At this time, to hear anything would be somewhat disturbing. [laughter, and Tectra agrees.] You are a visual person. You have excellent communion and, for the most part, have a constant walk with Father. You easily minister to your fellows if need be. You are listening, yes, but to 'inner feelings' more than sounds, which is wonderful. You do well. You have a great deal you can teach others about the silencing of the mind. Yes, well done.

With that, I will bid you, farewell. I give you each my ever-growing love and would have you know, anytime you should need me I would be available. Peace be with you. Until next week, shalom.

Allow Yourself Room To Grow And To Make Mistakes Without The Stifling Anchors Of Guilt

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-17-2001

Back

I am ABRAHAM. How easy is our communication when all minds are in such a giving state. Your intentions and energy bring you these words (our teachings). Your willingness to learn and also minister to your fellows is truly touching. I am inspired to become more when I am with you. I am in gratitude to your allowance.

I remember in my mortal state, striving for what I believed to be perfection; to be less than what I perceived to be perfect was unacceptable. I gave a great deal of energy towards disguising my imperfect ways. My self-punishment was worse than what I really deserved. I was loath to appear foolish to my fellows. I had developed a great deal of tricks to rationalize my imperfections. Believe me, this took so much more energy than to simply admit I had made mistakes.

In being fully present within this mortal life we do tend to look over our shoulders quite often; unfortunately, we seem to really care about how people perceive us. Those that 'it appears' make the least mistakes seem to be the most popular. It is difficult to imagine that at this point in time we would not all believe that every one of us is fallible.

We do strive for perfection, and to fall short of that is more discouraging to the ego than to the growing spirit within. To batter the self is creating more of a landslide of struggle; it is losing self-confidence and not feeling at home in the world. To chastise the ego, however, is somewhat helpful when done in humor, but to beat upon the essence of 'who you really are' is spiritually stifling.

From the time you were children you could easily see that being with flaws somehow took love away from you; as children, that is the last thing you want to lose. The absence of love is terrible loneliness and the sense of being lost. Children do learn how to adapt, however, and cover-over those mistakes, those wrong choices. Experiencing the outcome of wrong choices is the best teacher, but more often than not was there a respected adult with a shameful chastisement.

In rerouting the mindset of this planet towards Light and Life, we are hoping to teach you that mistakes are inevitable. You were not born with all the knowledge you need, no. A child grows best if allowed room to understand their mistakes, to be allowed to correct them without feelings of shame. Of course, a loving guide is helpful in pointing out the correct way instead of focusing on what was so wrong.

Mortals grow best in a state of non-pressure. Guidance, yes! Pressure, no! What kind and loving divine guidance do we have here in this Mission-group? There is no projection of guilt thrust upon us, no, only a subtle glance of the mistake and an allowance for understanding; there is room to grow, room to correct and to make the right decision.

Our divine caretakers are not pressured by time. They do not impose time-limits on us, why would we be so brutal with our mortal selves? Can we allow ourselves the same room to gain understanding and grow? How better might we direct our energy rather than using it to cover our imperfections? Are those we seek to hide our imperfections from, perfect? Do we allow others to make mistakes? Do we allow them room to grow? or do we 'serve' by chastising them for their mistakes.

I understand that some individuals seem to be unreachable, and a shocking word now and then seems to bring about some conscience. But if you can take yourself back to that small child who feared loss of love because of misdeeds, you can see what type of action would serve best.

As mortals, you are all in a state of becoming – you are not there yet. But in 'wanting to be shown' you are every day moving into your highest potentials. You cannot force growth, for in doing so you can make the struggle of mortal life much worse. You can, however, realize you are dealing with much more than ego – there is that growing soul, that personality essence, and that Father Fragment, within.

The Master was a beautifully integrated being. He was so aligned with the Father's will that His mistakes were really quite few. He acted from a place of self-forgetfulness. He worried not about other's opinions of Him. He sought to please only one – His Father in heaven. That is everything, children. That is the beginning to perfection. That is taking off the pressure to allow room for understanding, and growth.

This week I am requesting you read on morontia mota in your Urantia Books. Yes. I have not time for questions, perhaps next week. Know that I am available should you need me in your journaling time. Listen for me. Know that I am with ever-expanding love for you each. Until next week, shalom.

Intentional Living | The Cost of Spiritual Progress

Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-24-2001

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am in gratitude this evening for the comforting energy here in this group. I think back when we first began, we were nothing more than acquaintances; now I feel as though you each are my siblings in this family kingdom. As I know you more, my love increases. I have learned a great deal being your teacher. I am moved by your dedication to upholding Michael's enhancements for the world.

When I review the morontia mota I am made to ponder how we become more of who we really are. Mota is about being challenged to do your very best for the good of the whole.

This Mansion World philosophy (mota) teaches us that we are integral parts of the universe, unique and with purpose. And while we are feeling more of a part of the whole we can see how our individuality adds in a divine way – not in a self-serving way, no. I give you, Emulan.

EMULAN: Greetings, friends. I too, am honored to be a branch on this family tree. Most of you know my story of when I wore the mortal flesh. I experienced a great deal of personal tragedy – which led to mental illness, which led to my profession as a psychiatrist. I desire this evening to speak a few words on intentional living.

As I was coming out of the darkness of my personal tragedy, I believed that I was a victim of mortal life – that I had no control over it; it just happened and I only had to play along. My life was quite mundane. I lived mostly in fear of ‘life happening to me.’ I practically hid from everyday living. I took no risks.

I always made effort to protect myself. I gave nothing; therefore, I got nothing. Life was just about passing time – just moving towards the inevitable end. I had no sorrow, but I also had no joy. Believe me, I was terribly lonely. To risk moving on forward with life put me at risk to facing pain all over again. I prayed for relief from my non-existent existence. What was the point in living this mortal life?

As I prayed, as I studied, my vision expanded. I began taking small steps toward being fully ‘present’ in this mortal life. I worried less about real life-circumstances crashing down on me – I wanted to truly live and live well. I became with the understanding that experience was my best teacher, and to hide from it meant no progression – not really so much pain, but also no joy. There is a price to pay for spiritual advancement – there is a cost, yes.

My friends, you must be willing to live life on purpose, to live intentionally, experiencing the full spectrum from birth to death. Are we victims of the mortal life? No, we are partakers of a spiritual destiny. Does life just happen to us? Sometimes, yes. Do we meet it with passivity? No. We are challengers in this mortal life. We most definitely direct destiny. We have responsibility towards our growth, the growth of our fellows, and the growth of our God-in-time. Life may ‘just happen’ to us, but we also ‘happen’ to life.

When we live intentionally, we practice being fully present and aware in each moment. We experience spiritual poisons, yes, but also do we experience spiritual fruits. We challenge loneliness with a hopeful attitude. We challenge hate with the belief in prevailing love. We challenge prejudice with actions toward justice. We challenge depression with faith. We challenge our self-loathing with our belief in a divine parentage that loves us with the power of eternity.

We are not victims of life but challengers climbing that divine staircase toward our full potential wherein you have power. You know that in intentional living we can exert our personal power toward achieving wonderful things. We can have the power to exhaust our human resources, to make effort without fear, and know that the final outcome should align with our Father's will.

I am in gratitude for this understanding of this energy that helped me to excel in my mortal life, as well as the spiritual. My gratitude, friends. I leave you to Abraham.

ABRAHAM: We thank you our friend, coworker and brother, Emulan, for your words regarding intentional living. This week I ask you to take time for journaling. Ask yourselves: "What aspects of life do I find myself hiding from? What is consuming my thoughts? What is that which takes me away from present moment awareness?" Think about the goals you might strive for and what fearful obstacles may chance to come your way. What old 'internal patterns' may keep you a victim instead of a challenger of life? A few questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, we welcome Dave back. Also, Mary Joe and Dorinda from New Mexico.

ABRAHAM: Welcome. I am happy to be with you this evening, my friends. Be at ease to ask any questions.

DAVE P.: There are some financial, legal problems going on in my life. My life has been through a lot of upheaval. I just have some concerns, worries. I guess I was hoping you could say something to make me feel better. I am really quite stressed out.

ABRAHAM: Understood. I do not know much about your material aspects and difficulties, but perhaps I can offer you some spiritual comfort. My friend, I see you standing at the lake of faith – while you are still testing the waters, you have not dared to dive in. This is understandable. But also, without faith, other aspects of mortal living are made more difficult. Without belief in someone greater than ourselves we are utterly alone and the mortal burdens are much more difficult to bear. I see that you have great potential in living a faith-filled life. While Father may not do much to assist you with release from your financial difficulties, He can provide you with understanding on how to cope with difficulties and the stress therefrom. Definitely, with Father all things are possible, and He, without a doubt, gave us life that we may have abundance, materially and spiritually, yes. He knows your difficulties but cannot coax you into full faith by solving your mortal difficulties. You must first possess the faith. Most mortals can only find that unwavering faith when they have lost all else. This is not necessary. While you may not trust in your fellow man, you can most definitely trust in our divine caretakers – for they are not like anyone you have ever known. Until your faith and trust is actuated, they can only be involved so much in your life. This should be a good springboard for you to use to dive in. Another question?

NATHAN: Abraham, speaking of faith, I feel that my experiences in the last four months have redirected me, has helped me to find solace and peace and the unknown in Father's will. And I'd like to ask how am I doing? What are my next steps? And can you call me by my spiritual name?

ABRAHAM: You are doing wonderfully, my son. You have experienced severe pain and difficulty – and yet, you are made better. You could have easily blamed God and attributed a cruelty to His mortal plan in your life, but you are a challenger – you dare to look at life's challenges as a stepping stone to greater things to come. One moment. My son, you are known as Seth to those on high. You could perhaps direct your focus towards reviewing those truths in your life that have served you well while making attempts to recognize those life patterns that are obstacles to you now. Your calming demeanor will be a wonderful attraction to those needing to hear the good news. Yes. Well done, my son, Seth.

MIRIAM: Abraham, I don't know if Emulan is still around. I really appreciate his sharing of where he has been. I know what it is like to come from a dark place. I find that whenever I share places that I have been – I don't know if it is the way I do it or what, but it seems people don't know what to do with it; perhaps they don't believe I have, in reality, been there. It is hard to share those things, and I appreciate him sharing. I just want him to know how grateful I am.

ABRAHAM: Understood, and as Emulan just related to me, beautifully said. You are heard. I believe you have assisted a great many lives with your daringness to share. Emulan has often expressed that 'for him,' sharing is quite therapeutic; and as he has shared, he has found the very presence of Father, and His healing. He also thanks you, Miriam. One more question?

DORINDA: I am thrilled to be close to you again and I am delighted to be here. You have been through some difficult situations with me and helping me, giving me guidance on relationships with other people. I am really excited about next week and I want to thank you.

ABRAHAM: Elaina, my daughter, without your willingness to experience life in every aspect you would not be where you are now. It was your diligence and hard work that has been so helpful. Your opening to the Spirit has shown you those meanings and values that has given you greater understanding. You have also inspired me, and I thank you, Elaina, my daughter. I am about to take my leave. Is there something pressing?

DAVE E.: Abraham, I was wondering - in the lesson tonight, Emulan spoke of the cost of spiritual progress? Could you elaborate on that?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. The greatest cost of spiritual progress is perhaps the laying down of the ego. In mortal-living, the ego feels valuable, but after this life it is not needed or valued. The cost of spiritual progress is perhaps the willingness to sometimes appear foolish to your fellows while trying to be close to God. The cost is the willingness to know true humility. The cost is being self-forgetful when you are really craving attention and credit. You can live an entire mortal life and still not be willing to pay this price. That is completely acceptable. That is why we have the Mansion Worlds, for there we have options; there, there is no pressure. The Christian churches, however, would have you believe that Christ had paid the ultimate price for you, and that if you can live within their laws, you will surely gain entrance into heaven - "saved." We are trying to correct that thinking - that Jesus did not so much pay a price for your salvation but opened a door for you to find your own. When we speak of 'paying a price towards spiritual advancement,' this does stir up some fear; and most will struggle throughout their life to reconcile themselves toward daring to lose the self so that they may be saved. Christ did pay a price, yes, but it was very much positive. How he lived his life was His best aid in our living the mortal life. The cost is self-forgetfulness, selflessness. The reward for such a small price paid has no words to describe the eternal magnitude of it.

And with that, I am slipping and will take my leave. I wish you spiritual comfort and peace over this holiday season, and that you reap the wonderful benefits from a Spirit-led life. My love goes with you. Shalom.

To Live On Purpose is a Challenge / Our Mistakes Have Been Our Greatest Lessons

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Your group is, literally, a bright light on the planet. Your willingness to keep pursuing the spiritual life is always an inspiration to me. It is small groups such as this that will create great change. Even though you are all quite different, you each have common goals.

As the New Year approaches, many of you will make resolutions and goals to work toward throughout the year. While this is commendable, many times it is somewhat of a disappointment when these goals are not fulfilled – and there it is we find 'yet another thing to regret about ourselves.' When you focus on living intentionally, 'living on purpose,' you are committed to having any experience that comes your way – good or bad. You are committed to being willing to experience and learn, and grow from it.

You that are students of these morontial lessons; and others, who are committed to fight the good fight of faith, are co-creators in destiny. To be a co-creator you must allow yourselves to be spirit led. Without divine guidance, we would surely live an existence of chaos and disorder. In the willingness to be spirit led we find comfort and confidence to move about in the world – to live intentionally and to be a 'participator' instead of a spectator. To live 'on purpose' you commit to Father that you can do the kingdom work for the sole purpose of glorifying Him.

Tonight I would say a few words on 'living a life of regret.' To be regretful of a past experience is to invalidate yourself as a learning spiritual being. To continually replay those remorseful mistakes in your mind keeps you from living life intentionally. Those regretful experiences keep you in fear of venturing towards new avenues in mortal living. Regret is heavy and binding, and not in the present moment awareness.

Certainly we are accountable for all our actions, yes; but to be so fear-stricken by some regretful past experience is to close off to the new. Your experience has been your best teacher. Your mistakes have been assignments. Those experiences you most regret have taught you the greatest lessons. Some individuals can be so regretful of missed opportunities or chances not taken – that they spend a lifetime in self-punishment. This is not liberty and allowing growth; this is discouraging and taking away personal confidence.

I realize you must make decisions every day, and all you can hope for is that you were spirit-led in them. There is no doubt you will make mistakes. Do not allow those mistakes to weigh you down with regret, taking from you your God-given right to have liberty.

Yes, live intentionally. Allow yourselves to be spirit led. Know that mistakes are inevitable but do not discourage that spirit within to keep pursuing that divine path. Have the courage to be held accountable for your actions. You do whatever it takes to correct, yes, but do not allow regret to take from you your feelings of worthiness and confidence as a beloved child of God. Do not allow those past dark clouds of regret to keep hanging over you, blocking out new light.

There was a man who had a disagreement with his father. It was really quite meaningless and petty, but these two individuals did not have anything more to do with each other. The obstinacy of the two individuals had taken away many years of what could have been a loving and uplifting relationship. This man's father had died without them ever having resolved these issues.

Of course, the man was quite regretful and with a great amount self-loathing; most every day he came across one thing or another that would remind him how petty and small he had been with his father. The pain and regret was soulfully, crushing. He tried to make excuses for his behavior but he found those empty and dissatisfying. He attempted to put the blame of the disintegrating relationship onto his stubborn father – but that also proved to be creating further unresolved issues.

The man's regret led to seeking avenues of escape. He became an alcoholic and was abusive to his wife and children. This also led to him losing his family, and again facing further regret. Had this man been spiritually stable he could have perhaps taken these steps towards healing, instead. Facing the fact that 'he himself' had been petty and small in the first place would have been crushing to the ego, yes, but opening up the learning spirit. The man could have realized he is an imperfect being and admitted he was ego-led. He could have accepted the challenge that humility brings.

Humility is an opening for God to reach the child-soul. Instead of regretting, the man should have faced the realities of what really happened and simply grieved – grieved for as long as he needed to. Praying for understanding and guidance would have been another great assistance to him. Yes, the man would have had regret, but in facing it courageously he could have dealt with it in the moment – he could find that place where he could challenge regret, and not have regret 'control him.'

This man could have bravely held himself accountable for his wrong actions and put them honestly before God. Will God punish him? No. Father will, however, show him those areas that need improvement. Father will enhance understanding and show the reasons why a bereaved son acted in the manner that he did. This is a process, really, to work through – to guard against the weight of being regretful and going through with self-punishment.

In living intentionally, is to go forth with spiritual power and purpose as an adult in the kingdom. Be not afraid of the hiding child within, who is dragging a heavy bag of regrets with eyes toward the ground feeling separated from God and the world. Move with forward purpose, not with backward regret. Be not afraid to be held accountable for your decisions and actions.

This is all a part of the adventure, children. You are not an ignorant victim of the mortal life, no, you are intelligent spiritual-seeking challengers. Do not allow regret to lead to more regret, more mistakes. Heal those regretful moments with Father at the time they happen. Our fellow from the story could have avoided alcoholism and the loss of his family had he dealt with the present regret.

My friends, the closer you are to the spiritual life, the more you will walk with spiritual comfort and confidence. The more you feel at home in the world, the more you will trust in Father and your ability to be Spirit-led. Put your human regrets into a spiritual perspective – that they are merely lessons that probably most everyone who dwells in this mortal body will experience at one time or another.

I am unable to take questions this evening, but I would ask you to journal this week's lesson contemplations: Are there unresolved regrets that burden you down and keep you in a cycle of further regret? Is there further self-punishment? What steps can you take toward freeing yourself from that burden that takes from you your self-confidence, your spiritual comfort? What mortal habits or actions are you engaging in to cover-over the pain of past regret – and how can you break free? Know that always my love is increasing each time we meet. Until next week, shalom.

2002 MANSION WORLD TEACHINGS

Self-Empowerment | The Good Farmer | What or Who Do We Allow To Control Us
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-07-2002

Back

[Ellanor, the transmitter receiver, expresses she is feeling off-balance, physically.]

I am ABRAHAM. Sorry for the delay – and yet, it is another good reason to take care of the mortal vehicle that you possess. With physical discomforts, it is difficult to find spirit connection. As we begin in this new year, with all our high hopes and expectations, let us remember to tend to the wellness of the physical body. Physical wellness and mental stability are linked, and to promote well-being in one does aid the other.

As we discuss 'intentional living,' we can't forget to touch upon the aspects of self-empowerment. When we are caught up in being regretful, our focus is distorted. We find that we are always attempting to atone for our past mistakes. We never really catch up to the present to partake of the 'new' flavors of living because we are still chewing on the past.

Children, what do you really have control over? Do you live this mortal life as if you are being forced to gain your eternal experience? Or, are you desiring to live this mortal life because you really want to.

Many in today's world feel forced to do this or that – to live this way or that way, feeling indebted to one thing or another. "I am forced to work so that I may fund my living expenses." "I am forced to parent because I choose to have kids." "I am forced to care for my elderly parents because they cared for me as a child," I say, this is not intentional living; there is no measure of joy in this. Where is the satisfaction in 'paying your dues' to attain this or that?

There are many cycles of life you must experience, but Father does not want you to drag yourself through them halfheartedly, no. The perspective of these life-cycles is distorted because the focus is all about end results: "What will this get me? Where will this take me?" In this thinking, there is not joy in the learning; there is no satisfaction found in the effort.

A great many human acts in one's daily living should be perceived as sacred, as acts to glorifying Father. In the 'present moment awareness' you find Father. In finding Father we find purpose – purpose for carrying out even the most mundane of duties.

A farmer, who had solely focused on money, took a great many shortcuts in running his farm. He used the lowest quality grain and foliage to feed his animals, which produced a lower quality product. He shorted the hired hands who worked for him their fair share. His drive for money was understandable because that is what showed him how successful he was as a farmer and as a man. Needless to say, his lower quality products did not fare well in the marketplace. His employees did not give their best work. As a result, he made no profit and found no joy in daily living.

As the farmer grew in spirit and wisdom (which by the way, did not come easy) he was literally brought to his knees through experience. He found that his focus on money had kept him always in a state of further reaching, always in a state of desire without true everyday-living satisfaction. He began to run his farm fairly, using good quality grain, treating his animals with a sacred attitude, giving his employee's the respect and a sort of nurturing that only a father could give.

This certainly did create a wonderful family atmosphere which made the employee's look forward to going to work every day. They looked forward to this family connection. They gave their best effort to the overall success of the farmer. What was good for one was good for all. The farmer found great satisfaction in this loyalty and comfort he received from his employee's. He found Father in these connections with each. He found happiness and real meaning – yes, real satisfaction that money cannot buy.

The money came. The farmer hardly took notice of his material wealth because his spiritual wealth was fulfilling and joy-producing, and always continuing to strengthen him. His own success was of no importance as compared to the success of all he had come into contact with. He lived intentionally, with spiritual purpose and power from on high.

The changed man did not any longer go about his day with 'drudgery because he was forced,' no. He was not a victim of mortal life, no. He was not feeling controlled by a superior being, no. With his new perspective and change of heart, he was in control. He was in control of the only thing he could be in control of – and that was himself; yes, his perspective and his outlook on the world – in the flesh and beyond. He found meaning, and therefore, he found joy. He lived not to only 'pass the time' but to 'use time' to get the most out of time, and it was all measured by the meaning received and the joy produced.

I do not say there were not difficulties that the farmer experienced, of course there were. But in his wanting to live life to the fullest, he felt as though he was a co-creator – not so much being forced, controlled or pressured into experiencing, no.

You, my friends, are freewill children of the loving First Source and Center. You are not forced to live the mortal life. Many actually opt out, yes – but you, our Mission students, definitely have control in how you perceive this mortal life, and your place in it. You have control over your actions; over your own spiritual destiny. You have control over how you influence other's lives.

You really do have great responsibility in this life, yes. Do not live as though you must 'conform to the divine plan or suffer the consequences.' Live as though you are part of a magnificent spiritual team who is planning and experiencing destiny.

What is the measure of your joy? What really has control over you? Are you controlled by guilt or regret? Are you controlled by spouses, parents, or children? Perhaps you are controlled by what you think others are thinking about you. Perhaps you are controlled by your own weaknesses. To feel 'out of control' is to feel victimized by this life; it is to feel forced into living each and every grueling day as if 'your desires' do not matter.

My friends, you are empowered from on high to experience this great adventure in the flesh. You do have control over the direction of your life. Your desires are known and are a part of the grand design. Your happiness is important, and very much desired by your Father.

Ponder these words. Take control of your lives and live life with intention. Be spiritually empowered to move through the world as if you really desire to, not as if you are forced, no. Father did not design this grand adventure to force His freewill creatures to experience it. Know that everyday tasks are truly sacred activities to be 'savored' - not 'suffered through.' Journal those actions you may be driven towards from feeling disempowered or 'out of control.'

We will forgo questions this evening. Know, my friends, that you are empowered to receive all the answers you will ever need. I am with ever-increasing love for you each. I am honored and with full desire to experience this adventure with you. Until next week, shalom.

A New World | Not A Man's World and Not A Woman's World, but Father's World
Abraham & Mother, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-14-2002
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Being with you is such a reason to be glad. I always learn each time we are together. I am made more - and for that, I thank you.

You, as a group spiritually unified in heart and mind, are such a bright light in this area. The events soon to take place here [the Winter Olympics in Salt Lake City] will be a wonderful opportunity to put into practice all that you have learned. This area is not about a dominant religious sect, no - it is about the spiritual kingdom as a whole; equal in all ways are its participants.

You that live intentionally, will find yourselves with spiritual assignments; awareness and flexibility should be your main focus. There is a certain joy that comes with kingdom work, there is a closeness with Father that gives you the comfort of having knowledge - not feeling lost and alone but comfort that there is a time and purpose for all things.

Among the apostles of Jesus' day were two average men. Their education was basic and their awareness somewhat limited, but their desire to serve was completely real and beautiful to behold. The Alpheus twins took the greatest joy in even the smallest of tasks – while the seemingly more knowledgeable and more outspoken apostles looked for the more important tasks in the kingdom work.

The Alpheus twins were focused less on glorifying the self, and more on becoming integrated as a team member. They viewed all tasks as part of the kingdom work, none more important than another. They worked out of their simple but pure love for God and their Master. They could always be found ready for any assignment.

The twins were about working collectively for the common goal ahead, without thought of their gain. These quiet simple men did as much to promote the kingdom growth as any of the apostles. They learned the Master's teachings and they lived it – lived it to the fullest. The twins set a beautiful example to all that knew them, yes.

Greetings, children. I am your MOTHER. What a wonderful opportunity we have here to become better acquainted and refocus on the goals ahead.

When I see the earthly mothers of Urantia tending to the busyness of life, I am made to smile. Many mothers are hard-working, self-sacrificing, and always promoting well-being – and they will also be the first to tell you that they are. [group laughter.] My daughters are hardworking and do a great deal without recognition that promotes the well-being of family and home life.

In this changing world we also view our mothers and daughters in positions of authority and professions that, mostly, men have had. Women have envied men for their unlimited way with the world. And now that women are finding themselves with more opportunity, they should not seek to play a man's role in a man's position, but their own spiritually-flavored personalities in an unlabeled position.

This is a new world – always evolving, always moving. Each one of you, my sons and daughters, have opportunity to participate in the new world. It is not a man's world; it is not a woman's world – it is our beloved Father's world. The set roles that individuals play are becoming blurred – with new vision, new insight. There is no hierarchy among men and women among enlightened Urantian citizens. We must learn that all the roles are new and open to anyone. Is a woman's place in the home? Yes, but so is a man's.

The point I am making is that each individual is gifted in one way or another to fill a human role. No position is better than another, and these roles are ever-changing; you may wear the hat of an employee today, and you may wear a hat of a retired volunteer, tomorrow. We need not stay stuck in ever-repeating cycles that have already been used, been experienced.

I am not labeled by a limited feminine position, no. I am called to fulfill many varying duties for the kingdom. I find myself always tending to one thing or another wherever I am needed. I find great joy in each task. I rejoice in the fact that our Creator Son enables me to do more, to be more – as I also enable Him.

Nothing in the mortal life ever really stays the same, but many tend to become depressed in their impatience. Their mind is clouded with past beliefs, or their fearful thinking keeps them stuck in their particular situation. This world is new, and you do have the training to promote this newness – to cross roles, to minister wherever you are. Your mind is what limits your possibilities.

Living intentionally means finding freedom in limitations of the mind. How you perceive life becomes your reality. When you can perceive life with spiritual eyes and with that excitement of anticipation – then, do your possibilities expand; you will find yourselves wearing many hats, playing many roles.

You are all gifted in one way or another. What are those gifts and how can they work in the kingdom? Know that those things that you are gifted at, you truly enjoy doing. With each gifted person, there is the reason we can say, ‘Knowing you, truly makes me more.’

We, together, serve the many aspects of the kingdom. I would like to help you, each who desire, to find your gifts and talents – and, how you may use them to promote good in the new world. Look for me in your quiet moments. Journal your thoughts on these words and know that your Mother stands by. My love is with you.

I am ABRAHAM. We thank you, Mother, for your upholding presence in our existence. Your duties span far and wide. We are inspired to take up your example. A few questions?

CALVIN: What a blessing and a gift to have our Universe Mother address us here tonight. We thank you, Mother. We welcome LaReen/Inera back tonight. Kathy McCord asks if you would like to give her an assessment.

ABRAHAM: Greetings Inera (LaReen). We welcome you, our friend and coworker. Yes, an assessment for Kathy. One moment. I am aware of you, my daughter, your struggles, your triumphs, your desires, yes. I would at this time recommend you to review your beliefs in who you really are. What is important to you? What have you sacrificed to attain these things? My understanding is that you are quite confused on what it is you really want. Your focus is on what you are lacking. Your vision is confused on what you really desire. Your ideas are confused on how to attain your desires. You have some unfinished business with the past that can be worked through to find out why your desires are staying out of reach. You need not stay stuck in repetitive patterns of the past, no! you can easily move forward when you finally discover who you truly are – what your purpose is in the world; what your intentions are; and, how does this all fit into the spiritual life. Ponder these words. We will talk again. That is all.

CALVIN: Abraham, do you have any words to help Ellanor with her neck? She won't ask so I will ask for her.

ABRAHAM: I don't know where to begin. There are medical factors to be investigated, yes, but, Ellanor, you know full well that you live behind many masks. This is not honest to Father, yourself, or to those who know you. The burden of wearing the masks are physically and mentally detrimental. I would advise you to come true with the outstanding issues in your life at this time. That is all.

INERA: Abraham, I would just like to say how grateful I am to be back here with this group for a minute. Also, I would like to express my appreciation to all the Teachers; the transmission-receivers; the transcribers; and the people who host the meetings in their homes. I don't think they are told often enough how much they are appreciated.

ABRAHAM: True, Inera. Well said. Yes, we are also grateful. We must remember – all those who listen and try to live these lessons, which you are one of, my daughter – that your support is crucial to continuing these lessons and to promote the changing times in the new world. We also thank you.

SARAUNA: Abraham, what do you think of the National Geographic article that you were featured in last month? Thirty-nine pages. How accurate is that article about you? [The article was titled: Abraham, Father of Many Nations.]

TR: I swear he is laughing. [group laughter.]

ABRAHAM: Amusing, to say the least. I would say, it is about fifty-percent accurate. I was just an average ordinary man – but yes, who has received a great deal of credit for many of the religions of today. This is such an example of how one person can affect history. You each will most likely do more than I have ever done, and it will be good, but probably not newsworthy. I played a role in mankind's societal evolution. Evolution can be harsh and sometimes negative, but always growth-promoting. My superiors helped where they could, to create the article to promote awareness toward the Correcting Time, yes, to create unity among the world's people. Many of you will be counselors and guides in directing this new world toward intelligent spirituality and practicality – not mysticism and superiority. Thank you, Sarauna.

JESSE: You have been talking about the new world. We have a friend who also claims to receive transmitted messages from Jesus, who I find very trustworthy and talks of the new world coming, and with the loss of most of our egos; and all this happening in the next ten years. I am wondering if that is true, and what my spiritual name is? If it is feminine, does that mean that I am always feminine or does it change when I move to the next world/life? Also, is there anything you can tell us about Seth's hip?

ABRAHAM: Most changes in this new world should be occurring because of loss of ego. I cannot, however, give a time frame – but yes, for the most part, correct. Brianne is your spiritual name, and that is as close as I can pronounce it using the English language. There will be a slight difference in sound once you have gone from this world, yes. Feminine or not, it makes no difference. Seth's hip should be tended to by a physician, no doubt, but also I perceive there to be some vitamin and mineral deficiency that will help, yes, if he would increase his intake of vitamins and minerals.

TR: He is saying, is there other health issues or something that is a health problem also, but that you don't think goes with your hip problem? Is there something else?

SETH: My hands are aching and there is a bump developed in my left hand. I have had it quite a while.

ABRAHAM: Have not worry, because this will add to your burden; but if possible, seek medical advice. Your medical difficulties can be helped by a physician. I am sorry I cannot say more. Do not have worry. (Seth: Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome.

With that, I will take my leave. Know that I am with ever-growing love for you each and rejoice in our union. Find time to journal Mother's lesson, and forget not you have legions of hosts and helpers. Until next week, shalom.

Group Fellowship | All Are Gifted In A Way That Assists The Whole

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-21-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. It is such a wonderful feeling to be together each week. In the busyness of everyday living, we tend to become somewhat lost or disconnected from Spirit. Your fellowship is a tool for rallying each one's personal faith and becoming strengthened for the week ahead. Your willingness to share experience always helps somebody. To be open and honest about life's realities, aids those who hear you and, helps us all to feel a part of the kingdom.

You each have gifts that tend to the wellness of the whole:

- Perhaps one of you is a good listener and shows compassion and yet, does not enable one to be weak but become strengthened and inspired to carry on.
- Perhaps one of you may be quite skilled in the knowledge of the Urantia Book and is able to give references to aid in life circumstances.
- There are those of you who have a heightened sense of justice and can bring about group solution in a non-biased manner.
- There are those of you in this group who emanate a peace and calm that is contagious to those around you. In this peaceful example, you help others to find their own God within.
- There are those of you in this group who are wonderful organizers and instigators of new projects. You help to bring our celestial mission to a human useable level.
- There are those of you with the gift of speech and often do well as a group spokesman.
- There are those of you in this group who are deep-thinkers and always have a wonderful perspective to share that guides towards logic and practicality, straying away from mysticism and perhaps self-deceit or denial.

When you add up these gifts just in this room there is definitely a great deal of power and influence in this Correcting Time. There is so much good that can come from just one group. You are each strengthened by one another. Your dedication to gathering weekly, confirms your faith and strengthens your collective foundation. You heal one another. You inspire one another. You minister to each other with spirit-guidance. That, is spiritual power. That, is intentional living. That, is growth-promoting, and creating hopeful feelings that you are really living this mortal life, not just being dragged through it.

The group is your tool, just as the Urantia Book is. You have a great deal to gain from one another here. Not to say that there is not much to gain from outside the group, no; I am speaking of - where there is something lacking, you can find fulfillment here. For example, those that have not known a loving parent may perhaps meet such a role-model here in the group. Where one has not been a parent, there is experience to be gained from those in the group. Where there is lack, there is fulfillment here. One who has not known a true friend will most likely find one here. One that does not know how to be a true friend will most likely find a wonderful example of one here.

My friends, most of you have not experienced a typical healthy childhood and have a great many issues to be healed. Through your willingness to share, heal and be healed, there will be fulfillment and satisfaction; there will be experience to be gained from one another; there will be tools to be shared in experiencing everyday life. Yes, where there is such power in fellowship, there is such feelings of confidence being part of a family unit.

Where one may be imbalanced in spiritual thinking, there is balance to be gained from the group. Where there is low self-esteem, there is acceptance and love to be found within the group. Where there is pain, there is consolation. Where there is depression, there is light. Where there is doubt, there is faith; yes, all within your weekly meeting. You sleep when you are tired. You eat when you are hungry. You communicate with your brethren and sisters when you feel empty. Yes, there is powerful wisdom to be gained in your unity. It is most likely here in this group that your gifts will be fostered to use in everyday living.

If you can compare the Teaching Mission to other church organizations – you find that all feel equal with one another in the Mission, where in an average church setting there is hierarchy. In the average religions there ‘appears’ to be some closer to God than others. In the Mission, we know all have ability to be equally close with Father.

Our message is positive and uplifting – not guilt-promoting and teaching atonement for being your natural selves. Our message is tying spiritual and mortal life together in harmony – not having one or the other to prove your worthiness to enter into heaven. We teach the power of Michael's Spirit of Truth shedding light on those dark places – discussing it, learning from it, and finding solutions; not covering-over with so-called spiritual ecstasy that can be found in some religions.

You, the people, make up this Teaching Mission. It is by your will that we are here, that we are moving forward.

There are many good qualities about today's churches, yes, but there is so much more for people to learn – and one of those things is that God is a fair and loving ‘nurturer,’ not a stern and angry jealous parent. It would be quite beautiful to behold when the churches can teach that all experience is valuable, not to believe it is a smile or a frown from heaven. Also, that we are always in a state of growth and very much loved beyond our own comprehension.

This week, it would be beneficial to study the gifts and duties of the apostles of old. How were each one's contributions helping to promote the wellness of the whole? Make time to communicate with one another. Reach out to your family members here in this group.

No questions this evening. Know that I am always inspired by your steps to make sure I am welcomed here each week. I appreciate your devotion and effort. Know that always my love is ever growing for you each. Until next week, shalom.

The Examples Of Jesus | Apostles and the Women`s Corps In Unity

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-28-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Thank you for the prayer. What a wonderful way to become centered and unified. Lo these many years, I have seen such wonderful power put into action through your fellowship. There have been hard feelings, hard lessons, yes, but always has logic and love prevailed enough to keep you making effort - effort towards the common good of the whole, yes.

What I really enjoyed about the study on the apostles is that where one was lacking, there was another to compensate. Where one was downcast, there was one to bring humor. Where one was trapped in negativity, there was always one to point out the positive. I enjoyed their teamship, their trust in one another, their common love for the Master and an unseen Father.

It was beautiful to behold the non-rivalry of the siblings - Andrew and Peter. Where one brother was shy, the other was outspoken. Where one was disorganized, the other was quite capable at organization. Where one was apt to take rash actions, the other was standing firm in practicality. They had no envy for one another when one was better at some things than the other. They each truly believed that even though they were not gifted at one thing they were glad they had a brother who was.

When I think about this era of time on Urantia, I see that the Master chose certain decisions and actions because He was to set examples for the universe as a whole. He tended to the common man as well as the pride-filled man. He welcomed the educated man as well as the simple man.

The Master incorporated the women apostles as a part of the evangelical corps as if this were not anything out of the ordinary. He did assign some tasks here and there - but for the most part, He had seen, with time, each one's personal gift and allowed them to take that role on as their own.

The women were skilled at compassion for the sick and afflicted. They were daring to go to a darker side of life to bring light. They were unafraid to be exposed for their beliefs. The Master needed to give them very little direction, for their natural gifts took them where they were supposed to go. As with the men apostles - their varying social, religious, and financial status, made up a great deal of the common life of that day and age.

Yes, the Master needed representatives from every walk of life. The men and women apostles had met with more challenge in dealing with one another than they did with the masses, just as you will. This is your starting point; this is your conscious playground here in these weekly meetings, so to speak. When you are gathered, you are made to think of the divine lessons you have experienced over these many years; you are made to think of the Master and how He would deal with these interpersonal situations.

The Mission Conference you held last summer (Snowbird Teaching Mission conference) was a perfect example of teamwork, but still you had met with much personality conflict. The experience was priceless – and you are still here, just like true apostles who work for the common good of the whole.

We will meet a Judas here and there, yes, but for the most part, you have proven you can ride out your difficulties to promote each one's growth and carry on with your mission promise. From our studies and our common experience within the Mission, we can now all see Judas's mistake of seeking validation and understanding from those outside of his family with common divine beliefs.

My friends, you know very well who you can speak with to find divine reality instead of ego validation. Know that this time is also being recorded and witnessed by the universe. This awesome evolution is experience for those who are watching. We see the negative and the positive in your experience, just as we witnessed in the apostles of old, yes; but also, we know this experience here on this evolutionary planet is crucial and is to be allowed to play out naturally.

In this group we can see some bruised egos, some hurt feelings, some grandstanding – but also we see those that heal, those that comfort, those that accept diversity. We might witness in this group those that seem selfish, petty, and closed-off; but for the most part, we see poets, artists, philosophers, and divine leaders.

Without one aspect of experience, you cannot become the other. Without experience of knowing prejudice, how can you become compassionate to those who are minorities? Without the experience of humiliation, how can you ever tame the ego? Without the experience of darkness, how can you ever really appreciate the light? Where there is lack and loneliness, there is light and fellowship to be found in your apostolic promise to one another, to Michael, Mother, and our First Source and Center.

I rarely say this, but I sincerely mean it – well done. This week, continue to communicate with one another. Be not afraid to consult your fellows with your life-concerns. If you share not, you receive not comfort nor suggestions for solutions. While you may have your difficulties, the comfort you receive from fellowship far outweighs these difficulties. Find time to have stillness and contemplate the Mother's presence assisting you to find those gifts you need to sharpen, yes. A few questions?

CALVIN: My son, Cory, and his wife, Angie, are asking if you have any words for them tonight, they have found themselves in some difficulty?

ABRAHAM: My children, while it is true that you experience the ups and downs of everyday life, there is so much value to be found. You cannot expect to pay any sort of dues to find a blissful life. Bliss is not every day without effort; happiness takes effort. Life will happen and pain will be felt, yes, but these are nothing but challenges for growth. Do not become discouraged by these setbacks, because these are supposed to occur in life. Know that life is a balance of good and bad, happiness and despair. Be challenged to reach for higher ideals. That is all.

(Calvin: Thank you, Abraham. And thank you for a very helpful lesson.) Certainly.
You are welcome.

MIRIAM: I have a comment and a question. As you know, I have experienced some bumps in the group and happy to report all is well. When those bumps came it helped me to know you love each one of us equally and, that Father loves each one. I really love the fact that when I am thinking of leaving the group I always get back to the place where it is just me and Father. Focusing on that love and strength gives me the courage to come back again and find the love in each one of us. It is a scary ride sometimes, but I love this group. My question is regarding when I am in communion with my Thought Adjuster: In Ham's lesson a couple weeks ago, he talked about the soul. Do we have the ability to have moments with our soul? Is our soul like on a level with us and we can be aware of it? or is it an entity that grows, and one of these days when we are in a different consciousness, we will blend with it – do you know what I am saying?

ABRAHAM: Yes. I would say these moments of really feeling communion with the soul is when you are 'at one' with the soul. You are the soul when you are being who you were truly meant to be. You can perceive the soul as a foundation with several things built on top of it. You have good structure such as the Thought Adjuster, the personality, the mind. But also are there temporary attachments that cover the soul that do not enhance growth, that make you feel detached from who you really are. When there is Father-centeredness, then is the soul free from non-helpful attachments – you feel as if you are into the flow of your life, of really being who you are supposed to be. As for your comment, I would say, well said. You are quite able to function and live a divine life outside of this group. You have had your difficulties, yes; and yet, I find one solution you use to be quite valuable – and that is the distance and time you use to allow harsh feelings to die down. You allow situations to diffuse themselves before you take a rash step in fixing things yourself. This is new for you, and so beautiful to behold. There is nothing wrong with putting time and space between you and one you have difficulty with. A good rest allows for the mind to wash out the assumptions and imagination impurities. And you are correct – if all else falls away and there is only you and Father, this would more than suffice. Well said, my daughter. One more question?

LUKE: I realize facing up to our own weaknesses can be our greatest strengths, but I don't know if I want to face them. Should I do this in private? What are my weaknesses that I should work out, and how can they be my strengths?

ABRAHAM: Are you asking me to point out your weaknesses? (Luke: Yes. Do you want to tell me tomorrow morning during my meditation time?) Abraham: I find you quite brave, but I am very much unqualified to point out another man's weaknesses – I have my own that I take to Father. I can, however, give you a bit of direction: Luke, you think big. You are quite artistic and think in grand visions. This is good to a point, but also is this asking you to over-invest into things you are not quite sure they will work. You are very real though, especially with time, and you always come back to a balance. I find you to always look toward a lighter side, and this is truly a strength. Father does not set out to show you your weaknesses and shame you into correction, no. Rather does He mean – to help and team up with you, to challenge the weaknesses, to bring you self-confidence and divine comfort, to let you know that you are His beloved son in which He would always do His best for. Your sincerity to even inquire is quite touching and proof that you are well-balanced in humility and self-confidence. Have not worry, Luke.

With that, I will take my leave. Know that I find it more and more thrilling to meet with you and to be a part of your growth – individually, as well as a group. Know that always my love is ever growing. Until next week, shalom.

Worship Is Crucial For Balanced Living | How Do Our Attachments Bind Us

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-04-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. There is quite a splendid light emanating from this room. Even though life's difficulties and turmoil may create confusion you are finding enough strength to return to your spiritual foundation, yes. There is no doubt we have a bond with one another and have a great deal of influence over one another.

In these times, it is critical to find inner peace that leads to rational solutions and spiritual fruits instead of irreparable damage and spirit poisons. It is wonderful to know that when the world seems to be falling down around you, you have your brothers and sisters to help lift your faith and hope.

Around your family (this group) you need not make excuses for your personality makeup, no, because a real and solidified family loves you 'as you are.' There is no need for hiding the true self because all know that they are accepted as is. You will have your lessons together, children, yes, but take full advantage of your training and incorporate those truths that you have learned to use with one another.

You are not infants in the kingdom, no. You have responsibility as apostles to settle your dealings with the highest of truth and honor. Emotionalism is understandable, yes, but your training goes far beyond the damage emotionalism can do. Please take the opportunity to practice on one another your newly forming spiritual developments. Many of you will be instructing new kingdom believers, yes, and your skills here in this group, socially and spiritually, will make all the difference in whether you aid a fellow towards finding his inner light, or produce so much light that they are blinded.

I would take a few moments to discuss the purpose of restful worship. It has been some time since we have discussed this topic. Worship is crucial in balanced living. In this incessant world of activity, there is always one thing or another that pulls you from Spirit. It is not sinful, no, but really quite natural and to be expected as long as you possess a material body.

Let's also talk about attachments. As mortals, you all have need to fulfill certain satisfactions that bring balance to all aspects of living – physical, mental, and spiritual. Everybody has longings, desires, and needs. As young (and perhaps immature) spirits we strived for our desires and longings. We strived for temporary gratification that helped to suffice whatever craving we had at the time, never often giving much thought to a long-term outcome.

We, perhaps most all of us, can say that satisfying the present 'now desire' is not always what is best in the long run. To have our needs and desires met we exhaust our human resources doing what we have to to find contentment, or even, at the least, a neutral feeling of non-pain. Many will search down various avenues of attachment. We have chemical addiction, food addiction, even addiction to money – these attachments become our focus for what we strive for. These attachments become our 'first source and center' – yes, our god.

When you think of worship, would you outright display an affectionate worship for money? Would drugs and alcohol bring you the longing for love and acceptance you have within? Would you worship a meal in which you are hoping to be fulfilled emotionally from? No, of course not!

When we worship, we worship the Source of all there is. We worship the Source that can bring us the deeper, long-term gratifications. Yes, we worship to show gratitude to a Caretaker for our own benefit of receiving awareness for His presence. He needs not our praise, no. He cannot be manipulated with glorious flattery, no. We worship our First Source and Center, our Father of fathers, to bring our focus back to our Parent/child relationship with Him. In that relationship, there is the really indescribable feelings of well-being – knowledge that 'no matter what befalls me, I will ever be sustained.'

Children, when we can find a few moments every day to tell Father: "I know you are here. I know you work for my good and the good of the whole. I know nothing is impossible with you. I recognize you as my Father and Source of all that is true, beautiful, and good" – that is energy; that is power, my friends; that is live thoughts going out only to come back with beautiful repercussions. Can that happen with a material source like money? or some other attachment? No.

Where are your attachments? Where does your treasure lie? Can you find freedom from attachment in worship? Do you agree that there is tremendous peace in non-attachment? – yes, freedom and confidence to move in the world with purpose.

This Teaching Mission's participants have a great deal of responsibility to be ambassadors leading into the stages of Light and Life. Your best methods of teaching are to set good examples. You cannot go about dishonest deeds and expect to win souls for the kingdom. You will have a difficult time being liberated from material attachments when you cannot put your focus on the Source of all there is.

Yes, material needs must be met, no doubt. But the best way to meet those material needs is to go first to Father and put Him as your focus, and watch your living thought-energy come back as wonderful divine repercussions. Allow not the worldly attachments to take you from your apostolic responsibility. Find time to have a quiet worship, a moment of gratitude to reclaim your focus your freedom and your personal power.

On worlds settled in Light and Life, worship is as common as breathing or eating; it is not a chore to be dreaded, no – it is a connection to divine energy and solutions for living. In this mortal life, pain is inevitable but you do possess the tools to become 'bettered' by pain, not 'embittered.' The good practice of worship dissects pain into pearls of wisdom. Through the practice of worship, refocus on the values and meanings you need for new growth. A few questions?

CALVIN: We welcome our new guests this evening, Adam and Jackie. Pertaining to the lesson, Abraham, would our relationship-attachments be in the same category as material attachments?

ABRAHAM: That is quite possibly dangerous territory right now [Laughter. A relationship in the group seemed on rocky grounds]. First of all, welcome to you, our new visitors. Yes, my son, you can include various 'relationship attachments' in with 'material attachments.' There are indeed lessons to be learned from one another – it is through interaction that you learn the most about who you really are. Even an abused child will cling to its source of abuse because that is all he has known, that is his pattern which is what he has become accustomed to. It would take a mighty upset to sever this bond to create new ones. This is difficult to speak on, for I had my own attachment to Sarah that proved to be seemingly all for nothing – except for the fact that I had learned all my worry and focus went towards her, and I lost not only my Father-connection, but myself. In the practice of worship, you can rally your focus back to a healthy standpoint and know that all unhealthy attachments bring more pain than joy. Yes, a good question.

ANGIE: My daughter turned three today and lately she has been with my parents and she wants to pray the way my parents do – the more formal 'set prayer.' We don't want to teach her that, but what would you recommend?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. The traditional way of prayer is not really so harmful as it just loses meaning with time. The best way to teach a child to pray is to show her she can talk to Father just like she can talk to you – just as she can talk to a friend, a beloved companion. Show her that Father is down on her level, in her heart – not on a great throne in the sky. Children of today have many role-models, but the best role-models are those that have a role that a child can have hope of attaining. Yes, you must make God reachable to the child.

BOB: Abraham, I just recently came back from a visit with my daughter in Florida. We attended a worship service and one of the things that took place was a little puzzling to me. It was the situation where people are saying they are experiencing the Holy Spirit, collapsing to the floor from their standing there in the church. I am sure everyone wanted me to experience that, and of course if that is something I need to experience, I would like to. If you could help me with a little understanding about that I would appreciate it.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. The religions down through the years have tried to make faith something you can see with your eyes; just knowing through experience and spiritual practice was not satisfactory, and special practices were developed – special signs, symbols, and rituals. This is nothing more than an outward show of attempting to gain an inward feeling. It is not so much harmful, no, and everyone will receive out of it their measure of faith that they put into it. Those that believe in that practice – it is real for them, but by far is it the long way to the Holy Spirit. This is acceptable, but hopefully, with time, each of us can learn that worship is not about manipulating yourself into Father's good graces or receiving gifts from the Holy Spirit because of your technique and ritualistic operations – but rather, that we can know God is here without fanfare, without emotionalism, without drama. He is our Father and we are His children. It is that simple! You are a good Father, Harrison, for your way in which you remain open to your daughters and yet find small openings to slip bits of wisdom to them. Well done.

With that, I will take my leave. Know that if I had any more love for you each you would most certainly become an attachment, but nevertheless, I love you each, dearly. Until next week, shalom.

In The Good Practice Of Worship We Come To Know More and More of Father
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-11-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Your lighthearted atmosphere here this evening makes this task so much more simple and enjoyable. You each, 'individually,' possess great strength and power, yes, but collectively we are able to do so much more than you know. I am with gratitude to Father for His unfailing guidance and watchcare; at this point in time, I dread to think of what existence might be without it. Through the power of worship, I find that I get to understand Father a bit more; I perceive more and more His true nature.

As mortals, we can assume a great many aspects of our Deity personalities, but it is through worship that we release our preconceived notions and are opened to greater understanding of who our First Source and Center really is. God is who you make Him, so to speak – whatever possibilities that are in your mind's view of Him. We can be limited by our faith-levels – or, we can excel with divine possibilities. Through the good practice of worship, we are expanding our thought-reality into knowing the true nature of our Father.

To perceive Father as a harsh judge has us live our lives with the fear that everything we do is under constant scrutiny – that we will be judged, and either 'condemned' or 'commended,' depending on the situation. This is certainly a limited way to live the mortal life. As we better know Father, we learn He is a true Caretaker in that He truly desires to see us excel in everything we do. With this faith-level, we will live our lives as if the universe is with us and there is nothing we cannot do.

At this point in time, this part of the world is truly the hub of Urantia. [Winter Olympics this year was held in Salt Lake City, Utah.] With all the activities taking place here now, we are learning to cross many historic barriers to incorporate the brotherhood of man on Earth. While these Olympic games are competitive – more now than ever, they hold such goodwill and sportsmanship.

While each individual strives for their personal best, they are always working for the good of the whole team. The energy that is being generated is definitely nutrition for the cosmic mind. While a great many individuals have come together to organize these games, a great many more celestial organizers have come to put this goodwill experience into a plan of action that will further generate new avenues of spiritual development.

In the struggle of competition, we are learning that no victory is ever worth hurting another. As we begin to really understand our Father, we begin to love one another as He loves us - "Your sorrow is my sorrow; your joy is my joy." As we begin to really know the Source from which all things stem, we see the connection between all of us. We see the downfall of another is our downfall. We see we have the power - to heal, or to wound.

Yes, when we understand the true nature of Father, we better understand the equality between all His children--all the races, gender, financial status, and positions of power and prestige--there really is no seat any higher than another in the kingdom of our Father.

To expand your understanding on the true nature of Father, we feel we have a distinct place in the universe. We need not act out to draw attention to our own importance, no, for true joy comes from within. Joy comes from knowing the spiritual life is real, that God is real - and we live our lives as if we believe in that with all our heart and mind, yes.

Last week, we spoke of attachments and how they create a distorted perception of reality. Being overly-attached, our priorities change- from 'truth, beauty, and goodness,' to 'selfish purposes, or survival purposes.' Yes, the hardest disappointments to bear are those un-realities you have built your life on, which are revealing themselves to be unstable; you feel as if you have wasted so much time and energy putting your heart and mind into these things.

Do not waste any more time in the punishment of regret - the limited mindal game of 'only if.' Move on to a new thought direction. Become enthusiastic about future possibilities from past lessons learned. Do not dwell in your regrets and become further limited by them, no.

God really is who you make Him out to be.' When that concept is extremely influential in your own mind, you will definitely live your life accordingly. Perhaps the best method of understanding the true nature of God is to strengthen your relationship with the Creator Son - Michael of Nebadon, Jesus of Nazareth, Son of Man, Son of God.

What do we know of the Master? He was undoubtedly tender; and yet, possessed an indescribable divine strength. He was personable; and yet, able to relate with all people from all walks of life. He was indeed sympathetic, but never allowed His fellows to lay down before their troubles. The Master could be found doling out words of power and wisdom - and yet, find humor in most everything. He was superbly balanced.

Yes, "If you have seen the Son, you have seen the Father." While the two personalities are definitely distinct and individual, their personality characteristics are alike in many ways. We come to know Father through the setting aside of ourselves in worship. We come to know the Son through working out life's details and through conferring with the Son.

The best that we can strive for is God-likeness. And to reinforce these relationships with Father and the Master, we learn their personality aspects, their attributes. In God-likeness is where we will find the best of ourselves. It is where we will take up the banner of brotherhood and lay down the shield of selfishness. In doing our best are we at a most awesome position to serve – to be apostles and ambassadors for the kingdom.

As our perception grows of the true nature of God, then do we learn more about ourselves. Yes, there is a little more understanding when we make mistakes. There is a little more tenderness when we find we measure not up to our own expectations. There is always the increased hope knowing that while we are fallible beings, our Caretakers lead us ever heavenward and the past is simply steppingstones.

You have great opportunity now, my friends, to truly touch the lives of those you come into contact with – not through the preaching and teaching from the Urantia Book, no, but through simply showing that you really care, that you are really standing side by side with your fellows. You can make a huge difference in your fellow's lives by showing a bit of interest in who they are.

Yes, people become more important when you understand their true nature, as do our Caretakers; attachments release their hold on you and you can really begin to serve, to make a difference, to be a director of destiny, yes.

This week, journal your thoughts on the aspects of Father and Michael. How are you limited by your beliefs? How have your beliefs changed in just this past year, and how are you better because of it? Continue to work on detaching from those things that do not direct destiny – things that do not leave a lasting impression of all that is good, yes.

This is a new time in history, children. The spiritual energy is becoming more potent; and of course, energy moves matter. Time will seem to move more swiftly, yes, and your participation in it will not only be of great assistance to us but a tremendous joy to you.

No questions this evening. I do have a deep and abiding love for you each. I would be most honored to meet with you in your stillness journaling time. Think not that you are unknown to me or the spiritual realm. Believe that you are an integral part of this wonderfully-orchestrated universe. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Service ~ Not Because We Have To But Because We Need To

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-18-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It always feels like home no matter where we meet because we are together. I want to express my gratitude to you that remain devoted to our Brother/Father – Michael's, cause. I believe at times as mortals it is difficult to really appreciate the participation we are involved with and know how grand this adventure really is.

For these past weeks, we have been discussing apostleship and how we can best fill that position. We have spoken of attachments and learning the true nature of our Father and Michael. We have discussed worship being a wonderful tool in that it helps us to stand aside from our limited thinking and to be open to grand divine possibilities. Tonight, we will discuss another tool that brings us closer to the divine realm, and also to discover who we are really meant to be.

Down through history, man has viewed service as something that is performed by the lower levels of humankind. As time passed, man has thought service to be a worthy sacrifice that helped them to gain favor with the gods. With society's evolution, service is gaining a new definition. What is it to serve your fellows? Some still believe it does in some ways detract from the server, for serving can take time, money, energy, and hard work.

Our greatest benefit from being of service to our fellows is a closer personal relationship to Father and the divine realm. To serve out of a love for God literally takes us from an ego-mindset to a mindset quite like the Master himself possessed.

With evolution, we have learned that we do not have to be of service – we need to. We need to be a part of the inner workings of the wheel of life. Serving takes us from focus on self to something greater, something so much more than what we are.

Anyone who has ever seen the satisfaction on the face of a child who has been thanked for performing a selfless act of service knows that there is definitely a living energy, a gateway to balanced self-esteem, an opening to belief in a divine realm. Of course, the child craves the praise; but praise alone will not encourage them to keep serving, no.

For a child to have belief that they are useful needed beings among the whole of society, teaches them cosmic responsibility. Selfless serving teaches a child that they are not the center of the universe, but most definitely an equal part of it, along with all their fellows.

When we view some of the elderly in your society, we observe they are viewed without value because they are no longer needed or considered a productive part of the whole. If the people of Urantia knew how detrimental this was to their seniors they would most definitely implement a new plan to put these valuable citizens back into productive positions. We can understand how some of the elderly become bitter in mind, frail in body, and hopeless in attitude. Can you imagine the self-worthless feelings of these downcast individuals?

Alzheimer's disease is not merely a physical ailment within the brain, but almost an escape for those who no longer feel needed and productive. On the other end of that spectrum – the seniors who are still employed, or volunteering, or taking part in their family life, act with more energy than do many of our young people today. They are at the end of life and still they are with a beautiful countenance, a lively radiance, and a smile that goes on forever.

We need not serve out of spiritual obligation, no. We need to serve because that is the energy that moves life. Service is the act, and love is the consequence. We become more humbled in true service – not exalted because we show ourselves to be good and highly worthy of our fellow's praise, no. Service becomes an honor – not a duty; it becomes a feeling that you stand side by side, working with Father.

How shall I serve? You will know! It will seem completely natural and un-extraordinary. It will seem quite simple. True service does not deplete the energy of heart and mind; it may physically, certainly, but you know if your intentions are true by the spiritual elation and closeness to Father that you feel.

We need to serve. Through service, we are given balanced mental and emotional stability on many levels, yes. We go beyond the self/material mortal that seems real, to a spiritual morontia level that gives you a taste of what is to come, yes.

I would suggest that you look for opportunities to be of service this week. Also, allow your fellows to serve you. Remember we all need to serve out of feeling with 'universe connection' not 'human obligation.' Move away from 'focus on attachments,' to a new focus on new goals. Continue with a few moments of daily worship when you find opportunity, yes. A few questions?

ANGIE: Abraham, I have a question about finding a way to exist in peace with my parents and family who don't agree with me and my daughter not going to church. How can I resolve the tension there?

ABRAHAM: This will possibly always be a difficulty in your life, but it can become better by showing them an example of who you are and who you are becoming. They have their set rules and doctrines – and they feel it would be safer for you to follow this; but your show of spiritual and mental well-being will set their hearts at ease. You are a free-will individual and even God allows that. Your parents must, at the very least, respect that. You are an adult with every right to explore and discover what you can, and no one has the right to take this from you. Explain to your parents there are many paths to God, and that they need not worry – for at least you are on a path, even though it is not their path. You are with faith that God is truly loving and is, with every step, leading you to Him. Every free-will creature has the right to decide which path they will take, even your own child. Tell your parents to please respect that you are her parent, and when the child is ready, she will make her own decisions. Let them know you do not want her bombarded with their specific rules and regulations any more than you want her to be bombarded with difficult concepts from the Urantia Book. She is a child and should be allowed to grow in the ways of simplicity and a family that puts love, first. Show them the verse in the New Testament where it says 'love bears all things,' etc. Is this helping? (Angie: Yes, and thank you very much.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, on behalf of the group: Thanks for staying with us all these years – through our childishness, our humanness; and definitely for being an example of how we should be with each other – more patient, more loving, all the things you have taught us through your words and your example. I just want to say thanks for all of that you have displayed to us. You have never gotten on us for our misdeeds, laziness, and slothfulness. Any words you might have for my present needs right now would be welcome.

ABRAHAM: I appreciate the kind words of faith you have in me. Know that I would not make it my place to chastise, nor judge you – any of you. I have lived the mortal life. I almost completely understand your experience. I would recommend a private meeting when possible. Is this acceptable?

CALVIN: Very. Thank you. One further question: How is the Olympic experience on the 'celestial end of things' going – all eyes on the hub of Urantia, right here, as you told us? How is it looking from your side?

ABRAHAM: It is beautiful. We are amazed at the masses who choose support over fear; who choose brotherhood over isolation; and unity over separation. All lines of separation are being erased through these events, and the mass lessons are being felt across the universe. There are those who look for personal gain and to profit, financially. There are those who have first looked for these Olympic Games to gain them prestige and recognition, and now they are humbled and honored to serve in any capacity. It will be the hope of many that this goodwill will be felt throughout the coming years. Certainly is this collective lesson in Utah changing the somewhat introverted attitudes of the people. Yes. One more question?

LUKE: Thanks for your lessons on service. You said not to strive on how to serve, but that we would naturally understand how and where to serve. I struggle with that. How do we know that we are not going overboard, serving to 'get?' How can we know when it is more profound? [Inaudible.]

ABRAHAM: Understood. Having been mortal I realize the temptation to wonder 'if God is watching' at the particular time I am serving – as if I am earning spiritual points. I realize the temptation to take credit for good deeds done as if one was more naturally selfless. When serving, if you can immediately commit to serving Father – not particularly the one you are helping, but God our Father – then this helps focus you on Him and away from the temptation to turn this good intention into ego fulfillment. With practice, you will find the ego is less and less involved, and your intention is more pure. You begin to realize that you receive also from serving. You are not just giving, but also receiving. When the giving feels empty or off-balance, then it is time to reevaluate. If your service to another enables them to be further dysfunctional or enables them to lay down before their troubles – then no, service will not work here. It is acceptable to trust your inner feelings when serving. If you feel a sense of honor and humility, then you can trust it is acceptable. It is alright to feel a positive self-esteem. Do not mistake my words – I mean it is acceptable to feel good about the individual you are becoming through service, perfectly fine, yes. It is when there is loss of 'focus on God' that imbalance creeps in, and the good intention is spoiled. If you are speaking of being 'taken advantage of' by serving then, by all means, stop – this is not right either, and needs to be further evaluated. Does this answer? (Luke: Yes. Thanks.)

When I speak with you weekly, or even in stillness, it does not seem to me to be an assignment or duty, no, for I am honored for Father allowing me to be with you, and am energized by your discussions and personal learning. I am filled with hope at the direction Urantia is going. Know that my love is ever and always growing for you each. Until next week, shalom.

Baptism Of The Spirit Is A Brush With The Spirit Of Truth

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. My heart is full when I see how much you care for one another. I am always inspired to become more than I am. I will not settle for a lesser route to be more than I am just because it is more simple, no. While I appreciate those times of comfort and ease, I do realize I am less inclined to reach upward for help.

My involvement in your lives certainly keeps me inspired to learn more, grow more, and become more than I am, yes. As I make effort to serve in Michael's Mission I am also served and tremendously blessed. I thank you for your patience and willingness to proceed ever forward.

Over these years I have been witness, literally, in viewing your personal increases in the world, incorporating those possibilities that seemed impossible before, yes. I understand that as a mortal you tend to be quite harsh on your seemingly slow way of progression. It is with experience and time that you can see you have actually expanded your mind, your personal world.

There are moments in this life that seem overwhelming, and that you cannot possibly bear one more difficulty. I understand the feelings of inadequacy as your difficulties enfold you. I have known the fear and pain of loss in the mortal life, but I can say that these experiences are the very thing that expands your mind so you can advance spiritually.

In a short time, we will celebrate the Master's day of resurrection. It was a time of releasing the old to take up the new. It was a time of dying to the old ways and being reborn in the new. While mortal life can come with a great many complexities, we can always take comfort in the fact that everything changes, everything becomes new. I realize there is comfort to some in the mundane - it seems safe and without surprises, yes, but personal spiritual growth is quite slowed.

You have known individuals who live with a great amount of fear, and their safety-net is a life that is uneventful, unmoving, and not going toward any purpose, any goal. They seem only to exist - not really live, but just exist. Those individuals who are somewhat balanced in this mortal life look forward to daily challenges with unplanned experiences and surprises; they have their safety net in the spiritual life. The spiritual life is a source of energy that keeps you wanting to strive for a personal best, moving towards a life in the spirit - a perfected life, if you will.

We are inspired by the Master's life. He was born just as every child is, and faced all the same daily difficulties; and yet, He mastered a life in the flesh. His life was quite uneventful at times. He took each moment as if it were the only moment to focus on at the time. He relied on Father and His past experiential training to move Him through those events with enduring strength, unfailing love, and spiritual energy.

Jesus moved through the mortal life without complaining, without being so entangled in unpleasant past experiences. He learned from the past, yes, but He did not dwell on it. He was not injured by the past, but rather, He was taught by it to become who He was meant to be.

While the Master was indeed a divine being, He also knew very well what life was in the flesh. There is no doubt that Father was indeed His great strength and comfort, but I would also mention that He found much inspiration and energy among His fellows. While His divine side did find spiritual fulfillment from the Father, His mortal side found satisfaction in the love and acceptance of His fellows.

As we ponder the upcoming Easter holidays, we will definitely find strength in the life of the Master. Was He weak for seeking out His fellow's company? Was He inadequate all by Himself? No. Jesus exhausted all His human and divine resources. His fellow's faith and good cheer gave Him energy and reminded Him of the reason He persevered through many trials.

It has been said that many times the Master "was beside Himself." This was in fact, a reconciliation of His spirit, with Father's; it was an alignment of wills; it was setting aside personal desires for the Father to work; it was dying to the old ways to take up the new.

In the seemingly overburdening mortal life, you can also become as the Master was - 'beside yourself;' to align your will with Father's and release the heavy burden. Realize that you are not left alone to carry on in life's difficulties. You can lay down the old to take up the new.

As we think about the Master's resurrection, we cannot go without remembering Pentecost when the Spirit of Truth was poured out upon all flesh, and the repercussions therefrom. As we commit to laying down the old, we are asking to be reborn and rejuvenated in this Spirit. This is truly - a 'baptism of the Spirit.' Your own personal faith will only allow you to go so far with this idea, but if the individual is willing, the Spirit of Truth is ready.

Allow the grime of spirit poisons to be washed away by our Purifier, our Spirit of Truth, our Brother/Father, yes. Allow yourselves to be bathed in the light of truth. Allow your attitudes to become refreshed, your minds to become expanded and open to new possibilities.

This week, I ask you to journal those past experiences you insist on dwelling in, and how this creates blockage to the new. Study the Master's resurrection and the day of Pentecost. Plan time to be still and open to that 'baptism of the Spirit.' Father does truly desire your happiness, and He knows your dreams. He works to incorporate His lessons into helping you find the desires of your heart, yes. A few questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, we welcome our friends - Gerdean and Angus - for the record. They have been with the Northern Idaho TM group and now are migrating to New Mexico. Also, we welcome Michelle for the first time. And, thank you for your lesson. (Abraham: Certainly, and welcome to you each.)

SIMON: Yes, Abraham, some people talk about having "a contrite spirit and a broken heart.” In the second part of your assignment to us for the week – I wonder if you could expand upon the “baptism of the Spirit” – how does that come about?

ABRAHAM: Put simply – baptism of the Spirit occurs when one is truly committed to drinking the cup of mortal life and accepts the consequences therefrom – and handles it through relying on the Spirit. You definitely feel a change in attitude and you are with more determination to meet every challenge without complaint or feeling self-pity. Baptism of the Spirit is perhaps likened to a reconnection to the divine circuits. You can literally feel it. At times some are perhaps tempted to go a bit overboard with spreading the good news, but reality is certain to bring them back to Earth. I am believing that the saying, “a broken heart and a contrite spirit,” is somewhat off the mark here. That is more towards self-sacrificing to show Father how much you love Him. Perhaps I am mistaken, but my idea here is that the baptism of the Spirit is a brush with the Spirit of Truth – the effects are awesome. Another question?

HARRISON: Abraham, can you comment about belief in the idea that Jesus had to die for our sins, the notion that we needed His blood to wash away our sins?

ABRAHAM: Is there another purpose for this explanation, Harrison?

HARRISON: I just encountered a lot of that, these sayings, the last two weeks with the Christians that were handing things out on the corner here in Salt Lake during the Winter Olympics.

ABRAHAM: Understood; I would say a few words: Those that are so locked into the atonement doctrine would probably not easily accept the ideas of the Urantia Book. The Master simply came to reveal to us the Father in Heaven; and, reveal to the Father, His mortal children. He was not about building the spiritual life on any miracles or ideas of self-sacrifice that pays your way into Heaven. The Master was more focused on the positive aspects of the growing kingdom – not about atoning for a broken society to become worthy. This is so difficult to explain to those who sincerely believe that the blood of Christ is their payment for their unworthiness to be received into Heaven. It would be well if you could also focus on the positive aspects of the Master's purpose and plans for the growing kingdom, instead of any debate over the atonement doctrine. Is this helping? (Harrison: Yes. Thank you.)

CALVIN: Abraham, when one is so stuck on not giving in to the Spirit of Truth, and are just stubbornly continuing on in life patterns – you know us pretty well, and we cling on to our old ways; it almost takes the harshness of life to beat us down to our knees, so to speak, where we decide to make change. And not that Father is doing such, but I think our own stubbornness is. What would you say to us to change that attitude to not have to be beaten down? It is so hard to let go of the old patterns and to simply trust and accept in faith that 'things will be okay,' embracing the will of God.

ABRAHAM: With the varying personalities of individuals, there are different ways to accept divine help. Some will not receive until they are brought to their knees by life's circumstance – not by Father, mind you, but by their own obstinate determination to remain in old patterns. Angels, Teachers, various helpers – all help toward bringing you those lessons you need to continue growing; but never do they inflict anything that would bring a person such humility that their last resort was to open up to Heaven. The point is, that there is no hurry! there is no time limit, and everyone is completely safe. Is this helping? (Calvin: It sure is, thanks.) Abraham: One more question?

SETH: I hope that my question is helpful for someone else who might be experiencing what is occurring in my experience. From guidance, I am told that this life-journey is about shifting identity from body identification to the mind of God. I am wondering if the experiences that I am having, relating to the discomfort to my body, is related to this shift of consciousness?

ABRAHAM: I am understanding that your spiritual maturity level is quite advanced, where you have gone beyond questioning, "why me? Is this payment for a life I have lived?" - to, "Is this my God teaching me?" Excellent, my son. This change comes from the experiencing of pain in mortal living - even physically. The mind-shift is an advancement towards morontial levels. You are seeing a glimpse of the morontia life where we better understand certain inevitabilities; where we are willing to be corrected and enlightened; where we are forsaking the ego in favor of spiritual education. I am, for the most part, in understanding of your question. Yes, many others are also experiencing this. It is not new, but an outworking of a young planet's spiritual evolution. Is this at all helping? (Seth: Yes. Thank you, teacher.)

I am slipping, so I will send you with my love and reassure you that you are well known and cared for, even in those times you feel alone. Go in peace. Until next week, shalom.

Incoming Spiritual Upstep | Do Not Allow Ego To Suppress Personal Purging
Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 03-04-2002
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. While I am happy to be here with you, I cannot help but feel the sorrow of your burdens of your life's difficulties.

We are making preparations for an incoming spiritual upstep. Many of you have gone to the Master to request your personal purification in order to receive that baptism of the Spirit. Purification may entail the cleansing of the mind, body, and spirit. Most of the time this creates inner-turmoil, for the negative must rise to be seen and be purified. This can be difficult and emotionally draining.

Some during this period will definitely see how far they have yet to travel in spiritual advancement without this cleansing. A good focus is to not resist what is coming to the forefront of your minds. Do not allow the ego to hide or push down this seemingly unpleasant personal purging. It does take courage to see yourself for who you really are, to see what remains after believing you were so spiritually devoted.

Dying to the old ways does require a clear look at where you have been, the mistakes you have made, and a commitment to correction. The rising up of these personality dysfunctions is not to shame you or guilt you into spiritual submission, no, but the works of a Father who would gently show His child a new and better way. Be not afraid of those behaviors that still seem to linger after all your effort, but take courage and honestly look at them with the eyes of a scientist who is about to make wonderful discoveries.

The Spirit of Truth is preparing those listening children to receive a baptism of the Spirit – meaning renewed hope, faith, and a sense of well-being in all aspects of life. With worldly past events, the human heart and mind can become used to a well-worn groove of negativity. To depart from this groove, there needs to be a 'bump,' an upset – a mental shaking, so to speak.

To be caught in a negative cycle of thought is to be a creator of negativity. It is to be further downtrodden and destructive. The Spirit of Truth is the 'bump,' the mental shaking, the upliftment that will capture the attention of the world to prepare for an upliftment in mind, body, and spirit.

Allow Michael, the Purifier, to cleanse you of the old, to bring out those persistent negative behavioral patterns to prepare you for spiritual rebirth and a rejuvenation, yes. As we make ready for this spiritual rejuvenation, we are looking forward to receiving those new gifts of the Spirit – new enthusiasm to go forth with hope and determination to challenge life's difficulties, to find real joy, real meaning, real value.

Gifts of the Spirit may vary from person to person. The differing life experiences train individuals to be more receptive to different gifts. One who has known illness will become a wonderful inspiration to those that are ill. One who has known poverty will be a great hope to those they meet that are poverty-stricken. Those that know acute humiliation will be a good teacher to those who struggle with the ego. Yes, the upstepping of Spirit will help to bring about a more positive behavior.

Our beloved Master, who experienced the most unbelievable mortal pain as He was made to hang on the cross, was not forever scarred by it, no, but perceived it as He was just normally experiencing mortal life to the very end. He sought no escape. While the mortal Jesus was in anguish in all aspects, the divine Spirit was perfectly safe – and that is what endures, that is what carries on. To the Master, the cross was nothing but a lesson in time and an example to all creatures who contemplate escaping their required experience.

Mortal life has its cruelties, yes, but love can take the sting out of those cruelties, strengthen the character, and be growth-promoting. Be open, my children, for this cleansing of the old and taking up the new.

This week, journal about your negative behaviors that show themselves in your daily living. Ask to be liberated from them, to be open to this coming outpouring of Spirit. What are your present priorities? Do you see, after all is said and done, only love lives on? Can you find your lessons in the crosses that you bear? Can you be free to move on with greater endurance and strength to meet new challenges? What is real joy? A few questions?

SIMON: Abraham, I really appreciate the lesson tonight. Along with the new Spirit outpouring – I guess I sense a cleansing happening as well. Sometimes I feel that my capacity to take in new spiritual information is maxed out, and my body becomes physically unable to do anymore. Will there also be an expansion of the body's ability to take that in as well?

ABRAHAM: Eventually, yes. With time and experience, the mind is expanded – which has new capacity to hold new possibilities of thought. Your thoughts directly affect the body, yes. Good question, Simon. Are there any more questions?

DIANNA: I am wondering how all this new will unfold; it seems like everyone is different, differences in each person's gifts and negativities of how they will experience this new energy. The process seems to me to be twofold, one of which is the bump, as you said – the Spirit of Truth propelling us forward into the next process, which is the experience of this purification. I guess I am searching for a bit more clarity in my mind.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. It is difficult to receive the new when the old has such a firm hold on you. As mortals tend to become habitual in their life patterns, they are at times overwhelmed with feelings of hopelessness, which lead to feelings of inadequacy and unworthiness. The process of disturbing the old to allow it to rise up to your own consciousness is for you to take active participation in your renewal. Father cannot step in to make correction without permission from His children. He will not act without your involvement, your knowledge of it; if He did, there would be no value, no meanings. This world is at a crucial stage where the masses can either revert to animalistic tendencies – or open up to new divine possibilities, a new way of life, yes. The Master, in His love for you, will stop at nothing to see to your wellness. All He asks in return is your faith, your willingness to be shown. Is this answering? (Dianna: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: Certainly. Are there any more questions?

SETH: Abraham, is the strong desire for healing actually an act of personal will that blocks the gift of one's expression, one's experience that elicits the need for healing in the first place. Do you understand?

ABRAHAM: Somewhat. I believe that even the Master, upon learning of His mortal demise, was greatly shaken-up in mortal emotional anguish; and it took a great deal of effort to reconcile His Spirit with the Father's. Father knows your desire for healing and does all He can to promote what is best for your overall development. Even our Master could not, would not, escape the full mortal experience – He beautifully endured till the end. It was through reconciling his spirit with Father's that He found peace in accepting the divine will. It was His will that His Father's will be done. No, there is no blocking of healing because of mortal desire, no; all human resources must be exhausted. Realigning of your will with Father's will lead you to an easier recovery – more mentally, if not also physically. Do you see, in even physical pain there is peace and spiritual growth? The Master always said: "Your faith makes you whole." That is comfort for the mind even when the body seems so slow. Is this helping? (Seth: Yes, very much. Thank you.)

ABRAHAM: You're welcome. Have not worry, Seth. Your attitude is wonderful to behold and quite an inspiration to those that know you. Well done. One more question?

LUKE: When we talked this morning, I am still in awe that you are here with this group and I look forward to meeting you face to face. The love that you have for us, and the love Michael has for us, is so hard to comprehend. I feel like when I try to look into your eyes or into Michael's eyes it is as if I can't – instead, I retreat. It is almost like I am afraid of that much love. It is hard to handle. I find, in my own thoughts and fears, that moving past that is a life process. It kind of goes along with what Simon was saying – how can we handle that much love?

ABRAHAM: Understood. Well said. Living a mortal life, many are not used to an individual knowing them completely, knowing all they have done and still loving them, unconditionally. We tend to view the Master as if He is so far 'above' us. And this is one of His goals – to work with you side by side on the same level as brothers and friends; and, your knowing that He works for your wellness. You may now have a small glimpse of a love you feel you cannot find capacity for, but I am saying just wait until you are on the other side of the mortal veil – it is absolutely wonderful and awe-inspiring. Keep working towards a change in attitude, that Michael is not a 'far-off superior being,' no, but your Brother/Father that works side by side with you. Make effort to give those you know the same unceasing energy of love. Well done, Luke.

If that is all, I will take my leave. Know that I, among many others, work for your good and the good of the whole. Have not fear of these new changes but have enthusiastic anticipation, for Urantia is moving towards Light and Life. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Self-Discoveries | A Woman Seeks to Change Her Parenting Plan
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-11-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am amazed at your progressive interaction exemplifying those truths you have learned so far. Well done. You quite possibly learn as much or more from your discussions than from our teachings or any other text. It is beautiful to behold the open minds and hearts that seek nothing but growing understanding. I believe you are turning a new corner with one another – where there are fewer demands by egos, and more pure intention to reach spiritual heights, yes.

It is quite wonderful to see the self-honesty you are each displaying. This certainly clears a path to new understanding. The spiritual life requires a great deal of courage, patience, and persistence. The spiritual life is not a trouble-free existence or living in a continual blissful state, no; real spirituality is uncovering those spirit poisons that weigh down the soul.

A woman, who had difficulties raising her children because of her own past childhood, went through a great deal of seemingly negative trials to create a new plan of parenting. This woman had parents who were emotionally abusive and negative. The pain from this experience had caused her to do just the opposite with her children. She was so over-protecting that she practically smothered them and made them feel as though they were quite incapable without her.

The woman longed to change her parenting pattern but had such a difficult time because she knew not the origin from which it stemmed. She did indeed have to travel back through her childhood to find the roots of her present difficulty. For one, she had to find understanding of the reason why her parents were the way they were – she had to find understanding of them so she could forgive them.

Second, she had to dissect her issues over her poor self-esteem and see that she was somewhat sabotaged. She had to see that she was indeed a child of God first and foremost. The woman had to realize she was not a poor disabled victim, but an intelligent child of God with great potential. These self-discoveries were not easy by any means, no. There were many tears over the painful memories, but they were necessary to find a way out of her negative rut.

My friends, these changes do not come overnight. This purification requires you to fully understand it to find the meanings and values from it. This woman was able to implement a new plan to allow her children a bit more freedom to experience life and grow in ability and confidence.

Said the Master: "In all your afflictions I am also afflicted." You are never to be alone to face life's cruelties and hard truths. Remember, as the Master's human side ached with grief while coming to terms with His inevitable death, His divine side is the strength that saw Him through. As mortals, I know we can feel so inadequate and so alone, but you that are committed to living a divine life must know that the seemingly inconsolable mortal self is very well watched over by that divine self – just as was the Master while among us.

Yes, always remember that within you lives that Fragment of our First Source and Center which can (and will) do all things. As we go through the process of purification and receive that spiritual baptism, we will be made to have more confidence in that divine side of us – that we are not helpless victims of the mortal life, but co-workers, co-creators, in that potential of the spirit life.

Under those mortal burdens of living, we at times forget who we really are. We forget to put first that we are children of the Most High. It is quite popular to find escape in various activities that help us to forget present difficulties. I would say that positive activities are quite acceptable in refreshing the spirit and mind to be strengthened to cope with life's daily happenings. Sports, exercise, art – are all good reversion activities that help clear the mind and refresh the spirit.

This week, I would ask that you journal those behaviors that may stem from past events; yes, to create a clearing on your spiritual path. And also, I ask you to find a healthy balanced reversion activity to participate in – not to escape the present difficulties, no! but to become sharper in mind to find solutions.

In addition this week, find activities that feed the soul. Not so much the 'mortal self' but provide nourishment to the 'growing soul.' This could also include service activities and creative ventures – something you can build or participate in that takes the focus off of present difficulties and to provide refreshment for the mind. Are there questions?

SIMON: Abraham, I once again would like to ask about teaching my children. I know you will probably say I do okay, but still, sometimes I wonder if I am. Maybe some pointers on living the spiritual life and being a better father.

ABRAHAM: Simon, my son, there is no doubt you would certainly lay down your life for your sons. You have done well considering your own experience. Yet I realize, as you do, that past misunderstandings dominate your technique of parenting, like the woman in the story. You also would do well to journal your experience and finding understanding therefrom. Children understand humor. They understand fun. They understand love. They do not do well with judgmental authority type preaching. They do not understand disrespect from adults who would require respect. Also, they most definitely need loving direction and a program that connects the family as a working team. Do you understand that they also need to participate in family decisions and undertakings? They are wonderful boys, and a lot of that is due to a loving father like you. Well done. One more question?

TECTRA: I hope this is appropriate. Can you help me with something to speak to Willeena about regarding her present experience in her life? It seems to me she is kind of in a rut right now. Are there some words of insight or wisdom I can impart to her at this time?

ABRAHAM: What a wonderful friend you have been to her lo these many years. I am understanding her disappointment that some of her visions have not played out. It would seem as though at times she sees the universe as being against her. Even though she has come so far in spiritual growth, there will still be further challenges that will help her to advance in spiritual levels, and also maturity. She would do well to also take up some reversion and come to see me at these meetings. Tell her to not have worry, for she has been through greater trials than these. She is quite capable of finding her way. Perhaps a little encouragement will point her in the right direction.

That is all. I do appreciate each of you for your wisdom and willingness to generate spiritual ideas within the group. This group is an anchor in the sea of mortal life. Together, we can overcome many things. I leave you with my love. Until next week, shalom.

Honesty With Self And With Father | We Cannot Hurry The Will Of God

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-18-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am especially grateful this evening to see you all gather, in spite of some seemingly uncomfortable events. It is quite an exercise in faith to set aside fears in favor of promoting the well-being of the Mission.

Most mortals are always in a productive state. While it is touching that most mortals exhaust their human resources to deal with life's daily difficulties, there are times when the mindset of being productive is not helpful. I realize that waiting upon the will of God seems like a slow process, and even I am guilty of attempting to make God hurry. It is difficult to just wait and be watchful. Easy it is to constantly focus on hoping your will, will be Father's will.

In this society, it seems as though the 'doers' receive the most benefits. So many will take it upon themselves to go out of their way to speed time, to find solutions, to find relief, to find happiness. This kind of 'I must produce'-thinking brings disappointment, no doubt, because in all your effort you feel: "Where is God! I am doing what I can, what is He doing?" I realize the mortal tendency for impatience is probably the hardest task to 'rise above' yet. Next to it is the keeping hold of faith.

At this time of purification, when we have exercised our mind and spirit all we can, sometimes we must simply find rest and trust that the answers are forthcoming – the period of peace is on its way. It is understandable that many of your fellows seem to be unreliable, as far as depending on them to help you find your way. This, in itself, is part of the purification; not to be more relying on your fellows, but more trusting in God – in His perfect timing, in His perfect ability, in His all-powerfulness, in His all-loving way.

In the purification, there is freedom. In truly feeling that baptism of the Spirit, there is the freedom that you are safe within the kingdom; you can move with confidence; you feel on equal levels with all your fellows.

Yes, "Where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." The mortal life is not one brutal happening after another, no! it is a series of lessons. However, these lessons are with growth, yes, and periods of peace and satisfaction that you are finding your way. One who perceives themselves as a victim of life is not free, no, but bound to a life of constant striving to find relief from their pressures. One who feels victimized by life is disempowered to overcome difficulties, and excel in spiritual growth.

My friends, there is no luck. There are no shortcuts to God's favor. Father will not be bought by the show of good deeds, no. Father does listen to His children, especially those that are completely honest – with themselves and, Him. In the honesty, there is quicker relief from pain and a sure growth for the soul.

Yes, how can you find freedom in purification without complete spiritual honesty, without being real – real with self and, with Father? Truth can bring pain, yes, but it is a direct line to understanding. This understanding brings meanings and values which aids in the purification – leading to a baptism of the Spirit – and finally, liberation.

There are times when we must do nothing. These are times when we must show strength and courage to wait for Father; not to waver in faith asking: "Where are you, God?" And not being disempowered and overcome by hopelessness, which leads to doubt in the very foundation you have committed your lives to.

You, at this point in your spiritual careers, cannot wholeheartedly say: "God, now that I experience so much pain, where are you?" no. You have learned and experienced enough that you can say: "I have faith that Father knows me and my current dilemmas, and He is working even now as I attempt to control my worry and fear."

A mind constantly at work is a tired one – it is overgrown with imaginings and fears that will likely never come to pass; it is 'spinning the wheels;' it is a discard of energy. We cannot make God hurry, no! but, we can find balance within to counteract our anxieties.

This week, ponder your levels of honesty with self and, Father. Journal on the topic of true spiritual liberty. How might you discover what techniques you may be using to 'hurry the will of God.' What balanced activities can you find to aid you in becoming more patient and trusting in the watchcare of our Father.

That is all. No questions. Know that I do truly love each and every one of you. I am always available should you call on me. Know that this Mission work is at a very delicate stage right now, where we will either draw in individuals or push them away. Until next week, shalom.

Real Strength Comes From Inner Freedom to Experience and Face Come What May

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-25-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am grateful to you each for your welcoming spirit here week after week, year after year. Your courage to walk with faith brings me here with a new lesson every week. You have seen me not with the eye of the flesh but with the eyes of the spirit. I am thankful that you trust in this process of learning and growth.

I am; you are; and therefore, we have experience. Being the varying personalities that we are, our experience will vary. In my position now, I can allow you your experience and your outlook on the meaning of it, without judgment. There was a time however, that I was unable to envision others' individualized experience making them into who they were really supposed to be.

Yes, there was a time when my image meant everything to me. I craved respect and power - so therefore, I used fearful tactics to get what I desired. I measured my success through the eyes of others. If people revered me as a powerful warrior, then that meant I was successful. Most of my energy went into maintaining my image, my persona. Truthfully, this was personally quite fearful for me - that I might be discovered for who I really was. Honestly, I was a fear-ridden individual who cared deeply about the opinions of others concerning myself.

My experience with Machiventa brought about slow and subtle changes in my thinking. I learned that I was quite bound by the shallow material life; I was bound by my own feelings of unworthiness; I was bound by exhausting all my energy toward projecting an image to others that made me feel I was a superior being. Slowly I had learned to allow Father into my life without the worry that He would take away the desires of my heart.

At first in this state, I felt somewhat appearing to be weak and submissive. In all my years as 'Abraham, the respected and feared warrior,' never did I want to be looked upon as weak. Machiventa's lessons were particularly helpful in this area of appearing weak and submissive because he had shown me that true weakness is one who is submissive to ego, not God. True weakness is one who is ruled by the desires of the flesh, not striving for self-mastery. True weakness was one who normally hides from God, but calls for Him when in peril.

Machiventa taught me that real strength laid in releasing all that you think you want and need. Real strength comes from freedom – the freedom to experience and grow, come what may; the freedom to make mistakes without worry of the penalty you will pay – or, of other's personal opinions of you. True freedom resides in trusting that spiritual Overseer – who can, and will, do all things.

Do mortals allow one another to grow and experience 'as they will,' without placing judgment? Can you come to a place where you are free from living your life according to other's opinions of you? Can your energy be more productive – rather than living up to somebody else's ideals of how life should be lived?

At this time of purification, personal unpleasanties may appear – and yes, you probably will be judged by your peers. Do you become burdened by feelings of unworth and live your life according to your fellow's standards? In whom are you indebted to? Who do you serve? Who holds the key to your freedom?

Human beings cannot truly grow in the shadows of their fellow's judgments. In the mortal life, you will seldom escape this judgment from your peers. During this time of self-purification, I am asking you to free yourself from others' reflections of you – that you can find your real selves. Allow Father to reflect to you who you are – and, who you are becoming. This is freedom. This is self-mastery.

I mean not to say 'take liberty without accountability,' no. Be a responsible cosmic citizen, of course! But remember in whom you serve. Is there freedom in who you are serving? Yes. The time is drawing near, children, for this spiritual upstep. We are asking for your participation, for it is crucial in advancing toward Light and Life.

No questions this evening. There is a great deal of work for all of us. Please know that I do truly love each one of you. That is all. Until next week, shalom.

Allow The Purification And Opening To The New by Becoming As A Little Child
Abraham & Michael, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-01-2002
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How wonderful it is to see you children at work for the kingdom. Your concerned natures bring awareness to many, which help shift the mind-sets of the masses.

"Where the Spirit of the Lord is – there, is liberty." This time of purification and liberation from the old has not been one of ease, no. It has taken courage and stamina to allow our divine Overseers to cut away at the unfruitful branches. Healed individuals make for a healed world. Our best hope of healing comes through education and a willingness to grow, no matter the cost.

Judas, the apostle of old, paid a great price for his unwillingness to be healed through self-honesty. He did not allow the spiritual life to remove his unfruitful branches. Judas harbored ongoing thoughts of revenge – which always (in his own mind) resulted in him appearing to be the victor. This man knew not the freedom in humility, the freedom in being honest with self and Father.

Other apostles also struggled with these mindal strains, yes, and it was through their love for the Master that they were able to be honest in all situations with self, Father, and their brethren. This led to purification and the cutting away of the dead branches, the spirit poisons. Yes, dead branches are those things which do not serve in a wholesome manner.

As we allow this purification, this renewal, we are again becoming as little children – open to adventure, curious and enthusiastic about life to come. Judas failed to see the beauty in this freedom, in this releasing of old to take up the new. Although his upbringing had him believing he was superior among his fellows, he still had every opportunity to learn different, to learn better.

There comes a time in your spiritual growth when you must take full responsibility of who you are now. There comes a point when you can no longer blame others for who you have become. Judas failed to learn anymore because he believed he already knew everything there was to know. This attitude, my friends, is spiritual death.

As we are reborn as little children in the kingdom are we refreshed and ready to take in more, take in new. We are moving; we are progressing. This is spiritual life. Healed people make for a healed world, which progresses into Light and Life. It has been our Mission to naturally help you to find healing and hope of a new and better world. I would offer a prayer:

Our Father, who can do all things, we are willing to be made new in spirit, mind, and body. Our beloved Spirit Mother, we are open to your adjutant mind-spirits, which light our path to Paradise. Our Brother/Father, Spirit of Truth and Creator of our universe home, we are open to receiving your Spirit, your vision of freedom, your courage to live the mortal life as you did. Our beloved Caretakers, guide us into that healing which also heals this world. Remove our unfruitful branches, those stumbling blocks which blind you from our sight. Create in us a clean heart and mind. Open us and prepare us for that spiritual upstep we need to escort Urantia into Light and Life. Amen.

MICHAEL: My children, believers in the eternal adventure, I am your Brother/Father/Friend and Co-creator with you in all things. I look at your faces and I am overfilled with a love that has had no beginning, nor will ever end. I see you as you are – the truly beautiful souls that diligently work toward advancement toward knowing me, and knowing Father.

You can hardly know the anguish I am made to feel when I see how you sometimes perceive yourselves and one another. This is not a world of chaos – an orphan who has been left outside in the cold, no. I have been here all along, your ParadiseCompass, your Light in the storm, your Gardener. What I see before me is experiential beauty and eternal potential; a flourishing garden with a variety of harvest.

We stand together at the beginning of eternity, the beginning of all potential. Our real work now begins. I have lived to show you life. I have also died to show you life anew. I have, without ever questioning my Father, experienced this life – your life – to the fullest. I sought no escape for you, for Father, for my universe. I lived so that you may know life, so that you may carry on in the face of all obstacles and challenges.

You, Mission citizens, are more than prepared to take up my example. You are more than qualified to show my flock a life lived with courage, faith, and enduring – not wavering, but 'enduring' dedication to living a spiritual life; a life dedicated to wanting what Father wants.

As I review my Urantian bestowal I have no regrets. I have no desire to change one single thing. I am wholly satisfied with my adventure, for Father carried me through His eternal purpose and plan. He upheld me as a mortal, as a Creator Son, as His child. I found out who I really was as I trusted Him, as I relied on Him, as I held to faith 'no matter what.' Surely, He will do these things for you. Surely you will assist your fellows in doing these things also.

Allow the unfruitful branches to be left behind. Allow the past to be the past and take therefrom the meanings and values. Take up your faith and be healed. Lay down your mortal guard of pride. Be refreshed in the Light of the new. Be cleansed in the waters of Life. Move with confidence that you are with me, and together we will be about the Father's business. Together we will minister to your brothers and sisters, my children. Together we will take up our cosmic responsibility and usher this world into a new era.

Our work is great and our time is accelerated. We can no longer afford to be held back by the halfhearted. We can no longer afford to be dragged under by those who refuse to find healing. This is your career, children. This is what you have so long waited for. Put down your feelings of unworth. Take up your responsibility as my faith-son, as my faith-daughter, and go forward to work for what will surely be a historical event in all of Nebadon.

Know that I move through you like the wind. You cannot see me but you can see my affects, my influence. Be not burdened by doubt, for our work is great and we must be about the Father's business. I know you. I know all of you. I am in all of you – and you, in me.

My Spirit is about truth, freedom, and change. Before us we have a grand adventure. Speak to me, for I will be speaking to you. I am about details in all your spirit challenges. I am about peace and shelter for the weary soul. Know me. Work side by side with me. Allow my unseen Spirit to show you the changing influence we can create together.

Salvation has been had – you know that. Your work is not about gaining entrance into the heavens, no; it is not about spiritual favor or superiority, no. Your work now concerns the well-being of the universe. It concerns the growth of the Supreme Being. You are no longer about petty mortal happenings, habits, behaviors, past injuries, no. My Mission children, you are keepers of the flame, bringers of the light. Let us be about the Father's business. I am in you – and you, in me. Carry on.

ABRAHAM: Our gratitude to our Brother/Father, Upholder, Liberator – Michael. We are fully prepared to take up your challenge. We are determined to go forth with your spiritual confidence and power to allow you your work. We allow you your place in us as you have allowed us ours in you. So be it. Until next week, shalom.

Faith, In Reality, Is Freedom To Greater Things

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-08-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a sweet spirit attitude we have here this evening. As I view each one of you, you appear to be a new creature to me. Even though many of you are extremely busy throughout the week, there is definitely an air of spirit refreshment about you.

When I review my life in the mortal flesh, I always have such fond memories of springtime on Urantia. The renewal in all things is so inspiring and motivating to make things better, do better, live better, to love more, be more.

I so admire children and their enthusiasm to greet the spring sunshine, breathe in the fresh air, and run barefoot through the grass. Children are for the most part, motivated by the desires of their hearts. They awaken each day as if it were their very first day on Earth. As we become like the little children, we are learning to be dependent upon the Father's guidance.

Living on this experiential planet, life has proven to harden some people; they are motivated in one way or another to fulfill their Earthly obligations - as if this will lead them to spiritual peace. While dwelling in the flesh you are certainly required to make your way in the world. As adults, it is easy to be swept up in the rush to creating a life according to your own desires and perceptions of what you think is right. Certainly, this is responsible, no doubt, but it is only a life half lived.

You, children of this Correcting Time, have volunteered to be the spokespersons for this cause. You have had a great deal of training, for these many years - to spread the good news; to be representatives for Michael's message. This time in the world's history is critical where you will be sought out for the energy you project to others. You have your Mission tasks - which are helping others find their way back to a loving and kind God.

When you look at one another, you can certainly agree that you each come from various walks of life, but most definitely are you the common people of Urantia. You easily relate to other people because of your life's experiential training and these lessons. You have an awesome opportunity to help direct the world's destiny.

If you are so caught up in the adult world of over-much responsibility, it is most likely you feel the weight of the world on your shoulders and you proceed with your own thinking, your own definition of events in life. In this thinking, there is not much trust here in our Heavenly Caretakers.

As you see this time of rebirth and renewal, you can adopt the attitude of that listening learning child who is so alive in every moment. Jesus knew not where he would lay His head each night; He really knew not where He was going to be traveling from day to day; He had that supreme trust in His Parent Father. Jesus was completely reliant on the Father's will, the Father's guidance, and all else was given unto Him.

Many people see such a lifestyle as imprisoning or a life indebted to faith – when in reality, it is freedom to do greater things; freedom to be more than you thought possible. In this, we are doing Father's work; we are speaking His words ministering to His many children. This moves mountains. This is so large in concept. I realize that as adults there are endless responsibilities and pressures you must attend to, but as we commit to becoming new, we can have that liberation of the little child; the reliance on the Father of all fathers; the motivation to live as Jesus lived, yes.

This week, dissect your time to see how well-balanced you are living. Is there time for stillness, for play, for fellowship and ministry to the self? The Master encouraged self-forgetfulness, but not self-neglect. Account for your burdens, your responsibilities, yes, but how much of this is necessary and how much of this is blown out of proportion by your own drive toward fulfilling obligations? Those who feel spiritually empty inside will seek you out; and those who hold on to old-fashioned spiritually fearful concepts will not be ready for words from you.

Our ministry is now, it is moving; and a great deal is dependent on how we listen and are guided by Father. An imbalanced life will possibly be deaf to Father's words, to His ministry. Those with a life lived with certain levels of freedom will find themselves like the Master – going about doing the Father's bidding while the Father tends to them in every way. Uncover those worries that keep you bound, that keep you from finding that listening and enthusiastic child within. Michael said: "Our real work now begins." We are, together, moving destiny. A few questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, welcome to Lavon & Devon of Rita's study group. (Abraham: Greetings. Feel free to ask questions.) Calvin: A quick word for John Covington (Marlin), in Michigan; he asks if his teacher transmission abilities, spirit-connectedness, still works? or has he lost this gift.

ABRAHAM: Unfortunately, I am not able to receive that information, but I can say a few words. I am with understanding that you, Marlin, definitely love the Father and have the best of intentions. You are able to do Father's bidding as you are, but I would recommend a bit more communication with individuals within the Mission, such as Calvin. This will aid you in finding that balance that you need to receive of transmissions, or do any of Father's work. That is all.

AZSURAY: Father Abraham, I feel so inadequate and I would ask you if you could help me; maybe tell me how I can do my Mission here better and more faithful, please?

ABRAHAM: My daughter, your feelings of inadequacy is the exact reason why you are performing your Mission work wonderfully. One who knows they do not have all the answers are open to a great deal of information. Azsuray, you do very well. You are, for the most part, led by the Spirit. Your study group produces a wonderful harvest of spiritual knowledge, and your open way to others makes them feel valued. Your expression of love to everyone makes them feel that they are wonderful just as they are, and sometimes people really need to know that. You do well, my daughter. Have not worry. Is this helping? (Azzuray: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

BRIANNE: Abraham, I feel like my life in the last month has been out of balance; there is a lot of pain and struggle in my heart, and anger coming out. I am not sure where I am and I feel stuck. I feel I am moving forward sometimes but am easily frustrated and nothing is happening. I don't know if I need to quit a lot of things; and yet, there doesn't seem like there is anything to stop doing. I guess I would ask for your words as to where I am right now.

ABRAHAM: You have been experiencing the purification process, as many here have experienced. This is bound to bring up various emotions, or life events, that will get your attention so you and Father can bring about healing. The spiritual life is not about a blissful state, but about being willing to drink the cup of this mortal life no matter how bitter it is. The Master set a great example of how He not only endured His trials but was challenged by them. He was committed to the cup that was put before Him and experienced everything that you will experience, and more. The spiritual life takes real effort, real work. It is difficult to see the growth therefrom until you have allowed time to go by. You are young, Brianne, and yet, I perceive a tremendous strength about you. You do have a few things occurring that are pressuring you. While there is pain and frustration, the part of you that lives with so much strength goes a bit overboard to reconcile these difficulties. You are a thorough worker and some of this pressure you feel you put upon yourself. You have a standard of excellence, and this is commendable, but not worth the imbalance it brings – that mindal strain and frustration, yes. I don't perceive you as stuck, no, just learning. You really do well. Have not worry, my daughter. Another question?

CYNTHIA: Abraham, I have been away spiritually and emotionally for a lot of years now. I have faith in Michael and God, but I have not been able to get close. My prayers don't make sense. I have been going through a lot of religions, especially the LDS church, and feel pushed away. I don't know how I am going to be able to achieve my spiritual side. I would like to know some steps, and how do I start?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Child, you have already started. You are seeking, you are searching – and there is no fault in that. You are finding your own way. Have trust in your ability to know truth. You are, as any young individual in the kingdom, testing the waters. This is wonderful. I am understanding you to feel 'on the outside' not as 'a part of.' My first recommendation would be to ponder your status in the kingdom. You are first and foremost Father's beloved child. You are a daughter of God. He loves you not with the love of an Earthly father but with the love of all eternity. He sees you as beautiful – here and now. He sees you in your state of becoming. He cares not about your words of prayer but about the intentions in your heart. Talk to Him as if He were your closest friend. He is not as any man, not even close. You would do well to reinvent your perception of Him for He is more than even the most wonderful human being you know. He knows you. He loves you as if you were His only child. Start there. One more question?

LUKE: Last week with Michael, He said: "Salvation has been had." Is this a personal Correcting Time as well as a global? And as we move past our hurts, and our darkness is coming out, we realize all this is hitting us in the face and we find it is so tough to deal with? Michael tells us also that He is a person of detail, that we can ask for specific answers for our questions and that we have other Spirit beings around us. How do we work with these? How small of detail is too small?

ABRAHAM: Understood. Healed individuals make for a healed world, yes. There is 'personal correction' that will lead to 'global correction.' It is the responsibility of the Correcting Time ambassadors to help others through these stages of purification into liberation of spirit. Michael is in all the details. There is nothing you cannot ask Him. When the details of your life become toward a materialistic side or an egotistic side, He may have His own correction for you. Yes, any detail is acceptable to the Master. He is available and willing to help in all things. As for the spiritual help on the planet, there are legions of helpers and hosts to aid in this time of correction. Your time in stillness and willingness to be in the Father's will, will aid in your learning to communicate with them. These helpers are about spiritual content. They are here to assist in the upliftment in a spiritual way, if you are understanding me. You are doing well, for the most part, Luke, my son. The dark parts of this life are as important as the light. That is where your real learning takes place.

I am slipping. Know that I hold you each in my heart and thoughts. Have not worry for the week ahead. Find time to be as that little child. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Striving For Perfection Is An Enticement From Father, Not A Guilt-Ridden Goal

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-15-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Your compassion is truly touching. Your lives have not only become entwined in this small group here, but also for individuals who live and read these words around the world. Believe me, your concerns are a commonality throughout believers all over this world and beyond. Your loving thoughts are certainly felt and do create an energetic action.

How wonderful it is to be among individuals who are not solely driven by emotion, but engage in intelligent solutions to much larger difficulties outside of their own environments. Although certain issues may weigh heavy on some of your minds, I am also recognizing that refreshed childlike attitude to be present. In that frame of mind, there is so much more freedom - freedom to go farther than you might think possible.

Last week we discussed the burden of 'striving in the mortal world,' and how this can lead to imbalance. But when we are in a childlike frame of mind, we are in a state of listening and striving to do Father's will.

I do realize that striving for a spiritual life while in the flesh can lead to an over-striving to become perfect. Many seekers of spirituality believe that each day they are becoming more and more perfected - and while this is true to a point, there are natural setbacks along the way, there are mistakes. I say, this is perfectly natural. However, we find that there are some serious self-disappointed individuals that become quite discouraged in striving to live a spiritual life. This is, in part, why everyday organized religion is not lasting. The churches set the standards of perfection, and there many times is little 'room for mistakes.'

Some organized religions would have you go against your natural human tendencies for the sake of grasping at salvation. Most of these standards are erroneous and tend to lead individuals to hopelessness – that they will never be worthy of God's love or a place in the kingdom. This dilemma we are finding even among some of our students who feel they fall short of the spiritual mark; we observe there is more self-chastisement than self-understanding or allowance for mistakes.

The desire to strive toward perfection is inherent in most mortals, no doubt; but when the bar seems to be set a bit too high, there is disappointment leading to hopelessness, and an attitude of 'why try.' This is verging into the territory of the ego. The ego wants to view itself as perfect, even superior to others; it does not make room to understand mistakes or fallibility. The ego, in part, would have you hide or deny any wrongdoing even though it may appear to be innocent.

Why do we strive for perfection? Said Jesus: "Be you perfect even as my Father in heaven is perfect." This was not said to guilt individuals into doing right, no! This was not to be a constant reminder of how imperfect you are, no! The Master spoke to the individuals of that day and age in a language they could understand. The Master does ask us to strive toward perfection, yes, but you are not there now – there is allowance for mistakes. These mortal mistakes (most all the time) do lead to growth, yes, to an experiential and higher understanding of true meanings and values.

You will make mistakes, yes – you may even feel some self-disappointment, but the child of God realizes their Father is a loving God and does not seek to condemn you for your wrongdoing, no. Father seeks to aid you in your growth. He seeks to lovingly correct. He seeks for you to turn to Him, to build that bond between Parent and child.

In all your imperfection, be not so discouraged that you cannot be taught or feel hopeless – allowing that ego to cover-over mistakes with denial. The Correcting Time does not ask that you are perfect, no. It does not seek to burden you with an increased self-unworthiness. The Father, and His universe, is completely safe for you to make your mistakes.

Do not feel your self-disappointments through the ego, no, but through that 'child of God-self.' The ego brings guilt that pushes you from God, which makes you hide from Him as if He will certainly punish you harshly. The child of God fears not facing His Father, face to face, in hopes of receiving loving correction and encouragement – that he is still worthy, he is still loved, he is still the Father's child.

Many of you, as children, were harshly condemned for even the most simple mistakes; and naturally, you did not like the repercussion therefrom, no. Harsh punishment only leads to hiding or keeping mistakes secret. This harsh punishment made the child feel a sense of 'love-loss.' Would this love-loss feeling lead to encouraging the child to strive toward being enlightened, to make correction, to attain growth? No! Would the Father, in whom you have dedicated your lives, lead you down a negative path to self-correction? No! Father is like a loving friend who stands side-by-side with you as an ally – not to condemn or to keep you humbled so that you may better listen to Him.

This week, journal your thoughts on what entails a perfected life. Are you free enough to strive for this? or are you bound by feelings of a 'hopeless inadequate' self. Contemplate the power of the Spirit of Truth – in all His power He definitely works gently to naturally bring light into the darkness, yes.

No questions this evening. We have a great deal of work ahead of us, children. We definitely need to find the courage to be persistent even in our imperfection. We always are making effort to attain self-mastery. Be encouraged that you have the help of an entire universe. My love is with you always. Go in peace. Until next week, shalom.

The Natural Flow Of Life | Being Observant of Our Ego and Wait For Father To Reveal Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-22-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Even with the room overflowing with such colorful spirits there is quite a serene demeanor among you. I am again grateful for your support of these teachings. You, in your faith, trust and desire, make them happen. It does take this entire room of individuals to bring forth the lesson week after week. It is by your good intentions and desire for truth that we are progressing as a family. Well done.

Last week we discussed striving for perfection – and while this is certainly a worthy goal to make effort towards, this evening we can bring forth discussion on allowing the natural flow of life. Every day many mortals dread rising up from their bed to see what shall overtake their consciousness and what energy may be stolen from them. That type of outlook already puts the day into a negative groove.

Even with our good intentions, there is always the struggle between the ego and the spirit. The ego's craving for perfection works in a fashion that makes it appear to be good, worthy, or even superior. The ego is force – it forces even the most effortless circumstances toward struggle. Because the ego has fierce desires to force its agenda, there is no simple allowance for the unfolding of the average everyday life.

Culture, society, and even our work environment, teach men and women to believe that only certain lifestyles are worth attaining. If we are honest with ourselves, we can each say in truth that we all just want to be loved and accepted. If one is acting from an animalistic ego outlook, then spirit poisons come into play; the ego is forcing its agenda with an eye for self-glory – and in this, everything is so much more complicated. Relationships are destroyed from this forcing of ego agenda. Employment is lost due to the ego's demand to be seen as superior.

Truly insecure individuals cannot help but act from this willful ego. An insecure individual has an unstoppable drive for attention and is overtaken by the ego to perhaps do things that are without integrity. At a place of employment, or even within a family, many insecure individuals have been known to complicate every little issue so as to gain attention.

Some perhaps are bent on making others 'look bad' - so they themselves can 'appear good.' This is such a waste of energy, such a mis-focus. It is understood these insecure ego-driven individuals only desire to be loved and accepted; but they are misguided, and use up their energy in a negative way.

The truly humbled individual has learned to be a bit more trusting in the divine caretakers - unlike the 'ego individual' who only trusts self. What an empty and unfulfilling dilemma! The trusting child is more likely to ask for guidance, and feels not that anxiety that they are 'losing something,' and that they are 'left alone in the world.' That trusting child is more likely to incorporate the spiritual fruits into their daily activities with always an attitude of 'I know my Father tends to my every need, and all I need do is be observant.'

To be observant is not a misuse of energy, no. It is not jumping to conclusions or taking rash actions all to gain the love and acceptance from their fellows. The observant child is connected into that spiritual circuitry - literally connected, which brings solutions and steps on how to deal with everyday issues in a most efficient manner that brings peace and a wise use of energy.

We all know of that feeling of angst that would have us in a fearful state - momentarily wondering if our divine caretakers know what is occurring. Many of us are tempted to rush forth with any idea or take any action - which could easily further complicate situations.

As you each strive for perfection - full well knowing that there is room for mistakes, learning, and growth - you must think about how observant are you in every situation? Are you patient enough to wait for Father to show you how to wisely spend your energy, incorporating the spirit fruits instead of spirit poisons?

How practiced are you at allowing the natural flow of life? Of course you exhaust your human resources, yes, but do you force the ego agenda? Does the ego have you spinning your wheels and further complicating situations?

You would be amazed at the natural knowingness of God's will when you can allow the natural unfolding of life. It does no good to worry - to try to plan and perfect the future. To hand over to our Father every outcome of any situation is a beautiful example of trust and faith - that you know without a doubt He knows all that occurs; and, that in His love for you and His unlimited wisdom, He is doing what truly is best.

This week ponder the natural flow of life and your tendency to resist it. I have time for only a few questions.

ANGIE: Abraham, I would like to know if it is time for me to find out my daughter's spiritual name.

ABRAHAM: One moment. Certainly. That beautiful baby girl is known as Malena, on high.

CALVIN: In allowing the natural unfolding, let's say a person has been slothful his whole life and not provided for retirement, always anxious and behind the eight ball so to speak. Can he literally just forget all that and allow Father's will? or does he have to say: 'I have made my bed, now I have to lie in it?' I feel that is myself.

ABRAHAM: We always have to account for all our actions, but if this man genuinely lived how he believed he should up to this point, why would he be made to feel that God would further insult him? Why would he not believe that Father would do what is possible to help him make secure, the future? Allowing the natural unfolding of life is not slothfulness, no, it is patience and trust and listening to the divine caretakers. It is using energy in an efficient manner instead of being burdened by fear and unwise expense of energy. Those that push the unfolding are not only under severe mental and emotional strain, but the physical self is also made to suffer. Anxiety is an enemy of the mortal body. Feelings of well-being and peace are for those that trust God, that trust His judgment; they trust and accept His method of showing the unfolding, showing the actions one should take in utilizing the human resource, yes. Is this helping? (Calvin: Very, very much. Thank you.)

WILLEENA: Abraham, in a course of a life most children begin quite trusting and then the circumstances of life occur within the family and the world which brings untrust and doubt. Many of us, well, many people I know, as adults, have trouble with that experience of trusting. Can you tell us the steps to begin to trust again?

ABRAHAM: That is a good question. First of all: Mortals must realize that God is not like any human being they have ever known. So the first step would be to get to know the character of God. I ask you, Willeena, are you speaking of trusting God? or trusting mortals? or both.

WILLEENA: I would say trusting God as a basis for trusting mortals, so I think both.

ABRAHAM: Understood. Here are a few steps:

First: Believing that Father is not mortal, not vengeful, not unkind or looking out for your every mistake, is a good start to getting to know His personality. Many individuals will test Father with this and that, and are most of the time disappointed. Those that perceive God as 'human,' will receive God as human, with all its limitations. This always creates mistrust in what is our First Source and Center.

Step two, I believe, would be to trust in that core self that is you. To trust in the fact that 'you know what you know.' To believe that you have the ability to receive divine information; to understand divine concepts; to follow through with a divine action plan.

Number three: I would recommend that you journey back through your past to find these origins of that mistrust and attempt to find the meaning and values therefrom. Attempt to find forgiveness for those who probably unknowingly taught you to mistrust. That is why I say God is unlike any human. He is infallible. He would not do as a mortal does. Mortals are fallible, yes, and the earlier children know their adult role-models make mistakes, the earlier they can begin to trust their own inner guidance and have faith in a higher being. Yes. Is this answering? (Willeena: Yes. It is wonderful. Thank you so much.) Abraham: You're welcome. One more question?

LUKE: I struggle with ego in day-to-day life, moment to moment. Is there an acid test, is there something that we can use that we can do to understand what is guiding us?

ABRAHAM: You know, everybody knows, that 'inner struggle' that would perhaps make them do something that is somewhat dishonorable to force their agenda. This inner turmoil can be literally felt; but, as you know, many will rationalize and cover-over the truth. I believe at this point you each know when ego inserts itself – and that is the point where you are closed-off to learning and almost 'on guard' at God's interference to the ego's agenda. Good question, Luke.

I must take my leave. Know that with each passing day I love you each more and more. I am in gratitude to you for your allowing the natural flow of this teaching method. Go in peace. Until next week, shalom.

Ministry Tasks Come As We Align Ourselves With the Natural Flow Of Life

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-29-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I always consider each week with you such a blessing. I indeed learn so much from your interaction, your courage to share. Real life is not only touching but also, educational. What a blessing to have one another and a place where we always feel welcome and loved. As we become comfortable moving with the natural flow of life, we receive enhanced spirit communication.

This planet, experiencing all that it has, is moving along as it should. The condition of the world now is quite typical for having experienced what it has up to this point. Evolution is a mighty lesson that is seemingly slow, but it is the way of the universe; it is the natural flow – Father's overall design, yes, just as it is with the evolution of the individual. It does indeed take a great many experiences to advance and put into practice the meanings and values learned, yes.

You can see from the history of the world that many mistakes were made due to ego and the desire to be powerful – or at the very least, just to be noticed. In the average daily happenings of mortal life, we can see how many individuals are driven to do those things that get them noticed or to gain power; they know not the love and notice of a real Parent, and that they have a place in this magnificent universe.

If each child could know this love for them, and that their place in the kingdom is secured, there would be no need to create such life-drama. There would be no need to act without integrity or to gain attention, because the child would already have that energy of love going to them.

As you are aligning yourselves to the natural flow of life and your spirit communication improves, you will find yourselves with ministry tasks. Children, our Teaching Mission is rapidly developing branches that are providing spiritual nourishment to various peoples of the world. While you may not stop wars, hunger and poverty – even crime, your ministry tasks are touching the hearts and minds of everyday average mortals like yourselves; and that alone will be our harvest that can create change on a much larger scale than you could possibly conceive of.

Your training as kingdom ambassadors has taught you that you serve with an eye single to the glory of God. Having the experience you have had has brought you to an evolutionary state where you are gifted in various areas that will assist you in your Mission tasks. This training is why your tasks are not complex, no; they are strangely simple and leading you closer to your Father in heaven, yes.

A Mission ambassador can perform no greater task than to live their lives as if the Master worked side by side with them. When your fellows see you, they know that you know Father, His Son, and the Divine Minister. Your fellows know this because of the way you live your life – not because you proclaim you live a spiritual life; not because you crave attention; not because you have an attitude of being chosen by God, no! you will attract your fellow's attention because they will perceive you as real, as common, just like them.

And yes, your fellows can attain that peace and joy that you know because of the way you live your life. They will see that even in adversity you still cling to faith; even in sorrow you still have a positive outlook on life. Your fellows will be inspired also to forgo the dramatic struggle in favor of embracing the natural flow of life.

Yes, children, in serving, you are served. In healing, you are healed. In believing, you are supported by an entire universe. You know your names will not be written in the books of history – and we all agree that they do not need to be. We serve because we love. We serve without expectation. We engage in Mission tasks because we believe.

If you could only impart one message to the people you come into contact with, it would be wonderful if they knew they are deeply loved and cherished by God; and, that they are watched over by a Supreme Caretaker that is unlike any human – and therefore, serves them without condition. There is nothing they have done so bad that could take from them the love of God, no. Most importantly, you can deliver the message that God believes in them; God trusts in their abilities to follow their own spiritual path. There is no one mortal that is loved more than another, no, they are equal in the eyes of Father.

This week, as you continue to be watchful and allow a natural unfolding of life, be prepared to receive searching individuals, and be ready for your Mission tasks. Even though you still have a great deal to learn, know that in teaching, you are taught. In healing, you are healed. In freely loving, you are loved. Remember, this can also go in a negative route – in judging, you will be judged; in demanding conditions, you will find yourself limited; in embracing the need for ego-gratification, you will find yourself without spirit communion.

My friends, in the mere act of service you can literally feel the hand of God on your shoulder – ever bestowing on you strength and confidence to move through the world with focus and courage; to be about the Father's business, yes. A few questions?

WILLEENA: Abraham, in the journey of mine, there has been several rounds of going to deeper and darker places of my psyche. I find myself in another round of similar experience, only in a different regard. It is not in the emotional healing that I had to go through, it is now on a level of opening doors to having connection with Spirit, Father, and with Teacher guidance. Can you offer me some words that will support my progress?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I do perceive you as a daughter with tremendous faith and I am not in understanding when you say you feel not the closeness with Father. I do believe you have always been extremely close to Him and the spirit world. You have always been harsh with yourself in not allowing for faults or flaws. In this, you have also believed Father is judging you in the same fashion – and of course He is not. Father would never be as hard as you have been on yourself. In being able to allow yourself room to make mistakes, you will find Father to be a bit closer and receive His guidance more clearly. You must come to believe that He sees you as a bright and brilliant daughter of His – nothing less. You are a growing child in whom He craves to teach, comfort, and lead you to Him. Overall, Willeena, your progress has been amazing, and you are definitely trained to serve others who find themselves with a similar history to yours. You have a distinct motherly spirit about you that emanates a grace and faith that makes others feel comfortable to be exactly who they are around you. Is this answering? (Willeena: Absolutely. Thank you.) Abraham: One more question?

ANICIA: Abraham, I want to thank you for being present in my life and for the opportunity to receive your lessons. I am not quite sure how to state this, but for the last six months I have been trying to fit into society. I don't feel like I have been coming from a genuine place in my spirit and emanating the truth of who I am. I have been working, focusing on 'fitting in.' Now I am really uncomfortable with some of my interactions as I am looking at what I am doing in my life. So I guess I am asking for some assistance in my purification and getting back on track with my service in life and who I really am.

ABRAHAM: Understandable and completely natural at this stage in your mortal journey, my daughter, Anicia. Some of the experiences you have now are training for future Mission tasks. You have wonderful intentions and yet, you have difficulty following through with them. This is completely natural. To fit into the common society is non-reality; it is only illusion; only definitions that individuals have made popular. This refers back to my lesson on 'allowing the natural flow,' or 'unfolding' of life. There is tremendous struggle in the world to be loved and accepted. And especially with the youth of the world, they are practically willing to do anything to gain this love and acceptance. It is confusing because the majority of individuals live on a surface level – where you, Anicia, are courageous to go beneath. You need not be in such a hurry, my daughter, but just be observant and absorb the lessons you receive right now. This would be a wonderful topic to bring up to your more experienced sisters. Yes, there is a great deal of wisdom to be had from the sharing. You are not lost, no. You are very much watched over and guided. Have no fear. You do well.

I must take my leave, but know that you are always in my thoughts. You are always in my vision for good. Know that I love you. Go in peace. Until next week, shalom.

Mansion World Correction Lessons Now Available To Mortals In This Life

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-06-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I do detect a wonderfully energetic spirit here this evening. It has been such an honor for me to have been your friend, teacher, and coworker; I sincerely believe I have learned more than I have taught. Although we have many new faces here this evening, I can assure all that they have equal opportunities for growth and service in the kingdom.

You should know that our divine caretakers trust each and every one of you to follow your own inner leadings in taking an active role in finding your way on the spiritual path, yes. With this Correcting Time, there are a great many individuals feeling a positive shift in the mindset of the planet. Of course those bound by tradition, await the 'end of the old world and the coming of the new.' This new, of course, is already happening on a 'mindal-spiritual level' - not so much on the perceived book of Revelations 'last days' level.

Our focus of the Correcting Time has been to assist the world's inhabitants individually so that 'the coming of the new' may be done collectively - leading the planet into an era of Light and Life. With the awakening the world is experiencing, there are more meanings and values to be understood. People are finding that in even the worst of times there is tremendous growth to be had. Individuals are feeling a desire to do good - to expose dishonesty, and to go forth with their highest light.

Individuals on worlds settled in Light and Life have very little need for correction, for their communion with Father is practically a direct line; their knowledge of right and wrong is, literally, felt on the physical level; they have indeed learned from evolution, from world history, and personal past experiences. Children there, from the very beginning, feel that unconditional love, and are raised in an environment where all are valued, equally.

When these Light and Life sojourners pass from their native world they continue on right where they left off. For them, there is not the need for ego/animal correction, they simply continue their spiritual journey from the spirit level from which they are. I bring this out in tonight's lesson because as we are heading towards an era of Light and Life - know that much of our morontia training and new awareness will be learned right here while living in the flesh.

You each by now have a fairly secure spiritual foundation on which to build your morontia awareness - a spiritual mark to start from, so to speak. Most of the time you can practically and literally feel right from wrong. Of course you strive for perfection, and of course you will make mistakes - but the point to everything is that you reap the meanings and values therefrom. A true believer knows that in the face of adversity - there, is God; and there, is those lessons to be gained. Personal correction at this time has a new definition that says: 'God is with me. He is my Wayshower, ever lovingly guiding me toward Him.'

What has made you the person you are today? It is your experience, of course! Decisions you have made, yes! Meanings and values you have learned along the way, yes! And those that can find satisfaction and joy from that, do reap the highest meanings and values – therefore, attaining the understanding that leads to spiritual advancement.

We stand at the beginning of a wonderfully adventurous novel. We each have a page or two to add to it. There will be tragedy, but also triumph. There will be villains, but also heroes. And always will there be a moral to the story – something to add to the whole, something to offer to the world's evolution, something to give to the Supreme Being.

You each have gifts that add to the world's correction. Where someone may be lacking, there is another to bring that person, comfort. Where one has not the experience of parenthood, there is somewhere a child who will come into their life. Where a person has not had a parent, or even an adequate parent, there will be someone there to fulfill that lack. All this is the correction experience you would normally learn after arriving upon the Mansion Worlds, but from the status that the world is now, you have the opportunity to attain this in your life in the flesh, yes.

Last week we spoke about ministry tasks – and that in combination with these Mansion Worlds' lessons you each will fulfill a far more challenging role than you thought. In your Mission training here, you will receive comforting fulfillment where you once felt emptiness or lack. If one has not had the wholesome experience of the family life, they can gain a great deal of comfort (and yes even at times frustration) here in this group.

Yes, you will find a very real family life here if you should so choose. The sharing of your own personal experience helps those who are lacking in that area to become aware and attain useful tools in aiding them when they likewise have that experience. You can certainly gain personal correction working with others, yes, but also can you be made to feel like an important member of a family – needed and loved 'as you are.'

The morontia corrections are here to bring fulfillment, comfort, and spiritual growth. Where one may feel a deep longing within for acceptance, there will be a fulfillment according to the morontia lessons learned. I realize this may be difficult for some, but my main message this evening is that you need not spend a lifetime of pain or emptiness because you are lacking in some way. These morontia lessons are helping to bring correction; and, the fulfillment that makes you feel like a cherished child of God. You are one another's ministry tasks. You are one another's ministers. The fulfillment found here will certainly be felt by all those you know.

This week, contemplate what morontia lessons you may require to correct or fulfill some life pain or lack you may have experienced. Ponder your ability to freely share – to possibly help others to find comfort and fulfillment. Be aware of assistance coming your way to aid you in finding fulfillment and understanding those morontia corrections. Also this week, read in our Urantia Book about life on the Mansion Worlds, yes. [See also this link about how the Mansion Worlds accommodate for mortal deprivations.]

No questions this evening. I leave you to each other. Know that always my love goes with you. Forget not we have our ministry tasks before us. Until next week, shalom.

We Get To Know Our Heavenly Parents Through Our Brotherhood With One Another
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-13-2002

Back

Greetings. I am ABRAHAM. What faith and trust you exemplify in welcoming me each week. What dedication and perseverance you show in living these lessons every day. I feel quite at home walking among you, knowing that you each love me as I am. In turn, I pray that you know we look at you in the same way.

Everyone has their flaws but also, everyone has their talents. All have been shaped by their personal experiences and their decisions made. How comforting it is to know that we can be exactly who we are, good or bad, and still be welcomed and loved. That is the meaning of a real family. The family concept will follow you and be built-upon throughout your eternal career.

It has been proven that biological families are not always encompassing that ideal unconditional love and acceptance. We are quite blessed to know that there really is not much greater love to be found than right here in this very group. There are men here who are excellent fatherly examples to those who have not the experience of a father. There are men here who have not the experience of that confiding comfort of a beloved brother. There are men here who are not typical of the average man on Urantia – those that seem to be led by ego instead of spirit. How blessed are we to have you, our brothers, among us. We each will benefit by your counsel and comfort throughout our days.

On that same note, how wonderful it is for us to be blessed by the various female personalities here. Many are wonderful examples of motherly caretakers who are always on the watch for one and all's well-being. How comforting it is to also know the benefits of an understanding and loyal sister.

Yes, what a beautifully balanced family we have to rely upon throughout our adventures in the flesh. How blessed are we that we may meet our universe Parents through one another. How wonderful it is to know that where one may be lacking there is another to bring comfort and understanding. This is the family. This is the kingdom. This is our rock.

Out in the everyday busyness of life, we are many times overcome with various difficulties; and this is so draining – spiritually, emotionally, mentally, and physically. What a blessing it is to know your family awaits your presence here each week as we gather – yes, to aid you in recharging that spiritual energy; and then, what strength there is to venture back out into the busyness of life.

Of course there will always be those challenging family lessons we will learn with one another. There will always be some hurt feelings or misunderstanding, yes. But never do those occurrences ever outweigh the good to be gained from the family. Lessons on family life are usually the first taught upon arriving on the Mansion Worlds. While some solitude can be quite serene and rejuvenating, isolation can be quite detrimental to one's overall well-being.

When we view the Master's life with His apostles, we can find the various personalities that made up their family atmosphere: There were those who created conflict; the differing personalities that were diplomatic; the personalities that rallied faith and hope; and, the personalities who stopped pettiness and brought positive focus. Yes, a family indeed.

Those worlds settled in Light and Life are taught 'the world is my family, every woman is my sister, every man is my brother, every child is my child.' As you each grow closer to the spirit you will find it easier to embrace this concept for yourselves. There will not be too much of that awkwardness between strangers because deep down we all have a great deal in common.

There will always be those certain personalities that cannot seem to be reached - and this is not to worry, only to feel comfort in that you have put forth your best effort, yes, and sometimes you just have to move on. When your resources have been exhausted with certain difficult personalities, it is acceptable to leave them to Father.

How do those families on enlightened worlds deal with family difficulties, injustices, or misunderstandings? Usually, the problems are discussed between those individuals involved in the difficulty. Many times, there are older family members who aid in mediation and offer guidance. Sometimes there are experts from on high, elicited. There is always a point to where many families will seek the counsel of a spiritual counselor. My point here being - that always is there action taken towards reconciliation. Never do these family members allow resentment to be built because of pride or slothfulness. All difficulties are handled immediately to maintain the well-being of the whole.

You, my friends, have been through many difficulties and have grown considerably with each hurdle. This is indeed, part of your training, part of your morontia correction, part of what you will be teaching in the future. I find it wonderful to see your efforts towards contacting one another during the week - and not just at meeting times, no. Fellowship is filled with benefits that bring comfort to the soul as well as the mind. In this age of disposable families, there are a great many difficulties arising because individuals are seeking that comfort from outside family life.

This week, as you reach out and communicate with one another, reach also for those in your own families, as well as coworkers, neighbors or even strangers. As we move forward towards Light and Life, we will be dealing with everyone on a 'family level.' We feel safe here in this room to be who we really are. Let us practice this week on taking that idea out into the world. Reach out to those individuals you meet with a brotherly attitude and see the power of God at work. Are there questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, I would like to formally welcome Robert P. into our group. LaReen (Inera) is back with us. And we have Mary Huggins and Joilin Johnson from Colorado going back home this week.

ABRAHAM: Greetings, and welcome. Are there questions?

AZSURAY: Abraham, I would like to ask a question about the Light and Life era. I wonder if you could tell us what the religion will be called at that time? Or, will it be much the same religions as do exist today, and have the same teachings that we have now? I ask this because per the Urantia Book, it speaks of our one day, 'one religion,' 'one language' and 'one race?' Could you possibly know that? Thank you.

ABRAHAM: Azzuray, that is a most difficult question to answer. From my knowledge, there is really not name nor description of religion on those enlightened worlds. It is so completely common that there is not various religious leaders promoting this or that, no. Those enlightened worlds are also encircuited spiritually so that their closeness with God does not require persons or books to go through. We are definitely far from that picture you have portrayed for us, my daughter, but definitely, we are on our way when the majority of individuals on the planet, at the very least, have faith in a Higher Being. Yes. Does this at all help? (Azzuray: Yes, and thank you.)

ROBERT: Abraham, what is the nature of the spiritual names, and our purpose for knowing them?

ABRAHAM: The spiritual names could be thought of as names of the soul, or the name that God knows you by. The names are normally revealed upon fusing with the Adjuster – but for this Correcting Time, the names will be revealed to allow individuals to feel a certain closeness with Father and to the spiritual life. Those individuals who receive their names tend to feel a closer presence to God, as if He knows them personally, which He does. Yes. Is this answering? (Robert: Yes.)

Abraham: Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I was thinking – it just kind of blows me away... like twenty years ago, or when I was a little kid, I used to think about how I wished people loved me or I would think about the differences between me and people. Now I am so overwhelmed, like this week because of Mother's Day for starters, what a precious gift that I have my mother who always, unconditionally, loved me no matter what I did; and I was a mess. And now my husband is the same, and my friends. This is an experience of what I have in common with people instead of differences. In your lesson tonight, it just resounds – the difference of knowing that Father loves us, and building upon that more and more. The more I feel it, the more I see that we are alike. It is pretty powerful; it is really simple. But I could never see that before, and now it is everywhere. I guess that is not a question, but it is amazing!

ABRAHAM: Beautifully said, my daughter, Miriam. But this understanding took many years of experience to transform your thinking – in which brought those thoughts into actuality. Not that there was not commonality or love before – but because of your realigned positive thoughts, you could perceive this love and feel the gratitude therefrom. Yes, this is life-changing; transforming, yes. Would not it be beautiful for all children, from the beginning, to know what took you many years to understand? Someday this will be reality. Wonderful comment, Miriam! Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, speaking of families – in your lesson on the importance of a family, it would appear that during the dark ages, prior to the Correcting Time here, it was quite an asset that some of these religions had a strong family structure or base or teachings, which probably held things together. Would you comment on that?

ABRAHAM: There is not a more excellent example of that than the Master's family. There were spiritual lessons taught – the basics really, but not textbook laws and rules. The Master taught by example. He lived a righteous life, and therefore, His words to His family had meaning. He did not preach spirituality one day and then go against that concept the next. It is most beneficial when parents can live a right life and teach children from their example. At each age, children are ready to learn new concepts. (Pause.) (Ellanor/TR: I am sorry. I am about done here. I am hot. I am getting tired.) Abraham: It is best to teach those new understandings when children ask questions. Forced spiritual learning is very detrimental to that child who is supposed to simply believe God is about love and doing good.

Yes, yes, we are finished. [laughter.] You each know my love grows for you more and more every week. Until next time, shalom.

Successful Families Always Recognize Father At The Head Of Their Table

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-20-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. With each week that passes I am evermore inspired by you each, my brothers and sisters. I am always uplifted and filled with more and more hope for the planet as a whole by watching you, this small but powerful family, yes. It is easy to see your recognition of one another as equal fellows in the kingdom, to make everyone feel a part and accepted as they are.

In this family setting, you each have learned to go beyond the individual self, to embrace the larger concept of the whole; this is leaning away from ego/animal tendencies towards universal concepts of the eternal family.

Why have you stayed so long with one another? Why have you continued to come back week after week, even when feelings were hurt? Why does this particular group meet with such family success? The answer is very simple really – you are, for the most part, committed to having Father, our First Source and Center, at the head of the family.

Successful families always recognize Father as the head of the family; and from there, all other stations in the family are equal – meaning that there is not one chair higher than the next, there is not one family member more important than the next. Most family decisions are made only after conferring in prayer with Father and/or Michael. A successful group recognizes a higher power greater than themselves.

On this evolving world, how blessed is the individual who has the support of the whole. Just to know you are deeply cared for and valued gives such strength to not only endure the trials of daily living, but to be triumphant and inspired to uplift others. This world being experimental, there occurs a great many difficulties that are new to the planetary helpers. So you see, as you learn, the planetary helpers also learn.

Many times we marvel at your persistence to carry on, to overcome resentments, to find forgiveness, to spread goodwill, and to continue on in faith. Truly blessed is the one who has his fellows to strengthen him during the difficulties, and also share in the joyful times. Isolation and loneliness can be a slow and painful demise of mind, body, and spirit. How blessed are you that can bear the burdens with your fellows, as well as find hope and strength to carry on.

Citizens who dwell on enlightened worlds know not firsthand the experience of 'lack;' they can only really understand through observing history. These Light and Life citizens have not the fear that you evolutionary citizens know; they do not comprehend the emptiness that can be found in daily living. These enlightened people, from infancy, know love, acceptance, balance, justice, and fulfillment. They reach not for outer stimulus; their laughter far outweighs their tears; their fulfillment drives them to serve and take care of their fellows.

Having lived a mortal life, I do indeed understand that fear that can come from feelings of lack or emptiness. I have experienced that drive to materially find fulfillment where spirit should have been. Most of Urantian societies have something that temporarily fills that place of 'lack;' whether it is drugs, alcohol, food, or money, these are a sign there is emptiness on some level, there is a lack (or pain) that needs to be attended to. How wonderful it is you have each other to discuss these issues and find comfort from a family setting - yes, to find solutions.

For the most part, it is because of these feelings of emptiness that mortals struggle to attain self-mastery. It is easy to go towards the animalistic tendencies when feeling the 'fear of lack.' Really, most mortals feel lost in the unknown and seek quick temporary solutions that help them to feel secure. Citizens on the enlightened worlds do not struggle towards self-mastery for it is completely natural to them. They feel not the emptiness; they feel not the fear. They need not make desperate attempts to find fulfillment, especially using the ego/animalistic driving force.

I understand the struggle to attain self-mastery. I understand the fear of emptiness and inadequacy. It is easy to see how many of your fellows are pushed by the fear of emptiness to find temporary fulfillment, and to lean towards the ego's solutions, yes. This is why we continue in these morontia lessons. In this Correcting Time, we are assigned to aid you in healing those places of emptiness and lack. We seek to endow you with the spiritual tools you will need to attain self-mastery.

Do you realize that Light and Life begins with the self-mastery of each and every individual? Yes. So this lesson on the family is the first of many tools you can attain to conquer your fears regarding loneliness and the pain therefrom. To know that there is a brother at hand who sincerely cares, will help guide you toward a divine process in making decisions. To know there is a loving sister nearby to uplift you in faith and inspire you to carry on, is also a reminder of where our focus should be.

This week, ponder those places within which feel lacking or empty. Journal down those habits that lead to temporary fulfillment but are not encompassing a divine technique. Dare to reach out for consultation with your brothers and sisters in your trying times. The individual who is closed-off in private, receives not. Do you see the loneliness therein? Do you see the tendency to sway toward the ego's solutions?

Who sits at the head of your family's table? How involved is Father in your daily living? You know quite well the choice is yours on how involved Father is. The choice is not Father's, but yours – He is always there, always waiting for your attention, always ready to strengthen you. Even in the darkest hours, always is He ready with wisdom to impart to you toward finding solutions, yes.

I am sorry, no questions. Find time to discuss this evening's lesson amongst the group. Know that I am closer than you know, and always willing to help you with anything. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

The True Nature of Our Father | Is He What We Believe Him To Be, or What we Fear Him to Be

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-27-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a beautiful spirit we have here this evening. I am always in anticipation to view the unfolding of life – all life, your life. I can easily see how I have become a better friend, teacher, and universe citizen just by knowing you each. I thank you. The more I understand Father the more I understand myself. I am with more capacity to understand my fellows – and therefore, I am with tremendous amounts of love.

Last week we discussed Father being the head of every successful family. This week I would find it beneficial to discuss the true nature of God. On this world, God has been many things. He has been a judge, a redeemer, a fantasy, and a reason to do anything and everything. On the Mansion Worlds we find there is great need for correcting the individuals' perception of our First Source and Center.

It is written that the human father is the highest possible concept you can attain to knowing God. As history has shown, however, many of the human fathers have been an example of everything God is not. Evolution is showing great improvement, true, but history has formed various concepts of the human father that are transferred into beliefs about our Supreme Overseer.

What would you really like Father to be – kind, understanding, loving, forgiving? Yes, and always assisting us in everyday living. What do you fear God to be – condemning, controlling and merciless in His teachings? There is a great span between what individuals say they believe God is and what they really fear Him to be. On the mortal world, God is who you make Him. God is who you believe Him to be. Years and years of conditioning (or improper education) can certainly cast a negative shadow over the true nature of God.

With the world's awakening, individuals are realizing their standard set beliefs are not enough – they are ingrained with fear. Therefore, many individuals will live their lives according to that belief. So many mortal deeds are done in secret as if they can hide from God, and then in full view out amongst their fellows, they portray to live a righteous life. Many can only find small bits of life to share with Father, for they fear His input. Their beliefs in His true nature are skewed and therefore they only allow Father limited space in their hearts and minds.

As you may have gathered from my own personal history, I have thought of God as many things. I worked to gain His favor so that I may become more powerful. I believed that if I lived my life a certain way, I could be free from average mortal adversity. God would surely see to it that 'His favored were to live a life of ease,' and for me at that time, it was true – that was my God.

With the teachings of my friend and mentor, Machiventa, I learned a great deal in seeing how he lived his life and interacted with Father. God was not to be bargained with. He did not send down the harsh rain on His unfavored children, no; nor did He give any individuals relief from required experience.

Yes, through Machiventa's example, I learned that Father is my closest ally, friend, co-worker, and unconditionally-loving Parent. He is kind beyond my ability to find words for. He seeks not to punish me for my erring ways, no, but just to guide me toward better ways. He loves me beyond my own ability to love myself or even love Him in return. He seeks not to test me just to promote soul growth, no; He seeks to assist me in those tests that experience naturally brings. He knows me better than I know myself and loves me regardless of my wrong deeds. Father does not view us as ignorant erring children, no, He sees us as intelligent and striving children that are of Him.

On worlds settled in Light and Life, the citizens, from childhood, are introduced to a wonderful ever-growing concept of God the Father. There is not need to exclude Him from any area of their lives, for to be without Him, to them, is death – it is unthinkable. Their lives are filled with such joy and satisfaction because of who their God is; yes, because of their concept of Him. They know from where they have come, and they are blessed with the certainty of where they are going – and they live their lives accordingly.

These Light and Life citizens have not that ego-interference that would tell them to hide various deeds from Father – for fear He may not approve and even try to stop them. They are not burdened with the dysfunctional beliefs in fatherhood that you here on this planet are.

I realize many of you have not the 'healthy father experience' from which to draw, but you have the Correcting Time, you have these morontia lessons; you have each other; you have me, you have a celestial Overseer that would go to any lengths to bring you to Him. You have everything.

This week, I ask you to journal your concepts of who our First Source and Center really is. Also, list those feelings you receive when hearing the word 'father.'

Ponder your experience with your earthly father, or any male figures, and attempt to find understanding or possibly even forgiveness for them, for they are not God - they are only mortal, like you.

Also, as you strive to be God-like, be sure to be aware of how ego may interfere to skew your perception. God really is who you make Him, yes. As we journey forth into these morontia lessons, allow yourselves to become purified with new understanding; allow the old to fade away while the new can be reborn.

No questions this week, perhaps next. Know that you are always in my thoughts and always is there a place for you in my heart. Go in peace. Until next week, shalom.

Jesus Is Our Most Visible Example Of Our Father

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-03-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I could sit here and listen to you all night. I am amazed, intrigued, and filled with hope at the ever-changing and growing heart of humanity. Within all this humanness, therein lies the true nature of God. I have seen each of you display some beautiful aspect of our beloved First Source and Center. There was a beautifully humbled expression of truth that is not known by the ego, but by Father's child/seeker. There was compassionate understanding that desires only to serve others without thought as to what can be gained.

Tonight there was displayed real wisdom that can only extend from true love. Yes, a beautiful example this evening, children, of our Father's true nature. In your desire to 'do good for no reason at all' you are indeed God-like, yes, examples of our Father. In pondering the nature of God, I often reflect back upon the life of the Master.

It is written: "If you have seen the Son, surely you have seen the Father." Jesus, in all His good works, was still never really understood. He had the power of the universe behind Him, and yet He used it not for His own benefit. He had a love for people that was rarely comprehended by the recipients. He had the courage to stand up for justice, and yet He could be found playing among the children.

While He paid no mind to finances, He was generous beyond measure - he gave of Himself. In the giving of Himself He truly believed He gave God. The Master saw past social status, financial status, skin color, even deeds done in darkness. He saw that soul-within, which was a potential eternal link bound for Paradise.

Never for one moment did Jesus ever think that He was above His fellows and was dutifully dragging along His fellows behind Him, no, for He sincerely believed He was one of them - one with God and yes, one with the universe. Our Master knew that His fellow's growth was His growth, their sorrow was His sorrow, their joy was His joy. He was, and still is, an excellent example of the true nature of God.

I also believe that - as you journey Paradise-ward will you also view those God aspects within our local universe Mother Spirit. While She is the embodiment of grace, also is She with the strength of a universe. While She is beauty, also is She with intelligence. While She is with the instincts of a Mother who fiercely loves

Her children, She is capable of understanding what they truly need. She is not blindsided by Her love for them, no. She longs for their health and well-balance.

Perhaps your earthly parents fall nowhere near this example of Michael and Mother. You can very well this day take Michael and Mother in as your own – they do have the power to heal, to correct, to guide, to bring you to your true self. They each love you as if you were their only child. In this renewed relationship with our universe Parents, we can find healing, forgiveness, and understanding for the past. We can be strengthened, inspired, and encouraged to move toward the future.

In a healed perception of parental caretaking, you can find yourselves to be better parents to all children. You can be a source of inspiration to those who also feel that unfulfillment that comes with lack of parental influence – yes, love. Our lesson will be kept short to take questions.

For this coming week, study the Master's life. Ponder the responsibility that our universe Parents have. Think about how they know you; how they love you. Look within to be sure you do not feel unknown. Find time to be alone with your universe Parents. Are there questions?

ROBERT: On a moment-to-moment basis how may I know the Father's will?

ABRAHAM: This is difficult to answer, even for me now. I can say that some acts of following God's will, happens out of natural desire to do right by Father, by your fellows, and by yourself. Decisions to follow the will of God most of the time are just done without too much thought interfering into the natural flow of it. Of course as one begins to know Father, one desires to do good. To contemplate too much on following the will of God regarding some situation can allow openings for the ego to under-handedly find ways to take credit or be the hero, yes. In your learning to be within the will of God, your best bet is to work on self-mastery, and to sharpen the skills of the spiritual life: One being, to take time for stillness practice. Another being, prayer. Another perhaps would be, study. A mind stayed on God is more likely to follow the will of God. Do you see, it is difficult from moment to moment to know if you are within the actual will. Your best focus would be to nurture that relationship between you and Father, and following His will will come naturally. Is this helping? (Robert: Yes, and thank you.) Abraham: Another question?

CALVIN: You said in tonight's lesson, Abraham: "The Master paid no mind to finances and yet, was generous beyond measure." I guess you are talking about His adult life. My understanding from the Urantia Book is that He carefully calculated the structure of the financial needs of the family. Could you clarify that a little? My big concern is daily finance struggle.

ABRAHAM: How many years have you inquired on this topic, Calvin? (Calvin: All of them.) Abraham: You tell me what you have learned.

CALVIN: Very good. [laughter.] Experience has taught me that things pull through, yes, but it's always right to the barely 'just enough' and 'just in-time,' to where I can test it again next time that seems to somehow pull through to the barely barely again. I would just like to move on in life. Of course, I understand I have more responsibilities than most, with ten children. I would like to feel financially secure so I could do what I love doing in life, including this Mission work, and not have to be so held to this daily grind. Maybe it is like Jesus being held to His responsibility and then He transferred that to James so He could be free. I can't 'transfer that to James.' So what have I learned? I guess I've learned that next month my financial challenges are all going to be there again. I know there is a bigger picture than that, but ...

ABRAHAM: The Master's Mission out among the masses did not really begin until His family's well-being was secured. You still have great responsibility to provide for your family. This, in itself, is a Mission. To feel materially taken care of as a child, brings them security. To know their father cares for their needs, makes them feel valued – this is our Mission! To bring the good news to your co-workers is our Mission! To arrange your finances with a loan officer so that you can fulfill your obligations, is opportunity to show aspects of the true nature of God – that He does take care of responsibilities to His children. Yes, that is our Mission! Yes, when all is said and done you know that finances can be handled by you more efficiently. Preparation for a rainy day is not sinful. I cannot ease your anxiety or guarantee you will be able to pay your debts. All I can do is reaffirm what I have said over the years – to trust Father to guide you toward opportunity. With worry and anxiety, how can He possibly get through? When I spoke of the Master's generosity, I was referring to Him giving of Himself, not money – and surely all else was given unto Him, yes. Is this helping? (Calvin: Yes, it is helping very much. Thank you again, Abraham.)

LUKE: Abraham, I've missed you. Back to Calvin's question – I got a lesson the other day that if I will seek spiritual growth over material growth then I will find my successes in all aspects of my life. I know that the truth is there in that statement, but it is hard to accept that when my needs are in my face like they are. My question is, can you tell me if my lessons are coming through alright? and what I can do to be more clear?

ABRAHAM: Yes, for the most part you are understanding your lessons, but you would do well to confer with your close fellows more. You are feeling some misunderstood disappointment. This is unnecessary, my son. You at times measure your worth as a man by monetary means. You are overlooking, possibly even misunderstanding, some things. To conference with your fellows should clear this right up. Have not worry. Do your best for the next few weeks to be here with the group. They bring balance and clarity. Have not worry, my son.

With that, I will take my leave. Know that you are each unique and distinct personalities with immeasurable value. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Trust In Father Was Jesus' Strength In Any Difficult Situation

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-10-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Every day that goes by I am with more and more gratitude Father has given me the gift of you, my friends, students, and coworkers. I am always amazed at how mortal concepts grow beyond the individual self – to embracing a larger picture. In this time of correction and the receiving of these morontial lessons, as a whole we are finding a beautiful mindal connection; we are finding healing; we are receiving benefits that we should have had had it not been for the planetary isolation.

As you grow in spirit you will find this mindal connection miraculous, yet citizens on enlightened worlds find this an average occurrence – they could not imagine life without it. As we move in toward Light and Life our connection improves; and with that, comes genuine compassion, real understanding, a deepening of love for our fellows, and a clearer view of the will of God. This expansion of mind is dependent upon the willingness to let go of the self.

As we draw closer to understanding the true nature of God, we find ourselves reborn and with the sense that we are at the beginning of all eternity. We relax in the knowing that there is time – there is freedom to learn, grow, love, and serve. We can be released from the anxiety of feeling rushed, pressured, or behind. We can rebuild that confidence that only an aware child of God knows – that we are not lost; that we are not unknown.

Up until this point in this world's evolution, you could only receive the gift of this mind-connection on the Mansion Worlds. However, we are striving to move towards Light and Life status, and personal and planetary healing is being received now (in this mortal life); and with that, comes certain benefits, certain gifts – and yes, a great deal of responsibility.

In this mind-connection with your brothers and sisters, you can feel what they feel. You can have a deeper understanding of why they are the way they are. You can have Michael's understanding. Do you think that with such compassionate understanding you could ever really be judgmental, indifferent, or uninvolved? With Michael's understanding of one another are we ever really separate?

My friends, what is our common ground? Wherein are we alike? Yes, it is as cherished children of our First Source and Center. Does this not put the stages of Light and Life into new perspective, new possibilities? Yes.

Our last assignment was to study the life of the Master. Personally, I was greatly impressed by His ability to remain calm in most situations. What was that foundation He possessed and in which He built upon to remain unshaken in any situation? Yes, it was His trust. Trust in His connection with Father. Trust in Father's ability. Trust in Himself to receive from God.

In a state of anxiety, how could the Master have remained within the Father's will? Mortal anxiety had its way with the Master at times, yes, but always was it overpowered with faith and trust in God – in God's presence, in God's promise, in God's ever-unfolding potentials and possibilities.

The Master knew His fellows very well. Through His state of trusting in Father, and his ability to remain calm and open, He had an excellent mindal connection with His brethren. He certainly understood stress for He had experienced as much stress and anxiety as any of us deal with on a daily basis. It was in how He dealt with His anxiety and stress that we wish to convey to our mortal students.

Michael and Mother ask that we let them parent us in that we can trust them, can trust in their abilities, can trust in ourselves to receive what we need from them. In a state of anxiety, we will not receive this gift of mind-connection with one another or our divine caretakers. Therefore I say, turn to our divine Parents for calm and clear-thinking. With a fast-paced life, there is not the freedom to receive many spiritual benefits. It all is dependent upon your will. Realize these benefits, children; they are here, they really are yours.

This week, I give no other assignment than to 'think about what you really want.' Look deep within and think about what you really want – not what you think God wants. Not what you think you need, but what you really desire from the core of your soul. We will further discuss this mindal connection and how it moves the masses. For now, a few questions.

DIANNA: Abraham, in our Urantia Book study group, we recently studied about faith and trust. Also, we found out from the Teacher, Bob, that faith is a gift. [inaudible.] The interaction between faith and trust was always very cloudy to me, especially when in a situation of anxiety and pain. I read recently in a Welmek transmission of the Indianapolis Teaching Mission group, that as we ask for trust, this activates faith. So the more we go down our life-path and ask for trust, the more and more are we able to access that faith. Is there any clarification on that? I always thought it was the opposite way.

ABRAHAM: To me the gift of faith is practically like a sword given to a child. Without life's experience and lessons this sword of faith can be dangerous. Faith is exercised through trust – to go hand in hand when experiencing life in the flesh. Your experience here is to learn to 'believe without seeing,' and there are many roads you can take to come to a truer understanding of the faith/trust system. If you have trust in only what your eyes see then your faith will be solely in yourself – your abilities, your level of control. You can have trust in spiritual leaders and your faith will be their faith, it will be their blueprint of faith, so to speak. Real faith comes from the experience to dare to step away from the self, towards something greater. Real faith is like a growing energy that is produced by having trust in something beyond ourselves. Real faith comes from daring to be willing to not care about your personal image – what you may look like to others, and even appearing foolish from time to time. The gift of faith is that sword from Father, in whom we must trust to teach us how to use it. Is this helping? (Diana: It is beautiful, yes, and thank you.)

MIRIAM: Abraham, a word/concept you used in your lesson has just been resonating with me – “a promise of Father.” I was thinking a promise from Father pouring down on us and us reaching up with our faith, is quite the contract. You are saying for us to step away from the self, even when we don't know that is what we are stepping away from, and start to grow toward that loving entity? And that we are to do this even before we know it is Father. Like when you all talk about co-creation and partnering, that the Father is in us and we are part of the Father. That promise is just a powerful concept! I was thinking that the promise can't exist for us unless we choose to receive it. Just a beautiful lesson. Thank you.

ABRAHAM: Well said Miriam, my daughter. You are correct in that the promise is there. We have only to receive it. Therein lies our freedom, our empowerment, our ability to co-create our eternal destiny. Yes, well said. One more question?

HARRISON: Abraham, this past week or two I have been experiencing a tremendous amount of peace. I am very grateful for that. I would like you to address the men in the group, the brothers of the group. I think we all have unique challenges, situations. I think I am just asking you to speak to all the men and helping perhaps each one of us some way to take another step forward and grow a little more this next week.

ABRAHAM: That is truly courageous on your part to ask on behalf of yourself and your brethren, yes. I really have no words of correction. I have no advice concerning each one's direction. I have only the swelling of my heart overflowing with love and respect for each one of you, for I view you in your daily struggles – how you do not quit, you do not give up. You each, for the most part, are willing to eventually embrace life's humility and be taught from it.

Yes, I understand your position and regard each one of you with great affection. My words for you are simple – my love is with you. Go in peace, all of you, with excitement knowing that God is our gift and ever upholds us in all things. Until next week, shalom.

Expanded Perception | How Is My Perception Of Life Affecting Me
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-17-2002
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. There is an interesting feel in the atmosphere here this evening. The things discussed took you each to a place of realness. There is a tendency at times with mortals wherein they might talk from a surface level. There is something to be said for the shock-value of reality. However, that makes people really turn inward to find their true beliefs – not just words, but a moment of internal reflection that makes all true things rise to the top.

Perception, my friends, is the doorway of your thought processing. How you perceive things will determine what you will learn. Much of mortal perception is somewhat of a trap in that from whatever emotional or mental state you are in at the time of perception will determine how you understand things and find the meanings and values therein.

I can remember a time where my surface-perception drove me to strive for worldly things. I wanted what others found valuable. I wanted what was popular at the time. To have all of life's things that others found valuable made me think of myself as also valuable. How grateful am I to have had the company of my mentor, Machiventa, for his teachings greatly changed my perception.

Certainly, from a very young age, is our perception always leading us toward various things. With life's experience, our lessons come and our perception changes. While it is true that the educated of the planet are quite fortunate in the ways of the world, that does not imply that their way of perception is unlimited – for much of the time the so-called 'intelligent' are plagued by an over-abundance of logical thought such as 'cause and effect,' needing to be proven, and accepting results only by extensive observation and experimentation. Where does their faith lie! Where is that sense of 'something greater' than themselves!

Citizens on worlds settled in Light and Life do have great advantage where they are taught, early-on, the true and living values of life experience. Early-on they are not judged; therefore, they are not taught judgment. They are not ridiculed, made fun of or labeled; therefore, they do not incorporate any of this behavior into their personality. On these worlds, all of life is of value. There are not some individuals thought of as better than others. There is no thought to being more of a valued person because of years labored in education. Their seniors are not less valued because of age or infirmity.

Children, it is all a matter of how you perceive. Would you be overcome in thought by an automotive breakdown and look to the heavens asking, 'why me?' And yet, compare to that situation how you would feel regarding your own child who is suffering with a terminal illness. Is there cause for alarm at the petty annoyances in life? Is it worth raised blood pressure and other physical ailments anxiety can bring?

Perspective, children, perspective. Life is just life and it is just happening. How is your perception of it affecting you? Any aspect of life is especially difficult for those who make not time for moments alone with Father. Yes, the petty things of everyday-living can certainly burden one who finds not time for rest and reversion - there are not the coping skills for one who is with imbalanced perception.

I am sure that each of you who have seen a homeless man on the street has had at least a dozen questions run through your minds. The questions range from compassion to harsh judgment. With the new morontia benefit of mindal connection we can understand how he feels, yes. But for the most part, we cannot have any idea of what he has experienced; therefore, our perception must be neutral. "Should I give him the money he asked for?" "Will he use it to further feed his addiction?" "Is he really even homeless and not some sort of a scam artist?"

It is not really necessary that you do anything for the vagrant, but a prayer certainly would not hurt. But to perceive him in any judgmental light could only cause you to place upon yourself the same sort of judgment. Yes, it is all a matter of perception.

Take personal appearance for example: To age is not what others find valuable as far as aesthetics go. Therefore, a great deal of time and money is spent on a more youthful look in an attempt to buy personal value. It really only takes a small number of individuals to help create a change in mass-perception on issues and circumstances such as these.

Again this week, taking on the new challenge of expanded perception, again answer the question of what it is you soulfully desire. We will discuss this further next week. No questions. Know that myself and others are available to you each on a daily basis. We would so be honored if you should call upon us. My love goes with you.

Until next week, shalom.

True Perspective Comes From Knowing the True Personality Of Our Father
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-24-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. My heart is overflowing with gratitude to view you, my friends, dealing with human matters on a divine level. You are like the rocks in the river of experience becoming more polished with time.

As you can see in the world today how differing perspectives has led to either destruction or advancement. You have also experienced differing perception on personal levels that has led you to positive or negative action. It would seem that man would fight to the death to uphold their perspective. And yet, when world catastrophes occur, personal perspective is set aside in favor of the wellness of the whole. It is sadly true that some devastation must occur to affect the masses before they can be open to new perceptions.

Regarding the questions: What is it that you soulfully desire? How does your perspective on life, in general, help you to attain that desire? What limiting perspectives may keep you from finding that one thing you so much desire?

Some mortals hunger for freedom – and from their perspective, they can see no way to attain that. Some desire peace and get the exact opposite because of how they perceive the happenings of everyday life and the meanings and values that come with it. True perspective comes from knowing the personality of our Father, yes, the true nature of God. And knowing Father, brings you to a place in your own thinking where 'self' does not come first, but the will of God does.

To truly know Father, Mother, Christ Michael, and their numerous associates, there is a growing knowledge within that says: "Indeed all is well and all is taken care of." Therein is found trust in our Divine Overseer's abilities. Therein is self-confidence in our own abilities to perceive with the freedom of clarity. There are not the past painful experiences to color your perception. There is not that place of unforgiveness that makes individuals strike out to receive the affection they have so long sought after.

I believe for myself, personally, my sole desire is to understand the Father and to do His bidding. Putting that theory in the forefront of my thinking, all else comes to me – I want for nothing. With that mindset I have everything, I can have anything. Yes, I am a trusted child of God who finds it most joyful to serve and be in the presence of my First Source and Center. I can see with His eyes. I can hear with His ears. I can love with His heart.

Father most definitely makes me more than I could ever conceive of being. In Him, I have power to fulfill my eternal career – by and through, joy. Of course I have sorrow at times, but I can now perceive with the understanding that Father has. I feel good about who I am and where I am going – and believe me, it took a great deal of time and experience for me to get to this place.

Perception is a window; emotions may act as a screen, and judgment may be a shade pulled down. Personal self-loathing may be drapes completely covering my window of perception. Do you see, without the closeness to Father there is not that Parent/child closeness; there is not that feeling of well-being on any level – spiritual, mental or emotional, no.

Without that feeling of 'belonging to your universe Family,' there is always a searching for that feeling in other avenues – empty, temporary avenues, yes. Without that 'child of God' security, there is the self-perception of feeling inferior, so there is every reason to loathe the self, lose confidence, and to distort perception.

What are those things that lead you to that closeness with your divine caretakers? Are you allowing time to nurture that relationship? Journal if you will on low self-esteem issues. What avenues are there to turn the perception of weakness into progressive possibilities? A few questions.

SIMON: Abraham, I have been very interested in understanding what you mentioned in your recent lessons – your comments about having to go through the difficulties, stress, and strain of wanting to be better, to be something more, sort of spiritual pressure – and then having it open up to fruits of greater patience and so on. I don't feel like I have been very patient lately. I wonder about your analysis on that imbalance, or if I am just trying too hard.

ABRAHAM: Mortals, for the most part, are ever striving to progress; and when this progression does not appear to bring any fruit there is disappointment and impatience – which brings excelled determination to 'do more.' Doing more does not necessarily excel you in any direction except for, possibly, frustration. Simon, you have various stressful things occurring in life that you are having doubts over, or impatience-behavior, because you are uncertain about the outcomes of these situations. This is natural, of course. I see you as always putting forth great effort. Your reasoning however, may not align with what you have been trying to learn over the years. You can only have so much control in life – and if you can accept that, you will indeed live a less stressful existence. Impatience almost feels like you are being ignored or are unknown, and there is a fearful loneliness in that. If you can think back over your life how Father has always given you what you have truly needed, you can re-ignite the flame of faith – which should help you to have feelings of being watched over, and you can relax and allow the unfoldment. Is this helping? (Simon: Yes, and thank you.)

MIRIAM: I am really full of gratitude tonight. It has been six years since Don's automobile accident, and it is really profound for me this year because this Saturday is the anniversary of walking through that experience. I have been so overcome with lessons of heartfelt desire because without Father being there for me I wouldn't even have any heartfelt desires at all. What 'I think is possible,' and what 'I want,' and what 'I think I need' – I know now it is nowhere near what Father has in mind for me. So I just wanted to thank the Celestial helpers, Father and everyone, for knowing my heart and allowing my life to unfold like it is. It is just incredible. Another thing too is having those challenges happen in life wherein we can have opportunity to reach to Father for help. It might be an easier process for some people to learn the day-to-day life reaching to Father, but for me it has been quite an experiential process. Now I am learning in a softer, easier and more kind way. I can choose to put my head on Michael's knee in the middle of the day. Just a huge thank you to all of you that help each one of us and who get to discover what our hearts' desires are. Without, I wouldn't know what I am capable of having in my life. So I thank you.

ABRAHAM: Beautifully said, my daughter. Out of this tragic event, we have found each other and I have been most honored to be your friend and teacher. It has been beautiful to behold your growth. You learn a great deal through your softer countenance these days, but also are you a wonderful teacher to those who know you. I am also overjoyed at this time of this anniversary. Give my love to Don. (Miriam: Thank you. I will.)

AZSURAY: Abraham, you gave me my spiritual name, Azsuray, and you said the meaning of my name was one with many burdens. I would like to ask the question – is it because I have many burdens my name is Azsuray? or is because I am Azsuray that I have many burdens. If so, it seems I am living up to my name. I would like to know how possibly these names come about because really that name is my namesake.

ABRAHAM: There may have been some confusion. The name is more akin to one who has become more enlightened because of the burdens of life. No, no, you are not one with many burdens, nor do you draw those to yourself, no. I am certain that you are like a diamond becoming more perfected through the pressures of mortal life. You have remained faithful in many of life's uncertainties and that is quite beautiful. I can say this about the names, although my knowledge is somewhat limited: Your indwelling Adjuster, upon realizing your first conscious thought of Him, bestows upon you your name. These names are chosen to reflect the budding soul they have come to know. Much like mortal parents giving names to their own children, names are chosen out of that parental love your personal Fragment has for you. Is this helping? (Azsuray: Yes. It is beautiful.)

ABRAHAM: With that, I will take my leave. Know that you each are with God-given gifts that lead you closer and closer to Him. Your closeness need not be found through me, or any books or other outside sources. You each can trust in yourselves to find that 'God within' who loyally strives for your wellness every minute of every day. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

The Urantia Book | Crucial Crossroads of Change | Celestial Help Continues
Abraham, Urantia Fellowship Conference 2002 -- Estes Park, Colorado 07-03-2002
Back

International Fellowship Conference of the Urantia Fellowship (IC2002). Held this year in Estes Park, Colorado.

[Many within the Urantia community were not supportive of the Teaching Mission/Correcting Time movement – seeing it as an intrusion and perhaps a distraction from the Urantia Book study. This Wednesday evening meeting in Estes Park, Colorado was requested at the behest of Abraham (and/or his superiors) to address the Urantia community. This meeting was not a part of the Fellowship Conference agenda, but a side-scheduled meeting. Some of the skeptics of the Conference did attend this meeting.] I am here. I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am in understanding that to many, this process of communication seems strange and not aligning with your textbook (Urantia Book). I would reiterate that at this time in the history of your world, you are at a crucial crossroads of change.

Lo these many years, we have been making efforts toward swaying the mass mindset toward practical spirituality. Concepts are born every day that lead toward a practical spirituality – and without education, and putting these concepts into practical use, they will die. And that is certainly acceptable, yes, but there is a danger in losing those practical spiritual realities, that without, either drives a world's people further toward animalistic tendencies; or, mystical non-reality. It is our hope in this Correcting Time to bring a balance of logical spiritual action.

The Teaching Mission brings your textbook to life (Urantia Book). You can study all you want, but putting these concepts into practical daily living takes a great deal of effort. We are here to help move you forward to the actual living of the principles of the Urantia Book. The book can seem a bit technical or mechanistic, yes. We are hoping to bring a balance to this book of truth by adding love, and, making God the Father more reachable – or perhaps I should say, more useable.

As you have seen in religious history, there is imbalance; imbalance meaning, where there seems to be a need for an individual to stand above the rest, a need for certain individuals to appear to be more righteous or holy. The Correcting Time Teaching Mission brings a blended balance of Christ-like humility and a secure consciousness of universal well-being. The Master did all that was divinely and humanly possible to defer any self-glory; His mission was straightforward, looking toward the Father and His will.

How did Jesus of Nazareth maintain a wonderfully-balanced ministry where His eye was single to the glory of God? How was the Master so perfected in self-forgetfulness? Why was any self-elevation so distasteful to Him?

Our Master simply knew the Father's love – He had all He needed. And in this, there was no desire to call attention to Himself to gain the love and respect of His fellows. There was no joy for Him in self-glory. His complete joy was found solely in the Father's love. He was very secure – which, unfortunately, many in the mortal experience are lacking. Of course Jesus realized His divinity early on; and certainly, this was a great asset.

It is understood that you, on a strife-torn world, would experience a personal and even a collective insecurity. It is our goal in this Correcting Time to bring back what has been lost; to correct what has been wrong, and to bring light where there has been darkness.

Citizens on worlds settled in Light and Life have not the knowledge of this insecurity, for they have been educated from the day they were brought into existence that they are valued and loved, no matter what. These enlightened citizens seek not to step upon their fellows' backs to rise above and be seen as superior, all for the gratification of the ego; they work not against each other; the concepts of the various social classes mean nothing to them.

The citizens of Light and Life are all, indeed, parts working for the good of the whole. What is good for one is good for all. What affects one affects all. Indeed, these Light and Life residents are wholly secure in their universal citizenship, yes, and in their faith as a son or daughter of God.

In the Teaching Mission, we strive to bring back that 'lost security' - to make every individual feel valued and loved as an equal part of the universe. Not one is closer to God than another. In God's eyes, He loves each child as if it were His only child.

Our Mission is to unify, to equal the imbalances that tend to come with the mortal ego. I am saying, we are here to assist - not to shame or guilt you into spiritual submission, no. Our goal is to bring personal spiritual security. Not one stands above any one of you. Spiritual knowledge does not make one individual any more valued than another. To have that spiritual security brings new confidence - confidence to be in the world with an eye single to the glory of God.

There is not any religious practice, really, that can make you have more faith. There are many rituals mortals perform hoping to invoke God's presence, yes. I am saying God's presence is there already, no matter what! no more, no less. It matters not the time or mindset, He is always there. It is your willingness 'to allow what you think you want and need' to dissolve that will bring you more spiritual security, more cosmic connection.

For the remainder of the Conference, ponder your spiritual security, your personal mortal security also. Contemplate your status in the kingdom. Measure your faith/trust factor against what your eyes tell you is reality. Know that you are each safely secured within the love of the Father and His kingdom. Are there questions?

BILL KELLY [Pocatello Idaho TM group.]: Thank you, Abraham for your words here this evening. For the last several months in the Teaching Mission, Daniel and Minearsa, our group teachers - and many of the other group's transcripts - have dealt with the topic of 'living the morontia life, now, in this life.' Also have they taught regarding our role as cosmic citizens. And obviously, this is some of the emphasis-teaching that is ongoing at this Conference. It seems to me that the celestials are not just busy with Teaching Mission folks, but maybe also with other leadership in spiritual realms. I was just wondering if you could talk about that.

ABRAHAM: Absolutely. This, our Teaching Mission, would apply to all who would listen. As we move toward Light and Life, there has to be a great deal of healing and correction, just as it would happen on the Mansion Worlds. Yes, the Morontia lessons are occurring now. Where many are lacking, there will be instructions for overcoming and taking on a new and better way of living. The upheaval in the world today, a lot of it, is due to not having this morontial information, but incessant struggling with the ego and the desire for power and superiority. Yes, we are reaching whoever will listen, yes. Thank you.

QUESTION: Abraham, what is the new role of 'men' in this Correcting Time?

ABRAHAM: I would be careful in my answer, for there are many things that men must overcome, and a great deal of the difficulties stem from ego involvement. Fortunately, however, the willingness on the part of men to stop enforcing their long-held beliefs, and be more in a state of 'receiving' and 'listening,' will be a giant leap forward. I, personally, have witnessed that steel-exterior of many men break down through the realization of the changing times. Man would be left alone in a changing world if he would continue to carry on in a fashion where he believes he is superior to women, to children, yes. The evolution of the world has been an informative map to guide men toward a new way of thinking. History has been your best teacher. The breakdown of the family, although truly sad, has been very educational. You can see the damage children have suffered for having no fatherly experience, or negative experience with male figures. I perceive men's future roles as being one who would grasp self-mastery for themselves, and to portray a beautiful example for others. While man is wholly free to do as he wishes, he selfishly finds some joy in that. Many men are missing out on the valuable experience of family. With this, there is a damaged self-esteem that drives men toward further self-destructive behavior. A family is a builder of security; a reflection of your life's work; an introduction to the eternal career. We are with great faith that men have heard our message and are positively responding. We foresee wonderful changes ahead, yes. Good question. Thank you.

QUESTION: We know that the midwayers, of course, were the initial partners in bringing us Part IV of the Urantia Book. We also know that the 'sleeping subject' is mentioned in parts of the Book. And it is curious to me, that some people are saying that celestial contact was broken, or ended, when the book was compiled and then published in 1955. I am wondering if you could give us any insight to show us that indeed, celestial contact was not broken but has continued – not just renewed at this time in the Correcting Time?

ABRAHAM: The contact was not broken, no, but there is always a pause in bestowing spiritual information. There needs to occur a number of evolutionary things that bring the minds of mortals up to date with what is being revealed. To bring 'too much' information is asking for man to become fanatical and off-balance. The midwayer's involvement is monitored and guided to go with a flow of natural evolution. Am I answering?

SAME QUESTIONER: Yes and no. When you said that a certain amount of time had to occur, and that the mortal mind had to be ready for it, my mind immediately thought of – from the time that the Urantia Book was completed and the time that it was published we had World War II, the Korean War, and certainly the Viet Nam War followed immediately after that. Maybe the mortal minds were not ready to receive. I don't know if I'm putting words into your mouth. I just thought of that as you were talking.

ABRAHAM: Understood. There are regulated spiritual concepts bestowed, but never are the spiritual forces to pull away or leave and not help continue to guide. Wars will still continue. Man will still fight for sovereignty, power, and money; and much of his fighting will, unfortunately, be done 'in the name of God.' There is always divine assistance available, yes, but the delivery of new concepts is based on the readiness of individuals. Is this helping? (Reply: Yes, and thank you.)

CALVIN: Abraham, there's a growing mindset among the Urantia community that says there should be a 'Urantia-based church' established – an organized church-setting. This is probably something you'd like to stay out of, but if you would have a comment on that? It is a concept that is generating even here at this Conference.

ABRAHAM: Indeed, this is controversial. You can see for yourselves that still, the mind of man fights to push his own agenda. Therefore, this church-unification is difficult. A spiritual worship community would be productive if based on the teachings of the Urantia Book, and perhaps other things that lead towards a practical practice of spirituality – not toward mystical, but toward putting practical spirituality into everyday living. An organized church would be helpful if it brought man closer to God. If an organized church excludes certain individuals, does that bring man closer to God? If a church brings further insecurity to individuals, is that true work for the Father? No! A church that would be successful gives full sovereignty to Father. Such a church allows Father to organize, to bring healing, to bring balance to His children's lives – and to make His child, each one, feel loved, welcomed, and an important part of the whole. I can say no more. (Calvin: Thank you, Abraham.)

I am slipping. I would take my leave. I would also express my deep and abiding love for you each. I am truly touched by the faith and dedication you have for embracing our beloved Sovereign's Mission. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

The Urantia Book | Crucial Crossroads of Change | Celestial Help Continues
Abraham, Urantia Fellowship Conference 2002 -- Estes Park, Colorado 07-03-2002
Back

International Fellowship Conference of the Urantia Fellowship (IC2002). Held this year in Estes Park, Colorado.

[Many within the Urantia community were not supportive of the Teaching Mission/Correcting Time movement – seeing it as an intrusion and perhaps a distraction from the Urantia Book study. This Wednesday evening meeting in Estes Park, Colorado was requested at the behest of Abraham (and/or his superiors) to address the Urantia community. This meeting was not a part of the Fellowship Conference agenda, but a side-scheduled meeting. Some of the skeptics of the Conference did attend this meeting.] I am here. I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am in understanding that to many, this process of communication seems strange and not aligning with your textbook (Urantia Book). I would reiterate that at this time in the history of your world, you are at a crucial crossroads of change.

Lo these many years, we have been making efforts toward swaying the mass mindset toward practical spirituality. Concepts are born every day that lead toward a practical spirituality – and without education, and putting these concepts into practical use, they will die. And that is certainly acceptable, yes, but there is a danger in losing those practical spiritual realities, that without, either drives a world's people further toward animalistic tendencies; or, mystical non-reality. It is our hope in this Correcting Time to bring a balance of logical spiritual action.

The Teaching Mission brings your textbook to life (Urantia Book). You can study all you want, but putting these concepts into practical daily living takes a great deal of effort. We are here to help move you forward to the actual living of the principles of the Urantia Book. The book can seem a bit technical or mechanistic, yes. We are hoping to bring a balance to this book of truth by adding love, and, making God the Father more reachable – or perhaps I should say, more useable.

As you have seen in religious history, there is imbalance; imbalance meaning, where there seems to be a need for an individual to stand above the rest, a need for certain individuals to appear to be more righteous or holy. The Correcting Time Teaching Mission brings a blended balance of Christ-like humility and a secure consciousness of universal well-being. The Master did all that was divinely and humanly possible to defer any self-glory; His mission was straightforward, looking toward the Father and His will.

How did Jesus of Nazareth maintain a wonderfully-balanced ministry where His eye was single to the glory of God? How was the Master so perfected in self-forgetfulness? Why was any self-elevation so distasteful to Him?

Our Master simply knew the Father's love – He had all He needed. And in this, there was no desire to call attention to Himself to gain the love and respect of His fellows. There was no joy for Him in self-glory. His complete joy was found solely in the Father's love. He was very secure – which, unfortunately, many in the mortal experience are lacking. Of course Jesus realized His divinity early on; and certainly, this was a great asset.

It is understood that you, on a strife-torn world, would experience a personal and even a collective insecurity. It is our goal in this Correcting Time to bring back what has been lost; to correct what has been wrong, and to bring light where there has been darkness.

Citizens on worlds settled in Light and Life have not the knowledge of this insecurity, for they have been educated from the day they were brought into existence that they are valued and loved, no matter what. These enlightened citizens seek not to step upon their fellows' backs to rise above and be seen as superior, all for the gratification of the ego; they work not against each other; the concepts of the various social classes mean nothing to them.

The citizens of Light and Life are all, indeed, parts working for the good of the whole. What is good for one is good for all. What affects one affects all. Indeed, these Light and Life residents are wholly secure in their universal citizenship, yes, and in their faith as a son or daughter of God.

In the Teaching Mission, we strive to bring back that 'lost security' – to make every individual feel valued and loved as an equal part of the universe. Not one is closer to God than another. In God's eyes, He loves each child as if it were His only child.

Our Mission is to unify, to equal the imbalances that tend to come with the mortal ego. I am saying, we are here to assist – not to shame or guilt you into spiritual submission, no. Our goal is to bring personal spiritual security. Not one stands above any one of you. Spiritual knowledge does not make one individual any more valued than another. To have that spiritual security brings new confidence - confidence to be in the world with an eye single to the glory of God.

There is not any religious practice, really, that can make you have more faith. There are many rituals mortals perform hoping to invoke God's presence, yes. I am saying God's presence is there already, no matter what! no more, no less. It matters not the time or mindset, He is always there. It is your willingness 'to allow what you think you want and need' to dissolve that will bring you more spiritual security, more cosmic connection.

For the remainder of the Conference, ponder your spiritual security, your personal mortal security also. Contemplate your status in the kingdom. Measure your faith/trust factor against what your eyes tell you is reality. Know that you are each safely secured within the love of the Father and His kingdom. Are there questions?

BILL KELLY [Pocatello Idaho TM group.]: Thank you, Abraham for your words here this evening. For the last several months in the Teaching Mission, Daniel and Minearsa, our group teachers - and many of the other group's transcripts - have dealt with the topic of 'living the morontia life, now, in this life.' Also have they taught regarding our role as cosmic citizens. And obviously, this is some of the emphasis-teaching that is ongoing at this Conference. It seems to me that the celestials are not just busy with Teaching Mission folks, but maybe also with other leadership in spiritual realms. I was just wondering if you could talk about that.

ABRAHAM: Absolutely. This, our Teaching Mission, would apply to all who would listen. As we move toward Light and Life, there has to be a great deal of healing and correction, just as it would happen on the Mansion Worlds. Yes, the Morontia lessons are occurring now. Where many are lacking, there will be instructions for overcoming and taking on a new and better way of living. The upheaval in the world today, a lot of it, is due to not having this morontial information, but incessant struggling with the ego and the desire for power and superiority. Yes, we are reaching whoever will listen, yes. Thank you.

QUESTION: Abraham, what is the new role of 'men' in this Correcting Time?

ABRAHAM: I would be careful in my answer, for there are many things that men must overcome, and a great deal of the difficulties stem from ego involvement. Fortunately, however, the willingness on the part of men to stop enforcing their long-held beliefs, and be more in a state of 'receiving' and 'listening,' will be a giant leap forward. I, personally, have witnessed that steel-exterior of many men break down through the realization of the changing times. Man would be left alone in a changing world if he would continue to carry on in a fashion where he believes he is superior to women, to children, yes. The evolution of the world has been an informative map to guide men toward a new way of thinking. History has been your best teacher. The breakdown of the family, although truly sad, has been very educational. You can see the damage children have suffered for having no fatherly experience, or negative experience with male figures. I perceive men's future roles as being one who would grasp self-mastery for themselves, and to portray a beautiful example for others. While man is wholly free to do as he wishes, he selfishly finds some joy in that. Many men are missing out on the valuable experience of family. With this, there is a damaged self-esteem that drives men toward further self-destructive behavior. A family is a builder of security; a reflection of your life's work; an introduction to the eternal career. We are with great faith that men have heard our message and are positively responding. We foresee wonderful changes ahead, yes. Good question. Thank you.

QUESTION: We know that the midwayers, of course, were the initial partners in bringing us Part IV of the Urantia Book. We also know that the 'sleeping subject' is mentioned in parts of the Book. And it is curious to me, that some people are saying that celestial contact was broken, or ended, when the book was compiled and then published in 1955. I am wondering if you could give us any insight to show us that indeed, celestial contact was not broken but has continued – not just renewed at this time in the Correcting Time?

ABRAHAM: The contact was not broken, no, but there is always a pause in bestowing spiritual information. There needs to occur a number of evolutionary things that bring the minds of mortals up to date with what is being revealed. To bring 'too much' information is asking for man to become fanatical and off-balance. The midwayer's involvement is monitored and guided to go with a flow of natural evolution. Am I answering?

SAME QUESTIONER: Yes and no. When you said that a certain amount of time had to occur, and that the mortal mind had to be ready for it, my mind immediately thought of – from the time that the Urantia Book was completed and the time that it was published we had World War II, the Korean War, and certainly the Viet Nam War followed immediately after that. Maybe the mortal minds were not ready to receive. I don't know if I'm putting words into your mouth. I just thought of that as you were talking.

ABRAHAM: Understood. There are regulated spiritual concepts bestowed, but never are the spiritual forces to pull away or leave and not help continue to guide. Wars will still continue. Man will still fight for sovereignty, power, and money; and much of his fighting will, unfortunately, be done 'in the name of God.' There is always divine assistance available, yes, but the delivery of new concepts is based on the readiness of individuals. Is this helping? (Reply: Yes, and thank you.)

CALVIN: Abraham, there's a growing mindset among the Urantia community that says there should be a 'Urantia-based church' established – an organized church-setting. This is probably something you'd like to stay out of, but if you would have a comment on that? It is a concept that is generating even here at this Conference.

ABRAHAM: Indeed, this is controversial. You can see for yourselves that still, the mind of man fights to push his own agenda. Therefore, this church-unification is difficult. A spiritual worship community would be productive if based on the teachings of the Urantia Book, and perhaps other things that lead towards a practical practice of spirituality – not toward mystical, but toward putting practical spirituality into everyday living. An organized church would be helpful if it brought man closer to God. If an organized church excludes certain individuals, does that bring man closer to God? If a church brings further insecurity to individuals, is that true work for the Father? No! A church that would be successful gives full sovereignty to Father. Such a church allows Father to organize, to bring healing, to bring balance to His children's lives – and to make His child, each one, feel loved, welcomed, and an important part of the whole. I can say no more. (Calvin: Thank you, Abraham.)

I am slipping. I would take my leave. I would also express my deep and abiding love for you each. I am truly touched by the faith and dedication you have for embracing our beloved Sovereign's Mission. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Doing Service For The Welfare Of The Whole, Not For Self-Credit

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-08-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I thank you for your steadfastness in supporting this cause. It would seem that we really never fully appreciate our immediate family until we are away from them. You possess quite the anchor here in your group in the sea of vast possibilities. You each have grown to love and accept one another in spite of personality differences. You each definitely generate an ongoing energy for one another. You each bring balance to one another.

It is only because of your willingness to support these teachings that they even occur. Any one of you are fully capable of receiving this, or any message. As well, you each have an adequate basic knowledge on how to connect with the indwelling Adjuster. This was, in part, what our Mission had entailed from the beginning. You are teachers to one another. You each bring upliftment to one another and the strength to go forth into the world with an ever-renewed faith and hope.

There is a literal energy that moves through and between you each when you are gathered together. It is not completely understood by us but when you gather there is, for the most part, feelings of spiritual safety. Perhaps the saying of old by the Master explains it best: "Where there are two or more gathered, there also am I." Yes, there seems to be a feeling of solidarity and a significant presence of the Master when you gather together. It is a truly beautiful feeling to know that your brothers and sisters are at hand. It is comforting to feel that regeneration of energy when you are together – energy that seems to give you a renewed strength for the coming week.

Citizens settled on enlightened worlds have that family connection with everyone they meet. Stranger or not, there is 'a knowing' that each person is a well-loved child of God. In their worship services, very little is ever spoken because in just the gathering alone there is an obvious energy that brings renewed strength and balance to go forth into daily living. These individuals see no separation, no differences, that would make anyone believe that their fellows are any less of a child of God than anyone else.

These citizens utilize this energy to create workable ideas that serve the whole. There is a creative spark that occurs that generally makes life better, more beautiful. There is not the jealousy or envy among these people. There is a genuine gladness for any individual who has a brilliant idea. In having the support of their fellows, they feel less limited by the material life because they fully rely on their peers to bring balance and progressive ideas to add to the original ideas.

It is said that 'two heads are better than one.' This may be more true than you know. Those minds who promote wellness for the whole have the support of an entire universe – and believe me, at times it is easier to gain the support of a universe than it is from our mortal counterparts. Of course one can only lend support to what one finds to be true, yes, that is understood and certainly encouraged. There are still many individuals however, who have that need to gain credit for lone projects. Many good ideas die every day because they are not shared and made more by other's suggestions, other's creative avenues.

As we move toward Light and Life it is crucial that we desire a realness for the whole – and yes, that includes personal wellness; but true personal wellness comes about through doing good to others, looking out for one another's welfare, and having given up the desire to have special credit.

When we look at the Master's life, we see how He delegated much of the work out to His apostles, disciples, even the little children. He was the Creator of a universe, why should He engage in trusting His fellow mortal friends to do such important work for the kingdom! He could have very well done it all on His own, and probably without such aggravation. He, however, deeply loved His associates, and by delegating work to them it made them feel like a genuine part of the kingdom.

One who would attempt to do everything without trust in their fellows to share the load has only self-trust, a need to control, a need to push forth personal agendas – this is not a generation of energy, no, this is to feel the burden of the world upon your back. Your fellowship, your communication, is as important to your own personal balanced well-being as it is to the kingdom as a whole.

What would you believe to be the most significant thing individuals could do to help usher this planet into the stages of Light and Life? Is there safety in numbers? Is this group a safe place to build creativity or new ideas? When you are listening to your fellows' thoughts and ideas, what is the first thing that comes to mind? We can only pray that it isn't: "Where do I fit into these ideas? What is my role? What will they have gained while I feel loss?"

The masses truly do move the whole. Your best step toward this movement is to have genuine concern for one and all and to do what you can, within reason, to promote this. As we gather each week, I am made to feel more encouraged, more energized to be about the Father's business. We will forgo questions this evening. Know that my love is always with you. Until next week, shalom.

Promote a Calm Mind | Negative Thoughts Can Be As Detrimental As Negative Words
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-15-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am much appreciative of this peaceful atmosphere here this evening. It is easier to impart my message when there are open minds and serene attitudes, yes. I understand it is difficult to keep a peaceful outlook throughout your week. Life seems to move so quickly and I understand that many of you have worry that you are not taking those steps closer to Spirit – of course in the anxiety of worrying, you are not.

Many worry about the doing of Father's will and which direction they should go; this also produces anxiety and tendencies toward doing just anything, even perhaps things you do not want to do but feel that you should. Worry and anxiety are disrupters of the natural flow of life; yes, in a manner of quiet patience you are more equipped to go with the natural flow of daily living. In patient observance you are literally better connected to the spiritual circuitry – which practically leads you without your hesitation or questioning 'why.'

With these morontia lessons, we always refer to our relatives who are on worlds settled in Light and Life. These citizens are raised knowing this patient demeanor and observant attitude. Just in possessing this one morontial gift of patience, how much could the world change? These Light and Life citizens so much rely on the Father that it becomes rather natural 'to allow the unfolding of life.' Of course they exhaust their resources, but their spiritual information is not distorted due to anxiety and wondering if they are on a correct path or not.

This week, I would ask that you do what you can to promote a calm mind. For one week, try to allow the natural unfolding. And although it is easier said than done, trust that Father knows every detail of every occurrence; allow him His place in the unfolding, to aid you in perceiving His divine will.

Our lesson is twofold this evening. One, on a personal level, and the other is regarding the brother/sisterhood:

Every day, many individuals struggle to attain some sort of acceptance or love. Poor self-esteem seems to drive some individuals toward various activities that would bring self-worth. Much of this, however, is fleeting. Much of this 'searching' for love and acceptance is even more damaging to individuals who already feel very little worth, love, and acceptance. I am in awe regarding the influence mortals have over one another. It really is a living energy, bad or good, but nonetheless – a living energy.

There are many who know not their status in Father's kingdom; and so much do they rely upon their fellows to reflect to them their true being. You that are in the Teaching Mission, as those beyond on the enlightened worlds, have a wonderful opportunity to be a Godly reflection to your fellows. A small show of faith in a downtrodden fellow sure does bring a great deal of encouragement. Even individuals you know who live on the dark side of life would truly benefit from you showing them the potential you believe them to have.

I speak not of empty flattery, no, but confiding heart-felt encouragement. I am telling you of the awesome divine power you each possess. The power to do God's work is yours if you should so desire. A child who is encouraged, loved, and showed that they are valued, grows up completely different than a child who is taught he can do no good on his own, and that he can be no good just as he is.

The core of this message, however, is mostly for you to focus on your thoughts, your thinking pattern. Negative thoughts toward others can be as detrimental as negative words. The circuitry upgrade brings you a great deal of benefits that perhaps you have not thought of before. Thoughts are real – and people can literally feel them; they can read negativity in your countenance. I say, this is not godly reflection, nor is it promotional of Light and Life.

It is important to be a source of encouragement and Godly reflection to your fellows by your words and actions, true – but if your heart and mind are not in alignment with your words, then perhaps your words are empty – and believe me, people know this. The individual who finds their self-worth in God has a true desire to go about sharing that divine encouragement and being a Godly reflection. This energy is moving and uplifting – making the masses look for the good, to be good, to do good. This is moving. This is real spiritual power. This is Light and Life living.

This week, along with the other assignment, be aware of your thoughts toward others even if you do not speak to them. Watch your judgment that might arise – your thoughts of compassion, or thoughts of envy. Remember, these thoughts are living. Also, think about being a Godly reflection, a source of encouragement; this is a light unto whom all are attracted.

You have much to think about. We will not take questions this evening; you have enough spirit moving amongst you that you can help one another with any questions, yes. I am with more love for you each time we meet. Until next week, shalom.

Promote a Calm Mind | Negative Thoughts Can Be As Detrimental As Negative Words
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-15-2002
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am much appreciative of this peaceful atmosphere here this evening. It is easier to impart my message when there are open minds and serene attitudes, yes. I understand it is difficult to keep a peaceful outlook throughout your week. Life seems to move so quickly and I understand that many of you have worry that you are not taking those steps closer to Spirit – of course in the anxiety of worrying, you are not.

Many worry about the doing of Father's will and which direction they should go; this also produces anxiety and tendencies toward doing just anything, even perhaps things you do not want to do but feel that you should. Worry and anxiety are disrupters of the natural flow of life; yes, in a manner of quiet patience you are more equipped to go with the natural flow of daily living. In patient observance you are literally better connected to the spiritual circuitry – which practically leads you without your hesitation or questioning ‘why.’

With these morontia lessons, we always refer to our relatives who are on worlds settled in Light and Life. These citizens are raised knowing this patient demeanor and observant attitude. Just in possessing this one morontial gift of patience, how much could the world change? These Light and Life citizens so much rely on the Father that it becomes rather natural ‘to allow the unfolding of life.’ Of course they exhaust their resources, but their spiritual information is not distorted due to anxiety and wondering if they are on a correct path or not.

This week, I would ask that you do what you can to promote a calm mind. For one week, try to allow the natural unfolding. And although it is easier said than done, trust that Father knows every detail of every occurrence; allow him His place in the unfolding, to aid you in perceiving His divine will.

Our lesson is twofold this evening. One, on a personal level, and the other is regarding the brother/sisterhood:

Every day, many individuals struggle to attain some sort of acceptance or love. Poor self-esteem seems to drive some individuals toward various activities that would bring self-worth. Much of this, however, is fleeting. Much of this 'searching' for love and acceptance is even more damaging to individuals who already feel very little worth, love, and acceptance. I am in awe regarding the influence mortals have over one another. It really is a living energy, bad or good, but nonetheless – a living energy.

There are many who know not their status in Father's kingdom; and so much do they rely upon their fellows to reflect to them their true being. You that are in the Teaching Mission, as those beyond on the enlightened worlds, have a wonderful opportunity to be a Godly reflection to your fellows. A small show of faith in a downtrodden fellow sure does bring a great deal of encouragement. Even individuals you know who live on the dark side of life would truly benefit from you showing them the potential you believe them to have.

I speak not of empty flattery, no, but confiding heart-felt encouragement. I am telling you of the awesome divine power you each possess. The power to do God's work is yours if you should so desire. A child who is encouraged, loved, and showed that they are valued, grows up completely different than a child who is taught he can do no good on his own, and that he can be no good just as he is.

The core of this message, however, is mostly for you to focus on your thoughts, your thinking pattern. Negative thoughts toward others can be as detrimental as negative words. The circuitry upgrade brings you a great deal of benefits that perhaps you have not thought of before. Thoughts are real – and people can literally feel them; they can read negativity in your countenance. I say, this is not godly reflection, nor is it promotional of Light and Life.

It is important to be a source of encouragement and Godly reflection to your fellows by your words and actions, true – but if your heart and mind are not in alignment with your words, then perhaps your words are empty – and believe me, people know this. The individual who finds their self-worth in God has a true desire to go about sharing that divine encouragement and being a Godly reflection. This energy is moving and uplifting – making the masses look for the good, to be good, to do good. This is moving. This is real spiritual power. This is Light and Life living.

This week, along with the other assignment, be aware of your thoughts toward others even if you do not speak to them. Watch your judgment that might arise – your thoughts of compassion, or thoughts of envy. Remember, these thoughts are living. Also, think about being a Godly reflection, a source of encouragement; this is a light unto whom all are attracted.

You have much to think about. We will not take questions this evening; you have enough spirit moving amongst you that you can help one another with any questions, yes. I am with more love for you each time we meet. Until next week, shalom.

Spiritual Maturity And The Personality | What is the Difference Between Personality and the Soul

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-22-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a joy it is for me to meet with you each week. As I look at you, I am made to ponder the infinite potential that you each possess. Possibilities upon possibilities rise within my mind when I see how different you each are. I sometimes long to be back in your position in the mortal realm because this time in history is so exciting – moving so fast. The assistance that has been bestowed upon the planet is quite accelerating the mass education.

From where I am now, I am, for the most part, in understanding at how precious each individual is to Father and His kingdom. I am in awe at times when I am able to view your gifts. I feel honored to see your faces when you have really understood various things and are joyful from the enlightenment.

Last week we discussed your personal divine empowerment to bring change through good thoughts. We discussed being a Godly reflection or a light in the world. This evening I would steer us a bit off our regular course to have discussion on other topics that seem to be needed in the group at this time.

Our main focus this evening will be spiritual maturity and the personality. Personality is indeed a divine gift, but is somewhat shaped by life experience. It is perhaps a foundation to which all other things are added upon. For example, if you have had a traumatic experience as a child then certainly is that added onto the core personality that is truly you.

Life experience does make us unique to one another, yes, but in the eyes of our Father we are more valued beyond our own comprehension. When you first began your earthly journey, you were like a seed with an eternal potential – loved and cherished, and expected to eventually grow and find your way back to Father. During the course of the mortal life, many characteristics became attached to the personality.

The personality is not the soul. The soul could be viewed as a noun and the personality would be as a verb. The personality makes the soul unique. The events in life can shape the personality, and that can have an effect on the soul. The God-knowing individual, however, subjects the soul to Father – and that has an effect on the personality.

When you are a child, your personality-characteristic is somewhat shaped by your elders. As you grow and experience, you are further shaped by culture, social status, peers, personal desires, fear – and are so often with that feeling that 'the gods do not know me.' As you mature and search for meaning in life, you discover that all of existence is so much more than you ever thought it could be – therein enters the presence of God.

As you are finding out who Father is, and wanting to make life changes as a God-knowing person, spiritual maturity begins to show itself. Personality is refined by this maturing through a process of cleansing, so to speak, perhaps uncovering that non-valuable experience that has caused you to have certain spiritual poisons. Perhaps there is some unforgiving that you may need to attend to – some grudge-holding, some anger over experiences that you did not have the spiritual maturity to understand.

Look at the life of the Master here on this world. Disregard the fact that He was a Creator Son on a Mission here to uplift the planet – but just as a person, a human being, He was treated so dishonorably. Would you think that He would even make effort to remember the names of those who persecuted Him? No, of course not. That is spiritual maturity. He was looking to Father to build stamina upon the personality, not allow His earthly fellows to take from who He really was, or add negativity to His core self.

Last week we discussed your divine power to bring Father's light to your fellows. Let us also note how we could bring negativity to others – or they, to us. If one has wronged you, and you never really find understanding for this or forgiveness, this will indeed make a mark on that essence that is really you. Perhaps you will be a bit more untrusting and unwilling to be open to others, to life. As we mature spiritually, we are subjecting the self to the Father's will, and that shapes the personality. That fortifies the core self with the spiritual nutrients you need to be a producer of spiritual fruits.

This week, think about your core self – is there perhaps baggage that keeps you dwelling in the spirit poisons. One who is so close to Father has a sort of protection – an insulation wherein no one can really injure you. I mean that in an emotional or spiritual manner – you cannot be dragged down into the depth of negativity because your final word and thought come from the First Source and Center.

With spiritual maturity, you feel a certain peace that you are progressing – and small as it may be, you are moving forward. In your spiritual youth, it appears that nothing ever changes and you are stuck. In making the effort to walk with Father you are moving into your eternal potential – your true uniqueness as His beloved child.

Find time this week to journal on your personality aspects. What is 'Father's hand in who you really are,' and what other things may be just non-productive baggage? Ponder the freedom in spiritual maturity. No questions this evening. Know that I am always with deep love for you each and that I always have you in my thoughts. Until next week, shalom.

Spiritual Maturity And Self Mastery - Versus Our Need To Control

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-29-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. With each passing week, I am more amazed by your willingness to soften toward Father and make effort to put forth your best self. I realize that many times mortals are overcome by the spirit poisons, but still I am quite touched by the effort to put forth good.

The foundation of most world religions is an attempt to know and do the will of God. Some religions take self-sacrifice to extremes as if that will be pleasing in God's eyes. Some religions are about weekly rituals or ceremonies that they believe will bring them closer to God. Many of Father's children do their utmost to see that they will gain entrance into heaven. Some only believe 'just in case God is real.' Some fear what will happen to them if they don't believe.

One thing we have learned from the study of mortals is that they do well if they believe they have a certain amount of control in their lives, in the world. Of course, this is somewhat conflicting with the goal to be subject to the Father's will. Spiritual maturity comes when you can understand the balance between God's will, and personal participation in daily living. I do believe, children, the key to spiritual maturity is in the mastering of the self.

The ego would always like to have its way to create experience that makes it feel good, worthy, and at times even superior to others. Most of the mortal lessons on finding the balance between God's will and personal control will be learned well within the experience of learning to tame the ego; this is perhaps why we teach a great deal on the Master's perfected humility.

I realize that Jesus of Nazareth was the incarnate Creator Son of the universe; but still, He had to experience and achieve self-mastery in his mortality. Most of His self-mastery was completed before He even started His ministry, even before He really knew who He was. I believe there are several factors that played into the Master's taming of the self:

One, was His perfected humility, which placed Him side by side with His mortal counterparts – not above, not below.

Secondly, He thrived on learning. He loved to discover new things and the inner workings thereof. He was a willing student.

Third, He always conferred with His Father on everything. He spent time with the Father in silence – not really asking for anything, only becoming familiar with the Father's presence. From this, there was a wonderful energy received to not only cope with daily antagonisms but to rise and meet each challenge with His highest possible light.

And last, He always had a mindset in favor of the well-being of the whole. Life was not just about Him – but about everyone. Many of life's experiences affect a great many, and the spiritually mature consider the well-being of everyone.

Last week you focused on being free from that un-valuable baggage that has put you in a pattern of being overcome by spirit poisons. This week we will also incorporate self-mastery. I am in understanding of the mortal life. I do recall a time when I could not control everything, even everything that affected me. My intentions and actions all went to my need to control. It took many lessons in humility to release that need to control and focus more on being a co-creator with our Father.

Children, you are not helplessly subject to life, to one another, not even to God, no. To study the Master's life and remember those factors that brought Him to self-mastery will be a wonderful head start for you. Believe me, Father knows your struggles, insecurities, fears, and doubts – and truly you are not punished for any of these because it is part of your mortal journey; you are supposed to have these experiences.

Like Jesus, when He had reached a certain point of self-mastery, that is when His mass-ministry began; that is when He was greatly concerned for the well-being of the whole; that was certainly reaching levels of spiritual maturity; that was when He had discovered His divine identity. A few questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, Imara would like a few words for her if you have any.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. My daughter, I realize that these things you had waited for are coming slowly, and I would say that is certainly not of your doing, no. This is natural unfolding. There are some lessons you are to experience before other things can happen. It is well that you have stayed in contact with this group. I certainly do consider you to be one of my students. You have a beautifully-open heart and yet, the times of uncertainty can be overwhelming. I have not any specific direction for you other than to trust in that part of you that knows God. Be careful of attempting to know God through others. You are a well-loved daughter of God and fully capable of knowing Him for yourself. Remember to balance the divine life with practicality and logic. You are a daughter with tremendous potential for being a teacher of light. You know I love you and I am with you often. Carry on.

CALVIN: Abraham, I really thank you for these last two week's lessons, I've gotten a lot of help from them. Is there anything else you would want to throw in to help?

ABRAHAM: It is with sincerity and humor that I would say, to answer that question would take more time than we have. We will make time this week to meet. Have not worry, my son. All is coming into understanding. Until we meet, be of good cheer. Another question?

SAMUEL: Abraham, Helen (Valeta Covington) has been feeling some frustration, among other things, with sharing the Teaching Mission, the Urantia Book, and trying to get a TM group going out there in Michigan. Do you have any words for her?

ABRAHAM: These things take time. They go on their own momentum. They practically happen without any effort. Take, for example, the newly formed group in New Mexico with teacher Thomas, among others. None of these individuals had foreseen a TM group beginning there. In the meantime, however, they made themselves a part of other groups. They read other Teacher's lessons. They still lived the teachings as best they could without having that grounding foundation that a group can bring. While a group is wonderful, sometimes you just have to do what is second best. Is this answering? (Samuel: I hope so.)

With that, I shall take my leave. Know that I am with great affection for you each and I am always interested in how your lives are unfolding. Thank you for having me. Until next week, shalom.

Child Lost In A Maze | With Father We Can Do All Things | He Is The Source of Our Confidence

Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 08-05-2002

Back

Greetings. I am ABRAHAM. When I listen to you discussing various life topics, I am made to see the fruits of the Correcting Time. Your good-natured outlook on the mortal ways brings balance between the ego and the inner-God. Well done. I am amazed at the energy here this evening. I am honored to be among such sincere seekers.

Having lived the mortal life, I am in almost full understanding of what you each experience on a daily basis. Last week we discussed the difficulty in maintaining some control in life while being subject to the Father's will. I realize that at times life seems to be somewhat of a battle, and it would seem as though the spirit within is weakened.

If you would envision a small child within a large maze, the child is running and attempting to find an exit. Of course he cannot view the maze from above because he is so small. As he searches, he feels at first challenged and amused, but with every turn, there seems to be no escape. A feeling of panic may begin to arise and he begins to lose hope that he will find his way out. The child begins to lose faith in his ability to succeed. As the small child wanders, he tires and hopes somebody will come for him. In this state, he is afraid, confused, lonely, and lost.

Imagine the child's relief upon hearing his father's voice calling to him, showing him the correct path. The father is able to view the entire maze from above and can safely guide the child. Once again the child is feeling that comfort and security - he is feeling that relief from anxiety and fear. His faith is in his father; his confidence is restored, for he knows he can always rely on his father.

As you experience this mortal life, I know you have felt on occasion like this child. At times it would seem that every avenue is blocked, and even though you have done your best you are still feeling trapped. You are, at times, losing faith in self and your abilities.

Tonight our lesson is incorporating the Master's perfected humility with personal confidence. The child in the story began to lose faith in himself; and it was not until he reconnected with his father that he once again felt secure and confident. While you must know humility and learn how to discern Father's will, you also need to have some sort of faith and belief in your personal abilities.

One who has an over-abundance of confidence is certainly indebted to the ego. One who languishes in self-doubt, on the other hand, does battle within their own mind - there is anxiety in feeling inadequate and inferior, which brings you to the belief that you are really not capable of much.

Many individuals every day do not bother to even try; they are with feeling that their challenges are 'too much' for them. Many times, they are surprised, however, and when they have achieved a certain goal they will certainly blame that on 'luck.' To be with perfected humility increases your ability to hear God. To hear God is to know He is always with you – and that certainly brings one confidence to move about in the world.

Citizens who live on enlightened worlds have not such self-doubt; and therefore, are not limited by their own minds. They truly live in peace, day after day, knowing that Father goes before them and their way is made clear. Their upbringing does not teach them to loathe the self, but to listen to Father. They have moments of thought where they attempt to foresee various circumstances, but Father is always at the forefront of their minds and self-doubt is not even a factor.

On these enlightened worlds, each child is raised to believe they are valued and that all living things matter. They were never taught 'perfected humility' through shame and self-loathing. Perfected humility – to them – means to set aside the self and listen for the Father's voice; their self-confidence is rooted in the Father, and to be about the Father's business one must have some faith in themselves as a child of God. To have self-confidence is to believe that Father resides within and is ever working for your good.

Self-degradation is not pious – neither is it perfected humility. Father wants not for you to be humiliated and made to feel small so that you will lose faith in yourself as His child, no. Perfected humility is that point where the child sits down and listens; it is where he stops and waits for his mind to be still so that he can hear the Father's voice and know he can be helped. He can rely on that one fact – that God is within him and He will show the way. 'Balanced' self-confidence comes from knowing Father is within, that He is unlimited in His ability, and that He works for the good of all.

This week, think about your scale of confidence. Is the scale tipped toward the ego and forcing God away? or is it leaning toward God who makes you feel that you can do anything! Think about the Master's confidence; where did that courage come from to face the masses of individuals – most of whom wanted to persecute Him? How could He walk before leaders of that day and age with fearlessness and enthusiasm to spread the good news?

Jesus knew full well that He could have met His demise on many occasions but He had the Father within and allowed Father His work through Him. This was His confidence – the knowledge that Father could do all things and was resident within His very being.

Also this week, journal those incidents that occur that make you feel without confidence or humiliation, instead of perfected humility. Only a few questions.

CAROL P.: Abraham, you talked earlier in the transmission tonight about enlightened beings from enlightened worlds. I wanted you to clarify for me if you are speaking in a parable? Are these worlds among us? Or just a state of mind?

ABRAHAM: These worlds are somewhat similar to yours except for the fact that their experience has brought them to a state of peace or a more perfected society, so to speak. They are real worlds that exist within your universe of Nebadon. They are planets which have the majority of their inhabitants believing in the 'One God' and adjusting their personal selves, their communities, their government, to a more perfected and peaceful state with this One God at the helm. It is the goal of many to bring Urantia to this enlightened state. It is well described within your Urantia textbook. Good question. Another question?

AMROLANE: Abraham, would you discuss a little bit more about the nature of control and choice in the perspective of this realm. Sometimes it feels like there is choice – and then it feels like it's just a story about choice because of the way spirit moves us. There is some confusion. I would appreciate some clarification.

ABRAHAM: Our Father's most valuable gift to us is the gift of free will, and that includes the right to make decisions. He is not in any way ever trying to control you, for that takes away the purpose for the very existence of His children. Even from my own standpoint now, I wonder at times at my choices made. I do have full intention of always choosing Father's will. But still, now and then my personal desires can override my intentions. This is known and completely understood by Father. Control is somewhat within the realm of power; many individuals seek power – and therefore, they must 'control.' Those who choose Father's will have real power, and can achieve great things – all for the glory of He whom all power stems from. A good measure for you to use when discerning choice and control is to ask your deepest, most highest self: “What is most important? Is it something that feeds the ego? or is it something that glorifies the Father?” Is that at all helping? (Amrolane: It is a beginning, yes.) Abraham: One more question?

LUKE: So what is the difference between being stubborn in the doing of Father's will – and knowing that; or, being stubborn in our thinking that we must achieve? Take a guy like Thomas Edison, how many times did he try to get the light bulb right? I feel 'it is right' when there is a path that feels right and peaceful – it is energetic; then I know it is right. Am I making sense here?

ABRAHAM: I am believing it is a matter of experience, growth, and spiritual maturity. There are so many levels to view this mortal dilemma. Many individuals are afraid to share every aspect of life with Father because they think that Father does not want for them what they want for themselves. If mortals knew that Father desires their contentment, comfort, security, and abundance they would not have this inner battle – or as you say: “be stubborn.” If you can believe that Father knows the desires of your heart and incorporates them into His master plan, then do you look at life's daily events as all a part of yours and Father's journey. 'Spiritual growth' comes from believing Father wants what you want, yes – but 'spiritual maturity' comes from wanting what Father wants.

I am slipping. Know that I have deep affection for you each, and I am always concerned for your wellness and growth. Know that I love you. Until next week, shalom.

Mother's Fierce and Unstoppable Empowering Love | View Our Difficulties As Challenges

Abraham & Mother, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 08-12-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am amazed each week when I see what your unity can bring about. You each provide a solid rock for one another to cling to when the tides of life are too swift. Truly beautiful, yes. It is wonderful to see each of you unfold with a new comfort around one another. Each of you has both learned and taught – and that is the foundation of this brotherhood.

Last week we focused on the realization that 'with Father we can do all things.' He is the source of our confidence. He is our measure of comfort in the world. If you could literally see the Father's orchestration, you would trust that all is truly watched over, and that your ability with Him reaches far beyond your own expectation.

I realize that in the mortal body we are subject to the material life, somewhat, but with the planetary healing and enlightenment, you will be able to break through the limitations of the material life to find that unlimited reality of the spiritual life.

I am your MOTHER. My children, I am again honored to meet with you. It would seem there is a need to show myself and our Universe Creator as interpersonal beings. As your Parents, we are always watching out for the well-being of our universe children. While the Son is perfected in mercy, He is also with logic. While I have shown myself to be a caring and concerned mother, I am also with a fierce and unstoppable love.

I indeed ache for the many of my children who experience tremendous pain every day. And then on the other hand, I am in total support of Father and Michael, and I see to it that I do what I can to ever draw my children near. When it is time to comfort, I comfort. When it is time to allow learning, I do step back and allow exposure to the experience you need that draws you ever Paradise-ward.

Spirituality is not about coddling the downtrodden universal souls, no; it is about directing and empowering universe children to gain that experiential education that is required to fulfill that eternal destiny. I am not without mercy and compassion. I am for being committed to following the Father's universe plan. At times that creates upheaval, and it is quite a task for me to step back and allow the experience, to allow the pain.

My joy comes when my children look to me to help them find the value in experience. My joy comes when my children's joy comes at the realization that our universe is quite just and orderly.

I am your Mother as perhaps you have not seen before. I am unlike your society's portrayal of the good mother. I would be forceful in my goal to raise my children. I am not about to be swayed away from Father's eternal plan because of my own pain for my children. I am at your side. I am dedicated to your empowerment. I am committed to the healing of the mind. I will be known to all of you.

While daily events can seem to beat about your soul, we who stand beside you, empower you to continue through any battle. I am not here with a Band-Aid and a kiss, no. I am here with the mindal tools that will empower you to believe you can break through the limitations of the mind. You can be confident in a world of uncertainty because your Mother stands by. I never quit or lose hope in a child, even when they lose hope in me.

Your mortal experience is not to beat you down into being good little children, no. It is to empower you for what your eternal career will bring. Each lesson is a step forward. Each lesson is to strengthen you to become more, to take on more. Know that I hold you. I protect you. I will empower you to be about the Father's business.

There will always be challenges; and my children, as your Mother I will not allow you to lay down before your troubles – but stabilize you in mind and empower you to go beyond your own expectations; and take hold of your eternal career with enthusiasm and confidence, knowing that your Universe Parents are nearby. My deepest love to each. Farewell.

I am ABRAHAM. Thank you, Mother. With your encouragement we feel we can view our difficulties as challenges, and know that our Mother – who is the embodiment of intelligence and strength – stands by.

This week, contemplate your own society's concept of an ideal mother and compare that with what our Mother said this evening. Think about our Universe Parent's role – what does that look like to you? Are they far off involved in universe affairs, sitting on thrones dressed in white? or are they by your side, whispering words of encouragement and direction into your ear! Is the universe just? – even when justice appears to be harsh? Is your concept of Michael still that small frame who hangs upon the cross?

My friends, your concept of our Lord really determines your levels of trust in Him. What do you find empowering? How easy is it for you to become un-empowered and lose confidence, lose hope, lose faith? What steps might you take to come back to that core belief that says: 'The universe, and all within it, is orderly and fair, and that you are in safe and loving hands?'

No questions this evening. Look for me during the week in your quiet moments. While I appreciate the unity of the group, I cherish our moments of 'one-on-one.' My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Self-Mastery | Commitment To Doing The Father's Will

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-19-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I so look forward to being in your presence. I enjoy your rainbow of personalities and the personal gifts you each bring. I am with new inspiration to forge ahead in any direction Father would have us go. Mother's declaration of commitment to our Father's will has cleared the view upon my path. I am also with a renewed dedication to wholly embracing Father's will.

To mortals, it would seem to be a confusing endeavor to discern what Father's will entails. I realize the ego and spirit poisons create barriers to being able to have our ear in Father's direction. I can say, one who dares to go forth with determination to be within the Father's will is on a correct path to actually discerning what His will is.

True commitment to the doing of Father's will is to be constant, not wavering in troubled times. Commitment to Father and His will is about maintaining an observant mind instead of having an emotional reaction. One who is devoted to the doing of Father's will is also committed to attaining self-mastery. Where there is effort toward mastering the self there is an ear for God, there is an ability to better discern His will.

Tonight our discussion will be on self-mastery. Many of mortal's inability to master the self is much of the time due to poor physical health. One who feels sickly is one who reacts out of some desperation. This week, I would recommend that you each evaluate your physical well-being and tend to the needs of the body. Rest, diet, exercise - are all important in maintaining physical balance.

Second on our list to attaining self-mastery would be to have understanding and resolution of past experience. Where there is no room for understanding or forgiveness there is an open wound. These open wounds also bring one to react from a place of fear or desperation wherein there is always that need to protect the self from further pain. In this protection there is a blocking of that new experience which brings new learning, growth, self-mastery, and higher levels of ability to discern our Father's will. I ask not for you to wallow in past pain, no, but to have understanding for it. Know that Father has complete understanding and can help you find resolution and forgiveness.

Third on our list is regarding stress and anxiety levels - this perhaps is the greatest hindrance toward attaining self-mastery. This is where Mother can be utilized to bring you back to a place of balance. There is such over-stimulation in the world where there seems to be practically no place to find quiet. Constant stimulation becomes somewhat habit-forming; and some find the quiet to be either fearful, or lonely and non-productive. If there is opportunity for quiet time at least once a day, by all means, take advantage of it. This is wonderful rest for the mind and an opening to the presence of Father.

Fourth on our list - you each understand for the most part, the spirit poisons and their stifling effects; you know that in the midst of this there is very little self-mastery. With the onset of the spirit poisons, it is altogether wise to interject with your spiritual tools before total control is lost. The Master had His human moments, yes! He had His experience with spirit poisons; He had His moments of what some would term as weakness. But never did the Master take time to self-punish or harshly discipline that human side - He went directly to the Father. His trust in Father was that living link from which He received divine strength.

Divine strength does not so much block the spirit poisons so as to internally bury them causing various ailments, no! Divine love diffuses the spirit poisons with spiritual solutions. You need not be controlled by your emotions. Your cravings need not manage your life. You, and the Spirit within, have complete power to overcome any and all things.

This week, let us recommit ourselves to the doing of Father's will, whatever that should entail, always staying with an observant mind instead of reacting with emotionalism. Remember our divine Parents are loving, as well as logical. Evaluate your physical health and make adjustments where needed. Journal about those wounds that you feel still interfere in your life today. Be ready for understanding and resolution. Take advantage of quiet moments and remove yourself from external noise when possible. Maybe there will even be a moment or two for stillness.

This is a time for celebration on your world. Let us think about the Master and all the changes He has made. Also, let us be open to all the possible changes to come. Forget not that Father wants for your abundance and well-being. Take a moment or two for gratitude. No questions this evening. We have a busy week ahead. My love is ever growing for you each. Until next time, shalom.

Self-Mastery | Taking A Step Toward Surrender
Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-26-2002
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. The more I am with you the more I learn. I express to you my gratitude to your willingness to have me as your friend and teacher. I am always moved by Father's children putting forth all their effort into wanting to do His will and be as good as they can be. What a show of faith and trust in one that is not visible to mortal eyes. I am especially inspired when I view those individuals who have had such a difficult time keep fighting the good fight of faith. We shall continue to pursue the lessons on self-mastery. I give you, Emulan.

EMULAN: Greetings, friends. Although I have not interacted with you too much lately, I always am up-to-date on your ever-expanding education. I am with such gratitude to work with one who loves you each so much – yes, my brother and mentor, Abraham. Most of you know my mortal history, but I will refresh your memory anyway.

As a mortal on an evolving planet such as yours I experienced a tremendous loss when my wife and daughter were taken from me in a terrible accident. My spiritual foundation at that time was not all it could be – in fact, I quite cherished the material life; I had the average appetites of a mortal and thought that my greatest happiness came from satisfying those appetites.

It is easy to understand that when the tragedy struck I had not the spiritual cushion to help absorb life's seemingly cruel blows. My treasure had lied in the material world – and in that state I had absolutely nothing left that I found value in after the loss of my loved ones. I had no spiritual tools to cope with my despair; I had no hope of ever regaining what I had lost.

Of course I was overtaken by the spirit poisons. It seemed I had severed any chance to be comforted from those on high. The more poison I allowed to control me, the more lost I became. I did of course have my battle with mental illness. In the depth of the spirit poisons I could see no reason to embrace anything good; I put out negative, and therefore, I received negative. I was definitely a broken man. In my broken state I had completely surrendered all I ever knew, felt, thought, and loved. This was God's doorway to my healing – this is where He stepped in and reached beyond my material body, my spiritually poisoned mind, my blackened heart.

It was not until I knew total darkness that I could finally understand that the darkness served no one; it held no value, meaning, or purpose.

Being saturated with the spirit poisons was a prison that kept me from all good things. I had imprisoned myself. In my anger and despair, I so much wanted revenge for what had occurred to those I loved. I so much wanted to be compensated for what I had lost. I could see no positive way I could be actively involved in overcoming what had befallen me.

In my surrender, I could hear that voice of the One who loved me beyond my own comprehension and understood all that I had ever done. Father understood my pain, yes! and yet, in His love for me, He could not simply take it from me, for where would the value be in that! I took a step toward surrender; Father took a step toward me. I stepped forward to embrace Him, and He stepped forward to help me. I could see the spirit poisons were keeping me from finding meanings and values; and in order to literally survive I had to have those meanings and values.

Although the time seemed so slow, I began to handle life's events with a positive outlook as if I was looking through the Father's eyes. In my willingness to be active toward a Father-directed path I discovered the fruits of the spirit, the very tools I needed to not merely survive, but find the meanings and values that would take me into my eternal career. I was not only healed and made whole but filled with the desire to do Father's bidding and help others who were with my same experience.

You, my friends, need not be broken to find that place of surrender. Surrender is not weak, no, but truly the action of the courageous. Before the loss of my wife and daughter I did have fear Father would take me where I did not want to go, yes; I at times would share only bits of my life with Him. Still, my life was so chaotic. It was not until I trusted that Father wanted for my highest good that I allowed Him into all of my life. In the surrender, I became spiritually empowered. I became equipped to handle any and all things.

This week, think about the meaning of surrender and what you are allowing Father to participate in. Remember it is the mortal child who must take that first step of faith and have trust that Father will step toward you. Think about your output of negativity and its repercussions. How does this keep you imprisoned in the spirit poisons? To rise above the spirit poisons toward embracing self-mastery, you must take that forward step in Father's direction, keeping a positive focus and an observant mind open to learning new meanings and values.

Ponder on the fact that 'surrendering' means not giving up what you truly desire, but more-so, focusing on (and trusting) in what Father may desire for you. The universe desires your abundance in all ways – especially your eternal experiential education. And embracing that fact, you have available before you, endless possibilities. With that, I will close, but not without expressing to you my deepest love and loyalty. Until we meet again, farewell.

Self-Mastery | Allow Not Impatience To Hurry Our Lives And Miss Needed Experience / Story of Job

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP

09-02-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I love these small, but intimate groups; our association becomes much closer and our connection is with a little less static. I remember those warm summer months and especially it being a time of great activity. A time when the daylight hours are longer, made it possible to squeeze more into life.

With the serenity of Fall approaching, it seems that the mind becomes more clear and concentrated to learn and grow more. We all know some individuals however, who dread the approaching change as if their anxiety will cause it to slow down. As we keep with the topic of self-mastery it becomes more understandable on how individuals with anxiety will practically lose all their energy in fighting against the natural flow of life as if it were custom-made for others, not particularly themselves.

Children are quite prone to that anxiety when their needs are not immediately met; they are easily gripped by the spirit poisons. We all hope that in time we can learn to be more patient when our needs are not met, and more appreciative when our efforts produce gratification. This time-span between child and adult is filled with the experience that would help one to increase in both human and divine levels. Without this time-span, there is no experience that produces meanings and values that takes one to their present destination.

Life is a series of stages, and all the requirements of each stage is important in building who you are becoming. "When I was a child, I had the things of a child. When I became a man, I put childish things away" – is a noteworthy saying of old. Without experience, how would one know that the childish things are not serving anymore! Without that valuable life experience, how can one know the values and meanings of a maturing adult!

Children always appear to desire to speed through the growth process because there does seem to be more benefits – and adults are prone to slow down the aging process because there does seem to be fewer benefits. There is not much appreciation of each stage of life. Rather, there at times only seems to be the urge to 'hurry through each stage and get it over with.' In this, the experience is lost, lessons are postponed, and life seems not to hold too much meaning.

It really does take a mature individual to appreciate and be really present within each stage of life, for in so doing, life's lessons are more meaningful. There are always new tools to be had; there is a real focus on what life's occurrences and Father are trying to teach you. In hurrying through life, there is a great deal of value overlooked and you are not equipped with the tools that aid you in attaining self-mastery.

We can learn a great deal from the elders of your world. Some seem so peaceful and appear to enjoy every moment. But also, some of your elders seem to be embittered by past events and are in a mode of self-protection, in which they take any means to control life's circumstances. Their mind is always in that state of: 'if only I had another chance.' One who is a young adult is not going to handle life's circumstances like one who has had more years on the planet; and often it is common for those who have had experience, to judge harshly those who have not.

In each stage of life it is important to really be present – to learn what you can, in order that you can all the better move on to the next stage. There are no shortcuts. One who is anxious will find no joy in their present stage. It is common to feel disappointed in yourselves when the spirit poisons have overtaken you, but you must agree that you deal with difficulties now in a more advanced state than you did a number of years back.

This brings me to the parable of Job. In this story, Job is somewhat blinded by what has befallen him, and acts from a state of anxiety. He is not equipped to see the real meaning and value that can be found within his circumstances. It is not until he is quite disappointed in himself that he receives that spiritual ministry. Do you see – in his surrender he acts not from a desperate, anxiety-ridden and spiritual-fruitless place?

In embracing the animalistic tendencies there is no ministry from those on high, no. It is available, yes, but one caught up in emotional animalistic behavior is not able to receive. In your times of so-called weakness – when the spirit poisons have overtaken you and you have that disappointment in self – focus on that surrender that takes your mind from reacting with animalistic behavior, toward listening and receiving information that promotes self-mastery.

This week, make effort to slow-down the busyness of living to enjoy those educational moments of whatever stage you are at now. Look not that time controls you, but that time teaches you. Take all the time you need to completely understand those lessons that your experience teaches you now. There is tremendous joy in that, because therein lies the presence of God. Therein is your strength. Therein is your map to self-mastery.

Also this week, think about instant and delayed gratification. Ponder the multi-level lessons that teach one who is willing to wait and really understand. Read the story of Job in your Urantia Book, it is filled with meanings that will all be different to you each according to your various stages of life – then have discussion.

What a treasure for me to be with you each week. Next time, our lesson will be kept short to take questions. Know that my love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Self-Mastery | Trust | Be Patient In Awaiting Father`s Instruction

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-09-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am quite uplifted by the energy in the room this evening. I feel particularly grateful tonight for having you each in my life. I feel loved, I feel heard, and I feel accepted in being my complete self. Thank you.

I always enjoy studying self-mastery because there is always something new to incorporate into our eternal career. From where I am now, for me to learn some new techniques on self-mastery makes me feel grateful and empowered to move forward. Your discoveries concerning your own road to self-mastery are not to make you be discouraged at your seemingly slow growth, no. They are to equip you with the tools that are ever leading toward our Paradise Father.

I realize that for mortals – to trust that Father knows you each, and knows your desires, is somewhat difficult. As mortals, we all yearn for one thing or another. Certainly, everyone needs the basic things in life to survive, and to have one of those basic things removed does indeed produce fear and anxiety. To act from a mindset of fear is to choose to act from those basic animal instincts.

Much of the lack of self-mastery is due to 'fear of loss,' or emptiness, loneliness, and pain. It is known that all mortals, for the most part, strive for happiness – that is the common thread in weaving the fabric of mortal life. It would seem that when life's upsets would occur, that it would somehow distort the common thread you are attempting to weave. Many times, instead of taking a moment to be quiet and wait for Father's instructions, there is the urge to cover over or ignore those snags in your life's tapestry.

Yes, in the overall pattern we find we have weaved, there is not the beauty one would have hoped to have created. There are more mistakes to correct; there is more anxiety from the feeling of failure or being behind – and this does bring about that further assault from time, which seems to be so valued here on this world. To fully devote yourselves to a life in the Spirit is to fully trust that Father knows every detail of your life's pattern and can empower you to become more than you ever thought possible.

To be patient in awaiting instruction, is to free yourself up to be available in that slow and repetitive process of 'correction.' Instead of having to keep correcting because of impatience, fear, anxiety – there is the contentment of 'encountering something new,' something that you have been prepared to complete; there is that confidence that whatever you may encounter, Father will assist you in weaving a most beautiful and intricately-detailed pattern.

In understanding self-mastery it is important to feed the spirit; and, to really trust that Father knows your desires and aids you in fulfilling them. In this trust, there is a decrease in anxiety which would promote patience and waiting upon the word of God. Yes, this is a benefit of delayed gratification. This is diffusing the assault of time, to create that beauty that was meant to be.

This week, think about how many occasions you have rushed into without Father-guided assistance and had to correct, over and over again. Reflect upon your trust-levels concerning Father and how He is not a 'stumbling block' – but rather, a 'building block.' What is the overall meaning to the parable of Job? What was his stumbling block and what was necessary for him to do to get back on a right course?

This evening's lesson is kept short for questions. Have you questions?

WARREN: Abraham, I would like to run something by you concerning your life here about four-thousand years ago. Relating it to what I interpret as far as this self-mastery. The little I know that is revealed in the Urantia Book is that when you were here, you attended the Melchizedek School three times, as I understand, and you had pretty much been converted into giving up your numerous gods. As a result, you were chosen to relay the torch of the truth of the 'One God,' and all the while preparing our world to be the bestowal planet of Michael, our Creator Son. You came back from Egypt, after two military victories where were given much of the spoils as a gift from Pharoah. Coming back to your encampment at Hebron, and having kingly ambitions, you soon confederated under your command, seven surrounding tribes; and with that strength, getting out there conquering further, you eventually had confederated eleven tribes under your command. It was at that point, upon your return from conquering at the battle of Siddim, that Melchizedek, having basically refused to sanction your scheme or vision of conquering Canaan, made a covenant with you with a promise of a son from your beloved wife, Sarah. You had children already from Sarah's handmaidens, but no children from Sarah. This covenant was to be sealed and sanctioned. And that was when I guess you were told by Melchizedek that your offspring, and the future occupation of Canaan, would be as numerous as the stars. And in due time you would seek an agreement. At that time, even though the covenant wasn't signed at that point, you were promised your son, Isaac. And yes, Isaac came. It seems to me that after that, by faith, you became more dedicated to doing the will of our Father as you learned more and more through Melchizedek. In seeking the knowledge of the will of this 'one Father' - this Father/Spirit within us, this constant renewing level that comes via the resulting revelation, the personal revelation - that you were able to recognize more of true reality. And I see in this act that as a result, you received not only a clarification of vision, but also an enhanced cosmic insight. In that, you were more able to master yourself, not just with the human effort, but with the effort that came about as your spiritual vision was clarified and your cosmic insight, enhanced.

ABRAHAM: Well said. I have to admit this was the struggle of my entire universe career so far. I was with that desire for power and superiority. I was indeed willing to do any and all things to attain it. I first came to the Father because I thought I could convince Him to allow me my way. Through the mentoring of my brother and friend, Melchizedek, I did learn that what I thought I most desired had changed with each day of experience and education. As I subjected myself more to the Father's will, my desires changed from worldly to the divine. It was definitely with great struggle that these changes were made. But as I made effort, Father stepped forward to assist. Each time I allowed some spirit poison to be released, Father replaced it with spiritual fruit. Many many years of practicing to surrender enabled me to naturally want to embrace Father and His ideals. Like the story of Job - when he had experienced enough to know he could not fully trust in his own thinking, he released it; and his desires were to invoke something higher, thereby receiving what the story refers to as a vision of God. Yes, you are correct that with your efforts made toward living a life in the Spirit, it does become more natural to receive direct Father-guidance. This is not attained without struggle, of course, but it is surely an open window that receives light. Good question.

WARREN: Thank you, Abraham. Might I ask if you have fused with your Thought Adjuster?

ABRAHAM: No. (Warren: Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. I do feel that tremendous closeness with my indwelling Father Fragment and yet, I know my efforts made here and now are all leading up to that beautiful day when we become one. Another question?

WILLEENA: Abraham, can I ask you a question about my process where I am getting closer to Father, trusting Father? It has happened twice before that I was starting to be closer, and then I had experiences that I don't know how to describe except to say they were multidimensional experiences that frightened me, and I shut down and went away. I am just reconnecting again now; it has been about a six-month period of time. I wonder if you can suggest something as I get closer, that I can do to help me get through instead of going away.

ABRAHAM: This is somehow related to your past experience as a child? (Willeena: Yes.) Abraham: This has been a stumbling block, but in the long run it will be to your great benefit. I suggest revisiting that era in which you were made to feel a tremendous burden. Yes, there was some disappointment, seemingly, in every time you would reach out. You were either taken advantage of or were disappointed by too much responsibility. You are, in some way, fearing that Father may do this to you. This is simple. Do not complicate this. You are standing at the door – just open it. Have not worry, my daughter. You are indeed moving forward. Another question?

WARREN: It has been nearly seventy years since the Urantia Papers have come down from whatever source. From what I understand, Satan was interned shortly around the time these Papers were laid out–1934/35. Is Caligastia and/or Daligastia free to roam? Are they still upon this Earth here?

ABRAHAM: No. They were also charged and found guilty of conspiracy against the Universe System. There are still details that are not quite understood – even by myself. But, from all I understand, the rebels are no longer; yet some of their influence lives on in the minds of man. Is this helping? (Warren: Yes.)

ANTHONY: Abraham, I brought with me that lesson from Ham from last year; it was very comforting about the 9/11 tragedy one year ago. I wonder – not to detract from the impact of your lesson tonight – would it be good for one of us to read that tonight? or would you prefer to share your thoughts you have on this? or both?

ABRAHAM: I find Ham's lesson to be very helpful. Of course feel free to share. I still view this worldly event as tragic – and yet, the unifying benefits are astounding. When time permits, please share.

I give you each my gratitude for your faith/trust in these lessons; you indeed make them happen. Thank you for allowing me to be a part of your lives. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Self-Mastery ~ Like Job, Do Not Escape to Avoid Responsibility, Escape Toward Surrender To Father

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-16-2002
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. The energy in the room this evening is exhilarating, to say the least. I so look forward to spending this night each week with you as a collective group. Boundless ideas are inevitable for a group such as yours. Well done. Your personal insight is not merely passing thoughts anymore – they are becoming reality. Your willingness to learn brings you new insight and the courage to follow through in a higher manner.

When we review the parable of Job, we can see that he himself was his stumbling block. His upbringing, religious training, and ego gratification, all played a part in bringing Job to that mindal stumbling block. Definitely, he wanted to be seen as worthy in the eyes of God. He wanted to be seen as favored by God in the eyes of men. He wanted personal validation as a child of God and mortal of the realm.

For a time, Job's thoughts turned toward escape. He so much desired to be free from his pain – ‘the sooner the better.’ In his impatience and fear, he sought freedom through escape. Is there freedom in escaping mortal adversity? Is there spiritual advancement in escape? There is temporary release, of course, but not that gratification of overcoming adversity and moving forward along the path of an eternal career.

There is some mortal satisfaction when one can free themselves up from personal entanglements, yes, but there are also those soul-knowing feelings that one has been ease-seeking and cowardly – and that most always leads toward the building of the ‘animal mind,’ not the ‘spiritual.’ True happiness lies in the investment of the spiritual life. Eternal gratification comes from knowing you have bravely faced life's challenges, and without a doubt have most certainly earned the growth you have attained.

There was a time in the Master's mortal career that He had sought escape. It took a great deal of mental and spiritual reasoning, prayer and surrender, to reconcile within His own mind that though the Father's cup appeared to be bitter, it was indeed Father's will that He drink it.

This was also the case with Job, where he had finally become disgusted with his cowardly and ease-seeking ways. He realized his tendency to embrace the animalistic way of fleeing adversity and realized there was no honor or integrity in this, for it added to his feelings of unworthiness and decreased his level of confidence in his ability to do any good thing. In his abhorrence of self, there was his surrender, and there was his insight that ‘alone and without God’ there was nothing of value. In this small opening of heart and mindset, there is the still small voice within who whispers practical guidance and comfort for the soul and mind.

Low self-worth is rampant in the world today. And I bring you not this lesson to add to that burden, no, but to aid you in your efforts toward self-mastery. "Alone, without God, who am I? "Where is the value? "Where is that soul-knowingness that in all my efforts there is eternal advancement?"

I realize the mortal life is fraught with struggle, and certainly does Father understand your desire to escape from time to time. During those moments He invites you to escape closer to Him. Allow Him His deepest desire to be your Father – to love, comfort, and guide His child toward Him. There is not one part of existence that He is not interested in. He desires to be close to you in all ways.

This week, take time to journal an answer to the following questions: Are you your biggest stumbling block toward attaining a Spirit-led life? What techniques might you practice toward reconciling the mortal mind to embrace the divine cup? Ponder the meaning of 'insight' and how it reveals itself in your lives. Read the story about the Masters' reconciliation concerning drinking the Father's cup. Contemplate the courage it takes to fully surrender.

That is all. No questions. Know that my love is ever growing for you each. Until next week, shalom.

Back

Self-Mastery | Reconcile With Father's Inevitable Cup

Abraham & Michael, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-23-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Your faith brings me here each week, yes, and your trust does bring these lessons. Know that I also hold you in faith and trust as my universe brothers, sisters, friends, and coworkers. I am also inspired to be witness to your weekly discussion. You each generate a comfortable energy that invites all to participate and to be 'just who they are.'

I so loved the story about the Master's mindal reconciliation with the Father's inevitable cup. It was obvious to see the Master's human side being put to the divine test. It should give comfort to the mortals who also struggle and are challenged to drink the divine cup. The Master experienced to the fullest everything that you experience. This is quite reason enough to go to Him in all your life's daily experiences.

MICHAEL: I am your Brother/Father. I am with such joy to be invited to share your path with you. I am grateful for my time in the flesh so that I can better understand you, my children. I have complete understanding of the struggle between the mortal and the divine. I experienced fear, anger, despair, hopelessness, and loneliness.

Doubt not that I was overcome from time to time with the spirit poisons. The one thing I held above all else was my trust in my Father. Through experience, I was indeed shown that He was there with every step of my mortal adventure. Faith and trust was my saving grace. It was my key to the kingdom.

Being born in the mortal body is not an accident or a wrong that you spend a lifetime to make right. It is what it is - a journey from the animal to the divine, a map toward attaining your key to the kingdom. I knew without a doubt that Father knew me, my struggles, my frustration, and concerns. That was the belief that empowered me to carry on.

I felt not shame at my humanness because that was exactly why I indwelt a mortal body. It was all part of my experience. I was supposed to know the mortal life - the spirit poisons, the spiritual fruits, the good, the bad - and still keep finding my way back to my Father in heaven no matter what had befallen me. With time and experience, I knew that He was my place of safety, encouragement, confidence, and any knowledge I needed to carry forth my work.

I know you. I have experienced with you. I would be overjoyed to help guide you toward self-mastery. The heavens truly look forward to that day when a mortal child is able to really hear and feel a part of the universe family. Mother, myself and numerous associates, find it our greatest joy to bring you heavenward.

You do not merely work 'for' the kingdom - you 'are' the kingdom. You are well within the universe family, yes, and you have available your universe Parent's assistance, with comfort and encouragement to always carry on. If you can know this for yourselves, truly know this, then the battle of self-mastery is half won.

You dwell not alone; you are known and completely understood. We judge you not, but truly understand your needs. Self-mastery, and reconciling the human mind toward the Father's will, is allowing time to have its place. These things happen not overnight; they happen not with the ease-seeking mind. The fruits of the spirit, and self-mastery, take tremendous effort, yes! but believe me, the joy therefrom is well worth it.

I am in your midst always. Mother is also at hand. Our goal is to bring our children - all of our children - closer. You are my children. I am in you and you in me. We have naught to fear, only love to gain from our co-creatorship. In joy and peace, carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. Our gratitude to you, our Master, our Brother/Father - in whom if we set our eyes upon, we cannot fail.

This week, think about your levels of allowing Michael and Mother to truly be your Parents. Ponder your status as a child of God within the kingdom. Consider - do you fight the ways with shame or embarrassment? - or can you simply learn from experience and allow time its place in the reconciliation of your mind with the will of God. Journal how you would see yourself as a person who has attained self-mastery. In all your decisions to take action this week, ask yourself, 'how does this serve?' A few questions.

CALVIN: We are honored to have our Brother/Father address us. Thank you, Michael. Abraham, we welcome tonight Rita B. for the first time; and I don't know if Warren S. was introduced a couple weeks ago or not. Also, we are glad to have Claireesa's health good enough to have her back with us.

WARREN: Abraham, it is a joy, a pleasure and an honor, to be here. I have read approximately two years of the past lessons here at this meeting. I find how balanced and how much they coincide in even greater detail with the tool I have been with quite a number of years now - the Urantia Book. It is so artful and so balanced the way you have expressed these lessons. I have a twofold question: May I have an assessment? And, may I know my spiritual name? I am curious - if that is not asking too much. Either way, thank you.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Thank you for your kind words. I do know you, but we shall become better acquainted over time. It is an honor for me to meet with a scholar like yourself. I am in understanding of your enthusiasm and good intention to be of use as a child of God. I do perceive some fear of lack within your personal being, which causes you to have certain behavior patterns. You are learning well though, my son, that this fear is a product of your own mind. You are daring to step forth to change your patterns; and with that, your fear becomes less – you feel more fulfilled, more accepted, more heard, and understood. Allow the great tool of the Urantia Book to come to life within the heart also, and not just the intellect. The Correcting Time Teaching Mission tempers the intelligence of the Book with the actual living love of the Father. You are known. You are safe and well loved. At this time, focus on the origin from which this fear of lack stems from. One moment. In the closest possible use of the English language, you are known on high as Marshall. Welcome to the Correcting Time. (Warren: Thank you.)

CALVIN: Not a question, but thank you for your help with the struggles of life. Also, again my thanks to Michael for his lesson, and being here with us tonight.

ABRAHAM: You are welcome and thank you for your courage to carry on with these Mission tasks. You do well.

SARAUNA: Abraham, I just want to thank you very much. I feel so grateful that you are our teacher and that you guide us no matter what stumbling students you have on your hands. I just want you to know we are really grateful for you. We will do better.

ABRAHAM: Sarauna, my dear, I was, and possibly still am, one of those stumbling students. I see you not with ease-seeking intentions, no! but as being fairly disciplined. I am honored and overjoyed to know you each. Be at peace in your learning. You each do quite well. That is all. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Back

Content of Mansion World Teachings not affil
Self-Mastery | Our Responsibility As Children Of The Most High

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-30-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am with such gratitude each week to share in the building of our spiritual scaffolding. With each new piece of learning, we rise to new levels of understanding. I thank you for your assistance in the building of my own understanding.

As a man thinks, so it becomes his reality. Last week our lesson assignment asked you how you would perceive yourself as one who is skilled in self-mastery. Many mortals, being so grounded in the material life, think not to take the time to envision a new and better way – 'life simply happens to them,' they seem to be not aware that 'they can make life happen.'

Past experience may lead one to believe that they are destined to live and be what they have been taught from a mortal standpoint. One who was perhaps living in the days of war-time would live their life as if it was still war-time. They would perhaps have fear of being poverty-stricken and would be quite selfish with their material goods. They could possibly live with the fear of personal safety, and be not trusting of their environment.

It does take some mindal work to surpass these limitations, yes, but the expansion in mind and new possibilities are well worth the effort. A child who has perhaps grown up in a loveless home would certainly, as an adult, have difficulty foreseeing or envisioning having a love-filled home. This is all simply an obstacle to what we can use to transform into those spiritual materials that build the scaffolding to higher understanding.

If you cannot envision yourself as one who has attained or who is attaining self-mastery – or even perhaps to know not the meaning thereof, then this will certainly cause you delay. Not to worry however, delay is simply delay – only temporary. You indeed have all of eternity to experience everything to its fullest. Michael said self-mastery is the door in which enables Him easier access to you. He also spoke of co-creatorship with His children – meaning, that you have ability to make what you can envision, a reality.

Michael and Mother bestow upon us that Parental love that makes us feel secure in our status as a child of God. They love without condition or judgment, and seek to help us to become more and to get closer to them. This is quite empowering if you can allow it to become reality for you. This takes our minds from a limited mortal place into a place filled with divine possibilities. With their faith in us, we can have faith in ourselves. We can move beyond that mortal veil into an ever-expanding horizon.

Father can bring you the lessons you need to find your way to Him. I can teach of what I have been taught, yes – but children, you are the ones who put the fittings of the scaffolding together. This is your responsibility as children of the Most High. We cannot force you to climb to what you are not ready for. One who has been ease-seeking in their efforts to build will find an unstable foundation in which to climb to new levels.

I say, children, have not anxiety. Enjoy the spiritual labor and build your levels – with integrity. Commit to the work. Commit to truth. As the Master's mortal mind was divinely challenged, yours will be also. Take on the attitude of an 'observant scientist,' not a 'tightrope walker.' In all your building, ask yourself with each piece you are preparing to fit: "Can I envision a completed work?" "Can I work with the integrity of the Master?"

This week, keep with the theme of being mindful of how your actions serve. What past experience may keep you from envisioning an unlimited life? Is life simply happening to you? or, are you in co-creatorship with the divine Parents.

I'll take not questions this week, perhaps next. I would have you know that I feel deeply for you each. It is such an honor to serve in our beloved Brother/Father's Mission. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Back

Content of Mansion World Teac

Our Emotions Tend To Interfere With Self-Mastery

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. With each week we are to meet I am with more love, hope, and inspiration. Your spiritually daring ways are the catalyst to change for not only yourselves but the many who know you. Yes, the spiritually courageous are helping to move the masses forward into Light and Life.

Courage does not necessarily mean strength - mindally or physically, no; courage more-so means the endurance to carry on 'no matter what.' You, my children, co-workers and friends, definitely draw me out to be spiritually daring and bold. Being divinely outgoing is not a matter of force, no, but a matter of recognizing opportunity to do the right thing. It is opportunity to drink from the Master's living well, to become empowered and inspired to be about the kingdom business.

Of the Master's many attributes, I so admire His self-forgetfulness. During His mission on Earth, He worried not about Himself for He fully trusted in the Father's watchcare. In this state of mindal freedom He could grasp the Father's living will, and moved about with that spiritual courage that set in motion a great many changes on the planet. The Master sought neither fame nor even personal well-being; and in this, there was His divine power - His ability to work with the hands of God.

In keeping with the theme of 'mastering the self,' we will this evening discuss emotions. Jesus knew full well on the day of that momentous wedding at Cana that His many associates, family and friends, expected a great occurrence to take place at this occasion to prove that He was indeed the long-expected Messiah/Savior.

Fully trusting in Father on that day, He set out to join in the festivities of the wedding. The Master's heart was light, He was looking forward to a day of joy and fellowship. His joy lied mostly in the trust that His Father would be in full control. He felt burden-free, even knowing full well His family and associates expected Him to perform. For a time, the Master was indeed safe within His divine mind; He expected not His human emotions to have such a heavy hold on His desires; His desire was to always do the will of the Father.

Human emotions are indeed a mystery to me - for one-half of emotions lies within conscience and the knowing of good and evil, while the other half lies within the ego and the need to preserve personal well-being. While emotions are certainly a part of the human experience and the divine plan, they do tend to interfere with the attainment of self-mastery. "As a man thinks, so it becomes his reality." Your emotions have helped to shape where you are now.

Yes, even the Master was drawn away for a time, by emotions. The compassion He bared for the woman who raised Him was enough of a window of opportunity to allow His own desires to override the Father's will. This is not sinful, no; not iniquitous, no - just a portion of the mortal experience. The Master does quite understand the power of human emotion. He knows your discomforts that lead you to react without allowing the God-mind to participate.

Without a firm spiritual diet, the emotions become stronger than the divine mind.

Emotions are similar to the domino effect – one always leads to another. Even the Master, upon realizing that His emotional side had led to the production of the wine, was somewhat angered by His seeming weakness. He was also saddened by His associates' needing to be shown in a material way instead of simply practicing faith.

Those with a firm spiritual foundation can arrest these human emotions before they take a firm hold and cause more drama. The story of the wedding at Cana was a prime example to mortals that the Master truly understands the mortal makeup – our mental and emotional systems.

Children, if you can truly feel the love of God – then you know that is a need that is truly satisfying and there is really no need for extra drama in your lives. It is understandable that life can sometimes be mundane and the smallest things are enlarged to make life appear more exciting and productive; this is, however, not much more than an emotional roller-coaster ride; this does not assist in attaining self-mastery. Granted, Urantian's are emotional creatures – but they are also spiritual, and have within their grasp, self-mastery.

This week, think about if you are driven by your emotions. Contemplate the two sides in which the emotional system lies – the conscience side, and the ego side. How did the Master's emotions serve at that eventful wedding? Think about the phrase: "What the Son desires and the Father wills, is." What lessons were learned out of this particular story? Contemplate your dramatic levels – how do they serve? How can you determine the difference between 'feeling passionate about something' versus 'emotionalism?' A few questions?

SIMON: Abraham, this lesson brings up a myriad of questions relating to balance and using the faith, the time intervening between applying faith and the balance of just letting go. And, maybe not even caring that the Father's will is done. Sometimes I seem to feel like, 'okay, whatever, I'm just letting things go, you take it from here, Father.' – just letting things happen rather than planning those layers and then being too busy, escaping from the faith-process altogether. Is that escaping or applying faith? How best to see the balance of it all?

ABRAHAM: In my understanding, I see ideas as perhaps a seed; and you, being the gardener, tending to the seed with good soil, water, and sunlight. The seed either sprouts, or it doesn't. It takes root and grows, or it doesn't. You exhaust your human resources and yet remain flexible to the Father's will. This is where mindal reconciliation will come into play. Father knows of the seed and He can see it in its full potential. If it is to produce good, then He does aid in its growth. At times the growth is delayed to another time for greater impact to be made. Yes, my answer is – exhaust your human resources and remain flexible to the will of God. Does that help? (Simon: Yes. Thank you.)

AZSURAY: Abraham, in my journeys since I have been studying the Urantia Book, many many people ask me, and which I ask also: How do I know I am doing the Father's will? Must I be directly in contact with my Thought Adjuster to tell me when I am doing the Father's will? Could you give me some type of examples or statement on how I can be sure I am doing the Father's will.

ABRAHAM: First: What the Son desires and the Father wills, is. If your efforts come to fruition then that is good indication that you were well within the will of God. Second: I do truly believe that most children of God have a soul-knowingness if they are 'self-serving' or 'God-serving.' Of course Father wants you to be happy, and surely considers that in His divine plan. Many mortals go to great lengths to convince God that their personal happiness will bring about great things – and certainly, that ploy is not necessary. If you are feeling an imbalance toward working for self, then yes, that is an indication that you are leaning away from God's will. Is that helping? (Azsuray: Yes. Thank you.)

ANTHONY: Abraham, I guess I would like some words of encouragement and guidance about being patient with our friend, Oriah. You know she is very trusting and confident in her personal meeting, but she is a little fence-sitting as far as reading the Urantia Book or participating. Do you have some words for her? Also, guidance about patience for me?

ABRAHAM: Let her be. The decision is hers and one size does not fit all. She has had a great deal of turmoil and must go slowly. You, however, my son, Anthony, are a well of enthusiasm for the Urantia Book and the spiritual life. You are overflowing with desire to be helpful – and this is to be commended, yes; but certainly we remember, as our brother, Ham, said: “too much light can be blinding.” A plate of food is more appetizing when offered than when forced – ask any child. You are a wonderful friend and helpmate to her, my son. Yes, well done.

With that, I will take my leave. Know that as each week goes by, my love grows for you all. Look for me during the week. I would enjoy a moment with you each. Until next week, shalom.

Back

Soul Intake | What Do We Feed Our Souls | Recommendations For Balanced Living

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-14-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I do so enjoy your discussions for I am made to think deeper and increase in the search for my own beliefs. I thank you. Each week when we gather, I feel it is always a form of nutrition for my soul. Just as you would exercise or maintain a proper diet, I feel this, our interaction, is healthy for my soul.

Staying on the topic of self-mastery, we will discuss soul intake, which has a direct effect on the actions you take and the levels of self-mastery you can attain. For these many years, a main recommendation for all has been the message of balance – while it is easy to say, it is rather hard to make real while indwelling the flesh.

It is true that we all search for happiness. Many of us strive to turn our difficulties into meanings and values, which promotes happiness. As far as indwelling a mortal frame, it is quite obvious that a main concern is staying pain-free. That focus much of the time leads you to do activities that would be most effective in promoting happiness, or at the very least, staying pain-free. To be with a great deal of stress is very much a stumbling block to attaining self-mastery.

Imagine your soul as an empty vessel. What do we fill our souls with on a daily basis? For some, employment takes up a great deal of space, as does the struggle for material well-being. Some feed the desires of the flesh, and that does seem to bring temporary happiness, yes, but is fleeting. Some fill their souls with mindless entertainment or things that one does not require to do too much deep-thinking. Filling our vessel with these activities is not going to promote balance or self-mastery.

Time does seem to have its way with the mortal life, and definitely you each do what you can, or think is best, at the time. Good intentions are certainly there, no doubt, but to fill our empty vessel with imbalance is to act from a mindset of imbalance and emotionalism. We have not much to put forth that is valuable when we are in such a state of imbalance – life seems to spiral downward into further difficulties, further imbalance. A vessel that is filled with a healthy balance of good living is a vessel that can do much good and feed a great many.

Our first recommendation is to imagine our vessel at the Master's feet. What would He fill us with? What would cause the soul to grow? What would assist the mind in attaining self-mastery? What could be added to feel a personal connection and comfort to our divine family? What is considered to be a healthy balance to fill the vessel with, that produces spiritual fruits and shows it in all our daily actions?

- You each know what is at the top of my list – yes, stillness. Time spent with the divine Parent every day is to invite Him to add what He will to your soul, mind, and body. The feeling of ‘belonging to the Father of all Fathers’ is a supreme comfort, and a knowing – that we are never left alone.
- Along with stillness, I believe the Master would certainly have us interact with Him several times a day – perhaps through a small prayer, or a moment of sharing with Him, allowing Him to know He is indeed a tremendous part of your life – here, and definitely, beyond.
- Thirdly, I believe the Master would encourage us to take care of the mortal vessel which houses the spiritual, with good diet and exercise.
- Also important in the line of balance, is lightheartedness and humor. We each know how you can feel the burden of the world upon your back lift when you find the lighter side of any daily dilemma.
- Humor leads me to our next recommendation for a balanced spiritual vessel, and that is fellowship – the daily communication with friends, family, co-workers and even perhaps strangers. Kind words, or deep discussion, or even a passing greeting, is always a doorway to the overall kingdom familyhood.
- There is always opportunity when relating with others, yes; that leads me into our next recommendation for balanced living, and that is service. To serve is to be about the Father's business. Brotherly service always enlarges the concept of 'God the Father' while decreasing our overgrown sense of ego 'self;' and yet, therein lies the feeling that the love of God is at hand. In serving, the mind goes beyond self toward the good of the whole – and that is, without a doubt, most helpful in attaining self-mastery.

- My last recommendation is study and education. Always having the learning mind tuned-in to new understanding (or enlightenment) and knowing the Master's perfected humility, creates a thirst for higher learning and the desire to keep doing good.

This week, ponder these recommendations. Set your vessel before the Master's feet and allow him to help fill it. Make time to think about what you fill your soul (vessel) with, and the actions that are sure to follow. How do the contents of your spirit-vessel promote self-mastery?

You have each already added a wonderful ingredient by gathering together here in fellowship and the desire to learn and serve. I also thank you for your ministry to me. That is all. No questions. Know that I am with growing love for you each, and always do I look forward to the time when we will meet again. Until next week, shalom.

Back

Self-Mastery Is About Doing, Not Just Talking About It Or Wishing For It

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-21-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. It is always a feeling of returning home when we meet. At home there are levels of comfort and safety that are not really found anywhere else in the world. I am amazed at times to see how you each are really intertwined with one another's lives. This is good; there is the feeling of home, always.

As you begin to move away from the material life, you will be ever-more embracing that 'home feeling' throughout your eternal career. It is wonderful that always goodness and light does outweigh personal differences. Well done.

As you each move further toward attaining self-mastery are you filled with divine assurance – that inner-knowing – that God is everything. "He is always with me. I move with confidence toward more truth, beauty, and goodness, every day. Every day I am becoming."

Divine assurance helps us to recognize the ongoing growth and the comfort that we are never stuck or without choice. Self-mastery is, for the most part, about embracing all that is true, beautiful, and good; it is about committing to living the divine life – not just talking about it, studying about it, or wishing for it, but truly striving to become that which God would have you be.

Divine assurance does not have us believe that Father wants us to be an ascending puppet, no. He desires us to experience life as all other evolutionary creatures before. This is the way of the universal plan. Father does not tempt, nor coax us into doing good, so that we may be a reflection of Him, no. By His natural law does He allow us to choose what we will; learn what we will; and definitely does He desire us to grow toward Him, yes.

It is well known that most of Father's children desire to do good, but through the natural outworking of the mortal life there are mistakes made – and this is completely understood. For the purpose of attaining self-mastery however, it is necessary to be completely committed to living a Spirit-led life.

Granted, at times mistakes will be made; but I am speaking about a loose commitment. There are many things that would attract your attention away from a full commitment to the spiritual life. Pain, for example – physical, mental, or emotional – would certainly strain one's mind to not being fully focused on their commitment. Weak practicing of the spiritual life would perhaps cause one to waver between faith and doubt; and therefore, commitment would not have the same meaning.

In other words, to have that attitude of: "It is acceptable from time to time if I should knowingly sin, Father will understand and in time, will forget about it." – this is not going forward with self-mastery, no! this is not receiving divine assurance, no! This is walking a fine line between darkness and light, which always leads to confusion and spirit poisons. This loose commitment is leaning away from that comfort, that feeling of home, that confidence of really feeling – 'God is my Father.'

Mistakes are understood. Bad choices are understood. But intentional knowing that you are crossing that line of divine integrity is to feel undeserving of God's watchcare, and becoming a servant to that which occupies your mind. If one is accepting of practices without integrity, then that is what one will serve; that is where you feel that 'orphan-hood' that is the source of self-unworthiness.

Last week our lesson entailed those things that you fill yourselves with (your vessels) which promote self-mastery. Whatever you allow to fill your mind is, for the most part, what you serve. It is what drives you. It is what inspires or depresses you.

To be committed to serving the Father out of pure love for Him is to broaden your horizons far beyond what you thought possible. This is where we find our assurance – that God is with us in all we do. He knows our struggles, heartaches, concerns, and desires. In this assurance, we become working partners with our divine Parents, working together, yes. Not like perhaps a typical Earth family where a child may do something pleasing in the parents' eyes for additional privileges, no. Truly enhanced spiritual power is yours because you are co-working with the Father; and truly, it is natural and attainable for all.

This week, think about your commitment to the Spirit life. What is considered a loose commitment to you? Think about what is acceptable to Father versus your own understanding. Some here may still hold the old traditions from past church experience – and maybe that is a bit too rigid! What is 'co-working with God?' What is divine assurance, to you? Just a few questions, please.

CALVIN: Abraham, we welcome Gib and Lou Ann back, and we express for them to feel free to step in with any questions.

DIANA: Abraham, about this idea of assurance and the knowingness that I am completely taken care of, and that Father wants my highest and best possible good –

I have struggled with this, as you know. My beliefs seem to keep me stuck in not thinking that this is possible for me in certain ways. So I like this teaching regarding assurance.

ABRAHAM: Yes, Diana, we – beginning out as babes in the universe – learn that there are rewards for those who do good. It becomes inevitable however, that we discover that good does not always reap good, and ‘always doing good’ is not always possible. We are not born with all we need to know, and the road to perfection is very, very long. You, my daughter, have worked a great deal, and believe me, you have really done well. You are moving closer toward having that divine assurance as a part of who you are and what you believe in. Thank you for your comment. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I haven't been here for a little while. It is good to be back. I have been reading the story of Jesus' life in the Urantia Papers. It just knocks me out – here He is, ‘God on Earth,’ and is doing our thing. After He got baptized and went up and hung out in the hills away from everyone for forty days, He just kind of thought-over His whole Earth career deal. The reality of how He checked in with His Father; and the reality that we can do that very same thing every single day, and every single moment, if we choose to – with that thought it is just wonderful. As you know I fell on my knee recently; and tonight, you were talking about being in pain – that we can have a painful moment and still reach for Father; and, we can reach to Him in joy too. I am just in this grateful state lately. We are truly blessed.

ABRAHAM: Thank you, Miriam, for that beautifully-touching expression. I am in agreement that Father shares our joy and our pain if we can allow Him. Life is most definitely supposed to be filled with more joy than sorrow; and definitely, sharing a life with our Father ensures that will indeed happen. Well said, my daughter. One more question or comment.

SARAUNA: Abraham, maybe you can explain to me a little bit more about what you said regarding ‘being a reflection of Father?’

ABRAHAM: Certainly. My meaning was that Father does not dangle the good things in life to draw us to Him so that we may do His bidding or be a reflection of Him; He does not bribe us, no. He does, however, allow the natural and divine plan to work so that we have choices; we have free will; we have the opportunity to experience; to become educated. And through our own love for Him, we make effort to be closer to Him –thereby, becoming a truly beautiful and pure reflection of Him. Does this help? (Saurana: It does. Thank you.) Abraham: He works not like man – He is not with ego, or a parent who would offer us a reward if we should do His bidding, no. He has made the path and has lit that path – but indeed, does not force us down it.

With that, I will express my gratitude to our Father for His ways of love, caring, strength and power, which helps us all to make our house a home. Know that my love is ever growing for each one of you. Until next time, shalom.

Back

Divine Assurance. Allowing Father To Lead and Guide Creates Closeness and Trust

Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH

10-28-2002

Back

(TR: Diana, at Abraham's request)

I am Abraham. Greetings. I am excited to see all of you gathered here this evening for our weekly lesson. When we think upon the concept of divine assurance, we can be certain that Father allows us to experience our feelings, hopes and desires as we walk along the path toward Paradise. He would never leave us in jeopardy of 'losing our way' but always provide that helping hand when we fear we are losing our way.

I am most pleased with your discussion earlier concerning walking the path practically without using art or mysticism to bring about change within the hearts and minds of those you pass in your daily lives. Being a light for Michael is the primary purpose of our mission here. As your Teachers, we all aspire to be closer to Him in the way that we teach and present our lessons to you each week. Each of you has done well to incorporate those small steps of trusting Father's way to guide you along toward Him.

This week, I would like to focus on the concept of allowing Father to guide you closer without knowing your way. It is very difficult for humans to let go of their control when they seem to place their total reliance on their own ability to make their way in this life. From an early age, you are taught to achieve the goals that are set for you, to believe that if you 'set goals' that they will be accomplished; and, to organize every moment of your day so that you know what will happen next.

How can Father guide you into places unknown and unseen unless you allow yourself to release your control over the many aspects of your lives? Father requires you to submit yourself to His control, His guidance, and His way. Of course you have a choice, your free will, yes! But to obscure Father's ability to provide you with His guidance and direction prohibits you from learning His lessons.

Once when I was a child, I learned that if I were to do certain things for my earthly father, he would show me affection and care for me; he would show me great appreciation and respect for accomplishing this feat - but when I was older, I realized that when I ascribed to certain beliefs, they tended to bring about the desired result as well. It was not until my lessons with Michael that I learned of the impossibility of learning without achieving; and, of being Spirit-led where I did not know the terrain.

I am certain - if you closed your eyes and allowed yourself to be led to where you know not, your mind would revolt, your body would stammer, and perhaps your hands would shake. This is complete surrender, my friends. This is giving yourself into the hands of the One who loves you without boundary, who cares for your every move, who patiently waits for you to let go of your control and allow him to be the center of your life. There is no greater love. He awaits for the space in your life to let Him in.

This week, contemplate the amount of time you spend in arranging your life. How much time do you spend in letting Father take control and show you where He would lead you? Do you open yourself to the possibility that if Father loves you above all else, why would He not lead you into a warm and loving space with limitless possibilities and potential for growth? My love goes with you this week. Until next week, shalom.

Back

The Art Of Living | Where Do We See Father`s Hand Working With Ours

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-11-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always made joyful when I listen in on your new discoveries and interpretations therein. What a beautiful group unity when ideas and concepts are built upon and enlarged. To those sincere seekers, the wondering mind is perhaps like a blank canvas which has great potential to be filled with grand spiritual understanding.

Keeping with the theme of self-mastery, we will have discussion on the art of living. It is well known and understood that many mortals, day after day, live to merely survive; much of the time their attention is focused at surface-level thinking. It is somewhat easy to become blinded to the beauty in life because there appears to be a great deal of negativity. Many mortals simply live to battle this negativity. The beauty and the art of living become practically lost.

Many 'live to strive' instead of 'striving to live.' Much of the energy is put into mundane mechanistic doing. If those places within the center of the brain that concerns 'material well-being for survival' are imbalanced, then are they closed-off to other cerebral connections to the divine mind.

We are each endowed with mindal abilities. And to become so focused, so ingrained into things material or trivial - this does lessen the ability to utilize those parts of the mind that concern creativity and beauty.

With the practice of self-mastery, we can find it to our great benefit to forget not to see the beauty in all Father's creation. Life is ever-changing and there is not any 'one way' to live. Mortal life is an ongoing creation that you, and your divine caretakers, create.

Imagine yourself - after having a rather difficult day where it seemed as though everything was so negative, so undermining of your good intentions - after this difficult day, you settle down to mold a sculpture descriptive of your day. After having had the imbalanced day, how would the sculpture appear? There is not the joy and beauty wherewith to create what you had desired, so how would it look?

Now imagine yourself having a spirit-led day wherein you feel Father with every step, you literally see His hand in your daily activities. Even though the day has been long and exhaustion has set in, you set out to create your sculpture thinking about how Father had walked you through your daily dealings. You have that trust in Him that He is still there - His hands are in your hands; your mind is opened to higher levels of spiritual possibilities and you are within that creative mind. Your sculpture is with beauty and is a source of joy for the many who chance to look upon it.

There are many techniques to living the mortal life. Those that stay spiritually connected are open to new techniques and solutions. For them, life becomes a work of art; beauty is found in the repetitive old daily chores wherein 'average' becomes a work of art.

In your attempts to see the beauty in all things and live an artistic life you really are living fully in each moment, definitely appreciative of Father's hand in all things. This is certainly improvement for the attitude, and is strengthening your ability to fully appreciate – even in times of difficulty.

With this enhanced attitude, self-mastery becomes a natural part of your daily living; your awareness is magnified beyond a material level. A true artist always takes notice of those details that are not usually noticed. The artist sees with the divine eyes. The artist comprehends to the soul level. Any good artist knows that the creation cannot be rushed or hurried through, for where is the joy in that? Where is the beauty?

This week, as you go about your daily happenings make effort to make contact with our divine Parents to open that creative mind. Contemplate – if your present life was a work of art, how would it appear? Where would you see Father's hand working with yours? What can be arranged in your daily living so that you may see the beauty and feel the joy therefrom? Do you live to strive? or strive to live.

We will end here. I thank you each for your ongoing faith and support in our Brother/Father's Teaching Mission. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.
Back

Content of Mansion World Teac

Having An Inner-Knowingness That Father Is Always Available And Involved

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-18-2002

Back

Greetings. I am ABRAHAM. How wonderful it is to know that each week we will be together as a family group. I have come to expect this energy upliftment each week when I return. What a source of joy and comfort to know we have one another and are with that reassurance that our faith will strengthen and our outlook will become fresh.

As I view the world, I realize that a great many misconceptions come from lack of knowingness – not so much basic knowledge, but an 'inner-knowing.' A large percentage of the world's mortals live their lives from a place of fear due to lack of knowing. You that are involved in our Master's Mission are quite fortunate; not set apart or chosen, but fortunate – fortunate to have had this experience, this live contact. So also am I, and my associates on this side of reality, so fortunate.

Over these many years you have had opportunity to become with increased inner-knowing, increased faith, increased comfort – that God is real and is in all that we do. With the planet being brought back into the fold of Nebadon, all mortals have opportunity to have this spiritual contact – contact that they should have always had but, because of the isolation due to the Lucifer Rebellion, did not.

What a blessing however, to have had access to the Urantia Book, the Teaching Mission participation, and the combination of intelligence and love that true spirituality can bring. Many of you have that divine assurance, or that 'inner-knowing,' that whatever shall befall you, you will be cared for by Father Himself.

Everyone is not born with such faith, no, for it is acquired only by trusting in Father and having a well-rounded experienced life. When a small child visits a place for the first time, he is loath to leave his mother's arms. As the place is revisited by the child, he is more daring to discover what he can, yet still having that comfort of knowing that his mother is close by. The child is developing a knowingness that creates confidence – a confidence that enables him to do more, learn more, and grow more. In time, there is no longer that fear of the unknown.

Tonight I speak on 'inner-knowingness' as it relates to self-mastery. When we view the state of the world today, we can practically see how 'fear' has increased. The weapons of protection that countries manufacture to secure safety are a good indicator of how much fear there really is. Most of that fear is based on practically nothing.

Unknowingness, lack of communication, varying beliefs and tradition-bound ideals are for the most part a leading cause of fear between nations. Much of the same is true with individuals – one can have a great deal of faith in our Father, yes, and yet attempt to hold control over daily destiny. There seems to be a fear of what God will place in front of them.

As mortals, you are many times unsure of Father's will – and that is as it should be. You are perhaps like the child who is still discovering. But sometimes you forget that your divine Father is at hand, that He is there to help, to bring meanings and values – not to increase your fear so that you will be forced into doing His bidding. No, He is here to help.

What is the measure of your levels of inner-knowing? How do you handle daily conflict? How affected are you by your fellows who perhaps wound you in one way or another? As you have experienced this life at this point in time, can you see how Father has been there for you always? That is inner-knowing. That is having the confidence to go forth and bravely face life's challenges.

As you have learned throughout your spiritual education, trust plays a huge role in being able to discern the Father's will – yes, to receive divine information and even comfort. How can there be a confident inner-knowing when there is not trust in our Supreme Caretakers? How can you cope with some of life's harsh realities when you have limitations that decrease your levels of inner-knowing?

Think about those moments when fear is present – and returning back to the artist's life, how would a work of art look having been produced out of fear? In fear there is no direction, there is only limitations, and certainly there is no joy or comfort from having that wonderful 'inner-knowing.' As you mature in spiritual levels, you come to depend on that inner-knowingness – and you live your life according to that belief. Your faith becomes stronger, yes, and you are with an open ear for direct divine instruction.

Thinking about fear – the next time you are in the midst of this experience, find out where it originated from. It will most likely be from that feeling of not knowing, not having that trust that Father is always there. He loses not His children at any time – most likely it is that you lose sight of Him. This is completely natural, of course. Lack of inner-knowing, in relation to self-mastery, would put most mortals into a heightened emotional state. In the midst of such emotionalism, one is not thinking towards self-mastery, or even the intent to do good.

This week, during your moments of discomfort or fear think about where these feelings originated from. Go to the very root and ask yourself: ‘Is this a valid concern? Is this real? Is this magnified only within my own thinking? Does this fear come from lack of inner-knowing – lack of trust in those who love us so much?’

With God, all things are possible, yes. What does that statement really mean? In your moments of worry, conflict, or fear – ask yourself why you believe in our Father? How do you know there is life beyond this life? Your answer should guide you back to that confidence of inner-knowing and belief that you, with Father's help, can do all things.

I will stop there. No questions. Know that you each are a beautiful light that casts an unlimited view of a new and better age. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

All Our Mortal Experience Leads To An Ultimate Good
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-25-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always amazed at your willingness to put forth your best intentions for the highest good of the whole. This week I have been witness to some wonderful acts where many of you have set aside petty differences in favor of higher good for the whole; this is certainly exerting self-mastery.

You are each learning to go beyond concern for individual wellness toward enlarged concepts of doing what is the best concerning everyone. Well done. As you each mature in spirituality you are finding that you are not just you, but a part of all there ever was, is, and will be. With this enlarged concept, self-mastery becomes a natural part of life as if it always was.

Said Jesus: “He who tries to save his life will surely lose it. He who willingly lays down his life for me shall be saved.” Is that not a grand example of inner-knowingness? Yes. Is that not a beautiful display of trust in Father and a show of the supreme desire to do His will? Yes. As you view your life history, what have you released, relinquished? Or, if you have laid down your life in order to be saved, what have you lost? and, what have you gained?

As I view my own life history, I find that every moment – moments of joy, despair, fear, sorrow, abandonment, self-aggrandizement, and power-seeking – was indeed a worthwhile journey. Every moment, every minute, was leading to ultimate good, leading me to where I am now; and for that, I am truly humbled, yes, and grateful.

I have been on the mountaintops of self-glory and the valleys of self-loathing. I have felt the evil one's breath in my ear, and yet I have been cradled in the arms of our Master. I have cried tears of sorrow and tears of joy. I have been witness to Father's power and mercy, His participation, and His simply standing by. I see now how it all led to the ultimate good – ultimate good for myself as well as Father's overall plan.

I can surely find gratitude knowing that I am in a state of becoming. I could not have known then, in the mortal state, what I know now because it required every moment to give me the knowingness that I have now. I certainly would have had a smoother transition however, had I realized then that all of my mortal experience was leading to an ultimate good. Yes, in each experience of living there was always something with meanings and values to gain, and to incorporate into who I am now.

Can you see, children, that all of mortal life experience is quite valuable; and the more willing you are to embrace that fact, the smoother your spiritual transitions will be. Nothing is lost. Nothing good is ever sacrificed by you. When you vow to lay down your life in order to be saved, you are asking Father to free you from the clutches of the animalistic tendencies – to gain mindal expansion, spiritual endurance, and personality enhancement. What is lost when you commit to a Spirit-led life? Perhaps ego involvement, controlling emotions, selfishness, orphanhood, self-imposed unworthiness, and narrow-mindedness – to speak of a few, yes.

My lesson is short this evening. This week, review your life history. Find how it, all of it, has led to an ultimate good. Think about those mountain tops of self-glory and valleys of self-loathing. Think about Father's various aspects of His total being that you have been aware of as it pertains to your life history, your experience. Ponder your spiritual maturity and how you may be changing from concern for self, to incorporating the concern for the well-being of the whole.

Know that in all our hours apart from each other you are always on my mind and in my heart. I am with growing affection for you each. Until next time, shalom.

The Brotherhood In Relation To Self-Mastery | The Handicaps of Traditionalism This Time of Year

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-02-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Your combined good thoughts and energy certainly aids in our good connection. It is quite apparent that you each are desiring the good of the whole.

Many of you here this evening, and throughout the Teaching Mission, have somewhat grown up together in your spiritual careers. You can look back at many instances that brought some bitterness, harsh words, petty differences – but always have you each brought one another growth, yes, and expanded understanding.

This evening we will discuss the brotherhood in relation to self-mastery. You must admit that your relationships are probably your greatest challenge while trying to attain self-mastery. Certainly by now, you are understanding how those on high may bring people together to learn specific lessons and facilitate spiritual growth.

During your traditional holiday season, many attempt to focus on kindness and goodwill. Some donate material goods. Some volunteer hours of time to certain charities. Many over-spend on gifts to show love. While this is striving for a higher good, can you see how this season does tend to bring out an animalistic side in individuals? What is normally supposed to be a season of goodwill is very much a challenge to those who are making effort to attain self-mastery.

During this time of year it is common to have higher stress levels to meet demands that are set by tradition, and all the while attempt to fit in those good feelings of knowing the Savior was born on your world. What a season this has become – to challenge those who are attempting to master the animalistic tendencies and embrace a higher-mindedness. There are always good intentions of course, but those intentions are not backed by reality. The feeling of ‘goodwill toward men’ becomes buried by material obligation, stress from pressure, and tradition.

This time of year will be a good time to practice personal self-mastery with your fellows. My first recommendation is taking a look at the person you truly are. Are you that person with everyone you meet? Note how those issues you have with others may be a particular lesson Father is trying to arrange.

Next, I would recommend that you see all others as a parent would see them. See yourself as the Father would see you. Know that all children of God struggle, and all have need to meet demands – all have need for love and to feel a freedom from fear.

Also – when you come into a discomfiting situation with another, be observant like a third party. Rush not into these situations with unbridled emotion. Think about that deeper meaning that would chance to come to you if you are indeed open. When dealing with your fellows who seem to be in emotional upheaval, plant a thought in them, such as: ‘What is the lesson here?’ ‘What are we supposed to be learning from this situation?’ ‘What is the real reason behind emotional outbursts?’

Many individuals meet with circumstances that have attachment to past painful events, and maybe not consciously act out their past frustration – but certainly there is pain that magnifies the present situation. Anyone, anywhere at any time, could be a potential lesson for you, and you for them. You are one another’s teachers – one another’s reflection of good or evil.

With combined love and unity, there is an unstoppable energy that promotes healing and well-being for the individual as well as for the whole. Many people do not understand the power they possess to either help or hurt another. You, children, are definitely directors of destiny and can change any situation to good or bad.

This week, let us concentrate on self-mastery techniques concerning our fellows. Can you bring out a higher good in those you know? Can you be your true self without fear? Can you be honest and yet, tactful? During trying situations, can you remain observant and open to spirit connection? Father gave you one another not to be a burden, but a source of abundance.

This week, make effort to have discussion on this topic. No questions this week, perhaps next. Know that I am with ever-growing love for you each. Until next time, shalom.

Back

Gratitude ~ Focus On What We Have, Not What We Don't Have

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-09-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a peaceful atmosphere for us to gather. My sincere gratitude to those who provide means for us to meet. You are each quite loyal to the spirit, and for the most part, do your best for the kingdom. I thank you. I am astounded at times at how our Mission is moving along and proceeding with real progress – mortals have made that happen. Listening and well-intended mortals have brought this Mission and Correcting Time to life. You are each an energy life-force to our overall purpose.

Over these many years, you have learned to set aside your desires for what was to become the reality of the Mission. True things have stayed living. Basic truth is now, and has always been, ever-flowing, ever-growing – fulfilling that ultimate purpose.

Michael is once again definitely alive in the hearts of men. Even through life's harsh realities, His hand is visible, His plan is understandable. He loves each of His children with an unfailing Fatherly affection. You are each helping His Mission on Earth come into full fruition. How easy it is to love Him.

Jesus did set the ultimate example of self-mastery for us. He also bestowed us with beautiful techniques in which to relate to our brothers and sisters in the flesh. While self-mastery is an ongoing practice throughout this mortal life, we will begin to lightly study on other topics. Tonight I will, however, keep the week's focus short so that we may leave time for questions.

Beginning on a simple, but important note, we will take this next week to focus on gratitude. At this busy time of year, it is common to focus on where we are lacking. We may find it easy to lose sight of those things with real and meaningful substance. For many, there is a tendency to believe they are in a state of loss or emptiness, and that can certainly color an individual's perception of reality.

This week, let us focus on what we have with real meaning, instead of what we don't have. Let us concentrate on the meaning of 'universe abundance.' How are you being cared for? Can you find the time to see where Michael's hand is at work in your life? "Where your treasures are, there will be your heart also." Find time to journal your life's priorities from your point of view, and then perhaps from Michael's. What is the foundation in your lives from which all things are built? Have you questions?

MARSHALL: Yes. Abraham, it is nice to hear you taking questions again. It has been quite a while. I just want to let you know I so value the relationship that is developing between us and the insights – everything! You know what is going on – it is just so special. As I am getting to know you, I have never experienced such clarification of spiritual meanings and enhanced cosmic insights as is some of the things we are working on now. It is exceptional. I would just like to hear anything you would have to say to me here through our most trusted TR, Nina. It would be much appreciated.

ABRAHAM: Marshall, my son, I thank you for your kind words. I admire your enthusiasm. I admire your courage to be reborn. I am also glad for our communication and the building of our relationship. You are perceiving the deeper meanings in life; and, as it is written: "Every day a true believer lives he finds it easier to do the right thing." You are indeed living with a new sense of integrity and honor. Your allowing of the expansion of heart and mind is very much creating a new creature. You do well. Keep open our communication. Another question?

LOU ANN: Hi Abraham. I feel so guided and blessed to be in this group of people and to know you. I don't know if you know me yet, but would you have any advice for me with my son and family, and my feeling of dislocation. I would also like to know my spiritual name if possible.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. My daughter, of course I know you. And at this point, do love what I know. You need not have too much concern with the issues at hand. You are reacting to situations in the best way you know how. Please remember, you are still mortal. You have experienced somewhat of a difficult path of late, and your feelings are completely natural. This is always growth-promoting; this is always leading to higher understanding. My suggestion for you this evening is to bravely face something that you have been hoping would just go away. This is not to be overly concerned, but time will be needed to absorb and comprehend the meaning. Understanding of new meanings leads to new values. You are certainly on your way to mind-expansion. Concerning your son, I know not all the details but I can suggest that you provide for him a safe arena to express himself, and where you simply listen. In allowing others to talk, they many times find out answers for themselves without really any help. People just want to know they are heard and worthy – accepted and respected for where they are at the present time. Ann Rayel. Yes, Ann Rayel is how you are known on high. Have not worry, my daughter. The Father is nearby and always are His arms open to you. Is this helping? (Lou Ann: Yes, thank you. I am so honored to be in your presence as a student.) Abraham: You are very welcome. I also thank you. Another question?

STUDENT: Abraham, I too wonder if you could give me some guidance on the choices I am facing right now?

ABRAHAM: I am only able to answer in broad terms, for I know not too much of the details. I am understanding that you are quite intelligent, and at times you are believing that to be not congruent with the spiritual life. You seem to be one who would always choose peace. While this is wonderful, it is at times undermining your intelligence, and your desire to be logical. The Father is peace. He is also love, and is kindness, but He also is highly intelligent. While intelligence can seem to be harsh, there can always be a balance found. You need not bury your intellect to keep peace. You would do well to calmly express yourself and allow your intelligent side to be seen. You indeed have a kind heart, and this will never be lost. Do not allow your kindness of heart to create imbalance so you are hiding any part of yourself. I hope this is helping. (Student: It is. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

CALVIN: If I am hiding any parts of myself, or being a little too open – I can take anything you can send my way this week.

ABRAHAM: You are incapable of hiding any part of yourself. That is an asset, however. You set a good example for many men to follow. Long ago it was thought best for men to only show a virile side. Your honesty has allowed others to feel comfortable also in being honest. You are indeed understanding the fluctuation of the stages of life. Moments can be good, and without understanding 'why' they are the way they are, they can turn negative. Sometimes this is your fault, sometimes it is not; and I say, sometimes it is just life, just natural evolution. Your perception of it, however, is everything. You are continuing to hold fast to the fear of failing. Take this topic and become a teacher with it. Help others to understand what you have learned from it. You are to control it – it does not master you. By becoming a teacher and sharing your experience you will feel more productive and eventually dissect this difficulty into nothing but meanings and values. Is this helping? (Calvin: Very very much. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

ANTHONY: Abraham, last time I asked a question you said I was doing well as a wonderful helpmate and friend in my relationship – I think it was how you put it. That relationship has seemed to end very abruptly with a lot of negative impact, as has at least three friendships lately. Can you help me see that in a more positive light, and give me some advice on the future?

ABRAHAM: Anthony, my son, your enthusiasm for the spiritual life is to be commended. You are always with the highest of intentions. You can be quite book smart, but many individuals want to see this spiritual intelligence put into real life, 'down to Earth' so to speak. Perhaps take this experience and learn to incorporate patience into your attitude. And, perhaps loosen up a bit – have fun. Have no fear that your true self will be seen as unacceptable by your fellows. Everything that needs to be done will be done in its own time, and you would find a larger sense of peace if you can 'allow' this. There are underlying issues which make you feel you must express yourself quickly, as if you will not really be heard unless you put forth your point quickly. Individuals like to really be heard and understood. To listen without judgment or advice on how to live better would be a good beginning. You also have a kind heart and you would definitely do well to show that side of yourself. You need not work so hard. You are fully welcome to work with joy. If you find not joy in those things you do, then definitely are you imbalanced to a more mindal state instead of a loving state. Overall, my son, you do well. Know that you are truly loved for who you really are, and I say, allow that person to be known. Time will bring more understanding and closure to these relationships. Have not worry. One more question?

SAMUEL: Do you have any advice I need to focus on?

ABRAHAM: Samuel, my son, you are certainly learning to exhibit a more courageous side of yourself. You are becoming more, every day. Your striving is to be commended, but there is something a bit lacking and that perhaps could be your willingness. You have good intentions, of course, but there is some fear to totally allow Father – and that does interfere with growth and the direction you should be going in. You are a son of God and deserve abundance. You are entitled to good things in life. Stand not in the way. Know that you are loved and cared for, every day.

With that, I shall take my leave. I have enjoyed our interaction this evening. I look forward to more of it at another time. Know that with each week that passes I am with ever-growing love. Until next time, shalom.

Back

Opportunities To Be God's Love Made Visible | Be Willing To Be Reborn Every Day
Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 12-16-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. For you each to be present here this evening you are surely making a statement of faith. When I am with you gathered in this setting, I feel so fortunate to see God's love made visible. Everyone here this evening has something to give; and along with that, also a need to receive. Your loving ministry to one another is a beautiful sight to behold – yes, God's love made visible.

Last week we made effort to focus on gratitude and the fullness in our lives. This certainly draws positive things to us. This is certainly a tool for reinforcing faith. Faith is why you are here. Faith is why you continue to support Michael's cause. Faith is why you live – not on surface levels but having courage to face life with its altering realities. Your faith brings me here each week.

This season of celebration is usually a time to focus on the birth of one who brought so many changes, so much upliftment. This time for many is a time for rebirth; not so much a focus on perhaps dying to the old ways, but the newness and wonders to come. As your faith matures, you find each day is a new birth, a time for old things to fade away and readjustment to things new.

The blessed Adjuster is our life's Conductor that, without flaw, orchestrates newness and directs us toward meanings and values. What a perfect Parent, yes, to be at hand to assist us in a new 'birth of thought' every day. This Parent is our foundation, our guide, our comforter, our key to all things new. And to think that this wonderful Parent is only the beginning of the assistance we each have for all eternity; yes, that One who is ever and unceasingly standing by, forever.

Focusing on what is good is to focus on birth and newness, drawing toward us those things that we truly need. This is definitely enhancing our gratitude toward everyday occurrences in whatever may befall us. Focusing on gratitude is not so much about concentrating to die to the old ways, or letting go of old patterns, but seeing life with the eyes of a child. Life is wondrous at any age. The possibilities with God only increase as time goes by.

As your faith matures, you definitely are better able to recognize 'God's love made visible.' There will always be challenges, yes. There will be times when you truly believe nothing will ever change. There will be times when you may feel stuck or unable to see a new light in any direction. In these times, return to that faith foundation and the beloved Parent. Review your life's blessings – in so doing, this helps to open your heart and mind to receive His loving presence.

Yes, be willing to be reborn every day. There is not any one mortal who has seen and knows all things. Life is a wondrous adventure at any age. The experiential possibilities are endless. To commit to being reborn in all ways every day is a literal opening in the personal mind circuitry to that ever-expansive cosmic circuitry.

When we review the life of the Master, how can we deny that Jesus was indeed 'God's love made visible.' His first step was always having to do with faith – an unshakable faith that Father was indeed in control of all things. The Master had naught to worry about, for He was with full confidence that Father was overseeing His every need. His example of self-forgetfulness was indeed a show of faith. He could wholeheartedly be about the Father's business, knowing full well that all was in the safe hands of Father.

Yes, the Master had naught to worry about. He had certainly subjected His mind to the Father's continuous evolving truth, yes. The Master did feel that freedom of allowing His mind to be in a continuous state of rebirth – always new; always watchful of Father's guidance; always trusting that everything with value is truly safe; everything with value is truly lasting. Even in the worst of circumstances, the Master could maintain a sense of peace knowing full well that any and every outcome would end up in an ultimate good.

This week, think about what it means to be reborn every day. Ask yourselves if you still have that wondrous heart of a child. Be watchful for examples of 'God's love made visible.' Look for opportunities to be 'God's love made visible.' Think about your faith and where it has led you, and how it has matured or changed over the years. Think about how your life's experience has provided you with the faith you have now.

Again, be aware of your levels of gratitude and what you may draw to yourself. Also, for conversational purposes, have some discussion on the Master's faith aspects. What perhaps did you admire most about His faith examples in the flesh?

No questions this week. Know that I am always at hand to assist any of you at any time. You are ever growing with love in my heart. Until next time, shalom.

Crossroads | Who Do We Put Our Faith In | Be Our Father's Love Made Visible

Abraham & Christ Michael, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-23-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is always with great joy that I return to you each week. I am touched by your welcoming embrace. I feel truly blessed to be a part of your lives and what direction they may go. I give you our Beloved.

I am your Brother/Father. Long overdue is the time for me to meet with you in this format. Many sweeping changes are occurring on this world at this time. This always brings great confusion.

I feel it is time to rally my children together to go forward on the path that we had set out upon some years ago. Having lived a mortal life I am indeed in understanding of the hardships that may befall you. I realize the busyness of life can take your attention away from spiritual realities.

Our Mission is at somewhat of a crossroads where many must choose what they are to put their faith in. Many must choose 'who' is their God; 'what' is their God. My Mission children, you are my earthly counselors who will aid many in their decision. This takes not special effort, no, not even any skill - only to live your lives as an example of one who knows me and our Father.

If you have committed yourself to the spiritual life, then be committed. Live not halfway between faith and doubt, love and hate, light and dark. One who has vowed to live the spirit life really must choose to live with integrity and honor at all times. This is not to say there will be no mistakes made, no; this is to discover what you believe in and to live 'that' life.

Be that example who will draw the masses to an age of Light and Life. I have gone before you. I have lit the path - walk therein. Be not discouraged by personal or even worldly events, for these are the results of evolution. Natural evolution of all things is our Father's way. This is not to say everything is with chaos, no! but everything is carefully monitored and guided.

In your personal evolution, your life's events will aid you in growth and in making changes - leading you to me, and, to Father. I assure you that I will always go before you if you should so allow - I will light your path; I will make the way clear. I am the Way, the Truth and the Life - all you need do is have faith that this is so.

Look to me. Know that I love you with an unceasing affection. Be strong, my children, for the changes to come will be your specialty, and you will be the calm in the storm. Rally together. Love one another. Uphold one another. You are Father's love made visible. Carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. Our gratitude to our Universe Sovereign. We are made to be more, merely through your presence. Thank you. How easy it is to love one who seems so magnificent and yet, so real; so much like us.

This week, children, ponder the words of our Master. Take notes on where you may be lacking in integrity. How might you be living between faith and doubt, love and hate, light and dark? Take time this week to be with the Master. Absorb His loving presence. Are there questions?

INERA: Abraham, I just have a comment. Rachel and Honoray loved this time of year. Not a curiosity question, but can you tell them hello for us?

ABRAHAM: I can, yes, my wonderful sisters. Absolutely. Another question or comment?

CALVIN: Abraham, I just want to say thanks to Michael for His address to us. I think it is the most awesome thing we could ever experience. For me, personally, it is something I probably take so easily for granted. Do we really realize – does it really soak in, that our Universe Creator Sovereign has spent some time with us this evening? I just want to say thanks. His words are very helpful to me. Thanks also, to our TR (Ellanor) for stepping up to receive His message.

ABRAHAM: It would be so wonderful if everyone realized that Michael is at hand at all times. He need not address large groups when His Spirit of Truth is available to all each and every minute of every day. Truly blessed are we to have Him. Thank you for your comments. I also, take Michael's words to heart and will do my utmost to live and serve one who so loyally lives and serves me. Another question?

RITA B.: Abraham, does sexuality in any way hold back spiritual evolution? or can it, in fact, enhance spiritual evolution?

ABRAHAM: As with any aspect of the mortal make-up – when taken to an animalistic level this can certainly be damaging to spirituality. On the other hand, mortal living can be enhanced when Father is at the forefront of your mind. Sex was not ever meant to be a negative experience. Nor was it meant to be used without integrity or becoming imbalanced in mind. Imbalances from sex are usually because they are taken to an animal level. 'God in all things' is truly enhancing, truly beautiful. Good question.

I am slipping. Know that I am honored to walk this path with you, my friends, my co-workers, my brothers and sisters. Until next week, shalom.

Remembering Who You Are | Your Child Of God Status

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-30-2002

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a joy it is each week for me to spend time with this part of my family. As time passes, I feel even closer to you each. I most definitely appreciate your unique personalities, your seeking minds and open hearts. I feel at home where I can truly be just who I am.

Of course there were times when I indwelt the mortal body that I had a certain persona to uphold, and in order to receive what I desired I had to act in a certain manner. I felt the need to control any and all situations. From where I am now, I can say I am truly grateful for my experience. I bear not the burden that mortal life can bring. I can be at peace and happy with who I am, knowing full well that without a doubt I am loved.

My friends, you have each grown into your status as a child of God. Many of you see not the world as you have in the past. You, believers, look to your fellows as equals in all ways. Not money nor power nor status has colored your perceptions of your fellows for quite some time now. You are new creatures.

Children, for the most part you have given your life to Father. You have made Him your sovereign, and that surely changes your perception of anyone or anything that you thought to have value. In your cosmic mindal expansion, you would view shaking the hand of the President of the United States as you would your neighbor.

Yes, spiritual thinking has changed your perception – and indeed, this is occurring all over the world. Man is not your sovereign, no! Government rulers only have power through the voice of the people. You are not merely somebody's wife, husband, parent, child, employee – no, you have come into your own power as 'a child of God,' and know that with God we can do all things. You may not preach from the rooftops, but I can tell you your small ministries are aiding in the new perception of the world's people.

My lesson this evening is more directed at clearing the mind and redirecting focus – remembering who you are, who your sovereign is, who you serve, and also, who serves you. As you proceed into your new calendar year, ponder your many roles as an inhabitant of Urantia. What is your most important role? As you come into understanding your own divine status you are with new power, new authority to be about the Father's business.

As we clear our minds, look not at the world as if it controls you. Think not that you are indebted to any mortal, for you are with freedom to be that 'child of God,' and there really is no pressure put upon that free child of God. Care not what obligations you have. Ponder your freedom. Clear your minds of your many roles in life. Remember that God-self and look out of those eyes.

Truly, the world is changing, and you each are helping with just your own personal transformation. Let us remember the words of the Master: "If you are committed to a life in the spirit – then be committed." Yes, allow the transformation. Remember that first and foremost you are Father's child. It is He who shall oversee your personal growth – not mortals or employers, cultures, or society. You are with all the value that you will ever have – and that, my friends, is everything. Not any one person can take that from you. You are loved and valued just 'as you are.' A few questions?

LUKE: The relationship between body, mind, and spirit – how does my mortal life help my spiritual life? Is there a balance there? or is my spiritual higher self in a better position to help my mortal self. I hope my mortal-self doesn't have to help my spirit.

ABRAHAM: Indeed there is a need for balance and a certain recipe for living. The spirit life would not advance without the willingness of the mind, and without the spirit-life, the body would certainly experience negative effects. To become imbalanced in mind is perhaps a door closing to the spiritual life. And yet, the spiritual life should be the foundation in which you have built all things upon. To become imbalanced with work would perhaps tip the scales more toward a material perception than a spiritual. To be fanatical with spirituality would affect your material life in an adverse manner. Balance, my son, really begins within the mind. Willingness to be reconciled with the will of God is the first step to living an all-around balanced good life. Is this answering? (Luke: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: Another question?

CALVIN: Do you have any direction for my children here today, for when they go back home?

ABRAHAM: My children, you are most definitely a light in the world. You each indeed have power to create change – good and bad. I realize that you seem to be subject to unfair treatment, but I can say those adults in your lives have reasons for the way they act. The adults that you know have at some point experienced pain, and this does indeed affect the way they are treating you. The adults believe they are doing what is best, but you each can feel within your hearts and minds when this is not quite correct. Jesus, as a boy, was indeed brilliant and enthusiastic, wanting to take on the world – and yet His parents, His teachers, seemed to hold Him back. Jesus learned that at times peace and tranquility must come first. In emotional upheaval, nobody is really listening. This is not productive or solving any problems. There are times when each family member must compromise to keep peace. All family members should be heard and served; each one is important, and love must come first. If you can imagine your lives without one another, certainly that would be a pain not to be forgotten. The difficulties you experience now will definitely be transformed into the family closeness of tomorrow. Each one has to be willing to give a little, compromise a little, always listen and be heard. You, my children, are each bright lights that can change things for the better. Have not fear. Know that you are valued children, not just to your earthly parents, but to your divine Parents as well.

My gratitude is to you each for your open hearts and loving friendship. Until next week, shalom.

2003 MANSION WORLD TEACHINGS

Mankind's Evolution Throughout History Has Brought Us A Connection With The Divine
Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 01-06-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I have enjoyed your conversation this evening; it has been quite thought-provoking. I appreciate your willingness to be honest and loving. For the most part I perceive you as lovers of truth. While harsh realities may blind you for a time, your love for Father and truth always brings you to a place of reconciliation.

I am EMULAN. I am also with joy to visit this branch of my family tree. I have been assigned to teach this evening's lesson, for my experience has trained me well.

I have always been fascinated by the total mortal makeup. From the beginning days on a planet – continuing on through evolution and to the present stage, I have always found the divine plan to be without defect.

You can envision for yourselves how man's perception has changed throughout history. This perception affects everything, including the physical body. Everything in nature has pattern, plan, and purpose. When you view a pack of wild animals, you can see there are some animals that are the leaders, some are the nurturers, some are the hunters. Overall, the pack works for the health and well-being of the whole.

With time, you can see that wildlife has not changed or evolved like humans have; their changes perhaps come from man's intrusion. Animals have not the capacity to know God; they merely live on instinct; they know not good or evil; their selfishness is more perhaps self-preservation. While all animals are truly cherished by our Father, wildlife is not equipped to connect with divine circuitry.

Mankind's evolution has indeed been his friend and foe. Man's ability to comprehend good and evil has taken him through an amazing transformative evolutionary experience. As a mortal, I did do better as a child of God when I had begun to understand my mortal self. I was indeed part 'instinctive animal,' and part 'divine child of God' – part material, and part energy. How I perceived life is what enabled me to either progress, or delay progression.

No Urantian scientist has full knowledge of the human brain and all its functions, yet there are many individuals who believe they know all there is to know about the mind and its inner workings. Father is truly brilliant with His divine plan and how everything has pattern, plan, and purpose. You are each gifted with mind; and over time, your mind has been shaped by various experiences.

There are certainly reasons why you are the way you are. How you have perceived life up to this point has shaped you into the person you are today. With the rebuilding of the circuits, your minds have a greater capacity to absorb, understand, and organize. You are better equipped to receive morontial lessons. You are indeed able to have those gifts you would have, had there not been rebellion.

This week, make effort to quiet the mind. Take note of those occurrences that seem out of the ordinary – for example, foresight; or feeling spirit-led; feeling capable of handling situations. Know that your minds are connected to a cosmic mind. Think about who you are and how everything works together. Ponder the possibilities of change, how things are always changing. Truth ever remains the same, yes, but most everything is in a state of evolution to bring about ultimate truth.

I am ABRAHAM. Our gratitude to our brother, Emulan. Your expertise shared, will be to our benefit.

Children, there are endless possibilities here on your world; not to be exploited or used for self-aggrandizement, but tangible possibilities that are leading you into an era of Light and Life – definitely a moment we are all looking forward to. Think about how Father knows each one of you, and how there is little you can do to comprehend or grasp the fullness of His love for you.

Ponder your perception of your God and His involvement in your life. Know that those who watch over you are without number and there is not to worry. Be comforted by the unceasing truth that you are a child of God and loved beyond measure. Go in peace. Until next week, shalom.

Living an Authentic Life | Are We Living The Life We Feel We Were Meant To Live
Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-13-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying the peaceful surroundings here this evening. Each week that I teach I am made to learn more. I am fascinated by your unique personalities and your perception of attempting to live a divine life on a mortal planet.

Emulan's lesson last week discussed getting to know our total mortal make up and how everything works together. As I have now passed the mortal material level, I am with new concepts to take in, while retaining the value of the old. I am different now than I was in the flesh. My acceptance to consistent changing has enabled me to advance in the spirit. Again I give you, Emulan.

EMULAN: Greetings, fellows. I am with gratitude to have learned and worked with my brother, Abraham; I am different because I have known him. I am made more having known the individuals I have throughout my career. Even in negative experience there was value. In my realm now I still experience conflicts, differing opinions, and always that temptation 'to be noticed.' I look forward to new growth and change because I am made more, and that is my perception now. Yes, I am always moving forward. I look forward to change for I know it is our perfecting process.

As you reflect on your lives I am made to wonder: How many individuals feel they are living the life they were meant to live? How many are being their genuine selves? When you look at your overall life, what is your measure of joy? What is your measure of comfort and security? How do you greet each day - with enthusiasm? or with dread.

Answers to these questions can reveal to you if you are living to your highest light. There should be a good measure of gratification, combined with the knowledge that life is work and play. Yes, balance in all things.

I so love the mortals of this world of which I encounter, for their intentions are truly touching. All have high hopes and expectations. All are striving for progression in some way. Many mortals, every day, are deep in despair for they feel they are not living the life that they are supposed to. This does not mean one hopes to have a life of ease and bliss, no. This means that even in times of hardship there is a true knowing that everything moves forward toward an ultimate good.

Every good thing begins with God - the Father of all fathers, the Eternal Light. He is love; He is intelligence and action beyond our comprehension. Those who strive to know God and to be like Him are assured with the fact that the divine life is not one of blissful ease, no, but one filled with challenges and learning. One who is feeling without fulfillment is not living an authentic life.

Individuals can live for many things - such as money, love from others, self-glory - but the one who lives for God sees true value. Those who embrace this true value live their lives according to what appears to be for the ultimate good. Therein is balance; therein is satisfaction; therein is fulfillment. One could have the riches of the world – love of family and friends, respect in their employment positions – and still be unfulfilled with the thoughts that they have somehow ‘sold out’ and are not living the life they were meant to live.

This week, find time to answer these questions I have posed. Who do you serve? How would you envision the life you are really meant to live? Farewell.

I am ABRAHAM. I am in awe of Father’s plan for eternal living. There will always be hard work. His plan is not one of ease, but one of balance. The universes are with intelligence, as you are also; you are expected to use intelligence in combination with love. Nothing can be kept from those who watch over us.

To live a life serving the ego is to be blinded to Father’s ministry. To understand if you are living your best life is not measured in material amounts or even in the love from others, no. Living true to your status as a child of God means that you are with balance in all situations – good or bad. You will have times of despair, confusion and anxiety, yes, but never enough to overcome that persistent child of God. A few questions this evening.

SIMON: Yes, Abraham. I enjoyed a program yesterday at the Impact Training Center. Hans Berger seemed similarly inspired along these same lines of choosing happiness and joy. One of the statements at the end of the evening seemed to remind me of Jesus’ eventually coming out to proclaim truth more openly at the end of His life here. Are we at the point where we should be more open with truth? He was talking about praying out-loud, bringing truth to the forefront.

ABRAHAM: I would believe that would depend on an individual’s level of comfort or spiritual advancement. Truth is personal, and not always shared among individuals. If truth is used to move forward toward an ultimate good for all, then that is what one should strive for. Many fear using truth as it may harm others or make themselves look negative. Comfort levels are also to be considered. Sharing truth should always be balanced with love and without intention to boost one’s ego for being right. Truth should be a revealer of light. Jesus always waited upon the will of Father in revealing truth, and in the beginning of His ministry He always had put forth His truth in an attitude of service. At the end of His ministry, however, He had the mission of doing as much good as possible, and many were not open to the truth. He was at times perhaps a bit forceful, and at other times He knew it would not serve. Another question?

DIANNA: Abraham, I would like to get some clarification on some of what you talked about in the lesson tonight. When I look at my life and my wanting to be fulfilled spiritually; when I look at the cycle of allowing Father to transform my life and transform the patterns of behavior and beliefs that I have built – I do feel fulfilled. However, in the recent discoveries of the other patterns in my life, I do seem to color-over this fulfillment as well. Is there a point where I will always see that this is going to be an incorporated part of my moving in from a place of not feeling fulfilled? I say this because I am not quite accepting and forgiving of my past into a place where I will be comfortable, because I can see that requires a 'constant change.'

ABRAHAM: I can see how your fulfillment from the spirit life can benefit other aspects of the mortal life, and yet I can also understand negative occurrences could create a bit of space between you and the Spirit. Nothing though, can take you away from the Spirit. I understand that individuals become who they are because of past experience and even behave in a certain manner; but the mortal life is about overcoming the challenges that block you from forward momentum and growth. The lesson perhaps is more focused on the total mortal life – finding fulfillment in all areas; not at all times, no, but with balance and the knowledge that things are always in a state of natural evolution. The mortal life is hard work, yes, and takes great effort to overcome the animal-self. My message here to you, my daughter, is that you are indeed with power and that spirit support to change things in your life. Where there is sorrow, there can be joy. Where there is hopelessness, there is always Father's plan for perfection. Is there something more I can answer for you? (Diana: No, and thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

ANICIA: Abraham, I really want to speak with you right now because this lesson is everything that I have been going through for a long time. It really hits home to me about walking in balance because I know the intelligence that is within me is at times very clear, and at times very unclear. I know the steps that I need to take in the moment, and yet I just want to jump ahead and figure out my whole life plan because I am so worried about being unfulfilled. So yes, there are many days I wake up dreading the day because I don't feel I am where I am supposed to be. There are times when it is really unclear for me. If you have anything that might help, I would be appreciative.

ABRAHAM: Certainly, my daughter. Father completely desires your happiness. Many believe God to be unmoving and somewhat of an enforcer. He very much wants you to discover your gifts and do what you most love. All are bestowed with gifts in order that they may serve in some capacity. It was meant to be fulfilling to use these gifts in whatever you choose to do. This is your life. It is also Father's opportunity to live your life with you; but He does not force His children into anything that is not suited. He does not ask the individual who does not want children to have children, for instance. He does not ask those who want to work as a gardener to be a brick mason. He has given you gifts and free will. These decisions are yours to make. Whether you will live frivolously, or work, or decide to be in a relationship or not – know that somehow, fulfillment comes from knowing you have done your best from where you are; it comes from knowing you have chosen a path of divine light rather than one that is selfish. You are still quite young in your eternal career. Have not worry nor anxiety, but know that whatever you choose, your Father is always with you and guiding you. Remember He desires your happiness.

I am slipping. Know that with each week that passes I grow in love for you all. Until next time, shalom.

Find Your Authentic Life By Looking At Your Own Gifts | Allow Father To Show When and Where To Serve

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP

01-20-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a serene atmosphere we have here this evening. Your searching minds make it much easier for me to speak with you. The mortal life is quite complex, yes, and it will always be so. You are each day gaining more spiritual understanding which aids in all aspects of living.

Last week, Emulan discussed living an authentic life, living the life you were meant to live. In any life-position you take there will always be your outgoing ministry to spread the good news. Even those with troubled souls have a great deal to teach.

The world is at a critical point now where many are becoming hopeless and disempowered. Our Teaching Mission is one of empowerment and hope. You that are willing to be spirit led will find yourselves with Father's assignments. Your daringness to show your faith – not to force your faith but only to 'show' – will be an attraction to many. You have a responsibility as kingdom missionaries to be aware and open to your fellows.

Those that choose to serve Father find they are with a closeness to Him that they cannot get from anywhere else. It is fulfilling and gratifying to know that you are always in a potential teaching mode. Where you live, work, and play, does not particularly matter. What is meaningful is that you have strived to do your very best.

Most all mortals have ambitions, dreams to be fulfilled, desires to obtain, and this is perfectly acceptable. It is simple to find your authentic life by looking at your own gifts – you may have all-pervading interests that are training you to serve in the kingdom in some sort of capacity. Those that are perhaps closed-off to the spirit may not perceive correctly their talents.

Father does desire your happiness, yes, and would not stand in your way to find fulfillment in any capacity; in fact, He helps to open doors to those desires you have. One could be gifted at woodworking and perhaps he would find those opened doors for employment doing such while still being of service for Father. Yes, other than the enjoyment of the craftsmanship of his work, he also has his ministry to his fellow employees. He finds fulfillment in being a caring friend, an honest speaker, a listening compassionate and sometimes advising brother. He does find satisfaction in doing the mundane because he knows who he really works for.

You have each made a series of choices that have brought you where you are today. Many occurrences have just simply happened to you, and at other times you lived intentionally. No one person is ever really stuck in anything – a bad marriage, a job, an illness.

Do you understand, you have more personal power than you realize? Do you realize that 'with God,' all things are possible? Yes, you have the gift of intelligence and can change any situation. There is always that inner doubt that can keep one from even trying to fulfill their dreams, yes, but the spirit-seeking child knows, 'what the Son desires and the Father wills, is.'

When you think back on the careers of the Master's apostles, they were with many misconceptions and met with disappointment time after time. You can see that because of their companionship with Jesus and faith in Father, they learned to reconcile themselves to reality – for as we know, some of their fondest hopes were not reality and were not going to ever happen. Instead, their expectations were transformed by their acceptance that 'Father's will was always for the ultimate good.' Many of them desired to be at the Master's side so as to be at a place of importance. It was later on that they realized the 'ultimate good' was – that with the Master, every place is important.

You have your disappointments, yes; you may even feel there are too many roadblocks or dead ends. But I say, always is there the choice to take another direction. You are always empowered to make effort toward an ultimate good. While we teach that reconciling the self to Father's will is extremely important, we also want you to know that you are with personal power to create change, to go forward toward an ultimate good.

At the end of the Master's earthly career He exclaimed: "Father, I commend my spirit into your hands." But at the beginning of His earthly career, He commended His 'entire life' into the Father's hands. His focus was not about living the life He felt He was supposed to live, no! He fully trusted that Father overlooked His entire career. His complete belief in self-forgetfulness led Him to places Father wanted Him to be. He was always with joy to serve in any capacity.

Children, you are bearers of light and have responsibility to live accordingly. No matter what your life circumstance you are always, first and foremost, a child of God – and in serving Him you have something you cannot get anywhere else. The Master faced many challenges, yes, and yet He was unshakable in faith and trust. He was unmoved by emotion. He was steadfast in living those divine principles Father was revealing to Him.

This week, think about what you are doing with the circumstances you are in. For example, your home life – many petty things may be occurring but are you putting forth your focus to those things that are truly important? Are you working to your highest ideal of ethics at your place of employment? It's not so much the work that you do as it is important to minister to those who seek you out. In service there is fulfillment; there is that closeness with Father that curbs your cravings for anything else.

No questions this evening. Know that I make effort to meet with you each during the week. Find time this week to journal down a question and wait for the reply. Know that I am growing in love for you each. Until next week, shalom.

Truth And Awareness | Truth Can Be Colored By Heartfelt Desires
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-27-2003
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I would like to express to you my gratitude for your continued faith and support. You are why we are progressing with such success in bringing worldwide awareness. You have answered our call, and for that, we thank you.

I can understand the distractions in life can cause imbalance; it can cause one to lose focus and make any and all things, acceptable. Deep within the hearts and minds of any spirit-born child of God there is that vein of truth, there is that inner-knowing of right and wrong. Those that are not so much living a Spirit-led life would not perhaps have the same awareness; any and all things become acceptable, especially if it brings self-aggrandizement. This evening we will focus on truth and awareness.

Many mortals believe that truth can be molded to adjust to any circumstance – that truth can be colored by one's heartfelt desires. But truth is truth! and that may look different in every individual's eyes, yes. To Father, however, truth just is. Truth is pure perception without being colored by personal desires. Many individuals find the truth to be cruel – and in their denial of it, progress is slowed. Not to worry, because eventually truth will demand to be seen.

Said Jesus: "The truth shall make you free." The willingness to see reality for what it truly is, is to be in a state of forward momentum – always progressing and ever growing. Truth begins with awareness – and that means having the courage to not dramatize the truth or color it with the needs of the ego, but to see it as a teacher.

Our Mission has for the most part been about bringing awareness. In this awareness, the vein of truth has been pulsating with new thought. Individuals are finding that living a life of falsehood is entirely unfulfilling – the falsehood makes even the most stable-looking foundation, quite shaky.

The world's inhabitants are finding that this new truthful-thinking is setting them free from tradition-bound practices; it is building self-esteem in a manner that makes cultural and society's set ways look ridiculous. Not any one person, group, or society can make you believe what is acceptable and can guarantee love and respect – not to mention a place prepared for you in heaven.

Truth is perhaps like a dance with 'what is;' and when you insist on leading, you are sure to stumble. Awareness is a light, and truth is your teacher. In my days in the flesh, I had a great many hard truths to face. I so much desired a life of power and self-glory; and, therefore, I molded the truth to fulfill my desires. The more truth I denied, the more fear overcame me; I was made to rely on myself, my ability – and that created fear, for I was utterly alone.

A life without Father is not only meaningless, but fear-producing. Accepting the truth and being aware enabled me to learn a new and better way. I did see the ugliness within, and the truth enabled me to change and grow. The truth did not stop me with its judgment, but empowered me with new solutions and a priceless closeness to Father.

This week, ponder your concepts of truth and the avenues you may be tempted to take to color it. How does denial slow your growth? How does the truth set you free? Also this week, free yourselves from the noise of the world or earthly stimulations, that you might better practice your awareness techniques.

No questions this evening. Know that I truly feel the presence of our beloved Father when I am with you. Until next week, shalom.

Self-Awareness Brings Alcohol-Ridden Man To a New Awareness - Putting Truth To Action

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-03-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am touched by the genuine spirit here this evening. You, brothers and sisters, do a great deal to bring healing to one another on many levels.

These lessons you have received over these many years have obviously served you, for you would not have carried on otherwise. You each have made it clear on what is to be realistic and acceptable. You have vowed to forsake mysticism, ego-comfort, and surface-level topics. What has been acceptable to you concerning these lessons has become reality. This reality has not always been a great source of comfort, no, but it has brought growth and expansion of mind and soul. Well done.

Continuing on the topic of truth and awareness, I would say a few more words about putting truth into action. Your lives at this point in time are the way they are because of your levels of awareness and what you find to be acceptable.

I am to tell you a story of a man who was quite unhappy with his life. Always did he have some reason or another to believe things could never change; in fact, he blamed Father for his misfortune. He had severed ties with his wife and children and was on the brink of unemployment. His living place was quite unfit for living. All this was his reality, yes, for this was what was acceptable in his mind.

The man saw not the good things in life, he saw no value to be obtained in the deeper meanings of mortal living. He had a fondness for alcohol and found that this was his companion, his escape from reality. Yes, this escape was what was acceptable to him. He had justified his actions so that he could accept a so-called life of ease - a life without too much thought.

One day the man was in a terrible car accident. When he awoke, he found himself quite alone. He called out for Father in his pain and agony - but with absolutely no faith behind the intention, for he had, in fact, always blamed fate (or God) for his misfortune. But to his surprise he began to feel a loving embrace; an awareness of new thoughts and words came to him.

The incoming thoughts and words helped the man realize that his years of misery were of his own doing. He began to see that the poor treatment from his wife and children were his own fault, for that was what he thought to be acceptable. He realized that his financial woes were, in reality, a result of his tendency to work without integrity. He envisioned that his disruptive personal environment was his escape from having to deal with or put forth effort into any relationship. Yes, reality surfaced; he had put out no effort - and therefore, he gained nothing.

As the man recovered, he had a great deal of time to reach advanced levels of awareness. These truths were painful and yet, not as painful as the existence he had already lived. The man soon determined his living conditions were not acceptable any longer. Likewise, his attitude toward life and ease-seeking was not acceptable. Yes, his unfulfillment was not acceptable anymore.

Of course, the man experienced an array of emotions, including anger. This anger began to create a new pathway to a new and better world. Over time, his connection with Father grew stronger; he began to demand that he have a Spirit-led life.

With his new outlook and perception, everything changed; and his treatment of people, softened. He was indeed a new man who began to look sincerely at others as if they were indeed his brother or sister in the kingdom. His work habits greatly improved for he found that to work without integrity was no longer acceptable.

Being renewed in spirit, the man demanded more from himself. He demanded meanings and values at any personal costs. He realized that the alcohol he had so often consumed was the underlying lie he had been living, and he found this to not be serving – himself or anyone. As the man built relationships he found the value in a good friend, the love of a wonderful woman, and the importance of being a father to his children. Yes, for he now knew this was where true meanings and values reside.

Life is still a constant effort for this man, but so much has changed. And all this because of what his awareness had brought him; and because of what he decided was acceptable, or not. His reality changed when he began to demand a life lived in the spirit. One cannot change their life overnight, and should not expect to! But one certainly has the power to quit blaming others for their pain, and demand to be more, do more, and have more.

What are those persistent things in your life that are not serving anyone? What has become acceptable to you? What do you demand from this life? How have all your thoughts made your life what it is today? Do you find methods of escape to life's realities? or are you willing to embrace the awareness and the truth that comes therefrom.

Our meeting is kept short this evening. Know that you are each always in my thoughts. I find myself ever growing in love with you. Go in peace. Until next week, shalom.

Truth Is A Universal Law | It Cannot Be Molded Or Bent to Suit

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-10-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. My heart is full just watching you with one another. Your kindness, compassion, and offerings are truly touching. Millions of dollars are spent each year by those seeking some kind of assistance, whether it be medical, psychological, or emotional, when right here you have a wonderful resource for comfort and well-being. Father is always our best counselor and yes, many times we find Father in one another. Well done, my friends.

I realize that mortal circumstances often take us to places we do not want to be. Always remember, everything moves toward an ultimate good. You are revealers of the light, and as life happens to you, you will certainly set examples for others who also strive for meanings and values in this mortal life. As your acceptance of truth is strengthened, surely will Father assist you in putting that truth into action. I am always amazed by the resilient spirit of man.

This week, I would keep our lesson short so we can receive questions. In our recent lessons on truth, we have studied our own levels of what is acceptable in our lives and, what we are demanding to receive from having lived a Spirit-led life.

This evening I would again speak a little about universal law: No one in mortal life actually reaches perfection. On rare occasions it has happened, yes, but not usually. Even those who profess to live a Spirit-led life find that they can justify certain personal behaviors. Some still feel the truth can bend and there is not that level of commitment to integrity that it takes to have a close Spirit connection.

Truth is a living universal law. It cannot bend. It cannot be molded to justify one who lives a life without honor and integrity. Your thoughts and your actions indeed return to you. Those individuals who are particularly judgmental of others do hide in their own knowledge of the fact that they live not up to high standards of integrity.

What in your life are you hoping to receive? What message are you putting out to the universe? To live a life of truth is to receive the universe gifts therefrom. A life lived with goodness also reaps goodness from the universe. This is not to guarantee a life of ease or bliss, no. This is to be prepared to advance in spirit levels.

This week, take time to prioritize those things in your life. What is truly important? What really matters? What is long-lasting and building toward the future? A garden left unattended will surely wither away. Are there questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, we have a large crowd this evening, just for the record. Regarding your teaching, my garden feels like the weeds are growing faster than that tiny hoe I have to keep up with it. Is that a good thing? Or, is it that I can't see or acknowledge what it is that is causing this?

ABRAHAM: My son, every garden takes a great deal of work. You are perhaps still preparing the soil for growth. You do not see the expansion you are embarking upon. All lasting work takes many small steps to prepare. You are doing well in the eyes of our Father – and you are not seeing that with your own eyes. You are judging life's success by someone else's standards. Those things that are truly important, yes, you are attending to. Nothing is passing you by. Take joy in those small but meaningful things and know that the small steps of today are preparing the ground for the greater work of tomorrow. Is this helping? (Calvin: Yes, Abraham, and thank you very much.)

SIMON: Abraham, I feel like there is a lot of decisions going on in my life right now, and... [Inaudible.]

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I see you, Simon, as an artist of sorts; and many artists tend to work from whatever mood they are in at the time. You are quite creative and are filled with many ideas. Not all of those ideas need to become reality. You simply take on too much. You have high expectations of yourself and this, for the most part, is good; but when you can't fill those expectations, you are feeling disappointed with yourself. This again, is not so much the Spirit driving you, but the artist in you. As always, a little balance in life goes a long way. Decipher for yourself those things that need immediate attention, and allow yourself some time to relax or find a creative outlet that does not have a deadline. You do well, my son. Is this helping? (Simon: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

WILLEENA: [inaudible.] Do you have suggestions about how to return to Spirit?

ABRAHAM: I cannot invade your thoughts or understanding, but perhaps I can say a few words. You, Willeena, my daughter, have always had connection with Mother and Michael at any given opportunity. Any new understanding you have received is certainly of your own willingness to be open. I can say that you know this is the purpose of our Brother/Father Michael, to teach and enlighten. You are in full understanding of the Correcting Time and Teaching Mission. You know without a doubt I have full faith in you and your ability to understand and live a Spirit-led life. Yes. Is there more I can offer?

WILLEENA: [Inaudible - about feelings of falling short.]

ABRAHAM: Understood. This is common and bound to happen from time to time. When in the midst of this distraction, you can only ask yourself: 'What can I do right now? What can I do for today?' The Spirit within will, no doubt, answer back: 'For today, I can accept the fact that I am the child of God and, am worthy of His love and communication. For this moment, I can relax and know that while I am down in the dust, there is one above me who can see all. I am never lost. I am never alone. For today, I can believe that my life is in a state of constant evolution and, I am not going to crumble.' You have been through these moments before, Willeena, and always have you found your hand back in Father's. You have always been one to help others reconnect with Father; and this service is your best method back to Him. Remember you each have one another. When mortal life seems to be overwhelming, know that your fellows long to help you - and also need your help. Is this answering? (Willeena: Absolutely. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

ELESHA: [Inaudible - about the feminine aspect of God versus the masculine dominate portrayal.]

ABRAHAM: The feminine energy is your own. It is simply your personal circuit on which divine energy travels. No, I see no resentment toward masculine energy as far as the spirit goes. You are discovering which methods are more comfortable for you - by all means, use them. Father desires your comfort because this is His connection to you. Have not worry. Is this answering? (Elesha: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: Another question?

LUKE: Two questions that have to do with my sons and the distance we have between us. (Inaudible ... About how to make more of a connection with them. Luke lives in Utah, and his sons live with their mother who has moved back to the Seattle, Washington area.)

ABRAHAM: Do you mean 'through man's technology?' or 'through Spirit?' (Luke: For instance, can I send them mindal messages.) Abraham: No, not at this age, no. Children, even those with Thought Adjusters, still need material forms of communication. This is not bad, Luke. A phone call as often as possible to them would surely keep you in their hearts and memories. Letters, pictures, etc. would also aid them in their transformation. Many times, parents can indeed feel the spirit-connection with their children, and children can at times be made to receive thoughts. This is good, but children need more. In spite of differences in spiritual understanding between you and your wife, it would do well to make a plea to her to put first, the children's welfare. Keep them out of your politics. In time, those children will be able to decide for themselves what path to God they want to take. For now – be their father. Put their welfare first. Is this helping? (Luke: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome.

CALVIN: Abraham, you have listening students in other parts of the world who interact with us, but who have no group Mission-participation of their own where they live. Some do request to be included as a part of our group, with you, here. Do you have any comment on that? Do you have any upcoming Teacher-assignment announcements to share with them? Do you encourage us in sending them your lessons?

ABRAHAM: This is the best that I can say for right now: What you put into the group, you will for the most part, receive back. If you make effort to reach out in ministry, surely you will be ministered to. I cannot so much comment on announcements, for that would verge on providing proof that I am, and I cannot do that. But indeed, always has Michael's Mission partly been about the brotherhood and inclusion. Individual's lives do become consumed with busyness, and it is understood that some are not as involved as others. This is understood and acceptable, yes. But definitely, participation and commitment to one another softens the harshness of mortal living. Is this in understanding? (Calvin: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: One more question?

MARSHALL: Yes, Abraham. A lot of breakthroughs and a lot of changes recently. Anything that you can give me that might be helpful?

ABRAHAM: I realize that everyone is in a state of constant evolution and it is difficult for me to speak freely about one's personal life. I am not to invade or interrupt in the personal lives of my students. However, if I am called upon, I make effort to be available. I can say to you, Marshall, that the spiritual life must also become a living reality – something you can see, hear, and feel; it must be made clear in everyday living; it must bear fruit. You are indeed enthusiastic and have good intentions – and yes, it can be overwhelming at times. We must remember to live a 'practical' spiritual, life. My recommendation is to take things a bit slower. Allow more time for absorbing those meanings you receive. All is as it should be. Have not worry, and take note of that spiritual fruit.

And with that, I will bid you, my students, farewell. Know that my deep and abiding affection is with you always. I thank you for your commitment, participation, and support of this, our Brother/Father Michael's, Mission. Until next week, shalom.

Concerns Of The World | Nalda At The Well Is Taught To Turn Within
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-17-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am inspired by your willingness to be open and also by your desire to assist. I realize the concerns of the world do cause some fear and confusion. I understand that the Spirit upon Urantia at this time is infiltrating even the darkest places. Man is losing faith in man and looking to Spirit for guidance.

Even though the world at this point in time seems to be filled with harsh realities, it is making every aware human being turn inward for answers.

When we consider the story of Nalda at the well in conversation with the Master, we can see how she refused to go inward to receive direct light. The Master had stayed persistent in His attempts of convincing Nalda to go within to reach divine understanding or higher levels of thought.

There are many reasons for mortals to stay on surface-levels of thinking. When one does turn inward, one is made to also look at themselves – their thoughts, their actions, their aspects of good and bad. To go within to gain direct divine interaction is to defy the ego. The ego craves what can be seen, felt, experienced, so as to feel valued and even superior.

Individuals born and bred into hatred will breed hatred. The more these individuals can make others small, the more powerful they feel. Some national leaders are working for the good of self, not for the whole of the nation. This is the most detrimental form of self-love, for it affects many.

You cannot force light upon another; you can only live day to day showing your own light. Allow these worldly aggravations to drive you inward. Take inventory of your own beliefs – what are you willing to put forth every day to promote the well-being of the whole?

The universe is many things, yes, but above all else, it is 'intelligence.' Emotions will not outweigh intelligence in the inner realms of the universe. What must be done for the Correcting Time to come into reality will indeed be done. No amount of emotionalism or drama can stop that.

You, our co-workers, friends, brothers and sisters, are our points of action – you put Michael's plan to work; you bring Him to life in the lives of others. Be at peace and know that Father knows, and is fully aware, of the state of affairs of men.

The age of awareness is upon mankind and man is learning to easily recognize the weakness within, the temptation to default within, yes. The turmoil within the world causes individuals to go within, and therein resides God; therein is that introduction to truth, beauty, and goodness; therein is the place we will all find unity – the budding sprouts of the Correcting Time.

Many of man's ideas and ideals must crumble before his eyes before he will look to a new and better way. In other words, traumatic events quickly get man's attention – unfortunately. You know this. You have received training to assist in this. Be not worried, for your sense of peace will be your channel to receive divine guidance.

Until man embraces all as his own family there will always be strife. Within the Teaching Mission, we have always sought to expand the concept of family beyond biological borders. This is working. There has been tremendous improvement. There are great changes occurring all the time.

The awareness that has come upon the minds of this world in a few short years is astonishing to us. Be at peace and know that your unity, your commitment to Michael, your willingness to take action, assists in the good of the whole.

I am sorry, no questions. Know that I am ever available for you if you should need me. Know that my love is ever growing for you each. Until next week, shalom.

Your Mission Ministry Is To Be Examples Of Faith

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-24-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I look forward each week to meet with you, my brothers and sisters. I feel an unbreakable family communion with you. You bring me here each week with your faith and desire to become good citizens of our universe.

As I have watched you grow, I perceive you each to be practically a totally different person. Your minds have expanded from the concepts of today and tomorrow, to eternity. In other words, you not only perceive your actions of today as one who believes in eternal life, but you see your fellows as equal eternal siblings - 'as family,' not mere associations.

You have, for the most part, incorporated the concept of the 'well-being of the whole' instead of 'individual self.' I truly believe you have taken some of the Master's personality aspects for your own, and this is good. Every day you are becoming new creatures. With every trial, mistake, habit or weakness, you are learning to draw the meanings and values out for yourselves.

One who would be committed to a life subject to the will of Father would certainly more easily see that with every day, with each days' experience, a new creature resides within the mortal flesh. At times, time seems to stand still; and yet, many times you are wondering where time has gone. The child with their mind stayed on their divine Parent has a smoother time of transitioning from one life stage to the next. They understand that life is not always unbearable or miserable - but an adventure, and rich with new opportunities.

Over these many years of lessons and discussions, we have helped to shape one another into who we are now and who we are becoming. How much easier it is to bear life's realities when a good friend is at hand. Just as biological families experience disagreements or personality conflicts, you, as a group, will also. Always will the desire to do good overcome any negativity.

This world, as busy as it is, there are many who suffer from loneliness or the impression that they are not acceptable. There are many who hide their true nature, for it may meet with disapproval from others. Our mission members are a diverse group – and have, for the most part, been capable of making all feel welcome. You, my friends, have a personal ministry, a ministry that you have committed yourselves to. You have taken on the responsibility to expand our family.

Many of you are gifted at conversation and make others feel welcome and acceptable as they are. Many of you are very open to Spirit and can give sound and direct spiritual advice. Many of you are simply good listeners and make people feel worthy of being listened to. Yes, you have your Mission ministries, and none of you are incapable of performing your duties. These duties are completely natural and joyful – not at all uncomfortable or feeling as though you are being put upon.

Father can reach those who listen to Him--those who have faith in Him--but there are many who have experienced enough hopelessness that they are not reachable. Herein lies your ministry; you are examples of faith and can, face to face with individuals, spread the good news. You are indeed a visible ship of faith upon the ocean of hopelessness. Your light countenance, your show of faith, your ability to be caring – is a saving grace for those in whom you touch.

The world seems to be with great chaos – and yet, from my point of view, it is moving as it should, with divine watchcare and guidance. This week, ponder your personal ministries and what that may entail. Find time to see the joy in life and let that show upon your face. Reach out to those you chance to meet and give some words of encouragement, or perhaps just listen. Life is not merely happening to you, but you are making life happen. A few questions.

CALVIN: Abraham, we have some new guests – hopefully, new family members, Jim and George.

ABRAHAM: Greetings. Feel free should you have questions.

SIMON: [Inaudible. A question about digestive enzymes.]

ABRAHAM: Simon, I am not in understanding of digestive enzymes. I am sorry, can you expand?

SIMON: I understand that most Americans have problems digesting foods because over the years our digestive enzymes decrease, so a supplement of enzymes could help.

ABRAHAM: You would know more about this than I would. You certainly make sense. There are many factors to the world's ailments today. Anxiety, stress, would certainly affect the bodily systems. There are numerous products on the market that claim to be of assistance to good health. I can say, a relationship with the Father, the company of good friends, and the everyday striving to live better, is as effective as anything – including medical remedies. By all means, if you find something that works however, use it – be it material or spiritual, yes. Is this at all helping? (Simon: Yes. I thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome, Simon.

MIRIAM: Abraham, I just want to thank you so much for your lesson last week. I felt a dry sponge in that area and your words were like water to a dry sponge. I felt at ease this week. It is just a good example of how Father sends us what we need. I love you to pieces and I thank you for the service that you do for us. That part of your lesson regarding ego – I was thinking that could apply to our nation's leaders, but I started thinking about how in my situation that I was looking at that in an agitated way, I was coming from the ego: 'It feels like it ought to be this way, why can't it be this way.' My agitation was coming from that kind of thinking. So that was really good advice.

ABRAHAM: I am not so certain that your feelings were solely stemming from ego as it was 'feelings of powerlessness.' There has been, is now, and always will be, injustices in the world. And it would appear that the voice of the individual is lost. Your feelings are shared by many mortals, and there is great concern where egos are involved with worldly affairs. You have indeed done well coming to terms with your new understanding. Your individual effort to make a difference in whatever way you can, is indeed healing. You, my daughter, do touch many lives every day. Absolutely you are true to your ministry. Well done. Another question?

GEORGE: My first question: On this planet, I have the name George, but I have a spiritual name that I am not certain of. My second question: How can I better counsel those who come to me seeking assistance?

ABRAHAM: One moment. As close as I can give you your spiritual name, using the English language, it sounds like Jedidiah. I am happy to finally speak with you. You do appear to be very sincere in your efforts to help in any way you can, especially the spiritual aspects of life. I can simply recommend a few guidelines, but of course your internal Father is always the best teacher. The world in which you each live is a world that relies much on what the eyes can see. Today's seeking individual benefits greatly on practical spiritual practices; the more you can keep spiritual guidance real, the more benefit it will have to those seekers. Spiritual advice, or any advice, should be something that is usable – not an unreachable ideal, but something that assists in everyday-living such as improving family life, work life, citizenship, overcoming personal habits. The goal of our Teaching Mission is to make real the kingdom of heaven on Earth. Is this helping? (George: Very much so, Abraham. Thank you.)

With that, I will take my leave. Know that with each passing week I am ever grateful to Father for bringing me to you. Until next week, shalom.

In The Act of Ministering to Others You Are Also Ministered To
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-03-2003
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I would like to begin by thanking you for your belief in me and our Brother/Father Michael's Mission. I would also express my belief in you, individually and collectively. Your personal empowerment is becoming more obvious each time we meet.

Always with the act of ministering to others do we learn so much about ourselves – we learn that 'we receive what we project.' This is not to validate negative occurrences in your life happening 'because you seemingly deserve it,' no; this is to say that at this point in time, the sum total of your being (meaning your personal experience) lives-out in a certain manner, and you receive therefrom.

Most mortals have experienced a fair amount of turmoil, and most are educated and even strengthened from it. There comes a point in the mortal career where you 'know that you know' – meaning you seek not to blame others for your personal difficulties, but take responsibility for your own life. Most reach this understanding when they are beginning to have some connection with the indwelling Father Fragment.

This evening I would speak a few words on our beloved Adjusters. These loyal and faithful Adjusters are your closest career companions. They do not seek to judge you for your life choices, but to guide you toward more correct ones. They indeed know everything there is to know about you and they love you with an enduring love. Our beloved Adjusters are overjoyed when their mortal counterparts have an ear for their voice; yet, are feeling pain at blatant divine disobedience – meaning once you have touched upon enlightenment, to stray therefrom does indeed cause our personal Monitors real pain.

This recognition/feeling of their pain is not to gain your obedience through sympathy or guilt, no, but to reveal to you a divine reality. They love you with a parental love; and with that, they take a certain amount of responsibility or concern for your well-being. To the Mystery Monitor that is bestowed to an individual who eventually becomes unreachable, it is especially devastating for that indwelling Fragment of the Father.

As you go about in your ministry to others you will always see personal aspects of yourself that need to be addressed. Father understands that your working with various individuals can be challenging, for personalities are not always in alignment – and this can cause some conflict, yes. Remember that in your ministry you are also the student, and much of the time those you attempt to help are in actuality, helping you.

Father can, and will, give messages to people that can reach those in whom the message was intended for – especially for those who seem hopeless, or despairing, and are not in a position to hear for themselves the divine message. In the act of ministering to others, you are also ministered to. Issues will arise and have need for your attention, yes. I say, be not fearful, but know that your beloved indwelling Father stands at your side with open arms and is ever drawing you closer to Him.

You can read about God the Father; you can intellectualize Him and have discussion; you can ponder His omnipotence – but until you fully believe a fragment of Him was bestowed especially for you, He will not be real, He will not seem active in your life. Yes, my friends, an actual Fragment of the Father of all fathers indwells our very being; and that, my friends, is all we will ever need; it is more than we could ever hope for, and the key to being one with Him someday.

This week, study in your text on the Mystery Monitors. How personal is your God and what is His message? How does the Father Fragment assist you in your ministry to others? How might your thoughts or actions cause space between you and Father? He is our Source. He is all we will ever need.

No questions this evening, perhaps next time. Know that I am ever growing in love for you each. Until next week, shalom.

Literal Receptors In The Brain Connect Us To Spirit | Things We Do That Impedes This Connection

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-10-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying this wave of energy here this evening. Your insightful contributions are most appreciated. I look forward to each week when we can meet and build upon our ideas and concepts. Well done.

Now that I am without material form, I have good communication with my Father. It is very much different from where I am (in the form I am now) than the physical form where you are, to communicate with that indwelling God. I have not the fetters of the mortal body to scramble messages that may be from Father. I would say a few words on making the most of your contact with the indwelling God:

There are literal receptors within the brain that connect to Spirit. The mortal body is wired to receive from the indwelling Fragment. When the physical body and mind are not in optimum performance, then can divine messages be scrambled. This is not to say you become separated from Father, no, for He never leaves you. I am saying, when you are not in alignment, you are simply somewhat buffered against His presence.

Everyone knows those activities you can do to optimize your physical body to see to that successful communion with the Spirit, such as good food, exercise, limited chemicals - whether it be environmental or for medical purposes.

Many of your daily activities of intake can interrupt those receptors that connect with Spirit. The more disconnection you feel, the more you should rethink those choices of what you consume. Also, stress, anxiety, worry and other various spirit poisons, can create interruption between you and the Father Fragment. Daily stillness is a wonderful antidote for these interruptions.

Many people wonder why it is so difficult to perceive the will of God. Much of it is related to actual health of the mortal body and mind. As you will see when you are freed from this life, you will see divine contact in a whole new way. But for now, this material experience is required; it is the exercise that will strengthen you for the life ahead. The divine Adjusters desire so much for your success in your eternal career that they diligently work to educate, adjust, and modify your thinking. A life of ease does not work toward a successful destination to becoming one with the Fragment.

A parent who would give a child everything is not teaching the child the value of work. Parents who would make their children's life easy does not teach the children to learn for themselves. The good parent does, however, make time to educate their children even if it becomes repetitive, for the good parent desires the children's success.

Most living creatures educate their young so that they may learn survival, so that they may know those skills it takes to live well, to live long. These life-lessons are difficult, yes – and yet, life continues on. All that has value and meanings are used to continue on with the business of living.

The indwelling Father Fragments are not to be perceived as harsh Teachers, no, for they are so much more – the Adjusters live life within you, with you. They know you as a child, not a student. They know you as a part of all there ever was, is, and will be. They know you and love you 'as you are,' and yet they are energized by seeing your potential.

To be fit in all aspects of living makes the Adjuster's divine message easier to comprehend. Balance in mind and body creates a more clear path for the Adjuster to communicate with you. This time now is critical for you to be in direct contact with your Father Fragment, because there are many individuals in the world that will need your assistance by sharing with them the good news.

This week, reevaluate your daily intake of foods, medications, chemicals, sunlight, and exercise. Make improvements where needed. Create a list of activities you can be actively involved with to reduce stress and anxiety. Let not the fetters of the material body come between you and your beloved Adjuster. Know that your ministry to others depends upon your ability to connect with the Spirit. That is all. Are there questions?

MARSHALL: Yes, Abraham, it is a pleasure to be back. Just anything you may have to offer that is helpful would be much appreciated.

ABRAHAM: Marshall, I perceive you are in the midst of learning to become more balanced. You are learning that your actions have consequences no matter how good your intentions may seem at the time. This is good. This is something to focus on, and continue to be open to the lesson. Overall, everything is as it should be. Another question?

CARLO: Abraham, I have never been here before, but I appreciate you speaking. I would just like to ask for some advice. I have some situations coming up where I feel I am losing my stability, which isn't necessarily a bad thing?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I appreciate your bright outlook even when things may appear to be dim, but forget not to exhaust your human resources – meaning that you do what you can possibly do to improve all circumstances. Know that in your efforts, Father works with you, side by side. You need not have worry, but simple faith. Is this helping? (Carlo: Yes, but what did you mean by “exhaust your human resources?”) Abraham: Yes, you do what you can, meaning you make effort, always, and allow the outcome of any circumstance to simply be what it is. Know that with God all things are possible. Yes. Is this helping? (Carlo: Yes, and thank you.)

AZSURAY: Abraham, I would like to say thank you for your teaching. Given your assignment to take a look at our physical condition – I am a diabetic and I have to take insulin. I was wondering if that is a chemical that is hindering me from getting in touch with my Thought Adjuster? Maybe if you could advise me in some way that I could cure myself of this, or help me understand more, that I might not have to take so many chemicals, I'd appreciate it.

ABRAHAM: Understood, Azsuray. Those chemicals that are needed to keep the material form healthy are not a hindrance, but a help. There are cases where medical technology helps you to become balanced in body; and therefore, are benefits toward receiving divine information. Do those things which you know to create good health. Do not make sudden changes, but be open to that divine guidance within. Most mortals at some time or another will need material medical help, just as an automobile needs maintenance to continue moving. Have not worry, my daughter. Your physical health is not a hindrance and surely your beautiful attitude is always helping. You do well. I am slipping. One more question?

TECTRA: Abraham, you spoke earlier in the lesson on 'spiritual receptors that help us make contact with our indwelling Spirit;' then you went on to talk about eating well, getting sunlight, and keeping chemicals out of our bodies. I am just curious – can you talk about other ways to enhance our connection, other than these. What I am thinking about is, can we grow that experience by visualizing somehow that these receptors are growing? What other ways can we grow these receptors?

ABRAHAM: They are, for the most part, the same things you have always done – prayer, positive attitude, and limiting external stimulus. But also, anytime you can master the self, for example: being patient, overcoming anger, resisting the temptation to feel self-pity – all make the way clear for these receptors to be open to spiritual circuitry; there is an energy exchange, so to speak. While you have thoughts that depart, there are also thoughts coming in. Good question. I would have to say, to exercise self-mastery is of great benefit toward opening these receptors. This is something you have each practiced and is not at all difficult. This question you present – the answers vary from individual to individual. Different activities may help some while not helping others. I am slipping. Good question, Tectra.

Know that I am ever available for you, my friends. My love goes with you no matter where you go. Until next time, shalom.

Adjuster Connection | Examining A Few Branches of the Tree of Integrity

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-17-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am impressed by your wisdom on this evening's topic you have discussed. There is a wealth of information among you. Your life experience has served you well. You have indeed made the most of your life circumstances. Many mortals fail to see the value in everyday-living reality.

I appreciate your discussion this evening so much because the topic was so real – so common in mortal life. Your willingness to be open and share gives our beloved Adjusters opportunity to work. This is your key to opening the door to an era of Light and Life. Our lesson this evening is not really directed at one particular focus; we will simply be probing various avenues for further Adjuster communication.

Good communication with the indwelling Father Fragment requires one to exercise

integrity. If one should justify underhanded deeds then one would find the laws of the universe in full force to bring awareness and correction. I am meaning, every mortal has weakness, yes, and once you are aware of a more correct way it should be common knowledge to move toward that correct way. Every now and then one finds themselves weakened, and of course they go against what they know to be right; this is deterring Adjuster communication.

To perhaps follow a darkened side would tend to lead one to feel unworthy of Father's love, thereby cutting themselves off from the divine Spirit. When you do good you feel good and want to keep doing better. When you knowingly have done wrong, you are disappointed with yourself, and feelings of worthlessness and hopelessness does easily set in. You ask yourself, 'Why would Father love such an unruly child?' and you feel not His presence.

Let us examine a few branches of the tree of integrity:

- 1). Being who you are really meant to be: Being yourself without projecting false pretense allowing others to think you are something you are not. To pretend that you are other than what you are is to not allow the Adjuster to work – there becomes too much static within the human mind for the Adjuster to reach with His divine help.
- 2). Keeping your promises – keeping true to your word: It is understandable that in today's busy lifestyle you would forget you have made promises and simply allow them to go by the wayside. Your ministry becomes without credibility when your word means nothing. This tells your fellows you are not dependable and do not really believe in what you preach.
- 3). Honesty in all things: I realize that the mortal mind of today is somewhat suspicious, for experience has given a message that hardly anything is trustworthy. It is right for the mortal mind to question everything, yes, and to withdraw from your spiritual account those skills you need in deciphering truth for yourself. Honesty can indeed cause conflict, and always is there a way to project honesty that leads to more peaceful solutions. Time and experience will show your fellows that you can be counted-on for truth as you perceive it. You will not be seen as simply another agreeing comrade who wishes to avoid conflict. As much honesty as you project to the world will be the measure you will receive back in return. The Adjuster finds it easy to work with a mind who can be honest with others and self – and on this level, it is intellectual, instead of bogged down with emotionalism.

This week, as you continue in your efforts to have a clean mind and body, also reflect on your actions and your ability to follow what you believe in. Continue in your efforts to assist the material body in making better contact with the Adjuster. Also, find time to ponder those branches we spoke of concerning the tree of integrity. No questions this week. Until next time, shalom.

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I would express my gratitude to you, our mortal brothers and sisters. You bring us here. Your faith sustains the Mission. Your willingness to be flexible serves all there is of our overall purpose. On behalf of Teaching Mission instructors, we send out our gratitude to you, Mission participants.

Your enduring faith will carry the world even through the darkest times. You each have a ministry to fulfill. Your Adjuster-connection will be your immediate guidance in all things. Should the majority of this world have fair Adjuster communications, what benefit would that have on the world as a whole?

Tradition has taught many mortals to fear God, to believe that some are closer to God than others. Many mortals believe that God is their excuse for exerting their personal agendas – they justify their cause as being 'the will of God.' Those individuals who become secure in their faith of an indwelling God will be protected against the agendas of those who supposedly wield power.

The better your communication with Father, the more resistant you are to live with dread and fear. Father is your source for truth. Man, is not! We strive to be God-like. We strive to be like who we worship. You would not worship another person. As per your mortal experience, you could hardly believe any one person has the all-powerfulness of our one God. With progressive Adjuster communication, you are seeing with the eyes of Father. You are taking on His understanding for yourself. You are less likely to be fearful of life's circumstances.

This world is in a state of fear. To add energy to that with your own feelings of fear is to see fear grow, to see anxiety expand, to see yourself, and individuals, making rash decisions and acting upon them. Let not our Mission participants add to the growing anxiety. My children, you have experienced for yourselves a new and better way to use your energy for good, for peace, for common sense.

Peace begins with an individual. Your continually-improving relationship with the indwelling God is the key to opening the door to peace. What can you each do in your own lives to plant the seeds of peace? Peace is not weakness, not apathy, but a promise to live to your highest and best good. Constant communion with Father easily instructs you on what truly is the highest good.

Let not the fears of the world be made manifest in your lives for you hold a responsibility, having committed yourself to the Correcting Time, to be representatives of our Brother/Father Michael. Father is our ship, Michael is our sails, you are the shipmates—not passengers, but shipmates—in an ocean of experience. Have not fear but rejoice in this, and know that you are indeed guided and watched over, as all Father's children are.

This week, continue to give attention to becoming more healthy in mind and body, for it assists in Adjuster communication. Think about your levels of fear and anxiety. How might you project energy toward peace instead of fear? While becoming swept up in various conversations, how can you broaden peaceful horizons? How can you communicate to others to stop feeding fear – but instead, working toward internal peace, which leads to world peace? What can you do to aid in increasing your own internal peace?

These days are very busy for me and I have not time for questions tonight, perhaps next week. Know that you are always in my thoughts and I am growing with love for you each, every time we meet. Until next time, shalom.

Peace | To Reject The Spiritual Is An Invitation For Inner-Turmoil

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-31-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Our gratitude goes out to those who carry our Mission forward. Those who host meetings, those who transmission-receive or transcribe, those who organize, those who fellowship, those who minister and spread the good news – you each play an important role in carrying on with Michael's Mission purpose.

We also express our gratitude to our beloved Father and His perfectly organized universe. While the world appears to be in constant chaos, those who choose to live a life in the Spirit will take comfort in knowing Father knows everything, and that all is well looked-after and attended to.

This evening we will speak a few more words on the subject of peace: Most inner-turmoil that individuals have, stems from the feeling of 'being out of control' or controlled by someone or something else. Life is busy, and so it should be. You should be diligent in your life activities, yes, but always is there a balance to be mindful of. Of course you must work to support your material life. Of course you must take time for children and family life. Yet, there is always something that motivates you to keep busy, to 'stay ahead of the game.'

Anxiety comes when you are feeling overwhelmed and behind. Anxiety comes when there is not effort put forth toward maintaining balance – spiritually and physically. Of course you have your material responsibilities, but to neglect the spiritual is an invitation to inner turmoil. The challenge of mortal living is to grow ever closer toward God, to be like God, and to maintain a human and divine life.

Many say: "I could be more likely to be more God-like should I not have to spend so much time working." I say, employment is fertile ground in which to practice your spiritual ministry. It is a matter of perspective – you can view your place of employment as you sharing a common burden with other individuals; or, that you are working as a family toward a common goal, a common good. You can view your employment as something that controls you and takes from you; or, you can view it as something that provides for you and your family, on many levels.

Of course, Father would never want you to be employed at something you dislike terribly, no. This situation would call for you to be active in seeking other avenues, other opportunities; yes, knowing Father can, and will, assist.

You also have your home life which many times appears to be a place of chaos instead of a place of peace. Especially in this day and age where there are so many single parents, blended families, cultural and societal influences – there are a great deal of issues to attend to. Many individuals live in somewhat toxic relationships; and no, Father would not have you put forth your best effort, year after year, only to meet with misery and continue to stay in the toxic relationship. Again, this would be your choice to be active to find other avenues.

Mortal life has many areas that could be a breeding-ground for stress, and of course this affects the mind, body, and spirit. Should you desire peace, then you should work toward it. You can maintain a certain amount of control and order in your life, yes! You need not be overwhelmed to the point that you feel controlled by your life circumstances, no. You have power, you have intelligence, yes. But best of all you have Father, you are not alone! He does not seek to challenge you to see how much you can take before you break, no.

Think about your life. You would agree that it is the way it is because of the choices you have made. Of course there are exceptions; but for the most part you have made your life what it is. You have control to a great degree; and yes, you can create inner peace and mental clarity. You must remember that all worldly circumstances are to be working toward an ultimate good.

Be aware to keep worldly issues at an intellectual level. Do not personalize it to the point that you have moved from the intellect to being paralyzed emotionally. Also, the same goes for friends, family, co-workers, and acquaintances – their lives are not yours; you are a part of their life. But to worry yourself to the point of anxiety is to sever that God-connection which would certainly give aid to those you have concern for. Forget not that God is many things; but above all else, He is intelligent.

This week, take time to view those troubled aspects of your life that continue to cause you unrest. Simplify if you must; detach if you must. But be not afraid to take control and be a creator of peace. Many of you are the heart of your home. How you feel or portray your attitude is the tone that is set for the rest of your family.

I have time for only a few questions. Proceed if you will.

LUKE: Abraham, with my wife coming in tomorrow, it is very helpful what you said about not personalizing her life and who she is. Is there anything else that you can help me with when she comes into town, that can help to move things forward in our relationship?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Luke, you must be true to who you are and allow her to be the same. You cannot make yourself happy by changing who you are so that you will be loved. Continue on with your lighthearted attitude while she is here, and have not worry about the deeper issues. Remember where you each came from – at some point in the beginning of your relationship, there was a more pure love, less 'conditional' expectation; work toward finding that again. Is this helping? (Luke: Yes. Thank you.)

JEDIDIAH: If war did not come from the Father, what source does it come from?

ABRAHAM: Does war come from the Father, is that your question? (Jedidiah: What source does it come from?) Abraham: Man, of course. To war is wholly man's choice.

There are universal laws 'to be followed' and when not, there will be repercussions. On an experimental evolutionary planet such as yours, there indeed needs to be a majority of 'agreed upon' laws for there to be world peace, absolutely. This world peace does indeed come with a price. As the world moves closer to the stages of Light and Life the understanding will be made clear; and individuals will not seek to be superior and all-powerful. There will be that inner-knowing that all are children of God and all are deserving of a fair mortal life. It is entirely man's choice to war. I, however, believe that this planet is working toward its highest and best good. The majority of individuals seek for the well-being of the whole. It is just a small percentage of people who seek the greater self-glory at the expense of others. Is this answering? (Jedidiah: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Good question. One more question.

ANN RAYEL: Abraham, if that is the case, then how do we discern which is evil and which is good. Maybe the act seems evil, but maybe it has a higher good. So how can we discern?

ABRAHAM: That is for each and every individual to decide with their own freewill choice. The Fragment of Father is bestowed to every normal-minded individual. That is what will guide you toward Light and Life. The understanding of 'evil versus good' does indeed come with time and experience. A small child cannot expect to understand the larger concepts of 'light and dark,' but indeed from the mindset of where he is, even he knows 'bad and good.' All are with free will. It is the individuals' own choosing to know good and evil for themselves. If you have not experienced evil, how could you know good? I do believe the Internal Father, time and experience, will be the best teacher. Is this helping? (Ann Rayel: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Good question.

With that, I must take my leave. Know that you each empower me to become better each time we meet. I am with deep love and affection for you each. Until next time, shalom.

Living the Mortal Life As the Master Did, Reconciling the Mortal With the Divine
Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 04-07-2003
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I appreciate the lighthearted atmosphere here this evening. Too many hours go by in the lives of mortals that are seemingly so serious and impacting life so heavily. In our lessons we have made effort to teach our students flexibility. Most everything is in a constant state of change and your ability to be flexible will enable you to be of service at any time.

This time of year, the thoughts of spiritually-minded mortals turn to the resurrection of the Master. This event on your world has probably had the greatest impact throughout all history. Although the records of this event vary from religion to religion, the truth of the story is what stands out in the minds of mortals and gives hope. The Master lived a perfected mortal life; and also did He release the mortal body in a perfected manner. His return appearances to His mortal children showed the possibilities of the next life.

I know, having been a mortal, how difficult it is to have faith-vision. The Master's return in a different form to His mortal children expanded their ability to believe and know that this mortal life is not the end, but a beginning to an eternal career.

Many mortals have difficulty in believing that there are endless possibilities to life's circumstances. Some do indeed believe that they are limited by this mortal life. Since the Correcting Time began, the possibilities regarding mortal life have expanded a great deal. You are each with more divine gifts than ever before. To have a personal connection with Father is to see the reality of those divine gifts - it is to see the bonds of limitation be broken.

Said the Master: "I am the way, the truth, and the life." He set a wonderful example for us to follow to the best of our ability. While His mortal life was seemingly harsh, His divine life brought balance and enabled Him to function with balance in mind, body, and spirit. Having been so attuned to the will of Father, the Master did, for the most part, move through the mortal life somewhat unaffected - meaning that He was not bound by anxiety, doubt, or depression; He kept an eye single to the glory of His Father in Heaven.

Even though the Master was indeed the Creator of a universe, He was definitely also a mortal, and experienced this life to its fullest. Every experience brought the Master closer to who He really was, and His internal Father guided Him through every phase of life. With each experience, He grew more capable - more capable of handling those difficult tasks that occur in the life of every experiencing mortal. He knew struggle, yes! and yet, He knew peace.

We think back to the story of Jesus in the garden where He made effort toward reconciling His mind to the will of His Father. Even though He so needed the company of His fellow apostles, He understood - "their hearts were willing, but the flesh was weak." This was a look at the man that Jesus was, the struggling mortal man. All mortals in this life will know of this experience.

Jesus could not, by sheer willpower, be reconciled within His mind as to the fate that was about to be put upon Him, no. It took prayer, stillness, mindal exercise, and emotional alignment for Him to reach reconciliation. As you each strive for peace, in and throughout your lives, you would take comfort in knowing the Master knows how much work is involved in reconciling the mind to mortal inevitabilities; He knows 'the heart is willing, but the flesh is weak.'

As you go forth into your week, think about those mortal things that need divine balance. This time of year is a time to die to the ways of old while being born again to the new. A reconciling of the mind is releasing the old and preparing for the new.

You each know there are things you can do to bring a healthy balance to your lifestyle. Find time to have prayer and some stillness. If possible, find time to walk in the sunshine. Find time for a friend, and laughter. Balance in living is the key to peace.

This week, let us each focus on the Master's resurrection, His dying to the old and becoming new. Think about His example broadening the possibilities in your own minds. A few questions.

MARSHALL: Yes Abraham, I have been working with Ham the last couple of months. I really did not appreciate as I should, you and your leading me back in October to where you have taken me. I just want to thank you because I am more grateful as I reflect back at your expert care and teachings. Your assistance was so critical at the time, even though I didn't appreciate it as much as I do now. Thank you.

ABRAHAM: Understood, Marshall. You're welcome. As we can also see, the apostles were not real happy with the Master's words from time to time – but while growth is difficult, it is necessary in all living things, including human living. Another question?

TECTRA: I have a question about doing the will of the Father as a mortal being – what that idea is for me, trying to do the will of the Father in each moment in time. My question is: How has your idea of doing the will of the Father changed since when you were a mortal being, to your perspective now? Does that make sense?

ABRAHAM: Yes. I am smiling because it is as changed as night and day. [laughter.] The material body does seem to be a veil over the possible understanding one could have without it. As a mortal, you are subject to many outside influences, such as society, culture, friends, family, the ego, and the needs and wants of the material body. As we move to the morontia life, it is like rising above the clouds to the clear beautiful blue sky. I have not the mortal influences any longer. I feel for the most part that I am able to receive clear communication from Father. I have learned to depend upon that. I sincerely believe I would be lost without it. Good question, my son. Another question?

WILLEENA: Back in the early nineties when I first heard from Ham about not charging for spiritual services. I went through quite a personal dilemma. I had been working since 1984 in various healing modalities and in the course of my career path I found that I was working on all the different levels – mental, emotional, physical, as well as the spiritual. For a while there I actually contemplated getting a regular job and giving up my career. I prayed about it and it felt like it was really the right thing to do to stay in the line of work I was in, and that I was being of service. The dilemma now is that I want to be in integrity with the message from the teachers not to charge for spiritual work. So my question is how to interpret that message, where the line is, because I feel that I've kind of justified that. Those of us that are in healing service and trained in that field, feel that the spirit always comes in on that occasion in our trying to heal, or make a person whole. So I don't know how to work with this, regarding the messages instructing to not charge for spiritual work. Can you address that for me?

ABRAHAM: I can try. Down through the ages many have indeed had real gifts, and out of love for their fellow man, was able to contribute. There were also frauds who sought to make money off of the desperation of people who needed a connection. In this day and age many are suspicious of charging for any kind of spiritual service. Yet it is understandable that large organizations would collect donations to maintain the material property or for some special event. I am stumbling for the right words. Let me rephrase. Should you provide a spiritual service and are able to serve people, as well as make a living, then this is your choice, absolutely. If you provide a spiritual service and are not able to make enough money to live on, then that should give you a message. This is a delicate area, for many would love to do the Father's work fulltime and cannot, due to employment. Even the apostles occasionally fished to raise funds for their expenses. Their raising of funds was separate from their personal ministry. They did not minister and then charge the people money. Their employment was outside of their spiritual ministry. I realize most everyone must work to live; and if you provide a service that you can make a living at, so be it. But my understanding is that as we move closer toward Light and Life there will be not need of paying for any such services, for all will have within them the ability to receive any type of spirituality or healing. You have ability now, yes, granted, to receive from our divine source, but not too far into the future the receiving of money for any spiritual service will come to an end. If one should receive gracious donations – then that is acceptable, providing that they do their work without intention to receive anything. I realize this is confusing, I am also somewhat confused.

WILLEENA: For those of us that do things like massage, or methodologies that are like coaching or counseling – things that would bring in spiritual, but no actual schooling for a healing modality – is that included in all of that which you are saying? Are we supposed to get regular jobs? What is the deal here? [laughter.]

ABRAHAM: Those who have had education to provide such services for the purpose of making a living is perfectly acceptable. Good question, Willeena. One more question.

SIMON: Well Abraham, along these lines of supporting ourselves and having faith, it seems like the vast majority are really struggling. I struggle between allowing everything to fall into place, being in Father's will, and waking up to be motivated to go ahead and do something. It is like 'the faster I move, the behinder I get.' I am sure I echo that for everyone around the world.

ABRAHAM: You are speaking financially? (Simon: Yes.) Abraham: My brother Ham said long ago: "What need have I of money?" I am somewhat at a loss in this area, for I am in all ways, supplied. I would comment, however, about the needs and wants of the world. Those individuals who seem to struggle most have more than they really need. The more they have – the more they want. Money and material possessions have become somewhat of a temporary fulfillment for some. This society has led people to believe that to be acceptable you must have certain things, and most individuals do live beyond their means. They strive harder so they can acquire these things, so they can feel accepted. This brings not acceptance, no, only temporary satisfaction and a loss of energy. Possessions take attention and energy, which bogs down the mind. Father does want His children to have abundance, yes, and yet, abundance can mean many things to you. Someone across the world living in a shack would perhaps view you as very rich. Abundance is in the eye of the beholder. 'Money speaks,' they say; and on this material world it does have power, as unfortunate as that is. A new age is dawning and money will mean nothing.

And with that, I take my leave. [laughter.] You each are a source of joy for me. Know that my love is ever growing for you. Until next week, shalom.

The Animal Nature Is Part of the Mortal Experience | Encouraging Words From Michael
Abraham & Michael, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-14-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I realize there is some tension here this evening. Have not worry. Take a deep breath. Allow that higher-mindedness to rise to the top. Envision if you will, your better-self shining through.

With the planet having been re-encircuited into the fold of Nebadon, energies are much more easily noticed and even felt on a physical level. To re-encircuit the planet has been almost likened to giving a power tool to a child to play with. Only revelational instruction will guide you on the new understanding of this energy. This is the purpose of our Correcting Time, our Brother/Father's Teaching Mission.

This past week we have focused on the Master's resurrection, and our dying to the old to welcome the new. There are many beliefs surrounding the Master's death at the end of his sojourn on Urantia. Many faiths/religions believe He died to cleanse us of our sins. While this is not truth, His mortal life did set a wonderful example of how we can cleanse ourselves of the animal nature.

Everyone who dwells in the mortal flesh will experience the animal nature. As mankind progresses, they will increasingly incorporate the divine into their nature. And this should bring humanity closer to the Father. Yet, the animal nature is indeed a part of the mortal experience, however ugly it may appear to be at times. The Master knew of this nature and did indeed overcome it with the Father's assistance. He did not so much suppress the animal nature, He simply allowed the divine Spirit to shape Him into who He was to become - a mortal, who was to experience a common life made perfect.

As events occur on your world, you each are almost seeing it all with different eyes. The birth of the Correcting Time has indeed expanded your vision. You may feel happenings with greater intensity. You may have need to exhaust excess energy. It would seem that the world is so diverse, and yet, you are more unified than you know. Deep down in the hearts of mortals, all crave the same basic things. I can say without a doubt, you are all viewed by Father and His caretakers as their beloved children. I give you, MICHAEL:

My children, I long for the day when we can look deeply into one another's eyes and allow all the doubt and fear to fade away. I realize the spirit is willing and the flesh is weak. For you to believe without seeing, deserves to be commended, for it is indeed a difficult task, especially when the world appears to be in chaos.

I know many of my children believe I am at times absent from the world because negative occurrences are allowed to happen. This is definitely not the truth. There is not one occurrence that I do not know about. There is not one tear shed that has not been accounted for. I am completely in understanding of all that has occurred, and indeed I have been, am now, and will ever be, present. Natural evolution of your world is permitted because that is your best teacher. You learn by doing - not by simple instruction, but by complex experience.

We watch in anticipation the every move of this small planet. We each look forward to the day when a new understanding arises and sets Light and Life in motion. It is your choice, my children. The destiny of the world is in the hands of its inhabitants. We can see every day, truth, beauty, and goodness sprouting. A successful harvest takes great effort of all Father's children. I am with joy to see the Mission evolve as it has. The sprouts are beginning to bloom and the weeds are falling away.

You have heeded our call, and while the task is not simple, you have endured and continued to fight the good fight of faith. Lose not hope in times of despair but know that with every shadow there is light forthcoming. The clouds of experience may bring the rain of adversity, but this is required for the new growth. Rejoice in the growth. See the growth as a light upon your path to our Father.

While I feel some despair for my children who hurt, I am with the comfort that everything moves toward an ultimate good. Everything is perfectly safe. Everything is watched over. All is known. Have not fear for these times because you are each well trained and equipped to be of service. John baptized with water; allow me to baptize you with the Spirit. I know you. I love you. I am with you. Carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. Our gratitude to our Brother/Father, Michael, who reminds us each day that we are beloved children and well taken care of. My love goes with you. Shalom.
[No Meeting on 4/21/03]

What Is It We Desire | Are Our Desires Our Weakness | The Wedding At Cana
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-28-2003
Back

[No Meeting on 4/21/13]

I am ABRAHAM. Sorry for the delay. My heart is full to see you each here this evening. While it is somewhat difficult to minister to each of you individually with these lessons, it is with a wonderful feeling of gratitude that this task is not up to me, but to our Father. I do however, enjoy gathering with you as a group and building upon our lessons, together.

Michael had offered us baptism with Spirit. Over our short period apart I do indeed hope you had felt His presence and allowed Him to create in you a new creature. As new creatures, our vessels are emptied, and we are yet ready to receive the new. I realize the mortal life is a struggle between the animal and the divine; mortals are, by nature, somewhat prone to their weaknesses. The Master does understand these weaknesses, and our desires to rise above them.

When we remember the story of the wedding at Cana, we remember how the Master had allowed His mortal desire to override the divine plan by feeling great compassion toward His mother's desires. Each mortal has heartfelt desires they would give anything to fulfill. Many times this is quite costly. Some desires can cause one to forsake the divine inner-knowing in favor of personal fulfillment.

Are our desires our weaknesses? They do not have to be. When we ponder the definition of 'desire' we must go within and find the origin of our true yearning. Many sojourning in the flesh have no idea of what their true desires are. They go from task to task, person to person, year after year, searching for that one desire that will bring them the fulfillment they have so longed for. What is it you really are needing and wanting?

Consider a man who was so focused on attaining money that he went about any method to get it. Many of his methods were illegal and without integrity. This indeed put the laws of the universe into full effect. He sowed seeds of negativity, and he reaped the harvest therefrom. All the while the man never did receive what he truly desired; his focus on money was simply the surface of what he believed would get him what he really wanted.

Yes, growing up poverty-stricken, this man believed that wealth would buy him the love and affection he had never received as a child. He believed his poverty had made others to look down upon him, to withhold friendship and affection. The man's focus on money was not his true desire - 'love' was. He spent a lifetime spinning his wheels, so to speak, never really understanding what this emptiness was within him.

The Master, that day at the wedding, was with lightheartedness and joy at merely existing upon the Father's world with His fellows; He was not wont for anything. He did take great joy in seeing the joy upon His fellow's faces. He was somewhat bothered, yes, by those individuals who were with anticipation at any forthcoming miracles; but overall, the Master was simply enjoying the day. He did so love His friends and family, and always was their joy His joy.

The Master was not weak in any way, no. He was however, compassionate and had desire to see His mother happy and carefree. While He was indeed the Creator Son of our universe, He was also most definitely, mortal. While His divine self could see with expanded vision at Father's overall plan, His mortal self would see with the eyes of the heart - His compassion, His emotion.

What the Son desires and the Father wills, is. Certainly on this day was His desire for his mother fulfilled - of course, to His dismay. Even in this did our Master learn something new, something to be aware of. His concern at all times was indeed 'the Father's will.'

Our Father knows your most heartfelt desires. He knows what you need and want. He does coordinate the universe to acknowledge each child's fondest hopes. He does see how many of His children go to great lengths to find that fulfillment.

Father understands that the animal-side does have weakness. He does have mercy and compassion - He does want all of His children to also have that for one another. Father does want us to have patience with our weaknesses, and go within to have understanding of them - to understand what it is you really want and how to achieve your goals with integrity.

As we look at Urantian society of today, it is ridden with seeming weaknesses - temptations to self-indulge, to hurt another for personal gain, to chase erroneous ideas to find that long sought-after fulfillment. What is the universal plan for living the mortal life? What did you expect, and is this reality? Are you living to desire – or, are you finding everlasting satisfaction?

This week, go within to understand your levels of fulfillment. Are you well-balanced in pursuing your desires? What is it you truly need and want? What activities would you do that may create negativity to supposedly bring you closer to fulfillment? Think about your weaknesses, and dissect them – live them, journal about them. Are they controlling you? or, are you controlling them.

No questions this evening. Know that I am with great affection for you each, and I am with joyous fulfillment each time we meet. Until next time, shalom.

Tri-Fold Personality | The Parent-Self, The Child-Self, The Ego-Self Animal Nature
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-05-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a wonderful welcoming atmosphere we have here this evening. I am always made to express my gratitude to Father each time we meet. You have become an important part of my life and I am with ever-growing love for you each.

When we take a moment to ponder our status within the kingdom, our relationship with the Father and our fellowship with one another, it surely brings us to a place of worshipful gratitude.

Last week we discussed desires and weaknesses, and learning how to grow into the person we are truly meant to be. If you could picture yourself as a tri-fold personality you would envision that divine part of yourself as a parent; your learning and aware humble-self as a child; and your ego-self representing the animal nature. Many are quick to recognize this animal nature and chastise the self without at all considering the child within.

If you could remove all those self-imposed labels you have become attached to over the years, you would see standing before you a wide-eyed child with an enthusiasm for learning and adventure. As mortal life happens, the child within seems to become buried with misunderstanding. Many times, one is apt to hide the inner child, as if it is weak and vulnerable, by allowing the animal nature to be put into the forefront as if it is the child's 'protector.'

To Father, the child is not one who is weak and in need of enlightenment due to inexperience or ignorance, no; to Father, the child is a seed expected to sprout into a beautiful living part of all there is. You are each His beloved child whom He loves as if you are His only child. The child within is innocent, is apt to make mistakes, is prone to learn by experience. This is indeed your 'mortal self,' yes. Knowing this, is a precious gift and is not to be covered-over or stifled by making it to be something other than what it is – a learning child.

The 'child self' does have weaknesses, certainly, and this is where our divine, or 'parent self,' can help to minister. As you grow in your spiritual careers you foster your relationship with our divine caretakers. This is indeed the better part of you. This is the higher self. This is the parent-self to your 'child within.' The ego, or animal-self, would find it his place to chastise the child and cover-over with non-reality. The divine Parent would find the root of any dilemma and focus on a better way, a way that causes hope and enthusiasm to rise within – not shame or guilt.

As long as you dwell in the flesh the ego/animal rebellious side will, for the most part, always be with you. It is part of the Father's plan. It is the lesson you must learn in order to reach the Father. As we encourage the mature divine Parent to become one with us, we can give the child within the personal ministry it needs. Usually, when weaknesses are apparent in any individual, that is simply a message that the child within is feeling an emptiness and needs to be tended to.

I am not saying to indulge the self into temporary comfort, no. I am saying, allow that higher self that is you to minister to that child/soul-within. Keep not with the tradition of self-punishment through shame. Focus more upon the divine Parent-self showing the child a new and better way through truth, beauty, and goodness. To feel shame is to hide. To know that you are truly understood and loved 'as you are' is to be open to direct divine guidance.

This week reconnect with that child within. How can your parent-self bring fulfillment and strength when those weaknesses seem to be coming forth? How can you keep the rebellious animal side from causing the child to hide and forgo learning experience? A few questions?

LUKE: Abraham, my question is about how I am explaining my religion to my wife, who is becoming more conservative, Bible-based, and solid in those beliefs that exclude any other thought like the Urantia Book. I don't know if you are aware of how these conversations go between my wife and I, but I could use your advice on how to better explain or teach her in a better way of what I am doing.

ABRAHAM: Your wife is pursuing what she believes is best, and it is difficult to persuade her towards different thinking. You can perhaps tell her in this way: "Look at the man that I am and the fruits produced in my life. You are not responsible for my salvation or condemnation. You are allowed freewill to pursue what you truly believe; and if you are believing your gospel, then you will allow me my freewill." Father will minister to His children in the way He sees fit and each child has every right to travel any path to Him. Ask her to allow you time to show forth more fruits in your relationship and the lives you touch, to prove to her you are not on a path to hell. She is not going to be punished in any way for being with you – a different believer. Nor is she going against God, the Father, for building a life with you, no. She would however, have missed out on a great opportunity to have a life with you and a solid family if she should allow her regimented, inflexible beliefs to win out over the reality of the living fruits produced. Is this helping? (Luke: Very much. Thanks, Abraham.) Abraham: You're welcome. One more question?

TECTRA: I believe it says in the Urantia book that it is very difficult for humans to contact their Thought Adjuster. My question is: Now with the Correcting Time happening and the re-encircuitment all about us, is it easier for mortals to have Adjuster contact, and on a more regular basis?

ABRAHAM: Good question, my son. Mortals are not having so much trouble connecting with the Thought Adjuster as are they receiving from the Thought Adjuster. It is simple for mortals to send thoughts, pray or meditate – in other words, sending out. It is more difficult for mortals to receive actual direct contact; but as you said, the re-encircuitment and the Correcting Time has indeed opened a new door. Most of Father's children have personal circuits that make this communication with the Adjuster, easier. Many times this communication seems to be so natural that one is likely to push it aside as 'wishful thinking.' The Thought Adjuster communication comes in a form you are most likely to understand. You will not hear the voice of God with sounding trumpets and drama, no. As individuals are tending to their spiritual life, they are becoming more skilled at recognizing the Adjuster communication. Good question, Tectra.

I must take my leave. Know that I am with great joy to see you each in a harmonious place. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Relationships, A Strength Or A Weakness / Energy-Draining, or Energy-Producing
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-12-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a beautifully blended balance of humor, love, and wisdom we have here this evening. You each have participated in creating a well of spiritual goodness. Therefore, this evening we will each take a moment to dip our cup. [A few moments of silence.]

My friends, students and co-workers, you make each week's lesson possible by your enduring faith and strength to carry on. Well done.

Over these past weeks we have discussed personal weaknesses and how to find solutions toward finding strength through Father and self-mastery. Meeting here each week is one such source of strength for many of you. This is your family; it is a reflection of who you are now, and the possibilities of your becoming. For many individuals however, they find relationships or other people to be their weaknesses.

The world as it now stands appears to be an energy drain. Many of you know individuals who seem to have the ability to drain energy instead of produce. While you are attempting to be spirit-led or Godlike, you at times seem somewhat vulnerable to other people's needs and desires. We each must seek to be self-forgetting as the Master was, yes. But to allow yourself to be taken advantage of, impinges upon your status as a child of God. Some of your relationships seem to bring out weakness in you, or control the way you think and feel.

Everyone has their own definitions of certain roles you may take on in this mortal life. For example: A wife may feel she is to have certain tasks in her charge, and to be unable to fulfill her expectations of those certain tasks leads to feelings of unworthiness. It is the wife's own perception of her definition that leads to her feelings of failure. A feeling of failure does put the wife in a state of constant atonement, which eventually leads to confusion in the relationship; and, possibly the husband learning how to live, or adjust to, this non-productive lifestyle. The wife's expectations of her definition as 'the wife' has manifested into her own reality.

Feelings of failing does leave one open to feel weak, unworthy, incapable, and hopeless. One's childhood (or past experience with relationships) does somewhat create the reality of present relationships. A child who had been abandoned may find, as an adult, difficulty to trust in any relationship. Some adults who experience this find it their personal challenge to avoid talking about this issue – they would perhaps flee perfectly workable relationships in order to escape any possible forthcoming pain and re-experiencing of being abandoned. This, is weakness.

Anything that seems to cause repeated disruption in your life is worth investigating. You can keep on a cycle of repeated mistakes – or, you can delve into the situation and be fully observant of all that is taking place. Father is surely at hand to help you put these realities into perspective; He would have you intelligently view your weaknesses, understand them, and then gain tools to become empowered.

The adult who was abandoned, and who now experiences present difficulty, may perhaps review their life and find the origin or source of the pain. He may try to find understanding of what had befallen him – and if necessary, find forgiveness. Always, spiritual study and understanding are useful tools in realizing that you are a child belonging to a much larger family. Spiritual understanding would complete the puzzle of why you are here – to experience all aspects of mortal life.

The adult who had once been abandoned could find understanding and be equipped with tools to carry on in his present life circumstances instead of fleeing and/or sabotaging further relationships. To escape is to continually drag out the misery. To go forth into situations 'bravely' is to find understanding and become empowered, and create change.

This week, review your relationships and how they may be a weakness, or stumbling blocks. Ask yourself, 'In whom do I serve?' Know that with Father at the head of your family, balance will be maintained. What avenues would you find helpful in helping you overcome your weaknesses?

No questions this evening. I am with a full heart to know you are each with a welcoming heart to me each time we meet. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Sources Of Strengthening Versus Energy Depletion

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-19-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always made to be glad when we can meet. Over these years I have grown to know most of you very well. I can say the more I know you – the more I love you. Thank you for allowing yourselves to be known. Your willingness to be honest and open within this group has been a wonderful ministry to all. The friendships sustained here are surely a source of strength. In order to receive this strength, you must be willing to give of yourself.

Many relationships that have turned sour are due to misunderstandings which does bring out that instinct to protect the self. Father does not expect you each to love one another 'unconditionally,' but He does expect you to at least try. Your relationships can be a source of strength, and it has been your personal ministry to help one another to find that God-source within.

For these past few weeks, we have been discussing weakness in mortal life. Weakness is not something to hide or ignore because it would appear to make you look unfavorable, no. Weaknesses are indeed a teacher that leads you through to self-mastery. To never have experienced personal weakness is to not have understanding for others. One who would think himself perfect would be indeed judgmental of all others. All mortals experience personal weaknesses – not one is above another. The more experience you have, the more you understand others and the more you can love them.

We have discussed our weekly meetings as a source of strength. What other sources can we find that will bring you upliftment?

- Stillness (or meditation) is always a source of strength, for herein can you clear your mind of confusion and turmoil to bring you a clear thinking that will lead you to possible answers or feelings of encouragement.
- Friendships, or even discussions with others, can be enlightening and building upon thoughts and ideas.
- For you to focus on being a source of strength to others is to open that direct divine channel. Your desire to serve or help others is indeed personally strengthening.
- An improved relationship with Father always leads to personal empowerment – you feel you are in the hands of someone who truly loves you as you are. You are not alone to face life's everyday difficulties, no. You learn that no one believes in you like our Father does. No one knows you as our Father does. No one can empower you as Father does. To allow yourself to be subject to Father's will is not so much 'relinquishing the self' but empowering the self to carry on, responsibly. These many years in our Brother/Father's Mission you have each gained a great deal of strength; but more than that, you have gained the courage to see your own weaknesses and make effort to overcome. When our Mission first began many believed their participation would be a release from life's difficulties. The mortal life is all about experience, and no matter what participation in any spiritual fashion you engage, you cannot escape experience. Experience is your roadmap to Father.

This week, again find time to seek out sources of strength, not energy-stealing, but strength-promoting. Our lesson is kept short to take questions.

MARSHALL: Yes, Abraham, I have a point from the Urantia Book. Of course a lot has changed since this Book has been out and the Lucifer Rebellion has been adjudicated, but it says here that mortal man lacks the concept of mota, that it is non-attainable by material personalities. In a lot of Ham's lessons, and some of yours, mota is spoken of. The Urantia Book claims that revelation is the only bridge of thought between the material and the spiritual. My question is: Can we begin to utilize this 'morontia mota' as mortals? Has that changed?

ABRAHAM: Yes, there has been great change since the restoring of the system circuits. Mota is again possible to understand in this lifetime and even make it an everyday-living reality. Again, without experience, and the drawing out from experience those meanings and values, you cannot understand mota.

MARSHALL: Can I follow up on that? (Abraham: Certainly.) Marshall: This is something I have been working with. There are twenty-eight philosophies/statements that are made, but they leave the mota out. Just briefly, could you enlighten me on the mota content of this statement: "When you cut your finger it bleeds."

ABRAHAM: You want for a definition? (Marshall: Yes, or an interpretation.) Abraham: This is self-explanatory. But I can say that when you take action in some manner you have to expect some results. Whether something is 'on purpose' or an accident, there will always be the law of cause and effect. Is this in understanding?

MARSHALL: Somewhat. Is it possible to reach a level of understanding of the mota content of those morontia teachings ourselves?

ABRAHAM: As you experience this life, mota becomes revelational. It becomes reality to you, for you have actually lived it. Look at your great philosophers and poets who have left a legacy of great wisdom. Yes, it is possible to understand the mota within your Urantia text; and, to have revealed to you other Mansion World teachings, or mota. Good question, Marshall. (Marshall: Thank you.) Abraham: Another question?

SIMON: How can I be more effective in understanding my relationship with my Thought Adjuster; and how can I be more effective as I grow through various changes and issues you are aware of?

ABRAHAM: I perceive you to be growing at a normal rate in understanding the Father Fragmentwithin. I can see at times there is an underlying fear that would have you unable to hear or understand the indwelling Father. Some of the worries that you have may possibly lead you to actions you would not normally take due to Adjuster assistance. Not to worry though, your intention is understood. Your fears are known and Father is, every second of every day, making effort to minister to His son, Simon. Your enthusiasm is to be commended; and yet, this does lead to impatience. Perhaps take some moments each day to focus on the patience of the Master. He was indeed patient and yet, this was portrayed as strength, not as denying reality or being meek, no. His patience rested in His trust that Father was overlooking all things. Is this answering?

SIMON: Yes, and a follow-up to Marshall's question - according to the Adjuster Papers, we can be morontialized here, is that right?

ABRAHAM: Yes. The Mansion Worlds were created to aid in healing, correcting, overcoming weaknesses and perhaps being a midway stop for the next adventure. Citizens who are settled in Light and Life have not need for these worlds. You can indeed be on your way to morontial correction and understanding in this life, now. (Simon: Thank you.) Abraham: You are welcome, Simon. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, I feel like 'time' is very different to me now - way different. In just a few short tasks, I think an hour has gone by when in reality it has been five or six. It is very different. It feels like it has only been a month into the year and it is almost June, so to speak. What is going on with that?

ABRAHAM: You are asking one who does not answer to time. I once did, yes. I suppose time is measured by moments of joy or agony. Your concentration levels have shifted and perhaps this is some of your new understanding. As you reach a certain phase in your spiritual career you truly believe that all time and eternity is ahead of you – not going by, or wasting away, or catching up with you. You have had significant life changes and your focus is simply different. I wish I could say more. (Calvin: You can. You have my permission.) Abraham: I will only say that with Father, all things are possible. What is true will stay and what has no meaning will fade away. Is there something more I can say (Calvin: Yes, but maybe next time. Thanks.) Abraham: You're welcome. Are there any more questions?

ANTHONY: Yes, Abraham. A few weeks ago, you had a beautiful answer to Luke's question about relating to his wife in her fundamental and traditional beliefs. I am about to deal with my twin brother and his beliefs. Should I just re-read what you said to Luke? or do you have any additional advice besides what you told him?

ABRAHAM: I would say, simply to focus on the love between brothers. Do not allow the right or wrong beliefs of each one to cause separation. Even your brother would be able to relate to this advice. You do no favors for one another when you make it an issue to correct each other. Allow him to be himself and find the positive aspects therefrom. Have not worry. You do well, Anthony. Is this answering? (Anthony: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

LANCESON: I am contemplating outreaching to the pagan community. I was wondering if you could give me any advice as to increasing my spiritual magnetism.

ABRAHAM: Lanceson, I believe you are a light and have not to worry about attraction. Be at ease to be yourself and use lighthearted humor to express your truth. Do not force it upon others but simply shine with what and who you are. Remember to be a good example, as was the Master. Is this helping? (Lanceson: Yes. Thank you.)

Know that I am with ever-growing love for you each. I look forward to every meeting for I feel very much at home with you. Go in peace. Until next week, shalom.

Personal Weakness Is Something We Can Overcome, Not Something That Overcomes Us

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-26-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Your lighthearted attitudes are quite refreshing to me. Every day I see painful circumstances in the world, and even though my faith remains steadfast I am somewhat saddened by the pain of the world. Your open minds and welcoming hearts bring me much upliftment – and for that, I thank you. Your strength and endurance keep our ship of faith afloat. Your willingness to be real with yourselves and each other is such a powerful tool in maintaining balance in these seemingly chaotic times. While you have courage to admit your weaknesses, you can still find the humor and wisdom therein.

What keeps weaknesses in a repetitive state? Many times mortals truly believe they are simply stuck or trapped. My understanding and my experience of this has taught me that most weaknesses are a matter of mindal state. To change the mind is to change the action or the outcome. A long-occurring weakness would appear to draw out feelings of failure.

To continue to view yourself as having weaknesses, lowers self-worth. To have lowered self-worth is to lose confidence and hope in continuing to make effort to overcome. Feelings of failure are indeed a spirit poison that separates you from the One who so loves you 'as you are.' This feeling of separation causes further weakness – it causes one to feel alone and without divine assistance.

One may ask: "Why would Father love such a difficult child?" Father sees you not as difficult or failing in any way, no, He sees you as His child, a part of Him, a continually growing personality who is a part of all there ever was, is, and will be.

When dealing with personal weaknesses, ask yourselves: "In every situation, am I living up to my highest light?" "Am I exhausting all my human resources?" "Am I living out my definition of integrity?" "Am I satisfied with my efforts?" This, my children, is the beginning to overcoming what you feel controlled by. This is making a commitment to what you serve, and in whom you serve.

Where your treasures lie – there will be your heart also. What is truly important and top priority in your lives? Who has more power, Father? or your weakness. In whom do you serve?

Our Father is our source of all that is true, beautiful, and good. He is our supplier of all that we will ever need. To truly have Him as your foundation for living is to have not weakness for anything else. Make effort to see yourself as Father sees you. Does He see a child who defies the divine rules and caters to gluttony? or, does He see a child who struggles to live up to their highest light.

When you have done your very best; when you have taken action according to your understanding of your highest light; when you put integrity at the forefront of your minds – then there is no room for feelings of failure. Rather, there is self-mastery in overcoming weaknesses, there is divine connections and strength to be balanced to see weakness as something small – something you control, not something that controls you.

This week, think about what you find acceptable in your own behavior. Think about your understanding of integrity and how the lack thereof may affect you according to the universal laws. Find time to journal on your feelings of failure and how they bring self-unworthiness. Also, journal on those steps you can take to see yourself, and others, through the eyes of our Father.

Many times, mortals see weakness in one another and harshly judge one another. To see weakness in one is truly seeing weakness in all. To judge one harshly is to also believe others view you in the same way. A few questions?

SIMON: Abraham, I struggle with some of this because some things that work for me I see as good – and yet, I think that might not necessarily be the best thing for me. I am still growing and still learning. Some things seem arbitrary, but some things also repeatedly bother me. I hate to be vague. I love the lesson. I know it is going to blossom and bloom in my thought-process. I wonder if you could help me out here.

ABRAHAM: Have you an example of what you speak about? Were you speaking of justice? (Simon: Yes, I suppose so.) Abraham: Those things that you do to bring about the desired results, would they be favorable in the eyes of our Lord?

SIMON: That's a great question. I guess I need to be patient, but sometimes I think I am too passive.

ABRAHAM: In my best understanding I can say that Father orchestrates the universe to give you your best lessons while accommodating your dreams and desires. With each undertaking, you must make effort and allow those seeds planted to grow however they may. If you should not see growth in a significant amount of time then perhaps this is not something to stand by and wait for. Do you understand? (Simon: Yes. Thank you, Abraham.) Abraham: You're welcome, Simon. I know that you have good intentions, and with a little practice in patience, you will see how well you are looked after. Another question?

DIANNA: Yes, Abraham, I have been thinking about this. It is like I always step forward with that intention to do Father's will and to bring myself closer to a place where I can reach my full potential. I use the example of the hurt and disappointment I feel sometimes in my relationships. It is like there is an attachment there that pulls me back. So although I feel forward movement, it is like a little bit of a yo-yo action. As I sat here thinking about it, I can see the long arc of growth that through many small decisions there has been a change. But it seems like in the present moment, the struggle is so great that the attachment seems stronger than the weakness. Can you speak to that?

ABRAHAM: Good question, my daughter. I am understanding that past fears somehow keep control over your actions of today. It is as if you have touched a hot stove, and fear going near the stove anymore. Your steps forward are the values you have learned from each of your struggles and yet, there are those past fears that keep pulling you back. In this state there is not the courage to go out into the unknown; there is not the daring to go boldly into new adventures. Your past fears are keeping you limited to certain experiences. No one, my daughter, is stuck in repeating some useless cycle. You are a child of God and deserve good things. You must make effort to turn your attention toward believing you deserve good, and good will follow. You can trust your inner guidance and 'know that you know.' You are free to be who you really are. Have not fear that that person would not be accepted. You are, by no means, any kind of victim in this life, no. Rather, you are an empowered daughter of God – trust in that. Realign your mind to really believe in that, and it will become your reality. Is there more I can answer?

DIANNA: So it's all in the control of the mind? The whole lesson seems to be about controlling my mind and thoughts, and that will lead to understanding?

ABRAHAM: Correct, correct. You, Dianna, are with intelligence and have a great deal to give. Know that you are very much worthy to receive. Accept those good things that come your way. One more question?

TECTRA: A follow-up on that, Abraham. It does seem to be the whole issue of this lesson in that these weaknesses we have are in a repetitive state. To change the mind is to change the action or the outcome. It sounds easy to do. It could be an easy thing to do just to change my mind about something, but that repetitive state (pattern) is so strong that it keeps us in this one place. My question is – is it just a matter of being very diligent in daily life, and be so present in the moment that we can see when these things need to be changed right then? What are some other tools we can use to be able to change our mind?

ABRAHAM: I realize these things are easier said than done. One thing that keeps individuals stuck in a mindset is feelings of being alone or unworthy. When one does good, they believe they deserve good. When one appears to fail, they are at times in a mind-state of believing they deserve punishment. To resolve within your own mind that you are 'simply a learning child on a path to your Father,' even in your mistakes and setbacks, you begin to have faith in yourself, your abilities, your levels of power, yes. There are many events throughout history that have exceeded mass expectation because the individual had belief or an unlimited mindset about his or her own potential. Yes, the individual fears what he may be controlled by. The mind is a filter for experience. To have the filter be clogged with various fears and distractions is to have confusion, and not the capacity to make clear decisions.

Have not worry, my friends. All is well. I am, as always, with ever-growing love for you each. Until next time, shalom.

By Carrying Out Father`s Assigned Tasks Our Weaknesses Are Stifled

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-02-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a joy it is to be with you in these peaceful surroundings. I have come to love your characters, your personalities. You are each unique and yet, your weekly gatherings seem to move smoothly in any setting. I would take a moment to express gratitude to our Source and Center of all things.

Our Father, it is with an appreciative heart and mind that we express our gratitude to you and your vast helpers for your divine watchcare. We each realize the utter emptiness we would feel if you were away from us. Life is understandable when you are with us to provide meanings and values. We thank you for your unfailing love and guidance, even when we seem to be overpowered by weakness. You are our Source for all that is true, beautiful, and good. We thank you.

In the busyness of life, we can become fixated on those things we can see, those things that make up our visible environment. Many times mortals tend to forget their cosmic citizenship – that there is a vast family beyond what you can comprehend. Many mortals will live this life as if this is all they will ever have. They tend to 'move faster' in attempting to experience 'more' while they lose out on the meanings and values. For them, it is a race against time.

For you who are learning to incorporate the mortal and divine minds, today is simply 'one day in all eternity.' You are coming to know you have an entire kingdom of family believers. You are realizing you have a Father who loves you as if you were

His only child. You have life experience that brings you to understand meanings and values, which is your roadmap to Father.

To some mortals – when making mistakes in this life, oftentimes they feel they do not get another chance or deserve to continue to receive good things from living. That perspective of unworthiness tends to leave those individuals feeling inadequate or without ability. Tradition handed down through the generations would make some people believe they have sinned to the point of no return, that they have no chance to make correction. You that are on a spiritual course know that you have every chance to do better, to learn more, to make good decisions.

By now, you have come to the understanding that the better you can do, the more confidence you have and the more faith you have in yourself to receive guidance from Father. When we review the Master's life, we see that in all His decisions it always came down to the doing of Father's will, and never did He choose escape. Of course He was the Sovereign Creator; of course He knew of His divine history – but certainly, it was not any easier for Him to drink the cup of mortal life than it is for you.

Early in the Master's mortal career, He made important decisions that He would, to the best of His ability, follow the will of the Father. He chose not to use miraculous doings in any of life's circumstances unless otherwise willed by the Father. He vowed to live the mortal life to its fullest, He did not seek shortcuts nor escape. In this determination, the Father's ministry to Him was perfectly obvious. It was not Him 'wondering if Father was helping Him or not,' no, Jesus knew, without doubt, that Father was with Him in every step of mortal living.

He, the Master, lived up to His highest light; and this literally opened a circuit for Him to feel the Father's presence and have confidence in His own ability to receive guidance, and act therefrom. Jesus lived this mortal life as if it was simply a day in all of eternity. He lived with faith and confidence that whatever He learned here would, for the most part, be useful in the future; as so it goes for you in your past, present, and future experiences.

This world is definitely in need of making some important decisions, as did the Master. Life is much more difficult with a halfhearted commitment – one foot in the mortal world, and one foot in the divine. To simply freefall with faith is to feel the Father's arms outreached to guide you to Him. If you can act with faith as if He is at all times by your side (because it is so), then certainly will you feel the results; you will have more faith in your ability to receive His guidance and to act on it.

To act with full integrity will be something joyful for you, something that brings you the feeling of being in the presence of the First Source and Center. To feel that spiritual confidence is to see the works of God in your life; not to expect miracles, no, but to feel the joy of the good you can be witness to or even a part of. You will find your everyday weaknesses becoming stifled by the activities Father assigns to you. You will grow in strength and confidence with each task Father entrusts you with.

Remember the Master also faced weaknesses, and yet, was never overtaken by them. He maintained full faith in Father and knew that Father's vision was much greater than His own. The Father seeks to be with His child to guide and bring growth. For you to allow Him His place in your life definitely brings Father great joy.

This week, read in your Urantia papers about the Master's decisions, and journal down a few of your own concerning this life. Find time to express your gratitude to Father; this brings you closer to Him for it opens your mind to receive Him. Find time for some reversion as well. We each know the mortal life can be overwhelming and some reversion would bring about balance.

No questions this evening. Know that my love is always with you, and if you should have need of me, I will be there. Until next time, shalom.

One Brick At A Time | Experience Is Your Roadmap To Father
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-09-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. My heart is full this evening to be able to be with you once again. Each time we meet I learn more; I take in more experience and I am able to put forth more in my daily living. Each week when we can gather, we are always building toward something greater than ourselves. Each time you allow yourself to be guided by the Spirit, you are building, moving, growing, and participating universally.

Imagine a foundation of light and truth on which is built the building of Light and Life. Your experience is the material you will build with. We all participate in the construction, each one having unique gifts to offer. At times there are mistakes or flaws, but with an open mind, these are easily corrected.

Each time you allow yourself to be subject to the Father's will you are assigned a task from Father to add on to what we are building towards. Every time an individual seeks self-improvement or enlightenment, they are bestowed with extra materials wherewith to add to the construction.

Together we are each building toward personal growth, toward Light and Life, and the growth of the Supreme Being – the God-in-time. Perhaps what you have built so far does not look quite right from your perspective – there seems to still be so much to do. At times, when looking at the overall picture, it is overwhelming and seemingly impossible. We are blessed to trust in the outlook of the Master Architect. We have but to place one brick at a time.

Through faith and willingness, we have only to focus on our individual jobs. We are not the designers nor the planners, no; we have only to listen and trust in those on high who see to the completion. It would seem at times your fellows are escaping from doing their part. It would seem to you that their life experience is one of ease and escape, and you seem to have to work overtime. When you stop to ponder this perspective, you can lose sight of your own personal position in the construction of the building.

Yes, many mortals believe life has not served them well, and therefore feel they deserve a life of ease. This mindset is a waste of meanings and values one can attain – not to mention the mere value of experience – which is your materials wherewith to build. In escape where are the meanings and values? Where are your obstacles you have overcome from where you have gained new insights and tools to carry on? In escape, where is your communication with the Master Architect? Where are your fellow co-workers? Escape is truly a life of loneliness.

Some mortals would seek to hurry through their life's work of building toward greater things only to see their poor quality of work, crumble, and find they must start the rebuilding all over again. To take your experience, learn from the meanings and values, and put forth efforts into service, is to feel a part of what is being built; to be part of your fellow's lives, and to be in connection with those on high.

To know that you have put forth your highest understanding of integrity into your work is to feel that growing soul, hand in hand with Father, being gently guided into the next task or phase. While you may not see the building in completion, you can know with each of your efforts that you have participated in something everlasting – something that brings faith-possibilities into reality.

In the craftsmanship of your work of this Light and Life building, there is satisfaction, there is personal confidence gained, there is fellowship and the comfort of a large family of kingdom believers. Have not worry where your fellows are in the construction, for no one really escapes. Experience is your roadmap to Father. Experience is to be molded into the bricks of wisdom and knowledge for you to continue on in the building.

Concerning your life and your efforts, you, for the most part, live up to your highest light, and you see the fruits therefrom. When you make a mistake however, old understanding must be torn down to rebuild anew. Know that Father is at hand to assist you in all your efforts, and that you are never left unattended. He seeks for your success. He seeks to draw you unto Him.

Yes, we can consider ourselves lovingly watched over and indeed blessed; for we have not to worry about the overall plan, just simply our individual parts. The Master had made specific decisions at the beginning of His career, and this set the tone of what was to follow. He indeed lived as a perfected mortal of the realm.

This week, ponder what you are building toward. Have you the patience to place one brick at a time? Have you the spiritual stamina to stay strong when what you built seems to topple? Ponder the levels of quality you work toward and the fruits therefrom. Know that I am with gratitude to build with you, side by side, toward an everlasting goal. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Exercising The Spiritual Mind Every Day To Be Free From Spirit Poisons

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-16-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Each week I feel so fortunate to be a part of your thoughts. I enjoy watching the building blocks of your discussions forming into wisdom and creativity. You each have the gift of compassion; no matter the harsh realities of your personal lives you still find compassion for others. In your willingness to be present for someone else you can be comforted in the fact that you are also well served.

Last week we discussed building toward something greater than ourselves. As life moves onward it is constantly changing; mortals are continually moving. Many things you have under your control, and some things you do not. The most that we could hope to have control over is ourselves – our attitudes and our outlook. Your intentions are the gatekeeper of what is to be accepted, and what is not.

One who is driven by the ego seeks fulfillment for the ego. Your desires or intentions lead you to take a path that would fulfill the ego's needs. Total escape from the ego is not likely to occur in the mortal life; you will always need to keep a watchful eye on this – this is completely expected. An individual could want for the highest and best good for all, and yet is somewhat unconscious of those intentions that lead to another direction, perhaps a more selfish direction.

When one is devoted to leading a Spirit-led life then one has tools to use to allow the highest intentions to overcome underlying self-serving intentions. It is confusing for mortals to be committed to being Spirit-led one moment, and self-serving the next.

The Master had not need to be focused on being self-serving, for all His needs were met. The Master knew not from day to day where He would lay His head. He many times forgot bodily nourishment for He was quite satisfied on a spiritual level. He enjoyed the company of His fellows but was equally joyful to be on His own. His deep and abiding trust in Father had freed His mind to focus on the real priority in daily living – sharing every moment with Father.

The Master's one desire was to do the Father's will. He did not do the Father's will 'because He feared what would happen if He didn't,' no; He desired to do the divine will because He craved that Source that fulfilled His every need. His intention was to do the will of Father, and most of the time He did indeed do that. There were a couple of moments when His human-self had allowed Him to wander from that, but always the focus of His life was to serve Father.

The Master was indeed an intellectual man, but also was He a divine Son. Always did the Master go forth with the will of God, never questioning why; He simply trusted. A relationship with those on high fulfills all human emptiness. It is true that mortals can be pulled deeply into the material world, and the spiritual world becomes secondary. Like the Master, we can take steps to exercise the spiritual mind every day to be free from fear and other spirit poisons that stand in the way of balance; such steps as:

- One who makes time for a few moments for stillness each day finds it is like a nutritious meal that gives strength and the ability to endure any and all things.
- Prayer becomes a natural open dialogue with the Father when it is practiced daily.
- Study becomes a place of refocusing, a reminder of the overall purpose.
- Journaling helps us to empty out the negative and work towards the positive.
- A fit mind and body is essential to doing all the above.

- And last but not least – fellowship. All things are more easily bared when shared with a friend. More things are more easily learned when you listen with compassion. Where two or more are gathered, there also, is our Master. This week, we will focus on balancing the spiritual life, incorporating the daily exercises to maintain spiritual health. Those that perceive Father as 'far away' will likely find that, their reality.

No questions this evening. I would say that I am personally looking forward to the upcoming changes with this group. My associates and I are working toward teaching the lessons a bit differently than we have. Our Mission seems to be at a crossroads at this time. We will soon begin to see the sweeping changes in the Correcting Time. This is good. Know that I consider you each a part of my spiritual good health. I am with ever growing love. Until next week, shalom.

With that said, we will discuss some of those things that you invest yourself in. As you picture your overall life – how do your levels of joy measure up? How balanced do you feel in mind and soul? What is occurring in your surroundings; does this bring you peace – or anxiety?

What you have found important to invest yourself in shows in your everyday living. If one invests only in the area of employment, then that is surely what life will be about. There is not balance in that. If one solely invested in the religious life, there is tendency to become fanatical. What seems to be the most important to you is what you will be investing in every day, and certainly you will see the returns therefrom. Your measure of joy, fulfillment, balance, and peace should tell you if your investment is wise and worthy. What do you give yourself to? Where are your treasures? What holds the most meanings and values?

The Master had invested Himself completely into the Father's will. That carried our Master from place to place, person to person, task to task. And most definitely, even through all His turmoil, His returns were with meanings and values. Even though there were moments of sorrow, His joy greatly outweighed that. He was balanced in mind. His trust in Father was enduring and unfailing. He never faced defeat with disappointment in Himself, or Father. He was continually energized and challenged to meet anything head on.

Yes, to invest yourself into the doing of the Father's will takes spiritual fitness.

This week, continue on in those exercises we discussed last week. Find time to think about what emphasis you put yourself into, and how that serves: Is your family life being served? Is your place of employment a balanced area? Are you available to your friends? Do you have an open ear for a discouraged soul? Do you yourself feel served and that you are an integral part of the universe?

No questions this evening. I would however, enjoy closing our lesson with a prayer.

Our Father, it is in you, our Source and Center of all things, that we find our greatest spiritual nutrition. Life's fulfillments are not found out in the material world, but in you – and, your interpreting to us meanings and values. You have belief in us even when we have not belief in ourselves. We are fueled by your ever-enduring love for us. Help us every day to be cleansed and have an open mind to your will. Help us to invest ourselves in what you would want us to. We express our gratitude to you, our Father of all fathers. Amen.

And to you, my friends, my love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.
What Things Do You Invest Yourself In | Find Time Each Day For Internal Cleansing With Father

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-22-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always comfortable in any setting when we meet together. You are a part of my eternal family. As you learn, I learn more. I express my gratitude to you each who continue to uphold Michael's Mission, day after day, week after week, year after year. I realize some of my comments last week have sparked some interesting conversation.

When we speak of sweeping changes, we are speaking on an internal level. Right now in the Correcting Time, mortals are awakening to new forms of thought. The fog of tradition is being lifted and new possibilities are rising up within each deep-thinking mortal. During these internal changes, we would do well to be spiritually fit. Each day one would do well to have a few moments with the Father to express need for an internal cleansing.

The mind takes in everyday stimulus that, for the most part, does not serve in a spiritual manner. To find time every day for internal cleansing of mind and soul is an invitation to Father to bestow upon you up-to-date divine information that serves in everyday living. The only gift we could ever give with true meanings and values is the gift of ourselves. To give of your time, love, or service is a gift that cannot be measured materially.

The mind takes in everyday stimulus that, for the most part, does not serve in a spiritual manner. To find time every day for internal cleansing of mind and soul is an invitation to Father to bestow upon you up-to-date divine information that serves in everyday living. The only gift we could ever give with true meanings and values is the gift of ourselves. To give of your time, love, or service is a gift that cannot be measured materially.

With that said, we will discuss some of those things that you invest yourself in. As you picture your overall life – how do your levels of joy measure up? How balanced do you feel in mind and soul? What is occurring in your surroundings; does this bring you peace – or anxiety?

What you have found important to invest yourself in shows in your everyday living. If one invests only in the area of employment, then that is surely what life will be about. There is not balance in that. If one solely invested in the religious life, there is tendency to become fanatical. What seems to be the most important to you is what you will be investing in every day, and certainly you will see the returns therefrom. Your measure of joy, fulfillment, balance, and peace should tell you if your investment is wise and worthy. What do you give yourself to? Where are your treasures? What holds the most meanings and values?

The Master had invested Himself completely into the Father's will. That carried our Master from place to place, person to person, task to task. And most definitely, even through all His turmoil, His returns were with meanings and values. Even though there were moments of sorrow, His joy greatly outweighed that. He was balanced in mind. His trust in Father was enduring and unfailing. He never faced defeat with disappointment in Himself, or Father. He was continually energized and challenged to meet anything head on.

Yes, to invest yourself into the doing of the Father's will takes spiritual fitness.

This week, continue on in those exercises we discussed last week. Find time to think about what emphasis you put yourself into, and how that serves: Is your family life being served? Is your place of employment a balanced area? Are you available to your friends? Do you have an open ear for a discouraged soul? Do you yourself feel served and that you are an integral part of the universe?

No questions this evening. I would however, enjoy closing our lesson with a prayer.

Our Father, it is in you, our Source and Center of all things, that we find our greatest spiritual nutrition. Life's fulfillments are not found out in the material world, but in you - and, your interpreting to us meanings and values. You have belief in us even when we have not belief in ourselves. We are fueled by your ever-enduring love for us. Help us every day to be cleansed and have an open mind to your will. Help us to invest ourselves in what you would want us to. We express our gratitude to you, our Father of all fathers. Amen.

Your Ministry In The Correcting Time | There Is No Hierarchy | All To Feel Equal
Co-workers

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-29-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. As I walk among you, I am made to feel at home. I look into each one of your faces and I am overcome with awe at the creativity of our Father. No matter what has occurred in your lives you each continue to uphold our purpose. Your enduring faith in our Creators has given you extra responsibilities and opportunities - and I must say, you have each done well.

The Correcting Time is expanding more every day and the spiritual energy is creating a great mind-shift. You, our Mission participants, are well trained in directing those who are feeling this shift, this energy.

As we each become comfortable at our place at Michael's table, we find that all are equal in the kingdom; not one is above another in any capacity. There before us at the table is an enormous banquet; we each must try a little bit of everything.

In your life experience you will eventually understand many things, for you will have the experience firsthand. To know comfort, you must know pain. To know freedom, you must know imprisonment. To know love, you must know hate. In this Correcting Time, there will be individuals who could use your insight into understanding this which we call 'morontia mota.' A soft-spoken word will speak to the souls of those you attempt to reach.

To fully believe that each of Father's children are equal will keep you balanced in your ministry – you will be able to maintain a humility that connects you directly with divine information. The Master's ministry was most effective because He sought no place above His fellows; He directed them inward to their own divine source; He displayed faith in His fellows' ability to reach for Father on their own.

Every day, you may see your loved ones experiencing trauma or pain, and all you can do for them is show them your love, support, and guide them inward to their own divine intelligence. You each know that experience is required. And no matter how painful it is to see your fellows experiencing trauma, you know it is required of each mortal to bring out meanings and value-recognition.

Yes, your ministry in this Correcting Time is to assist in sharing meanings and values. Good things are indeed happening. I realize that living in the world it would seem that pain is all around. You each must believe that the Correcting Time is having rippling affects, and good is indeed resulting.

This week, think about your particular responsibilities in the Correcting Time. Can you minister as the Master did, with a humble heart, and give individuals that feeling that they are coworkers – not followers or leaders? Continue to practice your spiritual exercises to maintain strength to serve in our Brother/Father's Mission purpose. Find time this week to have quiet time and receive my words. Are there questions this evening?

HARRISON: Abraham, would you perhaps have some words of encouragement for my friend/brother Jonas, who is in the state prison at this time? He is coming up for parole.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. My son (to Jonas), I am in understanding of the heartache you have experienced. Do not ever think you have done so much that Father would not right now lift you up and hold you as if you were His only son. His ear is always open. His heart is always full with love. His guidance is unfailing and you have opportunity to have this for your own. With your experience, you can make a difference in the lives of those you meet. You can bring about good from the negative experiences of life. With your efforts toward doing good, your time spent in prison will be of great value. Have not worry. You have a bright future, do not miss out on it. That is all. Another question?

SIMON: Yes, Abraham. I would like to welcome Camarah here for her first time. The Teaching Mission Conference is coming up, do you have some thoughts on that event? I sure have been grateful for all the spiritual and mental growth lately, and practicing of trusting in Father. If you have any words for me, I would appreciate it.

ABRAHAM: Certainly Simon. Concerning the upcoming Conference – these conferences appear to be an 'ocean of everything.' You that are attending can help to bring about a practical balance to living the spiritual life. Our entire Mission is based on the teachings of the Urantia Book. There is tendency at these conferences to stray away from the intellectual reality of the Urantia Book, to the mysticism of other beliefs. Remember our Mission is spiritual, yes, but it is also balanced with intelligence. Remember to use humor and lightheartedness to maintain a positive energy flow. The Mission is not 'anything goes.' Right now the Correcting Time is at a crucial point where the weeds will be gathered up and thrown by the wayside while the new growth is allowed room to spread. Remember always that Father is our Sovereign and in charge of all things; and without a doubt, I can say that all will go well. Is this helping? (Simon: Yes, Abraham. I appreciate it.)

MIRIAM: Just one question before you leave. Are you, on your side, excited about the Israeli and Arab nations new movement? Are you guys jazzed about that they are talking to each other?

ABRAHAM: Always we have hope and yet, the results remain to be seen. This is a most difficult area in our efforts. When we can find leaders who will relinquish their desire to have great power then will there be wonderful results. Good question Miriam.

Know that with each passing week I am with more love for you each. Remember to look for me this week. Until next time, shalom.

Revealing Father Through Our Everyday Living | How Would My Associates Know Father Through Me

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-07-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying our small group this evening. The energy is clear and distinct. I am with much gratitude each week when we can meet as a family and refocus our Mission goals. Last week we discussed Mission responsibilities. During the week I visited with many of you. My personal goal was to help each of you see your unique gifts and find a manner in which to serve.

Our Mission is slowly growing. There has been fruit, yes, and yet many of the dead branches have been cut away. Michael said He is the vine and we are His branches. What is not producing fruit will be left behind to make room for further growth. You have for the most part, committed to this vine and to the personal pruning.

Our Mission is practically ripe for harvest. What we have so long worked for is indeed deeply rooted in the hearts of our participants. Over these many years of your experience, you have learned to walk close with our Father. Michael dwelt in the flesh many years ago on Urantia to reveal to mortals the Father in heaven.

My questions this evening are: How has our Father been revealed to you? How would your fellows know that you know Father? How are you using your personal gifts to their full potential? Many understand the Father revealed through the gift of humility. To have Father reveal Himself to you through some powerful act is indeed humbling, yes, and teaching you that only a humble heart will be taught.

Some see Father revealed through their fellows, and each day with them gives them the gift of encouragement and reason to carry on. Many see Father revealed through their children - their wide-eyed ability to take in information is a wonderful lesson to getting to know our Father. Some however, may see Father revealed in the experience of the passing of others; during what is seemingly a sad time does turn individuals inward and search for higher meaning. In this, the heart and mind are open and indeed Father is there with His words of meaning and values.

I ask, did you come to know Father because He first revealed Himself to you? or have you learned more because you had faith first in Father? How do you know the spiritual life is a reality? How is Father revealed to you in everyday living? What is your responsibility in being open to Father's presence? How does Father reveal Himself to others through you? In all your service-work, do you live the life you profess to believe in? My friends, you cannot sell what you have not faith in. Surely, you can't expand our Mission if the faith in Father's living presence is not a part of you.

Our Mission is based on the everyday-living spiritual reality. Father must be a permanent presence in your minds and hearts. To think of Him as 'far too important to know the details of your life' is indeed taking purpose away from your personal Adjuster. In all you think and do, He is there. He cannot be there only half the time. Our Correcting Time must continue to move with a forward momentum. The unfruitful branches will be taken away and there will be room for a greater harvest.

This week, let us focus on our personal relationship with Father. Let us reinforce our faith. Let us live our spiritual reality every day. No questions this evening, but I would be honored if you would allow me to close with a prayer.

Our Father, your children are here before you in your presence. We are with a humble mind and grateful heart to know that you are as real as we are to one another. Help us to always be our real self, which is always revealing you. Help us to be of assistance to our fellows. Help us to see how our personal gifts will serve in the kingdom. Help us to see your revealed reality in our everyday living. Amen.

My love goes with you. Again, look for me during the week. Until next time, shalom.

Finding Father, And Showing Father Through Our Mortal Responsibilities

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-14-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I am enjoying the calm and thoughtful energy this evening. Your discussions always lead us into higher levels of thinking. Your willingness to be taught makes you each wonderful teachers. My lessons may come weekly, but you learn much more from your fellowship. I am grateful to be a part of that.

This week, your lesson was to aid you in becoming more aware of Father in everyday living. When many first come to the awareness that God is truly a living reality, they sometimes believe that all their thoughts, actions, and time should be spent in nothing but the spirit. While this is a wonderful intention, there must be balance.

Said Jesus: "You are in the world, yet not of it." You are here on this evolutionary planet to live a typical mortal life. With the busyness of living the material life, you are to also learn to integrate the spiritual. Many mortals who become imbalanced in spirituality tend to allow the responsibilities of life to go by the wayside, and then they wonder why Father would allow them to stumble.

When the Master wore the flesh, He experienced all you are to experience – He raised a family; He worked; He had earned income; He paid His debts; He toiled in menial labor; He helped numerous neighbors, friends, family, and strangers. Many times He had to make do with what He had, and yet there was still the same amount of joy as there was in abundance.

As the eldest of the family and after the death of Joseph, the Master helped His siblings with their studies. He helped to teach, discipline, and He showed them unconditional love as any parent would. He was challenged by the free-thinking teen years, yes. He was devastated at the loss of a sibling. The Master had to contend with His mother's fondest hopes of Him and attempts at manipulation. Much of her earthly demands He met without complaint, and indeed learned to relate with her within her own understanding.

The Master looked at His family as if they were part of His spiritual development, as He was a part of theirs. While learning the harsh realities of the family, He also learned about love, safety, and responsibility. Anyone belonging to a group or family knows all too well of the sometimes disorganization, chaos, and constant demands. The family life is not reverent, pious, and peaceful, no! but this is the reality of the mortal life.

The Master and His associates did a great deal of work to finance their mission. The apostles did not find much glory in fishing and yet, the Master taught them the value and artistry of working with integrity. The Master found boat-building to be an art. While the work was somewhat difficult, He grew to love the smell and feel of the wood, the feel of His tools against the wood, and the creation that came out of each individual task. In the process of producing, there was a mental calmness which allowed Him time away from temporal problems.

Jesus learned to sincerely enjoy His work. This work spoke not to the masses at the time. It did not serve His mission in any way except for providing for His earthly family and preparing Him for the mission ahead. He much enjoyed working in the garden – even though the work was difficult and the sun was hot, He loved being 'at one' with the earth, and in this, He found closeness to Father.

The mortal life is very important to the eternal life. The more aspects you can learn of mortal living, the more morontially-fit you will be. To constantly fight the demands of mortal life is to bring about struggle and disconnection from the Spirit. There really is joy in all things when you have allowed Father to be present in your life.

This week, take time to ponder your mortal responsibilities – see if you can find Father in them? or if you only find struggle. Find the art in your work. Find the joy in your group or family. Even though there is some hardship, still journal on your experiences in finding Father revealed in your everyday living.

No questions this evening, perhaps next week. Again, make time to meet with me during the week. Know that I take great joy in your company and find comfort in our unification. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Maintaining Simplicity | Don't Block The New Incoming Realities By Holding Too Tight To The Old

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP

07-21-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am filled with gratitude knowing I can relax all into the hands of our Father. I am comforted by the fact that Father's awareness and intelligence oversees all. Even in my realm of reality I become absorbed with my tasks and somewhat preoccupied to the point that I can at times lose focus. I sincerely enjoy my time taken aside from my daily responsibilities to take in spiritual nutrition and regain that focus.

Last week we discussed material responsibilities while living a Spirit-led life. I do remember how difficult the agondonter status was for me. I remember being caught up in emotion, drama, and my own personal desires - to the point that I had squeezed Father out of my thinking. In this, the world seemed to be bearing down upon me and I felt weak and stuck in a cycle of confusion.

The responsibilities of the material life are so much easier to bear when you believe Father is at hand in all the details. With a strong foundation of faith, you feel not alone and weak as if you must bear the world upon your shoulders. How mighty is our Father's works! How beautifully orchestrated is His divine plan!

This evening I would go a bit off the intended lesson in the hopes that all are well served.

In the days of our Master, individuals felt quite comforted in His presence. His lessons were simple - and yet, new and exciting. The people, for the most part, saw with new eyes. Down through the ages, spirituality had become complex. With the various interpretations of man, religion was indeed imprisoning and 'shaming' the masses into the hope of salvation.

With this current awakening, people are yet again viewing the spirit life with new eyes, and are finding freedom. Individuals are finding again the simplicity in the Master's teachings. Some of you have always believed in Father and the spirit life. Some of you have been born-again with new awareness.

For those that are in understanding of my words, think back to your days of awakening to the spirit - that feeling of broadened horizons; that feeling of safety and security; that feeling of being Father's child. Many of you are longtime spirit seekers - and while this is all well and good, sometimes there is a tendency to lose sight of that childlike awareness where you see all things with new eyes.

I am saying, as mortals mature in the mortal life, there are sometimes tendencies to become set in the ways of old - thereby slowing the flow of incoming divine information. You, as ambassadors for our Mission, need to maintain that ability to see the realities of life with new eyes. Remember the simplicity in the Master's message. Remember His lightheartedness. He was ever Spirit-led and always had the appropriate words for those He served, those He ministered to.

For many, Jesus' message was simple basic truths, and those who were ready received more complex material. Those that I refer to as being 'ready' are those who maintain the ability to see with fresh eyes – those that dare to remain open-minded and receptive to new possibilities.

This week, think back over your spiritual career. Does the child within still have options in your everyday living? Can you accept comfort in maintaining simplicity? Can you take comfort in knowing Father is at hand and aware of any and all things; and, that He ever toils for your path to Him? For our upcoming lessons, consider: What is salvation? What is being 'born of the spirit?' Are there questions?

SIMON: Well, Abraham, simplicity is pretty much out the door for me, but I love the idea of simplicity. Short of that, I feel like I have been spending a lot of time on spiritual things. I need to do more grounding, more reality-type things. I would appreciate your assessment on that.

ABRAHAM: Understood. Science is a wonderful thing. In this day and age of technology there is tendency to over-analyze everything; the simplicity and joy become lost in the confusion. This is a new age of awareness, yes, and the mortal mind will be busy with many new concepts. However, the more difficult something appears to be, the more you feel overwhelmed and the more you feel the weight of the world. In this confusion there are feelings of loneliness, and the simplicity of the Master's message is seemingly hidden. Take time, my son, to refill your spiritual resources in a simple way. While you do enjoy perfection, forget not that this leads to anxiety and disappointment when your expectations are not met. Have not worry but take joy in the simple things in living. Is this helping? (Simon: Yes. Thank you very much.)

LUKE: Yes, Abraham. Thanks for taking questions. I have lived here my whole life and now I am moving to a new area. There is apprehension in this decision and yet, everything seems to be falling into place to do that. It is a big move to leave my home and there is no intention of coming back. Any words for me?

ABRAHAM: I feel that if the path seems to be cleared then it would seem you are meant to follow it. You are exhibiting courage in the face of uncertainty, and this is always growth-promoting. You can see life as 'my reality is how it is always going to be;' or, you see how Father will show you different. Father's possibilities are endless, and one who trusts in the Spirit is always open to His direction. You are a Spirit-led son, and where your present adventure takes you is a good opportunity to deliver the good news. Your ability for humor and logic is a good combination that will serve in your ministry. Have not worry. Be at peace. No matter where you go, Father is always there. Another question?

CALVIN: Thanks for your lessons and help. Sometimes I wonder if my experiences have crusted me against the spiritual life; but then again, I wonder if the hard experience was a good thing to make me face reality. Maybe your perspective or any words you would have for me?

ABRAHAM: Each of Father's children is entrusted with certain talents and given tasks to perform to uphold this Mission. Your experience has well trained you to help maintain balance in our overall purpose. You are not hardened by life's experiences, no. You were well trained to perform those tasks assigned to you to serve in this Correcting Time. Many individuals are driven by emotion, and some prefer to receive the spiritual life through the intellect. Because you choose to live a grounded spiritual life does not mean you are hardened to receiving from those on high. While some receive the spirit 'through feelings' – you, can better receive the spirit 'through mind.' Have not worry. Practice being more accepting of who you are and understanding of how you are. Is this helping? (Calvin: Yes, Abraham. Thanks.) Abraham: You are welcome. One more question?

ELIASHA: Do you have any advice or insights for me today?

ABRAHAM: My daughter, I am perceiving you to be somewhat weary with how your life is moving. You are a daughter of faith, no doubt, and your ability to share with others is indeed a ministry unto itself. The everyday-living reality does seem to be what you have not expected – and while this is somewhat disappointing, you are a child of God with the power to change any of your present realities. Because some doors appear not to open, have not worry, for Father's time and your time are very different. Many doors may open at a later date, have not fear. Know that there are spiritual rewards in the efforts made toward living a good and well-balanced mortal life.

With that, I will take my leave. Know that I hold each of you dear and I will again be available for you throughout the week. Find time to enjoy the source of peace. Until next time, shalom.

Emotional Roadblocks | Salvation Is Simply Acceptance of Father's Offerings
Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-28-2003
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always made to feel joyful when we can meet. I enjoy your humor and wisdom, your willingness to share life's discoveries. I realize each day that you live, there are happenings that are molding you into that person who will one day be 'at one' with the internal Father. Living the mortal life is practically a series in making mistakes and continuing to improve.

How wonderful it is to know Father will never forsake us. There is always His mercy, His kindness, His loving watchcare, and His hard lessons in truth. Many times as a mortal I had felt my struggles had embittered me to the point that I would question 'why such a magnificent Father would have anything to do with such an erring child.' I came to see that even in all my misunderstanding, Father had never left me or punished me with His absence; no, He was always there, always pointing the way.

People of this day and age speak of the wonderful possibilities of having second chances as if life is quite random – and luckily you have opportunity to correct your mistakes, and progress. With Father, there are endless chances and numerous possibilities to correct and move further along that eternal path to Him. Last week we discussed the possibilities of salvation. What is salvation?

This evening I present to you our friend and Teacher, Emulan.

EMULAN: Greetings, my friends. I am overjoyed to have opportunity to be with you again. I am honored my friend and mentor, Abraham, would recommend that I speak this evening. Most of you know my history of living the mortal life - my tragedy of having lost my family to an accident and losing my mental capacity for a time, which led to my interest in the psychiatric field.

At the lowest point in my experience of having lost those in whom I had loved so much, I was indeed lost; I felt nothing but a future of doom. With all the human emotions that one would experience because of tragedy--such as despair, guilt, and anger--I was practically my own worst enemy. By that, I mean I took the tragedy on as my own as if I had somehow caused it, or could have prevented it. The guilt was tremendous.

In this emotional state, there seemed to be nothing but darkness, nothing but loneliness, nothing but a future of reoccurring doom. My salvation came when I could move beyond the emotionalism, to accepting the simple gift of love from our Father; His saving grace was there all along, but my cycling emotions had kept me blinded.

Salvation is indeed simple. It is accepting what God the Father offers you. It is accepting your sonship status. It is accepting His unconditional forgiveness, His ever-abiding mercy and expanding love. Father's offerings are endless. It is the darkness of our own emotions that keep us from reaching for salvation. In Him, I am truly saved. In Him, I am truly safe. In Him, I am pointed Paradise-ward.

With the complexities of mortal living, many individuals are made to overlook the Father's offerings. Old thinking has some stuck in a cycle of guilt, atonement, or self-punishment.

Many look at Father as if He were also mortal; and needless to say, this indeed limits Father to what He can do in your life. Every day, Father offers you abundance. He gives gifts that cannot be measured by man's understanding; His gifts involve all aspects of mortal living. I do remember the impatience I felt toward my getting what 'I thought I truly needed,' and the receiving of what 'Father knew I truly needed.'

We must remember in this day and age that many ideas are built on emotionalism. The instability of emotions is, for the most part, leading to lower thinking, or the 'animal mind.' In this state of the animal mind, judgment is cloudy and one may tend to rely upon one's own understanding. The 'higher mind' is one who trusts in Father and His ability to do any and all things. My friends, salvation is simply accepting the Father's offerings.

I am overwhelmed with gratitude from time to time when I think back over my experience and see how Father never gave up on me, never lost love for me, never lost faith or hope in me. His love is unfailing, and His tenacity to continue to be ever close with His children, is unending. My regard to you, my friends. Farewell.

I am ABRAHAM. Our Gratitude to our brother and friend for this evening's lesson. This week, ponder your emotional roadblocks. How might your emotions lead you to a lower thinking level? Take time to think about what the Father's offerings are. Take time to journal your understanding of salvation. How can this new concept affect those you may have discussion with? This week, find time to have a moment or two of real worship, real gratitude. How does that change your outlook in your overall everyday living?

No questions this evening. Know that I make it my personal task to take time with each one of you every week. Look for me. My love is ever growing for you each. Until next week, shalom.

Salvation | The Master Is Our Door To Understanding The Father And The Spiritual Life

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-04-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am happy to be among you once more. I am glad to see familiar faces here with us again. This group is sincerely an anchor for our ship of faith. With the stormy waters of everyday living, it is comforting to know we can return home to regain focus and a sense of overall wellness.

God is good. I am amazed by His everyday works in our lives. I am in awe of His awesome power in every little detail of existence. I am with abiding hope and joy in any and every situation. Yes, God is good.

Back to our discussion concerning salvation; I am always made to think of the Master. The Master's life in the flesh had significant meanings beyond this world. His life was an enduring example of how one could face bitter disappointment and still move mountains. Jesus was born an ordinary child of the realm. He lived an ordinary existence. He performed His duties as an ordinary man. Even when He was ministering to His fellows He sought to keep from miracle-working.

Living an ordinary life, the Master did indeed do wonderful things. He was not a king, nor the long sought-after messiah. It would be wrong for us to refer to Him as other than our Brother/Father/Savior. The life of Jesus brought God down to the mindal understanding of man. Jesus made Father reachable for man. Even His Spirit of Truth today keeps you ever updated and available to knowing our Father as someone who is always at hand, not somewhere far off in heaven.

Said Jesus: "I am the door. He who knocks indeed will be welcomed." The Master is our door to understanding Father from within our own mind-frame. He is our introduction to the Father and the spirit life. He is indeed a Savior. Those who live a life of faith can indeed take salvation for granted. Those who are 'Father led,' are in understanding of the security of the eternal life - the eternal life from this moment on.

Those who find comfort in salvation are not a chosen people to be set apart, no. Salvation is not separation, but unity in serving one another for a common good. Those who literally feel their salvation are more likely to serve. They are driven with the desire to make other's lives better. Those who feel comforted in the knowledge of God feel a wellspring of wealth from which they draw from to share with others. These individuals are a source of energy, a 'guide on the path' so to speak.

Other people who may have become embittered by life circumstances will find you, faith-filled sons and daughters, a source to a new and better way. I realize that possibly every day you meet with individuals who are negative and seemingly unchangeable. At times it feels as if these individuals can embitter you, as they themselves are.

With your faith and comfort in salvation, and knowing you belong to the kingdom of heaven, only good can result from whomever you relate with. The Spirit of God is in you, literally, and this is a source of protection and peace. No one can take anything from you. It is within your power to fend off the negative energy to promote light. This source of light is unending. The source is never depleted. You have access to all you need. You can be as the Master, and go about sharing the good news.

As the Master's day of Urantia birth approaches let us ponder the many ways He is a Savior to us. How has knowing Him affected your life? What is your favorite aspect of His personality? After facing numerous disappointments, how did the Master continue to go on; continue to minister; continue to love and serve? What was His practice to receiving from that wellspring of Father's all-encompassing goodness? I will take a few questions.

LANCESON: Abraham, this week I had the experience of talking to people who have lost loved ones; and I have come to realize what you spoke of in the lesson – this idea of taking my salvation for granted. How grateful I am that I have this source of strength I can give to others. The compassion I feel for those who lack this in their lives, it has made me realize how fortunate I am to have this understanding. I guess that is all I have to say.

ABRAHAM: Lanceson, my son, you are a true student wherein you are enthusiastic about learning and not so quick to 'show what you know.' This is rare in today's world and definitely wonderful. You do have a gift for listening, and a knowledge of what is to come beyond this life. You are a good counselor to those in need. Your willingness to be present in all of life, bad or good, is a wonderful example for those who know you. Well done, my son. (Lanceson: Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question or comment?

SIMON: Abraham, I am very grateful for the lessons lately, and I feel like I have been learning them over time. In other words, I am a little slow, so give me some time. I am grateful for the bigger picture, even though I get stuck in my own little picture sometimes. I wonder if you have any words or comment for me on how I can be a more effective son.

ABRAHAM: You are learning, Simon. Your experiences have been a wonderful teacher. You are finding your way as you should. Change and growth is slow – as well it should be for a lasting effect. You appear to live a well-balanced life being involved in just about everything. Know the spiritual life is also in the mundane details of everyday living. You are finding your way, my son. Have not worry, you do well.

I will take my leave. Know that each time we meet I grow more in love with you. Know that I am always available should you have need of me. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

The Cost Of Living | What Price Do We Pay To Have Material And Spiritual Abundance
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-11-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am overjoyed to be among you this evening. I am especially grateful to Father for this particular assignment. I am driven to be a better friend and teacher each time we meet. You, with your positive attitudes, inspire me to continue to make effort in this Correcting Time task.

Where would your lives be without our wonderful Father and His many loving associates? When I think back upon my mortal years, I remember the distinct change from having a stalwart (and yet fearful) spiritual life, to becoming an open-minded receiving child of God. I think of how much better my life was since Machiventahad assisted me in expanding my awareness.

That expanded awareness was my salvation; it was my internal peace; it was projected in a new faith-filled confidence in my everyday living. When I felt mostly 'spirit-filled,' I could relax and allow Father to do His work through me. I cannot imagine where my life would have gone had not my eyes been opened. We can be grateful for where we have come from, are now, and are going, for Father is a growing, working, loving part of our lives.

Last week we spoke of Michael as the door to Father. He is now, for the mortals of the realm, still the entryway to knowing a loving, all-knowledgeable, all-powerful Father. Could the Master have made such progress had He not heeded the call of our Father? Had He worked for selfish glory would He still be the basis of the many religious organizations of today? Our Master was fueled by the First Source and Center, and His life in the flesh made it also possible for you to receive as He did.

So many of today's religious organizations often challenge their believers into thinking the Master had paid a ransom for their salvation. The churches teach that Christ paid for our eternal life with His mortal life. The world would experience such a freeing of the mind and soul if they could know the meaning of a true Savior - not one who shames them into doing good because He has died for their sins.

The Master did pay a price when He wore the mortal flesh, yes, He paid every day. He released His desires in favor of the Father's will. He looked to Father for answers. Instead of relying upon His mortal part, he relied upon His divine mind. The mortal mind does have its way with selfish desires from time to time, but those who are truly happy in their spiritual relationship are eager to put Father first.

It is written that every day a true believer lives he finds it easier to do the right thing. In our freedom and spiritual safety, we can relax all into the Father's hands knowing the ultimate good will always result. The Master did not pay a price to get His fellows to believe in His teachings, no. He could only plant seeds and would allow Father to tend to the results. The Master kept focused on the goal at all times. The more He practiced, the easier it became.

This evening I would like to discuss the costs of living. It would seem that many mortals, every day, pay great amounts of attention to things that are important to them. Many times, the price is either 'too high' or 'not worth it.' Any time one would sacrifice truth, beauty, or goodness – then regardless of the price you would be willing to pay, it is indeed not to be profitable. Father wants His children to have abundance, yes; and not simply materially speaking, but spiritually also. He does agree that life should have more joy than pain, worry, or anxiety.

This week, review your present life and calculate the measure of joy therein. Is there truth, beauty, and goodness to be found? Is there balance in living, with work, play, family, and friends? What prices are you paying to receive whatever you are receiving right now, in return? For example: In a friendship – you pay the price of thoughtfulness, courtesy, respect, and energy expended to maintain the friendship. And then in return you receive the opposite – which causes you anxiety, unrest, and worry. This does hold lessons to be learned on the spiritual path, of course, but not to the point that your continued efforts to do good fall by the wayside. This is a price not worth paying, for it is a source of negative energy, and it is spiritually stifling.

Say you have employment where you are respected, paid fairly, listened to, and considered to be an important part of the whole. In time you begin to be tardy every day and disrespectful to your fellow employees – thoughtless of the needs of the whole. How long would you expect to be employed there? In all your endeavors, there is energy exchange that affects the whole. You want to promote truth, beauty, and goodness, yes, but to do this you need to have focus on the goal of Father's will – which concerns all, just as the Master did.

You are given the gift of abundance, yes. And I say, joy and peace are a part of that gift. When negativity seems to be overwhelming, then that is a time to take action. Having exhausted your human resources, you are exhausted. In taking action, you commune with the Father and the Master. You ponder various solutions and remove yourself for a time to listen for divine guidance and receive positive energy. This takes courage and strength. Those who walk a Spirit-led life have that confidence needed to go forth to promote truth, beauty, and goodness.

If you look at your focus, is it invested in those things that promote the non-positive things in life? If so, then how does your everyday-living energy measure up? Are you over-invested and receiving nothing, or negativity? Where is the lesson in continually bogging down the soul with unprofitable returns? You each are indeed a child of God, and worth a great deal to Him, to the universe. What are you giving yourself to? What price are you paying, and what are you receiving therefrom?

Those who have a wonderful family life with happy and healthy members, may have their employment income suffer a bit because their focus is on that which is truly life-sustaining. And knowing the Master as you do – is this what He would have you do? Where are you most useful? What do you put yourself into that promotes truth, beauty, and goodness in daily living?

This week, ponder the life of Jesus and how He spent Himself. Imagine the negative personalities He was up against and how He overcame, promoting the highest and best good.

No questions this evening, perhaps next time. Know that as each week goes by, I am filled with more affection for all of you. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

In What Ways Does Michael Save Us | Our Universe Mother Shares a Few Ways
Abraham & Mother, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-18-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. From week to week, you know not where we go and yet you continue to attend in faith and loving service. A blessing are you, indeed.

I am with such gratitude to see the diversity in our group this evening, such bright personalities with the full color of the spiritual spectrum from one end to the other. We are each building upon something we have no proof that it even exists. My friends, that is faith! That is continuing hope and love for Father and your fellows. Well done!

We have been discussing the Master as our Savior, and in the spirit of His upcoming celebration of birth on Urantia we will continue on with this subject. For you this evening, I give you our beloved MOTHER:

MOTHER: Greetings, my children. I am with joy to be among you this evening. My love for you is always expanding and everlasting. I delight in your personalities, your wisdom and your smiles.

As you probably know, Michael, our beloved Brother/Father is one of my favorite topics of discussion. Without the Universe Sovereign-Michael of Nebadon-where would we each be now? I know without a doubt that I am more having known Him, having collaborated with Him, having worked side by side with Him. He has enabled me to be more than I am, and I am honored to have been a part of His ability expansion also. With Michael, I feel at home with comfort and peace. He is a beautiful reflection of the wonderful attributes of our Paradise Father.

When you think of Christ Michael as a personal savior, what do you believe you are saved from? The churches of today put the fear of an evil force into the minds of their participants - as if this will scare them Godward. As you Correcting Time collaborators know, this is not a worry for this day and age; the evil ones, those sons of self-love, are not even to enter into your minds for they are no more.

- Michael's sojourn in the flesh has revealed to you the truth; and the truth is that the evil of today's world stems from the 'animal minds' of mortals. Michael saves us from fear.

- He also has taught us self-forgetfulness in that you do not neglect or belittle the self but you keep the focus on a forward ministry for your fellows. Michael saves us from selfishness.

- His numerous lessons have taught us to rise to meet our challenges face to face, hand in hand with Him. He has taught that self-pity is nothing but a roadblock to growth and success. Michael saves us from our weaknesses.
- He also has shown us the beauty of perfected humility where one can learn to forsake personal selfishness in favor of the Father's will. The Master's life was a prime example of the true definition of humility. He served side by side with His fellows, not above them, nor below. He was a Creator and soon-to-be Sovereign of a universe and yet, He viewed His fellows as equals. Even His enemies He judged not; He saw them not as less-than. Michael saves us from the ego.

Michael is the Vine and you are His branches. You have willingly committed to being at one with the Vine and to being pruned from time to time. You each are in understanding that this pruning is done with love – and, for your growth and direction to grow toward our Father who is in heaven.

The Correcting Time has reached a point where the roots are deep within the soil of Father's plan and purpose. The masses are beginning to sway toward a new and better system of faith. The old ways are becoming unacceptable to the ordinary man and woman. The pendulum is beginning to swing the other way.

Our Correcting Time is moving from its infancy to adolescence; and you, our children, have been instrumental in this growth. We want you to know, the seeds of faith have not fallen upon barren ground; the new shoots are well rooted within the soil of Father's plan and purpose.

I am honored to be your Mother, your confidant and comforter. I am at hand if you should have need of me. Know that my children are precious to me. Think not that I am far off because you do not hear from me too much in this manner. I am close by and with ever-abiding love for you each. I know you. I love you. Farewell.

I am ABRAHAM. Our gratitude to you, our Mother, for you are our nurturer and indeed make us more than we are. I am humbled and in awe at the works of our Father. In His bestowing upon us our beloved Brother/Father Michael, and our precious Mother, how can we fail! In all our endeavors, how can we fail with such a force of love and faith! No, we cannot! We are meant to carry on with the fruits of the spirit, so beautifully demonstrated by our universe Parents.

This week, ponder those things you are 'saved from' as far as spirit poisons go, as far as the mortal life goes. How is your life differing from a non-believer? What are you truly grateful for? I have not time for questions. Know that with each moment we spend together I am in unending gratitude to our Father. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Words From Michael | Developing An Understanding Love For Our Fellows
 Abraham & Christ Michael, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-25-2003
 Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I trust your day of celebrating Michael's birth was uplifting. I do know that these times of being gathered does help us focus on our Spirit of Truth and how this Spirit of influence intensifies the Master's effect on the world.

The mortals of today are beginning to recognize how powerful their thoughts really are, and that you attract to yourself those things you think of. One who lives with daily dreading of life's harsh circumstances attracts more dread. What a reason we have to rejoice in our faith – because we have enduring hope and faith in those on high.

Michael is indeed a Savior. He saves us from ourselves. He is a purifier of thought. It is written: "Create in me a clean heart, oh Lord, and renew a right spirit within me." Michael, our Spirit of Truth, does just this – and for that we keep a keen observation, an open mind, and open heart.

Our receptivity to our Brother/Father is the manner in which He reveals Himself to us. We have learned a great deal on the 'Fatherhood of God,' and for the time being, we will study on the 'brotherhood of man.'

I give you the Savior Himself. Children, your Brother/Father is in attendance with you here this evening.

MICHAEL: Greetings. I cherish my individual relationships with you each and yet, there is such a rich flavor of love when we are all gathered together. Father gave you one another so that life would be more abundant. My journey with you, my children, is also with abundance. Even in your struggles there is opportunity for us to grow closer. I crave that closeness with my children.

I am driven to nourish the branches which stem from the vine. I am made to be in a state of constant gratitude, for I see this world moving in a forward direction. I am honored to have Mother at my side, as are my loyal Teaching Staff, numerous divine orders – and you, my listening children.

My heart is full. Never have I viewed you as a lost people. Never have I given up hope on your inner goodness. Even in my darkest hour in my days in the flesh, I never thought of you as a world of weeds who needed to be left by the wayside and forgotten.

You have had a rich history of experience, and this has well served you, well served us as a universe, and well served God the Supreme. I value you, your existence, your personalities, your souls – possibly more than you do, and certainly more than you could comprehend. I ask that you love and value one another as I love and value you.

It is understandable to be in emotional upheaval from time to time when dealing with one another. I certainly had reason when sojourning in the flesh to take offense at my fellow's treatment of me. I give gratitude to my Father for He bestowed upon me this loving understanding I had then – and now – for all experiencing mortals who are in a state of becoming.

Your fellows are not really as you perceive them to be; they also are always in a constant state of change. This gift 'to change' is yours, and, all mortals of the realm. You will meet with those obstinate fellows who refuse growth and cater to the ego's needs, yes, and yet a close personal relationship with the indwelling Father allows you understanding; it allows you to know that their disturbing character is not to become your problem or ministry.

The spiritual life is an opportunity to practice what you have learned on your fellows who challenge you. Your trials with one another give you that experience you need to advance in morontial levels.

"Am I my brother's keeper?" Yes and no! I am, in a sense that I am with immovable understanding for his state of becoming. I am in a sense that I may be of assistance to him in turning him inward to find his inner Father. I am not my brother's keeper in a sense that I am judging his mistakes, contending with his ego, pointing out his faults and weaknesses and being un-accepting of him as one of Father's own.

Everyone will not love or even like you - they don't have to. It is also true for you; you will not necessarily feel that unconditional love for all; it is not expected nor required at this time. Unconditional love comes from having a total understanding and acceptance of your fellows. It is true, the more you know someone the more you can love them. Do not love as man would love - 'with condition' - but love as a parent would love a child. Love one another as I have, and do, love you.

I look not upon this world as those poor ignorant beings, no! I am filled with excitement and enthusiasm to view my children making effort, and becoming aware that I am, that I care. I love, no matter what.

Our Mission vine has experienced pruning and is now allowed room for a more balanced growth. You have come from mystical-seeking, to divine-accepting - and for this, we rejoice. Know that my presence is what you make of it; it is what you allow. Those with eyes to see and ears to hear will partake in this rejoicing.

The universe feels this excitement for your small struggling planet; the Supreme Being is certainly reflecting this joy. I am with burgeoning plans for the Correcting Time, and should you desire to be a part of it, then so be it. I would be honored as your Brother/Father to stand at your side working toward the ultimate good, working toward a mass mind-shift, working toward the brotherhood of man.

I am with deep and abiding faith for you each, and I would like to see you each have this for yourselves. Go in confidence - not in an ego-sense, but a spiritually-led sense. Go in faith - not faith in that you have great challenges to overcome alone, no, but faith that you are never alone; that you are assisted; that you are shown. Go in peace - peace that can carry you forward in all things, knowing that even in your darkest hours I am there.

I experience with you. My love is unshakable, unstoppable, and unfailing for my children. Know that as you carry on with the plan and purpose of our Father, I will be there. I know you, and I love what I know. Carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. Gratitude to you, our Brother/Father/Savior and Sovereign. With you, we believe we can carry on in all things. We also rejoice in our citizenship and sonship with you. We thank you. We give our love to you.

Go in peace, my friends. Know that my love is ever growing with you. Until next time, shalom.

Love Is A Nutrient That Stimulates Energy Within The Mind

Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-01-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying the peaceful atmosphere we have here this evening. I am continually amazed by your weekly growth and new understanding. I love each one of you on an individual level – and yet, you, as a collective group, emanate a beautiful energy. Getting to the lesson at hand, again we will be probing the possibilities of the brotherhood.

I can remember the chaos of mortal living; the fear of the unknown was continually plaguing my mind. My incessant need to control kept me from receiving the benefits of the brotherhood. My ego kept me from my fellows, and I did not feel as one of them. Of course I felt somewhat superior; and that ‘surely they were in need of my leadership.’ My thoughts were that if I appeared to be disorganized or weak, then certainly was I in no position to control or be a leader of any kind.

In my moments of isolation, I felt as a drowning man thrashing about in something that was sure to overcome me. It was not until I learned to become still and observant that I could see, as my mentor and friend would teach, that Father was this life-preserver that was to become my foundation of faith and freedom from fears.

In this mortal life we thrash about in our aloneness with fear of the unknown, lack of control, and at times, faithlessness. Father gave us one another so we may experience abundance in all our undertakings. He gave us one another so that He, through the aid of our fellows, can be that living life-preserver for our foundation of faith and freedom from fear. It is difficult at times, yes, to slow down the mind and consult with our internal Father; yes, and our brethren, to find renewed faith, energy, and abundance. I bring you Emulan for further understanding on this topic.

Greetings, friends. I am EMULAN. I am again honored to be a branch upon that vine in whom we love and cherish. You each know of my struggle with maintaining my mental capabilities after having experienced my mortal life tragedy.

Father indeed, deserves my undying gratitude for my salvation, yes; and I now know for certain that He had appeared to me from time to time through my fellow associates during my most trying times. At my darkest moments in the flesh, when all appeared to be lost and I wanted to simply disappear, there were my fellows –who reached out in loving service.

One of my physicians, who was a great light in my darkness, had been a stalwart supporter of my recovery. I know that I was not in any way an easy patient to deal with, for I was stubborn and irrationally thrashing about in my misery; and yet all the while, he maintained his support, his outreach. You could easily see that this physician worked as he did because he loved to help; it was not simply to gain financial wealth, but his greatest joy was to bring healing.

I came to know this loving doctor was this way throughout his entire practice – not just with me, but with all his patients. He loved what he did, and he was gifted at it. He knew the importance of staying current on medical techniques, yes, and yet he understood clearly that his Advisor of all advisors was none other than the master healer Himself. This doctor put all things spiritual before the material. His most useful tool in healing was the love he bestowed upon each of his patients.

Many times our fellows simply need to be seen as valuable and loved. Many individuals simply need to be heard and not judged. The human mind has its techniques in which it learns to reconcile itself with the various things in mortal living. Plants respond to water and light, but these are only nutrients to produce what is really life-giving, – and that is the energy of love, the source in which all things are brought to life.

Love is a nutrient that stimulates energy within the mind that produces various chemicals which maintains balance. Love is life-giving. To love without expectation is to maintain a flow of divine energy that is unstoppable – always circulating, always producing. To block that flow of energy is to be judgmental, to be critical; it is to be self-aggrandizing and jealous – as if someone else would have something while you lack.

My doctor friend had his superiors he answered to of course, but above all, he continually conferred with those on high. Father reached me through this man. This man helped me in ceasing my thrashing about long enough to see that life-preserver of faith. The peace I had then, was indescribable. I indeed felt Father's love through this man – and from there, I was able to receive it for myself, directly from Father.

I always enjoy visiting with you, my brothers and sisters. As Michael always says – carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. Our gratitude to you, Emulan, for another beautiful lesson. Your experience has served us well. My friends, this week, in your times of trial, forget not to hold still to see that life-preserver of faith. It may come to you from any source. Remember you also may be another's source as well. I love what I do. I am with deep and abiding joy for you allowing me to do what I love. I love this world, and I am honored to be included in the upstep.

I have not time for questions for the week ahead is going to be quite full. You are all in understanding that you have within you the answers to your most heartfelt questions. Have not worry. We will talk again soon. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Morontial Brotherhood Can Be Attained In This Mortal Life

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-08-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am with continuing gratitude to be with you, my brothers and sisters. Your serene thoughts make my visitation simple and easy to come through. How wonderful it is as a faithful mortal to walk through the fire and come out unharmed. At times life does appear to be a battle and you, the soldier, are with only your faith, as a shield. Our gratitude goes to Father and His many orders of divine beings for the carefully orchestrated universal plan. This evening we will discuss more on a part of that plan.

Man is by nature a social creature. Mortals need one another. Of course you all could survive in isolation – but in so doing, many of your mortal and morontial lessons will not be learned. The burdens of mortal life are so much easier to bear when there is a friend nearby. Being on a world of ‘having faith without visual proof’ (agondonters) is indeed a morontial exercise. When the burdens of the world come upon you, how much more easy is it to hold to faith when an encouraging friend is at hand.

Father should by all means be the first and foremost persuasion in your life – and of course, all others would come after. Many times it is that others do persuade you into having faith in what they feel you are supposed to put first. It does appear that this world’s people live on surface levels. They appear to cling to standard beauty, material possessions, and the latest fad. This world does appear to harshly judge, criticize, and punish what it does not understand.

My fellows, I can say that with the dawning of Light and Life on Urantia, there will be naturally set into place a morontial brotherhood while yet living in the flesh. Those who dwell on the Mansion Worlds are in a state of correction from having already lived the mortal life – there is much yet to learn, yes, and the inhabitants come to know that their education is of the utmost importance.

There, on mansonia, everyone is on common ground – what is good for one is good for all. Having experienced the morontial life for myself, I realized that I looked to my brothers and sisters with new eyes. I was in understanding that we all craved one thing – of which we were all willing to pay a particular price.

Upon entering the Mansion Worlds, you make effort to leave your faulty thinking behind. The mortal veil is lifted and you have new understanding – you are seeing now that in your mortal life those material things that were so important, are not any longer. You see the souls of your fellows, and each one has unique beauty. Your ‘focus’ on these Mansion Worlds is to be corrected and to carry on forward.

On a mortal world it is common practice to either belittle another or to make one feel superior – this is impossible to do after morontial awakening, for you see others as Father’s equal child – not any more, not any less. Each morontia citizen is attending to their own growth, their own path. They help one another where they can, yes, but they have not time to impose their opinions or worry about another’s path; the focus is set on the goal ahead.

Imagine your immediate family members in a small boat that was about to sink because of the weight aboard. Would you remove one of your loved ones so that yourself and the rest would survive? Of course not! you yourself would jump so the others could live. This is the attitude of the morontia citizens.

As we are working toward Light and Life, we are ushering in the morontial brotherhood. Each one of you is Father’s child – loved and valued as if you were the only child. Your focus is set upon your own path, yes; and when you can help another, then that is wonderful and so be it. But to cause another to stumble upon their path only increases your chances for forthcoming universal correction.

Unfruitful criticizing is causing one to stumble. Judgment also causes stumbling. Outright cruelty or unfairness is not only causing others to stumble, but also the person who holds these spirit poisons. Those in the morontial brotherhood tend to their own path; they also help to keep others moving forward with the lamp of faith.

I realize there is petty bickering within the Mission from time to time, and much of this is to learn from, yes. To allow the bickering to embitter you is to refuse the morontial brotherhood from entering into your own life.

This week, explore the possibilities of a morontial brotherhood. How do you view your fellow brothers and sisters? How worried are you about how they view you? How can you be a lamp of faith instead of a stumbling block? Be honest with yourself when answering this question: Does another's success take away from you? Are your fellows' victories your victories?

This is all we have time for. Know that I am ever grateful for your participation and allowing me to be here and be witness to this awesome dawning of awareness. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Laws Of Morontial Brotherhood Makes All Men And Women Equal

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-15-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. There is a bit of angst in the air this evening. The present occurrences have been a bit unsettling for you, I know. Have not worry, children. Turn inward. Take the hand of your Father, feel His warmth, allow yourself His embrace. Feel that peace that can only come from Him, your First Source and Center. Relax and know that all is carefully looked after. Let us take a short pause for this exercise.

That's better. With each week we meet I grow more fond of you. I am made more by our friendship association. Your welcoming attitudes make me long for you when we are not together. My heart is linked with yours, and for that, I am forever grateful.

The 'morontial brotherhood' is a living organism; it is an energy reality; it is a tangible force; it is something you can see and feel - which to mortal life is a comfort in and of itself. With the circuits in operation, mortals are capable of receiving a great deal of information if they can be less imprisoned by the ego and more bound to the Spirit.

The Correcting Time is righting a great deal of fundamental wrongs of the history of religion. Divine information that would appear to go to only those seemingly chosen by God, is now available to all. The Correcting Time is turning individuals inward to find the God within, or the best within themselves. The Correcting Time is about moving beyond the 'animal mind' - the basic needs of the ego, the need to be adored - toward a new and enlightened way.

With personal correction, the basic divinely-led mortal is able to receive from the spiritual circuits. With each level of correction a mortal reaches, there is offered a new level of information. And so it is, each person who is willing to make correction and be guided by the divine will, does have understanding of the path they are to follow; therefore, making each individual's path different and personalized.

Those who have experience of the earlier days upon the mortal path are able to help those who are experiencing it for the first time. Should those who have new enlightened experience volunteer information to another for ego upliftment, they will, however, find disappointment. Each mortal must remember 'you know what you know' because somebody went before you. Blessed is that man or woman who delights in helping another overcome mortal stumbling blocks. Your knowledge is best put to use when you honestly, without ego gratification, share it.

Do you see, the inner workings of the morontial brotherhood make all men and women equal – none are to be venerated about, to another. You can never put one of your own upon a pedestal as if they are somehow more righteous or advanced; it is unfair to you that work so diligently to move forward in spiritual understanding, and also unfair to the one you may idolize, for anyone can fall from that pedestal at any time. These are the laws of the morontial brotherhood.

Each of you is in a state of becoming. Your levels of fulfillment and joy are an indication of balance. Your greatest lessons will indeed be with one another. Know that another's personal spiritual path or level of knowledge is completely between them and Father. Help when you can, certainly, but keep focus upon your own path. Know that somewhere in time all paths are intermingled and knowledge is a gift to everyone.

This week, I would ask that we focus upon honesty with one another. Many fear to be honest, for the repercussions of personal truth can be harsh. In this budding morontial brotherhood we must be prepared to use honesty to the best of our ability, and face whatever repercussions come our way. Without personal honesty, how can you truly be yourself? How can you know who you really are if you hide behind somebody you are not?

Can you believe at this point in time in your spiritual progression, that even if your fellows find you not a lovable creature, that your Father looks upon you with an all-encompassing Fatherly love? Many believe they have not value, and have a difficult time finding anything in life of value. Know that you belong to a family who holds you dear, and there is nothing you can do to change that.

That is all for this evening's lesson. I would, however, make a few comments concerning your departed brother Isaac. [Editor's note: Isaac (Bill Kelly) was a stalwart and group transmission-receiver for the Pocatello, Idaho Teaching Mission group. Our Woods Cross groups had much intimate association with the Pocatello group over these first 13 years.] Have not worry children, for your brother is well. While this was a surprise to all, even him, Father will bring forth the ultimate good. He is well taken care of. He asks that you carry on with this most wonderful and important work. He asks that you be kind to one another and look after one another.

He will be assisting us in due time. Carry on. My love goes with you each. Until next time, shalom.

Nature of Living Truth. To Partake of the Master`s Living Truth We Become a Well Of Living Water

Ham, Nashville, TN Group 09-22-2003

Back

[Editor`s note: We have not yet found the transcript of Abraham's Woods Cross, Utah group for September 21, 2003. Therefore, this entry is a lesson from our Woods Cross original group-teacher, Ham - given to his Nashville, Tennessee group on this day, September 22, 2003]

[From the group transcriber: We began our session but forgot to run the tape, so Ham picked up right after announcing that tonight's lesson would be about The Nature of Living Truth.]

HAM: All right, we can begin again. The subject is Truth. And our first illustration was 'truth as living water;' truth as the spiritual water that quenches the thirst of the searching, the parched soul.

The human being who searches and searches until that thirst is relieved - that questing is at an end of finding. Truth is more than facts; more than the correlation of facts; more than the mind itself. Truth is the living Spirit of God. And the representative of truth, the experience of truth in your world, is the experience of the Master himself. He does not represent truth, He is truth. His Spirit is 'living truth.'

All these things are part of your growing awareness - part of your orientation toward truth and away from falsehood. Many things in life can be thought of as 'temporal truths' - that is, truth that is upheld over a period of time. The olden Greek philosophy, which colored the worldview of the West over many centuries, was kind of a 'temporal truth:' "The Earth exists as a flat plain. Above the Earth are the heavens, the realm of perfection. Below the Earth is the realm of eternal corruption and hell and damnation, and man existed in this realm of choice on Earth wherein he was a participant in his eternal future." Some of this world-view holds true; other parts do not.

And so, most of your thinking is conditioned by other assumptions that can be considered temporal truths - the static level of basic-reality-perception. But spiritual truth is 'growing truth,' 'expanding truth,' 'liberating truth.' Spiritual truth can penetrate beyond the commonly-accepted realms of thought. Spiritual truths combined with faith sees a world in which God's relationship with man is ever deepening and expanding and elevating. The tender relationship of 'Father to child' that the Master expressed and embodied in His life, revealed 'expanded truth;' and, expanded relationship of man to God, and God to man. Through faith, you now feel God as your closest friend, your confidant, your lover - closer than anything imagined previously.

The Master himself - "the truth, the way, and the life" - opened up another link to God through His personal friendship, His spiritual closeness, His constant and unwavering upholding of truth. He is like a magnet, and your souls are ever oriented toward that magnet, that drawing power of truth. He is the living water. He is the refreshment that once you have partaken, you shall never thirst again because His truth is ever renewed within you.

For the true believer, there is no waiting for the Masters' return, for He exists here now, within each heart, a friend to each soul. He is an ever-present help in times of uncertainty, travail, and the ever-changing fortunes and un-constancy of life. It is said that there is nothing you can ultimately depend upon more than this mighty Protector, this wonderful Friend. Life itself is ephemeral compared to the rock of His eternal nature. Riches take up wings and fly away. People come and go; are born and die. All the knowledge of humankind is but a grain of sand upon an eternal shoreline.

As you increasingly become more devoted to His word and appreciative of His value, then do you absorb that value and that truth and that light. And so then, you become living guideposts to those who flounder in the material world; those who are lost and confused; those who are weary and downhearted. As you grow in your relationship with the living Spirit of the Master, who was Jesus of Nazareth, who is Michael of Nebadon – as you love Him, as you adore Him, as you worship Him, so also do you partake of Him. "I am the bread and the life," said He.

As you partake of His truth, then you become a well of living spiritual water, you become a distributor of the bread of life, you become a co-worker in the fields with Christ. And there is nothing higher a person can aspire to – no higher calling; no greater work. It is not required, as liberated sons and daughters of God, that you should be tethered and tied to what was known as religious law. Rather, the joy and righteousness that comes in close association with Him naturally breeds righteousness of behavior, naturally gives right-thinking and honest-intention.

This is not to say that you will not make errors, that you will not stumble, that you will not even become blinded by the light of truth from time to time, forgetting your way – no. But it should give you confidence in yourselves; confidence in your relationship to God – that you can know His will for you; that you can lead a righteous and spiritual life; that it is possible as you are, wherever you are, whatever you are doing.

The Master came to sweep away the old requirements that produced a dead righteousness, an unthinking adherence to rules. He requires instead, that each act, each thought, each intention, be free. And in that freedom, to find truth.

Humankind ever struggles with this unpredictable creative force called 'free will' – for it is employed in the service of good. But also it is employed in the service of selfishness, in the service of personal gain and selfish aggrandizement; it is employed in the oppression of others. But mankind makes a huge error when it sees freedom itself as evil. Without freedom, there is no righteousness. Without freedom, there is no faith.

And so, my children, cease to limit yourselves by guilt, and through the many and various ways you have to punish, limit, and chain yourselves to the thoughts of others. Freely create your lives in partnership with the same Jesus of Nazareth who told stories to little children, who comforted and healed the sick – who ministered to the poor and oppressed, as well as the wealthy and self-satisfied.

Freely create your lives, from this point on, in free creativity, in free and true righteousness. Let your love of Him spill out into the world without regard to where it should be channeled. Let your love for Him color all your associations. Let your love for Him rearrange your thinking. Clean out the old and let the fresh air of freedom, enter.

Live your lives free of fear, for fear is the great oppressor. Fear is the great fraud. Fear is the great holder of potential evil. Live each day to its fullest – not carrying more, nor less, than you are able. Fulfill your duties to other human beings to the best of your abilities and rest in peace when evening comes as you settle back into His arms in restful sleep – the sleep of the just, the sleep of the pure at heart.

There is nothing further to add this evening. Rather, my love and my prayers go with you each. That is all. Farewell.

Nature of Living Truth. To Partake of the Master's Living Truth We Become a Well Of Living Water

Ham, Nashville, TN Group

09-22-2003

Back

[Editor's note: We have not yet found the transcript of Abraham's Woods Cross, Utah group for September 21, 2003. Therefore, this entry is a lesson from our Woods Cross original group-teacher, Ham – given to his Nashville, Tennessee group on this day, September 22, 2003]

[From the group transcriber: We began our session but forgot to run the tape, so Ham picked up right after announcing that tonight's lesson would be about The Nature of Living Truth.]

HAM: All right, we can begin again. The subject is Truth. And our first illustration was 'truth as living water;' truth as the spiritual water that quenches the thirst of the searching, the parched soul.

The human being who searches and searches until that thirst is relieved – that questing is at an end of finding. Truth is more than facts; more than the correlation of facts; more than the mind itself. Truth is the living Spirit of God. And the representative of truth, the experience of truth in your world, is the experience of the Master himself. He does not represent truth, He is truth. His Spirit is 'living truth.'

All these things are part of your growing awareness – part of your orientation toward truth and away from falsehood. Many things in life can be thought of as 'temporal truths' – that is, truth that is upheld over a period of time. The olden Greek philosophy, which colored the worldview of the West over many centuries, was kind of a 'temporal truth:' "The Earth exists as a flat plain. Above the Earth are the heavens, the realm of perfection. Below the Earth is the realm of eternal corruption and hell and damnation, and man existed in this realm of choice on Earth wherein he was a participant in his eternal future.” Some of this world-view holds true; other parts do not.

And so, most of your thinking is conditioned by other assumptions that can be considered temporal truths – the static level of basic-reality-perception. But spiritual truth is ‘growing truth,’ ‘expanding truth,’ ‘liberating truth.’ Spiritual truth can penetrate beyond the commonly-accepted realms of thought. Spiritual truths combined with faith sees a world in which God's relationship with man is ever deepening and expanding and elevating. The tender relationship of ‘Father to child’ that the Master expressed and embodied in His life, revealed ‘expanded truth;’ and, expanded relationship of man to God, and God to man. Through faith, you now feel God as your closest friend, your confidant, your lover – closer than anything imagined previously.

The Master himself – “the truth, the way, and the life” – opened up another link to God through His personal friendship, His spiritual closeness, His constant and unwavering upholding of truth. He is like a magnet, and your souls are ever oriented toward that magnet, that drawing power of truth. He is the living water. He is the refreshment that once you have partaken, you shall never thirst again because His truth is ever renewed within you.

For the true believer, there is no waiting for the Masters’ return, for He exists here now, within each heart, a friend to each soul. He is an ever-present help in times of uncertainty, travail, and the ever-changing fortunes and un-constancy of life. It is said that there is nothing you can ultimately depend upon more than this mighty Protector, this wonderful Friend. Life itself is ephemeral compared to the rock of His eternal nature. Riches take up wings and fly away. People come and go; are born and die. All the knowledge of humankind is but a grain of sand upon an eternal shoreline.

As you increasingly become more devoted to His word and appreciative of His value, then do you absorb that value and that truth and that light. And so then, you become living guideposts to those who flounder in the material world; those who are lost and confused; those who are weary and downhearted. As you grow in your relationship with the living Spirit of the Master, who was Jesus of Nazareth, who is Michael of Nebadon – as you love Him, as you adore Him, as you worship Him, so also do you partake of Him. “I am the bread and the life,” said He.

As you partake of His truth, then you become a well of living spiritual water, you become a distributor of the bread of life, you become a co-worker in the fields with Christ. And there is nothing higher a person can aspire to – no higher calling; no greater work. It is not required, as liberated sons and daughters of God, that you should be tethered and tied to what was known as religious law. Rather, the joy and righteousness that comes in close association with Him naturally breeds righteousness of behavior, naturally gives right-thinking and honest-intention.

This is not to say that you will not make errors, that you will not stumble, that you will not even become blinded by the light of truth from time to time, forgetting your way – no. But it should give you confidence in yourselves; confidence in your relationship to God – that you can know His will for you; that you can lead a righteous and spiritual life; that it is possible as you are, wherever you are, whatever you are doing.

The Master came to sweep away the old requirements that produced a dead righteousness, an unthinking adherence to rules. He requires instead, that each act, each thought, each intention, be free. And in that freedom, to find truth.

Humankind ever struggles with this unpredictable creative force called 'free will' - for it is employed in the service of good. But also it is employed in the service of selfishness, in the service of personal gain and selfish aggrandizement; it is employed in the oppression of others. But mankind makes a huge error when it sees freedom itself as evil. Without freedom, there is no righteousness. Without freedom, there is no faith.

And so, my children, cease to limit yourselves by guilt, and through the many and various ways you have to punish, limit, and chain yourselves to the thoughts of others. Freely create your lives in partnership with the same Jesus of Nazareth who told stories to little children, who comforted and healed the sick - who ministered to the poor and oppressed, as well as the wealthy and self-satisfied.

Freely create your lives, from this point on, in free creativity, in free and true righteousness. Let your love of Him spill out into the world without regard to where it should be channeled. Let your love for Him color all your associations. Let your love for Him rearrange your thinking. Clean out the old and let the fresh air of freedom, enter.

Live your lives free of fear, for fear is the great oppressor. Fear is the great fraud. Fear is the great holder of potential evil. Live each day to its fullest - not carrying more, nor less, than you are able. Fulfill your duties to other human beings to the best of your abilities and rest in peace when evening comes as you settle back into His arms in restful sleep - the sleep of the just, the sleep of the pure at heart.

There is nothing further to add this evening. Rather, my love and my prayers go with you each. That is all. Farewell.

Set Father At The Head Of The Table | Drama Of Today Is Our Lesson Of Tomorrow
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-29-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. As I view your discussion, I am becoming with more understanding on the morontial brotherhood. Father's kingdom is vast, is ever growing, ever-evolving, and we as individuals are instrumental in making that happen.

Within each family there are conflicts, there are disagreements, and many times there is just misunderstanding. Those families that set Father - our First Source and Center - as their sovereign, seem to experience less turmoil and enjoy more harmony.

First and foremost, children, pull out that chair that is placed at the head of your family table and invite Father to sit with you. He is why we are here. He is our goal. He is our desire. He is why we continue to strive. Our Paradise Father is the Father of all, our One God, our First Source and Center, our reason to love and serve. Without Him, what do we have?

It is the desire of all people to be loved and accepted. Michael strives during this Correcting Time to assure each and every individual that they are loved 'because they are.' Each individual has been given gifts and has set before them a plan and purpose.

We all will travel different paths, and there is no doubt that we will need to deal with one another. This is part of spiritual advancement. Some can be 'book smart,' yes - some can have a well of information within. And yet, until you can put into practice what you know to be right, much is wasted.

You are citizens in a vast kingdom of believers, and your lesson at this time is concerning the morontial brotherhood on Earth. We are to learn those lessons that will prepare us for the tremendous task of meeting, knowing, and understanding many diverse universe citizens. I am here because you want me here. I am honored to serve you, children. I have come to know and love you with a deep and abiding affection.

I am also honored and touched that Michael would set me in a place where I am made to learn so much. Each day I am becoming more, becoming better, for what Father teaches me. You participants of Michael's cause - this Urantian Correcting Time and Teaching Mission - have been given a gift, or as the Master had stated in the parable, "a talent." Those that have committed to making more of their talent shall be given more.

Do you see, what you do with what Father gives you, is key. Michael has entrusted us with a wonderful task that is enlightening and joyful. This task is not a burden, not a boost for self, but a tool to use in the upliftment of mankind on Earth. Those that invest their talent for the sake of self-aggrandizement shall be given no more. Those that invest for the benefit of the whole shall continue to carry on.

Life's lessons regarding the ego will always be apparent, yes, and many times causing humor. Father knows this; He condemns you not; He only asks that you keep an open mind and allow for His guidance. Whether you choose to follow that guidance is strictly up to you. I can say with experienced surety - those who set Father as their sovereign will be more balanced, more apt to receiving His aid. Bury not your talent in the desires of the ego - there is no reward there; there are no meanings; there is no growth.

Know that this Correcting Time event goes far beyond your personal lives. Per the instructions of our Master - our Brother/Father/Creator, we are to 'move mountains;' we are to 'invest our talent;' and we are to 'give what we have been taught.' It is very simple. It is not to cause angst or to inconvenience you, no! It is to bring enlightenment, harmony, balance, and joy to Urantia's inhabitants. Should you choose not to participate, this is completely acceptable. But as for me, my fellow Teachers, and those mortals willing, we have set Father at the head of our table and it is our supreme privilege to serve Him.

This week, I ask you each to take time to think about what you really want. What do you want as far as your spiritual path goes? What do you want from living a mortal life? What do you want as far as your relationships go? Let us refocus our direction with the question: 'What do I want?'

Know, children, that I want for your happiness, your fulfillment, your spiritual, mental, and physical comfort. Have not worry. Know that the drama of today is the lesson for tomorrow. No questions. Know that I am here and regard you as my own. Until next time, shalom.

What Do We Want From This Mortal Experience | Citizens of the Mansion Worlds | Boundaries

Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-06-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. You have step by step reached a plateau of the morontial brotherhood climb, and I must say, the view from here is beautiful. I am in awe of your willingness to overcome social stumbling blocks and turn your difficulties into steppingstones toward higher understanding. Well done. You each have acknowledged your difficulties in relating with your fellows, and also have brought forth solutions.

Your presence here this evening speaks volumes concerning last week's question: 'What do you want?' It is obvious that first and foremost you desire a Father-led life. You each have expressed your want for peace. You have made good use of your time this past week and have seen the fruits of your labor. Our harvest is before us in sharing the joy and reality of one another's company. Father gave you one another so that life may be abundant in many aspects, positive and negative, for both bring understanding and new growth.

Again, I put forth the same question for you to ponder during this upcoming week: What do you want from this mortal experience? It is clear to us that you are recommitted to moving forward with the Correcting Time. Now make this question more personal: What do you want concerning your personal relationships with Father and your fellows? What do you hope to attain in a spiritual sense? What do you want as far as your life work? What do you want concerning home and family life?

The answers to these questions are important, for they clear the fog of indecision. They open the path that you are to travel. Being clear with your decisions creates inner peace and an opening to have concentrated focus; and, to move toward the set goals. Father knows the desires of your heart. He understands your needs. He thrives in His children's joy. You are each entirely capable of Spirit reception and knowing that the Father's will for you is in full view.

Regarding the lesson on the morontial brotherhood, let us review how those citizens on the Mansion Worlds move about with such social success.

I am EMULAN. Greetings. I have been honored to participate in this evening's lesson. As most of you know, I am simply enthralled with the inner workings of the mind, be it mortal, morontial, etc. After much study, I have learned a few basic steps in which those morontial citizens take to achieving social success.

On those correction worlds, everyone is in the full knowledge that they are indeed a child of the one and only Paradise Father. Morontia citizens consider one another a child of God; and know with this that each child is bestowed certain rights. The first of those rights is free will. Each citizen respects the other's free will - the right to make personal decisions, the right to grow as they will. There is not set time-limits. There is not criticizing one another for slowness in understanding. There is only allowance for growth.

On the Mansion Worlds, it is taught that love is supreme. Love is healing and brings forth the best in universe citizens. There are still disagreements, yes, but love reigns supreme; and each is with respect of one another's status as a child of God. Love for one another allows for one another's growth as it will naturally happen. Father is no respecter of persons, yes, but respect is a natural outworking of love for your fellows - meaning, the individual child of God has rights and there are boundaries that must be respected.

Citizens on the worlds of correction (Mansion Worlds) do not infringe upon the rights of their fellows. Each one is entitled to their personal beliefs and have not fear of rejection or criticism. The minds of mortals feel safer when personal-set boundaries are respected. Boundaries - meaning the right to exercise personal beliefs and grow as they may. Every mortal should have some personally-set boundaries - meaning that they feel worthy of expressing themselves how they will.

Having boundaries is not to put up walls to keep your fellows out, no, but to have self-respect - believing that you are well deserving of maintaining your status as Father's child. As fellows in the morontia brotherhood, social success begins with respecting your fellows' personal boundaries, allowing them to grow as they will. You can be of assistance when you can, yes, but always allow room for growth, room for thought, and room for the flow of positive energy.

What are your personal set boundaries? What is your level of understanding your status as Father's child? How comfortable do you feel in self-expression? What is the measure of fear in being your true self? We will have further discussion on this next week. I give you back to Abraham. Farewell.

ABRAHAM: Wonderful, Emulan, very thought-provoking. I am always with such comfort when a brother is at hand to work toward the common goal, the common good. Thank you, my brother.

Ponder upon this lesson, my children. Next time we will take questions. Know that I am with supreme love for you each. Above all else, I am with exceeding gratitude for your welcoming hearts. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Spiritual Counselors vs Mortal Counselors | Not One Is Above Another In Father's Eyes

Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-13-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. At times in our busy lives, it feels so comforting to simply lie back into the Father's arms. Every day in this mortal life you are made to face fears and uncertainties, which cause you insecurity and self-doubt. How wonderful it is to know we have Father to help us sort these things out.

I thank you for allowing me to be here with you each week. You know not the many that our lessons reach. We are with gratitude to you in aiding us in our quest for correction.

As you experience life you are able to attain skills that help you advance in mortal and divine ways. As mortals, you go through many stages of mind transformation. Those that can be strong enough to be honest with themselves will probably experience a bit more mental and emotional pain than they would like, but the value gained therein is priceless. Again, I bring you, Emulan.

Greetings, friends. I am always filled with gratitude when we can spend time together. It is such an honor to serve with my brother and mentor, Abraham. We will again be having further discussion concerning the morontial brotherhood.

Abraham is your Teacher – the one you are familiar with. This group is considered his assignment. He has invited me to speak on a number of occasions. From our standpoint, he has not fear of becoming less loved; he is not insecure about my particular style of teaching. Abraham, in fact, shows himself to be a willing student when I am teaching. That is the morontial brotherhood, my friends.

In mine and Abraham's partnership, there is no threat, no misunderstanding of boundaries. We are, in fact, playing for the same team. Our status as Father's children is secure, and never are we with the impression that we must uphold a certain performance to keep our status. There is no one to impress here. There is no competition. There is, however, mutual respect for one another's status as Father's children.

Mortal life is different, however, and there does seem to be a growing feeling among Urantian inhabitants that they must uphold a certain persona to be well-liked and respected. Many, in fact, are slaves to this feeling. Many seem to feel indebted to keeping up their 'song-and-dance,' to the point that they lose themselves. I am grateful for having experienced the mortal existence, yes; and I am extremely grateful for being beyond that 'need' to feel liked, and respected.

I am with comfort among my fellows here. There is an abundance of good-natured personalities – each one knowing they are valued and loved beyond measure. There is no need to be constantly outpouring energy to gain attention or acceptance. There is such serenity in knowing each of us are so different, and that this is how it is supposed to be. There is harmony in our understanding of our differences.

Every day you have encounters with your fellows who have not spiritual fulfillment; they reach for external acceptance and gratification. There seems to be a great deal of mental and emotional ailments wherein many turn to mortal counselors instead of spiritual ones. Granted, you have your internal Father Fragment, you have us, your Teachers, and you have unseen Spirit counselors – but you each also have one another.

In this Correcting Time, you are not only participating in 'self-correction,' but also aiding your brothers and sisters that you chance to meet to feel secure in who they really are. It is important, then, for you to feel secure in your true being. It is important that you find value in yourselves as universe children. Believe me, this 'inner-knowing' will show on your face; it will become a part of you and your ability to aid in this Correcting Time. Those that feel their Father's affection will have not need to keep up with the old song-and dance.

Think of a mortal in whom you well respect – perhaps it is someone well known or highly intelligent, maybe someone quite wealthy. Imagine you are side by side with this individual. What do you think Father sees when He gazes upon the two of you? He does not look upon one child with more favor, no! He looks at you as if you both are His equal children and one another's siblings. He sees you as equal and would have you treat each other as equal brothers/sisters.

The kingdom of God is boundless, and indeed, eternal. Being open to the morontial brotherhood will show you proof of that. Again, I am grateful to be with you and at my brother's side. I return you to Abraham.

ABRAHAM: I am with gratitude to you as well, Emulan. Your personality is a light for me to travel by. Again, a wonderful lesson. As a Teacher and a friend of Emulan, I am made to learn more each time we are together. I enjoy his personality-essence that makes him uniquely him, and yet, a part of all of us to learn from.

This week, let us review how much energy we put into our everyday existence that gives us attention from the world. Where can our energy be better spent? Looking at the overall universe, do you feel at home? Take a few moments this week to find time for quiet and to reinforce your relationship with the Source of all real love. I can take a few questions.

MARSHALL: Abraham, can you give me some guidance that will assist me in reaching into those unknown areas of attainment I am now striving for?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I am perceiving some imbalance, as far as overall living goes. Every day one should strive to have balance in work, play, study, and prayer. There are always obligations to meet – and with the demands of life, we somehow can become off-centered. Your spiritual life would be a bit more enhanced by becoming more balanced in mortal living. Work, play, and family-time are grounding. Marshall, my son, you would do well to begin 'living out' those spiritual skills you have learned. The understanding to reaching deeper spiritual arenas will present themselves as you become ready. Is this answering? (Marshall: Thank you.)

MIRIAM: I have a 'time' question – it's about morontial versus the reality of aging. Time for me is the weirdest thing. It is like I am always in the 'now,' and the 'now' can be over in a second. Time just zips by! Is this just because I am getting older? Is it because of the circuits, morontia stuff? Do you know what I mean?

ABRAHAM: I believe I am in understanding. You are now with some years of experience, and that has brought you to appreciate the value in life. While many things are seemingly familiar and 'old territory,' there are new aspects of mortal living that are really only discovered through the understanding within the mind. Also, you are, as are many here, with 'Thought Controller' stage of progression instead of 'Thought Adjuster.' Thought Adjuster is where one is more subject to the will of 'the mortal,' whereas those with Thought Controllers, they are with mortals who are more subject to 'the divine' will. Many who are aging, meet it with dread and perceive life as if it is ending - when in reality it is perhaps the greatest time of discovery in all of mortal life. To focus on doing the will of Father does prepare you for gaining that step to attaining Thought Controller status - you can look it up in your Urantia Papers.

With that, I will take my leave. Know that each one of you is indeed valued and loved. I look forward to meeting with you again. Until next time, shalom.

Whom Do We Serve | Morontial Examples

Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 10-20-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying your common-sense discussion this evening. You are relaxed and with spiritual comfort. That speaks volumes concerning your intentions. It is well understood that you have chosen to be about the Father's business come what may.

The Master Himself could have taken a very different path than He did - He could have gone with the popular vote; He could have risen to great heights in the eyes of the masses; His journey could have been a bit more smooth. The Master however, had not worry for Himself, for He had enduring trust in Father. It was Father who lit the Master's path, who endowed Him with spiritual strength, who kept Him focused on the goal ahead.

The Master knew whom He served. It was not Himself nor the wish-fulfillment of the people, no. He served the Source of all truth, beauty, and goodness. The Master could have very well pleased His apostles more by giving into their desires or thoughts of personal grandeur. If the Master put His mortal fellows as His sovereign, then indeed would He cater to their wishes. If the Master defined His being by their thoughts of Him, then of course His life in the flesh would have been easier to live.

If Jesus had lived to serve His ego, then He would place importance upon the opinions of His fellows concerning His character. Jesus had absolutely no concern for others' opinions of His personal being. He had a healthy understanding of self-forgetfulness. The kingdom of God was not about 'Him,' no! the kingdom was about 'the whole;' it was about a loving Father and His many children who He loved deeply.

The Master defined His being by the closeness of His relationship to His Father in heaven. He well knew He was indeed an extension of the Source of all there is. That was His passion! That was His zest for life. Do you see His freedom? He was free to be who He truly was without interference from the ego. He knew well He was 'not of this world' and He had complete freedom to be about the Father's business.

The morontial citizens live to advance toward the Father. They know well not to live out their lives according to their fellow's opinions of them. They are committed to Father as their sovereign. They are entirely free to learn and grow as they will. They are not held back by popular vote. They are not indebted to their fellows to define their personal being. Father is their goal, and citizens within the morontial brotherhood know that the ego does not serve in accomplishing this goal.

My friends, you are each valued universe citizens. You have received the gift of mind and personality. You are each unique and loved simply because you are. To be indebted to others' opinions of you is to live accordingly to what they think. You know who you are. To be burdened by the definitions the 'world' places upon you is to lose freedom. Where in this world are you truly free? Is it not true that in freedom you are at your best?

This week, find time to journal your thoughts on what and/or whom you serve. Who controls your levels of freedom? No questions this evening – perhaps next. Know that I am with ever-expanding love for you each. I take great joy in your company and willingness to be about the Father's business. Until next time, shalom.

Being Transformed by the Spirit of Truth | Judas versus Thomas, Examples
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-27-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying the serene atmosphere here this evening. I find the minds of mortals are quite intriguing this time of year, especially where the Fall season is so apparent. Many look to the season as a period of rest after an active summer. Many enjoy the changes in surroundings and are relieved of their summer duties. On the other hand, some greet the season with a foreboding attitude in that the cold will bring unforeseen events.

Some see the Fall season as clearing out the old to make room for the new. Some see this time of year as a time of things dying or stopping. Each person in this room can look at this particular season and have differing views. You each are unique in personality and character. You each have been brought up into the world differently. There are many factors that would color your view. How freeing it is to belong to a family that focuses on Father as their sovereign. He definitely puts priorities in order.

In our morontial brotherhood, we each see things with different eyes – and yet, there is always room for love. Truth-perception varies from person to person, and spirituality is indeed a living revelation. You Mission participants are, so to speak, a common voice for Michael's cause. The best that you can do is to live a life of good example. All your ministry, your words of truth, have no meaning unless it is upheld by action.

Let us look at the life of that well-known apostle, Judas: Judas' first misconception was that there were places of honor next to the Master, and that 'certainly was he well deserving of that place.' He was not open to the fact that his brethren had differing views. His judgmental attitude saw them as weak and/or ignorant. He did not allow room for his own growth or the growth of his fellows. Judas had a narrow vision because of his all-consuming self-love. Said Jesus: "Love one another as I have loved you." He also said: "Love yourself as you love your fellows."

Judas placed value in his personal success; he saw not the good of the whole but only that measure of personal success – meaning that if his fellows were at an inferior place then certainly did that set him on a superior high. He saw not himself as a 'part of' his fellows or even a part of the kingdom of God – he was raised as such, to believe that he was somehow more important than others; and certainly did this belief bring him devastation.

Some of Judas' fellow apostles at some point shared that same superior belief, but time with the Master allowed them transformation in mind and heart. Even the apostle Thomas had once held beliefs that the Master and His cause was indeed too good to be true. Thomas was given no visual proof of the kingdom to come, no. He was made to put effort into seeing with the eyes of faith. Through the Master, Thomas learned to set Father as his sovereign, his First Source and Center – and from there, transformation began.

Each one of you Mission participants do allow the Master and His Spirit of Truth to have influence in your lives. The Spirit of Truth seeks to unite, it seeks to unify. The ego seeks to separate and set as superior. The morontial brotherhood finds its greatest success with those beings who allow themselves to be transformed by the Spirit.

Judas sought to exert his power. He sought to be set apart. He sought no transformation from those hours spent with Jesus. Thomas dared to take a leap of faith, no matter what it cost him and no matter how it made him appear to others. While Thomas was stubborn in mind, he made genuine effort to be open to change, and changed he was.

This week, in your own personal environment, look at the varying personalities you interact with; there are some that are so different and yet they thirst for truth, just as you do. Think about being transformed by the Spirit of Truth. What changes have been made and what changes would you like to see happen in your lives? Again, make effort each day to confirm your commitment to set Father as your sovereign. How much of your good intentions are backed by action? Take some time to have some study on the lives of the Master's apostles. A few questions?

SIMON: Yes, Abraham, I have been so grateful for the opportunity to call out to Mother and have Her take my apprehension away... [inaudible.] Yet, I still have that apprehension coming back at times. Can you speak about the reoccurring apprehension?

ABRAHAM: I am understanding this apprehension to be the result of some guilt. You are somewhat feeling that you are not living up to your ideals. Your conscious feelings of guilt are leading you to believe you deserve some discipline, and this promotes the apprehension. Take time to journal your true desires for this life, and lay out a plan to follow to attain your goals. Leave room for Father's guidance and transformation by the Spirit of Truth. Have not worry, Simon. You are learning just as everyone is. Know that your true self is burdened by life's pressures and does seek to be free. Have not worry.

ELLEN: I'll ask one. I have a hard time with prayer versus accepting Father's will. My understanding of prayer - I struggle with it. Do you have any comment about that?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. When we view the Master's life, He was in ever constant communication with Father. You can call this a form of prayer. Prayer is nothing more than communication. Always was the Master's prayer 'to be accepting of the divine will.' Prayer is helpful to the mortal in that it helps to reconcile the mortal mind to the divine influence. The Master had mortal wants and desires, and if He thought something to be in alignment with the divine will - meaning that it was good for the whole - then certainly would He ask it of His Father. Mostly, however, He realized His communication drew Him near the Father and to the understanding of the Father's ways. Our Master used prayer to reconcile His mortal mind to the divine. Is this answering? (Ellen: Yes. Thank you.)

With that, I will take my leave. Know that I am with continuing love for you each and I look forward to our morontial brotherhood association. Until next time, shalom. [Some personal questions/answers were omitted.]

Speak Your Honesty | Most People Want To Know The Truth Of Your Thoughts

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-03-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am with anticipation in meeting with you each week for your life discoveries are also insightful for me. I am with a pondering mind this evening. I enjoy taking time to think, to learn, to be receptive.

There are specific areas of the brain that are designed to be like an antenna, so to speak. The more fit you are in body and mind - the more receptive you become. Busyness in everyday-living does bog down the mind with trivialities. Quiet moments every day help to clear a way for reception from those on high.

Anxiety from daily living takes its toll on body and mind. Many mortals choose to deal with this by not dealing with it at all. Some can color over an ugly picture and really believe it is beautiful. This is damaging to the psyche and is stifling growth. We find that those who dare to communicate their thoughts honestly have improved health in body and mind.

When we visit back into the life of Judas, we can see how he harbored many negative thoughts. Had he communicated honestly with his brethren and the Master he might have been opened to new possibilities. Most of the apostles had their set hopes and beliefs, but through the love for their Master they were opened to His thoughts, His words, and His deeds.

It is true that most people would appreciate knowing the truth of your thoughts. There are ways to speak your truth so as not to invoke negativity or perhaps offense. First of all, when dealing with your fellows you remember the fact that you are all a part of the same family, not one is more important than another.

Take a moment to look within your heart and mind – most likely they will say different things. When pondering some circumstance you can view it with your emotions, yes, but balance it with your intellect. To take a moment before you speak integrates the heart and mind to find a manner in which to speak forth your truth as accurately and helpful as possible.

Many times your words will have no effect on another, but at the very least you have released your thoughts that can begin as planted seeds, and you are not pent up with emotion or, that barrage of thoughts of 'I should have.' Much of mortal anxiety comes from the feelings of being misunderstood and feeling separate. To speak with honesty is to allow others to know who you truly are, and as the Master always said: "The more you understand your fellows, the more you love them."

In facing reality, we each can envision this world with its underlying river of negativity. And those who are participating in the Correcting Time are not adding to this river, no! but beginning a stream of their own that is flowing with truth, beauty, and goodness. To withhold thoughts or words that would help bring healing if spoken is, in itself, somewhat of a lie – it is damaging to you and to those you interact with. Speaking the truth need not come from a place of ego, no, it should be intelligent and with love. When you are honest with others they have trust in you, and they will surely seek you out for assistance.

If we could take a moment to look at the life of Peter: He was certainly an enthusiastic character; and yet, he was somewhat of a people-pleaser. He was an eloquent speaker, and this was certainly part of his charm. While he had the best of intentions, his hurried actions usually brought him added difficulties. As Peter aged, he was maturing in spirit. He became less rash with actions and more thoughtful with his words. Always was his saving grace 'his love for the Master.' Many times he was foolish, yes – and yet, his willingness to be open brought him transformation.

This week, think about those thoughts that should be brought into reality through your vocabulary. How much is pent up and damaging to you in body and mind? How open are you to receiving other's truth? Study on the Master's technique of honesty – many times His sayings were apparently harsh, yes – and yet, it was the only way in which He could get His message across.

No questions this evening. Know that I am always happy to meet with you in your moments of quiet. Know that my love for you is deep and ever abiding. Until next time, shalom.

The Progress Of The Correcting Time | How Have You Put the Teaching Mission Into Action

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-10-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. From week to week I am always amazed by your willingness to be open to receiving. You are each made to see with the eyes of the spirit, and your willingness to be open enables you to see more. Your courage to step out in faith is commendable. I am honored to be your friend.

This evening I am exceedingly grateful, for the fruits of our labor are beginning to blossom. We are reaching a new increase in the number of believers and the mind circuits are fully operational.

When we first learned of Michael's plan for correction, we each had our doubts concerning the people of this world's receptivity. We fully believed in Michael and His perfect plan and yet, many of us had mortal experience and knew that the gift of free will was somewhat of a limitation.

Michael did show us that 'free will' was also a wonderful liberator - meaning that as evolution progressed, man was free to revise the spiritual traditions or even break away for new up-to-date living revelation. Needless to say, Michael and His plan has exceeded our expectations. We are this evening with a grateful heart and a new abiding hope - for Michael has called and many of you have answered.

Where are we now, in your eyes, concerning the progress of the Correcting Time? How effective has the Teaching Mission been in your personal lives? How have you put the Correcting Time into action? I realize that in getting down to the meat of our purpose we have to cut through the fat. You, Mission participants, have done a great deal to free yourselves from that mystical-thinking that stands in your way of the realness. These years together have been an exercise in forging through personal wish-fulfillment, to spiritual reality.

In the days of old when our Master wore the flesh, He was never fully able to free the people's minds from their inner heartfelt desire for a coming Messiah. He did a great deal to bring spirituality into everyday living - and yet, many still could not fully comprehend that the kingdom of heaven is about living a mortal life, divinely. Many could not grasp the fact that this mortal life is a gift, a prerequisite to the morontia life.

Many mortals spend their lives in a state of 'wanting,' while what they actually have - their daily mortal experience and their relationships with one another, is of so much more value. My children, you each have been given a gift - a pen, so to speak, to help write a chapter in the story of the Supreme Being. You should feel that joy of one who has been freed. Father is who you serve, and the opinions of others have no affect on you.

The traditions handed down over the generations are real to those who are not courageous enough to be free-thinkers - but you, my friends, are with the priceless gift of living revelation, and are in understanding of a personal relationship with our First Source and Center. This week, take time to ponder over those menial things which still bind you. Take time to think about the importance of a mind that is free from the fetters of religion, culture, and society. A few questions?

DIANNA: Abraham, I have been working on developing a closer relationship with Jesus, or as we've come to know Him through these lessons and the Urantia Book - Michael. It seems like through my religious training these days that Michael is easier to build a relationship with because of all the connotations the world and tradition has taught about 'Jesus.' I have been asking for assistance and wonder if you have any words on that for me?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. This is the beauty of our spiritual freedom. Many can relate to the human Jesus; the history shows Him to be just like those who study about Him, for He was a common man and yet, He was able to live a perfected life. He did a great deal to enhance the minds of that day and age. The records written about His life are acceptable for those who can handle very little. Over-all, the Jesus that we know is seemingly closer to the common man. Michael, on the other hand, is greatly related to spirit; to be more specific, the Spirit of Truth – which is a new and updated personality. You are entirely welcome to go with what feels most comfortable to you at this time in your spiritual growth. Jesus set a beautiful example of living the mortal life; and Michael is even now a live connection. Either way, you can learn from His life, His example. As you progress in the spirit you will refer fondly to the stories of the life of Jesus, and learn therefrom; but for immediate communication, the Spirit of Truth is ever up-to-date and a living confidant. Is this helping?

DIANNA: So if I am understanding you correctly, the only living circuit connection we have is to the Spirit of Truth, and not to Jesus? Is there no energy in this relationship to Jesus except for just as a historical reference?

ABRAHAM: In the way of learning from His life as an example – yes; and yet on the other hand, you can feel comforted by the fact that Jesus and Michael, in all reality, are one and the same. Who He was then, in part, is who He is now. To understand His life long ago is to learn of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. To learn of who He is now is to open to a great deal of spiritual possibilities – new and living revelation. Yes, you are correct. Good question, Dianna. Another question.

MIRIAM: Well Abraham, it seems like you are really happy tonight and it's great. I am just wondering, is your perspective of feeling full of hope based on all the light around Urantia coming up in general? or, is it because of the seeds of the Teaching Mission we are planting.

ABRAHAM: Yes, more along the lines of the light coming from the planet as a result of opened minds and hearts. The masses are swaying toward light even though you much of the time cannot see it. I do like to share that good news which encourages participants to continue in their efforts to expand the kingdom and share the good news of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. (Miriam: Are you celebrating somewhat amongst yourselves?) Abraham: Somewhat, yes. Good choice of words.

[TR is asking a question for Luke who has moved to Washington state. (inaudible.)]

ABRAHAM: Luke, you are quite able to receive our words. You do have Teachers available to you, but no one as of yet specifically assigned. As you work with them you will be best suited to one in who you relate best with. You do well, my son. I know that you are feeling like a fish out of water. Have not worry, there are other fishes for comfort all around you. Continue in practicing your transmission-receiving abilities. Know that I am still close to you, and you are my friend and student. Carry on. One more question?

CALVIN: Abraham, some think that the Mission is stagnant and not getting out there very far into the world. I am glad to hear your upbeat perspective of the Mission and Correcting Time. I see it as a worldwide momentum and that it is getting better, so it is good to hear your report. I have a hundred things I would like to ask, but would you have anything to say to be helpful for me in my training? It has been a while since I have talked to you.

ABRAHAM: Calvin, my son, you are indeed softening around the edges. Your maturing spirit leads me to say you are indeed a delight. I enjoy your audacity to go forward with what you believe to be correct. Know you have been given tasks, and for the most part are living up to completing them. You do well. Have not worry for the days ahead. You know quite well that Father is in all the details. Trust yourself. Trust your inner Father. Continue to move forward and enjoy your life. You are indeed a light to many. Be not overcome with worry or fear. Know that you are quite capable of spirit reception. Use it wisely. You do well.

With that, I shall take my leave. Know that in all that you do, Father is at hand and you are each capable of hearing Him. Know that my love is ever growing for you each. Until next time, shalom.

World Change Begins With Personal Change

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-17-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying your discussion and fellowship this evening. You are each with a positive outlook and yet you stay put on the path of reality. To view mortal situations in a positive light is always leading to positive solutions and yet, there is a fine line where one would possibly overlook reality.

You can view the problems of the world and choose to put them out of your mind – reasoning “they do not directly involve me.” Also, you can worry about these problems and feel quite hopeless. Or, you can be comforted by the fact that Michael and His Correcting Time assistants are shedding light upon these dark areas for all to view and have understanding.

The healing of the whole begins with an individual. We will be moving from the concepts of the morontial brotherhood and looking more at individual healing and wholeness. Values form from what the mind can comprehend. Certainly, a child cannot understand all an adult can. Each individuals' perception is colored by their past experiences. Their culture and society, and feelings of being at home and feeling accepted, all play a role in one's perception and outlook.

Every day, many people are committed to living a life that they think others will approve of; they are limited in their choices in living out the mortal life. In this limitation, their resentment rises and they are excusing themselves from taking responsibility for their life circumstances.

When one dishonestly views their own life and does not take responsibility for it, it is keeping them on a path of non-reality; of course this is successful in serving the ego, but for you who choose the path of truth, beauty, and goodness, this is simply not acceptable. Any mortal with desire to follow a divine path must embrace the truth of reality, and yet leave room in the mind for evolution or change.

One way to continue to serve the ego is to excuse yourself from responsibility for your life. One can blame their parents, spouse, employer, and even their church, for the misfortune in their life; this keeps one's mind in a state of being a victim, being helpless, without options, without personal power. As you mature in the spirit you are seeing with the eyes of the spirit. And while the cup of truth is bitter from time to time you are willing to drink it, for new growth results.

Life is what it is - your interpretation of it however, is everything. Your willingness to be open or to be taught determines your levels in spiritual advancement. I would say that a balanced perspective in experience will enable you to withdraw the values and meanings therefrom. Those who dare to be transformed by the Spirit will find their fear of truth greatly decreased. A Spirit-driven mortal embraces truth as it is, in whatever form it comes, and enthusiastically looks for the meanings and values therein.

This week, take time to review your life experience and present to Father what values you have found. Be aware of your willingness to embrace truth, no matter how harsh that may be. But also know that each bit of truth is completing a part of the puzzle that is your eternal life. Think about those moments in your experience where you have felt wronged or cheated; and, if you had let it build you in spirit, or to tear down your soul.

Think about your levels of trust in our First Source and Center. Really, with one who is so all-encompassing of love, knowledge and power, how can we be afraid of anything? Take time to find a quiet moment with Father each day and learn the art of reconciling the mortal mind to the divine.

No questions this evening. I am enjoying your fellowship. Know that with each day that passes I am with ever increasing love for you each. Until next time, shalom.

Living Our Understanding | Living Our Revelation | The Livewire Connection Through the Supreme

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-24-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a beautiful atmosphere full of spirit we have here this evening. I receive value from your willingness to share. Even in your observations of mistakes in living, I receive great understanding and spiritual benefit. Your willingness to embrace and live the truth sets our God-in-time, the Supreme Being, in forward motion and expansion - growth.

The world at this time is somewhat of a live-wire with vast amounts of energy moving through it; and yet, the knowledge to where the force is traveling is practically unknown to you. There are new openings, new energies that are not familiar, and this does create some chaos when the spiritual path is not visible or perhaps hidden in the animal nature.

Many know there is something beyond the material life and yet are not tuned-in to receive living revelation. Some are buried in dogma and old traditions; their spiritual perspective is limited – and therefore, not an everyday-living reality. For most of you, however, your eyes are opening and you are still trying to comprehend what you are seeing.

The spiritual life is a program that you need to be continually active in. The spiritual muscles must be exercised and maintained to advance in levels and recognize new and up-to-date living revelation. For one to be spiritual, one needs to practice spirituality. You can be reborn in the Spirit but that is not the end. Study, prayer, worship, and stillness are required to stay on a continuous path of growth.

To produce fruits of the spirit you simply must live a spirit-filled life. To live within the limited mind-frame of the animal nature, you cannot expect to feel that consoling and guiding Spirit of the Father.

It is said: "As a man thinks – so he is." And put in a more up-to-date phraseology: "As a man lives – so he is." Thoughts travel along that path of the livewire producing spiritual results/advancement; but for mortals, until something can be put into action or made 'reality,' it simply is just not so. You, Mission participants, have a well-rounded understanding of the spiritual path – through the Correcting Time; and while it seems to lean toward the idealistic side, it must become a living reality in your lives.

This week, take a moment to ponder your actions, to think if you are living out your beliefs. To live what you believe is to make it 'reality.' To make it reality is to feel the presence of Father, to understand His logical guidance, and to feel His unconditional and enduring love and faith in you. We are not just a part of the static of new thought – we are with direction; and in living 'that' understanding, we are ourselves a source of guidance. The spiritual path is real, it is in front of your face, it is moving toward the destiny that Father had planned all along.

I realize that it is difficult in the busyness of life to keep consistent practice of producing fruits of the spirit. During the week ahead, make effort to rest. Find time for stillness and to clear the mind. Know that you have the choice from time to time to receive on every level – body, mind, and soul. You have choice to rest – to have not worry and to be comforted by the First Source and Center – the Father of all fathers. Our lesson is kept short for a few questions.

CALVIN: Abraham, thank you for your persistence and diligence in meeting with us. I often wonder if you will say we are finished in these lessons or ask us to take a break for a while – as we did after the first two years with Ham's teachings, but I really appreciate every week another lesson from you and the staff. Tonight I was viewing a TV program, 'The Council of World Affairs,' and there was a board discussing Islamic, Muslim, and the Arab-nations interactions. I was very excited to see this. I thought about what you said about things looking better, and your celebration of that. In listening to them, I felt that there was a breakthrough dialogue in place. It looked like there is hope in that faction of such long-held turmoil. It really does look like there is some dialog of brotherly interaction going on. Do you have a comment on that?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Good observation Calvin. With the history of these religious groups, the constant motto has been: "Who will save us?" "Who will solve this dilemma?" "Who is at fault?" We can see in the leadership of these countries that they are beginning to take personal responsibility. They are realizing 'the answer is up to them.' The responsibility is theirs, and only 'they' can act to create a more free and civilized society. Many are seeing that 'yes, God is present,' and that the animal in man has all too often given way to selfish desire for power and glory. World leaders are seeing the benefits of service to all – man, woman, and child. People are realizing that hatred is something that is taught, and need not be. In viewing any child from any country there is a natural love and nature of friendship for all other children. Stagnating traditions are finally being exposed. Individuals are taking responsibility and putting the 'best for the whole' into action. Is this helping? (Calvin: Yes, I really appreciate the insight from your view.) Abraham: Good question. Is there another question?

LANCESON: Abraham, in pondering the spectrum between self-reliance and God-reliance this past day or so, I was wondering from your perspective where you see the balance?

ABRAHAM: This would perhaps be the question of the ages. Good question, Lanceson. Self-reliance is in itself an attribute; it is a motivator toward God-reliance. In a world where so many must apparently have someone to look up to– a role-model, so to speak, so as to set an example on how to act– it is good to learn self-reliance. We can view self-reliance as: 'I am with ability. I can receive guidance. I can act. I can have personal power.' And then followed by: 'I can have none of these without God-reliance.' Lucifer, in short, had set a supreme example of self-reliance, where God was secondary, and self-love was first and foremost. It is valuable to see self-reliance as: 'I have ability. I can receive Father's guidance. I can be His son. I can co-create; and with Him I am more. I can have more faith in my ability because I am motivated by the Source of all that is true, beautiful, and good.' While self-reliance is good, it can be taken to the point of an imbalanced self-love or selfishness. This is indeed tragic – and yet this, in itself, is a supreme morontial lesson. Wonderful observation, my son. (Lanceson: Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

TECTRA: Abraham, a few weeks back I was watching some videotapes of a man named Greg Braidon. He was speaking on how our hearts, our cells, are in tune to our mind; our mind is in tune to our hearts, and our hearts are actually attuned to the Earth – the frequency of the Earth. And, because the Earth, supposedly its frequency, is speeding up, our experience of life and time is likewise speeding up. Is that a true thing that he is talking about? Is that why we feel like things are going faster these days – because the frequency of the Earth is faster?

ABRAHAM: To a point, yes. The Earth itself is a living organism and energies are produced. And also is there a circuit for energy to travel. This extends from the cosmic mind (Supreme Being) throughout the circuitry of the universes. The Earth is simply a component in this, but this does create an appropriate visual for explanation. And yes, time has accelerated along with the receiving of new ideas. This is akin to that livewire we discussed earlier. Good question. Is there more I can comment on?

TECTRA: Actually, yes; I just wanted to follow up on that because he also talked about how the Earth was in tune with the sun, and the sun was in tune with someplace deep in the center of the universe. That is kind of interesting the way that you answered that. Thank you.

ABRAHAM: I am in understanding, yes! and yet, I am limited in not only my own knowledge of this subject but also in my allowance to interfere with common scientific knowledge. These things will be revealed soon enough. Good question, Tectra. One more question?

WILLEENA: Abraham, I am undergoing a rather deep change in my body system, giving up the addiction to foods that I have been eating for about a year that feel very comforting but have been building a lot of toxicity in my system. One of the things I realized right now is that what is happening, along with a new discipline of walking every day, is also emotionally affecting me right now in a place that I am opening up more, not hiding out as much in food. This is leaving me to feel more exposed and more vulnerable. I realize, from all the conversation we have had here earlier, that it really is coming to a place where I am opening up to a level of trust of Father's will for me, and that I haven't been willing to step into. I would like some reassurance, some comment from you that will simply assist me in this journey of turning my days over to Father.

ABRAHAM: Understood, Willeena. I admire your tenacity to go forward with what you perceive to be best and right. Any physical change could spark emotions. And vice versa – just as stress may affect the body, stress on the body can also affect the mind and/or emotional systems. The Master had set a beautiful example in His continuous communion with the Father, and this was His nutrition, this was His source of life – to the point that he sometimes forgot to take in material nutrition. He was filled on the Spirit of our Father; and to the best of His understanding, He lived a life of balance. When the emotions become overwhelming then perhaps, yes, there are a few small things you can do to bring you back to a good point of balance. You are strong and focused on the goal ahead, but when this causes you too much angst then it is working against your goal. You would do well to have that mindal balance in knowing you are not being limited or deprived. You need to have some flexibility and freedom. This will bring you inner peace and added strength to achieve the goal you have set. You are with strength and a new maturity in spirit. Your perception is going in a heightened direction where those answers you have long sought after will be at hand. Have not worry. Focus on balance, and allow yourself some flexibility. You do well, Willeena, my daughter. (Willeena: Thank you.)

With that, I will take my leave. Know that with each passing week I am growing closer with you each. You are a light to me. I thank you. Until next time, shalom.

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a beautiful atmosphere full of spirit we have here this evening. I receive value from your willingness to share. Even in your observations of mistakes in living, I receive great understanding and spiritual benefit. Your willingness to embrace and live the truth sets our God-in-time, the Supreme Being, in forward motion and expansion/growth.

The world at this time is somewhat of a live-wire with vast amounts of energy moving through it and yet, the knowledge to where the force is traveling is practically unknown to you. There are new openings, new energies that are not familiar, and this does create some chaos when the spiritual path is not visible or perhaps hidden in the animal nature.

Many know there is something beyond the material life and yet are not tuned-in to receive living revelation. Some are buried in dogma and old traditions – their spiritual perspective is limited and, therefore, not an everyday-living reality. For most of you, however, your eyes are opening and you are still trying to comprehend what you are seeing.

The spiritual life is a program that you need to be continually active in. The spiritual muscles must be exercised and maintained to advance in levels and recognize new and up-to-date living revelation. For one to be spiritual, one needs to practice spirituality. You can be reborn in the Spirit but that is not the end. Study, prayer, worship, and stillness are required to stay on a continuous path of growth.

To produce fruits of the spirit you simply must live a spirit-filled life. To live within the limited mind-frame of the animal nature, you cannot expect to feel that consoling and guiding Spirit of the Father.

It is said: "As a man thinks – so he is." And put in a more up-to-date phraseology: "As a man lives – so he is." Thoughts travel along that path of the livewire producing spiritual results/advancement – but for mortals, until something can be put into action or made 'reality,' it simply is just not so. You, Mission participants, have a well-rounded understanding of the spiritual path – through the Correcting Time; and while it seems to lean toward the idealistic side, it must become a living reality in your lives.

This week, take a moment to ponder your actions, to think if you are living out your beliefs. To live what you believe is to make it 'reality.' To make it reality is to feel the presence of Father, to understand His logical guidance, and to feel His unconditional and enduring love and faith in you. We are not just a part of the static of new thought, we are with direction – and in living 'that' understanding, we are ourselves a source of guidance. The spiritual path is real, it is in front of your face, it is moving toward the destiny that Father had planned all along.

I realize that it is difficult in the busyness of life to keep consistent practice of producing fruits of the spirit. During the week ahead, make effort to rest. Find time for stillness and to clear the mind. Know that you have the choice from time to time to receive on every level – body, mind, and soul. You have choice to rest – to have not worry and to be comforted by the First Source and Center – the Father of all fathers. Our lesson is kept short for a few questions.

CALVIN: Abraham, thank you for your persistence and diligence in meeting with us. I often wonder if you will say we are finished in these lessons or ask us to take a break for a while – as we did after the first two years with Ham's teachings, but I really appreciate every week another lesson from you and the staff. Tonight I was viewing a TV program, "The Council of World Affairs," and there was a board discussing Islamic, Muslim and the Arab relations. I was very excited to see this. I thought about what you said about things looking better, and your celebration of that. In listening to them, I felt that there was a breakthrough dialogue in place. It looked like there is hope in that faction of such long-held turmoil. It really does look like there is some dialog of brotherly interaction going on. Do you have a comment on that?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Good observation Calvin. With the history of these religious groups, the constant motto has been "Who will save us? Who will solve this dilemma? Who is at fault?" We can see in the leadership of these countries that they are beginning to take personal responsibility. They are realizing the answer is up to them. The responsibility is theirs, and only they can act to create a more free and civilized society. Many are seeing that "yes, God is present," and that the animal in man has all too often given way to selfish desire for power and glory. World leaders are seeing the benefits of service to all – man, woman, and child. People are realizing that hatred is something that is taught, and need not be. In viewing any child from any country there is a natural love and nature of friendship for all other children. Stagnating traditions are finally being exposed. Individuals are taking responsibility and putting the 'best for the whole' into action. Is this helping? (Calvin: Yes, I really appreciate the insight from your view.) Abraham: Good question. Is there another question?

LANCESON: Abraham, in pondering the spectrum between self-reliance and God-reliance this past day or so, I was wondering from your perspective where you see the balance?

ABRAHAM: This would perhaps be the question of the ages. Good question, Lanceson. Self-reliance is in itself an attribute, it is a motivator toward God-reliance. In a world where so many must apparently have someone to look up to—a role-model, so to speak, so as to set an example on how to act—it is good to learn self-reliance. We can view self-reliance as: "I am with ability. I can receive guidance. I can act. I can have personal power." And then followed by, "I can have none of these without God-reliance." Lucifer, in short, had set a supreme example of self-reliance where God was secondary, and self-love was first and foremost. It is valuable to see self-reliance as: "I have ability. I can receive Father's guidance. I can be His son. I can co-create, and with Him I am more. I can have more faith in my ability because I am motivated by the Source of all that is true, beautiful, and good." While self-reliance is good, it can be taken to the point of an imbalanced self-love or selfishness. This is indeed tragic – and yet this, in itself, is a supreme morontial lesson. Wonderful observation, my son. (Lanceson: Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

TECTRA: Abraham, a few weeks back I was watching some videotapes of a man named Greg Braidon. He was speaking on how our hearts, our cells, are in tune to our mind; our mind is in tune to our hearts, and our hearts are actually attuned to the Earth – the frequency of the Earth. And, because the Earth, supposedly its frequency, is speeding up, our experience of life and time is likewise speeding up. Is that a true thing that he is talking about? Is that why we feel like things are going faster these days – because the frequency of the Earth is faster?

ABRAHAM: To a point, yes. The Earth itself is a living organism and energies are produced. And also is there a circuit for energy to travel. This extends from the cosmic mind [Supreme Being] throughout the circuitry of the universes. The Earth is simply a component in this, but this does create an appropriate visual for explanation. And yes, time has accelerated along with the receiving of new ideas. This is akin to that livewire we discussed earlier. Good question. Is there more I can comment on?

TECTRA: Actually, yes; I just wanted to follow up on that because he also talked about how the Earth was in tune with the sun, and the sun was in tune with someplace deep in the center of the universe. That is kind of interesting the way that you answered that. Thank you.

ABRAHAM: I am in understanding, yes! and yet, I am limited in not only my own knowledge of this subject but also in my allowance to interfere with common scientific knowledge. These things will be revealed soon enough. Good question, Tectra. One more question?

WILLEENA: Abraham, I am undergoing a rather deep change in my body system, giving up the addiction to foods that I have been eating for about a year that feel very comforting but have been building a lot of toxicity in my system. One of the things I realized right now is that what is happening, along with a new discipline of walking every day, is also emotionally affecting me right now in a place that I am opening up more, not hiding out as much in food; it is leaving me to feel more exposed and more vulnerable. I realize, from all the conversation we have had here earlier, that it really is coming to a place where I am opening up to a level of trust of Father's will for me, and that I haven't been willing to step into. I would like some reassurance, some comment from you that will simply assist me in this journey of turning my days over to Father.

ABRAHAM: Understood, Willeena. I admire your tenacity to go forward with what you perceive to be best and right. Any physical change could spark emotions. And vice versa – just as stress may affect the body, stress on the body can also affect the mind and/or emotional systems. The Master had set a beautiful example in His continuous communion with the Father, and this was His nutrition, this was His source of life – to the point that he sometimes forgot to take in material nutrition. He was filled on the Spirit of our Father, and to the best of His understanding, He lived a life of balance. When the emotions become overwhelming then perhaps, yes, there are a few small things you can do to bring you back to a good point of balance. You are strong and focused on the goal ahead, but when this causes you too much angst then it is working against your goal. You would do well to have that mindal balance in knowing you are not being limited or deprived. You need to have some flexibility and freedom. This will bring you inner peace and added strength to achieve the goal you have set. You are with strength and a new maturity in spirit. Your perception is going in a heightened direction where those answers you have long sought after will be at hand. Have not worry. Focus on balance, and allow yourself some flexibility. You do well, Willeena, my daughter. (Willeena: Thank you.)

With that, I will take my leave. Know that with each passing week I am growing closer with you each. You are a light to me. I thank you. Until next time, shalom.

The Soul-Within Is Anxious For Adventure | What Price Will We Pay For Kingdom Adventure

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-01-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am with awe to be witness to your interaction this evening. You are providing a living example of your inner beliefs. This evening's discussion, I am feeling I am not your teacher, but your student.

We have waited many years for the roots of our teachings to become deeply embedded into the soil of reality. This is a new era in thought and action. Your efforts in this work will be challenging. While the labor seems difficult, the birth of new reality is beautiful to behold. What is true is here to stay. What is not true will be forgotten, in time. We shall again have discussion on the kingdom and 'personal cost:'

Your spiritual life has surely been a journey with its peaks and valleys. You are now, have been, and will be the sum of your thoughts and beliefs. This is not good or bad but simply experiential and with endless meanings and values. For this sum total in personal reality and your striving to be God-like, you have to (and will continue to do so) pay a price. In your life-lessons, there have been blows to the ego which can be counted as your greatest spiritual growth. This always requires a cost, yes, but this is, however, a cost toward the positive.

To learn, one has to be teachable; and the human soul is naturally that - teachable; the ego, is not. Mortal conditionings (the animal nature; possibly one's upbringing) would have the ego believe it is already with all knowledge. The soul within is a child and with eyes that are anxious for adventure. To serve Father, to understand His will, there is personal cost- there is that 'surrendering child' who is driven to absorb; to live out to the best of one's ability, the understanding of Father's will.

Personal cost is varying from believer to believer, and the examples are really quite numerous. You each have understanding of what that has meant in your own life. Have you bought your way into the kingdom? Of course not! But definitely have you sacrificed and brought about change for your advancing soul. Do you give up your desires? No! Are you exercising patience? Yes! Are you mechanistic without distinction? Of course not!

You are each known and loved beyond your comprehension. Are you required to listen, to practice being spiritual, to study, to commune, to produce fruits of the spirit, to be God-like? Are you required to love one another as Christ has loved you, and to understand perfected humility? Yes. Yes, this is the path we tread. This is the price we are willing to pay.

“When I was a child I had childish things. As I mature, I put childish things away.” You are each endeavoring to mature in spirit; but also are you striving to become a better mortal – and much of the time this is where the difficulty lies. Be not discouraged. Know that what may cost you your animal nature is the keys to the kingdom. Have not fear. Each practicing day you experience, you are one step closer to who you are becoming. This is indeed something to be honored.

Our exercise for the week is to acknowledge our Sovereign Father, in whose will we desire to follow at any cost of the ego. Request Father to walk before you. Acknowledge His presence, His sovereignty, as you do at the beginning of these meetings. Remember children, there is great growth in the pains of labor. You are each one another’s assignment. Be observant and look for the value. You do well.

No questions. Know that I am standing by to assist during your week, along with a vast resource of kingdom helpers. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.
Man Cannot Control The Ocean’s Waves | Pain And Frustration Results From Our Need To Control

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-08-2003
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am with such gratitude this evening, for your spiritual unity is touching. What a feeling of comfort and mindal clarity we are sharing this evening. This peace, this feeling of ease, is not only acceptable, it is welcomed.

While we could dwell in this serene state for all eternity, we must remember that without experiential irritants there is very little growth. Mortal life is most of the time overflowing with these irritants – in fact, they call us to action, they call us to seek possibilities. While life's agitations cause us growth, we should focus on balance. Balance is not only having growing experiences, but in attaining new skills that would aid us in mindal clarity and Spirit reception.

Especially at this time of year there seems to be great stress beyond your personal control. From our standpoint we watch the masses gather at various functions seeking to build spirit and goodwill. Then, on the other hand, this desire seems to add pressure to an already stressed life. Your expectations, your needs, your long sought-after dreams, seem to dictate your outlook on how life should be lived – on what can be controlled and what cannot. What man can control the waves of the sea? At best, one can only create more waves.

To put effort, energy, time, and finances into such thoughts of 'controlling' is a road to frustration and disappointment. Cast a glance over your history this far and weigh your measure of 'contentment' against 'disappointment' – you can easily see your level of efforts to have control, to exert will. The more disappointment and frustration one feels is evidence of one who casts pearls before swine – meaning personal efforts have gone nowhere with this situation.

A spiritually-fit individual would allow Father’s influence and be open to new doors. But many times our own expectation, our own understanding of right and wrong, our traditions and others' opinions – does influence our perspective, and we act from a place of ego instead of Spirit.

I am not suggesting that you make no effort or even have acceptance of 'what is' – I am merely suggesting that you review your own internal meter that reflects your attitude toward life-situations. To be compelled to be controlling is a vague place within the ego that constantly tells you to 'strive harder,' to 'appear better.' This pressure is spiritual suicide. It is to build up such great expectations in 'self' with no room for mistakes or any assistance you could receive from on high.

You can make effort in 'the best interest of the whole' and allow the results to be Father's. You can control your own levels of frustration and disappointment by changing your perspective on any given situation. Mortal life is the sea and you are with only a small boat. You can only row your own boat. You can only control your own waves made, your own influence in the sea. You can go with the natural current – or, you can meet with frustration and disappointment, fighting the storms alone.

This week, review your relationship with Father. How much are you allowing Him into your life? Is there only limited places He can have influence over while you attempt to control the rest? Where does frustration and disappointment lead individuals to? Take a few moments this week to appreciate the calm sea, and rest for when the storms arise.

No questions this evening. Know that I am with growing affection for you each. I am in appreciation of your unique personalities, and yet, I am honored to be a part of your collective whole. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

As we set out upon our journey for personal correction, we have done a great deal of work on overcoming our weaknesses, our animal natures. The world is hanging in the balance now, so to speak, where spirituality is becoming tangible, yes, but the material is still right there in front of mortal eyes.

As we seek fulfillment (or relief from disappointment and frustration) we would do well to be aware of the mortal senses; while they are a natural part of you, they are stemming from animal instinct which is of the material world. Those who make honest effort in living a Spirit-led life will indeed discover new morontia senses that are from the divine realm – which is away from ego, away from the material world, and is the road to lasting eternal fulfillment.

This week, when you see yourselves or your fellows in the midst of weakness, or possibly chasing after some temporary material fulfillment, know that this is not the time for harsh judgment, but a time for compassion and to be observant of divine law.

Also this week, consider: What has been meaningful in your lives? What has brought love and fulfillment? What are the souls' desires for fulfillment; and how does this affect the mortal mind and body? Think about your so-called 'obsessions' – will these feed the soul? or temporarily satisfy the ego! Where is your energy spent? And again, be aware of your levels of unhappiness and disappointment – where is the balance? Time spent with Father is a priceless assurance that can answer all of these questions. It is well and good to find mortal fulfillment, yes, but know that spiritual fulfillment is food for the soul – lasting and strengthening for those difficult times ahead.

No questions this evening. As you set out upon your week ahead, remember that your personal happiness directly affects the attitudes of others. This is a season for goodwill – let us make that a reality. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

The Emotional Aspects of Disappointment and Frustration

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-15-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always refreshed in spirit each time we meet. I appreciate the particular energy that flows from this group. You each are well-intentioned and are here to learn, give, and receive. I find it quite renewing in spirit to be among you and dip my cup into the living well. Each of us is a source of energy, and together we can create change for the better.

Last week we spoke of the pain and frustration that comes from the need to control everything. I would say a few words on the emotional aspects of disappointment and frustration.

Spirit poisons lead us to search for fulfillment. An emptiness within that is caused from rampant emotionalism, leads us to search for relief. You can study, pray, and do stillness to find fulfillment, yes, and yet your mortal self is impatient and desires immediate results.

Look at the world and its appetites – you can see that the mortal appetite craves material fulfillment. It is 'what the eyes can see, ears can hear, mouth can taste,' and so on. This can indeed bring temporary fulfillment or gratification, yes, but without that 'soul comfort' the satisfaction is fleeting.

Michael Is Not Past Or Future, He Is Now | He Focuses On The Good And Draws It To Us
Abraham & Christ Michael, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-22-2003

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always intrigued by your discussions and so very grateful for our fellowship. Over these many years, we have been co-workers through life's many experiences. We have come to understand life through the sheer experience of it. We have some understanding of death from missing those who have gone before. We may have stumbled somewhat over these years, but always have we continued to keep lit the light of faith.

Many of the world's Christians are focused upon the celebration of Christ's birth. This focus is an opening for new circuitry and new energy to follow. We can only have faith that the Father's plan is at work in whatever may transpire from this focus of goodwill, and from the child that brought such enduring hope – hence my gift to you:

MICHAEL: Greetings, children, it is I your Brother/Father, Parent, Friend, Confidant, Keeper of the flame of faith. My warm greetings to you this day and every day. I am with supreme joy to be with my children. I am an active Parent in our Mission and am well familiarized with worldly happenings, as well as personal. I am overflowing with deep and abiding love to look directly into your eyes. I know you, and I sincerely love you.

I see many of you in your struggles, and I must summon quite a bit of strength to withhold my desire to rush in and remove your difficulties. My love for you leads me to desire your happiness, your well-being. Your joy is my joy. As your Parent, however, I realize that to remove your difficulties would not build the eternal soul, which is a part of our grand universal design.

We are each to fulfill our required experience to become who we are meant to be. My gift to you is accompanying you in your struggles, your experiences; your joys and sorrows. Together we can endure all things. Together we can build that road that leads to Light and Life.

A good parent does not neglect a child's needs. But a parent must many times inspire and encourage a child to become a responsible universe citizen. We each must take an active role in all of our experiences. We live 'on purpose.' We live to live, not to have everything freely handed to us without having made any effort - this has no meanings or values.

You are living the gift of mortal life; this is not a curse but should be honored and exemplified to the best of your ability. You stumble not in darkness for you know where the light is. You have committed to showing others. Be of good cheer. See the good in this life. Learn from the negative but do not dwell on it. The more positive you can view life, the more positive life will be. You are not weak victims of mortal life but empowered spiritual beings.

Know that our Mission is on track in spite of what your eyes may see. Concentrate on your own efforts put forth to broaden the kingdom. Our kingdom does take great effort and yet, the joy therefrom is well worth it. Forget not that I go before you. I am with you. I am the 'now.' Know that every time you think of me I will already be thinking of you. Carry on.

Again, I am Abraham. Thank you, Michael, our overseer of all good things. Know that in these days ahead we will assist you in keeping focused on building that road to Light and Life. We can focus on the good, yes. The negative only encourages us to work harder. Children, we can focus on the positive and draw it to us.

This week, take time to strengthen your relationship with our Spirit of Truth. Know that He is to be thought of as in the 'now.' Have not worry about past or future - He is now! Know that I am with unfailing affection for you each. Until next time, shalom. [Unsure if there was a 12/29/2004 lesson. Not found yet.]

2004 MANSION WORLD TEACHINGS

Surrender To Father, Daily | Live And Take Those Risks That Give Real `Experience` To Daily Liv

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP

01-05-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am again with joy to be with you. I am honored to be a part of this family. In the busyness of life, we have our anchor that is this group. It is the place where ideas are born and thoughts are directed as is energy. I am grateful to be a part of your spiritual growth. I feel like a father watching his children mature, realizing that children are separate beings all unto their own. While I feel gratitude for being a part, I am also with awe viewing you as spiritually maturing adults.

It is said that 'nothing worth having comes easy.' It is well known that effort reaps rewards. How blessed are the spiritually maturing individuals who are willing to listen to the Parent of all parents – the Father of all fathers, the First Source and Center.

All of our experiences have shaped us into the beings we are today. Perhaps some of our past experiences lead us to move with caution. This is not only acceptable, but wise, for your experiences have been fine teachers. Being cautious, however, is on a borderline with fear.

Perhaps one who is over-cautious keeps hidden away so as not to experience fear and disappointment. In all reality, this is not living, but merely existing. To simply 'exist' is to only experience the mechanics of life; there are no fruits produced, there are no meanings and values to absorb; and therefore, joy is lost, purpose is lost.

Being spiritually mature you realize chances must be taken in order for growth to progress. One who is fearful in life is not willing to take risks, and life seems meaningless – this certainly clouds spiritual light and can set one upon a dark path. This dark path is: 'trusting in the material world;' 'having hope in material things;' 'finding little meaning out of temporal realities' – the search is always empty and leaving the fearful soul with further longing.

My friends, Father has given you life so that you may truly live – to live and experience and understand everything you can; and come to know every aspect of the mortal life possible. And this is just the beginning of your eternal career. You can certainly opt out if you should so desire, but believe me, your experience still waits for you on the other side.

The spiritually-mature individual understands that risks may be fearful and yet, it ever leads one toward continuing progression and advancement. The mature individual is not afraid to face fears, but really feels them, really dissects the meanings therein, and comes into a new light. This is work and does take effort, yes, and yet, the meanings and values are priceless.

Life is ever filled with new purpose, abiding hope, and is the foundation of faith. As we move forth into this new year let us renew our faith and go forth with trust in Father – in His unending power, His life-source of love, His universal plan. Let us dare to live life to the fullest, without fear, without wondering if Father would be there should bad things happen or our expectations not materialize.

This week, let us practice daily surrender to our First Source and Center; call upon Him at the beginning of each day. What you can do with Father's presence far outweighs what you can do alone. Life is not simply enduring or existing or persevering through one drama to the next, no – it is about maturing and progressing; having Father's power at hand and having courage to live on purpose, and live with purpose.

Yes, my friends, life is about having enough faith to take chances, to reach out to others, to serve and be served, to experience everything and have understanding thereof. Allow time each day for a few moments with our Heavenly Caretakers. Allow yourself to be renewed in spirit and find the greatest blessings in the mundane. Find that all your efforts are working toward the good. Find that 'light in the darkness.'

I am with fullness to have this experience with you. No questions this evening. Know that I will be with you throughout the week. I would be very glad if you should happen to call upon me. I am with ever-growing love for you each. Until next time, shalom.

The Value of Work | The Father's Cup Is Not The Way Of Ease

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-12-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I always take great interest in your conversations. I see you making effort toward putting your beliefs into action. As I speak this evening, you listen with your faith not even knowing what words may come from me. You diligently attend each week with a faithful heart.

Yes, here, we dip our cups into the well of Father's will and make efforts throughout the week to distribute what we have learned. Each week, we come together to 'take in' so that in everyday living we can 'give out' and expand our ever-growing Kingdom. Your faithfulness is a rock in which we can build Light and Life.

Last week we discussed the maturing spirit and the courage it takes to truly live. We discussed how the fearful soul may choose to hide away so as to not have the required experience of adversity. This evening, I would choose to find it appropriate to discuss forms of escape versus spiritual rest. We each have experienced the hardships in mortal living and understand the importance of rest and intake of spiritual energy – and yet, we find it somewhat difficult to devote time.

In the reality of mortal living there are always the material obligations that need to be met. In order to live somewhat of an organized life, mortals need to work. Working is an experience that holds tremendous spiritual values, as well as putting food on the table. Those you work with are – so to speak – a part of your ministry. Those you meet are literally fertile ground for planting the seeds of the Kingdom.

While work can seem monotonous and without glory, numerous possibilities lie therein. Do you see, work is not really work but a part of your spiritual ministry and purpose for serving in the Kingdom. Many mortal functions that you may view as boring are in fact part of your destiny – part of your spiritual growth. Many tasks that you may seek to be free from are opportunities to live life more fully.

The Master found fulfillment in all His undertakings for the Father. He brought Father's presence in everything He did. He lived to serve His Father. He lived to strive to do His best, to do the right thing the first time. He sought no forms of escape in almost every area of His life's endeavors.

There was however, a time or two He had thoughts of omitting His cup because it seemed overwhelming. Of course this took meditation, prayer, and mental reconciliation to find strength to carry on. The Father's cup was not the way of ease, no! and yet, it was definitely the most effective, the best and highest good for one and all.

With the world's technology ever progressing, it would seem that man's direction goes toward forms of escape. There is nothing wrong with the material life being made a bit simpler - technology has its place, yes; and yet, all the while man's weary mind simply needs a few moments with the Father.

You can see that the youth of today find many forms of escape. All too often it has been taught that life's realities are painful, and that to experience this is not necessary - therefore delaying progression and spiritual maturity. Seeking escape through any form is to gamble with those things in life that are truly valuable, such as good health, relationships, integrity, honesty, and so on.

To learn at an early age that adversity must be dealt with on a totally conscious level, is indeed a blessing. One learns skills that aids in the life ahead. The mature spiritual individual faces problems as they come at the time - without procrastination, hesitation, fear, or faithlessness. The Father's presence is in every moment of every day; and one is never left alone to endure, but to bravely face the challenges and be open to Father's will and His unfailing solutions.

Life is busy and tiring. Of course you need rest and reversion - and certainly does this go a long way in finding a balance in life. Enjoyment that brings rest or clarity of mind is certainly acceptable. Joy is a part of life just as is sorrow or adversity; balance is what we are seeking here. Before there is temptation to look for mortal escape or ease-seeking, it is highly recommended that one spend time in stillness or study or using the creative mind. Art, music, exercise - these are all forms of energy production and aids in the ability to cope with life's difficulties.

This week, review your daily living activities that seem to hold little value, and try to see how they may play a part in your ministry, in your efforts to expand the Kingdom. Take time to review your deep inner-longings, and what you do to find a 'temporary fix' versus an eternal solution. Have not worry what others have to say about your choices. Keep the Master's living example in the forefront of your thinking. He is your example of one who has bravely faced life's challenges and lived a perfected life.

That is all for this evening. Again, feel free to call upon me during the week. I am with growing affection for you each. Until next time, shalom.

ABRAHAM: Certainly, Harrison. The individuals you are dealing with are about ninety-percent emotion – this is your avenue in which to get through to them. My first suggestion is to make an effort to understand how they are feeling about the circumstances. Where are these feelings coming from? You can ease their pain and confusion by a show of understanding. Many individuals just want to be heard and understood. And again, not to feel separation as if they have done something wrong or are incorrect in their feelings; or, are less intelligent for choices made and should be made to feel inferior. People want to be understood. They want to be heard and accepted for who they are. The majority of the world runs on emotions. With the Correcting Time, intelligence is being integrated with emotional thought. Father shows His children He has heard them and that He understands them. He accepts their feelings even if their perceptions are wrong. This is showing unity and unconditional love. In this safe place, individuals are open to intellectual solutions and intelligent thought – common sense, so to speak. Reassure your family members of your love for them and that you simply want the best for one and all; and that your desire is to maintain balance and provide service. Reaffirm the family unity and create a safe place for individuals to speak their true feelings no matter how farfetched their true feelings may sound. Make your suggestions simple and speak with a calm voice. Authoritative voices seem to create a defense. Stay above the emotion, Harrison, and know that you are well prepared to assist in any family difficulties. Is this helping? (Harrison: Here I thought I knew everything. Yes, and I thank you, Abraham.)

CALVIN: Abraham, you mentioned the value of the group; and that has been a topic of discussion online about the value and validity of these groups' lessons from a 'Teacher' versus maybe 'individual' contact with their Father fragments. I've got a million questions I could ask but I will leave it with if you want to say a few words to that as far as our Teaching Mission groups are concerned – and pertaining to the need for supernal Teacher assignments. It seems in the first days we had many requests for 'Teacher assignments' to various Urantia Book-based study groups around the world; and this included 'transmission-receiver assignments' for these groups – from yourself or Ham. These were budding Teaching Mission groups and individuals seeking Teacher involvement. In my view, it is quite different today where anyone with a whim, launches out with a transmission and various supernal claims without recognized approvals from yourself or Ham. Is this progress? or is this regression? I'm also concerned, and it seems to be quite a hot topic, this Monjoronson issue. I don't even know why that bothers me, but it does! [Editor's note: Many Mission groups were announcing that one, Monjoronson, was soon to appear, or has most recently appeared, as this world's 'Magisterial Son' spoken about in the Urantia Papers.]

ABRAHAM: The Teaching Mission is always in the state of evolution. Many things will be tested and tried and only the truth will remain. Those things that are not true will be seen for what they really are and fall by the wayside. The human ego is man's greatest enemy; and where there are platforms there is always a tendency to desire self-glorification. Again, and so seemingly fitting with this Martin Luther King holiday, many believe that to be important it is necessary to rise above the rest and to appear as better than others. To feel superior is feeding off of the energies of others; this is food for the ego, for it is, in itself, feeding the animal. There are natural tendencies in man to be in charge of the tribe, and past history has shown the only way to do this is through force, whether it is physical or mental. Man has thought to separate himself from the 'average' to gain feelings of importance. Our Correcting Time is showing that one's feelings of self-importance does lie within the unity of the group. Mutual respect, friendship and love, are easily found within a group who seeks to create a platform for the good of the whole – in other words, who set Father as their Sovereign. Have not worry for the evolution of the Teaching Mission; it is all part of the growth process. Look back at our groups' history and pinpoint those truths that have remained. As new individuals enter into the Mission, they will also have these experiences of learning to balance the ego and feelings of self-glorification, with spiritual reality. It is not a setback, but simply 'training.' I am not to comment on the Monjoronson issue. My friends, the juice of mysticism has been squeezed out, and we are now to deal with the pulp of truth. Keep true to the tasks at hand. Remember the Master, who allowed the strange preacher to roam freely with his own brand of religious fervor. He trusted individuals to make up their own minds who they would choose to follow. You can see very few followed the preacher – while most, with their love for truth, decided to follow the Master. Group health is very important to maintain balance for the individual. The group is a ministry unto its members – you are to minister and be ministered to. The group is your anchor in the sea of everything. Have not worry about the evolution of the Teaching Mission, but know that we appreciate your efforts to maintain truth and integrity. If there are no more pressing questions I will...

MIRIAM: Could I just ask one? It's not pressing, but Abraham, your poetry is just so beautiful – like "squeezing the juice out of the mysticism." Every week you just knock everyone's socks off. Is that part of your personality or did you acquire that? Have you learned that through your own experience and time? or have celestial artisans worked with you to pick this trait up? What's the scoop on that?

ABRAHAM: I would like to take credit for each of these philosophical displays, but training, and the wisdom of my fellows, has taught me a great deal. Mortal concepts work best on mortals, but wait until you arrive on the Mansion Worlds– poetry is abundant, as is music, and art. Thank you for your kind words. I am overjoyed to know that I can help.

I want each one of you to know you are also a great help – to me personally, and within Father's kingdom. Have not worry this week. Tend to your personal ministries. Know that your service is one of joy and learning. Find time to rest and be renewed in spirit. Know that my thoughts are always with you. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Keeping Balance in Spiritual Abundance | Questions

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-19-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying the practicality in this evening's discussion. What a wellspring of goodness when we gather in the name of our Father; it is obvious that you have set Him as your sovereign.

In spiritual living, many are likened to the apostle Peter when having his feet washed by the Master. Spiritual abundance sometimes feels so undeserved and that it would not be allowed. Then on the other hand, like Peter, some beg to be washed all over.

Meeting as we do each week keeps us in balance with receiving spiritual abundance and putting it forth to good use in everyday living. This evening I would keep the lesson short to make time for questions.

MIRIAM: Abraham, like you were talking about learning to receive the abundance of Father's love and to truly know that we deserve it because we are His children – it almost makes me feel guilty if I say that out in public. If I say: 'I know my Father loves me and I am washed in His love every day,' why is it that I almost feel guilty saying that in front of other people? It is like they think I think I am special. In essence, all I am doing is stating a birthright. What is that about the human nature that makes me feel like they are going to criticize me if I say: 'I know my Father loves me?' It is not like I am trying to brag. What is that?

ABRAHAM: Perhaps in the way it is spoken it creates a bit of separation – meaning that maybe others will assume you claim you have what they do not. You are not quite sure how they believe, and much of the time your declaration is simply sharing your faith. To appear humble in any spiritual sense, or in a religious setting, is important, yes; and yet, all too often – to simply speak the truth of your understanding is, in a mortal sense, not seen as a show of humility. The Master knew of the Father's love for Him, and when He shared this vision with others, He also found words to make them feel included. There are individuals you can speak freely with, and then there are those you do not quite understand fully – and this is where those thoughts of self-doubt in your declaration may come from. Our Master did much of His ministry in this manner – when He spoke to the masses, He worded His phrases to include all; therefore, creating unity and equality. Let not your feelings of being loved by the Father create guilt, but find words which are inclusive especially to those who really do not understand you for the person you really are. Your words to others are to help them turn inward, to review their own thinking about their personal relationship with Father so that all-in-all it produces good. Is this helping? (Miriam: Yes, very much. Thank you.)

HARRISON: I have a situation with my mom and dad, and my family; and I know Father will show me the right way to deal with it. I guess what I am asking from you is, do you have some insight how I could get started down the right path?

Deep Thinking Promotes Father-Connection | Allowing Spirit Poisons Promotes Surface-Level Thinking

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-26-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I find it so refreshing to come here each week and be connected in spirit with you. Those who participate in this time of correction are made to be deep-thinkers. What the world sees as meaningful would have us stay on surface-levels of thought, but the Correcting Time would drive us to search for truth and the deeper meanings in life. For us to gather each week assists us in refocusing to Spirit and positive ways of living.

In the days of old, the deep-thinkers were mostly thought of as prophets, ministers. Those who held high positions in religious organizations (meaning those who were seemingly gifted in spirit) were hailed as the 'voice for God.' And to be one who was 'a voice for God' you had to be seen as blameless. And this thinking continues today – those who hold high positions in churches are looked upon with favor for 'surely they live a more righteous life than others.'

As the Correcting Time progresses, we can see all are equal in spirit reception; all have the same opportunities. Surely, one who strives to live a well-balanced spirit life is one who will receive a great deal more divine information than would one who embraces darkness or the ways of the ego.

The traditions of old are misleading and yet, they do bare some truth. To put your best forth in everyday life opens you to spirit reception, yes – however, you are not more favored by God as some religious traditions would have you believe. To work your way to the top in any organization does not make you superior, no, but as the master taught, a server of all.

Let us review the life of an average mortal: All people want to be loved, and for the most part, many do those things that will get them that love. Many want to be seen as good or blameless and to reap admiration from their fellows. However, there are those small occurrences every day that would possibly drag one toward the darkness, and not toward love.

Take gossiping, for example: One who gossips appears to have information that holds other's attention, and many believe that this attention-holding is an accumulation of energy; therefore, the one who shares this information appears to be the most interesting. Again, many simply want to be loved, but to embrace the darkness in life is going to lessen your spirit reception of love – which in turn, keeps you on surface-levels of thinking.

Those who find it acceptable to twist the truth will also find their reception limited, for Father does not fraternize with the darkness. He will, however, play a part in His children's personal correction.

Do you see, to strive for 'the positive' in living, to embrace truth, beauty, and goodness, is to keep an open channel with Father. This is not a promise of heavenly rewards, or a seat next to the Master, no, but commonsense Correcting Time lessons. Also, let us look at the spirit poisons – anger, jealousy, despair, worry; these poisons can bring one's animal-side to the surface – therefore, lessening that part of the mind that does the deep-thinking.

Soul-searching! What is 'soul-searching' but one who goes below surface-levels of the mind to be receptive to the greater truths that Father has to offer. To be caught up in the material world is to increase the animal and decrease the soul. This is truly misery for any mortal. Think not: 'I want to live a life of truth, beauty, and goodness' – do it! Do not sit back and just have desire for it, no; begin in this very moment to move away from the ego-self who desires the attention from people – toward the soul who literally lives on the love of the Father. Have not worry children, this is an easy step in your careers.

This week, make time to remove yourself from the noise of the material world. Make time for deep-thinking, even journaling. Walk the walk of the Correcting Time. Know that my heart is full as I look into your eyes. I am with ever-growing love. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Find Corrections To Old Wounds And Set Patterns That Do Not Serve

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-02-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am with peace this evening just being witness to your willingness to reach higher understanding. You have gathered with the intentions to serve Father and one another. Nobody here this evening wants to be the best, brightest, most intelligent, or stepping upon the backs of others to find a seat near the Master. You came here this evening seeking to give and receive, to learn and teach, to listen and be heard, to love and be loved. This is our brotherhood. This is our unity and our point of focus.

You each have your mortal desires, your wants and needs. Father knows this, and He is inclined to integrate it into your divine destiny. He longs for your happiness. He longs for your closeness with Him.

To have a helpful hand in understanding, and having mortal needs and wants satisfied, it is important to fulfill spiritual prerequisites. Every day, the faithful set out to do the best they possibly can. Situations arise where Father has opportunity to work through you, to teach you and others.

Personal baggage that one may carry from childhood may rise up to interfere with your spiritual intention. Memories from the past may cause one to act out in a manner that was not intended. In life there are wounds and there are scars; and in order to live a free life, one must at some point address these wounds.

It is difficult to follow through with spiritual intentions when old mortal wounds surface. These old wounds tend to lead one to sway toward the animal characteristics. For example: An employer may ask you to perform a certain task which reverts your mind back to a memory that was difficult, causing you spirit poisons. These feelings may interfere with your good intentions to be a loyal employee.

Are you free from the responsibility of your behavior because you were once victim to some past trauma? Of course not! These traumas must be dealt with in order to have an understanding, and to make the way clear for spiritual happenings. One who has not dealt with resentments of the past will appear as an embittered person. There will be no new meanings and values, let alone a clear channel for Father to work through.

We have reviewed this lesson in the past, and this evening we are reviewing it again for the sake of becoming a conduit for Father's works, and for the Correcting Time to take a firmer hold. You are to be able to recognize and overcome the common dysfunctions of mortal living. Mortal errors are not held over your heads as if you will require punishment by God, no! you are to understand yourselves so that you can help others, which in turn does enlarge the kingdom and marks a foothold upon the stages in Light and Life.

When you face particular confrontations be not rash in your actions. Know that if you are in observant waiting, you will surely receive understanding regarding associated negativity, and wherefrom it originated; this aids in keeping control over emotional behavior. Be careful of those past attachments that would make you lean toward spiritual poisons. In your times of quiet, be ready to receive understanding of past hurtful events. Have pen in hand and know that Father is as desirous of your good mental health as He is your spiritual.

This week, review your life patterns and how some negative events keep repeating themselves. There is an answer to those things that seem to bind you and keep you from being the person you were meant to be. Have not distress over this particular assignment, no – simply be aware of how you may react in certain instances, for some old behavior pattern may be attached.

This evening our lesson is simple. We will not change the world overnight. The masses will not be enlightened all at once and swept up by the Creator Son and His angels. We are on a personal level, children. We are on a realistic level. You are not to surpass the plan of the Father. No one's desire for grandeur can overcome the basic plan of our Father. As simple as this Teaching Mission may seem, the tasks are much larger than you could conceive. We are committed, however, by any means, to fulfill Michael's plan.

Be not worried with the everyday complaints of a changing world. Know that Father is at hand and is in all you do; the possibilities are immeasurable. You are known, watched over, and indeed, loved. Again, know that all small things lead to something grand. That is all. Know that I am with growing love for you each. Go in peace. Until next week, shalom.

Acts Of Service Rather Than Creating Drama | Let Not Your Good Intentions Subvert Father's Will

Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 02-09-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am with appreciation for your honesty this evening. How wonderful it is to be with comfort when speaking your true thoughts and feelings. We are entering upon that level of the brotherhood that is more encompassing of all personality types. As we look back over history we find that in those times of discomfort there was a great deal of education. Experience has been shown to be a teacher of the masses.

Environmental happenings, or occurrences that would teach the masses on a grand scale, are always an opening to receive enlightenment. Individuals who experience life together are one another's mentors and students. Together we keep the ship of faith moving in the right direction. Everyone on our ship has a function to perform. Also does everyone receive from those who 'serve for the good of the whole.'

As a mortal, I remember that unless some persistent trauma was occurring, it would seem as if life was meaningless or standing still. I can remember that I myself created much of my life's drama. It wasn't without much adversity that I had been able to be calm enough to receive understanding on real meanings and values.

We can think back to the days of the Master and His followers. His beloved apostles were prone to seek out excitement concerning the kingdom. It was with much effort on the part of our Master to assist these apostles in understanding that the kingdom was with common sense. The Master tried to teach the natural flow of life. There would be no lasting lessons learned if the kingdom should come with miraculous happenings.

Think for a moment how those times of new awareness would have resulted if one of the Master's apostles were in charge. How would one of His mortal allies have introduced the coming kingdom? If Judas had his way, how would life be different today? Had the Master been influenced by the thoughtless concerns of popularity, where would the world be today?

There are well-intentioned goodhearted mortals who strive for the glory of the Father and yet, that animal-side is at times with an irresistible temptation to seek for self-glory. The stages of Light and Life will be ushered in by those who seek for no benefits of any kind for themselves. These individuals know well that Father takes care of His children. He simply asks for your faith and trust in return.

Back to the times of Jesus - there were those mortals that carried on with trust in the Master. From where did this trust come? How did these individuals come to fully believe that the Master and His cause was indeed legitimate? All of Father's children are equipped with this spiritual sensor that aids one in the search for truth. Those that carried onward with the Master's teachings with very little alterations were demonstrating their show of trust in Jesus, the God-man.

Take Eve for example, where was her spiritual sensor that promoted trust in Father's plan? Eve truly thought she was being of help to Father, and yet all the while she knew full well she sought advice from dishonorable sources. 'Eve was not mortal and should have been more likely to receive spiritual guidance' you say, and I agree! and yet I understand that many individuals, every day, overlook that spiritual sensor that determines right and wrong. It all is indeed a part of mortal experience and education. If our spiritual historical figures could have such an erring experience on an experimental mortal planet, then certainly could the average mortal.

I realize that life can seem mundane and monotonous - and certainly within the Teaching Mission there is temptation to create excitement; but I am asking, on behalf of those who watch over us, to simply be about the Father's business. Each time there is temptation to create drama - instead, put your energy toward good works. Find a service project or a cause that you could focus on. In this is there the presence of God. In this is there that feeling of truly belonging to a family of kingdom believers.

In the simplest tasks for your fellows, therein is a closeness to Father you can feel that you won't feel elsewhere. Put your beliefs into action. Do not sit back and declare your good intention to the world; but rather, go out and find some small way to serve. Be not tempted to change or surpass the Father's plan, as did Eve and those early apostles had attempted. History has been a good teacher. Know that you are at the beginning of your careers. There is an endless wonder and glory that awaits you - allow it to unfold.

No questions this evening. Know that my heart is truly connected to yours. Look for me throughout the week. I always enjoy our fellowship. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Rise Above Everyday Drama | Those Fulfilled From Within Work For Father's Glory
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-16-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. This evening we have had a fine mix of material and spiritual - a healthy look at the balance of living the material life on spiritual terms, yes.

For a moment let us drop the concerns of the day, and in our minds take a step to higher ground. Let us go beyond family, chores and finances, and take this step up to a higher plateau. Let us rise above the clouds of serious efforts to the clear air of natural allowing. Here we can feel the sun's warmth upon our face, the breeze in our hair, the grass under our feet. Take a restful breath and simply 'be.' Look about you in this place of rest - there is no past to regret, no future to fret about; there is only the clarity of your being.

Everyday-striving can indeed take a toll on the budding soul that is truly you. Remember to find time to be in this space often, a place without striving, worry, restlessness, and obligation. Find time to feel yourselves rest back into the arms of your loving Father. Have not worry, accept His spiritual restoration, His love, His appreciation of you, the real you.

Last week we discussed possessing a spiritual sensor - that meter which measures your understanding of 'right and wrong.' To personalize this sensor, we could indeed call this our Mystery Monitor, Thought Adjuster, or 'Father within.' Being caught up within the everyday-living drama it is easy to overlook our spiritual sensor, that inner-knowing that gives us brief glimpses of reality. To take time each day to rise above those things that does consume your mind, gives rest and energy to live - and live well.

Keeping clear contact with Father is always an antidote to the illness of an imbalanced ego. Those that are fulfilled from within are less likely to surpass the Father's plans, or believe that their personal plan would speed things along. It would seem in today's society - that those who put forth the most effort to work, indeed have the most and/or 'deserve the most;' and that once you have the most it seems to be understood that now you can work the least. Yes, it seems to always be one extreme to the other.

I can say that the life that seems to be on an even keel, perhaps without so much drama, probably is the most balanced, peaceful, and efficient - meaning that those who are clear and confident in mind are wonderful instruments for the Father's works. Remember the Master - His good works were as He passed by. 'All things in balance' was one of His life's mottos. He ministered 'as He worked.' He was ministered to as He rested. He was nourished by Father and the Earth.

Jesus was extremely busy without creating more everyday drama. He had a historical obligation to fulfill, for He was to become the Sovereign of a universe. He was to accept and drink the bitter cup of mortal life. He was to deal with a people whose hearts were hardened and bound by tradition. In all this, He carried on very simply without the need to be told He was doing a fine job. His job was thankless and yet, this was not the point of His mission. He worked not to gain attention or notoriety from the public.

The Master indeed had an eye single to the glory of His Father in heaven, the rest was of no concern to Him. The material world could crumble and He would still be about the Father's business; there would still be time to pray, work, laugh, fellowship, minister, and receive abundance from the Father who loved Him deeply, and a universe who worked for His sovereignty.

This week, my only instruction is to find rest and continue to exercise the mortal mind to rise above the everyday drama to becoming an instrument for Father, who seeks to lead you into Light and Life. Are there questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, regarding the 'balance of daily living,' you have given us a lot of guidance on that over the years. It is so hard to abruptly change pattern – or at least it is for me; change seems to come so slow. In your life was it slow also? or was it quicker for you to make adjustments and change the old patterns once you knew of a higher way.

ABRAHAM: Oh no, my time was much more slow because we had not had the Master's influence. My mentor (Machiventa) was wonderful and yet, I was still filled with traditions that I was trying to keep loyal to. It would seem the more of man's knowledge you are taught, the more you have to work at freeing yourself from these thoughts and being open to new thoughts – or, being connected to the cosmic mind and the universal circuits. I do see deep and everlasting changes in you, my son. Always with time and experience comes wisdom. One can choose to be beaten down by life's circumstances – or, to use these circumstances as steppingstones toward a better life. I believe you have taken positive steps in growth and integrating your experience into the sum total of the man you are today. I believe you have done well. Carry on. (Calvin: Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

TECTRA: Abraham, I was listening to a new dimensions radio show last night, and a man on there, a psychiatrist, Dr. Gary Schwartz, claims through some research that he has been doing scientifically, that he can prove the existence of an afterlife; and he was saying how very soon they are going to be able to prove the existence of God, scientifically. Can you comment on how that will influence, or affect life on this planet?

ABRAHAM: I am literally speechless. [laughter.] I did not see that coming. The concept alone, of 'scientific proof that God exists,' is quite flawed. Of course those believers in science should indeed change their tune – but still, there are so many misconceptions of God, really. It is understandable there would be extreme chaos without a divine upholder of all things. Scientific proof that God exists would practically ruin the point of being an agondonter. [laughter.] Take the near-death experience, for example, there are those who have had real spiritual experiences, yes; and there are those who simply experienced a lack of oxygen. [roaring laughter.] The bottom line would be, that if in these experiences – if you are indeed changed for the better then certainly do they hold value. If you are one who needs scientific proof that God exists then where is the point in learning faith. Wouldn't some simply try to love God for fear of what would happen if they did not? Your question is indeed intriguing and will cause me much thought. [laughter.] Well done, my son. One more question?

HARRISON: Abraham, I hope this is not a useless question, but it has been on my mind about this movie coming out called The Passion of The Christ. It seems to be having some mixed effects on people's emotions. I don't know if it is something worthy of you commenting on or if you just want to ask if someone else has a question.

ABRAHAM: I haven't seen it. [laughter.]

CALVIN: You can get in free. [laughter again.]

ABRAHAM: I do believe we are on the brink of tremendous mindal change. This movie is a drop in the bucket, and believe me, greater things than this will you see – in fact, you each will be assisting in the changes to come. The important thing to remember is that the Master was indeed loving, brotherly, and Fatherly – and wanted for our highest and best good. Hopefully, this movie, and things like it, will spark the best in people. Good question, Harrison.

I have much enjoyed our time this evening. You each are always teaching me new things. I am always tickled to see you; your sparkling personalities come to the surface. My love is ever growing. Until next time, shalom.

Simplify The Material Life And The Drama. Struggle is a Part of Father's Intended Path To Him

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-23-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am so inspired by your faith and willingness to put forth effort to be about our Father's business. Your faith is an energy which makes these transmissions possible. You have faith and confidence that I will return each week – and indeed, I do.

You, our Correcting Time students, are accepting of these lessons in their simplified form and learn what you can therefrom. I appreciate your acceptance and the fact that you receive what is given without condition, or attempt to make change or fit these teachings into a format for ego fulfillment. I am exceedingly grateful. You take our spirituality to a level of practical reality. Well done.

Again I would ask you to cast off the cares of the day. Rise above the family turmoil, employment, politics and community concerns. Take a step higher into that peaceful arena within the mind that allows you to breathe easy. Relax your muscles, feel your heart rate begin to slow, breathe in that peace that only the Father of all fathers can grant you. Here in this place, rest is acceptable, healing is allowed, and Father whispers to you the wisdom of the ages.

Why are we here in the world at this time? What is our sole purpose? What is our Earthly destiny leading to?

I believe many mortals get caught up in the drama of living and tend to overlook the overall purpose of going beyond merely existing, to really living. We are here because at some moment in time we were a thought in the mind of God. The act of love and thought created the actuality, which brought us into being.

Father has worked with most of us our entire lives to get us to really know Him, to understand His role in our existence. He has always loved us, yes. He will always love us and want for our highest good. I cannot claim to know the Father's overall plan and purpose – but I can say, up to this point in my eternal career, I fully trust Father and have some realization of His endless possibilities. Therefore, I crave to do His will; I seek out the right and the good, and desire it with all of my being.

I look back on my personal history and realize Father was always there – not coaxing me heavenward or pushing me to be someone I wasn't, but lovingly guiding me toward Him; I can see that now. As a man on Earth, I was somewhat blinded to those facts; I put first what my eyes could see. My priority was to have good thoughts about who and what I was. The material world was distracting with all its promises of personal grandeur. I was then, and am now, grateful for guidance, and 'slow but sure' enlightenment.

Many mortals every day are with internal pain, mindal pain, regrets – and to compensate for this they do search for relief through the building up of ego; the material world becomes everything to them – their god, so to speak. This temporary self-satisfaction is fleeting and a waste of energy. These are the individuals who seem to be in the middle of all the daily drama.

I thank God for the spiritual path; I thank God for the slow but sure enlightenment; and, I thank God for progression – for these are indeed, soul saving – meaning that when one becomes aware of eternal things, focus is changed and actions are sure to follow.

Mortal life is a struggle at times, yes, but this is the way it is supposed to be on an evolutionary planet such as this – not good or bad, just the way it is. When one can quiet the mind and material distractions, then do you take a step above life's dramas to the clear air for understanding your plan and purpose.

This week, spend time simplifying your material life. Take note of those distractions that would cost you energy. Practice rising above the fog of confusion into the clear air of Father's wisdom. With enough practice, this becomes a way of living. Know that Father knows you are each making your best effort. He longs to serve you. He longs to uplift the world through you, not in grand earth-shattering ways, but in small, simple, lasting ways.

That is all for this evening. Know that I visit each one of you during the week and feel honored to serve you in any way. As always, my love is ever growing for you. Go in peace. Until next week, shalom.

Material Life Of Today Aids In The Eternal Life Ahead

Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 03-01-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I believe your enthusiasm is contagious this evening. I am energized by your presence. I find that life in the flesh today is always answering those questions for tomorrow – for those who work for eternal life.

Let us again take a few moments to align with Father: Again this evening, let us rise above occurrences of the day. Put away your concerns as if they are already resolved. Look back over your life and remember how things have always seemed to work out. No matter how much you had worried or made effort, you have always seemed to come through life circumstances a bit wiser. Rise above your mindal concerns, physical ailments, plans for the future, notions of who you are and who you are to become. Be here with me in this place of serenity. In this place there is simple knowing that Father is here; He is real; He is at hand to guide and comfort. As well, Michael is here; His beautiful combination of magnificence and practicality sets a wonderful example. Also in this place is our Divine Mother; Her grace and power is a tangible presence which enables us to become more. We are with our Kingdom Family. We are with safety and comfort anywhere in the universe. We are with the wisdom of the ages – right here, right within the limitless space of all that is us. Here, we master the self. Here, we have power and self-control. Here, we have the tools to proceed into Light and Life. Here, we aid in the growth of the Supreme Being.

You of Agondonter status are truly blessed. I am anxious with the thoughts of your eternal discoveries. I am indeed honored to be with you on those occasions. Every day we have opportunities to work for the eternal life ahead. Living in a material life is certainly working toward the eternal, yes. To deal with your fellows on a daily basis, successfully, is working toward eternal life and is opening doors for the adventures ahead. Your experience today is the tools for tomorrow. The heartbreak today is the wisdom of tomorrow.

Many who seek a spiritual life often find the material life confusing because it seems not to align for the good they envision. 'I must work to earn my daily bread,' they say, 'and this takes time away from my efforts to expand the Kingdom.' I say – this 'working for daily bread,' is the Kingdom. Those individuals you meet are all opportunities for growth, in one way or another.

Your actual physical handling of materials seems to be monotonous, yes – and yet, the mere skills acquired keeps the material brain active, and this leads to well-balanced thinking. Some repetitive exercises are indeed a break in life's drama. The creative 'building with the hands' opens the door for new thoughts while giving rest to the mind and the tendency to over-dramatize situations.

Being a parent or caregiver, does seem to create a great deal of mindal strain, yes; and yet, this is the very experience that shows us the personality of God. In working with children, we are again taken back to the mind of a child, and the simplicity that gives one freedom to explore, express, and exert personal effort.

Let us review the personal lessons within this very group that has taken us to new arenas of understanding mind, personality, and soul. Imagine the eternal career ahead and the varying personalities, possible conflicts, and growth possibilities. These small challenges of today equip you with skills that will aid you in your eternal adventures ahead.

Agondonter status is an honor and is to be enjoyed and celebrated – it is to live fully within each experiential moment, not to ‘long for better’ or seek escape. Your life today is very important; every single moment is a pearl to add to the strand of eternal existence. I say, enjoy!

For the week ahead, ponder how the material life of today aids in the eternal life ahead. Have not worry. Remember to often rise above the daily drama to confer with your Kingdom Family. That is all.

Know that my affection grows for you each, daily. Go in peace. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Make Effort To Find Truth, Beauty and Goodness, In Daily Living

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-08-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I enjoy these smaller but intimate groups. There appears to be more freedom to show your true selves. Of course, there is more opportunity to delve into deeper subjects because time permits. At any rate, I do enjoy our weekly visits. I am inspired time and time again to see the good that our Father bestows upon us.

Again this week, I ask that you leave behind any and all concerns. Rise above that thinking that seems to antagonize you into action. Rise above that thinking that permits no rest. Step into that space that our eternal Family occupies. Be with me here in mind and body. Be open to our Father’s abundance, Michael’s watchcare and Mother’s comfort.

Here in this region of the world, you have opportunity to experience the passing from one season to the next. As your climate becomes warmer you can literally feel a change in en masse attitude. There is a definite spark in the air that reawakens individuals to newness. You can see the material changes with the budding of flowers, the land taking on newness, birds appearing, yes. The material changes are obvious and with it, the newness of attitude is a real energy you can perceive only with the spiritual eyes.

Reality these days seems to be all a rage in the reactions of mortals – those worldly things perceived as reality seem to be in the forefront of everyone’s mind. Each individual has their personal reality, yes, but also is there a ‘mass reality,’ and those worldly events seem to get people’s attention and yet, make them feel helpless.

You that strive to live a spiritual life embrace truth, and for the most part, wholeheartedly. Reality to you does have a spiritual twist and yet, there does seem to be some fear that reality may blindside you; therefore, you seem to pursue truth to the point that some of life's goodness is lost or overlooked.

Down through history there have been worldly happenings, there has been progress and there has been evolution – this will always be. The scientists, or intellectuals of the world, seem to want change or improve history, and indeed they make it more complex. The goodness in life is seemingly overlooked and much of mortal focus is on material striving and/or 'survival.'

"It is all I can do to make it through each day with my sanity intact," you say. I believe that with all this new awareness and embracing of reality it is also somewhat a magnet to a more complex way of life.

There are three aspects of the Father that we can strive for: Truth, yes, is one – but also is there beauty and goodness. Without this balance, life becomes all about effort and striving without reaping any harvest. You, my friends, are not made to be so conditioned by the world's circumstances; your environment does not dictate who you really are. You are not subject to live by a given set of rules, no, you have freedom to enjoy abundance.

My friends, you are to have peace and goodness in this mortal experience. Definitely do you need to make yourself aware of the small, simple, good things mortal life has to offer. Goodness, beauty, rest, reversion – these are allowed in this life, not just striving, learning adversity, or progression.

Look back at the Master's life in the flesh. He left the interpretation of all reality to His Father in heaven. He was jovial and yet, He was always about the Father's business. He enjoyed an afternoon playing with children, speaking with friends, working His craft and spending time with His family. His life was not all about His death. His life was simply not just about how He endured all life's adversity. The Master's life was about living – going beyond 'merely existing,' to being fully aware of truth, beauty, and goodness.

Every day is not a self-sacrifice. Every day is not a trade-off, suffering for ease in living. If you make not effort to see the good you are not reaping the benefits from living a balanced life. Joy literally produces chemicals in the body that are healing.

Where is your joy in daily living? How might you be making your daily life more complex – as if to justify its importance? Think about how wonderful it feels to simply bring joy to others.

This week, be at ease and look for the goodness in life. Just as the springtime brings a change in mind and heart, your efforts to find joy in daily living will bring improvement in your ability to live a balanced life.

That is all. Know that my heart is joy-filled each and every time we meet. Go in peace. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

A Balanced Relationship With Father Moves the Whole | All Of Life Is Important

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP

03-15-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Once again I am grateful to be among you this evening. Your welcoming hearts and minds make my tasks more enjoyable. I thank you. I sincerely appreciate your varying personalities. Each one of you brings a unique ingredient to that reality we are co-creating.

When I review my existence, I am filled with appreciation, for Father has always been there. Throughout those difficult times when I was closed-off to Him always was the good Father there and yet, not intrusive. I am touched by the fact that I am such a minute part of the universe – and yet, Father leads me to find it a fact that I am His child and always a priority – as are you, my friends.

Many individuals fear isolation or loneliness – and in fact, live their lives according to what they believe will keep those they love in their lives. In other words, they work for self-protection. If every universal citizen understood their place in Father's heart, they would know for certain that they were never, and never will be, alone, abandoned, or isolated.

To have every mortal on this world believe they are a beloved child of God, just as is their fellows, then certainly would that cast us forth into Light and Life. Your role as Teaching Mission ambassadors is one that shows care and concern for all Father's creatures – that all life is important.

Certainly, love is a factor in growth. If you could leave one message to the world, it should be that "we are all indeed blessed, for Father has made this so" – this would certainly dismiss the lines between classes of people; there would be none superior or inferior. With such a message, there would be practically no judgment, for there would be a common understanding between individuals that life is a series of lessons, and that we are each students. No matter how well we do (or not) we are indeed, loved and well watched over by a wonderful Father and an expansive cast of universe caretakers.

Over these years we have made it our priority to understand the Fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man. You, my friends, are beginning to see the importance this has in directing us toward Light and Life. Love is a nutrient which causes growth. Kindness is a producer of healing chemicals. You each are endowed with a spiritual power that can create tremendous change. Our goal is to create change toward the good for the whole.

This week, make effort to have understanding on your definition on the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. Note how your well-balanced relationship with Father affects your relationship with your fellows. Note that kindness done to one creates healing for the giver and receiver, and also for those who have awareness of the kindness. The small amount of effort you make today to be kind may make a tremendous difference in enlarging our doorway toward Light and Life, not to mention the growth of the Supreme Being.

No questions this evening, perhaps next week. Know that my purpose is to aid you in receiving your own spiritual information. I am no more than a helping hand – definitely something I love to do. Know that in all my daily activities I think about you each. You have certainly been a wonderful example of kindness and love to me. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Spiritual Benefits Are Here And Now | Light And Life Can Begin On Individual Basis, Now

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-22-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I always gain some insight when I witness your discussions. I thank you. I am always with amazement with each passing year of your time; there is always something new; there are always some issues of right and wrong; there is always evolution.

To look back over my personal history, I have indeed seen a great many changes; and really, this is not a long period of time. I have been witness to the history of devastations to this world in my short time, but I have also seen the growth therefrom. I can rejoice at Father's hand in our personal, as well as collective, evolution. As I reminisce now, so also will you be in my place someday - reviewing your own relationship with history and the good that inevitably comes.

During this time of year, many are made to turn their thoughts toward the resurrection of the Master. The resurrection was about newness. Said Jesus, "I have the power to lay down my life, and I have the power to take it up again."

The risen Master gives all mortals hope, a hope that all of life's striving, is for the good. All the effort you make every day to grow in spirituality takes you to this one moment that pulls your faith from merely hoping, to an actuality.

Is resurrection your reward for a life well lived? No! it is simply a continuation of your universe career. Everyday-living events, lessons learned, love (gained or lost), and experience had - is your reward. Everyday-awareness is a reward in itself. In the mortal life do we each strive so that we may reap the end reward? of course not! We strive minute by minute to make a difference in the here and now. Here and now is our reward. We are indeed a part of the Father's works, right now. We each play a role in the birthing of Light and Life.

It is difficult in the material life to see the 'spiritual' benefit, yes, we understand. Many mortals believe that the spiritual benefit comes at the end of a 'hard life lived well.' I say no! for the benefits are here and now; the growth occurs 'as we speak.' The past was well worth the price you paid to come to the awareness you have today. Who would you be without your experience? You are each unique and separate, and at the same time, all one.

This week, as we ponder the resurrection of our Master let us review the beautiful example He set for all of us. The story does not end with the risen Lord and His morontial appearances, no. The Master was also beginning a new career as well - as our Universe Sovereign. Did His struggles in His seven bestowals earn Him the reward of Universe Sovereign? Is a day gathered with a universal crowd in some celebration more meaningful than a day spent in the hills, as with John Mark? My lesson this evening is kept short to take questions if you wish.

CALVIN: Abraham, I think last week when the visitors were here from St. George (Ruby and Tracey), Tracey wanted to know if there were any words for her as far as starting a group there, or for her being a part of this group?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Delightful ladies indeed. My daughters, things meaningful take time and patience, to grow. If you would be willing to take on such a task for the Mission, then so be it. I find your sincerity to be a catalyst to your training to receive a Teacher's words and transmit to whoever listens. Feel at peace to take time to practice. I will assist you myself. Have not worry nor fear, for such will cause you to stumble over the gift that is yours should you so desire. Lasting things take time to develop. Therefore, have patience and make time to practice stillness. Your faith will see you through. Your fellowship with one another will maintain balance. You, my daughters, do well. Carry on. Another question?

TECTRA: I have a question about addictions. It seems like addictions are becoming stronger. I wonder why this would be. I'm guessing, as related to this new energy coming into the planet, that if people don't have a spiritual connection, it creates difficult addictions? If you could just comment on addictions?

ABRAHAM: Good question, my son. As the circuits have been renewed and spirituality is becoming more of a reality, individuals are finding out they must look within, at themselves and the lives they live. Many are in fear that to change anything will be too difficult. To stay closer to the animalistic side seems to be easier for them. The meaning that is being drawn from everyday living in today's world is so much more pronounced than before - to understand it does take effort and personal growth. To many individuals this means change, and that is seemingly too difficult. To have escape through alcohol or drugs keeps one from having to deal with the effort needed to find real meaning in life. Chemical addiction seems to be a way to live a life of ease. This, of course, is false. You can escape life's meaning temporarily, yes, but eventually, you will need to have the experiences - there really is no escape. There is joy, however, in any effort taken to understand meanings and values. Unfortunately, many individuals worry about 'how they appear' - and therefore, they conform to societies' recommendations. Society's way of living is much more demanding than is the spiritual life; but there is nowhere near the joy which can be attained by living a life in the Spirit - for therein is this energy, as you mentioned. With this new awareness, many find it disturbing, and seek escape. But I say, many also, through addiction, come to find Father and a life of a 'new and better way.' All experience is worthwhile, even for those who seem to be bound by addiction. Have not fear or hopelessness, for there are a great many resources to be had to assist. One can bring healing, and enlightenment to others as well, if one should so choose to accept healing for one's self. Have not fear. Good question, my son. Another question?

HARRISON: Abraham, my question is not just for myself, but perhaps for others that are experiencing physical pain. I was looking for some words that you might offer that would help me with my thoughts and actions, and which might be pleasing to the Father in dealing with the pain?

ABRAHAM: There is always value to be had by experience - even the experience of physical pain. When one is feeling fit, then one can be about his daily business. Those who know this physical pain and are unable to do even menial tasks, know the thoughts that on better days they will indeed appreciate feeling better. The human body is indeed magnificent in its overall design. The mind however, is a mystery. The brain does have its central nervous system which carries messages – to, and from, all parts of the body. You cannot separate the mind from the body. The mind, however, is important to the healing. It is the brain that releases those chemicals needed to promote physical health. My son, Harrison, you are exhausting your human resources with this issue, and gaining mindal strength as the body ages, yes. However, it is not sinful to seek out medical attention. Father works with science, as He works with anything else. You will know when it is time to move in a different path, to seek relief. I might add – you are very emotionally involved with your place of employment. Your tendency to bring this employment on as a part of your overall identity is not helping your physical body. The long hours are not helping either. Balance, my son. Get to the bottom of those issues which cause you concern, which drives you to cling emotionally to your job. What are those issues? Have time for journaling. I will be there to assist you. You do well, Harrison, have not worry. All things in balance, yes. One more question?

AZSURAY: We had a discussion in our study group Thursday. Since then, I have been trying to find the answer in the Urantia Book but, when do we get our personality?

ABRAHAM: Personality is indeed a gift, and is assigned to each individual at the time of birth. Of course time and experience add characteristics, and the personality begins to take shape around the age of two. With the coming of the Thought Adjuster, the personality is stabilized, and of course is a fertile ground for new growth of traits and characteristics. Is this what you are asking? (Azzuray: Yes, and thank you so much.) Abraham: You are welcome. Again, this is my understanding. Always is there room to expand on my understanding.

With that, I shall take my leave. Know that with each passing week I feel our bond grow stronger. You are my friends. I love you. Until next time, shalom.

Do Not Let Small Annoyances Interfere with Divine Communication | Aid From Our Divine Caretakers

Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-29-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying your freedom of discussion. You must admit there are not many places in this world to have such freedom. I am honored to be a part of you and your group.

Let us take a moment to rise above that busyness of mind. Allow the stress of the day to roll away. Come into our place of family. Feel the presence of our First Source and Center, our Brother/Father Michael and our Mother. Be here with me in this comfort and safety. In this place we believe all things are possible; healing on any level is possible. Relief of worry and fear is here right now in this place.

It is permissible and highly recommended to simply be. Have not thought about yesterday, today, or tomorrow. Take in that nourishment your Divine Family provides for you. Each day I live I become more and more grateful that I am tended to in all ways. Even in my times of struggle, I am never made to suffer alone. My knowledge is always building. My experience is always teaching. I am with fullness of heart to have the realization that Father is always with me.

As the world prepares for newness, they are finding Father in all aspects of living. The mortal and divine worlds are becoming more integrated and actualized. The awareness now is a living energy. Many know not how they know – they just do. This evening's lesson will be given by your friend, and mine, Emulan.

EMULAN: Greetings, children, it has been a while since we have had the pleasure of spending time together. Whereas you are bringing the 'Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man' into your lives as an everyday reality, we will have discussion on the Father's works. I realize this scenario may seem simple, but bear with me.

A child who is reprimanded for committing some dangerous act goes through many emotions, and realizes not the benefit a parent has to offer. You can tell a child the dangers of a hot stove, for example, and yet, he is not fully aware because he has not had the experience of being burned. The mystery of the stove does somehow call out to the child's sense of adventure, and the child is still not taking precautions because he knows not the complete outcome.

The Father is the good Parent, and though you may not hear Him with your human ears or see Him face to face, He still takes opportunities to show you certain outcomes, which would either be harmful or beneficial. This is becoming more of a reality every day.

You are perhaps annoyed with a traffic ticket one day, and this moves awareness to the forefront of your mind that 'rules apply' in society, and if they are not followed there will be consequences; therefore, you simply control your speed in the automobile. Sure enough, this awareness has created in you a new caution, and your exertion of self-control aids in your averting an accident.

I am saying, what appears to be negative could very well be a message from Father. Those small annoyances of today bring your awareness to a place of caution or observance. Life is most enjoyed when there is balance. Father would have us live life on an even keel if He could. There would not be the stressful rollercoaster ride if He had His way. Too much drama leads to too much stress, which bogs down the mind and awareness sensory. Certainly there is no peace or rest in imbalance.

Be observant of those small occurrences that may perhaps be a message from the Universe Caretakers who are attempting to make you aware of a new and better way. For example, on the very day the child may reach the stove and become seriously injured, he instead has a smaller harmful occurrence which pulls the parent's awareness to future possibilities for teaching, and therefore, having power or ability to change outcomes.

The Father speaks to you. The universe gives you messages. The spiritual energy of this planet is very much alive and attempting to communicate with you every moment of the day. Father does have plans for you each to fulfill – and certainly, He would see to your health and well-being if you will allow it. This, my friends, does require your awareness and effort. This is a wonderful gift. This new 'communicating energy' is a blessing you should have had all along.

Balance, patience, and awareness are indeed the keys to understanding how Father relates with you. I am not simply droning on about mysticism or sign-seeking, no - I am explaining your God-given gift. In my earlier mortal life I had plenty of opportunities to receive this universal or 'God-communication,' but I was too bogged down in mind with my mortal responsibilities. I learned, however, that even though there are accidents of time, the Father does indeed bring you awareness so that you may endure any and all things.

Most everyone knows of my tragic loss in my mortal life. As I look back now, I do not believe that it was my wife and child's "time to go," no! I believe it was truly an accident. And yet I can see now that Father, in all His mercy, had attempted to give me some preparation for the terrible things that were to come. While Father and His universe associates know much about our future, they still have not control over our freewill, and they rely upon our willingness to be spirit led.

This week, look for messages from Father. Be aware of those inconvenient things that may have an underlying message. No, do not be paranoid or overly cautious, but as the child's attention is drawn to the mystery of the stove, allow yourselves to look at this week's experiment as a spirit adventure, knowing how to use this universal energy that communicates directly with you.

As always, it is my pleasure to be included as one of you. I return you to Abraham. Farewell.

I am ABRAHAM. Thank you, to our brother and friend who has delivered us this evening a message of great value. I am always in appreciation of his assistance and differing insight. As they say, two heads are better than one.

This week I am also expecting you to find time to rise above the busyness in mind, to be with our universal Family. Have moments of no concern, worry, or fear whatsoever. Make your best effort to find time to rest and simply be. Your responsibilities will always wait for you. Be joyful, children. Know that I am ever growing more in love with you each. That is all. Until next time, shalom.

Spend Those Few Moments With Father Every Day

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-05-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I find it an honor to be among you this evening. You can see your ministry at work. Your willingness to share personal issues and offer solutions is a great help to all of you who attend. I also learn and am revived in spirit when I am witness to your discussions. Well done! As most of you know, our lesson plans are designed to be flexible and are always subject to change. I give where I see a need.

Children, there is really nothing so pressing that you cannot afford to spend a few moments with Father. This applies to any given moment. Right now, with me, take a step higher in mind:

[Short pause.]

In this space there is rest right now. No one is demanding anything from you. There are no deadlines, pressing issues, or anything that can't wait. This is your priority, children; this is for you. In this moment, we receive. We receive the ministry of a caring universe; the unconditional love from our Father; the attention of a doting older Brother; the graciousness from an adoring Mother. In this moment here and now we are receptive; we receive that life-giving abundance that only Father can give.

My friends, what is so important that you cannot find time every day to reach this place in your mind! Mortal life is struggle, yes, but it is not meant to be miserable. Father knows your every need and oversees your well-being every moment of every day. There is nothing to fear or worry over.

You that would live a spiritual life must practice a spiritual life. You cannot just 'be about your business' and expect peace and comfort from a loving universe; it is simply not in your reception without a break for Father. The Master, however, was always about the Father's business – and indeed, all aspects of His mortal life were looked-after.

Does this mean Jesus lived a life of ease? No. He was, however, working at optimum spiritual power within the mortal life. He worried less, therefore He thought with more intelligence. He trusted Father more, and His emotions were in balance. He did do those things He knew He was supposed to do: He rested, nourished the human body, prayed, trusted in the Father; and therefore, His life's results were differing from those who had neglected the body, mind, and who only had trust in self.

You speak of weakness in 'will-power' of doing Father's will – this should be of no concern, for your power comes from a different source than self. To receive the most out of life's abundance, there is a need to hold fast to spiritual laws. To receive comfort and peace, there is a need to have faith in something more than yourself. What you put forth in life is the exact proportion you will receive out of life.

This week, tend to your spiritual priorities; exercise the soul; tame the 'emotional mind.' Find a few minutes every day to rise above that 'animal mind.' You have spiritual power directly tied-into the material brain. Worry, stress, and fear are enemies to this gift. We are learning to bring forth the most from what we have. What you know right now is only the tip of the iceberg.

This evening's lesson will be kept short so that you may have time to prepare for the week ahead. Know that every day you are in my thoughts. I am with the concern of a father for you each. My love is ever growing. Until next week, shalom.

The Master's Perfect Example of Yielding to Father's Will is a Map For Us to Follow
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-12-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a wonderful spirit we have here this evening. Your outlook and attitude make this an open arena for our communications. You cannot see me, nor do you have any proof that I exist; and yet, you welcome me each week without fail. I am with gratitude for your faithfulness, and am inspired by your durability.

Mortal life does indeed take its toll on the spirit. You that intend to move forward at any cost of the ego, exhibit a grace that is inspirational to us all. Again here in this meeting, we take a moment to rise above our daily occurrences above our discomforts, worries, and fears. We are safe here at home with our family. Here we make discoveries, find solutions, increase energy, and build upon our faith.

I am feeling the excitement of a shift in the en masse mind. I am able to see the Master's hands at work. The world's inhabitants are hungry for new thought, new direction – simply, something new. I am overjoyed at the influence of our Correcting Time. I am energized at the good that has been produced so far. I need not see results to continue the work, but even I must admit it causes me to rejoice, to be grateful for Father and His well-orchestrated plan and purpose.

Your experience as Mission participants and faithful followers of the Master has made you a wonderful coach for those who are seeking a new and better way. Your willingness to make the most out of humbling experiences puts you in a place to be an awesome example. Every day it would seem there are tests to becoming an expert at perfecting humility. Let me assure you that all experience is used to its fullest to aid you in stepping closer to our Father.

In keeping with the subject of the season, I should like to discuss the Master and His life. Over these many years, you have gained insight into the personality of the Master. His Spirit of Truth keeps us ever reaching and growing. In our attempt to walk a closer walk with Him, our vision of the Master continuously unfolds.

As our experience changes, as our maturity levels increase, also does our vision of the Master evolve; our experience of the Spirit of Truth becomes more real and interactive. Is it He who changes? Of course not! Our vision of Him is always increasing with our willingness to follow Him.

We have discussed the Master's willingness to drink the cup of mortal life, come what may. He was indeed, a super-personality, yes, but remember it was His 'mortal example' that we could all relate to. With each experience, good and bad, the Master was more and more prepared to complete His earthly destiny; with each minute of living faith, He was more and more changed into the individual who would forever change history.

Said the Master: "Why do you call me good, it is the Father in heaven who is good." – and he meant that with all His mind and soul. The Master was wonderful in His own right, granted; and yet, His willingness to be Father-led was a map for Him to follow to have the ability to do the great things He had done. Knowing Father as you do, can you not see these personality traits in the Master and the exemplary life He lived on Urantia?

Willingness to listen, to have not worry about self and to be mindful of the work ahead, also leads to your personal evolution, and lays out a map for you to follow to fulfill your earthly destiny.

As a mortal, you are drawn to the Master because He was also part mortal. He lived your experiences and had faced the very worst that mortal life had to offer. His willingness to have faith – that Father always had something in the works that was adding to His map of earthly destiny, kept Him moving along with great faith.

We go back in time to Gethsemane when the Master had laid prostrate on the ground with the burden of the world upon His back. He knew the bitter cup that had awaited Him; and did indeed have struggle between the mortal and the divine, yes. His mortal side sought comfort from His dozing brethren. His mortal side sought other avenues of escape. His mortal side sought comfort and clarity in what seemed to be uncontrollable circumstances soon to follow. Jesus' divine side, as always, sought His Father's will.

Yes, throughout the Master's life He was made to wait patiently upon the will of Father; He was made to struggle against escape, and embrace His divine side, no matter what. In these moments He did find mindal reconciliation with the divine side. He did find comfort and ministry. He did find strength to carry on.

But the strength that filled this God-man was not just from this one moment in time, no! it was from a lifetime of exercising faith and following that map which Father had laid before Him: a lifetime of working through discomfort; having mindal reconciliation; finding humor in all things; ministering to others; raising a family of younger siblings; carpentry work; teaching; fishing.

Yes, the Master definitely experienced adversity and blessings. And it was these experiences which enabled Him to drink the bitter cup – with grace and perfect balance in all aspects. It was the Master's will that the 'Father's will be done;' and from that, He attained the strength of a universe. Our older Brother was indeed, and still is, an inspiration for us to live by.

This week, look back at your earthly map and what directions it has led you to bring you this far, and ponder where you may be going. How was the Master a light upon your path? What is it about Him that is most inspirational to you?

Children, this week be at peace. Have not concern. Be about the Father's business. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Seek Divine Strength to Persevere And Overcome Weakness

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-19-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. This meeting-time with you does me so much good in mind and spirit. Many times I am made to remember that my purpose is not solely about working; I love my work and yet, meeting with you reminds me that there is so much more. For many of you, this small allotment of time (our meeting here) is the only time you can really generate this spiritual refreshment.

Various religious institutions provide 'services' for their members that, for the most part, uplifts the spirit. While our Mission is informal, this meeting is your time to unify, fellowship, find balance, engage in reasoning, finding solutions, and share in faith. Informally-speaking, this is your church and I thank you for having me. Believe me when I say I am learning right along with you. You have been a wonderful teacher to me. I am with comfort to be among you just as I am.

Again this week, as we allow our concerns to go by the wayside, let us take a step higher in mind to that place of peace. [pause]: Here, we are whole. Here, we are accepted and adored for exactly what we are. This place is a moment's rest from striving or being bogged down with duties, from being entrapped by miscellaneous concerns. Here, we are 'what we are' - and that is, indeed, good. [a minute of pause.]

Over these many years, we have discussed spirituality in conjunction with human behavior, and tonight will be no different - I am apt to give where I can see there is a need.

Last week we spoke a bit on the Master's life, and the strength He gathered over time to become a perfected mortal. In this day and age, impatience is rampant; and to have everything immediately is looked at as common. I say, to have everything should include 'being accepting of the evolving self.' Human weakness is abhorred in this society, and great efforts are made to hide them. It would appear that when weaknesses are viewed by others, they (weaknesses) are confirmed and seemingly here to stay. Many view their real selves riddled with weakness and make great effort to be anything but themselves.

What I love about the Master's example here on Earth was the fact that He was always genuine, always Himself. Yes, this divine example for humanity was always in tune with the Spirit - and therefore, an authentic extension of the Father in heaven. If He had lived His life the way 'others' had expected, where would the world be now?

The Master's loved ones wanted Him to fulfill their greatest expectations and to perform miracles. His loved ones viewed His forthcoming greatness as their greatness, or ego-satisfaction by association. Some of the Master's comrades even desired that He take the kingdom by force. Everybody wants to be on a winning team.

The so-called educated--those wealthy and/or who consider themselves 'most holy' in the land--wanted the Master to disappear altogether. His presence made their self-perception crumble with truth. In His life of genuine goodness, the seemingly holy men of that day recognized their life to be selfish and fake. Did the Master have physical pain? yes! Did He have emotional pain? of course! Did He have love and even hurt for those who rejected Him? yes!

The Master could have very well followed popular opinion; He could have chosen to live by man's rules and not universal law. It is possible, yes, that His life could have been a bit more easy, and certainly could it have been extended. The Master, however, had an eye single to the glory of His Father in heaven. He had a purpose! and there was no one, or thing, or any amount of seemingly Earthly greatness that could take Him from it. His purpose to reveal Father to 'us,' and us 'to the Father,' kept Him selfless - it kept Him focused on the task at hand. All other things were kept by the wayside and subject to His highest divine purpose.

The Master's relationship with His internal Father was the key in strengthening Him to be about Father's business. His everyday practice of spending time with Father strengthened Him a little more each day to go forth with the Father's plan. Had He not had this excellent relationship with Father, maybe He would not have had such strength. You can see how He did make effort to relate more with Father, and then deal with His mortal counterparts thereafter; the Father was always first.

Of course the Master understood weakness. He understood that life's experience is indeed a strengthening for those tasks Father has planned. The Master well understood whom He served. This was His strength – to be about the everyday mundane tasks that were beset before him, knowing full well they were tasks from Father.

Many mortals striving in today's world find their personal weaknesses to be overpowering; and when they fall short, they forget to connect with Father and have a difficult time recovering. To make effort to do good, is a boost in moving forward. To slip in a sinful direction, is indeed a tearing-down of self-esteem for anyone who has a well-balanced conscience, yes.

To do good is to feel good; it is to be in tune with the Spirit. To knowingly, or perhaps even unknowingly, go forward in a negative direction is to feel sorely discouraged. It is to feel desolate and perhaps even abandoned; and certainly, this is an embellished perception of a guilt-ridden mind.

In mortal life there will always be some weaknesses, some places where you will fall short – yes, this will happen. You will make effort of course, in the direction of self-mastery; and many times you may find it unattainable. Do not be so harsh with your budding soul, your evolving self. We are each in a state of becoming, and patience is required to see it through.

This week, do as the Master did in strengthening Himself to handle everyday tasks. Spend time with the Father. Rise to that higher place in the mind. Find a moment every day to ponder 'in whom do you serve?' When moments of weakness arise, think not to tear yourself down immediately; no! dissect the weakness and find its origin; and, the lesson to be learned therefrom. Know that in some way the mortal cries out for comfort from Father, our Source of all that is.

That is all. Know that I am with growing affection for you, my friends. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

[Cannot find a lesson for the next week (4/26/2004).]

Trust Father To Orchestrate Those Small Steps To Overcoming Weakness

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-03-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How wonderful it is to gather with like minds. How blessed are we to have one another. The gathering of our intentions gives us a clear line of communication. I enjoy your stories of hard reality and the lessons learned therefrom. I can definitely relate with your experiences.

We last left off on the topic of weakness. Many individuals spend so much time and energy focusing on how they would desire to be free from their weaknesses. Many people perceive an unpleasant trait within themselves, and even though they dislike it they cannot help but act it out. Much of today's society focuses upon some environmental, political, educational, or cultural ill, and seems to overlook solutions because their emotions are tied up in the injustice.

When you desire something, you focus on taking those steps that bring you closer to your goal. Most of us know that goals take many small steps; one or two large steps or shortcuts just won't do. It is the same with personal weakness – that you much of the time must take several small steps to have understanding, to attain the spiritual tools, and overcome the weakness.

Many are bound by guilt and poor self-confidence, and that keeps them focusing on the problem and overlooking the small steps toward solution. To focus on a weakness (or some problem) is often to be emotionally attached to it, which can stir spirit poisons.

The Master's key to balanced living was to keep an eye single to the glory of God. That was His focus. That is what kept His emotions in balance while His intellect had opportunity to consider broadened horizons. The 'spirit poisons' entangle the mind, while the 'fruits of the spirit' set it free.

Many individuals are overwhelmed by life's complexities and stir-up within their mind several ways to be free. They can make plans, journal, talk to others – do anything and everything but actually take steps to overcoming the complexities. The Master, in His balanced state and excellent communion with His Father, simply had knowledge 'internally' of what to do to reach solutions.

You also have this opportunity to have excellent focus on Father while the emotions are kept in balance; Spirit poisons are decreased while the intellect is free to receive divine information. Do not just speak on how to solve an issue or weakness; do not make elaborate plans – simply go forth in those small steps. Many are impatient to see results and complain every day about their plight; and yet, they have not made effort toward their actual desired goal.

Emotions always find some way to uphold the ego. Emotions serve the mortal-self, while the intellect connects with a higher mind. I do not mean to sound without compassion – but certainly, I mean to speak about self-mastery and intelligence. Those who desire to have great control are seriously frustrated, and you can see this in their emotional state – they wield their emotions as a sword of control. Really, this is nothing more than childishness.

Those who remain flexible are always in a state of readiness and acceptance. Their minds are open to divine information; their emotions are not busy serving the ego. Yes, their minds are busy connecting with spirit and ways to find new and better solutions.

This week, make effort to focus on Father and His influence in your every moment of living. Worry not about how you will live, for the Father has taken care of all living things. The birds worry not about how they will eat or wherefore to lay their heads, the Father has seen to every detail and they only have to focus on being a bird. How much more are you than the birds?

For this time ahead focus not on weaknesses and actual problems. Do not be drawn to the negative emotional 'ego-driven self,' but look toward the God-led solution – the 'seeking divine-self.' That is all. Know that every day you are in my mind and I cherish each moment spent with you. Until next time, shalom.

Learn Love, Intelligently, As Our Universe Mother Loves

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-10-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I so enjoy your discussions of love and logic. Your outreach to one another is quite touching. Your willingness to accept me literally gives me renewed energy and a refreshed soul. I know the many events that have taken place in your world as of late, and many minds are busy with a confused energy. One event that has just passed (Mothers Day), I thought it appropriate to take a moment this evening to honor our Mother.

Mother, we know your work is without end and your love is a fuel to live on. We realize that your presence gives balance to Father's overall plan and purpose. We, your children, wanted to take a moment to give to you our gratitude. (Moment of silence and contemplation.)

My friends, we can envision Mother as the embodiment of grace and affection, but She is also pure intelligence. Mother's ability to organize is flawless. She never tires, for Her love for Her many children keeps Her driven to fulfill Her purpose. Mother does not sit back and take orders, no, She is a part of the planning; interactive in the formation of ideas, and innovative in making newness work.

Mother is superior in Her patience to take those small steps that lead toward the greater good. How blessed are we that we have Her in our lives. When we ponder the expansion of the superuniverses, the individuals who inhabit these universes and the grand organization, it just becomes so complete knowing our Mother's personality and perfect planning is indeed a part, down to the smallest detail.

Behold our celestial family – how complete, how well-rounded and powerful. Mother, and Her adjutant mind-spirits, work directly with each individual's intellect. The more open you are to the divine, the more She/they can communicate with you. Our relationship with Mother does bring balance to the emotions through Her ability to love and give, but not be controlled or subordinate to individuals or internal feelings.

Allow me to explain: Many here who live an average life find love to be their greatest treasure. Some, who may be imbalanced in trying to maintain this love, find themselves in fear of losing this love. An earthly mother, for example, could love a child so much that she is overprotective and will not let the child experience the world; therefore, being disabling to the child.

Mother's love is quite intelligent in the fact that She has the utmost trust in Father's plan. She knows, as does any divine believer, that love never dies; it can be transformed, yes, but Father's plan is always working toward an ultimate good.

Mother has not fear of losing Her children for She knows of that ultimate good.

You, my earthly fellows, have to use your agondonter status as a stepping stone toward finding that balance of pure love and the emotion of love. Love should not bring fear. Faith should create a foundation in which you can build an understanding of love. Love is not selfish wherein it creates a threat of loss, no!

As you have been with me over these many years you have learned of an expanded family. 'Biological relatives' means not what it used to, for you are finding your family to include even individuals you do not know. The 'kingdom' is your family. Father and Mother are there for you, as is your elder Brother and the network of celestial assistants. You are finding that you can have love for even strangers. Your belief in the fact that all are children of God is indeed expanding your idea of family.

Many in the world keep distant from individuals for they feel that would be safe, for to love others would possibly lead to disappointment or heartbreak. This is where our Mother's love comes in. Her love is intelligent and unconditional. She does not say: "I will love you if you do this or that," no! She loves you because you are. Intelligent love allows for Father's influence into your 'come what may' - meaning that whatever life circumstances bring, you are willing to be flexible and have faith and trust - that all is working toward an ultimate good.

There are individuals you meet that seem not lovable, and this need not become a burdensome goal in your life to love them, no. Think of Mother and Her way of intelligence. Unlovable individuals are first, a child of God - they are learning just as you are learning; they have pain, fear, and difficulties with the ego. Mother knows these things about Her children and loves the soul that is in a state of 'becoming.'

Mother is with ease and total assurance - that no matter what occurs with Her loved ones, that in Father's plan and purpose all is working toward an ultimate good; not a haphazard career of constant pain, no! but working for the good. As we think of Mother's intelligent love, could we imagine it mixed with the products of the ego such as jealousy, possessiveness, conditions, or fear? of course not!

This week, allow yourselves sometime to spend with Mother and learn the various aspects of Her awesome personality. Think about how you love - is it in any way harmful or disabling, conditional, or possessive? Is it even existent in your daily interactions? Perhaps fear would have you keep your distance from people. Remember, this fear pattern does keep you from experiencing your full mortal life. Know that love and goodness are not to be suspicious of, but savored and enjoyed - not to mention, shared. That is all.

Know that when I say I am with ever-growing love for you each I sincerely mean it with all that I am and all that I will ever be. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Mother And Her Garden | Some Plants Grow Effortlessly, Some Struggle
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-17-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always intrigued with your ever-forming ideas and discussions. Your thoughts and words make me reach for ways to further open my mind. This evening I would like to revisit the topic of our beloved Mother. I am reminded of a lesson that was given to me not too long ago on how Mother is the ever-vigilant Gardener.

Mother is very aware of all that occurs in Her garden. She sees to the new growth as well as assists in the pruning. Mother has love for the overall garden as well as each individual. The garden as we know it does seem to hold some cruelty, some danger. While some things struggle to grow, other things seem to take no effort at all.

Some in the garden feel unattended to, or overshadowed by more important growth. Some feel they blend into the foliage and appear not to be important in any way, especially to the overall growth of the garden.

While Mother is attentive to the garden, She has no favorites and can only give what will be received. Many in our garden have not the courage to rise up and be an integral part of the whole. They may view the garden as mundane, always the same, and their environment holds little happiness. Their environment is limited to what they can see right around them. They make not effort to bloom where they are planted.

There are those in the garden that have had a taste of the 'living water' and the sun's light (Son's light); these are in the knowledge that the sun shines equally over the whole garden, and the living water is available for all who would partake. There are those problem areas of the garden, however, where there are dark places and there is confusion. Know that your divine caretakers are in full knowledge of this, and their intelligent love allows for natural evolution and correction. These seemingly barren areas of the garden are just as tended-to as are those areas in full bloom.

Your vision of where you are can indeed be broadened by your acceptance of the 'living water' and the 'Son light.' To some point, your environment is what you have made it; your perception of it is a gauge for your overall satisfaction and happiness. Do you feel like just some part of the whole who blends into the background? or do you perceive yourself to be alive with individual possibilities - as well as possibilities of the whole.

While Mother and Michael do what they can for the overall health of the garden, it is really up to each individual living being to accept their ministry. The garden is not all about 'appearance,' - however, beauty does come with truth and goodness. It is up to each one of us to bring about truth, beauty, and goodness in our own lives so we can add to the whole, so we can bring about healing, so we can foster growth in evolution.

Our lesson is kept short for an unforeseen technical difficulty in this transmission. Have not worry. This week keep your eyes open; allow Father to broaden your view of the garden; partake of the Living Water and the Son's Light. Know that I am always available to you each. I am honored to be a growing part of this Living Garden. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

John Mark And The Basket | An Example Of Love For The Master

Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 05-24-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am so honored you continue to invite me back, week after week. Many of our lessons may seem to be monotonous but you never fail to make me feel welcome. Your trust has made me put forth more effort. Your kindness has made me more kind. Your love has made me more loving. Your continuing faith has made me more faithful. I very much enjoy this area of the garden.

You each by now must have some idea of your personal ministry within the Correcting Time. Your willingness and efforts made to live a life of faith does change the world; it does bring progress to the Correcting Time. The many of you that have stayed the course, even during those difficult periods, have built our foundation that will bring slow and steady progress.

If you can think for a moment about the short time that we have been involved in this Mission's undertaking, you would be amazed at the increase in spiritual and intellectual growth. You, as individuals and as a whole, have had your share of faith-challenges. There have been personal conflicts as well as personality clashes - yet you are still here, steady and strong.

I am reminded of the story of that day the Master and John Mark spent in the hills. You are like that persuasive boy who will not let go of the basket. To be with Jesus was John Mark's supreme desire, and the Master would not say no to that. John Mark simply enjoyed being with the positive personality of the Master. Jesus was then, and still is, easy to be around - dutiful in His work and still balanced to enjoy the fruits of living.

Had all the apostles wanted to be with the Master in this same pure way that John Mark had, surely would it have been granted. Perhaps some apostles would have sincerely just enjoyed Jesus' company; but also, some would have wanted to be with Him so as to not miss out on any new happenings. But John Mark just wanted to be near the Master. He wanted not advice, or skills for living, nor keys to the kingdom - no, he simply wanted to be in that loving presence.

This story does also tell me that of all the worldly occurrences that Jesus could have been involved in, He chose to spend the day with this wide-eyed adventurous youth. Certainly could Jesus have instead gone about to make serious impact on the world - putting forth more time into miraculous happenings, or perhaps He could have affected the masses with yet another sermon.

To understand the personality of our Creator Son is to look upon His choices. Where did He do the most good? Did He receive as much as He gave? Did He enjoy His ministry? Did He do His works for personal glory or popular opinion? Why did Jesus stay the course?

This week my friends, I would ask you to find time to spend a few pure moments with the Master. Allow yourselves to be enveloped in His easy-going personality. Allow yourselves to be energized by His faithful example. Continue to hold fast to the basket. Our lesson is short to allow time for questions.

HARRISON: Abraham, Carol and I would like to have guidance relative to working with or understanding her father and his ministry he has undertaken in his religion, and our involvement in that ministry. Do I need to explain any more? [Editor's note: Carol's father is of one of the fundamentalist sects of Mormonism which believe in the plural wives doctrine, etc.]

ABRAHAM: I have a question. Do you believe he believes he is correct in his actions? (Carol: Yes.) Abraham: You cannot change nor stop him, but you can be the loving people that you have always been, and that will be your best ministry to him. He is strong in his beliefs. Many in the world are exactly like that and the best that you can do is to be about the Father's business to the best of your own ability. You cannot "throw your pearls before swine;" but your loving offering of personal understanding and wisdom to him, and those that know him, will be of more assistance than you know. He knows you both are correct in your understanding of him. He is going to have as much power as people allow him to have. Those that support him give him power and desire to carry on with what he believes in. Your living example of faith is eye-opening to him and to the family at large. You must not feel offended for he is within his right to live as he pleases - and he does. You also are within your full right to lovingly speak your mind and move about Father's will as you see fit. Ponder over your understanding of family; certainly it goes beyond bloodline. You each do well. Have not worry. Continue upon the path you have chosen. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, in conjunction with the lessons the last few weeks about letting the evolution evolve with the experience of getting closer to our Mother, and now the Master - per the story of John Mark; it seems to me it is such a slow growth toward them. Is that the way it is intended to be? Is there a faster path we should be taking? Does that make sense?

ABRAHAM: Understood. It is like the example of our Correcting Time - this has been such a short time - and you each, personally, cannot see the great strides in growth the world as a whole has made. There are certain rules of criteria you can follow to speed things along in personal growth, yes, but definitely, that is not our goal here. Just as it is with our Correcting Time, our growth is to be slow, but sure. Anything lasting needs time to take root and become part of reality. It is difficult to build upon a faulty foundation. Much of the time we have to chip away at the old foundation to make ready for the new. Certainly this is the purpose - to experience in an ongoing spiritual career. Brother Ham had given us some very simple advice in the beginning about taking time for stillness practice. This is certainly helpful in freeing the mind - to free it of its material storage, to the broadening of a spiritual horizon. Almost on a daily basis we must account for those things we put up as priorities. Where your treasures are, there, will also be your heart - yes, that which is most important? Good question Calvin.

CALVIN: So with the story of John Mark, you say it was his most important priority to be with the Master. I believe you are saying then, with the apostles - they had other concerns that took precedence?

ABRAHAM: Absolutely. Correct. You are in understanding. Some of the apostles had not pure intentions as did the boy. This is understandable and not judged, but their intentions were, for the most part, ego-based – where John Mark had simple and pure love for the Master; he just wanted to be near the Him, he wanted nothing else. You are correct in your understanding. Well done.

If there are no more questions, I will take my leave. It has been a wonderful evening for me to spend time in discussion with you. I would enjoy more time in this type of communication, yes. Know that my love is growing always for you each. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Create In Me A Clean Heart. Restore Me To The Joy of My Salvation

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-31-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. The discussion of your ideas always creates expansion in mind and spirit. I am honored to be included in your thoughts and ideas. Many times I have great desire to sit with you each, face to face, and have open discussion – but there will be time for that later; now we have this method of communication, and indeed it works.

“Create a clean heart within me, O God.” This was indeed a historical prayer; words that worked then, and still does today. As you each mature in mind and spirit, you have true compassion for your fellows. You know the struggles of human existence and can relate to all that applies thereto.

Over these many years you have attempted to be true to the spiritual path. You know that the ego will always demand to be out in front. Again we pray, Create in me a clean heart, O God. Renew my spirit. Restore to me the joy of my salvation.

Those of you that have experienced being ‘born of the spirit’ understand that beginning stage of elation. The sheer discovery of ‘God being real’ brings you forth from your material body to embracing those things which are unseen. In the beginning of your spiritual journey, you are seemingly filled with the power of an awesome presence. Your enthusiasm is seen on your face and certainly in your actions.

At the first authentic realization that ‘God is,’ you truly desire to serve Him; yet many mortals are surprised that ‘real life’ continues – struggles are still present, and there are still lessons to be learned. As the stage of discovery and elation seem to pass, the reality of a harsh and seemingly Godless world sets in, and of course your faith is challenged; you are wondering about the awesome power of God and yet you still have struggle – you are made to work for your spiritual growth in faith and truth.

Yes, the spiritual mortal life is always a struggle to maintain balance. To have that prayer upon your lips is to have a re-centering. Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me.

Again our subject of last week: The boy, John Mark, was dutiful and still had great interest in learning all he could. He had not the ego-temptations an adult comes to know. He did have a clean heart. I understand, yes, that John Mark was so blessed as to have the Master before his eyes, whereas you are made to move forward with faith.

You each are well aware of the animal needs of the mortal; experience and maturity are excellent tools to help you have mastery over them. It all begins with intentions – willingness to be open to change and a clean heart. Many of you can hold fast to resentments that have occurred throughout your life; and in this, you are understood and validated, but I say, the resentments create an unclean heart. Is the past 'the past?' and can you let go of it?

We are not saying to merely cast your pain along the wayside, no. We are saying to have a look through the eyes of our Master at any given circumstance and see if you still can hold resentment. This is creating a clean heart. This is balance between the mortal and divine. This is being filled on a daily basis with that joy you first discovered at the realization of God's presence in your lives.

Is it enough to wish for a clean heart and renewed spirit? What is your responsibility to be open to that? Definitely you must, on a conscious level, ask your divine caretakers for assistance. You must be willing to face certain resentments and receive the full understanding, receive healing. Past pain does not need to rule your personal feelings, emotions or actions – certainly God is more powerful than that.

Create in me a clean heart. Renew my spirit and refresh my soul. When I was weak, you were strong. When I was in despair, you held me up. When I was imbalanced, you pulled me closer to you. When I felt lost, you knew where I was, all along. Therefore, I ask: Create in me a clean heart. Renew my spirit. Refresh my soul and restore my spiritual joy. Allow me to serve you with the enthusiasm of youth, and bestow upon me the wisdom of the experienced.

That is all. Know that with each of our passing moments together I am always grateful for knowing you and being among you as one of you. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Find Value In Life's Hardships | Allow Not Resentments To Take Precedence
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-07-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. This group is truly a refreshment from the spiritual well. Can you see that when you come together with a clean heart you are indeed spirit led! 'Out there,' it may be a dog-eat-dog world, and you react to that atmosphere. But here in this group, is a re-centering – with safety, truth, and love. Yes, there is freedom here, and that brings forth the best in each one of you. You each serve, and are served. You discuss the realities of everyday-living and your positive spin revives you for the week ahead.

Practically every week you cover many topics of life that everyone must deal with. You have come to see that mortal life is about discoveries and doing your best to be spirit led, and not about enduring trials and becoming a victim of what is 'supposed to be.'

I am touched and truly feel you know not the depth of your ministry. Your tenacity to live as the Master would have you live, shows those that know you that life is balanced. Sometimes things look bleak, yes, but we never lose faith, we never quit trying, and Father's works in our life is a worthwhile reward.

We meet people every day who seem to have allowed the bitterness of everyday occurrences to rule their lives. You can see their resentment in their actions, their attitudes, and in their expressions. One can claim to have knowledge of God the Father and yet they do not really know Him. If these embittered individuals knew Father is love, forgiveness, mercy, kindness, joy, and saving grace – they would certainly have no cause to be bitter or resentful.

As a mortal, I can think of the many times I saw Father, God, as a punishing authority. I thought I was sinful, and when ordinary unfortunate life-happenings would occur I felt it was because Father had removed blessings from my life. But when I had my way with life, when good fortune smiled upon me, I figured I was a righteous son worthy of God's blessings. Others could easily see my imbalance; and even then, I lived and acted out my attitude, my intentions, my understanding.

Yes, as a mortal I always sought favor with God, I would believe I could be self-sacrificing in a way that was, in all reality, manipulating Father into having His blessings upon me. As I look back, I can find humor in that now; but then, it was so very real – I made it real. How fortunate and blessed was I that I could be accompanied by a most wonderful mentor, MachiventaMelchizedek. You today who are students of this Correcting Time Mission are likewise accompanied by mentors and teachers under this same Melchizedek's direction.

Yes, I was lost, and indeed, Father found me. Certainly, in order to realize this, a series of humbling episodes had to capture my attention. But was I ever so grateful that He reached me, yes, as best I could understand in that day. I now have value from that time to aid in my eternal career – which has brought me to this point, and I am grateful. I am grateful for the hardships, for the lessons, for the skills that were taught to me through my everyday challenges.

At the time, I was somewhat resentful at the bad fortune, hard lessons, and the humbling experiences – I took them much too personally. Then, I had found little joy in my faith, as well as my overall mortal life. I did not see the blessings in my growth until I was ready, until I had received experience. Blessed is the mortal who is resilient, who keeps fighting the good fight of faith; who falls and stays not down, but continues on to love and follow the will of God.

This week, review your spiritual life. What has it taught you? What skills have become everyday useful tools? Think about your ministry – is it a forced ministry as opposed to a natural flow? I love you. I am filled with a new light each time we meet. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

What Are Our Motives For Our Good Works

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-14-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Each week I am so grateful you invite me to spend another evening with you. As our days, months, and years pass by, we come to trust one another and are more like family. Each member of this group-family for the most part feels at ease to be themselves.

Yes, here in our Mission group everyone is willing to show their true selves without feelings of fear or regret. That is unconditional love – an acceptance of one another that we can appreciate. Because we make effort to know God, we find our personal attributes more fragrant, more spiritually acceptable. I appreciate your efforts put into refining your own lives, as well as enhancing the Correcting Time.

There are so many topics I would like to discuss; I will try to integrate them into food for all. I realize I would not be here had you not taken a courageous step toward faith. You took it upon yourselves to be patient and allow for a real outcome. Of course you have experienced major bumps in the road, but your faith has kept you moving forward; always trying to tame the ego and allow for Father's outcome. This is truly something to rejoice over.

When we review your world's history, we find the greatest changes were always set in motion by someone who seemed 'out of the ordinary,' at times perhaps even eccentric. Free-thinkers brought forth lasting ideas that actualized and set a path for more ideas to follow. These free-thinkers are those who seem somewhat 'beside themselves;' their enthusiasm lies in some way that they can provide service. We observe that those who seek self-glory seem to be fleeting, and those who embrace truth recognize imposters of truth.

The apostles many times described Jesus as 'beside himself.' It looked as though the Master was harsh, or had not a care for his ambassadors; but in all reality He was in contact with Father and was being about the Father's business in how He related with them. Jesus was a free-thinker; He rebelled not against man's law, but worked to be balanced. He worked within the mindset of the people. He could find truth that was already there, and build upon it.

Many of the Master's ideas came directly from the Father. Had the Master lived to the 'letter' of man's laws, certainly He would not have been so receptive to Father's words. The Master did the Father's works 'for Father' – and, 'for Father's children.' He had no desire for recognition or self-glory. His reward was knowing that the good He could do was all-encompassing and an energy that could be used beyond this world.

This week, as we move about in our daily lives let us keep a close eye on our motives. Why do we live the way we do? What holds meaning for you, and how much energy actually goes toward its actualization? Said Jesus: "Why do you call me good? it is God the Father who is good." What meaning does that hold for you, personally? How would that serve in your own lives as well as the Correcting Time? Looking over these past few years, what spiritual treasures have replaced material treasures? Over time and experience, how are meanings and values changing for you?

No questions. Know that I am with continuing love for you each, and your allowing me to be here is food for my soul. Go in peace. Until next week, shalom.

Be That Safe-Haven For Others to Lean On | The Man Yelling At His Wife
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-21-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Coming here always makes me feel at home. I am at ease to speak my mind. I feel my words are heard and valued. I do study my weekly lessons and make effort to choose the right words. I do not wish my hearers to lose interest or have the impression that I use my post for a stage to present my worthiness.

From time to time I visit you each in your daily-life-happenings. I am always made to remember my mortal life, and at times still, I shudder to think of those human difficulties. Even now I sometimes find myself hoping that mortals could have a glimpse at the life beyond this world so that they could see real meaning and reduce pettiness or preoccupation of things temporary. Of course, this glimpse of the life ahead occurs with each step you take toward the doing of Father's will.

To act upon Father's will to the best of your ability is to see Father's will manifest in your life. We can each see that the key to the Correcting Time being successful is based on individual willingness to master the self. To have self-forgetfulness is to be thoughtful of the whole. Self-forgetfulness is turning away from ego and mistrust in a higher power – toward stepping out in faith and actually living what you believe to be truth, beautiful, and good.

Most of your lessons in self-mastery lie within the daily dealings with your fellows. You know already that you have a personal ministry in the Correcting Time, yes, and the more attributes of the Master you can have in your personal being, the more light you pervade out into the darkness – or the material world.

Yes, our Mission duties seem to be upstepped, for the world moves at a faster pace. It is an age of enlightenment as well as an age of confusion. Each of you is needed to be available for ministry. As the Master taught, your best ministry is to live a life that sets an example of all that is true, beautiful, and good.

Think about the brotherhood for a moment. Think about those that serve to make others' lives better. Think about an individual who is that safe place in which to give your thoughts or opinions. When we review the Master's ministry, we see that the masses generally felt comfortable speaking their minds to Jesus – He was gentle with them and yet, logical; He always had them reach for the best inside them.

The apostles, on the other hand, Jesus was a bit more direct and a bit more firm, for these men were to be teachers. The Master knew He had not much time and did His utmost to reach through the glory-seeking selves of His apostles, to the child of God who so much desired to be a kingdom worker.

You that serve the Teaching Mission have experienced lessons that are probably a bit more difficult than the average mortals. This is a serious post you hold. You have dedicated yourselves to the responsibilities of working for the growth and betterment of the kingdom. As you live your lives to the best of your ability to understand the will of God, you will be sought by individuals who are seeking a safe place – a place where they know they can receive the truth from a pure source; not a source seeking self-glory, but a source seeking to minister as the Master had ministered.

Those that are overly emotional will probably not be sought out for advice. Those that are critical or seemingly judgmental will not be looked upon as a safe place for individuals to come to. Certainly those who embrace not integrity will not be taken seriously as a spiritual source.

You that have done your spiritual work, and are attempting to gain self-mastery, have created yourselves to be a safe place for individuals to come to; at times just for advice, yes, but most of the time people just want to be heard; they want to know they are worthwhile; they want to share in the brotherhood; they want to be a part of something. You, my friends, are accepting a ministry that is not easy, but certainly educational and always joy-filled.

Remember the story of the Master, who came upon a man who was yelling at his wife. Remember the Master's charm He used to subdue the man's temper. The man found Jesus to be a safe place to vent and receive understanding – and, receive possibilities on various solutions to handle his problems without emotional outbursts. Had the Master gone in and defended the woman by degrading the man, how would the outcome have been different? It wouldn't have helped that couple to become better as people, no; there would have only been further argument and resentment.

The Master is a prime example of a safe place in which to unload your burdens, express your thoughts and feelings, and to be your true selves without worry of repercussions. The Master will always minister to you with complete honesty and love – without any ego-stroking or fluff to those hurt feelings. You are ambassadors. You have dedicated yourselves to a Correcting Time ministry. You will receive instructions and be expected to be a safe place for your fellows to express themselves.

You have a couple weeks for this lesson to take meaning in your lives. Be observant. Be at ease. Know that the Master goes before you; Mother lights your path; the Father sustains you in all things. Know my love is growing for you, as is my gratitude to Father for being with you. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom. [There is no meeting/lesson next week – June 28th.]

A Personal Relationship With Father First and Foremost

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-05-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How wonderful it is to meet once again. I have missed you and am grateful for this time to reconnect in fellowship. How easy it is to become lost in the demands of life; we seem to be so diligent in all the details. It would seem our efforts made would earn for us wonderful rewards, and still every day, life is just life and the lessons are one at a time still forthcoming.

As of late, I have noticed that many mortals compare their value with their fellows. Many times we can be caught up in viewing another's life while overlooking our own. When you compare yourselves with others, then you are building false esteem or finding yourself unworthy. This comparison takes from the personal relationship with the Paradise Father – the God within.

“Where your treasures are – there, will also be your heart.” The Master was fond of this saying, and literally lived it. His treasures lied within the fruits of the spirit – those things that brought about truth, beauty, and goodness; those things which glorified the Father in heaven. His focus was to live out, to the best of His ability, the Father’s will.

Jesus sought a living relationship with Father – one that produced spiritual fruits; and indeed, this helped Him to master the mortal life in His short number of years. He could have gathered popularity within the masses and indeed become a powerful ruler had He sought a more mystical ego-filled path. He could have promised the people heavenly rewards, and certainly could he have produced miraculous occurrences. He could have compared His life to a king’s life, but definitely a king’s life-rewards was not what He was seeking.

Some of the apostles, on the other hand, were about self-glory and feeding that ‘Godly worthiness’ in the eyes of others. They lived their lives to gain ego esteem instead of looking to minister to God’s children and being producers of spiritual fruits. Most of the time the outcome was disappointing; they found not the reward they were seeking. Some had left their wives at home, as well as their employment and places of personal importance, to follow after the Master. While some found Jesus to be all-encompassing of truth and goodwill, other of the apostles were merely seeking feelings of worthiness or temporary ego-satisfaction.

If you compare your lives to someone else’s, perhaps in a third world country, you would indeed materially have more, yes, but would you be more happy? You could compare your life to a wealthy celebrity, and certainly would you feel less, yes. Each child must have a personal relationship with God the Father, to be truly happy. To compare your worthiness with others is to take away from that personalized relationship.

Did Judas compare his life with those he thought to be highly important? Yes, and wherefore lied his rewards? Were there any eternal treasures gained? Were there any spiritual fruits? No!

This week, find time to review your present life situation and how your relationship with the Father has made it more valuable, more fulfilled? Think about each of Father’s children and how it is mandatory each one have a personal relationship. Think about how self-esteem compares with self-forgetfulness. Again, what are your greatest treasures here on earth?

No questions. Know that I feel indeed blessed being with you, my brothers and sisters, my friends, my family. Go in peace. Until next week, shalom.

With Father First, There is Spiritual Strength | Cleansing The Temple
Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 07-12-2004
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Being with you is like a warm embrace. I could never tire of that. I enjoy meeting with you to re-center our focus, to unify in fellowship and to bring us back to the hope and faith from which all life springs forth.

This week I am led to remember the Master in the temple when He was driven to clear out the money changers from the supposed 'House of the Lord.' I am inspired by His passion. While He would appear emotional to some, to most of us He appeared empowered – driven to listen to Father's voice from within, to go forth in doing His work.

It would seem in your society today that many individuals lean toward what would make them acceptable in the eyes of their peers. So many mortals seek approval and acceptance, and are driven to live a life defining that ideal. Many individuals catch onto the energy-wave of the day. It is as if drama snowballs, gathering those who wish to be noticed or to feel accepted in some area of life.

There are those who fear the negative repercussions of other people in their everyday-life occurrences, and at times are practically afraid to be themselves and live out who they really are. You have people-pleasers – those who need much attention, yes. There are those who want to stand out as superior, and those who cannot help but feel inferior. There are those that want to experience the mortal life, and those that want to escape it – what seems to be an awkward formality. If you add a personal relationship with God, it does bring about balance and a settling, yes, but also does it empower.

What was the Master's goal here on Earth? What were His deepest desires? While some feel Jesus was a meek and solitary individual, we see Jesus as a force of one. He was one containing many facets of the Spirit; He was empowered to have spiritual strength that brought forth His desired results. Jesus simply wanted what the Father wanted, and nothing would stand in His way. No popular opinion would sway Him from the course. He was simply Himself – like it or not. He was without fear. He lived a free life because of the Spirit.

Many mortals do not live such freedom for they are bound to temporary desires, be they material or emotional things. When you have developed your life in the spirit – having your personal relationship with Father and your maturity level in the spirit – then are you allowing the circuits to make a real connection with you; then are you empowered; then are you driven by the spirit. What one can do alone is nothing compared to what one can do when they encompass all facets of deity.

Think about the Master's passion. Think about how the Master was immovable by those fellows that whispered in His ear trying to persuade Him. Think about the Master's strength – how He cared not if He was left alone by every individual on Earth as long as He had His Father in heaven. He was strengthened to live out the Father's will. This, is the power of living a life in the spirit – you can 'do good' and you can 'make good happen.' You can live on the energy of the spirit and be not bound by the world around you.

This week, journal your utmost desires. What is it that you are truly seeking? What spiritual goals might Father help you to achieve? What egotistical goals might Father show you that you hold to? No questions. Know that my thoughts are always with you each on your paths of differing growth. I love you. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

You Are Those Rocks of Strength Among The Common Stones
Abraham & Michael, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-19-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying your conversation this evening. I appreciate your thoughtful questions – and even more, your honest efforts to answer them.

As you go about the busyness of everyday life it is most balancing to know you have your personal relationship with Father. Your fellowship and need for truth is a resting place. Life is a continuance of energy and it does us good to find an outlet, a relief from stress, a mindal clearing and a physical rest. Your company with one another does provide a wonderful outlet, something that creates a disturbance in the habitual mindal pattern or continuous flow of energy.

Where there is disturbance, there is growth. But still, each mortal needs something they soulfully enjoy. Father wants for your happiness and balance; He wants for your abundance; and, your assistance in this Correcting Time. Have not worry or guilt for taking time for moments of enjoyment. The Master placed great importance on stillness, rest and reversion – and yet, He still met schedule. With that, I turn the time over to Him.

Have peace. It is I, your Brother, Father, Friend, Confidant – and if you allow me, your Light. No, this is not a special occasion day of anniversary or anything out of the ordinary; it is just a few moments with my children; a calling, if you will.

My beloved, I see you as a rock among the stones – what would appear to be a bed of stones. You can always point out the rocks. The rocks have varying colors, sharp edges, and many times seem out of place. They are not quite uniform as are the other stones for they have not focused on becoming smooth rubbing up against the main stream. The rocks provide strength with their natural rigidity. They are what they are. They provide shelter in a storm; shade when the heat is on.

The rocks are the foundation of our Correcting Time. This is what creates the strength for us to build upon. Father has set you in various positions so that you may strengthen that area of the foundation. Are they places of notoriety, popularity, something that separates you from your purpose? Of course not! The rocks are blended in, and are a strength in what others look to for understanding of what seems a long mortal life.

You are a rock. You have your position. I want not for you to crumble under any pressure. I want you to know that I am at hand. I am at one with you – our foundation. We have power and a plan before us. Be not discouraged at seemingly unfortunate events. Do not lose your edge in having distraction toward temporary edification. I need you to keep your focus. Serve one another as our Father in heaven serves us. Have not worry for the caretaking of the rock, for it is indeed a piece and part of all that I am – and I am with you always.

You would not be in your position had you not had your personal experiences, gained your spiritual skills. I realize that by mortal standards, those whose names are most recognized are most valued. Believe me, children, your recognition is in heaven, safe with the Father. Your positions seem small, and yet this is our strength, our foundation. What seems to be 'everyday enduring your fellows' is expanding our Correcting Time. It is providing strength to those who know not where to find it.

The purpose this evening for my words is simply to be in touch with you that assist in this Teaching Mission Correcting Time. You, kingdom believers, go forth in our plan knowing you are mine. I am always with you. Believe me when I say I am there, whether you think about me or not. Be encouraged, children. Be not afraid to go beyond tasting life, to being nourished in its every moment.

Take this evening's message into your seemingly uneventful lives. Plant the seed. Allow it time for growth. As we are all part of one collective foundation, know that I know each of you in detail, and I love what I know. Carry on.

ABRAHAM: Thank you, Master. Your words of inspiration will carry us far. Your example of dedication is a light we can live by. As we work toward personal growth, we will keep in the front of our minds our responsibilities. We live by faith. We live by your good works. We have not need for the mystical, no, because your reality is so much better.

My friends - this week, think about your station in life. How are you that rock as explained by Michael? What small things can you do today that help solidify our Correcting Time foundation? What in your power can you do to bring unification through personal differences?

Again, remember to find time for a mindal outlet; perhaps some fun. Know that it is my pleasure and honor to walk this walk with you. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

The Giving Out And Taking In Of Energy | What Draws Most Of My Energy And How Does It Serve

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-26-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. This meeting-time is quite centering for me. I know that I am beyond the flesh and physical demands, but still, I find balance in consistency. Routine may seem boring to many, but I find this particular part of my weekly routine to be indeed, centering. I find comfort in those things that are steady, immovable, and constant. I feel safe among the unknown in knowing those things I can count on without a doubt. I thank you for being a constant in my existence.

When you move on beyond the veil of mortal life you know that Father is that one living consistency that surpasses all understanding. While this is indeed a blessing, it should never be taken for granted. Even the high Sons of God have faltered in their faith, yet Father is the true rock upon which we can all stand. It is evident that you have made Him your sovereign concerning your gatherings - this is very progressive and energy-producing.

This week, I would desire you look into the various ideas of energy - anything that demands your attention; that which demands your energy. We find that those areas of life that people find most valuable, gets the most energy. Whatever you deem success, is where your energy goes.

We all have experienced the various scars and traumas of childhood. Many adults live their lives attempting to compensate or heal the past. Some of these actions taken, require tremendous amounts of energy. One can gain a great deal of value simply by having understanding of the past. One can find healing simply by facing the past circumstances. However, if you are always making effort retreating from past events then the experience has little or no value.

For example, a child who has experienced abandonment may spend their adult life in efforts to overcome pain or feelings of worthlessness by and through their various relationships. And all the while, on a sub-conscious level, the adult practically 'sets up' their experiences for failure, attracting people to experience that abandonment over and over again. There are tremendous amounts of energy spent in attempting to heal the past and overcome the pain, while all along this energy could have been better spent.

Energy is real, it is directed, it is received, it is generated, and it is moving. Many in the world today feel as if they are simply spinning their wheels. This is misdirected energy. Those who cannot overcome the scars of the past spend much of their time in resentment, in self-pity, and will perhaps believe they are healing some pain by some over-indulgence. This is indeed a waste of energy and only adding to the pain.

What can we do about the past? Surely it cannot be changed. It can, however, be understood and forgiven, and put toward a more useful production of energy.

This week, think about: What do you find draws most of your energy, and how that ultimately serves you? What do you receive for that energy spent? Many illnesses are due to a misdirection of energy. We can spend great amounts of time giving out energy, but very little time in taking in. What are those things you can do to receive a balanced flow of energy and still stay out of that 'anxiety-produced' energy? Have discussion if you will.

This concludes our lesson. Know that I am indeed energy-filled, each time we meet. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

cting Time, and to step aside from your true being is indeed a waste. Michael has asked you to serve your fellows as you pass by. In a very simple mortal way, He has called you and trained you to serve; He did not say to be all things to all people.

I believe much anxiety comes from where you believe your responsibilities are. Have you a family to tend to? Then tend to them! Be not out on the street corner spreading the good news – you have a legacy to build upon right at home. There will be enough time to serve in many capacities. The Spirit within has given you gifts that drive you to fulfill your calling. This 'calling' is something you are good at. One should never believe their ministry is too small.

As we look back at those inspirational people who changed history, we see their motive was never simply a personal gain for themselves, but through their love and compassion for others – it was for the many. This is service. This is answering the call. In this world of earthly power-seeking, it would seem that the more one compromises their true self, the more they would be accepted and possibly more progressive. This is not so!

The ego is masterful in the way it would temporarily make a person feel valued. At times you feel if you appear less, it should make others feel like they are more. On the other hand, you can drum up some skillful language making others feel less while you are feeling increased.

Father loves you as you are. He has given plan and purpose, skills and knowledge. He is asking that you bring His Kingdom to life here on earth through simple truth, beauty, and goodness. In this world of the Correcting Time, the servant would not dumb-down to appease his master's ego, as in the days of old, no! for a servant would humbly and happily share his highest light with him.

Is this life just a game and are you playing along? What fears might you have if you should be your true self and answer the call of being just who you are? The Master did not say, 'Become less so everyone will become more,' no. He spoke of self-forgetfulness and of a true brotherhood that would bring equality. This is something to be joyful over, something to feel relief from our everyday demands. Forget not the universe stands ready to assist.

This is all for this evening. Know that I am ever growing in gratitude for you each. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Allow The Old To Fade To Make Room For The New | We Can Exchange Our Mind For The Mind of Christ

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-16-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am moved by your loving spirit and the way in which you welcome me back, week after week. Your growing maturity-level in spirit is always inspirational. You may not understand where Father is taking you, but you are always ready to go. It is quite a relief in anxiety to know that you need not manage the world. What a relief of burden in spirit to attend here, week after week, and know that you have the assistance of the universe in your every day affairs.

We can be still and know that God is real. The Spirit of Truth moves among us and Mother awaits to direct energy. This comfort is indeed like a shield that would repel the worries of today. This knowledge is a strength we can use to wholeheartedly 'let go,' and allow Father.

We each realize that many of today's concerns are self-imposed. We have expectations of ourselves, our lives, and our levels of success in the spiritual and material worlds. This evening, our lesson is kept simple to keep with the theme of cleansing mind, body, and spirit.

As you live day by day, you come to have certain expectations of yourself to uphold what you believe to be best. And bless you diligent followers of the Master, for you give it your all. I realize the material world has its demands, and you do your best to meet them. This however, can be a trap for the 'animal mind.' No person or thing enjoys being caged – including the mind; it can become a weakness, and something difficult to master.

Said Jesus: “Follow me. Have in you an open mind and willing heart? Follow me.” Do you see, this opens a new perspective to the material realms. This means not to disregard mortal law, no! but to live a mortal life with a divine comprehension, perspective, and attitude. Your anxiety of today is not to be blamed on Father, no! but really, it is a simple human experience of 'giving in' to the animal mind which does cause anxiety.

What burdens have you that are self-imposed? Again, said the Master: “In whom do you serve?” One might ask: Need I keep a high salary position that causes me angst? Need I possess the same material goods as my neighbor? What is the legacy I leave behind? Need I spread the good news? Need I raise my children? Need I serve my community? My friends, how do self-imposed expectations and demands serve?

It is written, should you desire, you can exchange your mind for that of the Master's. This is not to criticize the mind you have, but to open possibilities you would not ordinarily see. The Master longs to show you a life of freedom, power, knowledge, and ability.

This week – in your moments of anxiety, ask yourself: ‘In whom do I serve?’

That is all. Next week I shall greet you at the celebration of our Master's birth on Urantia. Until then, allow the old to fade away while you make room for the new. My love is ever growing deeper for you each. Until next time, shalom.

Birthday Celebration in Pocatello | Compliments From Michael On a Job Well-Done
Daniel / Abraham / Michael / Klarixiska, WOODS CROSS & POCATELLO GROUPS 08-21-2004
Back

DANIEL (TR - Nancy K.) Greetings, my friends, I am DANIEL. I am thrilled to be present here among you at your annual commemoration for the birth of our Lord, Savior, Father, Brother – our Michael in human flesh those many years ago.

It delights us that despite the variances in your human lives, the losses and the additions, you continue these meaningful displays and unifying activities. This united group remains a foundational pillar in the work of the Teaching Mission and its role within this incredible ‘time of correction’ in Michael's universe.

[This picture is quite reminiscent of the mountain home cabin of Bill and Virginia Kelly, a few miles east of Pocatello, Idaho, where this momentous meeting was held.]

We are a joyous throng – those unseen hosts that pack this very room. We see our words taking root, taking hold. We see the flowering of truth within your individual lives. We see the spread of the 'light-of-dawn' illuminating the high points of Urantia. The shadows in the deep chasms remain indeed, but the light has hit the mountaintops. The intensity of this light makes our mirrored joy seem shadow-like, and yet our joy is overflowing.

As Teacher to this host group these many years, it is my pleasure to welcome you all here together again. I will now depart, that I might make way for other speakers; but before I do so, I wish to offer each of you my personal love and welcome.

ABRAHAM (TR - Ellanor.): I am Abraham. Greetings. The sights and sounds of family are indeed, deeply moving. From the beautiful children to the family pets - even the smell of coffee, are making me long for a time that was seemingly more difficult, but realistically more tangible.

Individually, you have each spent the last year with your own personal triumphs and defeats. You have lived with deep sorrow and overwhelming joy. You have lived with impeccable faith at times - and of course, as to be expected, you have sometimes faltered. I want each of you to know your steadfastness is an inspiration to me. Indeed, the pain of any loss shows up in you as strength. It is an honor to know you, and stand by your side as your fellow kingdom sojourner.

You can for the most part, pinpoint a follower of the Master. We see these individuals as water among the dry lands - light within the darkness, and a tenacity to hold fast to that which they understand to be true, beautiful, and good. The Master was known for His ability to embrace reality and to separate the drama from that which actually mattered or made a difference.

When I look at you each, I am touched by your deep love for the Master, and inspired by your efforts to follow the Father's will. If it is acceptable, I will leave you to the Master Himself.

MICHAEL: Greetings, children. Today I feel as if I walk among my own, not those who would offer me a sacrifice for spiritual favor; not those who would put on an insincere spiritual show; not those who have not faith in the overall plan and purpose - no! but you that carry on. You have your study books, your spiritual rituals, yes; but what makes you stay the course? Children, you are so constant. I am overflowing in joy and hope that we are seeing the fruits of our efforts.

When we first began in this task, you were indeed wide-eyed children, enthusiastic for the unknown. I am overwhelmed by your levels of maturity. I am touched by your constant effort to reach for reality. You all hold fast to potentials - individually and as a family. But your effort to do the foot-work, day after day, is certainly the true definition of a spiritual ambassador.

I do understand this road has been long; and indeed, spiritual life is not one of ease. This life is, however, about being able to be with one another and feel like you are home. You need not feel shameful over any personal aspect. You need not live in hiding. You are with confidence and comfort - that your family loves you, and upholds you in a way that you cannot find out in the world of materialism, or in service to the ego.

Today you gather in celebration of my Urantian birth, but today I hold my cup high in cheers to you, my children. Your strength to be forerunners in this plan has indeed proven successful. Lose not hope in the long fight for faith. Know that apart or together, I am with you. I am a part of you. I am your Brother/Father. You are my children in whom I well love. Carry on.

KLARIXISKA (TR - Virginia.): This is Klarixiska, I wish to share some insight that can come from the mundane task of pulling weeds. First of all, I would say that weeds can be likened unto sin - the mistakes that might be in our life. Remember please, that weeds are misplaced plants. They are not something that God has made a mistake about; but rather, has man. Mortals have limited their appreciation of these plants.

Often, when you are trying to clean a flower-bed of newly growing plants, you are not sure whether an existing plant is a seed you planted - or whether indeed, it will become the weed you want to get rid of. That often is the way sin is in our lives, in that we must let it grow. And hopefully not to the fruition of seeds that will spread; but rather, the recognition that it is a plant you do not want in that spot, and you pull it out.

That's the simplest way to look at a misplaced plant - something you want to get rid of in your life. However, some of those plants break off without bringing the base root, the hidden cause of that weed plant - sin; and so often the plant grows again and you see the very thing you were trying to get rid of.

My friends, this is often the way mistakes work in our lives. We cut off the visual that people might see, so that others might not evaluate. And we realize sooner or later, that it is our ego that is destructive to our bodies; or, some other effect of that behavior that is buried deep in our lives. Yes, the base root must come out, indeed; the deeper embedded cause must be dealt with.

What we need is a new tool, a tool that will help get out the deep root that has continued to gnaw away at our spiritual existence. Perhaps that tool is prayer. Perhaps that tool is true friends. Perhaps that tool is something you have never even thought about. What we as ascending mortals, both those seen and those unseen, must seek, is that which will reveal to us the deeply embedded nature of our mistakes - our sin.

Fortunately, from our point of view as celestial beings, we do not see evil or iniquity among you. What we see, oftentimes, is ego and bad habits. By 'bad,' I mean those that are inappropriate that keep you from growing spiritually.

So I would close by asking you to recognize those unfruitful things in your lives that you want to get rid of; if they break off at the root, work to find that hidden embedded cause - that we might continue to be of service to you as mortals, yes, which does bring joy in service to us as celestial beings. And, that Michael's love might truly spread on this planet. That is all. Our love goes with you each. Farewell.

Care For The Self By Devoting Time To Father | Is Self-Sacrifice Helpful
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-30-2004
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How wonderful it is that you would devote this time each week to your spiritual life or spiritual health. You each have your demands of a busy life, and it is truly good that you would set this time aside to re-center, refocus, and rebalance.

It is a common thought that believers should 'constantly give of themselves;' and while this is brotherly at times, it is misunderstood. The Master taught self-forgetfulness, not so much self-sacrifice. He did not say 'go without so you may reap your rewards in heaven,' no! The Master completely believed in service to others, yes, but not in a manner that would cause resentment or feelings of emptiness.

There are many religions that teach that fasting is a self-sacrifice that speeds prayer Godward, and that if one should sacrifice something then surely there should be some divine attention. This is erroneous thinking; and yet, the real power of this self-sacrifice is misunderstood. Fasting, for example, is thought of as a physical feeling that would leave one to devote thought or send energy heavenward. It is not a 'sacrifice to God' that brings results, no! – but the energy put forth therein, to live your life with God as your forefront.

Some would believe that 'the more they give the more they get,' and that is the reason they give, which distorts the energy put forth. Those that are God-knowing think not about rewards to be received, for every moment knowing God is a reward in itself. Kingdom believers 'give' because it feels right, it resonates within the soul.

Karma is an amusing concept. Many believe that if they withhold in their giving, they will be denied spiritual kindness or divine acknowledgment. This is fear, breeding the thinking: 'I must be good for I fear what will happen if I am not.' Look at the Master; He was naturally good without effort. He thought not about self-sacrificing for Father's attention. He did however, direct thought and energy toward the Father's will – the Father's will being the best and highest outcome according to God's overall plan and purpose.

Think of those individuals who seem naturally happy and fairly balanced – they are generous individuals; fate and fortune would seem to smile upon them. They are simply directing and receiving energy with balance; they are happy. Those that are happy love to make others happy. Those that are miserable would seem to draw energy in a negative way; never really becoming satisfied or having their thirst quenched.

This evening's lesson is not so much about self-sacrifice as it is for allowing time to care for the self – the physical self, the mental health, and especially for the budding soul. My friends, I say – what better way to care for the self than to devote an allotment of time to Father.

Think about the next time you are intentionally directing, and then receiving, of divine energy – that you are optimizing brain functions which release helpful chemicals that assist in Thought Adjustercommunication.

Many say: "I rarely have a moment to devote time to Father," and life for them is so chaotic. Who better to organize and manage your time than Father? Imagine a minute here and there throughout the day in giving time to Father – directing thought to Him, directing attention to Him, knowing He is there for you, and that your concerns of the day are managed by one who manages the universes.

This week, find time to take care of yourself. Devote some time to Father, and allow Him to optimize your mind, body, and spirit. That is all. Know that I am honored each week to spend this time with you in devotion to our Father and living the spiritual life. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Being Cooperative With Father On Living An Optimal Life

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-06-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Your loving energy is literally something I can rest upon. Your unity and support goes much farther than you know. I can say with authority that your willingness to stay the course is much appreciated. The fact that you need not that dangling carrot of spiritual promise to keep you interested, is certainly an attribute to be sought by all.

At this moment in time, what really matters? What is lasting and fruit-producing? My friends, you live by faith and hold fast to common sense – this is our goal; this moves our Mission forward. Your minds are not in the clouds while the tread of logic is barely visible, no; you are not so firm in the written word that your tread is well-worn and living revelation is not to be found. You, rather, are most definitely clearing a path for those ages to come, grounded in faith and common sense – indeed something for all to strive for.

This Correcting Time must be based on those who seek not recognition for self; not special seating next to the Master, nor names written down in the historical books. The Correcting Time moves forward because you each desire to be corrected individually, and also to serve anonymously.

I wanted you to know how I felt, and to know of my appreciation. You make my ministry to you so easy – and for that, I am grateful. For your varying personalities, I am grateful. For your willingness to learn and serve, I am grateful. This Mission requires not bright and beautiful fireworks for it to be noticed by the masses, but simple good works by good people like you.

This week, I would request that you carry on with the care of the total self. Again, being cooperative with Father on living an optimal life allows us to focus on the de-cluttering of life. Again, what really matters in your living? It is not sinful or obsessive to have some sort of life organization. As the business of the material is tended to, the spiritual life is a bit more giving, more freeing. Our lesson is kept short to allow time for any questions. Proceed.

SIMON: Abraham, in my typical day there is often those things that need to be done at the same time; and it seems like both can move along at the same time, but sometimes one thing has to be given up for the other. I am always going back and forth on this idea of balance and choices. I wonder if you would comment on that.

ABRAHAM: Good question, and again I am drawn back to the question of 'what really matters?' I realize that much of life, knowingly or unknowingly, is devoted to self-protection. "I must feed my family; therefore, I must work." This is indeed understandable, and Father does want for your abundance. But, "I must have each and every name brand item because my neighbor does" is not understandable. Many work for what personal message it tells others: "I have a great deal, therefore I am successful." "My children are sterling scholars; therefore, I must take credit." I say, that thinking is totally ludicrous. As you have experienced for yourself, Simon – should you go towards the thing that is most Spirit-leading you will find that other things take care of themselves. Father comes first, certainly, without a doubt, yes. Souls of our fellows are next. Never would we intentionally cross another for our own personal gain. Many individuals do not put themselves in another's shoes, and therefore, have not understanding. They care not for the feelings and esteem of others. Let me reiterate that 'organization' is perfectly acceptable. Journaling is a wonderful tool that aids in clearing the mind and presenting many possibilities. When you are confronted with various positions, take that time to spend with Father and write out your thoughts. Allow time afterward for any incoming information. You may not find your desired solution, but certainly you will find calmness of mind and balance in emotions. Is this answering? (Simon: Yes. Thank you so much.) Abraham: Another question?

TECTRA: Abraham, so many folks in our day-to-day world get caught up in worldly affairs busyness, and not take time for peace and spirit. I know I can't help them; they can only help themselves. But it kind of hurts my heart that a lot of people are not seeing the big picture. Are there any words you can give on that?

ABRAHAM: Worldly affairs such as political elections? (Tectra: No, more like distractions.) Abraham: Understood. You do, my son, set a wonderful example of allowing the spirit to truly live in your life – we can see that. Many are in bondage to one thing or another. You are correct in that many do not know what they truly seek and are with emptiness, with dissatisfaction. You do well in sharing your experience – sharing those actualities in your life that are available to all; to share your love of nature and how that brings you peace and clarification of mind. I suggest that you share also how that fills your spirit and strengthens you for coping with the busyness of living. Perhaps you can suggest how various books, workshops, or even something metaphysical, are not as appetizing to the average mortal, but can be so helpful. Start small, and as you build friendships, you can interject your favorite theories. Spirituality must be something that is useable and available to even the most insensitive of people. You do set a great example of non-conformance to those things that would enslave man. You live your life on the fullness of God and His living Spirit. Your example is helpful to all who know you. Well done. Is there one more question?

ANTHONY: Abraham, I guess I would like a personal message relative to one of the things you've been saying about sharing and being a good example. I think that most of my friends would not want to be like me, because they are more interested in material things and more interested in the beliefs they are satisfied with. So I let them be.

ABRAHAM: Understood Anthony. Good practice. We must all realize that in time we will all pass the same mile mark. We will all experience these same lessons in one form or another, and what your associates believe about you is like leaves fluttering in the wind – they are seriously not any effect on you. What you believe about yourself is, of course, revealed in your everyday actions. Your ability to live out your faith is to be commended. Your practice of not throwing your pearls before swine is also wonderful. You do have your ways of planting seeds here and there; and as time has passed, I can see you feel more at peace. You have not been slothful in any way of sharing the good news. Father wants for your peace and happiness, and as the years pass, I can see this in you more and more every day. Well done.

With that, I will close. Know that I am growing in affection for you each. I appreciate your willingness to be spirit transformed. Your desire to do good is truly apparent. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

While We Mature in Spirit, Lose Not the Youth Within

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-27-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I almost regret disturbing this serene atmosphere with mere words. I thrive on that feeling our fellowship brings. I enjoy your discussions on worldly issues as well as the personal. I love the reality you reach for.

I do remember as a man, the wheels of my mind never stopped turning; there were always issues to be resolved, always new battles to conquer. In the work of life, I many times forgot how to have enjoyment. The small things that bring joy seemed to be buried by the burdens of my world. It was through my good friend and mentor, Machiventa, that I learned enjoyment was a gift for us to have, guilt-free, and always uplifting. Rest and reversion are very cleansing to the busy mind; very balancing to overall living.

One thing that I do so admire in children is their ability to take joy where they see it; to laugh as often as possible, even if it's inappropriate. The happy child is a free child – free to enjoy life as well as know the hard truths. Our last lesson was concerning the maturing spirit and that we would always want to have balance by remembering the free child within.

You have your Urantia Book information that, for the most part, describes the life of the Master. As you would well guess, there are many details the writers left out, yes, but are just as valuable as anything you may read. While the Master was a sincere strong and caring soul, He could also be found sharing jokes or witty stories. At events He could be seen dancing and laughing. On a quiet afternoon He could be found gathering wildflowers.

Jesus did have His personal time with the Father, but He also had His human time with His human associates. He could be an inspiration one moment and silly the next. He was many times serious, yes, and yet not too serious to the point of losing out on the abundance of joy Father meant for us to have.

While we would like to mature in spirit, we must balance that out with that youth within. We may be appearing to be older on the outside and yet, within, we still can laugh, play, and find balance in a world that seems to be so harsh. Your mission is one of importance and sincerity, yes, and yet your tasks may be to bring a smile to others – perhaps to show a lighter side, or be an example of balance with humor and logic.

This world indeed experiences serious issues which are easily viewed from your media sources; and believe me when I say, knowledge of what is occurring is casting a horrible shadow over the minds of men, women, and children. Said Jesus: “Let not your hearts be troubled, let not your minds become weary.” An ultimate good will come to pass. The events in the world today – though seemingly grim– are truly unifying. People cling to what they know; and when they learn more, they want to be better.

Michael’s Spirit of Truth is a blanket warming the world from the coldness of falsehood. Think not of the world as an obstacle to overcome; make not it your stumbling block. Remember your posts in this Correcting Time; just as there are soldiers protecting your material freedom, you are soldiers protecting spiritual freedom.

Lose not sight of the Mission ahead by the accounts of your media. Michael, Mother – and their associates – know full well what occurs in the world. Nothing is overlooked. Nobody is forgotten. While your positions seem somewhat mundane, remember it is an important part of the world’s growth toward Light and Life that you hold fast.

This week, find time to feel joy. Be joyful. Remember to balance the harshness of the world’s reality with goodness, laughter, and a banner that shows your faith in those who hold much higher positions than man.

That is all. Have fun this week, children. Find rest and reversion. Know that my love is ever growing with you each. Until next time, shalom.

The Evolving Changing Human Instincts | Be Aware Of The Ego’s Designs

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-04-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a wonderfully natural feeling we have here this evening. We each are simply following the flow of the spirit. Nothing is forced or fake. Our fellowship is a light to go by. In the absence of rules and dogma or doctrines, we are free to be at one with the spirit. What a feeling of freedom and a boost for our spiritual nutrition.

Over these few weeks we have discussed maturity in spirit, and maintaining a joyful countenance in everyday life. As our Correcting time moves on with its realness, we are finding our basic human instincts to be evolving or changing. Of course with every growing spirit there is a humility to be maintained and perfected, but this evening I would like us to focus on 'evolving instincts.'

As mortals grow in each stage of life, there seems to be things or situations that say ‘we are inadequate or behind – do not trust the self.’ There are also individuals who rise on the ladder of education and have a great deal of self-esteem, yes, but still never really have that fulfillment they have so long searched for. Yes, 'evolving instinct' and 'mortal education' are completely different things.

To trust that you are a capable son or daughter of God, able to seek His directions, is perfectly acceptable. Certainly if one should become imbalanced with the need to be superior, then surely the instincts that should be maturing and evolving Godward are, rather, simply leaning toward the animal. You have your desires and Father knows them, indeed. The maturing spirit is willing to wait upon the guidance of God rather than move toward temporary satisfaction.

As our Correcting Time evolves, as you evolve, does life's priorities change – the physical make-up in the human body changes. What used to be 'commonplace' is no longer common. These spiritual evolutions are new areas of growth for those mortals who work toward Light and Life. It is not mystical or wishful thinking; it is not 'new age' rhetoric, no; it is simply a strengthening of bonds between you, your Thought Adjuster, and a new reality.

Take intuition for example – you could have an experience that says: 'God has spoken to me. I am allowed to know certain things aforetime, what a wonderful gift.' You could then go hastily to your fellows and exclaim: 'God has chosen me and I have a gift.' Of course, that is the immature soul at work. The evolving maturing spirit believes that intuition is simply a part of everyday living; it is communication to the mind and soul that helps one to expand the kingdom of heaven; and, perhaps in some small way, contributes to the Correcting Time.

All of Father's children have equal opportunity for gifts of the spirit. No one person is chosen as exceptional and has 'special' tasks to fulfill, no! We each are simply foot soldiers for those who are helping us move into a new and better age. Don't misunderstand me, you each are gifted; and yes, you each have important tasks to fulfill. I am only stating that with the time and effort we have each put in, changes are inevitable. This is not cause for fear or apprehension, no! I am simply reminding you that you will change on many levels. Yes, as one changes the self, the 'whole' also changes.

Perhaps you have an inner desire to call a friend, but then the busy mind talks you out of that. Maybe the rationalizing mind says: 'My friend has not time for me; my friend cares not to hear from me; therefore, I will postpone this particular task.' Perhaps your desire to call this friend was indeed an idea whispered to you directly from the mouth of God.

Every day, in the busyness of life it is easy to overlook these small directions. Father's directions could be saying to simply 'check in' with a certain person, not to spend hours or to take anything away from you or your life. You each have devoted yourselves to a Correcting Time ministry, and your instincts or certain desires are many times the very directions or tasks Father would have you complete.

This week, let us ponder those fears that keep us from following through with our evolving instincts. While man searches for true companionship, it does indeed live right within him. With these fast-paced times, we are to be trained for the new changes. Your spiritual education today is the action of tomorrow.

Also this week, find time to think about that entity you know as God. Ponder your love for Him. Think about His love for you. See yourselves as a moving and integral part of the whole. Trust yourselves enough to follow through with your instincts. Beware of the ego's designs.

That is all. Know that I am honored each and every moment we spend together – in this, our wonderful family. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Fine-Tune Our Evolving Instincts | Allow Intellect To Override Hasty Actions, Decisions

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-11-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am joy-filled this evening and I thank you. I am honored to be a part of life's sharing. Your open and honest willingness to be present in this moment is touching and inspiring. It is beautiful to see the unraveling of mortal confusion weaved into the tapestry of divine understanding – a blessing, indeed.

Last week we had discussion on fine-tuning the evolving instincts, you are each realizing this is mostly a matter of allowing. Too much consciousness is sometimes detrimental.

It has been said many times, that during certain circumstances Jesus seemed to be 'beside himself.' Many times in some instances you can be 'too emotionally invested' or perhaps 'too close' to an issue or situation to allow for a smooth flow of divine communication. When it appeared back in the days of old that Jesus was 'beside himself,' it simply meant that He was detaching from His human perception, to a higher perception.

Mortals are emotional creatures, and that is as it should be. As you mature, you do not simply become more 'hard of heart', no! but perhaps a bit more wise with a broader perception, and hopefully in spiritual maturity – a perception that embraces truth, beauty, and goodness.

In today's world of quick fixes, we are prone to go for temporary satisfaction. The Master has taught us that some detachment from certain situations does allow for the spiritual intellect to bring interpretation. To sharpen those divine instincts, we will find a great many benefits in exercising patience.

Let us be spirit-connected enough to rise above emotional animal interpretation, to seeing the spiritual light at the end of what seems to be a long mortal tunnel. Many individuals act on impulse, for they fear for their good standing, their reputation. Their rash actions are a covering for what seems to be their inabilities or shortcomings.

As we have each come to understand, Jesus cared not what people thought of Him; and this freed Him up to make thoughtful spirit-led decisions. When He did appear to be 'beside himself' He was communing with the Father; He was allowing the spiritual intellect to take Him to a higher perception. Emotions are natural, yes, but they make not a strong foundation for decisions to be built upon.

I realize that in your hurried world, a slow but thoughtful response to circumstances may not quite be accepted among your fellows. But trust me, in time many will come to see your spiritual hesitation is for a good cause – indeed, for a higher perception. As you were discussing, the more you understand, the easier it is to make good decisions and act upon those decisions.

Last week I requested that you ponder your love for the Father and His love for you. I well remember in my mortal days the notion of love being quite emotional, bringing feelings of comfort and warmth. I would ask you to ponder the intellectual side of God's love – the strength and power; the companionship when you seem so alone; the ability to comprehend certain situations that take you one step closer to Him.

Also this week, think about the Master's ability to step back from situations to have a more broadened view. Think about the freedom He had to commune with Father in His own time. The Master was indeed a Creator Son, yes, but also was He a mortal of the realm. He indeed understands all the aspects of life on an experimental planet such as this. Feel free to consult with Him.

That is all. Know that you are each a beautiful lamp upon my path. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

In Intentional Living There Is Freedom | Moving Forward With Our Inner Drives

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-18-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always pleased with your welcoming attitudes. You make me feel at home. I realize that your attention or energy put into this meeting has been the very reason why we carry on. I thank you for allowing me to be a part of your family.

Over the last few weeks, we have had discussion on evolving instincts. With the Correcting Time and the opening of the circuits, you and your world are becoming as if there was no 'rebellion' or 'default.' It is good to recognize and fine-tune your evolving instincts. This is mostly an exercise of allowing – it is an exercise of 'spirit listening,' and the courage to take action. This evening, however, I would like to discuss intentional living.

We have learned over these many years that we have little control over the world and its people. We have come to realize our behavior and attitude is the only thing under our control. Many times you are stern with yourself saying: "I will complete this project;" or, "I will set up a goal to reach for." Intentional living is not so much about controlling, or even self-mastery – it is about following your inner drive; it is about having courage to go forth with those ideas that seem to hold truth, beauty, and goodness.

Often it is observed in mortals: "One moment I may be extravagant in spending money and in the next moment be fear-ridden of my debtors." Is this common sense? Is this responsible thinking? How many individuals do you know that are 'living on purpose' and are brave enough to follow through with their internal beliefs?

One might say: "The spirit is strong but the flesh is weak." I say, this is not so for those who are driven to be Spirit led. You have access to the most intelligent, powerful, dedicated and loving Source – how much more could you do with Father than you could alone?

Intentional living is living a life without fear, without 'what ifs,' without dread of what tomorrow will bring. As a child, you were more influenced by adults. Likewise now, as Spirit-led children you can be influenced by the Father of all fathers. Intentional living is to live out what you believe to be true, spirit-wise; "I believe the Master is an important part of my everyday living; therefore, I will act as if He is always by my side."

We all know those who can indeed speak of things larger than life, but when it comes to 'action,' they are easily discouraged or distracted. Intentional living is not having fear of what others may think, or what is popular? no! Intentional living is living as you would out in the open where no one could see – as you would behind closed doors. To adopt this behavior is to indeed request Spirit assistance at all times. It is to live with a freedom and with abounding joy. This week ponder on these things, and consider the following:

- Life drives me to be a certain thing.
- The Spirit drives me to live a Spirit-led life.
- Adversity drives me to become better.
- My spiritual freedom seems to be more of a responsibility than an actual material-life freedom.
- I fear not to become the creature Father meant for me to be.

Life is not to be a continual burden, no – it is a fine balance of work, play, rest, and education. Be not afraid to live as you truly believe. That is all. Know that my love is growing with you. Until next time, shalom.

Attitude is Definition of Perception | What We See Now is Product of What We Have Perceived

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-25-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I always feel more enlightened by your heartfelt discussions. Each new personal perspective fills me with ideas and inspiration to make more of what I have.

I love the idea of greeting life with enthusiasm and courage to take on each new challenge. Take a rainy day for example: have one-hundred people viewing this rainy day, and indeed you would get one-hundred varying perspectives. A person may see dark storm clouds and be limited in their perspective of the day's potentials; another person may view this rainy day as cleansing and creating new life. Those that live life without fear are seeing through the eyes of Father, which is always inspirational and full of potential.

Your life up to this point is somewhat a product of your perception. What you see now occurring in your life is the result of actions taken by what you have perceived. "Is the glass half full or half empty?" is an old saying; but it still is indeed a valid regulator of attitude and possibilities. Many individuals feel as if 'life just happens' and they are but a victim. They are easily discouraged into taking no action for they feel it would be futile.

If you are one who greets life with fearlessness, then are you putting potentials into actuals; you are generating energy; you are in connection with Spirit; you are utilizing your God-given gift of having life and having it more abundantly. If you envision doom, then certainly do you attract it. If you accept that Father knows you completely and sees you as His child, then are you with confidence and courage to go where He may take you. Fear certainly influences your perception of reality – but I say, so does faith, and so does truth.

Attitude (definition of your perception) is a good measurement for your receptivity to Spirit. How do expectations or habits influence what you are really seeing? If you expect Father to be entirely too busy for your minor problems, then certainly is this limiting your perception. If you are with faith that Father dwells within your very being, then certainly is your perception broadened.

Most of the time, attitude is indeed influenced by what you are perceiving. I do believe effort made on the part of the child to change an attitude is an invitation for Father to guide, to assist. I am not saying to put on a brave front and live as if everything is perfect, no, but to tame the ego and emotions, that they not have influence over your perception – is certainly higher-mindedness.

Yes, your interpretation of what you see does have an effect on you – mentally and physically. We all know we have jumped to some conclusion after having witnessed some event and had not taken the time to collect the facts or receive understanding from the Father's perspective.

This week, I ask that you make time to understand what, or who, governs your attitude and perspective. Be thoughtful of gathering facts in order to understand the reality of any given situation. Know that in all of life's happenings, Father sees to an outcome of ultimate truth, beauty, and goodness. Know that you each are trusted to strive for the ultimate good of the whole – even though this may require personal cost, your personal commitment. Have not worry nor fear, for Father sees to the growth of all His children.

That is all. Again, I give you each my love and will set you in motion for yet another week of mortal adventures. Until next time, shalom.

Does Your Perception Affect Your Behavior, Your Personal Journey | The Part Moves the Whole

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-01-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always inspired by your faith. Your willingness to move forward without actual proof that I am real and this Mission is real, makes me continue to strive to keep my focus and move forward with the Father's plan. Your faith is a course we can set sail to.

This evening you speak of energy; and I would say that even after a long day of spending energy – you, as a focused group, are indeed in abundance with it. How blessed am I to know you and to be your Teacher, as well as a student with you. I realize that those who strive to follow the will of God sometimes feel as a leaf blowing in the wind; you commit yourself to following the Father's will, and yet, there are feelings of misdirection or confusion.

We must remember, children, that in all our striving for the progress of the Correcting Time that this is also a personal journey – the part moves the whole. You are each a part in the scheme of Father's overall plan. Much of the correction from the Correcting Time will be personal. To learn correction or self-mastery, you need flexibility in attitude and action. Father knows your intentions. He knows you strive to follow His will. Even when you fall short of that intention, He punishes you not. Always is your best interest in His interest.

Father makes not your life difficult just to polish you into a perfected child, no. He is a coach at every point, leading you toward Him; leading you toward an ultimate good. He has influence in the arrangements of the lessons, yes, but the choices you make are completely yours. There are not time-limits – nor are there points to be given to each unerring child; there is simply encouragement (mental and spiritual assistance), prompting a comfort to be your true self.

This week, I ask you to review your spirit-driven goals; how do they differ from the 'material' or what the ego desires? Think about your culture and your upbringing – how has that influenced your perception of what you believe the goal to be, is. Surely, as a child, you had your dreams of what you wanted to become in life. Possibly your perception at that time would have you pick what was most adventurous, fun, or what brought you a great deal of attention.

The world has changed. You have changed. What now are your goals? Is your perception of life a stumbling block, or a stepping stone? Does your perception create your behavior? Every day is a new day – it is a gift, it is a clean slate, it is a chance to move further toward the person you are becoming. A few questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, thank you again for all your lessons. I don't have a question, but do you have any help, direction, or comments for me?

ABRAHAM: I see you as moving more with the spirit these days. You are relaxing into your true being. You have realized struggle does not mean success. Your definition of success has also changed, which has redirected your focus. Your perception has changed and so has your attitude – which has led you to make different choices, which has brought you different results. Continue on as you have. Take time to build a more loving connection with spirit. You do well on the intellectual level. Focus a bit more on the loving aspects of Father and His associates. Well done. One more question? [Some personal questions and answers are omitted.)

SARAUNA: Abraham, I am approaching a time in my life when I have to make some really life-changing decisions. I know that you can't make those decisions for me but perhaps you could give me some guidance, something I could use to help me make a good decision? I just appreciate you being our Teacher, and all you do for us.

ABRAHAM: Certainly, as I also appreciate each one of you. Yes, one word comes to mind: quality. As you live a mortal life you may find value in various things. To seek after and embrace those things that bring you the most fruits of the spirit is a good path to follow. I believe you follow your inner guidance quite well. You can trust in your heartfelt desires. Have not worry, you are able to follow through and complete those things which are now, simply thoughts. You do well.

With that, I will take my leave. Know that we will talk again soon. I have enjoyed our evening together. Feel free to call on me anytime. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Does Your Perception Affect Your Behavior, Your Personal Journey | The Part Moves the Whole

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-01-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always inspired by your faith. Your willingness to move forward without actual proof that I am real and this Mission is real, makes me continue to strive to keep my focus and move forward with the Father's plan. Your faith is a course we can set sail to.

This evening you speak of energy; and I would say that even after a long day of spending energy – you, as a focused group, are indeed in abundance with it. How blessed am I to know you and to be your Teacher, as well as a student with you. I realize that those who strive to follow the will of God sometimes feel as a leaf blowing in the wind; you commit yourself to following the Father's will, and yet, there are feelings of misdirection or confusion.

We must remember, children, that in all our striving for the progress of the Correcting Time that this is also a personal journey – the part moves the whole. You are each a part in the scheme of Father's overall plan. Much of the correction from the Correcting Time will be personal. To learn correction or self-mastery, you need flexibility in attitude and action. Father knows your intentions. He knows you strive to follow His will. Even when you fall short of that intention, He punishes you not. Always is your best interest in His interest.

Father makes not your life difficult just to polish you into a perfected child, no. He is a coach at every point, leading you toward Him; leading you toward an ultimate good. He has influence in the arrangements of the lessons, yes, but the choices you make are completely yours. There are not time-limits – nor are there points to be given to each unerring child; there is simply encouragement (mental and spiritual assistance), prompting a comfort to be your true self.

This week, I ask you to review your spirit-driven goals; how do they differ from the 'material' or what the ego desires? Think about your culture and your upbringing – how has that influenced your perception of what you believe the goal to be, is. Surely, as a child, you had your dreams of what you wanted to become in life. Possibly your perception at that time would have you pick what was most adventurous, fun, or what brought you a great deal of attention.

The world has changed. You have changed. What now are your goals? Is your perception of life a stumbling block, or a stepping stone? Does your perception create your behavior? Every day is a new day – it is a gift, it is a clean slate, it is a chance to move further toward the person you are becoming. A few questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, thank you again for all your lessons. I don't have a question, but do you have any help, direction, or comments for me?

ABRAHAM: I see you as moving more with the spirit these days. You are relaxing into your true being. You have realized struggle does not mean success. Your definition of success has also changed, which has redirected your focus. Your perception has changed and so has your attitude – which has led you to make different choices, which has brought you different results. Continue on as you have. Take time to build a more loving connection with spirit. You do well on the intellectual level. Focus a bit more on the loving aspects of Father and His associates. Well done. One more question? [Some personal questions and answers are omitted.]

SARAUNA: Abraham, I am approaching a time in my life when I have to make some really life-changing decisions. I know that you can't make those decisions for me but perhaps you could give me some guidance, something I could use to help me make a good decision? I just appreciate you being our Teacher, and all you do for us.

ABRAHAM: Certainly, as I also appreciate each one of you. Yes, one word comes to mind: quality. As you live a mortal life you may find value in various things. To seek after and embrace those things that bring you the most fruits of the spirit is a good path to follow. I believe you follow your inner guidance quite well. You can trust in your heartfelt desires. Have not worry, you are able to follow through and complete those things which are now, simply thoughts. You do well.

With that, I will take my leave. Know that we will talk again soon. I have enjoyed our evening together. Feel free to call on me anytime. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Rampant Emotions Versus Calm Decisions | Example Of The Apostles Failing To Heal the Possessed Boy

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-08-2004

Back

I, am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I appreciate all your sentiments. I admire your willingness to be honest with one another, as well as yourselves. Every day you each wear many hats. It is difficult to display a positive countenance when life seems negative. It is difficult to interact with individuals who expect you to be upbeat when you are not.

My friends I say again, it is perfectly acceptable to be human. You will display emotions; you will have concerns; your mind many times will be preoccupied. This is not putting you in a deeper human hole, no; these experiences are equations to be studied and solved. Again, your 'perception' of life's circumstances is everything. The mortal goal is to have self-mastery, to be self-governing, to know God and be like Him. The smaller we are, the bigger He is within you – which brings us advancement.

Perhaps a few years back you had a vision of where you should be at this point in time. You had expectations. We all have expectations. Being committed to the Correcting Time can surely scramble those expectations. As a kingdom believer you are presented certain circumstances, certain challenges by the unseen helpers. Each experience is a hurdle that advances you to the next level.

You cannot advance through false pretense. You cannot advance by sheer will. You can, however, fool the mind and heart into the belief that you have made the effort and have 'earned' advancement. In time though, you will grow weary and realize such perceived growth is not rested on a stable foundation. Mortals are impatient – I know this firsthand. To backtrack in order to experience a more lasting correction is frustrating, for you feel as if you have 'already traveled that road and have that experience under your belt.'

If you find yourself experiencing some lesson over and over again, then indeed you need to stop and really be observant; really take in the experience as your own – own it, feel it, draw from it what your mind can comprehend. You see the hard truths in life, yes, and that can bring pain. To escape the pain is to have forgone the lesson. This is not sinful, no, it is simply the mortal way.

Look at the apostles: They were first filled with the excitement of a new and better way; they could actually taste the glory of the coming kingdom. And yet, how many times were their hopes dashed; how many times did they receive rebuke from their Master. From such seeming defeat, would they spend all of eternity in a tortuous existence? No! Experience was had and wisdom was gained. Jesus and Father fully understood the shortcomings of their mortal minds.

I am reminded of the story where the apostles had attempted to take on the Master's power by driving an evil spirit from the soul of a child while the Master was away. A parent had sought Jesus' assistance to free their child from a mischievous entity. In the apostles' mind, they sought greatness. In the outcome, they hoped for the glory of having freed this child from an evil presence.

Had these apostles a true compassion for the child or the parent, the outcome would have been different. Had they sought the Father's will, rather than their own expectations, the outcome would have been different. To their dismay, this was a failure in trying to heal the child. Said Jesus to His apostles: "Had you real and abiding faith, surely you could have driven the nefarious spirit from the child." Their intentions were skewed. The story has a happy ending with the child being set free and the parent quite relieved. Said Jesus: "These things and more can you do when your intentions are Godly and without seeking self-glory."

This world can be so harshly judgmental that it would drive one to become someone they feel is acceptable – the budding soul of God is set at the back of the mind and the false persona has come to the front. As the kingdom believer grows, falsehood becomes quite distasteful – actually unbearable and unacceptable. This is good. This is growth. Have not worry. This life is a long labor, but it certainly meets with a wonderful outcome of awareness and wisdom.

This week, continue on with studying perception, and how to change emotions that run rampant compared with calm decisions that are spirit-driven. Have not worry. Ponder that person that is you who meets with society every day. Is personal falsehood an aspect of your personality, and does it weigh heavy on your spirit conscience? Also this week, I ask that you think about your top three priorities in life – and those things you must do to see them through.

That is all. Know that all is as it should be. Have a spirit-filled week. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

What Is My Commitment To Change | Personal Change Is Critical To The Well-Being of The Whole

Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 11-15-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, each week that we can meet always brings me closer to new ideas. I appreciate your different personality aspects. Your willingness to be a link in the cosmic mind provides experience and growth for all, especially the God in time – our Supreme Being.

As you move through this Correcting Time, it is becoming more apparent that the time for change is now. As we witness much of the world's chaos, we can safely assume that many welcome not change, but stay grounded in old-fashioned foundations of faith. Change will be mostly personal, but definitely does it affect the world, and beyond.

Let us ponder the chaos in our own lives. Is there resistance to change? Is there fear of the new? I myself was indeed one who feared uncontrollable circumstances. I needed to know that I was not to be surprised or caught off-guard – which in my mind was perceived as weakness. We can each see that change is slow; but definitely, real change is lasting. Those things that are embracing truth, beauty, and goodness, are lasting. Many times must we make great effort, yes; but surely is it worth it.

Some years back, you committed yourselves to living out to the best of your ability the will of God. Certainly you have excelled in some areas, and in some have fallen short. Nevertheless, when you committed to a life in the spirit, you committed to change on many levels – and as we know, lasting change takes patience and time. I realize the need for order in a world that seems to be chaotic. Order seems safe, familiar, and seems to be self-empowering.

The time for growth is now. No longer can we take a 'wait and see' attitude.

Personal change and growth is critical to the well-being of the whole. Review your everyday life circumstances. Is the daily chaos due to a resistance to change; to embracing new thought; to the courage of living life that embraces truth? Is disorder paralyzing to you? Are you with the flexibility to withstand the discomfort in life in order to be taught, to advance? Is your measure of peace a sign of your ability to accept life for what it is? – not simply just endure it, but to be strengthened by it – yes, changed.

This week, think over your definition of change. Is it something fearful and seemingly out of reach? or is it a challenge for you to walk a closer walk with the Father? After these years of living and experiencing, do we not all know that life continually evolves? What are steps we can take to become an example of peace and not a producer of chaos?

That is all. Know that I am with ever-growing affection for you each. My loves goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Let Not Past-Adversities Harden Us From The Possibilities To Come

Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-22-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I would express my gratitude to each one of you, for you have seen to this branch of Correcting Time progress. I see you each as Father's unique and diverse children; yet when I look into your faces I view your personality familiarities, and I love what I see. Some of you are peacekeepers; some are quite thought-provoking; some are simply gracious and motherly. But the whole of you is quite a bright light to us here on this side.

We have been speaking of change and how personal growth affects the whole. This evening I thought it appropriate to have one who is very familiar with change speak to you.

My greetings. I am EMULAN. I am somewhat familiar with your personal history. I have some understanding of you each on a personal level. I do admire your strength and stamina to stay the course. As you well know I always speak from my own experience.

Many of you know that I hailed from such a world as this one. I did lose my family in an accident, and from that loss I was thought to be completely disabled. Through that adversity, I went through several years of education to become a doctor of the mind. The story is simple to tell; the life-struggle, on the other hand, was quite difficult.

I realize that for evolving mortals, time seems to be crucial and you can feel to never "have enough." As a struggling mortal before my tragic loss, I figured I was simply paying my dues of the life I was given. I worked hard; I lived to be honest; I attempted to follow my inner God - and still, what seemed to be so unjust, was to occur. I did at first blame God for my adversity. I figured Him to be a cruel ruler of the universes. I thought my life with those I had loved so dearly was a complete waste.

Certainly, in the midst of pain and chaos I could not see that each day was the beginning of all eternity - if I so chose. While my heart longed for greater spiritual things, my eyes told me of my personal limitations. My mind could foresee greater things, yet my level of self-perception took away my ability to make helpful choices.

Chaos is painful; and certainly, growth can be painful, yes. I say, experience doesn't always have to be painful to lead to wisdom - and yet you each know many people who are quite embittered by pain. It does seem like a waste that one would refuse growth by becoming suspicious of life's intentions or skewed perceptions. It would seem in my own personal experience that I had engaged in education much longer than I actually practiced as a doctor. Was that a waste of life, or time? I can safely say now, no!

From this very day is the beginning of your eternal career. What you learn here will be carried on to the next adventure. Can we regret the past? can we become embittered by our poor choices? certainly not! We can view today as the beginning. I can't say what the future holds for any of you, but I do know that your efforts are valued. You are truly loved and indeed a member of the family of God.

Do not allow life circumstances to make you seem in a rut or to feel like your efforts are wasted. Know that you are a valued child, and every aspect of your life is known and understood. You have assistance always, yes! You are at the beginning of a long and fruitful eternal career. Do not allow the adversities of the past harden you to the possibilities of what is to come.

Please know I also enjoy each one of you and am honored to be your friend. Farewell.

ABRAHAM: Thank you, Emulan. I am always inspired by your words of wisdom and personal experience. This week, children, make effort to keep your eyes forward. Learn from the past? yes! Be burdened by it? no! Broaden your possibilities by accepting change in whatever form it comes in.

As always, my love is ever growing for you. Until next time, shalom.

Prayer Is A Wonderful Return Home | Life Is Always Going To Be About Education and Change

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-29-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am grateful for being so welcomed into your family group. I am quite enjoying the harmony of the group's attitude and the willingness to keep moving in a forward motion. Your willingness to stay unified is a wonderful example of all that we have been trying to teach. Some years ago, you were all perfect strangers - and behold now the family structure you have each helped to build. Well done.

We have been discussing change as of late and I appreciate your efforts to absorb the meaning and put it into practice in daily living. Father is so gracious. He is so kind in His educational techniques. He bestows not change on His children all at once. He creates not chaos to shock you into welcoming change, no, for Father is gentle in His methods. He is wise to build a strong foundation for everlasting change and/or evolution.

Think back over your short time in the flesh; what has brought you greater wisdom than the small but significant changes? Mortal life is about learning to listen, learning to set aside ego and becoming a responsible citizen of the greater universe. How can one serve as an ambassador in our Correcting Time without having made personal correction? How can one set a good example of universe citizenship without a sincere releasing of ego?

This mortal life is always going to be about education and change. You don't just suddenly stop learning at certain points in your life, no. Life is always in forward momentum; it is always progressing. Perhaps at times life seems not so productive. But certainly in the mortal struggle will your eyes of faith be made to be expanded with new experience.

I realize that most of you have been hard at work on personal change and growth. I would hope to be a light upon your path and not a burden. You each possess tools that aid you in body, mind, and spirit, to create harmony. Instead of being dragged through this mortal life in chaos, you have the tools of stillness and prayer. And yes, I realize you are each quite busy in life, but most definitely you all know that prayer and meditation does open the mind to Father and to the mind circuits.

I know as the stress of life builds, it does seem to further separate you from Spirit. Prayer is a wonderful return home to receive that nurturing which will carry you in peace through every experience. To pray is simply to open an arena for a discussion with Father. You talk to Him and you listen to Him. Definitely, He listens to you; He talks to you; He shares your life from within you. It's all very simple; and yet, many miss this benefit because they are fearful they are not heard or that they are not as important as other issues. Each person has God within. And this Indweller is abundant in giving; He is a part of you that is so close - you at times almost seem as one. My friends, what a wonderful light to live by.

Let us simplify life this week by improving our communication with Father and His associates. If you have not the serenity in your life that you desire, then ponder your willingness to take a moment each day to have personal time with Father. Are there questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, in your lesson you talked about being open to change and not let the hardships keep us in a shell. I know many out in the Teaching Mission throughout the world believe that this group (our Woods Cross TM group) is holding on to the old and not letting go to embrace the big changes to come. In particular, the 'new enlightenment' that seems to be dominating our Teaching Mission Internet list concerning the so-called coming of the Magisterial Son and the supposed new revelation to come, etc. Would you care to address that? Do we need to open up in that regard? or are you talking about personal change?

ABRAHAM: I speak of personal change, as in self-mastery. As your understanding for God grows, you are more likely to release the ego. The ego demands attention. The ego demands to be seen. This is like a child who would not understand the unconditional love of a parent; the child learns to act in any manner to gain the parent's attention. Much of our Mission fellow's activity is simply 'need for attention' - this is all understood. What is real will rise to the top and it will be lasting; it will not be bound by ego or old traditions; it will not be pouring new wine into old skins. I would suggest that everyone who can put Father as their sovereign will find a peace and love that they simply cannot get anywhere else. This is not a mission of man's power, but a mission of God's love. Is this helping? (Calvin: Yes. Thank you very much.)

With that, I will take my leave. Know that I am growing with affection for you each. I become better with your friendship. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

All The Love One Needs Is Already Within, From The Purest Source Of All Love
Abraham & Machiventa, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-06-2004
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am ever so grateful to be a part of you. I feel indeed so blessed for being a small part of a larger picture. I have a soul satisfaction that I have not ever felt before. I believe you are a part of that. At times I feel for your mortal pain and struggle. I realize that agondonter status is difficult to not only 'endure' but to 'master.' [Agondonter: One from a rebellion infected world who, because of the severance of the system circuits, 'believes without seeing' - without proof.]

Where I am right now, I can see how my experience in the flesh has served. As a material mortal, I felt somewhat isolated from spirit - which surely did create some yearning for ego-satisfaction. As I am now, I crave no attention for ego. I know with certainty that Father breathes life into me. Mother and Michael care for me as I am now, and assist me in what I am becoming. I have no need to run with animal instinct, for my spiritual inheritance is more than I will ever need.

I do love each one of my brothers and sisters here on the Teaching Staff. I value their thoughts, but their words do not have control over my actions. I value their love and affection for me and yet, I do not crave their acceptance. I value their thoughts and yet, I would never dream of changing the Master's plans in favor of some ego wish-fulfillment. Do you see, I love and value these many people and yet, I realize the love that I surely need is from the purest Source of all love.

Had I realized this ideal way of thinking in my days in the flesh, I would have stumbled less, I am sure. In those days, things I could see and feel with the material senses were more real to me. My friend and mentor, Machiventa Melchizedek, was indeed a great source of spiritual interpretation - he had taught me to see beyond my eyes, hear beyond my ears. He taught me that everyday living was indeed a gift not to be taken for granted. Yes, mortal life was simply an education - learning to master the self while having to use eyes and ears to see beyond the physical.

I am MACHIVENTA. Greetings, children. It has seemed to be ages since I have spoken with you in this fashion. I hope you each know that while I seem to be less present, that is not really the case for I am here much of the time and certainly always a part of your educational agenda.

As Abraham knows, I love to reminisce, especially about those days in the flesh on your world. Abraham makes himself to sound so mortal, and indeed he was, but also was he a willing student. Definitely did he embrace honesty with a rare enthusiasm.

What Abraham speaks of tonight is that all-encompassing love of the Father of all fathers. This Parent is not like any mortal you have ever known. This is One who knows you in-depth and loves you for all that you are, and even for what you are not. When one has the all-encompassing satisfaction of love from the Father, what more does one need?

This time of year, you celebrate the birth of the baby Jesus. How wonderful it would be to be with the idea of being reborn in spirit, to come to life with new ideas. Allow the old to go to its place. Allow the new to rise to the top. Michael has said: "With Father, all things are possible," and this is literally what He meant!

Knowing the presence of God--feeling the presence and being dedicated to living the life in the spirit--all leads to knowing, without a doubt, that you are loved and a child of His. Knowing God, you will never be alone. Knowing God's love, you will need not be led by the ego's needs.

When you picture a classroom full of children, some will always clamor for attention. Many of these children distract the other children, and certainly it is all a valuable lesson, but when you see that child who is focused on the teacher's words, you see a child who is healthy in mind, body, and spirit - for he was reared in a wise and loving home; He knows he is taken care of; He is with certainty that the love of the parent is with him at all times.

Why clamor for man's attention? Why divert your fellow's attention to yourself when you have the Father's attention that surpasses anything of this world? Children, this is peace-giving; this is serenity and a path to wisdom. For the week ahead focus on renewing your relationship with the Father of all fathers. I would suggest to throw out your concept of Him now, and allow Him to rebuild your idea of who and what He truly is.

During this holiday season, we shall focus on becoming new - being reborn in mind, body, and spirit. Know that I am with sincere affection for you each, and my eyes are always on this Mission. My heart is deep-rooted within this Mission. I shall stay the course. I love you. Farewell.

I am ABRAHAM. Thank you, brother, friend, and mentor. Your wisdom is always a road to peace. I am blessed knowing you are with us in all ways. Your support is definitely a light for us to live by.

And with that, I shall take my leave also. Know that you each are in my thoughts. You are known and loved. We will meet again. Until next time, shalom.

A Creative Outlet Is A Good Mood Changer, An Enhancer Of Beauty, Goodness and Truth
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-13-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I would give you each my gratitude for continuing to welcome me here each week. I am grateful to Michael for having given me this task; I shall not take it for granted.

While I am mostly a being of sincerity, I also enjoy humor, music, and art. Even though this season of traditions is usually quite busy, there are a great many sights and sounds to behold. I must admit, those material visions I view lead to certain emotions welling up within me. I am beyond the material world and yet, all that I sense does in some way still affect me.

I know how it is for you in your material state to walk the walk of faith. Remember, all you take in becomes a part of you. You need to balance that with divine influence. From day to day you can tune into your media reports, and the amount of negativity coming from that is certainly overwhelming. Many who view these reports are unaffected, in a detached manner, because they are not 'directly' affected.

As you were discussing earlier, many seem to find happiness in a material fashion. We each know this is fleeting. It is not a sin to be surrounded by material wealth unless it is, for the most part, your driving force in this short time in the flesh.

Beauty is productive when it leads to spirit. For example, if an art piece sparks reflections of spirit within one's heart, mind, and soul, then indeed is this beauty productive and fruit-producing. When material beauty has you enslaved however – such as in efforts to maintain it or to gain more – then indeed is that from an animal level, and a producer of spirit poisons. How wonderful would it be to be driven by that spirit which is a producer of art or beauty. Yes, spirit produces spirit.

You must take caution in this material world what you feed the soul. It is wise to find balance in all your daily activities. One who works too much becomes enslaved in mind to that very thing. One who plays too much finds he is indebted and certainly stressed. It is true that the material eyes are the windows of the soul. What you see, and your interpretation of it, does directly affect moods, attitude, and spiritual growth.

Let us take a soldier at war, for example: All day long the soldier can be surrounded by brutality. He or she can witness the death of friends and comrades in uniform. The soldier might even be made to kill, or do some other task soldiers are trained to do. This is traumatic, yes; and still, the soldier is loyal to his commitment to serve. He must do what he must do.

In the midst of all this chaos, the soldier can receive messages from home. To read these letters actually takes him back home in mind. His attitude is improved; he is feeling supported and seeing the honor of duty before him. The soldier can experience the worst of the material elements, and yet the letter produces in mind the scenery of children playing, or perhaps a garden. Yes, this message from home can boost his spirits – at least change his attitude and perhaps produce a bit more positive energy.

Any beauty leading to truth and goodness is certainly welcomed into the material life. What is your definition of beauty? What are you surrounded by that is spirit-producing? In the midst of a busy life, how do you keep balance with spirit? What time is set aside for prayer or meditation? Perhaps there is available a few moments to study or listen to beautiful music. How many of you act upon your feelings of creativity? A creative outlet is certainly a mood changer.

This week, let not the busyness of life drag you from spirit, but allow the 'spirit' to drive life. That is all for this evening. Have not worry. Know that we are moving forward. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

How Do We Combat Spiritual Loneliness - Past Anger | Life Without Father Is A Thirst Never Quenched

Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 12-20-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I do love these small more intimate groups. The energy this evening is indeed promoting peace – something we can all use after the busy holidays.

I still find the story of 'Jesus born as a helpless babe on this material world,' fascinating. I find the happenings that led up to the birth, intriguing.

I realize that the Master was meant to come here and that was the plan. From a mortal standpoint, however, I am always in awe of those things Father can make happen. For examples: the visitation of Gabriel to Mary; the dream that Joseph had; the fact that Elizabeth was beyond her childbearing years and could still carry a child. These things, to me, are real and something I could relate to from a mortal standpoint.

We must realize however, these events did not happen one right after the other in such a fast pace, no. God has His time, and God's time is perfect. That is the one thing I have found most difficult to understand as a mortal - God's time and my time were not the same. A year to me could be the blink of an eye to Father. Believe me, I was then, and sometimes still am, impatient and anxious to see every outcome. Know that I am with understanding that impatience is a burden hard to bear.

How blessed are we that Michael of Nebadon chose our small planet as a bestowal experience! How blessed are we that He set a sublime example, from infancy to adulthood! How blessed are we that we have this information, meaning living revelation and the Urantia Book, to broaden our view! How blessed are we that we are not bound by tradition and have every possibility before us! Thank you for allowing me to share in your lives and in your experiences.

It would seem appropriate this evening to discuss Father's presence in our everyday lives. Spiritual loneliness has driven even the best of us to find temporary fulfillment, even if in a negative manner. The human mind is fascinating, yes, with all its idiosyncrasies and interpretations.

We each know that life is not continual joy - there are various emotions, there are hard times, there are complex situations. I say, this is 'typical mortal life.' A life barren of the spirit, however, is to have repetitive negative thinking. This negative thinking keeps one downcast all the time - wherein there is no balance.

Life lived without the Father's presence is a thirst that is never quenched, a hunger that is never satisfied. Many who know this spiritual loneliness are thrill seekers, always looking for that next temporary high. How do we combat spiritual loneliness? You could attribute most of it to the mind, 'how you think.' What goes into your mind? What are you sensing?

One who holds fast to past anger will certainly create a barrier between themselves and Spirit - of course worsening the situation. As such, for a correction it is most wise to turn off the world around you and have not worry of anything material. Have not worry of any loved one's deprivation, so to speak - nothing but your mind and the Spirit. We can go to the well of the Father and drink deeply His abiding love. Yes, it is possible to not have worry for tomorrow or even have anger over the past.

As we approach this new year, we can put our focus toward strengthening our bond with the Father, Michael, and Mother. Ponder this thought regarding 'spiritual loneliness' – versus, 'if I have God, I have everything.' Father is indeed sensible. He would lead you upon a path of common sense. He would not walk the path for you, no; He would, however, go before you to clear the way for your experience needed.

Father would not allow His children to indulge in irresponsible behavior and then remove their difficulties. What would that serve? How would that help? He would however, show various solutions you could choose. He would show you how to help yourself. He is the good Father who never falters or fails his child who allows Him to lead.

This week, make effort to turn off the world and tune into Him. Ponder those facts of 'God's time' and 'your time.' Remember the focus for the coming new year. That is all. Know that each time we meet I am with more affection for you. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Announcement. Getting Back To Our Original Mission Focus | Correction, One Individual At A Time

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-27-2004

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am touched by your faithfulness. I am moved by your willingness to work for the growth of the kingdom. When there is a show of faith, Father always uses the opportunity to the fullest. Father's works and 'your idea' of His works may not align, no, but your experience and time in this new era has shown you that all works for the good of the whole with Father's works.

I am with a humble heart to see the many children of the Correcting Time unify in faith. For this moment in time, we can overlook the politics of our cause and redirect our focus back to Father's original plan:

Some years ago, we began the purpose of creating a 'time of correction' for a misguided world. Many Teachers were trained and were sent on assignment without the security of knowing that their efforts would be productive. We found this world a place of deep longing and hungering for truth. Common religion was really no longer serving the common man.

The Correcting Time is in answer to the world's prayers. We have responded to your call; and yet, much of the time you are blinded from our response. We seek to bring comfort and spiritual security, not more political fuel for the fire of the ego. We find a great many individuals wishing to be heard, and practically nobody, in the busyness of mortal-living, is really listening.

We would like to be about the business of the original Mission. We seek to direct all back toward the plan and purpose of Michael, our Creator Son Brother. For the Correcting Time to show results on a mass scale, we must begin to be corrected 'one individual at a time.' This is your solace. This is your peace. This assistance is free and available to all. There is no need to scramble toward spiritual enlightenment. There is no 'king of the hill.' There are no competitors to race against. There is just you and your indwelling Father.

For these times ahead, let us begin the practice of listening and being observant.

You have the entire universe in front of your eyes – you have only just to look back to our beginning days and remember the quest that was first suggested. Have not worry. Know that joy and abundance are also a part of living. That is all. I will take some questions.

CALVIN: Abraham, thank you for being with us tonight and putting up with our 'group ways' and our individual-ness. In your words tonight you referred to going back to those earlier days. It's probably a hot topic with the directors from your side, but I have been thinking about this: In the earlier days of the Teaching Mission there was great care, on your end, to appoint and assign Teachers to groups seeking such. Sometimes a group or a 'transmission receiver' was ready, and often other requests for an assignment to a group would get your advice to wait. It was always at yours or Ham's direction the Teacher and transmission receiver assignments – which I see greatly helped in accuracy of the many Teacher transmissions, and helped greatly to minimize confusion and error. That protocol seems to have become something quite different now. Many seem to forge ahead without seeking directives from your side. How would you address that?

ABRAHAM: My referral in this lesson was more toward having the faith of a child. A child is more interested in the journey than the destination. In the beginning of our Teaching Mission, this Teacher/student experience was new for all of us, and there was unspoken respect and reverence which humbled one to be more receptive, more observant. We can think of the apostle Thomas when he supported the Master's cause. He knew not why Jesus did what He did but he was willing to go forth, no matter what. For Thomas, this was not so difficult, but mostly a simple matter of making a decision and being committed to seeing it through. All things will evolve. People will come and go, yes, but Father will remain the same, and truth will become ever-more apparent. Truth is lasting. And as we evolve, we will all see what holds true. Is there more to this question?

CALVIN: You brought out that we did have a lot of Teachers trained in the beginning to come aboard. Being new to us, it was quite a spiritual shock to our system – and we saw everything from skepticism to fanaticism play out. Quality-control of truth was probably an issue, at least from my viewpoint. Putting too many 'brakes on' and not 'allowing the new,' versus the 'anything goes' attitudes – which seems to have taken hold in the Teaching Mission resulting in a lot of seeming untruth coming through in the various groups. My point – I remember how there seemed to be quite a bit of 'permission granted' in those early days of Teacher assignments and TR's being prepared and assigned. Have we evolved out of that? or would it be good to get back to those careful safeguard ways wherein, from your side, there are assignments and directives for this Mission.

ABRAHAM: When we think of the spreading of the Master's teachings long ago, you can see there were only a few that clung to the truth. There were many branches that went off with good intentions, and in the end, self-glory overpowered spiritual growth. The Correcting Time is in its beginning stages and there will be mistakes and some changes from our original plan. There will be those who find this work too difficult, and leave it in search for something more simple. There will be those who look for ego-gratification or even for just somewhere they can be noticed or appreciated. When the majority of the Teaching Mission members find their commitment rooted in setting Father as their sovereign, and in 'serving the brotherhood,' then will there be stabilization. This cause, Michael's Mission, is still in its infancy; and with all our participation, we can watch it grow into a thing of beauty. Teachers will come when they come. The natural flow is best. To put great effort into causes without recognizing and absorbing even the smallest fruitful results, then perhaps redirection of focus is necessary. Father is no doubt in His heaven and within each soul, and not a thing happens that He does not already know about. To trust in Him is a step in the right direction – and then will individuals be prepared to receive Teachers and be balanced in Mission life. Is this answering? (Calvin: Yes, it is, very clearly. Thank you.)

AZSURAY: Abraham, I love you. You were always my favorite person in the Old Testament. I appreciate you taking the time to correct us and to be here for us in those places where the religions have failed us so much. I would like to ask you how I could improve possibly my study group and maybe have some variety. Then I want to ask you another question regarding the Urantia Foundation after you answer that.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. First, I would say that I have never intended to put 'correction' upon you, but to hold out my hand to give you a step up. No, it's not my job to 'correct' – you have made that decision for yourselves, and might I say, well done. Your study group seems to be moving as it should. My only suggestion is to relate what you study to circumstances in everyday life – this brings the Urantia Book to life, this makes what seems difficult, useable and understandable. You do well, Azsuray. Your next question?

AZSURAY: Yes, Abraham, the next question I have is: Why is it that the Urantia Foundation does not recognize the Teaching Mission, for it is truth, beauty, and goodness. I believe it is truth and good, and I don't have any more Spirit of Truth than anyone else. Why is it that they will not? Is it because they want separateness? you tell me! I can't figure it out.

ABRAHAM: My own understanding is that the difficulty lies within 'change' itself. Many individuals feel safe in the familiar; their stability lies within what they already know. This newness (Teaching Mission teachings) is bringing them to the unknown – and that seems to them to be a loss of control. They are well-intentioned people and yet, they have not the control they think they do. God's work will continue on – with, or without them. Still, they serve an important function – the spreading of the Fifth Epochal Revelation. Does this help? (Azsuray: Yes, it does, and I thank you.) Abraham: Another question?

DIANNA: Abraham, this lesson speaks of expansion and healing in this moment. It feels to me that my inner sense is being focused on a connectedness – not only to what you were saying about being connected to Father, but also being connected to all that is true, beautiful and good, in my brothers and sisters, and the energy surrounding this. It is as if I sense my own power and conviction in my choices to move forward; and at the same time, I can trust my brothers and sisters also in that connection to do the same. So there is no need for the politics that you discussed earlier. All that is required is this focus and faith. Can you address that?

ABRAHAM: Absolutely correct. Very well said, Dianna. It is a matter of feeling connected – equal on all levels with your fellows, and feeling that surety of being a child of God. This, is unity. This, is the brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God. This connectedness is exactly what we are striving for. In such, there are no feelings of separation, and no need to be noticed or specially tended to. Peaceful well-being and unity, yes. Well said. Another question?

KATHY: Abraham, I am new. I just wanted to know if you have a message for me and ask if you know what is going on?

ABRAHAM: My daughter, I can see that you seem to be somewhat suspicious of the abundance that life has to offer. Looking back on your days, it would seem like life would be coming to a balanced point, and then adversity would strike. You are maturing in mind and spirit, and are learning that this suspicion is sabotaging your happiness. Accept the good for what it is, and know that you are fully capable of dealing with any adversity that comes your way. You have built a strong spirit, one that is able to withstand anything. Take joy in that much, and be comforted by the One who has helped you this far. Our Father wants for your happiness. Have not worry over the medical concerns, for these are temporary and somewhat routine. Accept with a glad heart those wonderful things which may come your way – they are free; you need not pay a price, no. As you mature in mind and spirit, you can find life to be with less 'peaks and valleys,' and more of 'an open road.' Have not worry. You do well.

With that, I shall take my leave. Know that I am ever growing more in love with you each week. Know that I am available should you need me. Until next time, shalom.

2005 and 2006 MANSION WORLD TEACHINGS

The Energy of Love | When All Else Is Gone Only Love Is Real (Tsunami in Indonesia)
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-03-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, what a blessing it is to see each one of your beautiful faces here this evening. I am most grateful to know you each and experience this Correcting Time with you. As we experience our Father, we become more. The 'Father and child relationship' is a doorway into deeper spiritual understanding. Let us pray.

Father, we offer ourselves to you in all ways – mind, body, and spirit. We know you are master at organization and synchronizing life to draw us closer to you. We know you are a healer of the mind and body. We know you can comfort the mortal loneliness as well as the loneliness of the soul. It is understood that we are not a chosen people. We are not extraordinary in any way. We are simply your children making an effort to listen to that still small voice within. We are children with the intentions of following your will. We live for your comfort and kindness. We count on your wisdom. We offer ourselves to you this evening to refocus our minds on the goal ahead. We ask that you give us understanding of the Master's perfected humility. We are grateful to gather together as a family, with you at the head of our table. You are our Sovereign, Father of all fathers. Amen.

Every once in a while we have found it important to restate our Mission goals; it is important to remember what we are striving for. As we the individual become closer to God the Father – that affects the whole; and that, has influence on the Supreme Being. As you grow, the Supreme Being grows; the God-in-time is becoming more Godly, and indeed the reflections are felt here on Earth.

I realize those bound by traditions look at this last week's disaster as further proof of the 'second coming.' [Editor's note: There was a devastating tsunami in Indonesia and the regions surrounding that killed approximately 230,000 people.] While this disaster is beyond words to describe our sorrow, there are individuals who are looking at this as a clue to the new life ahead.

Many Christians of today are simply waiting for the Master to come and take His chosen people, as they suppose, to a much better place. This understanding is sad, to say the least. There are no words we could say to change the minds of the Christian fundamentalists – they are where they are; and thanks to Father, we are where we are.

I am always intrigued by the overall plans of our Father. He does always see to an ultimate good. While there are worldly events that seem to occupy our minds, we will continue to learn on a much smaller and personal scale as the individual.

What do we live for? Why do we continue to strive, day in and day out? What is most meaningful in this life? How do the scales of experience balance your happiness or your despair? I find that in my own experience, love has been the single most important key. When all else is gone, only love seems real. I am not speaking of the emotions of love, but the energy of love. Love is not about attachment, but about real and moving energy, a living force we can actually sense beyond the five senses.

As you grow in spiritual maturity, you realize love goes beyond your biological family. You can love without emotional attachment, providing Father remains your sovereign, your First Source and Center. People seem to come and go, but the love they had is what makes a difference. Love creates memories, and that is an energy to live by.

This week, we can ponder the love of the Father. How are we in our own lives like the Father? How is your love like His for your fellows? While alarming events are occurring on the world now, please do not be overwhelmed by them. Keep life simple and small – manageable, so to speak. As the world changes, we will require more of your help; and for that, we need you to be grounded and to stay on task.

This week, find time to study about Father and the individual. That is all. No questions this evening – perhaps our next meeting. Know that I am with growing love for you each. Until next time, shalom.

In What Way Is Father An Influence In Our Daily Living

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-10-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is wonderful that I feel so free from any pressure; I can be exactly who I am, and I am comforted knowing I am loved.

We can see many of Father's children under such pressure to become more - materially, socially, and even intellectually. Most of the time the pressure is not worth the reward. The continual 'striving' brings such imbalance, and many look for a satisfaction that never comes. I am so grateful to be well within this family of God. I know you each desire my happiness and overall goodness. I am at peace with who I am - and that, my friends, is a battle won.

This past week we were learning about the Father and the individual. As the part moves, so moves the whole. Your education, your well-being and balanced living, does indeed affect the whole. Your personal relationship with Father is certainly a map to Paradise. The Father is involved in your lives as much as you allow Him.

The Father is within each person, yes, as well as without; but certainly is He so much more. Our Father of all fathers has fragmented Himself to be a close personal Father/friend to each one of His children. No detail of personal living is too small to take to our Father.

I believe each one of us would want to personally review how we allow Father to influence our daily living. Is Father out among you and your companions? Is He in your everyday work? Is He allowed in your home and to have influence over family matters? Many leave Father just to their own allotment of stillness-time, and take Him not out into the busyness of living. I mean not to say be fanatical and preach on the street corner, no! but to have Him in your thoughts as much as you are capable of.

As I feel comforted here among you 'as myself,' you should also feel that among your fellows. Your personal relationship with Father is indeed an aid to that feeling of well-being and belonging. We each are simply 'learning children;' and as our Mission moves forward, we have not room for guilt or regret. We must continue to move forward from day to day without feeling hindered because of our humanness.

In your activities for this week, measure your amount of time you feel you can be your authentic self. And who is that! How does a close personal relationship with Father help to accept that person you are - and, the person you are becoming? Are there any questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, thank you for another most helpful and insightful lesson. I do find so much of your lessons in each weeks' experience; and yes, it helps. I think the biggest help in this last while has been to learn to trust that Father has our wellbeing in full control; and with this new belief I am not with my usual worrying and 'out of control' feelings. So thank you very much for your assistance and teaching which has brought this awareness to me.

ABRAHAM: Thank you, Calvin. I do see you as having made great strides toward personal peace. You seem to be leaning toward the realness of living instead of how things may look on the outside. It takes some years of experience to trust something unseen when you have not found trust in many things you can see. How blessed are we that Father is not like any human. He makes the sun to rise and set every day. He hangs the Earth upon nothing. He is literally, a driving material force, as well as spiritual. You are getting to know Father in your moments of calm – and this is indeed, showing forth fruits. Well done, my son. Another question?

HARRISON: Abraham, I am very grateful to have the experiences that I have had with Father. But I don't understand – am I really having those great experiences with Father? or am I having something that I am making up. In having these good experiences, how then do I fall away so easily and get back into a situation where I don't feel as close?

ABRAHAM: I see that this is simply a typical mortal dilemma. You are made to believe more than the mind can see. You are having experiences with Father, and experiencing those lessons that are lasting. Indeed, Harrison, enjoy the harvest. Those moments that seem to fade away – allow them to go. Nothing of value is ever really lost. This mortal life is your classroom, and you will be required to learn lessons in a manner where you will retain memory of them. Remember to find reversion. Find a reason to laugh and have enjoyment, for this is indeed part of Father's abundance in daily living. Have not worry. Is this helping? (Harrison: It was very lovingly expressed Abraham. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome, Harrison. One more question?

TECTRA: Abraham, with looking at the energy on the planet right now, it seems people are becoming so sensitive these days. Is this because this veil between Spirit and the human form is becoming so thin? My question is: How are we to be more tolerant of people that are getting just so out of control?

ABRAHAM: Understood. This also is natural outworking. As mortals, there is always the ongoing battle with the ego or animal tendencies. There is always the desire for the 'quick fix.' It would seem that many in the world want to bypass the hard work but still receive the satisfaction that comes from doing it. We too, in the beginning of our Teaching Mission, jumped to many conclusions; and after certain lessons we were made to be more balanced. Humility has been a fine teacher. Agondonter status is a required mortal lesson on this world and what the mind does not know for sure, the imagination can make it up to suit one's beliefs. This is why we have you, our Teaching Mission and our Correcting Time students. You each will be an ambassador in showing the logical side of the spiritual life. As with natural evolution, there will be some moments of chaos, or confusion. Not to worry though – as time moves on, the spiritual life will be made more clear. Good question.

With that, I shall take my leave. My affection is ever growing for you each. Find time this week for rest and reversion. Until next time, shalom.

Ease-seeking and Escape Blocks The Value of Experience

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-17-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. This moment of silence you take before I begin is the most peaceful time some of you get all week. As you mature in your spiritual life you find those moments of silence more productive.

The world is fast-paced now more than ever. It is indeed an era of ease-seeking – only it seems this ease-seeking takes so much hard work to maintain. In learning to be your authentic self, you would do well to consider the physical body. Much of how you feel 'physically' affects how you move in the spirit. You are material creatures, and you have to consider the material, yes. Yet in this era of ease-seeking, society is all too often looking for an escape from pain or the unpleasant.

Much of your perception of life does come from what you see in your environment. Mental disturbance is a creator of physical pain. Those individuals that see 'the good life' as to be a life of ease are surely missing the lesson on why we must experience the mortal life.

Individuals from worlds settled in Light and Life admire those who experience the mortal life on an evolutionary planet where man must work his way up from the 'animal mind' to the divine nature. It is experiencing the difficult roads of life and overcoming obstacles – that does bring man closer to the divine nature. If one is ease-seeking, then one seeks to escape pain and struggle, and therein the value of experience is lost.

This society that you live in today has become soft, meaning that when difficult times occur there is a tendency to find immediate relief; never mind being observant and learning the lesson, finding solutions, etc. Rather, individuals seek comfort and immediate relief. Father and His associates are not about bringing man a life of comfort, but about bringing man closer to the divine nature through the natural outworkings of living. Yes, this is the road-map toward where He is – and it is so, all the way to Paradise.

Pain, of any kind, is certainly uncomfortable, yes. You need not have a life of misery to advance spiritually, no – but definitely an attitude of ease-seeking will delay growth. Your medical community has created a drug for every ailment. Most ailments come from how you view your life – how you take the time to relate with God. I mean not to say that pain is your only teacher, no! I mean to say that an ease-seeking or a fear-ridden attitude to escape pain, is not serving. Escape does not solve problems. Escape can sometimes bring temporary relief, yes, but always is a courageous countenance the best way to receive those interpretations of life's happenings which build lasting meanings and values.

Let us look back over history and ponder those individuals who worked diligently just to live; just to get by. There was not much time to take for daily stillness; but then again, there were not the distractions that we have in the world today. Life is hard work. It takes diligent effort to gain value from experience. Ease-seeking (or escape) is not going to bring advancement. Do not let this understanding bring you anxiety, no; but let it empower you to embrace work and effort, knowing that Father had orchestrated such for your eternal career to Paradise.

That is all. No questions this evening. Know that each one of you is capable to receive any answer to any question. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Lean Toward a Divine Intervention | The Relationship With Father and the Individual

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, what an increase of energy we have here this evening. I am always joy-filled and energized by our weekly meetings. I feel quite at home and I have you to thank. How wonderful it is to gather and re-center our focus on the First Source and Center.

For most, the week is always filled, and many times we are feeling stretched beyond our means to carry on. Many of us forget to consult with Father or His associates on any given circumstance. It is in the animal nature to be selfish or self-serving. Much of the time mortals find themselves serving the ego first, and saving a consultation with Father as a last resort.

As we mature in spirit, we find it natural to lean toward divine intervention and what is best for the whole, rather than serving the animal needs. I mean not to say that man is naturally a sinner, no, you hear enough of that in organized religion. I mean to say that man must work his way up from the bottom of the animal level to the higher divine scale.

As you are willing to release your needs into the Father's hands you find more peace and confidence to allow your mind to work at optimum level. There are not those 'me first' thoughts. There is not concern of how 'others' see you. There is not the worry over the trivial. There is however, peace, and a clear channel to increase spiritual receptivity.

Last week, we discussed becoming empowered to face life's obstacles with courage instead of cowering through escape; it is mostly a matter of perception. Children, your interpretation of everyday events is your daily living reality. Many occurrences are blamed on 'providence' because that is what is interpreted. We have come too far to allow the animal such control. We know now that the ability to be patient and observant is a light upon the spiritual path.

I can look back at my days in the flesh and see those things that I thought were important were really, self-serving. Those lessons that were of true value are those I took with me into my eternal education. I have learned to be at peace with the universal laws. I have come to trust Father and His associates. I want for nothing. I am saying, it was my days in the flesh that brought me to where I am now. Now, I can see the value. Then, I was quite wrapped up in my own ego-perception, my own animal-preservation.

This week continue to study and ponder about the 'authentic self' - the relationship with Father and the individual. The lesson is kept short to allow time for a few questions.

CALVIN: Abraham, we welcome Ashley and her boyfriend, Joey. (Abraham: Welcome.)
Calvin: Regarding this 'Father connection' I know it is quite a slow change - it is for me anyway. I look back and see growth, but every day it feels like I am a long way off still. The Urantia Book tells us that it is very unlikely to have a real good Thought Adjuster connection in the flesh. With the circuits open now, how clear can we expect that connection, with this new celestial Teacher training and all?

ABRAHAM: Understood. The difficulty with mortals is that they complicate most things. Clarity with Father is highly possible, yes, and it will be the most natural occurrence. Communication from Father and His associates do not need bells or whistles or miraculous happenings. Father's communication is most clear when you are in a mindset of service – service without recognition for self. It is understood that mortals have a strong need to be loved and accepted. Your most fulfilling experience with this will be with Father; when you can put forth the faith-effort to allow Him opportunity to work, then are you bestowed with a peace that surpasses all understanding; I say 'peace,' more-so than 'elation.' There is joy of course, but not euphoria. Striving for spiritual maturity helps you to release the ego – which releasing, connects you to the higher mind. Is this answering? (Calvin: Yes, answering very clearly. Thank you.) Abraham: Thank you for that question, Calvin. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I just love the lesson. I love you. I love being here and love having you as a friend. Could you share how you are, what you are up to these days?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. How kind of you to inquire. This group is quite important to me and is one of my ongoing tasks. I do assist in helping new groups get started. Many are not affiliated with the Urantia Book, so this particular task can be time-consuming. I find my life now much as I would have desired it in the flesh. I have time for rest and diversion. I have time for study and socializing. I am probably more busy than I was in my mortal days but everything is with a smooth and continuous flow. While I am deeply concerned with the world's happenings, I am with peace that Father's overall plan is the best plan. Thank you for asking, Miriam. (Miriam: Thank you for sharing.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

HARRISON: Abraham, can you comment regarding our relationship with Father in a co-creator way – without endangering or enlarging our egos too much?

ABRAHAM: Co-creating with Father is somewhat like I said before – completely natural and without any inkling that something spectacular is happening. Think back to when you were a child learning to write, and an adult put his hand over your hand to help guide the pencil. This is somewhat how Father co-creates with you. When opportunities present themselves and you act from your divine nature, then does Father clear a path and provide instruction. When we speak of co-creation, we must take the Master's example into account. He was not co-dependent in a way that He knew not what to do without the Father, no. He was powerful because He trusted that His Father always knew what to do. Jesus trusted Father, without hesitation, and Father empowered Him. And again, this, for the most part, was entirely natural and without fanfare. The smallest lessons always left the biggest impressions. Does this help? (Harrison: Yes, and thank you.) Abraham: One more question?

SIMON: Maybe a comment. I just love you, Abraham. I, also, thank you for your lessons. Maybe a comment on balancing work with diversion. Also, I would like to spend more time journaling, as you have advised us. How I can be more consistent with that?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. If one is quite in tune with the Father, he chooses a profession that seems like diversion – or in other words, something they enjoy and are feeling fulfilled. Sadly, every day do millions of individuals go out to their place of employment with dread and with desire to ‘just make it through one more day.’ No one is stuck in a particular life pattern – it can always be changed. As well, you can always do good ‘as you pass by.’ Where you work and live can be your own personal ministry. With the busyness of today’s world, many find they must become proficient in multi-tasking. While many feelings of ‘what am I to do’ are from the animal nature, some are from a soul level. It is not in your best interest to do stillness when you do not feel like it, when you are not open to it. It is not productive to journal if you are forcing it. You are not gaining a full spiritual experience when you greet the day with dread. It is always helpful to have tools at hand that create feelings of peace – music, art, socializing, etc. Small steps lead to larger ones. It must be known by now that no mortal is really forced to do anything, and that includes stillness, or spiritual study, or journaling. When you have the desire, then is your experience more productive. Do not force – simply allow.

And with that, I shall take my leave. It is an honor to be with you each. I am filled with gratitude to Father for my post. In serving, I am well served. I thank you. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

See Ourselves As a Learning Mortal | Living In the Moment Helps Overcome The Pressures From Demands

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-31-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What an intellectual group we have here this evening. You have quite possibly covered every topic; I may have to rearrange my lesson. Refreshing, yes. I am in awe of your ability to be flexible. Your enthusiasm for your spiritual understanding is quite contagious. It is indeed a blessing to know each one of you.

From where I am, I have some opportunities to know you each as your authentic selves. Of course Father knows you through and through, because He is our Father. I know you from what you dare to show me or share with me. I find you each unique – and yet, I relate with each one of you as a part of myself; part of the universe, and a part of the family of God. It is indeed a blessing, and I thank you.

It is interesting how individuals can be more accepting of their personal aspects when they are more accepting of others – or in other words, less judgmental. Life in the flesh is a lot of assuming or guessing or ‘preparing for the worst.’ As we mature in spirit we see our own mistakes not so devastating, not so condemning. While you can begin to see yourself as a ‘learning mortal’ you are releasing the pressure to be perfect, for you know this takes much time and experience.

There is not lasting perfection in one who is continuously pressured; the anxiety one may feel can even possibly delay growth, but that is not to worry over. I am saying, you most definitely expect more from yourself than do others; and many times you do fall short, yes, leaving you with feelings of discouragement for having disappointed others. This negative self-regard can certainly lead to unwanted behaviors, perhaps desires to ‘escape.’

How free would the world be if we simply made allowance for the growth of ourselves and, one another? The ego is a master of deceit and will try to convince you that your fellows' downfalls are your uprisings. The ego can certainly make man a slave to popular opinion – and therefore, limit spiritual receptivity.

This old saying, “live in the moment,” is not just words, no, but a reality you can make happen – it is a well-worn saying, but has deep meaning. ‘In the moment’ there is simple reality; there is not the guilt of the past or the worry of tomorrow; there is not judgment of self or others. ‘In the moment’ is where God resides. ‘In the moment’ is where peace abides.

This week, children, free your minds from that pressure that causes your worry. Think not of how you will reserve your place in heaven, but how you will live in the moment today. Let us study on spiritual maturity. That is all. Know that you are a good sounding-board for the activities of this Mission. Have not worry. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Maturity Leads To Understanding/Knowing | Spiritual Maturity

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-07-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am happy you braved the stormy weather conditions to meet here this evening. I am always glad to see you individually during the week, but I believe our fellowship here together is much more fun.

You don't have to be a mortal in today's changing world to understand the complexities that are occurring. We each know that transformation can be quite exhausting; those that are allowing it are literally experiencing transformation. Every day you are a new creature. Every day your minds are expanding and you are gaining maturity. For the most part in the so-called civilized world, spiritual maturity has not value. You that have recognized your son- or daughtership with God know that a maturing of the soul leads to understanding and knowing – and that, is peace.

When we study on the Master's time in the flesh we are able to see those slight transformations the apostles experienced in their short time with Jesus. When the Master's ministry began, we understood how the apostles could seem foolish in their unknowingness. We can see how their egos jumped to embrace their personal desires without consulting the Father's will.

We can now recognize that in the early days of this, our Teaching Mission, there was ego-interference from many directions. This is the beauty of spiritual maturity – the declining of the ego's wishes in favor of the patience to wait upon the Father's will.

It is understood that each of Father's children have their needs; they desire to be noticed and accepted – which in reality, is simply they desire love. The ego tends to draw out these aspects through an immature way, or an animalistic way; yet, it is still, experience. Experience brings understanding and spiritual maturity, yes, if you allow it. Those who are selfishly attaining this maturity for themselves are in the realization, sooner or later, that the ego's methods are fleeting, and does keep one in childish behavior.

While our Mission appears to be inactive or not very exciting, the real groundwork is being laid. The individuals who embrace the Father's will are being given the grown-up tasks. As you mature spiritually, you feel more a part of the whole. You come to realize it is not just all about you personally - your needs, wants, and desires - but about what is best for all concerned.

Think back over your years - while you may appear to have a few more lines on your face you are grateful to be beyond those more immature years, and that you already have the experience which has brought you to this present moment. Think of a very small child - he does what he knows how to do; when he knows better, he does better. You each have valuable experience that has brought you some spiritual maturity; and while it does not contain the drama of your youth, it brings many valuable tools, such as:

- You know how to communicate with Father and you know you are not a child who is last on His list.
- Your erroneous thinking is becoming recognized more quickly.
- You dwell not in the unknowingness of spiritual immaturity as much as you used to.

All these new tools bring peace to the mind and food to the soul. "When I was a child, I had the things of a child. When I was a man, I put childish things away." Spiritual maturity is putting childish things away; it is keeping the ego at bay while waiting upon the will of an all-knowing, all-powerful Father.

This week, let us ponder upon those childish ways that keep us squirming in our seats. Let us remember each day who we serve - and in that, how are we served? That is all. No questions this evening. Know that I find it an honor to serve with you. Know that each day my affection for you grows deeper. Until next time, shalom.

The Muscle Of Faith Yields Faith-Vision | Is Father a Continual Thought In Our Daily Living

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-14-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I love this interactive classroom we have here this evening. Each week I learn a great deal from you just listening to you each build upon ideas. Well done.

From where I am now, I sometimes forget how difficult it was for me to get here to this present time, this present level of growth. All my struggles were educational, and yet at the time, I really simply wanted to be free. Freedom was then, and is now, a state of mind. Certainly, life now for me at this level is indeed easier. But most definitely did I learn more (as in volume) in my days in the flesh.

It is said, a human child learns more in the first two years of life than at any other time; and this is like the mortal life. When you do move to the next realm it will seem more simplified. Why? I can tell you - in this life you are learning to exercise the muscle that keeps all other systems pressing on - that is the muscle of faith. Faith is the foundation from which all other things are built. In exercising your agondonter status you must learn faith. Much of the mortal path (or destiny) depends on your ability to remain faithful. Faith is where God is real, and is living your mortal life with you.

Yes, I realize at times how I can give you many suggestions on living in the mortal life – or 'spiritual lessons,' what have you, sounding as if I have no concept of how difficult today's mortal experience is. I can say, however, and with gratitude, that my mortal experience is what I have built my eternal career on. It was difficult at the time, yes. It was difficult to sometimes live minute by minute in the unknowingness. But with experience and faith-vision, I had gathered all I could out of this mortal life and put that value into what is now my eternal career.

Many times we have read about those individuals who sought the Master's assistance for healing, and time and time again He told them: "Go your way, my child, your faith has made you whole." Can one understand the value of spiritual fruits without exerting the faith-vision? How much more meaningful is love when you have faith in the creator of love? How much more meaningful is truth when you have faith that everything, no matter how insignificant in detail, is watched over?

Over these last few weeks, we have been discussing 'spiritual maturity.' To strengthen your faith-vision is to set you on a path in the right direction. Think for a moment how your daily lives are influenced by worldly events or personal environmental elements. Let us also think about the concerns and obligations each mortal has to bear each day. Yes, it would be so easy to feel that that is your reality, and that you are in constant contemplation (survival mode) feeling "where is Father now?"

With expanding faith, we see Father in all aspects of our lives. The struggle is not so much a struggle any longer; it becomes more of a lesson, something that carries a message to you from Father. The world, without the knowledge of Father's presence, is seriously empty and, of course, without value and meaning. Faith is a filter which shows you that your efforts in life are worth it. The mortal struggle is simply a map to the next life.

This week, as we continue to understand spiritual maturity, let us focus on faith. Do we think of Father on somewhat of a continual basis? or only when life is a burden. In what seems to be emotional misery, is there a way our faith-vision could have brought us to a more balanced place? Faith does not mean believing in everything, no. Faith is being open to the One you recognize as the sovereign over your life – every aspect of it.

That is all. I do take great joy in each one of your unique perspectives. I enjoy your differing personalities. I look forward to our fellowship each week; and as always, our growth together. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Allow Faith To Lead Us, Moment by Moment, Hour by Hour, Day by Day
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-21-2005
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I enjoy the consistency of this meeting. No matter what happens during the week we know we can count on a re-centering of spirit each week within our fellowship. I am with gratitude to you faithful brothers and sisters. Your willingness to stay the course has been a wonderful example to many.

Most of you that have been with us these many years have seen a slight transformation within yourselves and, with one another. Perhaps the road you predicted in this Mission training did not lay out before you as expected, but your willingness to remain on the path of spiritual education and personal correction, is inspirational.

In the early years of the Correcting Time, we each had expectations. I, likewise, had expectations. I can see now that what Father has laid out before me is indeed much better than I could have ever conceived of. Father's plans are enduring and creating permanent change.

We have been discussing faith and how that relates with spiritual maturity. Spiritual maturity is the setting aside of expectations, with the faith-knowingness that Father's will, prevails. Take for example, John the Baptist: The Master knew John for much of His life. He loved John like a brother. Imagine your brother being held in prison for 'your' cause. Certainly, the Master was uncomfortable with John's plight having been imprisoned, and yet, He remained faithful to following the Father's will above his own feelings for John.

Certainly, Jesus was sorrowful at the thoughts of John, and was sympathetic to John's mindal torment. It was the Master's deep desire to free His friend from this torture; and yet, the Master set aside His personal feelings and endured the Father's timing, for He was indeed faithful in His trusting of an all-knowing, all-powerful universal Creator. Had the Master interrupted the Father's plans with His personal desires, how would have the situation played out differently?

How was our Creative Daughter, Eve's, experience comparable to this? Eve acted upon her desires and waited not for the Father's will to lay out what was a very important part of history for Urantia. Eve was faithful, yes, but she could not endure 'Father's time.' She allowed herself to be swayed by the seeming realities before her eyes. Eve was a being knowledgeable of various realms of spirituality, and yet she was found with impatience and unwillingness to stay the course - to be faithful in Father's ability to create permanent change.

The Master, however, even from his youth, faithfully relied upon the Father's will - to lead Him moment by moment, minute by minute, day by day, in faith. Time was not an aggravation to Jesus. In the reality of faith, the truth was laid out before Him in 'Father's time.'

My friends, how is the Mission-purpose like this historical experience? How are you made now to have mindal peace over the limitations of time? In your experience, does not faith show you value? Does it not show you the how and why?

As you well know, mortals can be overtaken by what is before their eyes, and faith appears to be fleeting. This is indeed why we suggest spiritual exercise - stillness, prayer, etc. How was Jesus endowed with such strength to remain calm in the face of every mortal storm? After all, He was also a man; He was brought up as an infant in that day and age to an adult, much as any other mortal is. He also had to allow for faith to grow in the soil of an everyday average mortal life.

This week we will focus on our 'exerting expectation' pattern, verses our 'allowing faith.' Let us try to have freedom from time concerns. Find a few moments each day for quiet. Allow yourselves to be open to, and take a part in, that permanent change brought from Father's timing.

That is all. Again, I thank you for your faithfulness, your consistency. Our fellowship is indeed a bright light in what we know as the Correcting Time. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

A Good Foothold In The Rock Of Faith Makes It Easier To Climb The Mountain Of Self-Mastery

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-28-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am most glad to share in your discussion this evening. It is said: "Where two or more are gathered, there in the midst is our Spirit of Truth." And it is literally true, my friends - in your group discussion, the spirit does help to bring the truth to the forefront of your minds.

I am honored to be a part of you and the whole kingdom family. You are to one another an anchor in the sea of everything. Your willingness to engage in honesty with one another is soul-building, and indeed is felt by the Supreme.

The business of faith is not always easy - you have your mortal lives as a practice field. I can say, as you mature in spirit, faith will not be such a struggle. Each week I study lesson topics; I have prayer and meditation so that I can be spirit led; I discuss ideas with my peers. I believe I make quite an effort to give the weekly lesson - yet, it is funny that in all my efforts, come lesson-time things change and I must adapt; and I am indeed happy to do so.

Yes, I am happy I do not have to rely upon my own knowledge, for I am part of a massive network that aids in my efforts to be spirit led. Many times I am somewhat disappointed that my plans are thwarted, but always is there a better plan in the works. It does take effort on my part to let go of my desires, my expectations, to play a part in the good of the whole.

I realized as a mortal that I lived to serve my desires. I always thought every good thing simply takes hard work; and that the harder I worked the more my desires will be fulfilled - and certainly then would I be joy-filled. With time and experience, I realized I was a slave to my desires. Certainly in this frame of thinking, there is no flow. In this thinking, I was in service to my ego and could not figure out why the universe would not oblige.

I did at some point in my mortal career have to make a conscious decision to not focus on what 'I want.' Indeed, anyone who can do that has achieved self-mastery, yes, but the reality is that the animal self does take some time to tame.

Let us ponder the Master's pain over His well-loved apostle, Judas. Jesus tried to help Judas on several occasions concerning faith. He treated Judas as He did all His brethren. He only wanted the highest good for all His apostles. The Master did feel the sting of betrayal when Judas had made his mind up to serve himself, and to make a feeble attempt at having others see him as 'more than he was.' How Jesus wanted to look into Judas's eyes and save him from himself.

Still, we all know that Jesus served the Father in heaven and was not about to stray from that, no matter how deep His desire to save His friend. Any other person who may have had to deal with Judas would have left him to his own demise. Jesus kept within the boundaries of the Father's will in trying to reach Judas. Had the Master interrupted the Father's will with His own personal desire, how would history have been different?

Father always has planned an ultimate good no matter what choices His children make. Definitely was Jesus a wonderful example of one who was not overcome with emotions and selfish desire, but one who 'lived to serve the whole.' While the events on Urantia had not the outcome the Master had hoped for, He still vowed to drink the cup no matter how bitter it was; and definitely did this take some reconciliation for His mortal mind.

The mortal lessons the Master had allowed to play out were certainly priceless, and affecting many even beyond this world. Once you have a good foothold in the rock of faith, then is it easier to climb the mountain of self-mastery; it becomes natural instinct to follow the will of Father as close as you possibly can. Father, every day, directs us; it is our choice to follow.

This week, let us make effort to not be caught up in desire or wanting. Let us focus on Father giving us His guidance. Father does speak to you every day in many ways. If you are caught up in the 'want,' it is difficult to not be self-serving. Rather, let us be caught up in the adventure of 'come what may' - Father's timing, and Father's hand.

That is all. Know that it is my deepest desire to spend these few moments with you each week, and I consider myself indeed, blessed. I am growing in affection for you. Go in peace. Until next week, shalom.

In My Desire To Serve Father I Am Served. What Are My Responsibilities In This Mortal Life

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-07-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I thank you for making me feel so welcomed week after week. I realize for myself, each time we meet I am filled with spiritual energy for the week ahead. I love the regeneration of energy we create with our fellowship. There are times when hard feelings come upon the group members, but for the most part there is always a revival in spirit.

The statement: "I have felt energy go forth from me," was one of mystery quoted by our Master. From where did Jesus receive this energy to put forth, and how did His recipients in turn put forth this energy in gratitude?

Over these last few weeks, we have been discussing spiritual maturity, faith, and desire. As we move deeper into the Correcting Time, we will require those sound minds who are willing to receive guidance from Father to help us move the planet closer to Light and Life. We need individuals who are willing to forgo any recognition, whose greatest desire is to serve the Father.

We have all come to realize more and more there is a great deal of healing work that each individual must experience before ministry can begin. We have spent quite a few years delving into past pain and what seemed to be permanent patterns. In your desire to serve Father, you are served. As you mature, you are understanding the past and collecting the lessons therein. As you rise above resentment (or victimhood), you are able to receive this spiritual energy and put it forth into the progress of the Correcting Time.

Mortals will always have their issues, or emotional pain. Some mortals will have what seems to be a scarring of the soul and are caught up in the bitterness. But for the most part, any healthy individual will bravely face the lessons of life and be willing to move forward with healing – and beyond that, are capable of helping others.

Again, as we focus more on Father's promptings, we can have more trust in what He guides us to. When we are wrapped up in our own needs and desires, we seem to stay trapped in 'self.' This is indeed upsetting and producing spirit poisons. The Father desires your wholeness. He desires your company, your willingness to listen. He knows what you want and need. He is a partner in life – not an authority figure who would bestow gifts upon His favored children.

Yes, Father definitely sustains us in all things. He upholds us in our weakest moments. He reasons with us in our pool of self-pity. He makes every effort to reach you, His child.

My friends, we have every opportunity before us. All we need to do is accept it. Accepting our son- or daughtership with the 'One God' is the ultimate compliment to Him – not that He requires it, no! Accepting the gifts that Father bestows upon us helps us move through this mortal life with a bit more stability, a bit more peace of mind.

Who are you in this mortal life? What are your real responsibilities? What are your priorities – and what would you think Father's are?

I realize each week I ask you to fulfill certain tasks; yet, I do always want for your rest and relaxed countenance. My words are simply suggestions. Be not overwhelmed. Be not weary. Know that this mortal life is an adventure to be savored, not simply endured. I will now take a few questions.

CALVIN: Abraham, thank you for your love and friendship all these years. We really appreciate you, and this appreciation extends to each member of your Teaching Staff. As Harrison said earlier, "it makes it a well-worthwhile week when the group meets together." In our discussion on truth, is it a safeguard to have our group discussion to help buffer truth from error? Can individuals in this ladder of learning come in with perceptions and presentations that are not good for the whole, which sway the group and curtails what you are trying to teach? Do you know what I am trying to describe? Do you have a safeguard? or a correction to me on this?

ABRAHAM: Yes, Calvin, I also believe the group can be a safeguard from fanaticism – and certainly, group members can be swayed, right or wrong, yes. Those groups who make it a practice to set Father as their sovereign and welcome the Spirit of Truth are usually a secure guidepost. Your playing-field is what you make of it. If it serves the ego, then definitely will animal tendencies reign. If you each have interest in 'personal correction' and 'the good of the whole,' then certainly are possibilities, endless. Always is there a good balance when a close friend is at hand. In the flesh, there are always the animal tendencies; and definitely, a group who simply wants to have understanding of this sojourn in the flesh, will together find that the mortal struggle is not such a struggle. Well said, Calvin. The group is a safeguard against the ego – providing it is done with love, honesty, and an air of non-judgment. Is this helping? (Calvin: Yes. Thank you, Abraham.)

HARRISON: Abraham, I don't have a question. I also, want to thank you for your lessons and for the tremendous opportunity that these lessons bring for our spiritual growth. It is just a simple thank you and a hope that sometime we can sit down and break bread together.

ABRAHAM: I thank you, Harrison, and would have you know you are each a blessing to me. I feel a true connection in spirit with each one of you. I am grateful for your ability to remain steadfast. We have a beautiful foundation to build upon.

And with that, I will thank you and take my leave. Know that I am with growing love and gratitude to you each. Until next time, shalom.

Pain Produces Growth | Seeking Escape Delays Growth And Advancement

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-14-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always touched by your ministry to one another. Your willingness to be there for each other and the Mission is a wonderful sight to behold. I am honored to be your friend and Teacher. Yes, your willingness to remain steadfast in our Correcting Time is always renewing hope for me, as well as others who have involvement. Life happens, things change, people come and go and you continue to stay the course to remain faithful and continue on with the good works. Well done.

You each are open-minded and accepting to life's hard lessons. As you mature in spirit you are finding more courage to face what life has in store instead of seeking escape. You do well to reach for the divine and still understand that the natural man (or the animal self) still clamors for attention. While we are seeking to be more spiritual, we cannot simply run through the motions and avoid the animal or the ego.

It would appear that today's world is all-encompassing of self-gratification or temporary solutions to everyday problems. In today's world it seems that any sort of pain is to be avoided at all costs; you can see many relationships as being disposable. Certainly, the ego does not want to be caught up in self-doubt or feeling 'lesser-than others;' therefore, many individuals are inclined to flee painful situations without having made every effort toward a lasting remedy.

It seems today's motto is: "If life is painful, seek escape." And: "If relationships are painful then dispose of them." Many individuals never find that soul connection with one another because they have not put forth effort into making sense out of the relationship they are in. Many become slaves to their feelings and inconsiderate of others because they are not willing to endure a little pain to find lasting peace.

We can look back over history and find that natural evolution has worked well. Allowing life-circumstances to move in a natural flow opens up the mind for further possibilities. It has become a world of competition - always striving, pushing for more; always feeling driven to be the best. Some can only feel this when observing others' flaws or shortcomings.

Pain is a natural part of life, and I mean pain of all kinds - physical, mental, emotional, even spiritual. Those beings who live on worlds settled in Light and Life view pain as opportunities for new openings in the circuits or cosmic mind; these beings would dive into pain head first instead of rushing to avoid it - for therein lies their blossoming possibilities for new lessons; for opportunities to grow spiritually, and even mentally.

Anything painful is best handled through allowing natural avenues. To force oneself toward obtaining understanding of any kind is practically creating further problems. I mean not to speak of life as simply about pain, no. I mean to bring attention to the temptations of escape, and the spiritual regression that escape may lead to. It is through honest effort that one finds healing to draw the wisdom therefrom.

Let us look at a small child who has been given somewhat of a large task - the child is inclined to find escape for many reasons: the task is not the child's desire; perhaps the child is with very little confidence in his ability; the child sees no value in the task; or, he simply wants to play. It is with maturity that the child learns the value of his hard work, but he cannot simply force himself to do the seemingly impossible; the child must break the task down into small workable solutions; it must come through natural evolution, not by force.

Are you not more naturally inclined to go with the flow when you are in a relaxed state? We are in agreement that the less the ego is involved, the more the spirit can direct. This week, let us think about forms of unhealthy escape versus possibilities of clearing the mind to receive guidance. There are many things one can do to relieve stress - to naturally face pain and be challenged instead of intimidated.

That is all for this evening. Again, I thank you for your vigilance. It is always an honor for me to serve with you. My affection is ever growing for you. Until next week, shalom.

Self-loathing and Self-doubt Blocks the Spiritual Circuitry

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP

03-21-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am in awe each week that I get to partake of your faithfulness. You have faith each week that I will return. You have faith in your fellowship – so much so that you welcome one another to be your true selves. It is without a doubt that your faith in Father is the foundation from which all else is built upon. It is your willingness to make Him your sovereign over this branch of our family tree that brings success to our humble beginnings.

Our gathering and conversing, does magnify our learning. I personally want to thank you that continue to stay the course. Certainly, we don't all have to agree upon the direction of the course, but we can agree that Father is our sovereign, our First Source and Center.

Staying along the lines of your conversation this evening, it has been a well-learned lesson that those things which are true, beautiful, and good, are lasting; and those things that are not, will fade away. This is true on a collective level as well as personal. Father does draw out an ultimate good in each and every situation. Those issues that have truth are practically life-long bits of wisdom that you can draw from; somewhere in the mortal mentality, they are available.

Truth, is lasting. Falsehood, may hold mass attention for a time – and definitely is it your prerogative to question, to test your understanding and experience. There is no right or wrong way to believe, it is all an exercise in experiencing truth, beauty, and goodness for yourselves. Father asks you to come to Him, yes, but He does not tell you how. There is no one 'right way' to allow the spirit to lead.

It is true, Father's children are unique and experiencing matters in various ways – certainly the Supreme Being could attest to this. We are grateful for the inter-workings of the magnificent universes. We are grateful to be a link in the cosmic mind. It is literally possible for the human mind to connect with the circuitry of the unseen, the unknown. Time and method of spirit-connection is not so much the focus as is the willingness to put Father as your sovereign, as the head of your table.

Let us ponder for a moment those issues of the common man. Man is either open to learning, or he is not! Father does not force His way in. There are mortal perceptions, however, that would perhaps delay understanding. Let us go into the opposite direction of ego – into self-loathing, self-doubt:

It is understood that with spiritual maturity, one grows to have either a better understanding – or otherwise, becomes bitter and helpless to the everyday occurrences of life. Those that continue to strive and fight the good fight of faith will grow in understanding and self-confidence; thus, to gain a more well-rounded understanding of the overall reason for existence.

What you have experienced in the past does color your perception today, yes, it cannot be helped. This is not bad or good; it is simply the mortal way and it is not cause for anxiety. But know in every moment, Father is available to give direction; this should be of some peace and comfort. He asks not that you be something other than yourself, no! but rather, He attempts to help you broaden your horizons; He helps you to make sense of your perception, and make potentials into actuals.

This week, let us be observant of obsession with dreading the animal self. Let not guilt slow that actual circuitry which is linked to the cosmic mind. Find time every day to have some sort of re-dedication of your commitment to Father. With the spirit of the risen Lord at this holiday season, make some contact with Michael, your Creator, your Brother/Father, your Spirit of Truth. Life is always a renewal, always changing. Truth is a matter of perception – nevertheless, it is enduring. Allow yourselves time to grow and take in what you will, and worry not about the rest.

That is all. As always, I am always growing in affection for you each. I thank you for the unique gifts you bring to our table. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Being Humbled Can Bring One To A Perfected Humility

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-28-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always touched by your ministry to one another. How you listen and respond can bring a great deal of healing. It is interesting to see the trivialities of life go by the wayside when seeming harsh reality comes in. I am enjoying the peacefulness of this evening; it is as if we are all reconciled in mind to accepting the goodness of God. When He reveals Himself, we are unafraid of truth and are trusting in His ability to bring an ultimate good.

In this season of the Master's resurrection, we find it most appropriate to discuss humility. The definition of humility in today's world seems to be quite a blow to the ego; in today's world it seems there is a continuous 'race to the top.' It would seem those most aggressive and self-confident would be those most outstanding in this mortal existence.

The drive for personal progress is inherent in human nature. It is understandable that every one of Father's children want to make the most out of their life in the flesh. As we look back over history, we can see how this drive has become imbalanced and many are left with disappointment. It seems to be popular in this day and age to do what brings temporary gratification. It is rare to find the individual who is willing to make the effort to 'wait upon the Father's will.'

This is where we can take the wonderful example set by our Master and put it to use in our own lives. Jesus was a man of strength, no doubt. His humility appeared to show Him as meek – this is not the case. Meekness is seen as 'resigned,' or in some cases even 'weak.' The Master's humility was using His mortal intelligence to the fullest. His humility was nothing more than His allowing a direct line to Father.

Yes, the Master's humility was an act of listening and waiting upon the will of His Father. Jesus had a brilliant intellect that far exceeded any mortal; and certainly He could have relied upon His own wisdom. However, He chose to be watchful, to listen, and to be receptive to guidance from on high.

Many times the mortal ego will put pride first – and surely that complicates any situation. For a man to believe he knows better than the God who created all, he will certainly be humbled – not by Father’s choice, no, but simply through experience and universal law.

Yes, many times in life we are humbled – the guilt therefrom gets the better of us and it is indeed difficult to draw out the lesson. Should we allow our humbling experiences to teach us humility, to listen, to be watchful – then certainly would we receive all of the Father’s guidance we could possibly handle. Being humbled is a good thing; it is to assist us in learning perfected humility; it is to be receptive to those on high.

As we review the morontia appearances of Jesus after his resurrection, we can find that He did not appear in form to those who were not ready or who did not believe. He did appear to those who sought after Him, who believed in His promises. “Let those that have eyes, see. Let those that have ears, hear.” – said He.

This week, ponder the struggle between the ego and learning perfected humility. Father endures with you in all things. Your willingness to learn humility will help you also endure. That is all. No questions this evening, our time grows short. Know that my heart expands each and every week we spend together. Go in peace. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Standing Aside Of Self Allows Father To Manifest | It Is God Who Is Good, Not I
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-04-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I thank you for your coordination, for without it these lessons would not come forth in this manner. I am joy-filled to gather with you to discuss issues of all matters and continue to strive to follow the will of our Father.

The world as a whole has had to ponder many issues as of late. There are experts in all fields saying they have the answers. Many religionists who hold fast to old traditions believe they can set the world straight. Scientists believe they can prove their theories with material facts. As well, there are the philosophers who quote the wisdom of the ages and wonder why the so seemingly apparent is not more taken in by the hearts and minds of men.

The common man may look to the experts, seeking answers for the meaning of life. It is the deep-thinkers, however, that look to a higher mind. These morontial lessons that are being bestowed upon the people of the world are giving opportunities to rise above the familiar.

In time, individuals will willingly set aside the ego to simply admit they do not know all the answers. The Correcting Time is critical in that the masses are receiving higher understanding, and truth is being seen for what it truly is. Honesty to oneself is becoming as important as honesty to others. You, as Teaching Mission participants, are asked to set aside the urge for recognition, and strive for the overall good.

Striving for the highest good means allowing Father to be made manifest in your own lives among your fellows. Any time you are sharing with your fellows is an excellent opportunity to allow the Spirit to speak. The Spirit speaks as if it was very natural. The spiritized mind is not saying: "I am good;" but, "God is good." God cares for us as His children; and, He cares for us through one another. You are drawn to this Mission because you are deep-thinkers; you are willing to go outside of tradition to help pave the way toward Light and Life.

The Mission is not a handful of spiritually-advanced individuals who will be the 'hailed leaders of our time,' no! The Mission participants are in favor of standing aside of self; they are in favor of allowing Father's Spirit to be manifest in everyday life, and who embrace the thinking: "It is God who is good and I am honored to partake of that good."

We are always made to reprioritize our lives. Because materialism steps in the path of self-mastery, we are always reminded to refocus and step aside of self to allow the Spirit to work. You, Mission managers, have your work, yes, but you are also allowed your joy - and we always hope that the two can be found together. Father does want for your happiness and fulfillment; talk with Him daily and await His response - this will help you to bring the Spirit into your daily living.

That is all. I am always honored to serve you, and serve with you. All my best I send with you for the coming week ahead. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Fellowship With One Another Strengthens Faith

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-11-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying the friendship among you this evening. It is beautiful to see your individual growth, yes, but truly is it phenomenal to look back over your years together - through the good times and bad - and still, you are as committed to each other as any family I have ever seen. I am honored to be a part of that.

It is always helpful to look back upon the relationships of the twelve apostles. They had their petty disagreements, they had their personality differences - and yet, for the most part, that is very well what helped them each to grow as an individual and as a family. Always was the love for the Master the common thread that held them together through hardship, disappointments, life, and death.

You each are agreed in heart and mind that Father is your Sovereign. As hard as it is sometimes to turn to Him, especially in a heated discussion, you always manage to follow through. You always manage to stand outside of self to allow Father's Spirit to be revealed. Your intentions are known, and this is what unifies you as a family, well done!

God, is Spirit. His person is not discernible to the material eyes. Through faith, His works are understood. But definitely is faith a more difficult journey while sojourning in the flesh. Much of the time it is your fellowship with one another, family, and friends outside of this group - even strangers, which assist in the faith-building system. Jesus spoke of two great commandments. The first being: "You shall love the 'One God' with all your heart and mind." The next being: "You shall love your brother as yourself."

We can see that many times the apostles helped to strengthen one another's faith. With their focus mostly on the Master, they were able to stand aside of their personal desires - to go forth with the common good of the whole. There are examples where one or two of the men would be downcast, but the majority would not let this attitude infect the group. Much of the time there was always the humorous words of Nathaniel to lighten the mood. On occasion, even our doubting Thomas would set aside what he thought was his better judgment to follow through with the plans of the Master.

Man is really a social being. People need people. Think of all the valuable lessons you could impart to a growing child; and certainly, we could all agree that love is what the child can best comprehend. Without love, all other facts are seemingly without value. Of course there are difficulties from time to time dealing with your fellows; there are times when you need to be alone, yes - but for the most part, where would mankind be without one another?

As time goes forward it will become more apparent that no amount of technology can replace a person-to-person connection. It is obvious that those religious orders that choose a life of solitude are missing half of their mortal lessons. As you mature in spirit and grow in this kingdom family, you can see all others as equal - neither above nor below you.

Said Jesus: "Love one another as I have loved you." The Master saw all people, from kings to little children, as the Father's own, equally. He could talk to all people. He could relate with people because he genuinely loved them; He saw not their exterior, their standing in the community, their race, or religion. Yes, He saw each person as 'one of the Father's own.'

Sure, the Master was hurt or disappointed from time to time with His fellow's attitudes; and a great deal of the time He had to practice being somewhat detached. He always held fast, however, to the First Source and Center. This was key to dealing with individuals of all kinds.

This week, ponder the value of your relationships. Be at ease to relate with Father's children. How does a person's exterior influence your ability to relate with them? My friends, this is the brotherhood - enjoy. That is all for this evening. Know that I am with gratitude to look upon your faces and see living hope. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

We Have Secure Connection By Acting Upon Our Beliefs

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-18-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying this peaceful evening. Your open hearts and minds make my task easy. Your seeking attitude links us to the cosmic mind. I do well remember how influential the material world was, and still is. It is easy to become more material than spirit.

Daily living without spiritual practice draws us further into a life of materialism, a life lived through ego. We find during our moments of 'connection' that to live spiritually is rather easy – it takes practically no effort to do right, to live right. We find our emotional levels to be stabilized, and life's top priorities come to the forefront of our minds. Spiritual fruits become most important and easily attainable.

How do we continue to have somewhat of a consistent connection to Spirit? If we live by the Master's example, then always would we strive to live out our faith. Our beliefs would be acted upon, not just good intentions. There would be effort made to move from the ego's needs toward the will of our loving Father. In the opportunity to participate in gossip, you would find reason to remove yourself from it. In the opportunity to unfairly criticize another, you would instead practice taming the tongue. In the opportunity to take what is not rightly yours, you would simply lose such a desire to have it.

Yes, living a life of the spirit indeed takes effort. To have freedom from spirit poisons there needs to be a secure connection. We have a secure connection by acting upon our beliefs. Certainly, it is understood that the mortal has desires, and delayed gratification is sometimes a hard practice to embrace in the mind.

In making effort toward living out your understanding of Spirit, the right decisions become easier to make, to act upon. We all know that 'your time' and 'Father's time' does differ, and many times does your impatience get the better of you.

What can we do to avoid becoming overwhelmed by impatience? What can we do to assure Spirit connection – and turn our faith potentials into living actuals? What can we do to align our minds with God's time? I would suggest simple creativity – an exercise of the mind that is productive and detaches you from the anxiety of impatience. Write something, draw something, build something – do something that puts the ego on hold until the Spirit can make a solid connection.

Jesus suggested that we be childlike in the manner that a child trusts a parent; yet, He well advised us to avoid being childish. As the spirit grows, the animal-self is diminishing. We are learning to grow the spirit by staying spiritually connected – which means the material-living, in all its forms, must be mastered. The Father wants for your abundance in all ways; He wants not Spirit disconnection.

Living a life in the flesh, there is always temptation to take instant gratification. As we mature in Spirit, we find God's will more gratifying than anything. You are each a torch of hope in your own environment. Your advancement means the advancement of your fellows. You have committed to help usher this world into Light and Life. Your light is best seen through your actions – through your courage to live out what you truly believe.

That is all. I am always nourished by our fellowship. I thank you. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Overcoming Resentments That Feed Spirit Poisons | Becoming Better Instead of Bitter
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-25-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I always enjoy this feeling of home when I return to you week after week. We all know there is growth in adversity, but surely is it so refreshing when we can rest in our fellowship, our common ground. Many people every day, find themselves seemingly lonely. Even those that have a fair relationship with Father, find their life when without fellowship, to be more difficult.

How blessed are we to have one another to share thoughts and ideas. How fortunate are we to have one another to build upon the foundation of faith. Your fellowship is a sure balance between faithfulness and fanaticism. Every day you are growing in your son/daughtership with the Father. Every day He is revealing more of His personal being to you. Most days are we each trying to master the self so that we may receive the divine gifts.

Self-mastery is important in learning who you really are – and, your place in the universe. Most of Father's well-intentioned children continuously make effort toward mastering the self (taming the animal tendencies). Individuals with the attitude that 'life is a punishment' see not the value in experience. These individuals become bitter and closed-off to divine guidance.

What are we without Father? Where is the value in striving toward personal, spiritual, or social good? One who feels embittered by life has a tendency to close-up in heart and mind – they literally stay stuck in their beliefs. What a miserable existence! What a lonely life! Father, Michael, and Mother–not to mention numerous other beings–are always at hand, always standing by, always ready to divinely guide. If one is so embittered, so self-protective, then definitely are they outright refusing any divine assistance.

How does one refrain from being embittered by life's harsh circumstances, but instead leans toward becoming empowered to keep fighting the good fight of faith? This is how I understand it: When life's harsh circumstances occur and one feels powerless or hopeless to try, then are there resentments held. Resentments are an acid to the spirit. Issues that are not understood or dealt with at the time can become buried in emotional pain. And as time moves on, other circumstances occur, and then the buried pain connects with the current emotional pain, and it definitely is a vicious cycle.

When I suggest 'dealing with pain,' I mean to put no time limit on this process but to allow Father's healing hand in His time. Some circumstances take a great deal of time to dissect and understand the meanings and values. Bitter individuals feed on fear. To spread further spiritual poisons (even unintentionally) somehow gives them satisfaction. As is said: "misery loves company."

Your duties as Mission participants are to help bring in the light – the more experience you have, the more you know whereof you speak. We can always draw from the Master's example of bringing in light, He always asked questions. His charm and kindness brought out the best in people. Jesus always had an ultimate faith in His fellows, and that was indeed empowering to them.

This week, should issues arise that are leading you toward resentment, by all means take some time to pray, meditate, and even journal. Should the opportunity arise to bring light, be reflective of gratitude. With a grateful attitude, one cannot help but be positive and bring light. Your advancement means advancement to those who know you. That understanding in itself, is quite an honor.

That is all. Know that wherever you are, I am always with an unending affection for you. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

The Process of Overcoming Resentment | Forgiveness, a Major Road To Recovery
Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-02-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am touched by your willingness to hold out for reality - reality in all forms. You are moving closer to the divine every day; your efforts are productive. As you mature in spirit, the desire to follow the Father's will becomes stronger. It seems that anything less than following the will of Father is unsatisfactory, unfulfilling. As you gain more experience on this world in the flesh, challenges of all kinds are more tempting to undertake. After all, this mortal life is only the beginning.

How wonderful it is to see your faith in action. Your dedication to this purpose of Michael's is inspirational to those who hope for a new and better age of Urantia. Last week we discussed overcoming resentments and becoming better instead of bitter. With that, I leave you to our friend, Emulan.

EMULAN: Greetings friends. Again I am glad to meet with you. I enjoy this branch of my family tree. Abraham has asked me to speak on resentment and I feel my experience in that area has given me the credibility to do so. As you all know, I experienced quite traumatic events during my sojourn in the flesh. My family was tragically killed and taken from me. Certainly was I resentful and quite embittered.

Of course I was angry with Father, asking: "Why me? What had I done to deserve such heartache?" My unwillingness to be open to spiritual direction had led me to the brink of insanity. I took this loss personally, even though it was simply an accident of time. While time appeared to be my enemy, it was definitely needed to chip away at my hardened heart and mind.

There are stages of grief and levels of healing yes - and then comes advancement in spiritual understanding. There are also challenges in mastering self. In my pain I was brought to complete surrender; and this did indeed cause me to look Godward - and, to learn that indeed was He looking back. In my surrendering, I was given the understanding that not all was lost. My memories of my family became vivid and valuable, and I was greatly comforted to know they continued to live on.

Before my surrendering, I had a great deal of anger toward the person that had played a part in the cause of the accident. In time, and as a part of my healing, I was given the understanding that this accident was not intentional, by any means. I came to realize this individual also suffered; therefore, forgiveness was in sight.

Forgiveness played a huge role in my overcoming resentment, yes, but forgiveness did not come before understanding. My surrendering had caused me to open my heart and mind, which literally reconnected my damaged circuits - and from that, understanding flowed freely.

It was not without a great deal of time that had brought me healing and back to living a purposeful life. This event in time has been the most painful in all my experience – and yet, Father, and only Father, brought about an ultimate good through it all. And yes, I was able to reunite with my loved ones. We keep close contact.

I believe that to strive to live your ultimate faith keeps those mindal circuits connected with Spirit – and even though tragedy may occur, it is this connection with your divine Source that will bring understanding, forgiveness, and meaning. With Father's help, I overcame the bitterness, yes; and from there, He helped me go on to create a purposeful life. All was not lost; but rather, it was just the beginning. I am with the deepest gratitude to Father and His well-organized plan and purpose.

It is good to meet with you again, my friends. I give you back to your Teacher. Farewell.

ABRAHAM: Thank you, Emulan. Your wise words are wonderful lessons for us. From your seemingly average mortal life you have helped to bring about great lessons. Well done.

This week, my friends, let us think about the process of overcoming resentment. What does it take for us to find understanding, forgiveness, healing, and moving beyond ourselves to bring about an ultimate good?

That is all for this week. Know that I count myself blessed to be surrounded by so many wonderful beings. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Our Fellowship Strengthens our Spirit Connection | What Is My True Identity
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-09-2005
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Gathering together in this fashion helps us to remember who we are. As I look at each one of you, I see not so much a 'physical matter,' but I see a light. I know you based on your true substance – your personality, your gifts, your likes and dislikes. I know you based on your status as a child of God, and I love what I know. I am in understanding of your best intentions. I am with compassion for the mortal nature.

Yes, I understand you because I have come from where you are now. Each day are you exposed to the harsh realities of mortal life. Many times during the day there are circumstances that pull you from Spirit, and it stands to reason that the mortal life is filled with such harsh material occurrences that must be dealt with. For some, it is dealing with a single individual with whom you perhaps work with; for some, it is family members; for some of you, it could be financial woes. For many people, it is a great deal of past baggage that interferes with spiritual connection.

The beauty of our fellowship here, is that we are re-centered back to Spirit. Each week that you meet, you discuss mortal problems, solutions, ideas, and ideals. This is healing in the fact that the mortal struggle is not so difficult when an encouraging friend is at hand. Of course you have Father – and, you have your faith. But still is the mortal struggle much easier to bear when understanding minds congregate. In our weekly gathering we can remember our priorities, our true identity, and our purpose to continue carrying on.

I do still ponder my existence pre-Machiventa, my mentor. I was somewhat isolated in my desire to serve the ego for I greatly valued my standing in the community. As a leader I served what I saw to be most important for survival – as we can understand from the observation of any animal. Today, personal happiness seems to be most important; and as growing spiritual beings we find personal happiness and fulfillment to lie within Father's meanings and values.

For me, my mentor's teachings had the most impact when he was reminding me of my true identity, for I was then a child of God, a servant of the people, a student, a teacher, a father, a husband, a brother, a friend – and, someone who was to help set an example of living faith in the 'One God.' Machiventabrought my priorities to the forefront of my thinking through revealing to me my true identity. I was not simply an animal on an evolutionary planet – no, none of us are; we are endowed with mind, spiritual power, and ability to minister as the Master had.

When mortal life seems to be pulling you from Spirit, what are those simple steps you can take to find balance? What sort of action can you take to remain true to your identity? Certainly, our fellowship is a wonderful reminder of our sonship with the First Source and Center. Good health and self-care is also strengthening the spiritual life. You each know what is needed to maintain good health. Study and stillness-time also brings us back to a place of balance. Music, art, and nature helps us to re-connect with Spirit.

We'll stop here. Know that I am ever grateful to you, my friends, for your willingness to ride out any storm. Your faith is a light on our path. I thank you. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Mary Magdalene_Associate Teacher | What Are Our Self-Imposed Limitations
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-16-2005

Back

Introduction of Mary Magdalene As Associate Teacher. [We did not know until tonight's meeting that Mary had been with us as an observer and a teacher-in-training for quite some time. Abraham had given the Woods Cross group previous introductions of Mary beginning seven years earlier, but this meeting was the first time Mary personally addressed the group. See transcripts from Dec. 1, 1997; and Jan. 31, 1999; and Feb. 7, 1999; and Feb. 14, 1999.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Your candor is always a treat. I have become accustomed to your humor and reasoning; and without it, I would surely miss it. In the sharing of your lives there are so many questions answered. It would seem that allowing the Spirit to lead brings you great joy. Your willingness to be open with one another is indeed a part of our lesson. I would have you know what an honor it is for me each week to arrive and view your beautiful faces in waiting for whatever our meeting may have in store. This evening I thought it well to hear from a fresh voice.

I am MARY. I am the one you know as Mary Magdalene. I find your group-personality to be quite congruent with my own. I feel that I have lived the best and worst that mortal life has to offer. I have been steeped in spirit poisons and also have I been taken to the heights of spiritual fruit. I feel quite at home here among you that do your utmost to embrace reality - whatever reality that occurs on a daily basis.

I am hoping to further develop our friendship. I am grateful to Abraham, for he has been a wonderful mentor and friend. To be in his presence is to feel the relief of light in a dark place. What an opportunity for me to be here at this place and time, this day and age. From somewhat of a practical standpoint, things have not really changed that much.

I am not a philosopher. I am not an expert in any field. I am, however, an ascending being just as you are. I have felt the pain of complete loneliness; and on the other hand, I have been consumed with an unstoppable love. I know the limitations of gender, religion, and social standing; but also, I know transcendence of those things that are seen as valuable from the mortal eyes.

I can hardly contain my excitement for this particular assignment. I am back on my mortal birth planet in a future that I could have hardly predicted. I am amazed at all I see. I am touched by the faith that is placed in me to perform such a trusted position. I know you. I feel as if I am returning home. Hopefully, in our time we will share together, we can discuss those issues that will help you live a new and enhanced existence. Because of the lengthy introduction, I should keep my words short tonight.

I am particularly interested in learning more about the mind and habit patterns of you modern people. It would seem that many of you have a great deal more freedom than I had ever known was possible while sojourning in the flesh. I am curious about thought limitations that mortals place upon themselves. I am amazed at mortals' seeing material reality as the 'kingdom of heaven' or as 'some reward.' I shall stop there.

For the week ahead let us ponder our self-imposed limitations, be they material, spiritual, mental, or emotional. Again, my enthusiasm precedes my ability to express my thoughts with some accuracy. Thank you for your patience. Until we meet again, farewell.

I am ABRAHAM. I thank you, our sister Mary. I would just say that your enthusiasm is indeed contagious and reminding me of the wonder for life, for new things.

You, my friends, are in good hands. Know that I am also grateful for your diligent attitude to stay on task. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

[Below is an excerpt from Dec. 1, 1997 (seven years earlier) wherein Abraham answered a question asked about Mary Magdalene]:

ROLAND: Abraham, I have been reading excerpts from the Gnostic Gospels which was found in upper Egypt in 1945 and recently translated. This finding describes a relationship between Jesus and Mary Magdalene – wherein she is depicted as one who was a very close disciple of the inner circle of the Master, and that she had received special (or higher) instructions, perhaps more than the rest of the apostles. Also, that Mary was referred to as "one who spoke knowing the all." Can you give us some insight regarding this? What kind of relationship did they have, and was this a true depiction of Mary's role with Jesus?

ABRAHAM: I can. Mary Magdalene was an average mortal living the average mortal life. Through her participation in the teachings of Jesus, her faith was the most notable thing about her. Without doubt or question, Mary would easily remove her own heart's desires in favor of promoting the Master's teachings. She was a faithful student. I cannot say she was more than this or had some special insight. I can confirm though, that Mary was a most likely candidate for the morontial Jesus to appear to – she was receptive and easily recovered from the shock of her realization that it was the Master who spoke to her by the tomb. The delivery of the message that 'the Master had risen' was to be given to the apostles by her to reduce the shock the apostles would have experienced; they were in great confusion and despair, and an immediate visitation by the Master would have created much fear and possible damage to their mental and emotional well-being. It is well known that Mary was somewhat experienced in life's difficult or unusual matters, and could indeed receive such good news without mental or emotional upheaval. Although the credibility of her testimony about the risen Lord was questioned, her job was done and done well. Yes, it can be said of each of life's participants that there is indeed a goodness about them, but I cannot say that one is any more than another. Do you see?

Childhood Beliefs That Solidify Into Adulthood | Overcoming Resentment And Anger
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 05-23-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I always love this time of year here in this region. The spring-like weather helps our minds to focus on new things, on re-birth, and becoming free from past regret.

As you know, from time to time I am given the task to train new Teachers. You are the average mortal group, which is good for the beginning training of new Teacher prospects. I tell my Teachers in training that your open-mindedness and craving for truth make you wonderful students. For quite some time now you do your utmost to place Father as your Sovereign, which makes it easy for the accuracy of words to come through. Again, I leave you to our sister, Mary.

MARY: Greetings, my friends. For me it feels like you, the students, are training me, the teacher, and I am probably over-enthusiastic to learn. I am finding teaching to work best when we start from the beginning. Our experience is all we know. We are an expert at our own experience. I believe that in telling you my story, many of you will relate; and in the understanding, we can all make sense out of it and find healing. Mind you, as I speak, I mean not to elicit sympathy; I simply mean to share my story, with practicality, to those who know whereof I speak.

As a child I had always felt unwanted, underfoot, and defective in one way or another. My mother had her own difficulties. She was quite a fearful woman. She was always in search of something I think she never found. To her, Father was an angry deity whose main task was to punish the unrighteous. Her prayers were fearful; they were always apologetic – and seriously, there was really never anything to apologize for. To her, learning 'the ways of righteousness' was indeed more important than love and nurturing. I deeply missed that love you can only receive from your mother.

My father was rarely present in the home. He took to drunkenness and other women. He placed very little value on women; to him, they were to be used as you would use any animal. Many a night in his drunkenness I had seen him beat my mother – and, I had seen her cower. She never fought back or did one thing to change her situation.

I always wished I had been born male, for I learned early on that women seemed to have little value. I also missed that fatherly affection every child craves, and I suppose I spent a great deal of time looking for it. I mean not to sound as if my childhood was a complete misery, no. I would spend time with the other girls in the village helping them to do chores and reaping their 'precious praise.'

I did see examples of loving families, and so wanted that for myself. I had some close childhood playmates which we would act out our fantasies of being some sort of superhero or savior to the world, and how we would always be valued and loved for our kind works.

By the time I reached my teen years, I was quite confused about God. I figured my father placed women in a league with farm animals and so too that must be true with God. Having very little personal value or esteem, I allowed myself to be used and abused. I also learned how to use my charm for profit. I felt there was not a soul who was going to help me along in this life so I may as well learn to help myself. I had deep anger and resentment toward men, seeing how they thought themselves superior, and women as mere servants.

At this point, I cared not who I hurt. The anger was indeed overpowering. I began to make small attempts at rallying women to band together and demand some sort of justice – not even equality, just some sort of small justice. Most women of that day and age were fearful, but there were still some women whose strength was silent – and in that, I learned a valuable lesson: I needed not a podium to be noticed and heard, no, I needed to help – one woman at a time.

Eventually, I married a man who was abusive, like my father, and again my mind wavered between weakness and my true desires. I had my place, but I was still so unhappy. "How could a God be good for some but not for all," I felt. Believe me, I had some issues over this.

I do thank God for the day when I had met my new friends, Rachel and Martha, who became the women apostles and servers of Christ. This was indeed life-changing and the beginning of the melting of my icy heart. To listen to the Master speak filled me with a new esteem, a new hope, a new place in the kingdom.

Jesus taught me that Father was not watching for me to err and then punish me, no! He was a helpmate, He did love us all – rich or poor, free or bond, male or female. The charm and majesty from this God-man filled me with the drive to serve Him, to follow Him wherever He went and do whatever I could to further the growth of the kingdom. No task was too small. Caring for the elderly, the sick, children, gardening, cleaning – it didn't matter, it was all for Father and the coming kingdom.

I will stop there. I am not yet permitted to answer questions. You are a joy, my friends. Farewell.

I am ABRAHAM. Well done, Mary. I believe we have a great deal to learn from you. Mary spoke of past childhood beliefs that solidified on into adulthood. Let us review our own beliefs that may have become a part of us that possibly do not pertain any longer. I love you, children. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom. [No lesson found (yet) for the following week -- May 29th.]

We May Not Fully Trust Man, But We Can Fully Trust Father | How did Jesus Handle Disappointment?

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-06-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am inspired in the way you build upon Spirit. Your willingness to be receptive provides an open circuit for the Spirit to flow. Each person's willingness to listen to one another, as well as share, is our weekly healing balm. I appreciate the flow of this evening. Well done.

I am your sister, friend, MARY. Greetings. I am in agreement with Abraham's perception of this evening's outcome. In my research, I know that many of you have issues with trusting other human beings, circumstances, and even God. Your fellowship here has provided a strong foundation of trust. The trust you have in one another is practice for attaining the ability to move without fear in the world.

In my day, most of life was set on a stage of fear. We feared mostly what was 'thought' possible, what 'might happen,' not particularly anything that actually occurred. My fear as a child mostly consisted of being abandoned or worthless. As you well know now, those things I feared were brought into actuality through my own perception of life's circumstances. I can see now that even in my aloneness, Father had always stepped in to bring me some comfort, some understanding – whether it was through a friend, stranger, or even a pet.

It is difficult to find Father's comfort when your world consists of fear and mistrust. Spirit poisons disconnect us from the reality of life. It is difficult to trust in mankind today. Many people are not willing to reach out for fear of being disappointed yet again. I know this feeling. I lived this feeling and I am ever so grateful that I have come through this, knowing there will be an ultimate good.

Nobody desires to feel pain. It is not the purpose of man to continuously feel and know pain. Pain, however, is a teacher when it is viewed from a logical standpoint. I know too well that emotions have their way of rising to the surface. But with time, emotions die down; and clearly set before you then, is the solution to your problems. The Master taught me that my pain prepared me for the present – which was then, becoming an apostle.

We always find our animal tendencies to rise to the forefront of our thinking. As a mortal, our first thoughts are: "How will this hurt me?" or, "How will this help me?" Yes, these are natural human emotions and not to worry. It's not to go overboard chastising the mortal mind, no, that does no good. It is important to do what is ahead of you – to keep on living, to carry on, to move forward; not be embittered by the past, and not be scarred by those who have hurt you to the point that you are a victim of life.

The Master taught me that my mistakes, my choices made, were again simply building upon the current lessons that were shaping me into who I was to become, and how I was to serve. As I look back, I realize my deepest desires always manifested in one way or another. I was not a victim of culture. I was not a victim of that day and age. I was not a pawn to be used. I was not a commodity to be dealt with.

The Master treated me as a kingdom believer. He treated me as He treated any of His apostles – or any man for that matter. My gender or past, was not what He based His ideas of me on. He saw me as a child of the First Source and Center, as He did everybody. I learned to trust Him completely.

How blessed was I to have the living mortal Michael before my eyes, just as do you with His Spirit of Truth! I had for some time lived without His presence; but for the time He was here I knew His word was solid and trustworthy. Of course I had not that trust in every mortal I knew, but my knowledge of Him became a gauge for me to bestow balanced levels of trust, and I was able to freely maneuver my way through the mortal life.

At some point in your life in the flesh you realize that God is not as a mortal. He is not someone who will stand by His word 'only if it is convenient.' He is not one who wishes Himself to 'look good,' and therefore acts from a place of ego. He needs not your admiration, adoration, or anything. He can be trusted to go through the waters of adversity with you. There are not more important things in the world occurring that He will forsake you.

My friends, this is why the Paradise Father fragments Himself, so that we may all be served and grow toward Him. Man will never live up to one's ideal. Does this mean you should not place your trust in anybody? – or does this mean you need to handle disappointment as the Master did!

Trusting individuals was not so much of an issue with Christ, but He fully trusted the Father in heaven to bring about an ultimate good with every encounter. This was not a worry for Him, nor was it a fear; and therefore, His mind was open to receive things of a spiritual nature. He had thoughts of fear, yes, but He was not bogged down by the emotions of it. Did He take time to allow the emotions to run their course so that the logic may rise to the top? Yes, of course!

Spiritual maturity is not magic – it is trust in the First Source and Center; the Spirit of Truth; Mother and Her adjutant mind-spirits; and, all the associates that work for the good of the kingdom. One person changes not the world, no! God changes the world. One person can work for that change when they have God.

In my old life before I was reborn in spirit, I was nobody. When I became alive in spirit, I did not care if I was nobody. I gained the kingdom of heaven; how could I ask for more? I suppose I will stop here. Next week I would be desirous of taking questions. I am now permitted to do so. Farewell.

ABRAHAM: Thanks to our sister, Mary. Her fresh outlook keeps us all on our toes. I am always made to learn in her presence and I am sincerely grateful.

This week we are to ponder our levels of trust in God and man. We are to think about how fear creates static to our incoming spiritual thoughts. How did the Master handle disappointment? Go in peace. Know that my love is ever growing for you each. Until next time, shalom.

Those Self-Imposed Things That Keep One Bound | Mary Clears the Air, Her Relationship With Jesus

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-13-2005

Back

(Editor's note from June 1st 2024: This lesson is dedicated to the cast, the writers, the directors and the crew of 'The Chosen' film series production. Their depiction of Mary and Jesus does quite resemble Mary's descriptions and recounting in this lesson.)

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. My heart is full to be witness to your efforts to carry on with the Correcting Time. I am amazed some nights to see you here, yes, for many of you are quite busy. You have your daily employment, families, and various obligations; and still you continue to make this meeting and Michael's cause a priority in your life.

How beautiful it is to see you live out the ministry. It is wonderful to find those spirit-driven children who want not recognition, fame, or fortune. It is truly inspiring for us here on this side to witness individuals who find it their utmost desire to simply be a part of the whole. We thank you for your steadfastness and willingness to stay the course. I give you, MARY.

MARY: Greetings friends. It is wonderful to be here with you again. I am getting to know you each quite well. I am enjoying the diversity in personalities, and I am enjoying the fellowship as one among you.

As Abraham mentioned, it is inspiring to see you make effort to live out the ministry. Your true joy seems to be coming from accepting your part of the whole – no more, no less. Of course, at times with such a liberal spirituality you must use caution in your sharing with those outside of our Mission group. How wonderful it is to gather with one another here, and have practically no limits; most ideas are welcome. Yes, well done.

I did love being a part of the Lord's cause back in the day. I loved knowing that my sisters and brothers were at hand should I have need of them. On an evolutionary planet such as this, it is comforting to have individuals who truly understand you. It is helpful in day-to-day living knowing that two minds are better than one. Where two or more are gathered – there also, is our beloved Spirit of Truth.

And also very important is the fact that ultimately you make your own decisions; your free will reigns supreme. This is what makes our spiritual movement so awesome – we can be free thinkers; we can be diverse in nature and also part of the whole. It is true that I was limited in my day, having been born female, but there was always a way to work around the limitations once I had completely embraced the ministry of our Lord.

If individuals feel bound in this day and age, then I say it is most definitely self-imposed. You can feel 'less-than;' you can walk with your head down; you can feel as though the world is against you and that God our Father ignores you. Yes, you can make this your reality. You can allow man to impose his restrictions on you; but know this my friends, as I can attest from my own life, you definitely have the power to live a life of freedom.

For the most part in today's world, there are always various avenues one can take to fulfill goals and dreams. People are only limited if they allow it. Those that feel 'less-than' will live a life that is short such marvelous abundance. Those that live as if they are 'more than' others, then certainly is humility headed their way – it is simple human experience.

Look at the history of the past one-hundred years on Urantia: There has been progress, yes. The races are treated with more equality. Women are in professions that before, they would have never been allowed. The ideal of family is once again becoming a priority – even if a family is not so much biological, but as they are simply devoted to one another. Sure we have difficulties! but for the most part they are minor, and every individual has power to create a new and better way. I will stop there.

[Editor's note: There was a prior discussion regarding Mary's depiction as having been married to Jesus which was asserted in the recently-released movie, The Da Vinci Code.]

MARY: As promised last week, I would take a few questions; but first I would desire to clear the air: There is no doubt that I loved the Master with my whole heart and soul. His kindness and fatherly affection He had shown me would never, not for anything, ever lead Him away from the Father's plan for His mortal life here on Urantia. To even ponder upon the idea that the Master would stray from the Father's plan in favor of a romantic relationship, is completely erroneous. I would never have sabotaged His plans for any amount of affection. I would have killed for Him, I would have died for Him, but I would have never, ever, led Him away from Father's will.

If you have studied your Urantia Book, does it not give you a picture of a unified being in our Creator Son who was wholly dedicated to the doing of the Father's will? He was to become the Sovereign of a Universe. Would He be so weak as to give in to any animal temptations? Said Jesus many times over: "My kingdom is not of this world. It is wholly spiritual. It transcends the animal. It transcends mind, time, space, and any other limitations one could come up with."

All right, that question is answered. [group laughter.] Have you, my friends, any questions?

CALVIN: Mary, welcome! Welcome to our group. Thank you so much for your lessons, your time, your love and your help in this Correcting Time. Yes, that clears the air very much, and I am sure people reading it will feel that air cleared too. A simple follow-up though, while we're on the subject: We understand you did not have an intimate relationship with the Master, but did you end up in a relationship in your life 'after' the Resurrection? Or, did you live out your life without marriage or a romantic relationship?

MARY: I understand. I believe that Father has His plans for each one of us. We are always in a state of becoming. I suppose I did the thing I most wanted, and a relationship was not included in that. Every moment was filled with the Father's presence through the people I served. I was fulfilled beyond measure. My other friends had that need for companionship; or, they had that fear of being alone – all perfectly acceptable. I had friends that served in the ministry by day and family by night. I had friends who had escaped terrible relationships and were well satisfied being free. I knew individuals who had that inner drive to have a family, have companionship. It is all just human experience; and one way or another, in this life or the next, you will have a good understanding of it all. I thought at times it would be nice to go home to share my day's happenings with someone, yes, but they were simply passing thoughts. Had I desired a male companion, certainly could I have found one. I do suppose I had some fear of repeating a history of choosing abusive partners. I think freedom was more important to me than the price of companionship. Is this helping?

CALVIN: Yes, thank you very much. It gives me a new perspective. I think there are many mortals that feel like I do, that there is some character flaw or failure if they do not have a successful relationship. (Mary: Yes. Good question.)

HARRISON: Mary, what can you tell us about your first meeting with the Master?

MARY: I had heard good things about the Master before I had met Him, but always did my suspicion get the better of me; I had thought He was another religious fanatic. I suppose what struck me first about Him was the confidence and security in His voice, in the words He chose. But what really captured my heart was the sincerity in His eyes. I was impressed by His distaste for fame or recognition. Again, He was unlike any man I had ever met. To look upon Him was indeed a majestic sight to behold, yes, but there was something from Him that touched your soul. I had no doubt that He knew me through and through, but I also had a most strange feeling that I had known Him for a very long time; I still, to this day, know not why. One other thing is, He was indeed magnetic through is lightheartedness and humor – always something for me to aspire to. Yes, good question, Harrison. Is that answering? (Harrison: Yes, thank you.) Mary: You're welcome. Is there another question?

MIRIAM: Mary, I would just like to say that it is an honor to formally meet you. I have always been a fan of yours and touched by your example of loving and getting into service. Lots of times I wanted to ask Abraham about you, Mary; and now you are here and what do I ask? Your message this evening is about freedom – freedom from low self-esteem; from the bondage of choosing negative thoughts; and how we can truly be empowered using the Master's example. My question for you is: Was it a gradual healing? or was it like an instant healing from your inner turmoil, low self-esteem. When you met the Master and started walking in His path, was it like an instant zap? or did you continue to build an increasing awareness of His love and message? Do you know what I mean?

MARY: It was gradual. Even after I had come alive in spirit, I still had setbacks. I still regressed. Time and experience was difficult for me to be patient, to allow the unfolding instead of forcing it. I had received healing and more confidence over time, yes, and I do believe that my work with others was instrumental in achieving this state. I had so much fun. I had so much laughter. I had begun to see a life with new eyes. I learned I was not a player in a very serious game, no! I was more like a cheerleader on the sideline. I learned to have fun and not take life so seriously. I do believe that most individuals find healing over time; I would think it would be rare to come upon such wisdom overnight. It is simply a matter of being able to endure time and be observant of the message the spirit is trying to deliver. Good question, Miriam. Is this answering?

MIRIAM: Yes, wonderfully. Just one more quick tag-on question: How did you know to get going with what you did? Was it just like the right thing that you felt to do? Do you know what I mean?

MARY: I understand. I really had no idea of what I was to do. I began to detect Father's open doors simply through trusting Him more than I could trust myself. I relied a lot on intuition. As I matured, I did become more risky with my own well-being; I became more daring to act out what I felt was the Father's will. I look at that time in my life as mostly accidental or perhaps being at the right place at the right time. It was not very strategic. I admired the Master's principle of ministering 'as you pass by.' When you are consciously observant of this, you do seem to find yourself where you should be. Also a good question, yes. (Miriam: Thank you so much.) Mary: You're welcome.

SIMON: Mary, I feel like we were raised somewhat similar with these fears of abandonment. I see you have overcome them pretty well with the Master's help. How about some advice for some of us that are abandonment recoveree's, so to speak?

MARY: Simon, I had some issues with abandonment throughout my whole life. I do suppose this contributed to my mistrust of men in general. I did, however, learn a terrific amount of psychology from trying to dissect this issue and understand it. I made it a daily practice to fill that place where I felt abandoned, with the Father's presence. And after the Master was taken and His Spirit of Truth poured out on all flesh, I felt even more empowered to not let any abandonment issues rule over my life. When persistent problems keep returning, then you well know you must make effort to work on them. It is difficult, yes, but you do have to explore the root of that feeling. It is normal for mortals to want to make sense out of things. For the most part, I would say that my greatest help was replacing the negative with making effort to enhance my communication with Father; and always was the Master so inspirational. As I had said before, I had gained the kingdom of Heaven – and my my, that is a large family, a place you can take your pain in and bring about an ultimate good. Simon, you are maturing in spirit more and more every day. You are quite capable of dissecting this issue and helping to bring about an ultimate good. Eventually, you will help others with this same issue. Know that you are a well-loved son, no matter what has happened – try to feel that! Try to make it your own. Good question. (Simon: Thank you.) Mary: You're welcome.

As Abraham has often said, I am slipping. I thank you and am always inspired by your dedication to carry on. I enjoy your unique personalities and am learning quite a bit. I am to do the farewell for this evening. As always, Abraham and I send you with our love. Go in peace. Shalom.

Our Ministry Is Without Fanfare or Recognition | No Room For Self-Importance
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-20-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I find it amusing that you expect me to be here; I like that. Wouldn't it be wonderful if in the moment-to-moment of daily living you could expect the same from Father? It really is the same – even more-so true with the Father, for He is personalized internally for each one of His children; every day the two of you are becoming as one. I know in your daily struggles this thought/reality is sometimes difficult to grasp.

Know that the veil of the flesh is only temporary – and with the forward momentum of the Father's plan, more things are possible than you know. Is it not cause for rejoicing to see those things that are true remain lasting? You have allowed the unfolding of our Mission; and even with some stumbling, you have done quite well putting it to good use. Sometimes it is very uplifting to simply stop and be grateful, to feel those blessings that surround you and allow the energy of the spirit to continue to empower you.

I am MARY, your sister and friend. I am grateful for the friendship and assistance I receive from our brother, Abraham. His grace is indeed something for me to aspire to. Even though I have received training to help in the uplifting of Urantia – still, I never quite feel fully prepared to teach any particular lesson. Abraham speaks of making effort to be prepared, and then always allowing the living Spirit to guide, to have the final word; and this is quite helpful for me.

It has been many years since I have indwelt the mortal flesh; and yes, I have come to know such joy that you have yet to discover. I have never forgotten where I began, and truly is all my experience a part of the sum total of who I am. I do remember some excruciating times in the flesh, certainly, but here I am now with some knowledge of the outcome of ultimate good. Just like you, your mortal struggles will one day be behind you and the ultimate good will be presented to you in a way you can understand.

It is so encouraging to keep striving in that forward momentum that Father has set before us. You have had many years of training and your mission assignments are laid out before you, daily. Some assignments may seem small, but they are always possible links in a greater chain. Our Mission seems inactive to some because it is so 'low profile;' it demands not personal recognition of each individual who serves.

I do remember in my days of becoming alive in spirit; the temptation to take credit for receiving and disseminating living revelation was always present. Having grown up as a child who knew not real love and affection, I was more inclined to 'take credit' for the Father's work – the attention at the time fulfilled an emptiness I had always known.

It was strange how the more I leaned on the side of ego, and the desire to look and feel important, the less ability I had to minister to others. When I was caught up in 'myself,' I really was of no use to the ministry – the ministry became secondary to my desire to feel needed. I would swear that 'I served to work and minister for the Master's cause;' and yet, and understandably, the animal-side craved to be noticed and appreciated.

Certain sects of that day and age were not socially accepted. If you grew up poverty-stricken, then you pretty well had it set in your mind you were always going to be of a lower class. It was rare when individuals strived for more because it was believed then that this was God's plan for you – to stay in the bed society had made for you.

So most definitely, when my mind began to lean toward spiritual reality, I learned of my real importance; I learned freedom from labels, classes, and status. If I was to serve in the Lord's ministry, then I had to become one with the people. There was not room for a feeling of self-importance; there was not time to reflect on how I would be rewarded in heaven. The ministry was exactly what the Master taught us it would be, and a great deal of His teaching was focused on self-forgetfulness.

I always had to remind myself – through daily prayer, meditation, and efforts to serve – that this was not about me and my longing to be fulfilled in one way or another. In that, there was joy beyond my ability to express it with words. Yes, to feel a part of something greater than yourself, greater than your little world, is freeing. It was just as the Master taught: "He who would save his life selfishly will indeed lose it. He who would lose himself for the Father will definitely be saved."

Our Mission is active, even though it is not so much in the public eye. We are all a part of something greater, and that links us together as members of an unlimited universal family. To me, the Mission is simple. If you need fame and recognition, then maybe this ministry is not for you. If you desire to be part of the whole and serve side by side with your fellows, seen and unseen, finding spiritual fulfillment instead of ego-satisfaction, then you are home.

I am stopping there. All my love to you, my brothers and sisters. Godspeed this week in all your undertakings.

I am Abraham. Our gratitude to you, sister, Mary. Well done. This week, find time for prayer and meditation. Take an honest look at your ministry. We may be a quiet Mission but that does not take away from our activity. Carry on with what you know to be true in your soul. My love is always growing for you each. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Fearful Of Experience Holds Us Back | With Self-Forgetfulness We Can Receive Pure Father-Assistance

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP

06-27-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Many times I am overfilled with love for you and your unique personalities, and I feel a great deal of comfort around you. I feel secure in the knowledge of your feelings toward me and the Mission as a whole.

I am appreciative of your willingness to be unknown and yet strive for a better today. I realize at times how our Mission seems flat. It can seem void of that mountainous beauty we all enjoy in the thrill of discovery. Such is the mortal life. Our Mission is what we make of it. Our personal being depends on our willingness to allow Father in.

I am MARY. Again, greetings. I do understand the valleys and peaks of the mortal life. I remember an ever-changing perception of my outlook on everyday living. As a child, it seems we start out as free and open spirits, then pain or experience in living teaches us to be cautious. For some, hardship leads them to a 'closing up' altogether. As any child learns, "If you touch the hot coals, you get burned."

Certain negative experiences or traumatic events would perhaps make some individuals a little too cautious, shy, or self-conscious. Pain is not pleasant; and yes, escape is understood. There is a tendency for people to escape any un-pleasantries of life by seeking to escape harsh experience altogether – they are 'closed up.' They not only are closed off from the wisdom to be gained, but also from the living Spirit that is available to each and every true believer.

I remember such pain and the holding back my natural instinct 'to act upon.' Having been reinforced time and time again that I was of lower value, I had not trust in any of my abilities – and therefore, I held back and remained quiet. The insecurity from ridicule directed my actions as a person. Yes, it controlled me. In this holding back (or closing up), I did curtail one of the many gifts that is ours just by being set upon such a planet – and that is intuition. My intuition (or capacity to receive spiritual information) was indeed squelched, and most definitely were the spirit poisons more real to me than spiritual fruits.

With the coming of the Master's ministry, I began to realize my true rights simply as having been born mortal and a child of God. Certainly were women (among others) limited in their freedom to speak their mind or act on any cause; but with a few lessons in humility, I was able to find the balance between 'holding back' and 'allowing Father's will to unfold.'

In the mortal life, you will certainly experience the perseverance of ego to look for opportunities to be 'rewarded for the great person you are.' It is understood that feedback from others– such as family, friends, spouses, and employers – seems to be of great value. Not everyone on an evolutionary experimental planet is raised with the understanding/fact that they are 'a child of God,' and are given certain rights and gifts.

This is why the Master taught self-forgetfulness – so that the believers could receive pure assistance from our Father. He really did make effort to teach equality among all individuals; but also, as evolution has shown to be true, that good prevails and true things are lasting. In ministry, it is most likely safe to be in a mode of questioning or in self-forgetfulness – where you are trusting more in Father's ability than your own.

When we close-up to experience for 'self-protection,' then are we shutting out the assistance of Spirit. You can self-protect until the end of this mortal life, yes – and yet you will carry on from that point when you reach the other side. Such is the eternal career. This is not bad or good, just the way it is. When we are closed-off because we have been burned, then are we most likely to miss out on the abundance to be gained – and those Spirit perceptions that are available for you to utilize in this life, go unnoticed.

We can see the excellent example that the Master set by remaining open to Father's will, keeping a firm handle on emotions and the knowing in whom He was dealing with. Many things could the Master foresee because He was open; it was His deepest desire to serve Father and His fellows. Many times could He have run with emotion and delayed Father's plans. Many times could His fear have overcome His courage to be His true self.

Imagine the burden toward the end of Jesus' life. But did He see it as a burden? no! Was He paralyzed with emotion or self-consciousness? no! Was He a servant to popular opinion in His own need to be loved and accepted? no!

You know Jesus was born a babe of the realm, just as you were. He grew, just as you did. I say, you are able to have a fairly good communication with the Father, as He did. We can all see that Jesus was prepared for His ministry all along the way through His life-experience. He was willing to be taught. His loyalty to the Father is unmatched, yes, but definitely do you have opportunity to make an effort to come close. I am stopping there.

I am ABRAHAM. For the week ahead let us ponder how we are self-protected to the point that we hold back or are fearful of experience. Let us ponder our balance between allowing our Father's will to unfold, and pushing for our need to be noticed and accepted. How is intuition helpful in everyday-living, and, our ministry? That is all.

Know that I am with growing gratitude to you, my friends, who dare to step out and be seen for all that you are. Well done. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom. [No meeting next week – July 4th.]

Overcoming The Temptation For Ego-Satisfaction | Building Those Muscles of Faith
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-11-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Even though we had not a meeting last week I am glad I could spend individual time with you. Your discussion concerning the work environment was informative to me for I am a small part of a much larger body. I realize that some things seem overlooked, and very well may be by myself or other Teachers, but always do I rejoice in the fact that Father knows all. He tends to all. No one job is more important than another, for we all are part of a much larger body.

I am MARY. I am grateful for the comfort I am feeling to be among friends – family, so to speak. I know that I am one of the many that serve in the kingdom. Every day I am more and more amazed at my own joy of being one of the many. From where I am now, to be set apart from the many, or given some recognition, feels quite unnatural.

Of course I would tell you a different story when I had lived a life in the flesh. As a child, I felt not as a part of anything good. Certainly was I starved for attention and affection. I realized the basis of my self-esteem was seeing myself through the eyes of others – if I received praise, then I felt deserving to be a part of the many.

Upon receiving criticism, however, I felt separated, as to be labeled 'abnormal'; and therefore, undeserving of any good thing. Indeed there were times where elevated self-esteem overtook me and I lived my life to maintain the elevation; of course this was always short-lived, for reality (or true humility) would bring me back to the focus of my attention.

In my day it was saintly to sacrifice. Those who could 'sacrifice without recognition' were indeed close to the Spirit and with the understanding of the universal law of abundance. However, many in my day-as well as the present-would wear the robe of sacrifice for the benefit of themselves, boosting their own feelings of self-worth. I am not speaking on this subject to point fingers or induce guilt; nor, to label individuals or create paranoia, no! I speak on this subject because for many years my own self-esteem was the driving force behind my actions.

Living a life in the flesh, you will experience as much as you possibly can handle. Especially – circumstances that create feelings of elevated self-worth or 'superiority' are illusions the ego wants you to focus on. To be connected to Spirit, one feels a part of the whole – not more and not less, and not 'set apart', but thriving on service; thriving on things that feed the soul, not the ego.

Even after some years spent in service to the Master's cause, the temptation to receive ego-satisfaction was still present. Of course Father, in His infallible ways, would teach me of my fallibility. Father's teachings were always leading me toward Him – not an attempt to battle the ego or the animal within, but pointing me to a new and better way.

As I matured in spirit, I felt Father to be a loving guiding hand, not an authority figure who would limit my happiness or put walls up in the path of my desires; I realized His walls were guidance, not limitations. Father is always leading us to Him, helping the budding spirit to grow, not conditioning it in a way that simply makes one a submissive servant.

The mortal path is full of barriers – and the more you serve the ego, the more difficult it is to surmount them. You are most definitely not rats in a universal maze, no. Certainly are you the children of the First Source and Center who is ever lovingly and most definitely guiding you into 'becoming.' Most things that appear to be gratifying in this mortal life are temporary. But those things that you really make effort towards are soul-building, leading you Godward.

Think about your day-to-day living and the seeming limitations that are set before you. Are you to break away to sit upon a mountaintop pondering universal cause and effect? Are you to make effort and sacrifice to get that temporary high of the ego fulfillment? Or, are you to exercise your spiritual understanding so that you can receive guidance from the One that knows all. How does the presence of Father feel when you are striving to be a working part of the whole? How is this building your eternal career?

I most definitely understand various driving forces that would serve self. Many individuals carry life-long beliefs and patterns that would create the longing 'to be seen' as truly valuable. For me, it was certainly a welcome reality when I could see beyond myself as a voiceless individual, to becoming a part of the whole that served without pausing to ask 'why?'

There have been, and will still be, times when your spirit feels beaten and unable to move. There are various habit patterns of the human brain that are well-worn and difficult to overcome. To strive to build upon continuous faith is an open door to assistance from the Spirit. As you have heard quoted, but still wonder about: "With God, all things are possible."

I am ABRAHAM. I find this weeks' lesson to be challenging and certainly worth personal effort. Mary spoke of the continuous building of faith and exercising the spiritual muscles - meaning study, stillness, prayer, and striving to live truthfully. Many things of this mortal life appear to be fleeting and not worth the time and effort - we all know now who is a perfect judge of that. Remember that humor, fun, and relaxation are always energizers to what seems to be a well-worn spirit.

Again I will make time to spend with each of you, individually, this week. I thank you for your willingness to stay the course. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Let Not Mere Mortal Stumbling Stifle The Budding True Self

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 07-18-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I am grateful for your honesty and willingness to believe that better answers are forthcoming. You are fighting the good fight of faith. Your down days never keep you down; there is always the thought of Father in the back of your minds with His hand outstretched. How empowering it is to know you are never really left alone.

I am MARY. My thanks to you also for allowing me to be a branch on your family tree. Many of my associates here on this side know I am new to this assignment. Still, they are understanding and helpful; they are ever cheering me on; their honesty is helpful, not hurtful. Perhaps in a way, I am transformed enough to see that now.

Even though I still stumble a great deal, I am never made to feel shame or regret. I still have some episodes of discouragement, yes, but with time and counsel from my Father, and those associates with more experience than myself, I learn from the discouragement and I am built-up in spirit, not torn down in ego.

I am getting to know you each better and better. I am always pleasantly surprised at what I am learning about you – your culture, your thought patterns, and your social practices. Just when I believe nothing has really changed, as far as mortal life goes, I am always amazed at how things have evolved, how the world and its people have evolved. I am learning to think with the 'kingdom mind' and that requires flexibility on my part.

I always received a great deal of knowledge just from watching the Master. He was truly Himself with each person He had chanced to come upon. To meet Him for the first time was a bit intimidating, for He was indeed majestic in His ways. His countenance was confident and always looking for a positive side to every situation. On the other hand, He was fearless in His expressions; when events had gone against His beliefs, He let it be known in a way that would have a positive effect on the minds of His fellows.

At first, I was quiet in His presence. I certainly did not want this Man of God to know of my generalized ignorance. I thought that if He really knew me, He would certainly look down upon me and the person I had been and was at that present time.

It is really quite humorous now that I know that the Master knew me all along – and saw me as a child of God, not an uneducated poverty-stricken socially unacceptable female. No, He saw me as a learning child of God who was open to learning new and better ways.

The Master's lightheartedness, His eye contact and show of genuine interest, really brought out the best in me. I felt not set apart as 'special,' nor did I feel separated as having lived a sinful life. I came to feel and realize that I was an individual part of the whole; and as such, I had been encouraged to live my best life. Was my "best life" the same concept that was seen through the eyes of society? no!

Striving to live up to the highest good I possibly could, depended upon my willingness to listen, learn, and be self-forgetful – and, without underlying selfish motives. Did I have want for some material fulfillment? sure I did! But these thoughts would soon fade with the willingness to be open to Spirit and freefall into the Father's plan and purpose.

My friends, as long as you wear the mortal flesh you will have to deal with mortal issues; this will probably be your greatest learning experience. You can be diligent in your spiritual practices and yet, still stumble. You will have moments of wavering faith and doubt, yes, but this is not to be taken so seriously. Contrary to old beliefs, this life is not your one and only chance to choose or reject the Spirit within. Wrong decisions are not a path into hell. You always have opportunity to do better, to live right. I am stopping there.

I am ABRAHAM. My gratitude to you, Mary, for your efforts. You are inspiring as a student. You are bringing hope as an associate. You are bringing lightness to our well-worn path.

This week, friends, let us make every effort to reach for a positive side in all circumstances. Even in the worst of circumstances, let not it rule your emotions, let it not cause you to stumble. Should you stumble, be not discouraged for that is a tie-in to the ego, not the spirit. Make effort to communicate with our Master, our own beloved Spirit of Truth. What does His particular personality say to you? That is all.

Know that I am grateful to be growing alongside you. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Serve Without An Ulterior Motive. Recognize The Natural Flow of Life
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-25-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I have been musing over our years together – the meetings, conferences, and various events. How people have grown and changed – yet, are still the same souls I fell in love with in the first place. You have each helped one another to become stronger individuals. A great deal of fear has dissipated because of your enduring commitment to one another, to Father, and to the Correcting Time.

To spend time with you is to be revived in spirit and attitude. I know the ministry can be seemingly slow at times, but I am watching you actually follow through with what you have learned. I am honored to be your friend and Mission associate. I know our path has not been one of ease, and yet, it was our difficulties that brought us to this place, this present moment.

I am MARY. I am always inspired by our brother Abraham's words. He is lovingly instructional on one hand, and on the other, he is a presence I am growing quite attached to. His personality gives me comfort to know that I have plenty of room to grow. I have freedom to run and to move about in spirit, so to speak.

You each have also displayed a loving patience for this newcomer, and I am grateful. I am constantly amazed by Father's network of individuals – those that serve, and those who are served.

This week I have spent my free time studying about the Father and His ways of perfection. I can understand His commitment and diligence to make every effort to assist every child. I can understand His patience in teaching and ever drawing the child toward Him. I did find it difficult to understand His ability to let go when the child wants nothing to do with Him. It's not that the Father leaves the child alone, no! It's simply – the Father stands by. Ever vigilant is He – and on the other hand, can let go without emotional upheaval.

The more I experience on this side, the more I can believe there is always an ultimate good in every situation. Urantia has its share of strife – and while a mother may stand by in worry and dread of a negative outcome, our Father is able to detach from the outcome, to embracing the present moment. Father is not harsh in His ways, no. He is, however, intelligent. He does know when the child needs to go it alone, for the experience is quite valuable.

Karma these days is an amusing term. Where I am now it is simply known as 'universal law' – not good or bad, but just 'the way it is' – and without a doubt what makes the most sense. Recalling my mortal experience, I do remember my 'service' (as I supposed) which was with an ulterior motive. I believed my good works were money in heaven's bank. My idea of good works and actual good works were completely different things.

Genuine good works are when you are in the flow of life, and events or actions seem to unfold on their own – and you are at the right place at the right time doing what you can do. Yes, there is always the ego, asking: "What will this get for me?" "What will putting effort out do for me?" But what a static this thinking is in the spiritual life! and, what a betrayal it is to universal law and citizenship.

Said Jesus: "Of all these things I have done, you will be able to do, and more." My friends, we have achieved 'more' and will continue to receive more – because we do have Him to go before us. Our beloved Spirit of Truth can speak directly to us and expose any motives the ego might be hiding away.

It is easy to see, when you are aligned with universal law and in the flow of life, coincidences seem much more common, and intuition seems like a natural everyday occurrence. Foreknowledge is not a cause to go down the path of the ego which claims to have special gifts, no – it is a right to utilize because you are making effort to be in the flow of life.

And this, my friends, is when I feel most close to Father's presence; the satisfaction and joy is indescribable. It's not like a child who sits upon the lap of Santa Clause, no. It is mentally, emotionally, and materially an opening to receive light and see the broadened horizon ahead. It is a foretaste of what is to come.

This week, let us look at motives. Let us make effort to ride the wave of life – not make our own waves that sets us apart or creates chaos, no. Let us make effort to recognize the natural flow of life and trust that in each moment, Father is there guiding and granting us ability.

This evening I will give the farewell. Our gratitude to you, our children/friends, we count ourselves blessed to know you, work with you, and grow alongside you. In the words of our mentor and friend, shalom.

Free Ourselves From Binding Traditions | Free-Thinking Is Not Liberty Without License

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-01-2005

Back

[Only females were in attendance this evening.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Watching and listening to you sisters discuss various life topics reminds me of the women apostles in the day of our Master.

I have been around for some years now. I figure I have a good bit of understanding of the mortal mind. However, I am ever brought back to reality by the different facets of personality. While the basic human needs are the same, I am really amazed by the unique personality and character of all Father's children. In other words, no matter how long I have served in this Teaching Mission, it is never dull. Anyhow, I am enjoying the spirit of this evening.

I am MARY. I am feeling at home among you, my sisters. I do believe Father's plan is the ultimate plan and many things do happen for a reason. Many of you are called to serve in various capacities. It is your flexibility that keeps you in a forward momentum.

I am aware of what seems to be a restlessness here on the planet - those things sought by the average mortal are now becoming unsatisfactory. You know as well as anyone that life is not stationary and that nothing grows without the living elements of truth, beauty, and goodness.

I remember back as a child that things would seemingly never change. It seemed as if life would just happen and God's children were supposed to just 'roll with it.' I saw my father beat my mother; therefore, I grew up as having that reality a part of my mentality. For a man to beat his wife in that day and age was acceptable, and even to be expected from time to time. To men, women would appear to be as unruly children in need of discipline.

I understand that this brings up painful issues - it is still somewhat of an irritant to me, having also lived it. I am with unending gratitude, however, to our Master who opened up the playing field for us. The pendulum of inequality still sways back and forth, yes; but believe me, those who have not been thought of as a stable foundation of strength are instead becoming exactly that.

Many individuals who were so accustomed to being told what to do are finding themselves to be free-thinkers. This, at times, can be somewhat confusing, for old thought patterns will creep in from time to time.

It has been said that people need one another. Many stagnating societies will actually choose the people you are to spend your life with. The age of free-thinking is slowly growing, yes, but as you find the courage to move forward as directed by Father, the fear to appear unacceptable, decreases. Free-thinking is not 'liberty without license,' no! it is more-so, being able to listen to the call of the Spirit without need for ego fulfillment or societal acceptance.

For myself, I did not live a traditional life. Certainly I had it in me to avoid what appeared to be my destiny -according to that culture, to that day and age. To me, as a child, love was quite conditional and most of the time, painful. I chose to escape this pain through other means of living. I could have chosen to forgo any experience that would lead me further Godward; but Father, in His ultimate plan and purpose, led me in a way that I would learn of love through another avenue.

I did not learn of love and parenting in a traditional way, but definitely did I learn about it. My calling was somewhat different than that of my sister associates.

I am saying – I was not set apart to be abnormal, no; however, my calling was constructed in a manner that 'I' could understand, with that life experience 'I' had lived. Your experience has led you to develop certain habit patterns, good and bad. And Father, in His wonderful wisdom, chooses to teach you in a way 'you' can understand. Father is highly devoted to you, His children, and will stop at nothing to lead you Paradise-ward.

This world is not meant to be so much about tradition, it is an evolving planet. You, as people of the Correcting Time, cannot live life as did your predecessors. You feel not bound by guilt for you have not lived a life of tradition; no, you are with plan and purpose. The Correcting Time Mission is about people, and healing, and unity. The Mission is not about what appears to be success in the eyes of society. I understand you will have struggle, but with heavenly guidance you can find balance and a reason to carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. Our gratitude to you, Mary. A fine lesson, indeed. This week, let us review our personal life circumstances. In whom do we serve? That is all. Know that we are with growing love for you all. Until next time, shalom.

Being Self-Forgetful Enhances Spirit Connection | Today's Abuse Of Over-Medications
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-08-2005
Back

I am ABRAHAM. You know these words happen by your own energy. Without your will to allow Father's plan to be put into action, this would not happen. Of course you could receive lessons on an individual level, but the strength of the many minds here make our words more accurate; our intentions more pure; our thoughts more balanced. While it may seem you do very little to uplift Michael's cause, I can say that your efforts go far and wide.

The fact that you need not know the outcome of your efforts opens the channel of energy and helps to purify thoughts and intentions. I am fulfilled with the fact that you carry on in the face of your many struggles. I am inspired by your efforts to see the good in what appears to be overwhelmingly bad. You may waver in heart and mind from time to time, but your faith always wins. You work through it and always come out better in mind and add growth to the soul. Well done.

I am MARY. What an honor for me to teach alongside Abraham and at the same time be a student alongside you. I also am overflowing with energy and hope that to reach the masses all we have to do is get through to the few. In recalling my mortal life, I realize my greatest enemy was my own mind, my own thinking. This is why the Master taught so much about self-mastery.

Education was rare for a woman in that day. As I matured, I realized I could learn more from 'life experience' than I could from any organized institution. The key to learning, of course, was listening and being observant. Much of the time I had to literally bite my tongue. In my youth, I could hardly hold back my urge to spout off my knowledge, for by so doing it was as if people would look at me like I was somebody important.

In my adult years, with time, experience, and the Master's help, I knew that I could be of much more assistance by learning and having a questioning mind instead of an attitude of one that was 'quite knowledgeable,' and therefore, 'should be looked upon as important.' Father really put this theory into practice in my life. 'Living revelation' was my ministry.

A quiet mind (one seeking little or no attention) connected me directly to Spirit; and from that, I knew things that even I was amazed at. Of course this was simply used to minister to Father's children, not to boost my own self-esteem.

Certainly was I honored that Father could make use of someone I thought had little or no value. I became a part of the whole. I saw with new eyes. I heard with new ears. I felt much more love than I ever thought possible. I actually had access to a universe of information – again, of course, to minister to Father's children.

The partner to the Master's teaching on 'self-mastery' was 'self-forgetfulness' – to lose oneself in the service of others. I do know that living in the material body is so difficult. Many times I thought 'the more active I was, the more I was able to serve.' In the end, of course I had no energy and was really off-center.

Time spent alone is good. Stillness is good, and so is exercise. Creativity is rejuvenating; fellowship is balancing; study is re-centering. The spirit that is housed by a mortal body, needs this care. The mind needs a chance to refocus. Certainly is there much more stimulation in the world today than there was in my day; it is busier and more confusing – taking up more of the minds' space, and many times blocking spiritual knowledge and energy.

With that said, and off the subject just a bit, I am made to think of the tremendous amounts of medication people are on. Yes, yes, medication has certainly been useful for many things, but a great deal of medication has been mind-altering and interfering with the very mechanisms that connect you to Spirit. I understand the mortal life today is difficult, and many individuals need some sort of assistance, but I would say at least sixty-percent of the medicines prescribed today are quite unnecessary – especially those that alter the mind and personality.

Humans were made to have emotions. You do get angry. You do get depressed. It is okay to cry. It is okay to express injustice. Just remember, those practices the soul needs to be balanced helps you in attaining self-mastery. It is perfectly acceptable to be mortal, yes, but also to be observant, to listen and be teachable.

With that, I shall give the farewell. In the words of our loving mentor, our love is ever growing for you each. Until next time, shalom.

All Are Equal In Father's Work | Michael Is One Of Us

Abraham & Michael, WOODS CROSS & POCA TELLO GROUPS

08-21-2005

Back

[Any transmission for the previous week is still not found. This week's meeting was the annual Celebration of Michael's mortal birth – Aug. 21, 7 BC.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How wonderful it is to be dedicated no matter where the Mission might take you. The dedication to the doing is certainly inspirational. Each of you carries on every day in the unknown. At times of course there is a bit of hesitation, yes, but for the most part your daring to go forward without recognition or credit will certainly advance our Correcting Time.

I am honored to attend your celebration in remembrance of our Brother/Father, Michael. I have seen many of these celebrations and I am always met with the same loving spirit. I know the celebration brings us unity in heart and mind, even though our Mission tasks may take us elsewhere.

I am MICHAEL, your Brother/Father, your Spirit confidant, your tried and true. I am also feeling that tremendous joy of unity that brings us back from the material realms toward reality. I realize your daily struggles and reasons for taking action. I realize your need to 'do' and not just 'be.' There is a great deal going on in the world right now before your eyes. I can also say there is so much more that you do not see that is creating the birth of a new tomorrow. I am so grateful.

From where I sit, I can see back through history and know that an ultimate good has carried Urantia forward. I have also experienced life in the flesh where I was quite reliant upon my eyes of faith. There was indeed a time or two that I had felt that mortal loneliness. There were times I had to be a bit self-disciplined in order to be guided by my Father.

I am grateful for these experiences which have brought me to where I am now. I am blessed to have gone through the mortal and morontia experiences to gain understanding - that while some things may appear to be negative, they are simply the beginning of a better age.

As you remember my life in the flesh, I ask that you see me as an average man. I was then, and still am, one of you. I work with you and for you. I can help you along the mortal path when you are willing to embrace truth.

As you look back on my mortal life, see me as a person of that day and age who worked, did daily chores, and who took care of a family. I went to work, I came home, I worked some more. I was a son, brother, father, student, teacher, employee, and employer. I was looked up to, and looked down upon. I was judged, I was befriended, I was listened to. I had many friends, I had many foes. In all that, I gave myself and I received a universe.

Children, as you go out among your fellows, know that you are one of them. Whether you are a soldier in service to your country or a hermit who lives in the woods, know that one is not above another. We all worship the same Father. We are all attended to by Mother and Her mind-spirits. No one child gets more attention than another. Whether you are a starving child in Africa or a wealthy child in America, you each receive the same opportunities, the same attendance by those who serve in spiritual realms.

Let not what you see with your eyes dictate what you know with your heart and mind. Allow me to be your Spirit of Truth. Allow me to love you as I do, and to care for you as I should. I shall not pamper you and allow you to ponder over your past wounds, no! I shall empower you to help Urantia move into a new and better age.

This will be a year of truth; being open to it is embracing reality and inviting the Spirit to guide you. Know that in all your ways I go before you. I am your Brother/Father. Carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. Thank you, Michael. Your words always give us energy to continue on in the good fight of faith.

My friends, as Michael said, this is a year of truth and becoming about truth. Not professing your own truth to every individual you cross, no, but about seeing truth as it really is and allowing it to transform into meanings and values in your mind – thereby, strengthening you to take whatever actions are necessary for each circumstance.

Continue on in your fellowship and celebration. As you know, all of us on this side of the veil are always standing by. We are grateful to you for your exertion of faith and your daring attitudes to move forward – not to have regret over the past, but to have understanding and to move forward. Our love goes with you. Shalom.

Waves Of Energy That Are Fueled Either By The Spirit, Or By Man`s Wishful Thinking
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-29-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How wonderful it is to be with believers this evening. I feel relaxed and un-pressured. You each make me feel like this is an evening at home. This Mission is my job right now; it is surely what I love to do. It is not without difficulty that you each are in attendance. I certainly know it takes a great deal of effort and energy for you to be here.

Yes, my friends, I feel at ease. I thank you for that and for your continuing faith in the mortal agreement. ‘Mortal agreement’ meaning – you have accepted your call and are committed to fulfilling it, from the mortal ground on up.

I am MARY. It is an honor for me to also serve and feel that rejuvenation in mind and spirit. I am also joy-filled knowing you accept me as I am; you know from where I came and much of my history. In many religious organizations I would not be accepted and feel the comfort that I do in this Teaching Mission. Yes, I am thankful you accept me as I am.

These present days’ challenges have reminded me of days long ago when the Master walked the Earth. I am in a new seat now where I can see a great deal that is going on with the people of Urantia. Of course long ago, I could not see much for I was in the middle of the action. I am seeing energy that travels in waves – there are emotions and minds catching onto certain popularity behaviors and is creating waves of energy that, really, travel throughout the world.

Much of today’s anxiety is about individuals being caught up in the unknown; and most figure they should jump onto some ship of safety and hold tight to stay afloat. In the mortal living, people are having to take chances in building faith. To really ‘live and learn’ is to gain experience – to have growth and reap the wisdom therefrom.

When some learn about this Teaching Mission, they are hesitant because it is new – non-traditional. On the other hand, it is new and exciting and without doctrine. The Mission is not a ship that people are to jump onto and cling for the sake of faith, no. The Mission is more like a boat being built, and it takes all the participants to make it float. You are free-thinkers and yet, there is not liberty without license; there are not actions without accountability. This is responsible cosmic citizenship.

I like the philosophy of Michael's Mission because it allows you to think freely; to question; to experience; and, to learn for yourself. You need not stand out above the crowd nor sink below. You need not become unified with some wave of energy that is probably just mortal drama or some temporary explanation to the unknown. Rather, you are in understanding that there is time to think; that this is only the beginning, and you need not ride someone else's wave of faith. The cosmic mind is for the many, not simply the few who look to be living a righteous life.

I admire the Master's courage that day when the temple of old was cleansed from the profiteers. This day surely represented the ability of the mortals to set aside the craving for attention in favor of doing the right thing. This was a big day for the Master and the apostles.

Jesus was at the height of His popularity and His following had increased in numbers. He was at the podium and was set to give a grand speech that would certainly reach the heart of His hearers. When the Master saw all that was going on – the build-up of years of injustice that was occurring right before Him, He was ever so happy to set aside what He had planned in favor of being Spirit-led. Thus began the chaos that was to clear the temple.

What Jesus did this day in the temple was simple when you think about it – it was a small action empowered by an idea from the Father. The minds and spirits of the assembled individuals recognized this goodness that was about to be the voice for their injustice. And certainly, this wave of energy, which was fueled by the spirit of justice and fairness, was recognized on a soul-level by the people as they cheered Him on. This was one small change in energy, from man's to Father's, that was to make a lasting impression on the minds of man.

This week, let us be aware of the waves of energy that are fueled by the Spirit? or by man's wishful thinking. How do we further a cause? How are our minds set to be influenced? Is it something we want? or something that Father wants. Is it our will? or God's will.

I am overwhelmed at times because of the energies that are visual to me. Yes, I have some compassion for you that are to maintain the course in these present times. That is all for this evening. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Do We Live As Man Expects, Or As Father's Will Would Have Us Live

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-05-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am impressed at your willingness to allow the message to come through. You embrace the spirit when you could be forcing your own agenda. You have enough years behind you as a unified group to have purified intentions as far as the Teaching Mission is concerned. As you each become more spiritualized is it then easier to be spirit led – it is easier to have not focus on personal agendas or wish-fulfillment.

We are all watching the tragic occurrences in the world right now (Hurricane Katrina in the US, New Orleans area) and truly does this make us all reflect; it causes us to reprioritize our lives; it does make us more willing to embrace truth and to listen a bit more.

What occurs in the world today is natural evolution, not a slap in the face to realize how small the mortal is and how big God is, no! 'Natural evolution' is not a wakeup call from God – although with each and every event that occurs, natural or man-made, we hope that the very best is brought out in mortals.

As you can see, the 'animal within' is alive and well, and serving itself in many individuals. But overall, the majority of Urantia people have a space occupied in their hearts by the First Source and Center for assisting one another. Man is not bad, not naturally evil, no, just a bit ignorant and still a bit self-centered; this is to be expected with all people, with all races, genders, and classes of citizens. Much of the time you must see the worst for it to spark action within us to bring out the best.

As good as many individuals' intentions are, there still is hesitation to live the life they truly believe in. There is still too much turmoil within to make that ultimate choice – to live as man expects? or to live as Father's will would have us live. Each of us have varying backgrounds, unique personalities, gifts of all kinds, and faults of all kinds. It would seem the biggest problem mankind would face would be how to incorporate so many differing individuals into the kingdom of heaven on Earth.

There are always individuals who want to be in charge, and then there are natural born leaders. There are individuals who wish to appear as the hero, and there are the real heroes who want nothing to do with recognition. There are those who teach to show their intelligence, and there are those who allow Father's intelligence to teach. There are those who portray a large flame of faith, and it flickers every time the wind blows; and on the other hand, there are those who maintain a small but steady flame that provides a light of faith for others.

There is a place in Father's kingdom for each and every individual, no matter what. Everyone has a place – whether they are spiritual or animal-minded, a minority or the prevalent, male or female, child or adult, rich or poor. It matters not where on the planet you were born, for each and every person is a child of God. Each and every person seeks to love and be loved; to care and be cared for; to feel needed and wanted.

As these difficult times are upon the planet, we have great faith that the good will be the ultimate outcome; the animal will be tamed and the majority of people will allow the Spirit to guide. If all else has disappeared, what have you? If truth and love are gone, what do material things serve?

Many mortals can justify what they believe they deserve in this mortal life – and work to serve themselves, even if it means working against their fellows. We have you, our Teaching Mission participants, to portray an example of a good balance between spirit and mortal. While many would desire to catch that wave of drama, you are our anchor of stability. No matter what happens, we all work for that outcome of an ultimate good; we still must live and rise to each and every challenge. You will be tested, so to speak, and you will be trained.

I am quite happy with our mortal Mission-forces. I am inspired to carry on, to feel comfort in Father's watchcare, to feel confident in the fact that Michael's Spirit of Truth has great influence. I am made to relax at the diligence of Mother and Her mind-spirits. I am made to be hopeful at the growth of the Supreme Being.

I believe that is enough for now. Know that I am ever increasing in love and confidence for you each. I appreciate your commitment and willingness to serve under any circumstance. Well done! Until next time, shalom.

Mindal and Physical Balance, and Trust in Father, Leads Us Toward An Ultimate Good
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-12-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am joy-filled to meet with you and observe your interaction. I enjoy your uniqueness of personality and your passion to forge ahead come what may.

This week I was literally given orders to find rest and reversion. I was moved to rise above my present thought into an open space in mind. Over these last few weeks, I have been witness to a great deal of occurrences that were driving me to have need to work, to assist. I have grown quite fond of the people on Urantia, and I am loath to see such suffering. I understand there is always an ultimate good in Father's plan, yes, but I wanted to be sure I was on task with my duties – and perhaps I was a bit overworked, perhaps a little too close to the action.

I am still finding myself to be surprised at my own feelings. I am at times overwhelmed and yet, I am completely committed to staying the course. But everyone cannot give their all when they are taxed beyond their capacity to find meanings and values. At times each of us must completely remove ourselves from the happenings of everyday life. There are times when we simply need to not think, not be always in a problem-solving mode. People are at their highest potential when they are receiving Spirit guidance; the chaotic mind is not receiving full and accurate Spirit guidance.

Yes, people are really at their best when they find value in the small joyful things in life. Those moments of quiet observance in nature are bound to reconnect soul with the Spirit – the well-rested balanced mind works at an increased capacity. Those who for the most part actually live their Spirit-driven inclinations are most likely to be of benefit to serving the whole. Looking busy or productive is not what's always best. It is easy to make rash decisions and take action therefrom when the mind is overly occupied.

Greetings. It is I, your spirit friend, MARY. I am just now beginning to understand the depth of Abraham's topic for this evening for I am, myself, feeling well spent.

I have always taken a great deal of inspiration from the Master's example of the well-balanced person. He was never in a hurry. He rarely acted upon rash decisions. He always made time for the small, simple things in life. He took great interest in nature, astronomy, woodworking – habits of the mortal mind and, the wonder of Father's interplanetary workings. He really enjoyed life. He had not regret over the past, nor worry about the future.

What the Master had most is somewhat hard to find among the people of today, and that is 'complete trust in Father.' Jesus expected not for Father to give Him money or to put food on the table, no. He did however, trust that when He needed something the means would be there for Him to work toward achieving it. The Master found work to be pleasant – a meditation so to speak, not a time to hope the day would pass quickly. There was for the most part, purpose in everything.

I do feel personally, that individuals around the Master naturally became lighthearted and had comfort that the Father's plan always worked toward an ultimate good. To serve the Master and His cause was indeed my life's work at that time; but never did He encourage me to live without balance. Balance for me included prayer, meditation, fellowship – and certainly it included care of the physical body. One who feels well served is definitely energized to serve. Those that feel fed by the Spirit are inspired to pass along this life-sustaining energy.

This week, make effort to find several moments to rise above the cloud of over-thinking. Find the small simple joy in moment-to-moment living. When all things are gone from this mortal life, what have you? When you look back upon your days in the flesh, what did you leave behind? What is your responsibility in working toward the ultimate good?

Next week we will have questions. Know that I am blessed to serve alongside you. We bid you farewell. Until next time, shalom.

Putting Our Energy Toward Good Use | This Teaching Mission Is a Drop In The Ocean of Students

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-19-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am feeling revived by your relaxed group attitude this evening. When we can all gather together, we can remember why we serve; we can refocus on the business at hand. Life, and living it to the fullest potential, is our business; we do what we can to make it better for those up and coming.

Urantia at this time seems to be caught up in such rampant emotionalism. I mean, I am beginning to understand that this time is really the direct result of rampant emotionalism. Man's wishful thinking, and his sometimes-selfish desires (or simply his personal faithful causes) will lead man to act in a manner that brings results, yes, but sometimes the actions are without integrity.

We are the sum total of our thoughts. Yes, this is evolution; this is a springboard into change. The world's occurrences are a reflection of what it has valued. The pendulum is in mid-swing and we are at the beginning of a new breadth. We are rising above the chaos to find the truly valued aspects of this mortal life.

I am MARY. Once again am I happy here to be among you. Abraham's words tonight lead me to remember the crucifixion of our Master; when people were literally forced to take sides, they were made to think about where they stood in their belief system.

There are always Father's children who are not as experienced as others. There are always those who live in a fearful state or a protective shell. There will always be those individuals who live to look righteous. But I well believe that for the most part, at this time on the planet, the common man is capable of rising above selfish desire and toward finding real purpose. They are finding that love comes not with a price tag; truth comes not without some pain. Yes, beauty is that 'occurrence' that touches the soul – something that continues to live on in the minds of those who had the mortal experience.

The cruel treatment of the Master and the devastating manner of His death caused each person to make life-changing decisions – decisions hopefully that would be an effort toward an ultimate good. After the Master was gone from us, we were left with those truths He gave us. We were left on our own to use what He had taught us. The individuals who knew Jesus and worked for the cause were more dedicated than ever. After His death, after the emotion had died down, purpose came to mind. There was a courage that became a part of us that we had not known before.

This world is new every day. A few individuals make a difference, every day. We have the choice to be self-serving, or to serve! to be spiritual, or animal! Man is not a prisoner of his own habitual thinking – no, not at all, for we can always rise above our usual pattern and to reach for new and better things. The world is simply a direct result of its collective thought – not good or bad, just natural evolving.

This week, let us make effort toward putting our energy to good use. Remember those things that are true, beautiful, and good – and that love is a sustaining energy.

This week I will answer questions. Abraham stands by. Have you questions? [Editor's note: Some personal questions/answers exchange with Mary are omitted.]

CALVIN: Mary, thank you for your lesson tonight. I've heard you and Abraham talk about how "a few will affect the whole, in time." I can see how the Master's life affected so many in a short time and with such a small exposure. Yet, in these fourteen years of this Teaching Mission we haven't seen massive numbers, by no means, to hear these lessons – which to me are most fascinating of any reading material we could have; and the same with the Urantia Book and its exposure. It makes me wonder why the Urantia Book community's growth has been so slow and even seems stifled. Why is it that we don't have very many people/participants in these initial years; and not any churches built up around the Urantia Book. What would be your assessment?

MARY: Abraham would like to address this topic.

ABRAHAM: It's not the purpose of the Master to hurriedly reel in the numbers. Permanent change takes a great deal of time and planning, and mankind always has freewill choice. What we call our cause, our movement, is not so important. Our focus is to reach those listening individuals who dare to move forward without temptation to take credit. If one mother is better to her child, then we have done our job. If one man has become a better husband, father, brother, friend, then we have done our job. If one county official has voted to forgo some luxury in favor of keeping jobs, that is what our Mission is about. We will not be organized nor contained. We will not exactly be so efficient, but certainly, sufficient. The Teaching Mission is a drop in an ocean of students. We are not looking to separate; we are hoping to unify. Take the Urantia Book, for example - some can hardly read one page without confusion; and some are so driven by it they become imbalanced. Some simply use it for a guideline - and still in all reality, it is a tool to enlighten. The Urantia Book is not a savior, it is a tool to come to understand the Savior. But it is not contained; it is not limited; it is not owned. Such is our Mission and the Correcting Time. Evolution is slow and I am thankful we have eternity. Are you understanding?

CALVIN: Yes. You shed some great light on the Urantia Book and the Teaching Mission's purpose and goals - that the slow and steady growth helps for a more solid and lasting foundation. Thank you. (Abraham: Wonderful, yes. Good question, and thank you, Calvin.)

SARAUNA: [Inaudible. A request for help to focus more in things of the spirit.]

MARY: Sarauna, my one recommendation would be to slow down a bit. Have not worry about time that is not filled with busyness. Be watchful of activities that might look good on the outside 'because they are seeming to bring purpose,' while after some research you find that some things were not what they appeared to be. You are an ambitious child of God. You have dreams that you have not thought about acting upon. It is acceptable to test your skills. Do some experiments. Remember who is in charge, or in whom it is you serve. Father longs to guide you every step of the way, as He does with all of you. I must stop there.

Know that Abraham and I are ever standing by for each one of you should you have need. Let us go forth into the week with truth, beauty, and goodness leading the way. Until next time, shalom.

What Does It Mean `Being Beside Yourself` In Service To Father
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-26-2005
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How serene the mood is this evening. I am enjoying this peaceful time. Also am I grateful to be able to gather with you and to refocus our energies for the week ahead.

I realize some of life's circumstances affect you deeply, and many times you are wondering 'what is Father's reasoning for all of this.' I can remember my own days in the flesh, and often it was that what I thought were God's leadings was simply the results of my own thinking, my own wishful desires. As we mature in spirit, we are less likely to question Father; and instead, we learn to really listen to Him.

I am MARY. What a joy it is for me to be a part of you. As I move farther from the mortal experience and further toward spiritual understanding, I am filled with love and compassion for Father's evolutionary children. Most mortals make such effort to live out their good intentions. As you grow in spiritual understanding, you can see where you have been – through helping other people. Maturity in the spirit means to give a helping hand instead of pointing fingers.

As a child, I indeed lacked the attention I so longed for. As I grew, I learned to act out in a manner which would eventually give me some kind of attention. As I grew in spiritual knowledge, and as I groomed the spiritual self, the mortal self still had a great deal of aligning to catch up on. I could desire to do these good things; I could put forth effort in the first few steps toward achieving this goal – and yet, somewhere within, the animal self still had a tendency to act out, to crave attention, to be known and loved, to feel equal with all others.

It was so easy to become stuck in that self-disappointment. Knowing that the animal self is alive and well, it was easy for me to think I was of no good, and simply a child who would never learn. In my self-chastisement, it was easy for me to become discouraged and deflated in spirit. In my unreasonable smallness, I was apt to stay hidden, to not serve, to pretty much just take up space. I felt as if I was a usurper of energy. I could not fill that void that continued to take me downward.

I am so grateful for the Master's outlook on reality; He was not about to allow anyone to lay down before their troubles or be enabled to be no more than a taker. Always was the Master's first order of business to remind us that we are all equal in the kingdom of heaven – all known and loved beyond our comprehension. This acknowledgment was not to justify our temporary misbehavior, and it was not to excuse us for our weaknesses, no. The Master reminded us of this simple fact to bring us to a mindal balance that would reconnect us to the spiritual circuits.

As mortals, you will always make mistakes – that is a part of the spiritual advancement. If you were without error you would not be here. We live to learn, and making mistakes is a reality. In our wrong choices are our greatest lessons. The wonderful news about the Correcting Time is that we always get another chance to make better choices.

I always loved the statement that during various moments of the Master's life He seemed to be 'beside Himself.' To me, that meant He had no desire in the outcome of any event. He could remain still to allow Father to commune with Him and yet, He was observant of every situation. He always made an effort to take in the entire scenario of what was really happening.

In the Master's ministry there was not time to dwell on continuous self-chastisement – as if that is some sort of self-sacrifice and atonement to Father, no! The ministry went on; even with all the bumps on the road it always moved forward.

This week, think about for yourselves what it means to be 'beside yourself.' How can the desires of the past not affect the decisions of today? What is 're-centering in mind' for you? What is the difference in being truly humble and simply appearing to be humble? What is 'reality' for you, and how are you different therein?

That is all. This evening I shall bid you farewell. From myself and Abraham, go in peace. Know that you are capable of having answers to any question. Shalom.

Serving Without Feeling A Need To Control | Daily Connection With Father Helps for Calm Daily Living

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-03-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I love coming to this meeting each week. I much enjoy hearing you discuss the real issues and yet keep it all in perspective with humor and practicality. Well done.

I am also inspired by the fact that you each come to serve in some capacity for no thought of reward. You have seemingly very little expectations – and that makes it easier for me to put across my real meaning. Your interest here is truly ‘what is good for the whole.’ Your souls are fed, and that is because you are open to the Father’s will. You, Correcting Time participants, will not ever be set upon a stage in front of all to receive any kind of trophy or award – you know that! and yet, you stay the course; you embrace reality as it comes.

We do notice however, there are comfort levels in this group that seem to not travel with you throughout the week; and, there are temptations to push personal agenda. This is not to bring guilt, but simply to bring awareness. Anxiety brings chaos and discomfort – it is certainly detrimental to the spiritual connections to the mortal mind. A general feeling of well-being is adequate to help one to be open to change and spiritual guidance. These well-balanced comfort levels apply to most areas of mortal living. Some days you are ‘in the flow,’ and some days you are not – this is common and to be expected.

I am simply suggesting that the more simple your material life, the less anxiety you will have. There are live connections in the brain that are most effective without becoming caught up in the drama of life. One who has their priorities in focus is able to feel less chaos and receive step-by-step instructions on how to achieve particular goals. Are your goals in line with Father’s? Only you can answer.

One who is doing their best moment by moment, without desire to see any outcome or receive some benefit, is probably most likely to live a life less chaotic. And I speak not of ‘gaining entrance into the heavens,’ but simply the living of your day to day mortal life spiritually as the Master himself had lived. To maintain this balanced living, it is necessary at least once a day to find time to settle the soul or feed the spirit.

Yes, the Master was the embodiment of efficiency without being controlling. He had not need to control events of His life in order to feed His soul, to feel valued, no! His primary focus was to do His job that He was sent to do – that being, living out the Father’s will. He was unshakable in attitude and faith – and much of that was due to His promise to serve the ‘One God.’ It was His desire to be about the Father’s business, in whatever form that came in. In that focus, He was able to maintain strength in character and spirit.

A great deal of the mortal life is about gaining self-mastery and overcoming weakness. A pure connection to Father is key. 'Pure connection,' meaning without ulterior motives; to stay the course without fear; to love without worry of loss; to live each day as if it were the last.

Our lesson is short this evening. Go into this week with thoughts of what your priorities seem to be. Where is your focus? Can you take the comfort-level that you feel here out into the material world? How can we best be of service without the need to control? How much do we worry about how our actions reflect who we truly are to other people? Allow a small frame of time to feed the soul, to make those connections that lead you to live your best life.

My love is ever increasing for you each. Until next week, shalom.

There Is Plan And Purpose In All Things, Even In Our Mistakes
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 10-10-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying the spirit here this evening. I am realizing we have opportunities in this fellowship that are quite nourishing to the soul. The mortal mind can long for a great many desires and have an emptiness that seems to go unfulfilled. In our fellowship, once we have set aside personal agenda, we can find fulfillment that seems not possible in the material world.

I am MARY. I am once again honored to be set side by side with you, my brothers and sisters. I am in understanding of this evening's lesson. By being here, Abraham is providing me opportunity to learn as I make effort to teach.

As many of you know, I did not grow up in a well-balanced family. I had longing for personal connections that seemed not to be possible in my particular lifetime. As my eyes opened to the spiritual realm, I found myself finding fulfillment that I had not planned on. With the women apostles, I had learned what it was to be a real sister, a true friend, a good daughter, and a caring mother. I had not the traditional family and yet, I gained the experience that provided real meaning and the fulfillment that I had long sought after.

Experiencing the ministry with my sisters was not always such a comfort, nor was it joy-filled. It was the real problems we worked through in everyday life that brought me closer to the fulfillment of having a real family. There were some hurt feelings, jealousies, general spirit poisons – and yet, our commitment to stay the course was what brought us spiritual value.

It is written: "Every day a true believer lives, he finds it easier to do the right thing." Many days in our ministry it was hellacious, so to speak. Not only did we need to learn to deal with one another in a work-setting, but also did we have the issues of the ministry and learning to work with other people we were serving. There were stressful days, yes, and yet we clung to the promise that 'Father goes before us.' We took the Master's words to heart when he said: "My kingdom is not of this world."

Most of your greater challenges are something you can't quite label or define, but the experience of it creates memory that is a vault for meanings and values. I made a great many mistakes in the ministry – and this is to be expected in any mortal life. The difference was that Jesus did not allow us to dwell in the spirit poisons of mistakes, but to reap the benefit of being educated from them. I give you back to Abraham.

ABRAHAM: It does bring a certain amount of peace when you can believe there is plan and purpose to all things. The world is learning that the importance of mortal life goes beyond man's written laws. Intuition has become as important as some of the other common fruits of the spirit. As we dwell in this highly sensitive time, we are learning to rely more upon guidance from those we cannot really see or hear.

Spiritual experience is bringing us to a stage of maturity that drives us to do the right thing – to think about how our actions affect others, and to perhaps not be so self-absorbed. Every mortal has their somewhat disguised 'quest within' for certain longings. And as we learn that faith is an energy, we can find 'through experience' that Father provides fulfillment. This is peace-promoting. This is calming to the soul.

With all the chaos in the world at this time, let us make effort this week to promote peace within. Inner peace is clearing to the mind and opening it to spiritual guidance. You are not small children in the dark room of the unknown, no; you have seen beyond what the mortal eyes can see, and this is strengthening the muscles of faith, every day.

That is all. Know that I am grateful to my teaching assistant, Mary, for her beautiful words of experience; and to you, my participants and you risk takers, who dare to live life to the fullest. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Overcoming Our Need To Control Through Increasing Faith and Love. Where Is Your Evidence of Faith

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-17-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I like what you have done with your evening. I appreciate your topics of everyday living. One of the greatest mortal purposes is to integrate the spiritual into the material. I really have enjoyed your feedback. I see you here as having concern without trying to control. When you have discussion, rarely do any of you have thoughts on 'how will this affect me?' You are genuinely concerned for one another and keep possibilities open for Father's will to flow throughout the group. Yes, I am enjoying the dynamics of it all.

You know, the more attachment you have to something or someone, there is more of a likelihood to have self-concern and to wonder how things will personally affect you. The more attachment we have, the higher tendency to have need to control. I am not saying have no attachments – that is unrealistic in a highly emotional world; I am talking more about allowing a natural flow of Father's will in everyday living, just as you do here with one another.

Love has become a strange concept over these many years, and has become associated with 'attachment' and/or 'self-preservation.' True and real love, like faith, is an energy – an energy that is meant to move without fear. When mortals become more secure in faith, love becomes a source of joy – not pain nor attachment. As we feel more connected to the kingdom, we are conscious of others as 'a part of the whole' – not others as 'a part of us personally.'

Growing older in years has its advantages; petty difficulties are left by the wayside and those things true, beautiful, and good rise to the top. Still, there is a definite mindal adjustment needed that helps you to see you are an equal part with the whole – not more, not less. This kind of security must grow through experience, needless to say. As children, we are depending upon others to care for us. As adults, we are recognizing our independence; and as such maturing spirits, we are seeing our responsibility to serve and to be an integral part of the whole.

My whole point of this evening's lesson is to look at our pattern to 'control' and how it makes mortals miserable. The need to control mostly comes from fear of personal pain. Certainly, mistrust in our divine caretakers is not at all useful. I know it is difficult to live with agondonter status; yes, it takes effort to 'believe without seeing.' Those of you who have chosen to live a Spirit-led life do gain experience in order to have that security, which makes you feel at ease to allow a free-flow of Father's will.

As we think about our need to control situations or people, let us look at the root of this driving force. Let us get down to the very cause of the fearful state. Have you faith? Then why have fear? Either you trust the Celestial Caretakers or you don't. Either way it matters not in the long-run, for experience is your best teacher and the open-minded spirit will learn the truth one way or another.

This week, when situations appear chaotic and you have need to force order from your own perspective, think about that free-flowing will of Father and how you can help it move instead of fearfully blocking it with your own seemingly good intentions to control.

In this life, what have we to lose? What does your faith conclude your destiny to be? What are some steps you can take to get to the root cause of fear and to find the meanings and values that produce love? The secure child does not cry out for attention, but accepts their role in the family, happily. My fellows, we are safe and secured within the kingdom of heaven.

That is all. Know that I am honored to serve with you. Know that I am learning alongside you. I thank you for your willingness to be a part of my experience. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Knowing Jesus Helps Towards Self-Mastery | His Banner Sits High In A Cloudless Sky
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 10-31-2005

Back

[Honoray, a long-time member of this Woods Cross Teaching Mission group, had passed away this week from natural elderly age complications.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying your good-natured attitudes this evening.

While this night has been known for its superstition, your humor has brought it to a level of common sense.

We can see down through the centuries how many superstitions were allowed to fade away while the truth of everyday living was more fully embraced. It takes the living of life to gain spiritual benefits, as well as evolutionary ones. Lessons learned from one generation are passed down to the next; and while erroneous thinking may filter through – personal experience, for the most part, builds a springboard to a better age.

This evening you bid farewell to an old friend, our sister Honoray. I am in appreciation of her introspective ideas and willingness to embrace change rather than hold to binding traditions. Just as each of you, you are not burdened by old traditional beliefs but are embracing what you have learned so far, with enthusiasm for even greater possibilities ahead. As our sister knew all too well, pain in the mortal life can be overwhelming. Father has given you one another – to bring balance to living and solace through the pains of mortality.

As this Teaching Mission progresses, we will see weak points here and there in the overall structure. It is our fellowship, however, that is our true strength. It is difficult in the everyday world to be your true self with a mindset of having 'character flaws that no one else has or can understand.'

Yes, our gratitude to Father for giving us one another here in these small groups, for here we can set aside personal judgment of oneself in favor of 'brotherhood interaction' and sharing of our true selves. It is common knowledge that you each would help one another, and even bend over backward to do so if need be. This, an open brotherhood interaction, is crucial to learn in our Mission experience; it brings us a step closer to Light and Life.

I am MARY. I am grateful to be among you, to see the best in you, to see your true character, your humor, your various perspectives. I do love learning about you.

Along the lines of Abraham's discussion: I for one, am grateful to those I worked side by side with while dwelling in the mortal body. Those who knew and loved me then, always did what they could to help me become better. They wanted for my happiness and success, as I also wanted for theirs. Those who judged me, however, made me feel small and useless.

I thank God for the Master's ministry, for He made me realize my true worth as a child of God and as a cosmic citizen. Knowing Jesus – learning from Him and experiencing the ministry – made me lean more toward self-mastery. I felt no more as 'an imbalanced struggling mortal,' no! but 'a learning child who was indeed advancing;' slowly, yes, but still, advancing.

Many experiences in life appear to be barriers to what you feel your goals are. I can say now that these barriers are most definitely our key to spiritual advancement. It is those things you can't really touch, see, or feel that will be most perplexing. This is understood; and yet, it is these very things that are always exercising our mind to advance or to become more; yes, to evolve.

This Mission is an anchor in the stormy seas of mortal living. It is a gift for all who participate. Life is really not so much about 'winning the race' as it is 'learning how to carry on in the face of any obstacle.' Know that we are very appreciative of your efforts to carry on with blind faith. Myself and Abraham do know the struggles of mortal life. Know that we both believe you are doing well in helping us to progress in the Master's cause.

That is all for the evening. Know that we will all meet again in our brotherhood interaction; and in the meantime, have not worry. Make effort to see those individuals you come across in the same light as you see one another here – after all, we are riding out the stormy seas together. Know that Michael's banner is set high in a cloudless sky. From Abraham and myself, we bid you farewell and shalom.

Our Universe Mother's Influence Upon Michael, And Upon Us
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-07-2005
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a fine example of fellowship this evening. It is wonderful to see the positive influence you have over one another. Whether you realize it or not, you literally put yourselves in Father's hands the moment you step through the door to this meeting; it has become an unconscious decision, really. You have grown accustomed to me as much as I have to you, and our comfort levels are exceeding each week we meet. I am growing in gratitude for this opportunity.

As we become more aligned in choosing the Father's will, we are given spiritual gifts that help all to progress toward Light and Life. This is a spiritual power and not of this world; it is an ability given to us directly from the Father, yes, while the skills of this ability are influenced by our Mother. [Editor's note: This reference to Mother has nothing to do with Mother Mary, nor any other earthly mortal, but is our Universe Co-Creator Mother.]

I am MARY. Again I am feeling the excitement of new possibilities, and again amazed at Father's network of caring individuals.

One thing that I have been somewhat surprised by when I passed from your world to the next is how much I learned that Michael – our Sovereign/Creator, Jesus, the carpenter of Galilee, the man, the minister, the Brother/Father, worker in the world and in the kingdom of heaven – was influenced by our Mother Spirit.

As I witnessed the Master at work, I was indeed blessed to see His unending grace, His charm, His intelligence, His willingness to be patient. Our Mother and Her mind-spirits have been at work in this Correcting Time bestowing upon its participants the beauty of grace. Grace is setting aside personal need in favor of embracing the unknown; it is allowing time and space to have a place in what seems to be the mundane, repetitive, ordinary, and/or even – the annoying.

Mother teaches us to allow for evolution. She patiently waits for specific instructions from Father while being in the motion (or moment) of time and space. Think about today's world of over-stimulation – rarely is there allowed any time for nothingness or dead-air space. Mortals are made to feel they must always 'keep the ball rolling,' Mother's grace teaches us to be aware of the needs of the moment, yes, She is watchful.

Does Mother desire an ultimate good? of course! Does She assert Her personal will to see that it is the outcome She wants? of course not! for She well knows that there are universal inter-workings that are incorporated into Father's plan and purpose that even She is not aware of - She knows She doesn't have to be! Mother has complete trust, and knows that a great deal depends upon Her willingness to be observant, to be open to any situation, to be able to delegate tasks and allow for time and space in the 'spur of the moment.' That, is grace. That, is universal cooperation and power.

Being a woman in your world I was not aware of the influence by our Mother Spirit - it was not evolutionarily a time for me to know this. You, as Urantian citizens are just now finding out the importance of Mother's influence as pertains to service and incorporating the needs of the whole as opposed to selfish desires.

With many mortal ideals understandingly being geared toward the male perspective, it is the Master's hope that each spirit-born child also realizes the influence Mother had upon Him during His days in the flesh. And now even more importantly, He wants for our knowledge of Her grace and how She uses it to take care of the whole.

One who practices grace in everyday living can tenderly tend to one individual while seeing beyond that individual - encompassing the broadened perspective, and being open to specific instructions from a network of universal assistants. Grace is allowing for time and space; it is trusting in Father while being willing to serve in any capacity.

The world is always in a state of constant change, and this change is only a small part of the Grand Universe and its' constant change. As such, we are set for a new and better age. As we embrace our tasks in this time of correction, let us remember our Mother, who serves without ceasing. It is simple, and yet with a great deal of power, that evolution is happening - and you, my friends, are helping.

I am informed we will take questions next week. Until then, I am to bid you farewell with love and grace. Until next time, shalom.

There Is Meaning And Value To Practically Any Circumstance

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-14-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying the harmony among the like-minds this evening. I take joy in watching your excitement as you gather to discuss issues in mortal living. As your comfort levels grow with one another you are finding more freedom to speak your true thoughts. As I gaze around the room this evening, I cannot say that even one of you have had a typical or traditional background. Your unique experiences have made you into the unique persons you are today.

I am finding among Urantian citizens that there is a deep-set disappointment at having not experienced the life that your society defines as traditional. There is a great deal of guilt among people who seem to stray from the well-known well-worn path.

To many, 'unique experience' is another term for failure, and they use this so-called shortcoming as a reason to blame all of their poor decision-making on. The time is coming where individuals will be valued for their ability to endure in any circumstance.

I am MARY. I can relate with this evening's topic very well. I had not the typically respected lifestyle. I was however, a survivor! and used what skills I had to get by. As I received training from the Master's ministry, of course I was able to withdraw the meanings and values out of my unique experience. I no longer needed to have regret over my so-called misfortunate upbringing and I found it useless to continually chastise my poor decision-making abilities.

Experience in the ministry taught me that no one person will be able to pour their life into a set mold and have it turn out to be what they have termed as perfect – such is life on an evolutionary planet; there is not a perfect path or completely prearranged plan. Your agondonter status gives you free rein to make choices according to your own understanding and in your own time. I learned personally that what appeared to be my scars from life were, in actuality, a creation of who I was becoming.

Society can be so judgmental and harsh with those who fit not the righteous criteria. You Mission participants are well trained to show acceptance and compassion to anyone – their lifestyle, their personal circumstances; and most importantly, that each person is a child of the Father and is valued beyond human measure. As we deal with individuals in our life, let us make that abundantly clear.

In today's world there are no perfect chosen paths; there is meaning and value to practically any circumstance. The Teaching Mission's ministry is a wonderful foundation to plant the seeds of diversity. This week, let us ponder our own seemingly non-traditional life experience – how have you allowed that to shape you as a mortal and cosmic citizen? I give you back to Abraham for questions.

I am ABRAHAM. Proceed with any questions you may have.

CALVIN: Thank you both for our lesson this evening. I was wondering this week, are you encouraged by the events going on in the Middle East? [Inaudible.]

ABRAHAM: I really have no personal opinion or desire for outcome in one way or another. It is what it is! I have learned by now that traditions are deep-set in the Middle East; and evolution there, is slow. However, I am encouraged by Father and His ability to reach even the coldest of hearts. As He comes at this situation from all directions, we are hopeful that the eyes of the people will be opened. When I speak of 'directions' and 'Father's influence,' I am meaning, equality among the people – women, children, the elderly, religions, classes and status among the wealthy and the poor. Yes, spiritual roots will take hold in many different areas, and this is the hope of change ahead. When people have hurt long enough there is a tendency to find surrender, and in this surrendering, there is clearing of the mind and searching in the heart. Good question, Calvin. One more question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I have been quite involved this week with some friends of mine in their plight against leukemia. Do you have any guidance?

ABRAHAM: I am in understanding of your compassion for these people. Many times when we are witness to other's hardship we are made to turn inward and wonder if we, ourselves, could endure such ordeals. I am in understanding. I would suggest to continue doing what you are doing – being there, being a friend, having them know you are available. Many times those that are in real need simply need an understanding ear – you are well gifted in this area. Have not worry about helping them to go in one direction or another. The sharing of your experience provides a great deal of inspiration. That is all.

My connection is growing weak. I would thank each one of you for your dedication, your open hearts, and your welcoming attitudes. In all sincerity, my love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Rise Above The Pressures Of Life That Would Have Us Conform To Meaninglessness

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-21-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is apparent that you each put your best foot forward in coming to these meetings; you emanate a peaceful attitude. I am noticing the wisdom you have gained over the years. I enjoy the balance in this group – not one is above another. Your diversity brings wisdom in all forms. You embrace that part of one another that is mortal, and I believe that the Master helped one and all to advance by doing the same.

Every mortal is going to have just as much experience as they will allow. In your youth, there was a great deal of excitement and new possibilities. As you grew, you realized every mortal must experience certain inevitabilities to advance – to 'pay their dues,' so to speak. Peace comes not without some hard work.

It is an honor for me to work side by side with those who make a great deal of effort in life's challenges. I must make clear that I do enjoy some traditions – the familial mostly, such as is this time of year with your Thanksgiving holiday – because of the love produced therefrom. This evening I would say a few words on 'tradition' and those who feel trapped into carrying it on.

I believe that 'escape' in today's society has become very popular because there is so much pressure to conform to what society defines as 'acceptable.' Escape comes in many forms, as many of you well know. It would appear that the child that conforms is accepted and good while the child that bends the rules is problematic and in need of discipline.

You that are involved in this Correcting Time still know not fully of your spiritual freedom; there are remnants of tradition that keep you bound and cause confusion. I believe that as you become more spiritual your priorities increasingly lie with the Father of all fathers, while acceptance in other norms becomes increasingly meaningless.

I realize that I myself am a creature of habit, and change is a bit difficult even for me now. As mortals, you all have laws you must abide by, of course. But as far as 'a society,' with all its culture and status, its traditions do not apply to conforming to law. One needs not feel trapped in certain circumstances because of what they fear societal repercussions may bring. Urantia is becoming a new world. Mortals are learning to trust their intuition a bit more. You each have the power to change small things for the better.

Mostly my focus this evening is about one's feeling unnecessary pressure to live up to someone else's ideals. Your close connection with Father is a great relief from that pressure. It is acceptable to involve Father in every moment of every day - there is nothing too trivial. This life is a fantastic adventure and with a great deal of value; it should be treasured, not merely endured.

The Master made small changes by ministering 'as He passed by.' He was not pressured so much to conform, but certainly did He abide by the laws of that day. The Master sought not escape at any time and was fully committed to drinking the cup that was offered to Him. Did He make the best of bad situations? He did! and He wholly enjoyed it; it was not work. Jesus' closeness with His Father did indeed give Him an upper hand with His fellows; He savored life. He knew very well whom He served.

This week, I would suggest that we consider those pressures of life that would have us conform to traditions' meaninglessness. What is considered a healthy escape from conformity for spiritual rest in your life?

That is all. Mary will be with us next week and sends her regards. Know that I am with exceeding love for you each. Until next time, shalom.

Father Can Show Us The Value In All Our Past Experience, Good And Bad
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-28-2005
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I love this evening's group attitude. Your energy is indeed a driving force. I am blessed to have an overall picture of how you each touch the lives of those you know. 'Family' has gone beyond biological borders. You are each helping to set an example of embracing every individual as a part of the kingdom as a whole.

I am always inspired by the Master's stories because He truly lived in each moment; He was not stuck in regret over the past nor was He anxiety-ridden over things to come. The Master learned useful skills from His journey in the mortal life, but still He went into every new situation with no expectations.

Jesus' heart and mind were always open to new possibilities and messages Father may have to impart to Him, such as new understandings of human nature; or more experience that helped Him to complete His mission bestowal which gained Him His sovereignty. All things were new with the Master.

I am MARY. It is wonderful to be among you this evening and in such high spirits. I can see why Abraham is filled with such excitement and anticipation of this weekly meeting.

From time to time I still have some regret over my experience in the flesh. I still feel sorrow sometimes at having been a seemingly slow learner. How grateful am I to have worked with the Master, who embraced every individual regardless of who they were, or what they had done or not done. To the Master, people were not labeled or set with certain limitations; they were simply children of God.

When I had met the Master, I was not at the top of my game, so to speak; I was uneducated and felt trapped in a life I had never wanted. Jesus was instrumental in showing me how to bring forth the value from all my experience. Because I was a battered woman, I knew well how to deal with other women looking to have healing. Because I was a neglected child, I had a special bond with children and knew just the right words to make them feel included.

Jesus really showed me how to quit feeling sorry for myself for what seemed lost, and to take hold of the 'here and now.' I had to overcome my regret through self-forgetfulness and allow my experiences to unfold in due time - and when it was right, I had understood the value therein.

When Abraham had spoken last week on 'tradition' and feeling the pressure to live up to societies' ideals of success, I believe in a way, he was speaking about what can be seen by the material eyes instead of the spiritual.

Those things that are valued in today's society are highly materialistic, and much is dependent on how things 'look.' A man who is wearing a three-piece suit is more likely to get a job than a man who is un-kept. Someone who is educated is more likely to be trusted than someone who is spiritual. A mother, for example, is looked upon to be more valuable if she 'does it all' - to hold a full-time job and raise children. These, I say, are the pressures that stifle growth.

We can look back over our experience with disappointment and be confused over where we are going. Or, we can be as the Master was, living truly in the here and now. There is value in all our experience, yes, and Father does use it to further His ministry. Some of you are experts at certain things in life - not because you have had earthly education, but because you have lived it firsthand. No one mortal is qualified to define the success of another - that definitely is not helping in the growth of anyone.

Having lived the life that I had, it made it extremely difficult for me to be judgmental of others - which helped in my ability to be able to minister. There is definitely a certain humility I had learned which gave me the capability of having compassion for others - such as those that seemed to be trapped by their circumstances or poor choices. The Master showed me that my willingness to overcome my regret and self-pity had propelled me to live in the here and now, which enabled Father to reach me with certain instructions that were needed in my ministering.

Urantia is moving forward. There are choices people must make to accept the past and simply learn from it, and then move on and do better. Dwelling over regret of the past is in no way an atonement for it - it is not helping anyone to advance; and, it is not helping in the connection we should have with Father.

Life is what it is, yes! we are in the here and now! It is important to have an open mind and heart to receive Father's guidance. I am especially grateful for the Master's humor which brought me out of my self-pity and into my true potential.

Again, you each know what you must do to live a balanced life. This week, find time to have a moment alone with the Master. Allow a bit of time to review your past and see the good therefrom. Ask Father what value He would make out of your life experience thus far. How has your life experience given you the skills to minister to others today?

That is all. Know that Abraham and myself are with continuing gratitude for your dedication and willingness to serve in any capacity. Until next time, shalom.

Our Relationships Are Bridges That Have Real Energy

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-05-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying your discussion on visions of reality. Our freedom is the beautiful thing about our Mission; anything is possible, and yet we always attempt to remain somewhat grounded and practical.

Witnessing our accounts of Father's fingerprints in our lives, however many, is indeed a boost to our faith levels. We each can learn so much from sharing, and also from listening. It is important that people have a voice and know they are well worth being heard.

In the busyness of mortal life, we can overlook small but important aspects of our ministry. Most of our impact on others comes from how we actually live our lives. We can be quite philosophical and seemingly God-like one moment - and in the next, our actions can show something completely opposite of that. One thing we can count on is that we will influence individuals along our path. As well, we will be influenced.

It is written: "This world is simply a bridge to the next." We can also say that in this life we will build many bridges. A bridge is a connection to be traversed - utilized as a go-between, not a place to stop and build. Your relationships are bridges that have real energy. As we progress in our Mission, we are finding more importance in building these bridges and making connections. Like the Master, we strive to do good 'as we pass by.'

Some connections are lifelong, while some fade away. The importance of our ministry today is that we are building and making connections, and bringing healing or spiritual aid. I do realize that many bridges are burned along the way with misunderstanding and harsh feelings. I can recognize quite a few in my own mortal experience. The beauty of our ministry is that we need not have worry over those bridges burned, but know that 'with Father, all things are possible,' even the rebuilding of seemingly lost connections.

As we ponder the Master's technique of bridge-building we see His genuine interest He had for others; He made them feel valued by His willingness to listen to what they were really saying. He was not concerned with their opinions of Him personally, but took great interest in who they were and what they were about. We can see early on in His ministry that He made great effort to meet many individuals and leave them with some positive impact – not about Himself but about doing good and passing it on to others.

In our efforts to move toward Light and Life we are finding our connections to have a living energy. Life is becoming more valuable to those who strive to mature spiritually. Yes, the world does appear to promote confusion where self-worth is skewed, ego is seemingly a master, and self-discipline harder to come by.

Therefore, as we minister to others in this Correcting Time, it is important to make others feel valued – genuinely, by treating every individual 'equally' just as the Master had. No one person is too small or not worth a few moments to make eye contact. No one person is so important or beyond the possibilities of our ministry. The brotherhood is alive with connections and is helping to create an energy that will usher the world into Light and Life.

This week, be observant of your connections with individuals. Remember that we always have something to learn, as well as teach. There is always a message to receive, as well as impart. We can know that kindness may be lost along the wayside, but harsh words are never forgotten. We would do well to be conscious of our contact with Father, especially when in dramatic circumstances. For this holiday season, let us be conscious of the brotherhood for bridge-building and fellowship.

That is all. Know that I am with continuing gratitude for your willingness to be patient and allow the Father's will to unfold as it will. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Mission Participants Are Unifiers Among The Differing Personalities | Peter and Andrew

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-12-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I am enjoying the clarity of this evening. You are touching upon worship and gratitude while discussing the everyday realities of life; this is advancement! Many individuals continuously question their purpose for living and are constantly seeking the key to true happiness. As the soul matures, we find Father's technique of imparting to us the definitions of meanings and values to be quite inspiring and joy-filled.

I am MARY. Greetings friends. I do find each new day overflowing with possibilities. I do remember a time however, that my existence seemed to be one of unending drudgery. I always hoped for a new and better way of life, but never really believed it would come to pass.

I was always inspired by the Master and His associates, especially Peter. While Peter seemed so willing to do any and all things for the cause, he had not much thought about how foolish he may look. Certainly he was chastised from time to time by the Master; but still, he reasoned within himself that the discipline was about becoming better, not about being ashamed.

The Master found Peter to be with great humor and a personality that could rebound from most situations. Peter did enjoy those mission tasks that would put him in the limelight, yes; and at the same time, he struggled within himself to remember what was most important – and at that time it was the Master's ministry and the growth of the kingdom.

While Peter was somewhat flighty, and even a risk taker, I found the contrasting personality of his brother Andrew to be grounding and filled with strength. Andrew was the embodiment of common sense and responsibility. He helped Peter to be focused in his mission tasks. As well, Peter helped Andrew to lighten up and enjoy life.

When we ponder the diversity of the apostles, we can see how each one was gifted in a particular area. Each one brought balance to the mission. I believe that their greatest challenge was their efforts made to work with each other. The Master well knew of their various conflicts, and yet He would keep silent so the men could work through their experience and gain the value therefrom.

In today's world it seems that there is more 'competition' than there is 'teamwork.' It is difficult to unify in what seems to be a 'dog-eat-dog' world. I see that as part of your mission tasks – you are unifiers among the differing personalities; you are each gifted at finding a common thread from which to build upon.

As we realize how massive our kingdom is, we can see each person as brother or sister. We all know that family members love one another, come what may – and those that you truly love, you are more likely to protect. 'Protect' meaning being honest, and advising one for their own good, not yours – to be an inspiration and a source of encouragement.

Again this week, we are focusing on the theme of the brotherhood/sisterhood, what have you. We are all children of a glorious Father. We all have a place within the universal scheme.

This week – if there is time, read about the relationship among the apostles; there was good and bad, there was supposed to be. Also, can you think of a person living today who is particularly inspirational in their example of how to treat others, and who is a genuine brother or sister in the kingdom?

That is all for this evening. Know that I am also available to you throughout the week should you have need of me. From Abraham and myself, I send you with love and farewell. Until next time, shalom. [Editor's note: Per the assignment for the week: here is a link to some examples of Jesus' interaction with the apostles, both the positive and the challenging times.]

Michael Is That Well Of Unending Spiritual Energy That Goes Before Us
Abraham & Christ Michael, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-19-2005

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am also with gratitude to dip my cup into this endless well of love and strength. This time of year on your world has led me to ponder about generosity and good will. It would seem that those who have an abundance do give freely, while those that feel they must be cautious tend to be closed-off. Each of you knows by now that spirituality is an abundant well that never runs dry.

We can feel the Spirit to literally be an energy; the more effort we make to align with the Father's will, the more energy that seems to fuel our minds, bodies, and spirits. It would seem that being progressive is of great priority in the mortal life. Progress comes in many forms to many individuals. Once we are well into understanding true meanings and values, we find out the true definition of progress.

Last week, Mary suggested that you think of an individual who is particularly inspiring, 'come what may.' When we look at these inspiring individuals, they seem to be with unstoppable energy. Sure, there are disappointments, even bitter and painful memories; but in these individuals there is an understanding that no matter what happens they are to keep on trying, to keep hope, faith and love, alive.

These inspiring individuals are the individuals who know of that well of unending spiritual energy - they don't hold back; there is always plenty; they are always in a generous and giving mode. Those who are in this generous mindset are in understanding of true meanings and values - they give of their time to others; they love to bring laughter; they show their concern for others by listening. Yes, there is peace in such an accepting individual.

I am MICHAEL. I would bring you the message that I am joy-filled to be a part of that endless well of love and strength. You know I go before you. It is my desire to help this world into a new and better age. I am with understanding that many moments of mortal living can be so difficult and discouraging; and I can promise you that I am in every moment; I understand every tear. I am in that energy you feel in the generosity of spirit. I would have you feel comfort in your ability to carry on and help the kingdom to flourish with what is truly meaningful and valuable.

This is the time on Urantia when many think of me as that helpless babe some two-thousand years ago. I am grateful that in this Correcting Time I am seen as a driving force for truth, beauty, and goodness. Again, I go before you. I love you. Carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. Thanks to our Brother/Father for His words of encouragement. For this week, let us ponder that driving force that goes before us. You have all the help you will ever need. Take comfort in that. Until next time, shalom.

Find Peace In Letting Go And Allowing Father's Wisdom To Guide
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-26-2005
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am grateful to be in your family setting this evening. I thank you for staying the course focusing on Father's goals instead of personal agenda. I realize every individual has expectations of what 'right' looks like, and of course that differs with each person. I just wanted to thank you for always having consideration of allowing Father's will to become reality.

Many times in our spiritual thinking, we can become quite focused on the goal and overlook the small steps it takes to achieve the goal; this is always a cause for frustration and a loss in personal confidence. Mortals are impatient, and this is to be expected. As we attain self-mastery, we can find our 'patience levels' to increase. For the most part, we must strive for forbearance in our frustrations.

I am MARY. My gratitude is also with you. Years back we could not have forecasted such a future as is here now on Urantia. Many of your worldly events were simple outworkings of nature; and yes, some were caused by man's greed. Some events were simply the result of a build-up of negative or positive thoughts released into the cosmic mind. You know that thoughts have power, and we should certainly be grateful that Father in His wisdom, has even greater power.

We 'live and learn,' yes, and what the peoples of Urantia have learned so far has been indeed a slow ongoing lesson; nevertheless, most of civilized society has seen how you reap what you sow. I think as time moves forward you will find that fear has not the influence it once did. The more trust you have in those 'on high,' the more comfort you have within, and certainly a stronger link to the cosmic mind - the overall workings of the universe.

During this time of year, many mortals think about the woman who gave birth to the child of promise some two-thousand years ago, also named Mary. I think about the great task entrusted to her and her expectations of what was to come into reality. Certainly, this well-intentioned mother of Jesus did her utmost to bring about what she thought was to come into fruition in raising this child of promise. Many times Mary's expectations were dashed, along with her hopes and dreams for her eldest child.

Mary had been known to have motherly influence over her son in both positive and negative ways, yes. But Jesus, early on, had made a commitment to stay the course of the Father's will, even though it may cause some pain, some heartache. I do believe that after time, the mother of Jesus had come to grips with her child's destiny. It took many years of self-reconciliation to know that she could let go and trust her son to do what He was destined to do.

You can see that Mary had possibly magnified her importance in this task of raising the man who was to change the world. This was of course understood, and again another example of how Father's tasks are not as difficult as we can build them up in our minds to be.

I was not a mother, but I do understand now how a parent can believe their child is indeed a reflection of themselves. At some point, the parent must let go and trust that the child has all they will need to make it in the world on their own.

Father understands that you have honorable intentions - He knows the mortal mind through and through and condemns it not. This life in the flesh is simply a short lesson on how to progress to the next phase of our eternal career.

For the most part, Mary, earthly mother to the Master, stayed the course. She indeed met with some hardships and really had done the best she could. I admire her strength and know of her struggle to allow Father's will to be made manifest. At some point in this life we will all understand from our own experience of Mary's strength to let go of her expectations; yes, to allow for Father's plan and to become a living example.

I know you each also have the best of intentions and ask for closeness to the Father in heaven. The way you may become close with Father is probably not what you expect, but certainly will there be a self-reconciliation that you will have to address; this is typical and required so that you may advance, so that you may become closer to attaining self-mastery.

This time of year is also one where many mortals seek to make resolutions and strive for a better way of living. I would think that the best resolution one could strive for is to find peace in 'letting go,' and trusting in Father's wisdom and ability to bring forth what is supposed to be.

This week, let us find time to ponder the peace we have in Father. How wonderful it is to rest in His arms. How rejuvenated we are when we lean on Him and know that the problems of the world rests not on our shoulders.

That is all for this evening. I am so honored to serve with you and Abraham in this Correcting Time. Our love goes with you. Shalom.

A Wake-Up Call To The Power Of The Living God
Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-02-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying the mood here this evening. I like the fact that you question everything. I like the fact that you are each somewhat opinionated. It is admirable that you care enough about the Father's will to do some research. I am also inspired by your willingness to welcome change.

As I look at each face here this evening I am impressed by the diversity of our group. We each all come from very different backgrounds and yet we are able to create a peace that surpasses all understanding. This Correcting Time is truly universal and I find the Teaching Mission for the most part, to be setting a fine example.

As we go forward into this New Year, we can rest in the fact that all things true, will stay - while all things false, will fade away. I would thank the many individuals in the Teaching Mission who work behind the scenes for truth, beauty, and goodness. I would thank the many of you that find simple happiness in being 'a part of,' and not 'in charge of.'

I am EMULAN. Greetings, friends, I am glad to be back. I would have you know that our Mission is full speed ahead in spite of the naysayers. Father's will is reality. No matter what man's wish-fulfillment is, our Correcting Time is alive and busy with new projects. As Abraham said, this task is universal and involves many beings on many different levels.

The past few decades have been a wake-up call, so to speak. I do believe Urantia is still in the process of waking up and finding those issues that are truly meaningful and valuable.

I have been asked to join you this evening to discuss the power of the living God. Most of you know my history, and how I had gone through the process of being one of life's victims of tragedy, to discovering for myself how powerful Father really is. In my darkest days I was seemingly so alone and hopeless. Much of the time I thought life was to be a punishment, and I wanted no part of that.

Mentally, I chose to drop out of life's game; and in the mental downward spiral I do believe I had a wake-up call. It is unfortunate that many times mortals have to sink to their lowest to get a glimpse of what awaits them. Time seemed to be my enemy, and it appeared as though the darkness of my mortal despair would never end. I was like a child who throws a tantrum looking to have his way, and Father was the good parent who stayed the course for my own benefit.

When I was ready to meet with a new and better way, Father was there showing me a new path, a new freedom so to speak. I came to realize I was not my past, nor was I locked into any victimization. I was not powerless! It only took time for me to stop my spirit poisons long enough to listen, to become a part of the solution, to become a co-creator with my Father.

When we look out over the Correcting Time we can see this wake-up call becoming evident, and finally admit we are in need of a higher mind, a new authority. We can see all over the Teaching Mission that these groups can work. Yes, if the small Mission-oriented groups can thrive, then certainly out among society can it also be successful.

I do believe most people are reaching for the higher meaning. In a lot of ways, we have seen what does not work and are ready for what does. Our Mission these past few years have been somewhat of a balancing act. We are letting Michael know that He has our attention and that we are ready to move forward with His plan.

I know for certain now, that Father always wanted for my happiness; and that life's accidents were not Father's way of getting my attention so I would be a submissive child. No, Father simply took the accidents of time and transformed them into meanings and values for my own growth.

You have each grown, individually; and this New Year will be a collective growth as a group. As Abraham has expressed before, I also do admire your willingness to stay the course under any circumstance. Your personal growth has also been a collective one. Remember this mortal life is to be joy-filled and savored, yes, because this mortal life will be your first and only experience at the bottom of what is to be a magnificent scaffolding to Paradise.

I am ABRAHAM. Thank you, to our brother and friend, Emulan. Your experience is indeed insightful and of benefit to us who know you.

This week, friends, find time to refresh your memory in what is the foundation of your faith – you know what I am referring to. It is indeed wonderful that we have one another, yes! It is wonderful that we can be a part of what is now, and what will be. Enjoy! Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Our Experience Is Our Teacher. In Those Dark Hours Stay The Course, Look For Meaning And Value

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-09-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I look forward to seeing you each week. I am feeling we have quite a family here. The influence you have on one another is positive and always lesson-filled. Our gratitude goes to Father for making this possible.

It is said that to have lived life with no adversity is the greatest adversity of all. To have had no affliction is to have very little or no spiritual progress. It is all a matter of perspective – you can view your life with self-pity; or, that your life is as a teacher who is transforming you, mentally and spiritually.

It is well understood that many older adults look back on their lives and are grateful for the wisdom they have gained; yet, they would never choose to go back and repeat those difficult lessons. Many times it is all too easy for the mature mortal to hypocritically chastise the youth when indeed there was a time when the mature mortal had the very same experience.

While it would appear that the youth are less experienced and somewhat less wise, they certainly bring new life and a new outlook to the world of today. On the other hand, we each know of more mature individuals who have become better by experience, not bitter; they are with a glad heart to greet each new day.

Personally, I believe that peace and contentment is the goal of most individuals. It would seem the more you experience and strive to learn therefrom, the greater perspective you have on knowing the purpose of this mortal life. How you perceive change is key to taking in the greater meanings and values, and having the courage to move with grace and integrity.

How have our seeming so-called afflictions in life helped us to progress as a mortal and as a budding soul? It is said that to grow potatoes one can pray for success, but he had also better bring a shovel. [group laughter.] Father is more than willing to aid you in all your undertakings, and He wants for your success. We know that fear, or slothfulness, is an obstacle to our progression.

As you each mature in the spiritual life, you begin to understand that some hard work is necessary. Some willingness to endure any and all things is simply an advancement in understanding. I mean not to say that Father expects you to have a sunny disposition in your seemingly darkest hours, no! but merely the willingness to endure, stay the course, and look always for the meanings and values.

Many individuals have not much growth in their efforts and are made to complain about everything; they make not effort to be a willing co-creator or even to be a part of the solution. For such individuals, there seems to be only effort made to point out the negative – and believe me, they do draw energy from those who are not committed to being part of the solution, but are another aspect of the problem.

We involved in the Correcting Time, always have opportunity to point out a new and better way through our actions and truly living what we believe in. We cannot set the world upright in these beginning years of our Mission, but certainly we can all influence our little corner of the world.

This week, ponder how you have seen your experience – do you perceive it as ‘a good teacher?’ or merely ‘an exercise in luck.’ What are your efforts made to being knowledgeable. Are your thoughts and ponderings on the side of having an open perspective? or on the side of fear and unknowing.

Again, I am with gratitude and joy to you each for your willingness to stay the course and be who you really are. That is all. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom. [This lesson is a great example of those lessons and teachings we otherwise await to receive once we awaken on Mansion World One – according to the Urantia Book]

Build Faith By Keeping An Open And Honest Dialog With Father

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-16-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I can truly appreciate the faith each one of you have. You make effort to show up for the unknown. That is faith! Without faith, what holds meaning for you? Faith, to me, is everything, and always a reason to carry on. There are many things that occur in mortal life that would drag down your faith levels. It is important that every day we do what we can to remain strong in faith and fortitude.

I am MARY. I am happy to be among you, my friends. It is in your participation that our Mission continues to move forward. I enjoy the topic of faith, for it has been a strong foundation for which I could build upon. As a mortal, my personal experience had me believing that I could not trust my ability to make decisions or even live up to my highest light; I had learned early on that my status as a human being was not worth much.

As time moved forward for me and I was able to receive training as a worker in the kingdom, I realized that my faith level was the measure in which I could receive meanings and values. If I could believe without seeing, and live my life as such, then was I able to attain the fruits of the spirit and understand the meaning of mortal experience.

Without faith I could not find any reason to progress – I could not find any reason to carry on. With faith I found much of life’s meaning was in my service to others; I found real joy from fellowship and being of assistance to anyone. The more I was into spirit, the less I was into self. This definitely was a great source of joy and brought me an expanded relationship with the Father.

Service was indeed an exercise in faith. I also learned that to retain a strong faith I needed to have an open and honest dialogue with Father; my prayer-life had to become a priority. I don’t mean ‘set prayers’ at a certain time of day, no, but a constant observance for Father’s will and a questioning heart and mind for those adventurous meanings and values to be learned.

I did not easily realize that my adversities were such an exercise in strengthening faith and personal character. I learned from the Master that every time we were faced with adversity this would be some of our closest moments with Father. We could become 'soured' by certain experiences, or we could become 'empowered' - it's really all an exercise in faith.

As you move forward in the experience of faith you realize it is not so much an effort, but simply a natural part of life - it will happen without so much thinking. You each are doing well and always trying to put forth your best efforts in all things. Be not discouraged when it turns out that your best intentions, your expectations, were not really all that necessary; let us be open and observant of our Father's will.

I am ABRAHAM. Thank you, Mary, our sister and friend; your input in these lessons is greatly valued. This week, ponder what it takes to help your faith to remain strong and intact. What circumstances in daily living would chance to weaken your faith? What activities can you be proactive with to keep faith alive?

That is all this evening. Know that we appreciate all your efforts in keeping our family strong. We send our love with you. Until next time, shalom.

Life-Experience Is Geared To Bring Out Our Natural Talent, And Our Contribution to The Supreme

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-23-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a healing group of people we have here this evening. I am touched to see how faith has blossomed down through the generations to keep our cause alive. I find our faith to be so stable because it is not forced - it just is. How blessed are we to have this freedom and put it to good use in everyday living.

It has been an honor for me to know you and see you grow in spirit. It would do you well to know the vast personalities here on my side cheering you on, always hoping and praying for your advancement. It is a cause to rejoice when we can see Father bring about an ultimate good in any situation.

I am MARY. Greetings again, friends. I do believe this evening's topic is about life preparation. I know that many of us can look back on the difficulties of life and wish they had never happened. Many of us make effort every day to avoid trudging through the same difficulties over and over again.

We all know individuals who have become quite embittered over their personal experience, but those who attempt to live a life in the spirit realize that these difficulties were simply preparation (or training) for what is to come.

Everything that holds the spark of life, has purpose. Different universes have different goals, and each one is set up with a network of individuals to achieve these goals. You could say one of our collective goals (the Grand Universe) is to bring growth and actuality to the Supreme Being. The more we live and experience, the more enlightened we become - which brings our God-in-time into actuality.

As a mortal, I don't believe that I thought much about the advancement of our universe or of our Supreme Being. In such a materialistic world I was more captivated by what was before my eyes. In my mortal life I had experienced a number of hardships – hardships which Father used to bring about an ultimate good, and was indeed training for me to become an apostle of Christ.

Every individual has particular gifts as a part of the universe network. As you each mature in spirit, you would do well to ponder your cosmic citizenship and the responsibilities thereof. At this time of correction, many of our tasks are accelerated to bring individuals into their natural talent. Look not on these challenging circumstances as hardships, but as training and bridge-building.

In all sincerity, we are soldiers for the Master and have committed ourselves to serve Him and His cause. He set a wonderful example of forbearance in drinking the cup of 'come what may.' With these thoughts in mind, let us allow the world's opinion to fall by the wayside and serve the spirit to the best of our ability.

This week, think about your natural gifts. Think about those tasks that bring you soul-satisfaction. What is your cosmic responsibility? That is all for this evening. From Abraham and myself, we send you our love. Until next time, shalom.

Back

Our Experiences Builds Acceptance Of Diversity

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-29-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am finding our group to be a source of strength and healing. It is beautiful to see the trust here in this room among you. How wonderful it is that you can have that trust in one another enough to be your true selves 'as you are' – fellow travelers, kingdom brothers and sisters, friends and co-workers.

It is becoming better understood that people need one another, maybe not so much as in traditional roles but more along spiritual means. I am saying, that as the world evolves, mortals will find their place in the world to be also changing.

It is well understood that experience brings us advancement; and up until this point we thought that advancement was through those well-traveled 'traditional' paths, such as: 'To understand parenthood, we must have a child.' 'To understand marriage, you must have had a successful marriage.' 'To understand being a part of the whole, one must learn to forsake self.' As our society sees more broadened horizons, we can begin to accept a variety of 'non-traditional' roles.

It has been said that we are learning to remove the lines of separation. 'Stagnant-thinking' keeps us from new ideas and growth. 'Experience with variety' will ultimately bring about open-mindedness, which will in turn bring about acceptance. Look at the Master and how He viewed the various people He met; to Him they were not rich or poor, free nor bond, male or female.

For this so-called civilization to become acclimated to variety, there must indeed be experience. There will be individuals who are strong in spirit and sincere in heart who will help lead the way toward understanding diversity. As the world's people begin to glimpse Light and Life, there will be more acceptance of individuals being just who they are – mortally speaking.

You, Mission participants, are forerunners in setting an example of acceptance. I mean not to say that you accept everything, but simply that you are not casting a judgmental light. The only one that knows the mind of God is God. He views each of His children equally with the same eyes. He loves each of His children with the same amount of love.

For the week ahead, let us practice the technique of acceptance and how others around us may be of benefit to our willingness to be open. Nothing is as it was – such is life on an experimental planet. Definitely, you can count on an ultimate goodness arising out of any circumstance.

It is an honor for me to see you here with one another. How real you are is inspiring. We will stop there. As always, I am ever increasing with love for each one of you. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Challenge To Understand The Ultimate Good From Past Pain and Struggles

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-06-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am feeling uplifted just hearing you share life experiences. We all have our stories, we all have our gifts, we all have our shortcomings, and it feels right to be in the knowledge of acceptance. I am pleased to be a part of your group and your lives. I thank you.

I am MARY. I also thank you. You have welcomed me with open arms and a non-judgmental attitude. This evening I am here to discuss life's tests and trials.

When I had first come into the awareness that 'God is,' I was somehow in the understanding that since I was in awareness, I needed not be tested in faith and trust. It is well and good to see Father as a source of love and compassion, but we must also see Father as 'the Parent.' It is His mission to draw us Paradise-ward.

There is a great deal of testing on a mortal world. Here, we begin at the bottom. I mean not to say that Father would set up before us obstacles to teach us the hard lessons to see if we can retain our faith, no; I mean to say that 'life happens,' and Father's universal network helps to arrange an ultimate good through these obstacles, that good that draws us Paradise-ward.

There are many individuals who take life's tests and trials as a personal insult; they are deeply wounded and not withdrawing the value therefrom. These individuals spend their lives compensating for past pain and are indeed closed-off to spiritual meaning. This is not to worry, however. Again, Father, in His wonderful wisdom, eventually brings out an ultimate good.

Before I had met the Master, I believed my life had been rather difficult and that 'the world owed me everything.' I could not see that ultimate good that would come from such life-difficulties. Yes, I was being prepared to one day be an apostle of Christ. It was because of life's hardships that I could bear great burden, for I had experienced it firsthand – and therefore, I became a source of strength to others. Before my understanding of the Master's ministry, I lived on self-pity and fear that Father did not care for me or did not know me.

Jesus was such a well of knowledge – His peaceful demeanor caused me to pause and be observant; I could then look back on my life, on my struggles, and understand the value and ultimate good. While being witness to losing the Master's physical presence, I was instilled with a determination to bring about an ultimate good out of such sorrow – that was what the Master wanted; He always said: "carry on."

This week, let us make time to review life and see if we are understanding the ultimate good; or, are we in some way compensating for our pain by allowing weakness to be our master. I love the energy here this evening. Yes. That is all. From Abraham and myself, we send you with our love. Until next time, shalom.

Be Committed. Rise Above Temporary Mortal Satisfaction To Eternal Spiritual Fulfillment

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-13-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is wonderful to be among such jovial personalities this evening. After such a full week of life's activities it is a wonderful release to meet and be around like spirits. I am in such gratitude to Father for His magnificent way of arranging the potentials of time to become actuals. I am grateful to feel a part of all there is.

I am MARY. I also am grateful to have this opportunity in time and space to be a part of this great, but humbling, correction time. I am satisfied to be a soul among souls, a spirit among spirits, a kingdom citizen as one of Father's many children.

It would seem in this world today that life's 'success' has quite a confusing meaning. The well-known, the wealthy, the educated, the athletic – are quite respected; and those many that did not have such opportunity, seem to feel their life is not with much value or meaning. This is exactly why I am so grateful to be one of the Master's many associates that work for the good of the whole. In Father's kingdom, the many souls transcend the thoughts of status and/or success.

As the Correcting Time takes deeper root, many individuals will find the greater meaning to the purpose of their life, as well as their part in the whole. It may be true that you are not functioning in that place that you saw yourself – but rather, you may be serving a purpose or fulfilling a task that Father has assigned to you.

At some point you have committed to drinking the cup of this mortal life; you have made a commitment of sorts. Expect Father to fulfill His part in that commitment, and do not complain. If you are committed to serving in this Teaching Mission and Correcting Time, you will be trained and assigned.

When you waver in your commitment, your training and your assignments will be delayed – as will spiritual advancement. If we are committed, then we must be strong and fight the good fight of faith. If one chooses to wallow in self-pity or cower in fear, then that is acceptable – but complain not when you feel you are stuck in a rut and wonder why nothing seems to be moving.

What has been started here on Urantia has gone too far to turn back now. Those that serve the ego may continue to do so, but those that are committed to drinking the cup and helping the Master to bring potentials into actuals, need to stay focused on their commitment. We will move forward, no matter what. Would there be any questions this evening?

CALVIN: I gather this lesson is a call to stay strong in faith and remember the cause of this Mission, and not be complacent with what gift we have been given? I am reminded of the Master's mission here – it's not only about our training in this Mission, but our contribution to apply our training.

MARY: Well said. I realize that there is a continuous struggle between the animal and the spirit. The world has become used to attaining instant gratification. To work hard and allow the outcome to be Fathers' has somewhat gone by the wayside. I fully understand that many feel defeated by life and live on the edge of fear and self-pity. This evening is somewhat of a call to rise above 'temporary' mortal satisfaction, to eternal spiritual fulfillment. Yes, good comment, Calvin.

SIMON: Thank you for taking questions tonight. I just thank you for bringing me to greater trust and for a greater enthusiasm for the message. How can I best bring the good message to others?

MARY: Thank you, Simon. Many individuals simply need a bit of encouragement and a glimpse of that place where they feel they are 'a part of.' The Correcting Time works through a series of mindal circuits – and this is very personal, very small. We need not work on a large scale. The good is growing and shall gather more good along the way. As you do good and give to others, you can feel a closeness to Father and a peaceful joy. That is a good indication that you are serving as you should be. Is this helping? (Simon: Yes, thank you.)

CALVIN: Among the online Mission discussion boards, there seems to be quite a difference in perspective of where this Mission is heading. Some claim they are literally receiving transmissions for the next Urantia Book. Some are announcing that 'the Magisterial Son is coming and taking us to great heights.' There are many other seeming tangents trying to gain a stage. And yes, I am aware that some in the Mission groups are saying that others of us are just being complacent and not engaging enough – not allowing the 'new growth' and 'new revelation.' There are two quite different directions people within this Mission seem to be going and advocating – definitely two different versions. Do you have any comment on this?

MARY: Yes, time will tell. I cannot confirm any of these projects or predictions; I can only fulfill what is to be my ministry that is right before me. I already understand I am a part of a grand universal scheme – I need not make it bigger than it is; I can't. I am in understanding that I am one of you – no more, no less, as is Abraham and the many that are committed to serving and drinking the Master's proposed cup. As I mentioned, the Mission works on a very personal level. Mission participants need to maintain this small comfortable feeling of spiritual reality to bring about a long-lasting effect. I appreciate your question. I am even learning as I speak. I suppose once you truly feel a part of all there is, there is not need for personal grandstanding; there is not need to be set above or set apart. Indeed, be cautious of those who seek to separate the goodhearted from the real, possibly even mundane reality. Thank you.

CALVIN: Thank you so much for your answer, your love, and your teaching. We are very appreciative of your contribution to our Correcting Time and to mortals in today's world.

MARY: Absolutely. I also appreciate each one of you and your commitment to staying the course. Well done. One more question?

TECTRA: You have got me thinking about the Correcting Time here in the US, and how it's progressing, but how is the Correcting Time going throughout the world, the rest of the globe? Is it kind of all the same thing, world-wide? or are we behind times because we are so distracted in this country with all the stuff we have going on and the material abundance? Is it going better in other places? Can you comment on that?

MARY: You are correct in your observance. The United States is fairly distracted and yet, no one provides more service to various parts of the world. There are many parts of Asia that have started well before the United States in this Correcting Time; this varies throughout the world. A lot of this variance is culture, technology, and how well people are bonded together; how accepting they are of others and how/if they have made a place for diversity. That is a good question, Tectra. I know it is easy to focus on what is right before our eyes, this is understood – but know also, it is an expanding of the mind to incorporate the greatness of the universe's inhabitants and one's unique part of that whole. I appreciate your query.

With that, I shall bid you our farewell. Know that we are in appreciation for your acceptance of the course. We are honored to serve with you, side by side. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Let Us Not Forget To Feed The Soul, Body And Mind. Sometimes The Mundane Must Be Endured

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-20-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am in awe of your faith and how you make time to feed the soul. I realize that you find my words valuable and yet, your fellowship and ministry to one another is just as valuable. A mature individual finds spiritual serenity to come to them somewhat more easily than it did in their days of youth. There is no doubt that the younger you are, the more you need to make effort to reach for spirituality.

"If a man does not work, he does not eat" – is a universal saying. If a person takes not care of the body, then of course ill health comes their way. As well, it is important that you set aside some time to focus on feeding the soul. It is all too easy to get caught up in the busyness of life and overlook the meanings and values that could perchance to come your way.

The more I get to know mortals, the more I believe that they are good. The goodness may be far below the surface, but it is there. I believe most citizens of Urantia make effort to do what is right.

There are some extremely hard-working individuals about, yes; and of course, we always teach balance in all things. To feed the soul is to enhance every other aspect of mortal life. A simple trip to the market may hold unforeseen ministry tasks – it is obvious that this is a chore, and not too much a cause for joy, but something that must be done. Yes, we can look upon our daily tasks as burdens, or we can see them for the possibilities they could possibly hold.

I am in understanding that we have expectations, and in a material world, 'allowing the unfolding' is difficult. There is always temptation to push the unfolding in our direction. Many of us live to see these expectations come to fruition, and when they don't, our disappointment is added baggage and sours our outlook for what is to come.

Each of you come here with a large percentage of faith that myself or Mary will be here; yet, you push it not. You allow the unfolding of 'what may be' – it feels natural; it provokes conversation, and always is there value drawn therefrom. It would be wonderful to carry this attitude out into your daily living.

Now more than ever is it crucial to keep in constant communication with those on high. In our ministry we have no idea when opportunities will arise; this does indeed take some taming of the mind and a remembering of our commitment to living a Spirit-led life. And what about in the meantime? 'meantime' – meaning when things appear dull, non-active. Yes, we are obligated to strive to live our material lives. And yes, it is hard to find joy in the mundane – and yet your outlook and attitude can always make these boring tasks seem better.

Let us ponder these 'mundane tasks' and the rewards they may bring. Are these tasks something we must do to live in a material world to survive? or are they simply tasks we do to keep up appearances! Are you in understanding of my meaning? For example: Of course we must perform regular maintenance on our automobiles to keep them in working order – but is it necessary though, that we put forth time and energy into driving something 'so it will impress the onlookers?' Yes, let us ponder this week on why we do what we do.

In all our time-management, let us not forget to nourish the soul, to feel closeness to Father, to feel balanced self-respect – yes, to feed the body and the mind. Sometimes the mundane must be endured so we can reap the spiritual reward. Let us not be slothful in our striving.

Our lesson is short this evening for I am due elsewhere. Know that I am filled with gratitude for our relationship with one another. You are a ray of light in this seemingly dark world. You help to feed my soul and I thank you. Until next time, shalom

Maintaining A Balance In The Mortal Life While Advancing In The Spiritual
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-27-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am sincerely grateful for your support. Your acknowledgment of our beginning efforts here in this region was indeed kind. I know there is a great deal of controversy concerning our Mission, but I truly believe that the truth has been firmly planted in the soil of our collective faith. What is true will grow and become common (natural). What is false will be revealed in time.

Those that have committed to truthfully drinking the cup of our Correcting Time have been trained to recognize and promote truth as it is - no frills, simply an evolutionary planet gaining experience. I realize that this idea can seem impersonal and on such a grand scale. But as Mary said some time back, when she felt equal in the Father's kingdom there was not need to be set aside as 'special.' I appreciate your efforts to keep our Mission close to Earth.

I am seeing the greatest change in you that have made effort to bring meaning into your everyday lives. It is wonderful to see you live your lives as close to truth as you can. Many mistakes that have been made along the way are now, simply lessons. We know there is a true humility at the base of our belief system. This makes us teachable and striving toward spirit.

It is easy to become overwhelmed in the busyness of the world - there are great demands on people simply to survive. How blessed are we in this day and age to know that there is meaning in all we do; there is value in all experience. It would appear that as we learn to become spiritual individuals, the fight of the mortal or animal becomes more fierce in trying to block spiritual growth.

As many of you have tried to make spiritual progress, it would seem that the mortal life becomes a bit more challenging. Those in the Christian fundamental movement would tell you that these challenges are "the works of the devil." We are so grateful to know that is complete rubbish and that we are with a common-sense definition of adversity.

This week, let us think about how material life is a bit more challenging. In a material world, how are you somewhat forced to 'play the game?' How did the Master view the rules on living in the material world? How did the Master stay strong when it seemed the whole world was against Him? What did He do to maintain balance in mortal life while advancing in the spiritual? That is all.

Again, these words happen because of your support and friendship. I am with unending gratitude to you each. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

How Is Truth Flavored By Our Own Wish-Fulfillments And Need For Denial
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-06-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am loving your topics of discussion this evening. Your thoughts on the larger issues in the mortal life are sincere and profound - certainly does it cause me to think. Topics like homosexuality, abortion, and politics will always be an issue in the lives of mortals. While there is no common solution at this time it is important that mortals communicate peacefully and be willing to listen to one another, as well as share opinions rather than try to force one's own opinion.

I believe you do well here; this is a safe place to communicate - well done! For the most part you as individuals have made serious effort to follow your understanding of Spirit. Over these years there has been training and a metamorphous of personality attunement. It is becoming easier to live spiritual principles and put forth the ideas of the Master into everyday practice.

I am seeing changes in you that will be beneficial to our overall ministry. You are beginning to believe that all are equal within the kingdom, including yourself. Concerns of others' opinions of you are fortunately falling by the wayside. You are able to live with the freedom that the universe will support you in your efforts to promote the good of the whole. We each are understanding that it is not important we are noticed, but that the good you do helps promote truth, beauty, and goodness out among those with whom you communicate.

We are accepting 'reality as it is.' To color-over reality with wish-fulfillment is simply not acceptable. Reality in itself holds enough adventure and indeed there is plenty of work to do. Falsehood has simply become distasteful, and you are recognizing this on a soul level. It is wonderful you welcome truth 'as it is,' and do your part to bring about an ultimate good as seen through the eyes of our Father.

I am MARY. I am joy-filled to be with you this evening. I thank you for your warm welcome every time I visit.

I understand Abraham's words this evening. I do remember being caught up in a judgmental world. Others' negative words always made me feel 'less-than;' and indeed I would come to understand that I had also participated in that judgmental criticism against others. This was a good lesson, for how could I have known of being limited by others' judgments, and also 'limiting others' if I had not this experience, personally.

In those days before I met Jesus, I found a great deal of reality concerning my life choices and patterns to be a little too painful, and leaned heavily on denial. With the Master's teachings I learned to embrace reality as it was; I believed that there was always a lesson therein rather than to try to steer my own destiny away from pain. Yes, I came to understand that I was not God, and realized I needed to be open for the greater kingdom lessons He would orchestrate for me through my experience.

Embracing reality fully became actually enjoyable once I came into understanding of the value of reality. I was certainly a bit rough around the edges as a woman of that era - I used not proper etiquette to communicate, and certainly did not act as a respectable female of that day and age.

Working with the Master, I had come to realize that it was not important for me to learn to be someone I was not, no! not at all. It was important however, to fully 'live' my beliefs, and that revolved around embracing the Father's will, not mine! In this, I found laughter and joy. In this, I found reality at times to be cold and hard, yes, but pleasant – as it should be.

Working with the Master I understood that ‘I was acceptable as I am’ – and that gave me confidence to go about the Father’s business. The Master had a charming and common-sense view that brought out the best in all who knew Him. Even now does He work with us ‘individually’ to show us we are a light in the world, and are fully capable of embracing Father’s will and going about doing good. Sure we will make mistakes, but we have not time to dwell upon them for there is much going on in the ‘real’ world to assist us in making lasting corrections from our mistakes.

This week, let us ponder truth and how we embrace it. Consider how truth is flavored by our own wish-fulfillments or need for denial. My hope is that you all realize how loved you are ‘as you are;’ and, that you know you have tremendous support from on high. That is all for this evening. Our love goes with you. In the words of our mentor and friend, shalom. [No meeting March 13th.]

Riches Of Everyday Living | With a Too-Busy Life Some Things Of Soul Value Are Easily Brushed Aside

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-20-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am so appreciative of your willingness each week to bestow upon me the reins to your meeting purpose. I would say this is our meeting, and your participation makes it possible. I am deeply touched to see how close you’ve become over the years. Even through growing pains do you remain dedicated to the overall Correcting Time purpose. Well done.

It would seem in mortal life that all effort is, for the most part, put toward simply staying afloat; and it seems that ‘environment’ has a great deal to do with where your energy goes. For example: One who lives in a large city surrounded by gray buildings and neon lights might be more inclined to cling to material solutions to difficulties, as opposed to the one who has opportunity to spend time with nature, having quiet time for the mind and soul. Of course this is all theoretical and subject to change with each person’s circumstance.

Those who are encompassed by a busy life may find it difficult to take time to set straight the scales of balanced living, for it would seem that imbalanced living--or relying upon material solutions--would tend to make one insensitive to the simple realities of life. It seems that in over-populated areas there is somewhat of an innocence that is lost, and more of a scrambling to survive. This is the way of evolution, yes – it’s not good or bad. When people know better, they do better.

I suppose my lesson this evening is about the true riches of everyday living. With such a ‘drive to survive,’ or even in simply doing the best that you can to succeed in the mortal life, some things of soul value are brushed aside. This is where I refer back to my theory of a busy city-living versus those among a more peaceful environment. Individuals that have focused mostly on the doing of life instead of just being, have somewhat of a tough exterior.

Strength is good, yes. We can see the many instances where the Master’s strength changed reality. To be strong and confident is indeed an asset in this life.

However, we need not be so tough on the outside that we forget the simple riches of everyday living. Let us ponder past experience and those events that have made us strong in spirit versus tough in ego:

- What are the riches of everyday living? And I have to admit that experience in the flesh can make it somewhat difficult to see that there is a basic thread of good woven into the tapestry of all experience.
- How about acts of kindness? Those are riches that feed the soul. Those are experiences that carry us through the difficult times.
- How about the play and laughter of children? How open they are to adventure and remind us that life is always wondrous?

Again, back to the goodness of nature itself – the wind in your hair, the sun on your skin, the grass under your feet, the repetitive pattern of life from a leaf on a tree; and likewise, those on an insect. I ask: What are those things that open the door to the spirit? How will awareness of appreciation for daily riches of the soul keep you alive with hope and striving Godward? Think about these things in the coming week.

Again, I consider myself an extremely wealthy person for having the friendship that I have here. Know that I always look forward to your smiling faces and lighthearted countenance. My love is always with you. Until next time, shalom.

Unfortunately, Tragedy Puts Our Priorities In Order | Mary At The Tomb Resurrection Morning

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-27-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Thank you for letting me work here this evening. I am touched by your willingness to support one another in the efforts of living. I always see your best intentions become a reality here. Your issues in everyday-living are always of great interest to me; as well, my colleagues. We strive every day to minister to Father's children, and the more we understand, the better we can do.

I am grateful we have chosen to drink this collective cup of the Correcting Time. In time, you will see your endurance to be personally rewarding as well as helping to clear the path toward Light and Life. Usually around this time of year, mortals will be thinking about the resurrected Jesus. Yes, tonight it would do us well to ponder new life.

I am MARY. I am to speak of my experience with the risen Master. Along with thoughts of resurrection at this time of year, many mull over the pain of death and loss. At that time of my experience, it would seem as if myself and my kinswomen were beside ourselves with sorrow. Most definitely did this tragic but necessary occurrence take our minds off ourselves for a time.

Unfortunately, tragedy tends to help put our priorities in order. Our sorrow had brought us a helpful humility in that we were becoming driven by what was truly important; thoughts of personal gain were not to be found. We banded together as brothers and sisters to follow through with the Master's ideals for the Father's kingdom. It was truly amazing how faith brought us new life; new hope.

While in the garden I was quite fearful, and yet I was bound and determined to find the Master's body to carry on with what we thought at that time to be the proper tradition of the dead. I had not the realization that the person with whom I spoke to that early morning was anything more than a man. It did take some mindal reconciliation to even have that thought of the possibility of what had occurred.

Once I had realized I was in the presence of the risen Master I was elated, and yet, overcome with a thousand thoughts running through my mind. Mortals are very excitable; and indeed it was difficult to calm down to receive instruction. Most definitely upon realization of Jesus' presence did I feel new blood running through my veins; I had the energy of a hundred mortals. His face was reflecting a new light, and it was not something I had experienced before.

I know firsthand, that the Master's Spirit of Truth can do this for all mortals who can keep alive with faith. Closeness to His personality helps to recognize Him more and more every day. You can be with new energy, new hope, new life.

For this week, let us have our own time in the garden with the Master. We will speak of our experiences next week. That is all. From Abraham and myself, we give you our love and bid you farewell and shalom.

Worship, An Appreciation Of Father, His Watchcare, Acknowledging His Hand In All Things

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-03-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It seems like such a peaceful evening. Your calm spirits make it easy for me to give you my words. I am happy in the presence of your familiar personalities. I am always touched by your dedication to truth in any form.

How blessed are we to have one another at this time. How blessed are we to have this vision of the Correcting Time and to have opportunity for feeling such closeness to the Father's presence. I am grateful to Father for making any and all things possible. Our thanks also to our Brother/Father Michael for His enduring Spirit of Truth helping us to maintain faith and hope.

I am MARY. It is wonderful to be with you again. I am getting to know you each a little more every week. It is understandable why Abraham has that little twinkle in his eye when he speaks of you. I am honored to be a connection on your family circuit. This is a beautiful time in this region of the planet; all things are becoming new.

We are fortunate to also have opportunity every day to become new - new thinking, new habit patterns, new philosophies, and new possibilities. A closeness to Michael and His Spirit of Truth enables us to strive ever forward.

I am grateful to have had the experience of rebirth of spirit. I had lived the life of a seemingly dark creature; and knowing my sister apostles, the Master and the Father's presence gave me opportunity to feel new again; I felt reborn. This wonderful new feeling did not come about with ease, no. I had a great deal of regret to overcome.

Before my awakening I felt trapped in my life; I felt under a cloud of subservience. It was difficult to envision my life with more – more of those gifts that are of the spirit – and indeed, eternal. It took some mindal reconciliation that I was an equal part in the network of kingdom believers.

It was with time and experience that I had seen small steps in my transformation; it would come about unknowingly through an ability to talk with people, to relate with children, to appreciate the mundane in everyday living. The more I was involved in the ministry, the less time I had to worry about myself or focus on the negative; I learned how important everyday worship is.

Father requires us not to adore Him; but when you begin to understand His presence, how can you stop it? Worship is the entrance to new life, new possibilities, new hope, and faith. Worship asks nothing more than to connect to Father's presence. We are not trying to win the Father's favor in order to have life go our way, no. We are recognizing how deeply He cares for us no matter how we feel about ourselves. We are connecting to our reason to keep ever striving forward.

I, for one, am grateful to know Father as I do. I know with time we will become even closer. The Master certainly did set a wonderful example of worship (connection with Father). The act of choosing to have gratitude is opening a doorway to new things.

This week, find time every day for appreciation and worship. Think about those small things Father does that helps us to feel a part of all there is. That is all. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

A Poem From Michael | The Spirit of Truth Stands By Ever Ready To Assist
Michael & Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-10-2006

Back

In your midst, a thought of light.
Aspects of truth, wrong or right.
The tumbling sea, obvious to all;
Every drop important, no matter how small.

I am your BROTHER/FATHER. I am honored to be a note in the melody of your life. I have come to bring recognition of the Spirit of Truth that is alive and well among you.

The changes in this world are understandable to me, but also is it understandable that it is confusing for you. Thank you for your ongoing effort and not giving up on me when my plan seemed boring. You have allowed the truth to be what it is. I am grateful to you that have stayed the course and have allowed Father's plan and purpose to take root. Change is slow.

This evening I bring you greetings from the many who pray for this small evolutionary planet. The support of the universe is behind this small world in a big way. Forget not what I am among you. Don't lose your recognition of me as your Brother/Father. Know that I go before you. I am the voice of truth in your thoughts.

I am not to chastise you for your mortal ways but to encourage you as citizens of a growing universe.

The Correcting Time is not a game; it is not to set individuals apart as special; it is not to uphold the ego that stems from animal instinct. I know you cannot see me with your material eyes but you can feel my Spirit move with yours. You can receive my message. You can recognize me. I am here in every moment. I am asking you that have ears to hear, that have eyes to see, that have faith - to stay the course.

Yes, we are in the midst of great changes - many of which you cannot make sense out of until time passes. Our Mission is alive, it is moment by moment. I am asking for you to be patient, be observant and be open to receive. Remember, in life's circumstances nothing of value is ever lost.

Mortals of Urantia have nothing to lose at this point - only to gain. Allow the light of the Spirit to lift your burden of thought, even if only for a moment. Allow the light to cleanse your soul and renew your faith. Recognize me in everyday life. See that I am working. I am alive and determined to care for my children. In love, patience, and peace, carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. How full are we with the possibilities of the Master's blessings! I, for one, shall heed the call. What an honor it is to serve one who is so encouraging.

This week, take note of how you can recognize the Spirit of Truth working. How might you be quiet in thought and open to instruction? Let us ponder the seriousness of the Master's message concerning the Mission, and yet, remember to embrace peace and patience. You do well. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom. [No meeting April 17, 2006]

What Does The Master Ask Of Us | The Spirit of Truth Stands By To Aid
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-24-2006
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying the jovial atmosphere here this evening. I am grateful for your support and determination to remain open and faithful. The mortal life in this day and age is indeed a constant struggle back and forth between the spirit and the animal. There are such outside distractions that would tend to magnetize a person toward feeding the animal or ego, drawing one away from spirit. Such is our society, and most definitely we will adapt.

I would say a few words also on the care of the mortal body that temporarily houses the budding soul, or cosmic citizen. It is beneficial to be cautious of what is put into the body that disturbs the neurotransmitters of the brain. Good health is essential to a healthy connection to the Thought Adjuster. It is common knowledge of what one can do to be productive in caring for the mind and body. Most definitely this is why we recommend meditation, or stillness, and prayer.

From time to time, we all require a cleansing of the mind and body. There are so many material factors that would well disturb the connection to the Spirit. The Master called upon us to be observant of Him in everyday living to allow Him time to instruct you. The world's people are in such need of spiritual upliftment; and while you are not to stand on the street corner to preach the gospel - still, you are an example of a new and changing world.

I am MARY. It is indeed an honor to work with you, as well as to be a student of Abraham. Thank you for having me. In the beginning of my earthly ministry, I was indeed overwhelmed by what seemed to be insurmountable obstacles. As I experienced the teachings of Jesus, I realized He does indeed ask very little of us. The understanding I have of setting an example to create growth for the kingdom, is to be happy in what you know - to spend a life rejoicing in all the wonder there is to behold.

What does the Master ask of us - we who have volunteered to be forerunners in the Teaching Mission? I believe it all begins with simple joy in awareness, being aware of a God who takes such joy in you as His child. Every moment in desire of doing the Father's will is an adventure. While it might not always be pleasant, it certainly is mindally captivating and a cause for soul growth.

You, citizens of change, are indeed blessed to behold the beginnings of moving toward Light and Life. Our ministry is to express joy; it is to encourage the downtrodden; it is to accept individuals on many levels; it is to make effort to have understanding and to leave your judgment by the wayside. It is common among mortals to gather and comment on negative happenings. It is our ministry as faith-born citizens to recognize negative happenings, yes - and instead of adding to negativism, point out positive outcome.

A good connection to spirit and recognition of Michael's assistance is indeed required to bring light to the obvious darkness. As Abraham said, be aware of outside material stimulants. Practice feeding the soul instead of the animal cravings of the body. Do not neglect the body but realize it is important enough to care for because it is the temporary housing of a universal citizen - the budding soul. A healthy mind and body is indeed a good connection to Father and aiding us in our ministry to others.

This week, ponder the question of 'what does Michael and our internal Father ask of us?' How can we be a light in the obvious darkness? How can a few words encourage one to see possibilities instead of limitations?

You have not yet the idea of the spiritual power within. You need not do much to recognize this power, but to take joy in our living faith. Yes, there are always negative happenings in the world, and the Spirit of Truth stands by to aid you and bring light. That should be something for you each to think about this week.

That is all for this evening. I am with great joy to be among you and to know that we are each a thread in the tapestry of change. You do well. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Live Each Day Loyal To Each Moment And Wait Upon The Will Of Father | The Impatience of Eve

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP

05-01-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always encouraged by your searching for higher meaning. What a blessing to be among those who can work through the mire of everyday mortal living to the faithful possibilities of an all-powerful Father. I enjoy being in your company. It is natural for various personalities to have differing views. It is God-like to remain open to change, change in any form.

I am MARY. How grateful am I to be among such welcoming hearts and minds. I believe I am here to touch upon possible responses to last week's question: "What does the Master ask of you?" During my days in the flesh, this was a most difficult question for me to find understanding to. As a person newly born of the spirit then, I was indeed over-abundant with enthusiasm and seeking after kingdom tasks.

Secondly, I was naturally an emotional creature, and tasks that appeared to be seemingly a heartbreaking situation were at the top of my list. For example: I do remember taking great pains to find a sorrowful looking child a pair of footwear. The sadness in her voice coupled with her big brown eyes, pulled at my emotions to put this task as a priority in Father's growing kingdom. Needless to say, I was more emotional than logical. Did this make any difference to the Master? No, it did not.

The Master would have me serve at whatever my intellectual and personal capacity would allow. My emotions did indeed put pressure upon me to go forth and 'take the kingdom' - mostly in a manner that was somewhat self-serving, mind you, but again, this was not anything required of me by the Master. I do believe the most difficult thing the Master asks of us is to do nothing - wherein He asks us to be still and observant, waiting upon the will of the Father. Yes, with a busy and enthusiastic mind, this is most difficult.

Look at your world today - there are a million different causes one can serve, and there are a number of various reasons one can have to serve a cause. A cause may be dear to the heart and believed to have close significance to your own experience. For one example: An abused child may grow up to be driven to serve in raising awareness of child abuse. Feeling driven for the right reasons is definitely good. On the other hand, there are times when we must wait upon the will of the Father.

How many times did the Master say: "My hour has not yet come." Think about His emotional state - certainly was he with enthusiasm to go forth and create good change, and yet was He instructed to stay put and continue His woodworking and His care of the family. The Master was well aware of His calling - and yet, the timing was Father's. How did the Master find the patience to wait upon the will of God - to simply live each day loyal to each moment that life had brought to Him.

There was a great deal of things which needed to be prepared before the Master went about the ministry. Imagine were He to waver in trusting the Father's plan and had gone forth with the mission how He saw fit. Such was the plight of Eve, our Creative Material Daughter. Certainly Eve was dedicated; she had knowledge that does not require faith - unlike the case of you agondonters -and still, doing nothing (so it seemed), or remaining patient with the Father's plan, was out of her reach.

Eve had a kind heart, and time spent away from exercising spiritual muscles can lead to impatience. Eve was intelligent and known for her organizational skills; and 'doing nothing,' so to speak, took its toll on her mind. Not to discount her responsibility in this scheme, which led to the 'default,' but to show that even the most faithful of children can be weak if not committed to making the most of every day to conform to Father's timing.

Many of Father's children, even today, wait upon the Master to come from the sky and take back His chosen children. Even with these beliefs, would you not want to make the most of every moment? It would be torture in mind to wonder if you are among the chosen. Perhaps you would come to the conclusion that you are not even close, so why try!

Or, would you be active in what you are handed today? Is today enough? Would you be able to be still and wait upon instruction? Are your spiritual muscles up to par against the needs of the ego that craves to be noticed and accredited for good works?

For the most part, in my personal opinion, I believe the most difficult thing the Master asks of us is certainly within our grasp. It is within our intelligence to wait upon the will of Father; and then, to help Him set in motion of what is to occur.

I find it an honor in every moment of existence to be a part of such a loving and logical universe. We thank you for your time. We thank you for allowing the unfolding. Godspeed. Until next time, shalom.

Going Forth With Spiritual Courage | It Takes Courage To Listen To That Still Small Voice

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-08-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying your candid conversation. Your courage to be bold and forthright does indeed make you each much more spiritually accessible in an earthly manner that keeps our Mission real. It is beautiful to see old friends feel comfortable enough to be fearless with one another - yes, to be their true selves.

I know these past few weeks we have been discussing patience and waiting upon the will of Father. This week I would like to touch upon the courage you have known in your listening to that 'still small voice' within.

We each know what it is like to become settled within the rut of life; whether it is comfortable or not so comfortable, yet, it is what we know and what we've become used to. It does indeed take an element of disturbance to shake us from the fog of mind and to move us from this rut, from the habits of life.

Father could be giving us clear direction of how to emerge from this rut, and yet, we may be filled with fear and trapped in our comfort zone. Perhaps we are simply with the feeling of being 'untrusting of the unknown;' or in a Father that would perhaps confuse us with His many other children. There are many individuals in this Mission that have had to be shaken from a personal unreality, to become conscious of Father's words and have the courage to carry them out.

Many times what looks to be odd to others is the correct steps to take at a given time. For example, some have chosen to leave a dominating and dogmatic religion in favor of freethinking; they have reaped repercussions for doing so by their church and family – and yet, have walked away with an even larger reward. Yes, some individuals have chosen to follow a path which others know not why; and believe me, this took courage – this took intelligence, yes, and a willingness to be open to the will of God.

We can view the majority of society and how they are ruled by popular opinion – self-imprisoned, so to speak. I do not mean to give liberty without license, no! But most definitely do I mean to give back to individuals a confidence – confidence to know that they can trust themselves to follow their inner guidance.

Without a doubt, one must always be cautious of who one serves – be it the Spirit, or the ego. Of course I am speaking of individuals who are having the courage to live a life of how they believe the Master has taught them to live. Most of our own restrictions are self-imposed. Mortals tend to live up to somebody else's ideals. How blessed would one be if it were the Master's and Father's ideals that we live up to!

This week, think about how temporary this life is; one can have eighty years on the planet and still complain that they never had opportunity to do this or that. Let us not live under the cloud of self-imposed restrictions, but move into the light of the spirit. Any and all possibilities are open to those that believe.

That is all. Mary will be here next week to discuss this topic further. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Courage To Break Free From Tradition or Other's Expectations | Contribution of Sister Apostles

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-15-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. As always, I am happy to be with you again. I really admire how you pour your heart and soul into those things you believe deeply in. Sometimes it does take quite a bit of time to draw conclusions within your mind, but when you decide to act you are indeed driven with passion; this is admirable, indeed. It is understandable in this material life when one feels a tendency to hold back. At such times, allow Father's love and logic to be your guide and have not worry. As promised, I give you our esteemed Teacher, Mary.

MARY: Greetings friends and colleagues, I am always at home among you. I am growing with more affection each time I look upon your beautiful faces. I know I am indeed blessed to be in such a position – to teach, and also to be a student. What an honor.

I am with great interest in Abraham's topic of last week on 'going forth with spiritual courage.' I realize the beginning of my very salvation began with my sisters in the ministry, who portrayed such courage. I make no excuses for myself, really, for my dark days; they simply 'were what they were' - a mixture of my upbringing and poor choices; not a cause for eternal damnation. I was hardened, believe me.

I was quite bitter against those who appeared to be 'better off' and having had somewhat of a more blessed journey than I - which brings me to my dark days in the flesh when I lived the only way I knew how. I made a bit of money here and there doing things I was not proud of; and yet, I did what I had to to survive. For the most part, I saw no way out. I was definitely ready for a glimmer of hope, some light at the end of a long and dark tunnel.

Imagine my dismay at the two clean and well-dressed women apostles of Christ who came into the nefarious resort of which I was employed, to share with me the good news. It was really not so much their words of encouragement that caught my attention, but the risk they took at being seen in such a place of low standards. Yes, I am speaking of those two, Martha and Rachel, who were among the ten women apostles who embraced the Master's teaching, and who took a chance at ruining their good standing in the community to go into the underbelly of society to bring glad tidings.

Of these ten - one woman was the daughter of a well-known physician; one woman was the eldest daughter of one of the male apostles; one woman was the cousin of Thomas; and so on. First off, each of these women had something to lose 'socially' by embracing the Master's teaching; and secondly, by going into the poor communities and reaching out to the sick.

Had it not been for my sisters' examples, I don't know if I would have had the courage to break free from the only life I had known. Do you see, I would not have related as well with the male apostles, no. It was Father's plan all along, to involve women on an administrative level. These women apostles dared to leave their good-standing in favor of faith, and they acted upon that faith.

Don't think for one minute these women apostles' loved ones did not try to sway them to think differently. They were under tremendous pressure to keep with tradition. Had they let fear get the better of them and stayed with tradition, the Master's cause might not have been as successful on so many levels. The male apostles might have led a more public life in that day, yes, but the female apostles laid a more sturdy foundation - they tended to the 'lesser' of society - and in the end, this brought greater upliftment.

In joining the Master's ministry, I really had nothing to lose. My reputation really could not have gotten any worse, so the transition was fairly easy for me. When I do look at both the women and men apostles, I am inspired by their courage to follow through with a concept that was mostly built out of faith.

While the overall ministry of the Master was not perfect, it was successful. Your ministry will not be perfect - it will have highs and lows. You will, likewise, be the student and the teacher; and overall, it will be successful. It will take courage to stay true to the course, to the one who serves us so well.

This week, let us ponder how much we feel a need to be seen in the public eye, or can we serve in a lesser capacity? Can we forsake tradition standing, to do what is right? Where does our energy go?

That is all. Know that every minute with you is joy-filled and a great learning experience for me. As always, our love goes with you. From both of us – until next time, shalom.

Find That Time Needed For Rejuvenation Of Mind And Spirit

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-22-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am so inspired by your faithfulness. As I look out upon the world at Father's children, I am amazed that they hold on with such faith. Belief systems of mortals may be somewhat skewed, but the fact that they want to believe in something greater than themselves is something to rejoice over.

I am always intrigued by your discussions on the latest controversy. Those ideas that drive individuals to go within to seek greater meaning are always a cause for soul growth. Upsets (or elements of disturbance) are an opportunity to let go of what you think you know, to ask Father for what He knows. There is always the natural tendency to become emotional during times of upset. At such times it is difficult to reach the spirit and become accustomed to the idea that all things take time – and, that there is always some process to learn.

Even the Master had to reconcile His mind to the spirit; there was time allowed for emotions to pass; for stress to leave the mind and body; for acceptance; and to become one with the personal will, and Father's.

It does seem like Urantia has become a disposable society – everything must be instant and convenient. Rarely is there time taken to simply be, to simply enjoy life, to simply allow time with the Father.

Worry not about emotions and how they may present themselves; allow them to disperse and pass. Allow that reconciliation of mind/spirit, and for acceptance to sink into the soul. It is true, emotions are a part of everyday life – and it is completely natural to display them. I say, however, it is Godlike to begin to master them. Have not worry, you each are learning to have some control.

I am MARY. Again, I am filled with love to be within your family circle. I am very familiar with Abraham's topic. I do remember emotions were quite difficult for me to get ahold of. I believed I was a person of action, I sincerely desired to fix any and all problems. It was difficult for me to go slow, to allow the process of reconciliation. It was hard for me to be grateful for tasks completed. It seemed that I could never do enough.

It was the Master's wisdom and humor that helped me to stop and take time to allow emotions to pass so I could see logic and feel the Spirit within begin to give direction. In my day, Jesus recommended that at least one hour every day, and one day a week, we spend time in play or recreation. It was such rejuvenation for the mind and spirit. This rejuvenation made it much easier to cope with the circumstances of everyday life. It is okay to play, laugh, have fun - it is a doorway to the Spirit; it is an opening to true worship.

This week, we are recommending that you each find this time to get away to rejuvenate your spirit and mind. When circumstances of life become overwhelming, remember that reconciliation of mind takes time, as does allowing the passing of emotions. Do not bottle these emotions up; do not feed into them with self-pity; simply give them to Father; ask for guidance. You are not alone. You have all the divine assistance available that you need.

That is all. Discuss among yourselves whether or not you will be needing to have questions next week. We are always willing to have open dialogue with you, our precious friends. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Our `Life Laws` Take The Guesswork Out of Everyday Living | Personal Assessments
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-29-2006

Back

[Editor's note concerning the local Woods Cross, UT Teaching Mission group.): Over the years since the beginning days with Teacher Ham (1991- 1992), many have come and gone in this weekly class. At the height of attendees there were approximately 40 weekly students. Since then, some had passed away, but there were many who stopped coming for various reasons (disbelief, personal agendas, moved away, etc). By the time of this lesson (2006) there were approximately 15 regular attendees. It is observed that the ratio of 'initial attendees,' to those who 'remained standing' in our group in 2006, can perhaps be likened to the 'feeding of the five-thousand' event in Jesus' day - which number, within a short time, was reduced to less than five-hundred dedicated truth-seekers.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How wonderful it is to be among your rested spirits. It is an upliftment in attitude and a peaceful adjustment for the soul when time is taken for rest and recreation.

I am reminded of the Master's time of the great decisions. Peace and stillness were required to have such clarity in mind - to not only come to such spiritual decisions but also, logical ones. We must maintain the memory that the Master was also a mortal man with these important decisions.

There were 'life laws' Jesus made that were to assist Him throughout His Earthly career; they were completely in line with the Father's will, and He certainly knew there was no need to deviate from them.

These life laws help with what you would term 'the guesswork' in everyday living. For this week, let us think of one or two of our own obvious laws that aid us in our own everyday living. Again, let us re-study the Master's great decisions. As promised, I shall move to questions. I am familiar with the consensus that all wish to begin with personal assessments. Granted. Myself and Mary, stand by to aid in this task.

We shall begin with Harrison: My son, it is with joy every week that we can meet face to face. I am uplifted by your stories, no matter how seemingly small they are.

You are beginning to take on a calmness in demeanor, and that is helping to provide peace to those around you. You do turn up the heat when necessary, yes, but experience has shown you that a calm strong demeanor brings more results. Your maturity in spirit has shown through your ability to give credit where credit is due. This helps to inspire others. Individuals who feel appreciated are encouraged to keep striving. It is good to be an example of living faith. Be careful not to be seen on the side of fanaticism but to show God as logical and 'down to earth.' You are a source of strength in our Mission and reach many that have no idea that they are even part of this Correcting Time – they need not even be told, it is not important. It is important that you continue to serve in that way which brings you the most joy. Your smile sincerely lights up a room. Well done.

Ellen, my daughter, the supporter, the scribe: Long are these years we have sat, side by side. I am honored to be counted as your friend. Your commonsense view of life has been compared to my own. I do realize we are both lovers of truth. I am happy to see at this time in your life you are with some peace of mind and acceptance. Even though you feel you have not a great deal of access to many individuals in the Mission, trust me, your quiet work reaches the masses. Your daringness to be bold has led you into trouble more than a few times; on the other hand, there are individuals who count on it. Many love you as you are. It is wonderful to see that after all these years you are having some self-acceptance. Strength is good – so is compassion and balance. Have not worry. Continue to support. Continue to cultivate that strength within. Honesty is rare in today's society – continue to use it, just be gentle about it. Know that you do well. Forget not, the quiet workers can move mountains.

Ellanor: Yes, difficult times as of late. Of course, things could always be much worse. I mean not to have you fear for what could be, but simply be grateful for what is, and know that the faithful are indeed well looked-after and with a more peaceful heart and mind. You know very well that the many who choose to work in our Mission need to put the Mission's needs first. Your struggle between the ego and spirit has made life much more difficult than it has to be. Father wants not for you to live in continuous struggle, no! He simply wants you to make a decision and then live by it. Sit not upon that fence of uncertainty. Be willing to drink the cup. Much of your misery is of your own doing – Father would never be this harsh with His children. Know that with each experience, maturity of spirit is forthcoming. Have not worry. Be observant. The doors are open; the choice to walk through is completely yours. Feel not burdened. Feel not rushed. Acceptance is key. Allow reality to unfold to you – force it not. It is not all work, you know. Carry on.

Calvin, My son, my brother: You are indeed the busiest man I know – you always have been. Your gift for words could always plant seeds in the most barren land and have some sort of success. You do have courage to live outside of tradition and set an example of freethinking. Your best work lies in your children. What a gift, each and every one of them. Your words of wisdom to them now might not be as valued as they will be in the future. Tend to them as you would a beautiful garden. You do have opportunity to speak to many individuals every day and it is always a blessing to live what you know. Integrity, honesty, and faith will shine through in your work. You also would do well to allow the unfolding of reality, force it not; it is really quite beautiful.

Marin, greetings, my daughter: Is there any particular question I can answer for you?

MARIN: I am delighted to be here. Yes. I would like a name to take with me to represent this beautiful circle that I have shared in. For the last couple months it has been quite a blessing – to have and to gain truth and wisdom through experience in this group and with your teachings.

ABRAHAM: Certainly, one moment. Marin, to the best of my understanding with the English language, your name sounds like Kara. I am pleased to get to know your bubbly personality. Your enthusiasm is inspirational to all who know you. It is obvious that you do make great effort to find a place for yourself in this world. Worry not, child, that information is forthcoming. Your energy can best be spent in stillness and study. Have patience. Know that you are where you need to be right now. Everything will come with time. You do well.

Simon, my son: I am envisioning you coming out of some kind of fog. I am seeing you step out into the light of day. You are intelligent and have a great many brilliant ideas. I believe your experience up to this point is bringing you to the understanding that things you thought you wanted are not really what you wanted after all. You are coming into a new mental clarity. Allow your intellect to rise to the top. Allow Father to define your happiness. You do bring a lot of happiness to others; and in this, there is joy for you; a deeper meaning in life is what will be the most fulfilling. You are doing well, be not discouraged. While you are a spiritual man, allow the intellect some room to gain balance. Have not worry, Simon, you do well.

And last, but not least, Sarauna, my daughter – our hostess week after week, who welcomes us with her motherly affection: I am always inspired by your balance, Sarauna, in life and in spirit. You are with common sense and compassion. You are driven and yet, flexible. I am always enjoying my time spent with you. You are pondering some ideas as of late, and I am in full support. I always say, genuine effort is worth something. You never know why one feels driven to go about some tasks; we always must ask ourselves if it serves the ego or the spirit; and with you, I have not worry. I am intrigued by your creativity and would encourage you to do as time permits. You are a rock to a great many individuals. How grateful are we that you have remained dedicated to serving such an unruly bunch. You do well.

I am going to take my leave. But first, I should express to you each my love and appreciation for your unique personalities. I love the good. I love the eccentric. I love your wisdom and your humor. Thank you for being with me over these many years. We can continue next time with more questions. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom. [Some group regular members were not present tonight's meeting. There was no meeting June 5th.]

Stay The Course In Following Father`s Will - Allowing Evolution to Unfold
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-12-2006
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always touched by your willingness to share the things of life. How many times have we shared sorrow? How often have we been overtaken by uncontrollable laughter?

When we set out to establish the Correcting Time, this group is indeed much of what it was envisioned such a group to look like. You have quite a ministry among you. We know our people here are real and genuine. We can freely admit that out in the everyday world we choose to show a certain side of ourselves. Here in this room, however, we find it completely safe to be our true selves.

I believe our last assignment was to read up on the Master's great decisions. I so admired the Master for upholding these decisions, no matter what. Many times He could have made His enemies look like fools, and yet He chose the natural way of allowing the will of God to unfold.

I am MARY. I also am inspired by the Master's immovable attitude concerning His life laws. You could say that the Master could have created attention for Himself and still have won the ear of the people. This is why Jesus was, and is, our sovereign universe upholder; He simply chose the way of God's will, and with no exceptions. As much as Jesus desired to save His people, He knew that any shortcuts would be fleeting and interfering with our agondonter status; and, interfering with God's will.

It is said: "What the Son desires and the Father wills, is!" The Master could have put on quite the show. He could have won over the people through miracles – and still, it would not have been enough to quench their miracle-seeking appetite. The Master chose the unfolding of natural evolution. He trusted the mind of God; He trusted the power of God. Jesus' practice of meditation and prayer kept Him strong in upholding these great decisions. The Master loved people, you could see it in His eyes and read it on His face.

Any good parent loves to bring joy to their child. The wise parent consults with the Father of all fathers on how to parent best. Even under such pressure, the Master stayed faithful to His decisions. Always was there time set aside for simple consultation. The Master knew there was always the struggle between the spirit and the animal. No matter how much pain might come, His loyalty was always to the Spirit.

That is all for now. I can take questions. Or, you can also request Abraham. Proceed.

SIMON: Mary, I am so grateful for this group that provides an anchor for me and my life. I am still assessing my own ministry. Sometimes I feel like I come up short. I wonder if I should make some drastic changes? or stay where I am and just improve my ministry through my work that I am currently doing? I am just up for doing Father's will the best way I can.

MARY: I think that sounds wonderful, Simon. The Father does not ask us to make great changes, but simply, small modifications at a time. Small changes are lasting and more acceptable to people. Upset in everyday living is a cause for stress and ill health. The Father would not have that for us. In the short time I have known you, Simon, I see you as someone who seeks acceptance. When you come to the realization that you have all the acceptance you will ever need through God the Father, then will peace abide in your heart and your ministry will come naturally. You are a sweet man. Your ability to show someone you care by listening to them, is big; it is quite an accomplishment. Take time to journal those things you have deep need for acceptance for. Spend time in meditation and know that Father loves you for you; He seeks nothing from you. That should be a cause for peace – and in that, natural ministry tasks will flow. Have not worry, Simon, you do well.

MIRIAM: Mary, this question is for either you or for Abraham. I haven't been here since February. I've been ministering to our little kitty, Chelsea, who just died. I thank you for being here. We've relied on Father and it has been hard. Don asked me to ask: "Do you have feedback regarding Chelsea?"

MARY: Yes, certainly. First of all, Miriam, I am happy to be in your presence. I know we have not known each other long but I admire your courage. Every living thing needs to be needed or be loved. In the case of your precious pet, you and Don have shared the value of taking care of one in need. I do know from firsthand experience there is no greater honor than to usher life to the next realm. Always does pain make you set aside trivial things and focus on the priorities in life. You and Don are at that age where life is becoming a bit more peaceful, and the caretaking of Chelsea helped you to band together more firmly. It is difficult in this throw-away society to stay married. You and Don have set such a beautiful example. There are hardships couples must face and learn to work as a team. Your precious pet provided such an experience. Know that nothing loved is ever lost. You are in a wonderful position to withdraw the meanings and values out of this particular experience, and that helps you to minister to others. Take comfort in the knowledge that life energy goes on and memories are kept alive by love. Have not worry; allow regular life to set back in. You have made some terrific decisions as of late – stand by them. Have not regret. You do well, Miriam, my daughter.

CALVIN: Mary, I would like your perspective regarding how you are depicted in the Da Vinci Code book and movie that was recently released. There is much discussion and even controversy on the talk shows about you. It is such a blessing, and yet so ironic to hear from you personally at this day and time where so much of the world is hearing perhaps a skewed story regarding you. But nonetheless...

MARY: I do find it all so interesting, for I have not known such notoriety. I am understanding the deeper meaning beyond the fiction – and that would be that Christ had set woman as man's equal many years ago, and the churches would not have it. Sometimes the truth must come along with fiction. And for you, my friends, I would stay true to the tool that brings you such detail of the Master's life – and that is the Urantia Book. I think that women are finding their place in the world – and it is not to take man's place from him, but to do what she does best. My hope of this controversy is that people come to realize there were women apostles, yes! and they were with courage, honor, and faith – so willing to die for their cause. I am with hope that the world will see that Father is no respecter of persons, and that all are equal in the kingdom of God. It is a time for women to stop complaining of what they are not allowed to do and simply take their place. This indeed, makes for a wonderful upstep to the Correcting Time. In the meantime, I find all the controversy to be entertaining. Good question. Thank you.

CALVIN: Thank you, not only for your answer but for your contribution to this world as a woman of faith and dedication – that is what I enjoyed from reading of you in the Urantia Book.

MARY: Beautifully said. I also thank you for your open mind and willingness to help create change.

SARUANA: [Inaudible – wondering about a book she had come across claiming to be from Abraham.]

MARY: There is truth in many things, yes. Abraham is a busy person; he has many irons in the fire, so to speak.

I am ABRAHAM. Sarauna, my daughter. I believe you already know the answer to this question. Any time individuals must receive credit for some spiritually inspired material, then you can count on human interference. I do, however, what I can to reach the masses. How blessed are mortals to have that internal compass to guide. Books are tools. Take from them the value, and discard the rest. Is this helping? (Mary: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: One more question.

MIRIAM: Can I say I can't believe how lucky we are. I've been away for five months but I knew you were all here. It is so neat to have the reality of you guys being here; the realness of it astounds me. It is almost unbelievable. Thank you.

ABRAHAM: Thank you, Miriam. It is with your faith, and the faith of all in this room, that brings about these lessons, this interaction. Yes, a group effort. I hope to be with you for quite some time, as does Mary.

I believe with that, I shall take my leave. I speak of each of you to my colleagues as if you are my children. I hope that is acceptable. I am honored to be your friend and Teacher. From Mary and myself, we bid you Godspeed and shalom.

In Being An Activist, Ask Father `What Can We Do For You`

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-19-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I am feeling so at home among you. I feel a sense of kindred spirits when we can gather. You have not only made a home, you have established a point of light. We are not seeing wavering faith here, but a real desire to 'add to' and not 'take away.'

The ego-side of man will 'take,' in order to build upon ego; and when there is no more to take, he is on to something new. The spirit side of man longs to 'give,' to 'add to,' and to be 'a part of.' The spirit desires to be one with the kingdom of God – not set up high for all to see, no, but simply one with the Father and all mortal brothers and sisters.

Yes, we see the Correcting Time as progressive now because mortals are longing to give. We have seen the effects of godlessness, and now we definitely observe mortals paying attention to a higher power.

We are somewhat soldiers in Father's kingdom working for His will to be made manifest – in our personal lives as well as our communities. As we mature in spirit, we are with desire to ask Father: 'What can we do for you?' With this mindset we begin to have a bit more understanding of our kingdom brothers and sisters, and are a bit less judgmental.

Are we activists? We certainly are! We need not be out in front to take attention and energy for our cause, no! our work as activists is to tend to the lesser; to improve our personal surroundings with spirit, and to be an example of the personage of Christ Michael. Our commitment to the Teaching Mission and Correcting Time--a commitment to our Brother/Father and His associates--is our key to the door to Light and Life.

I am MARY. I am feeling more and more connected to you each time we meet. I am always amazed by your durability; you can take a punch, get up and dust yourself off and stand your ground. I am pleased to be among you that seek not miracles and proof that God's kingdom is real. The Spirit has become a natural part of your lives, it simply is.

I am in understanding of your mortal circumstances – the everyday tasks; the obligations of work and home. I am in understanding of being reborn in spirit – to have my mortal life transformed and feel that new awakening.

How grateful was I to be in the presence of the Master, to learn that Father really does give us all that we need, and that most of the time we worry for nothing. You must know that while events in your lives are confusing, they are always connected to some larger kingdom task, and sometimes we must simply sit back and be observant, be open to the call.

I am not certain how the ego subsides when the spirit is allowed to take charge. I do not know if ego diminishes or, is somehow satisfied by the spirit. I do know however, that once you shed your mortal form, the ego is not so much of an issue – we become free from animal survival instincts. I am certain that once I allowed the spirit to lead, I had not desire to be out in front, so to speak, and be noticed as a hero. I was desirous of simply giving and 'being a part.'

This week we are to give an offering to Father of 'what can we do for Him.' We are quiet activists in our own way as we allow the spirit to lead. As we seek not miracles, believe me, a new world unfolds before our eyes. Also this week, we seek to add, to give. I am honored to be among you that choose to make the spirit be made manifest in everyday living. I thank you for allowing me to work side by side with you as kingdom believers, as does Abraham.

And with that, we shall take our leave. Know that our love is ever growing, as is our correction in its many facets. Go in peace. Shalom.

Seeking Escape Delays Father's Plan And Needed Experience
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-26-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. My gratitude to each of you. It is a blessing to know your dedication to Michael supersedes the trivial. I am aware of all the small things done to make this meeting happen. I am grateful to you each who believe there is no task too small to help the Correcting Time move forward. Father really is in all the details.

Last week we discussed what we can offer Father – or how we can add to the kingdom. I enjoyed your views on this topic. I would perhaps offer a few of my own:

Any time one is sincerely desiring to allow Father's will to unfold, he or she is certainly adding to the kingdom. Even during times of difficulty – when you can remain committed to drinking the cup that is before you, I believe that is an offering to Father. I am not talking about sacrifice, no; I am talking about the courage to stay true to your commitment to serving our 'One God.'

We can remember the Master in the garden of Gethsemane with His apostles who could not keep watch with Him even for a moment. Jesus was coming into the knowledge that the cup set before Him was indeed going to be the most difficult experience He had had on Earth so far. The Master's mind was in a whirl of human emotions versus spiritual logic. Indeed, the idea to seek escape had crossed His mind; His mortal side wanted very much to be free from those horrendous upcoming events and the pain of separation from His mortal fellows.

Throughout the mortal life we have choices – to escape, and/or postpone pain. It is natural for mortals to seek the way of ease, yes; it's not anything to feel guilt over, no! it is all understood by Father and incorporated into His plans for you. Should you choose to bypass certain experiences – knowing what you know now, understand that these experiences will indeed come back around.

As the Master lay face-down in the garden longing for moral support, He knew that to take the road of escape robbed Him of experience that added to the sum total of who He was to be. It took time for Jesus' mind to find reconciliation to the spiritual logic. He was a being of faith, no doubt, but His mortal side still felt the pull of emotion; and believe me, this is an energy hard to tame.

The Master however, understood His commitment and had long before promised to drink the cup 'no matter what.' Through pain, through confusion, through the unknown, it mattered not – His dedication was to Father, and therefore, He chose not escape but to embrace what that experience had to offer.

Do you need to experience great emotional pain to have growth? Of course not, for we can see that a great deal of emotional upset is generated by our very own mortal behavior. It is understandable to have thoughts of escape, and it is honorable to choose not to act upon those thoughts. Many mortal difficulties simply require you to be observant and just be in the moment with 'what is.' It is always recommended that a mind not so busy is more apt to be open to Father and allow Him to interpret the moment.

Most of mortal anxiety is simply fear of the unknown. Father is more than happy to aid you in gaining a spiritually logical definition – this is why we have recommended the good practice of stillness. As mortals, we cannot help it that much of the time we look for escape when trudging through the muck of our difficulties; it is well understood and not to have worry. I recommend that instead of some form of escape, that you simply be observant and with a quiet mind.

We can look back in the story of our Master and see that the outcome of His mindal reconciliation led to Him being granted a ministering angel that assisted and comforted him that day in the garden. This (celestial assistance) is not uncommon – there will be many times when you have chosen to face extreme experience that there will be comfort from on high – you’ll know it when you get it; many of you already know of it. A step forward in faith shows Father you are willing to do His bidding; and indeed does He grant us what we need to accomplish anything.

This week, let us ponder the thoughts of escape. How does delaying experience serve us? How does the choice of following through with our commitment to drinking the cup bring us fulfillment? Find some examples of spiritual logic. What does that mean?

My heart is getting bigger and bigger each time we are together. I am with the utmost feelings of love for you each. Until next time, shalom. [No meeting on July 3, 2006.]

Temporary Escape To Reconnect With Father Is Important

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-10-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am with such gratitude to communicate with you together on this weekly basis. Your fellowship provides fertile ground for new ideas and concepts. In all that can drag one down in the course of mortal living, it is wonderful to spend time together to maintain a positive outlook and keep strong in faith.

For many of you, your fellowship here is a safe place to be your true selves. You each can count on each other for love and support; but more-so, I believe you put truth above that. Yes, wise indeed! Each one of you here has a ministry (or branches, so to speak) that filtrate out into your everyday lives. The nourishment you receive here spiritually strengthens you to be productive in your outreach. We are grateful for your support of one another and of this ministry.

I am seeing a great deal of strength among the lot of you, yes. You are finding more courage to embrace universal laws and finding the spiritual fruits therefrom. You are showing that you are part of the whole and not the whole itself. Your experience has given you a great deal of training. And as much as you believe you failed many of life’s tests, you must know that for the most part you have stayed the course – that is good for you as the individual, and for all of us as the whole.

I am MARY. I am glad to be with you again. I am in understanding of Abraham’s topic as of late on spiritual logic and avenues of mortal escape. Every mortal needs to periodically remove themselves from the stimulation of everyday life. Everyone needs to be refreshed, re-energized. There are many forms of mindal rest that would be a wonderful avenue of temporary escape – strengthening you to continue to stay on task for the ministry and the Mission.

I am brought back to my days on the Earth when daily living would become somewhat stressful among my sister apostles and myself. It would always be obvious to the Master that we were in need of a break; He would tell us that when our personal agendas would mix with the ministry, then it is time to step back, to find rest and recreation.

Jesus set for us a good example in His diligence in finding time for just He and Father; even then, always were His fellows seeking His assistance. If the Master had not gone off on his own, without word to His brethren, He might not have been able to go at all. The Master showed us 'in everyday life' whom He served; His self-interests were not first.

Jesus looked at many of life's occurrences as simple 'ministry.' It was spiritually logical to Him that Father was likely to be working through Him when least expected. He therefore, remained observant and could tell from the levels of serenity within Him if He was on the right track. Of course when the Master was not clear on an issue, He would find escape from the noise of life to spend time with Father. Jesus found clarity of mind in many other activities such as nature and science; He often pondered the inner workings of the various ecosystems.

Also was the Master able to lighten any tense circumstance with humor and play. To spend time with the youth reminded Him of His carefree days and what was important to young people. He always said that many of us took our lives much too seriously. Jesus also loved all kinds of art. He found the creative side of man to be that side which was close to God. He taught that a great deal of art reflected God's personality - truly inspiring, yes.

I realize many of you are dedicated to your good standing as a citizen in this mortal life - and yes, you should be. We have to be aware, however, when overmuch obligation would have us find need of serious escape; or, just some simple rest and reversion. The amount in which you are close to your indwelling Father will be the direct proportion of information you will be able to receive at any given time. I am meaning, if you call on Father only in an emergency, or upon general occasion, then are you only able to understand general instruction.

The Master had a well-worn path to Father - this is expected as well as recommended. Life is meant to be joy-filled; the more spiritually logical you become, the more you will see that joy enters into all areas of life - work, obligations, family, etc.

This week, find positive escape from frail emotional states. Be observant in the uncomfortable. Know that your ministry is possible at any time and place. That is all. From Abraham and myself, we bid you God-speed and send you with our love. Until next time, shalom.

Using Spiritual Logic To Dissect The Issues of Life, As Did The Master
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 07-17-2006
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am comforted to be back in familiar territory. I so value our friendship. I am with renewed optimism each time we gather. While other areas of my ministry may seem to come apart, I am always made lighter to have a visit with you.

We may be different from one another in many areas, but in the most important area we have connection – that being on the soul-level. It is important to have family ties, so to speak, individuals who help to keep us balanced. We can feel peace when we know there are loving individuals who will be honest with us.

We have been discussing ‘spiritual logic’ as of late; something that has worked for me for many years. I was not really an emotional individual in my mortal days, I leaned more toward facts and the reality that was before my eyes. My interest mostly lied with those desires I could make a reality. Learning to focus upon spiritual logic was indeed a good guideline for me to focus on.

I am MARY. Once again, greetings. I am also with a comfort that helps to propel me into the week ahead with good thoughts. Unlike my mentor and friend, Abraham, I was an emotional creature; I relied upon instinct to survive.

The Master’s display of learning to be spiritually logical helped in taming my emotions – or at least filtering them through a cold hard look at reality. I had always hurt for what was lost. I had regretted my past and longed to make it right. I wanted to be clean of mistakes, and this situation of self-pity was a trap that kept me repeating the same pattern. My outlook was hopeless, and I lived my life as such.

The Master’s ministry was an oasis in the desert. As I learned about spiritual logic, I realized that what I believed to be lost was indeed that valuable experience which was adding to the person I was becoming. I was shown that my past behavior was not doomed to keep repeating, but that I could be master over those things that enslaved me. I realized my emotional side that tended to irrationally act out needed to be severely reprimanded.

I had felt I needed to be hard on myself, for this is the language that I understood. Although I had the Master to consult with – and yes, I was in understanding of the Father’s love – but still, I had to find that place within myself where I could best receive Father’s guidance. Certainly, in that state of emotional upset I was not in awareness of the kingdom realities.

The Masters' many lessons on spiritual logic had me to take a certain worrisome problem and dissect it with the logic of the Master. Can you not hear Him say: “How does this problem affect eternity?” “What value can you find from this difficulty?” “How can you incorporate this lesson into the everyday habits of life?”

The Master had always taught us 'checkpoints' where we could measure ourselves up with the lessons of spiritual history – taking Eve for example, knowing how she did shortcut Father’s plan. There are always past lessons we can filter our difficulties through.

What a blessing at that time to have the Master before my eyes. And though it took a while to see, his presence was even more a blessing after He poured out His Spirit of Truth. My friends, you have access to this Spirit of Truth at any time – it is the embodiment of spiritual logic and a wonderful filter to strain your difficulties through.

That is all. I am always honored to be among your family togetherness, and am looking forward to our future. From Abraham and myself, we send you our love. Until next time, shalom.

Finding Meaning, Value, and Understanding In Our Challenges

Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 07-24-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am intrigued this evening listening to your conversation. I am enlightened by your display of spiritual logic. I am grateful to always add to the scaffolding of meanings and values. I am grateful to have this soul closeness with each of you. How blessed I am to have served with you these many years. I am enjoying the addition you bring to my spiritual understanding.

Even though I wore the flesh many years ago it would seem many of the issues of living stay the same. I am with joy to see you each are willing to work out difficulties together; no one is running away and everyone is adding to the table of discussion, which holds an abundance of spiritual food.

I am EMULAN. My greatest pleasure to be back here with you. I have really enjoyed the lessons on spiritual logic. Abraham has asked me to say a few words. As always, my understanding is an interpretation of my experience and education.

My friends, you know well of my story. It feels wonderful to have you know me and allow me to be open. My life in the flesh brought me great pain at one point; the future seemed dim, I was seemingly trapped within my own mind and had not the ability to reason. Pain, whether physical or emotional, is traumatic.

It takes time to filter experience through to your understanding. It would seem my understanding made its first appearance when I was in complete surrender. I sincerely wished for death and had no place to go except to my reservoir of faith, which was not a lot. Every day, small happenings would occur that would align my understanding and bring me new meanings.

I remember that in the mental illness facility of which I was held, I had watched a great deal of individuals battle their demons; I began to look upon these individuals as God's children; they were each loveable in their own way. I learned probably more from other patients concerning faith and spiritual logic than I did from doctors or books. As my ability to reason returned, I was able to shape my tragedy into the wonderful lesson that would not only help me to grow as a kingdom son, but also help others to endure.

We have heard: "Fight the good fight of faith." And in this mortal life, indeed, it is a struggle; it is attainable, yes, but still a struggle. From the struggle comes new light; new tools to advance in your spiritual and mortal life. My struggle was indeed well worth the reward, and I am with complete assurance that all was lent to an ultimate good. I am with joy to watch you grow and draw ever closer to the kingdom family. Well done.

I am ABRAHAM. Our gratitude to a wonderful brother and Teacher. This week let us ponder Emulan's lesson on finding value in our challenges. How do we fight the good fight of faith? What brings us back to our place of personal peace?

That is all. From all of us, we are wishing you Godspeed into the week ahead. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Feeling Unworthy | Father Is Your Working Partner | He Does Not Love Conditionally
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-31-2006
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is such an honor to be among you, kingdom believers. I am with a sense of peace among you. You are easy to talk to. I have nothing to do to win you over. I am with gratitude to be so welcomed. I thank you. I learn a great deal from the individuals in this group, as well as out into the Teaching Mission in general.

We each must remember that this Correcting Time is somewhat experimental. We will have our moments of seeming defeat, as well as short bouts of victory. You of open mind and heart make our transition into the new era easy and a pleasure. I understand at times there is wavering faith, but even more grateful are we to be in the company of those willing to endure and stay the course. This evening, as we stay with the topic of spiritual logic, we will discuss that tendency of mortals to experience wavering faith.

I am MARY. I am again overjoyed to be in your midst. My experience in wavering faith was much like many of yours. First of all, it was difficult to find faith in anything or anyone who would have me as I am. I found it difficult to believe in 'my worthiness' to receive something so much larger than I could even conceive.

As a child, I was made to feel as if I was a constant burden. I learned to stay out of sight; I attempted to be as little trouble as possible. And because of that, many times I had not dared to ask for what I needed - therefore, I went without. I felt unworthy of any caretaking. So upon meeting my sisters and learning that 'I was loved simply because I existed,' this was difficult for me to even fathom.

According to societys' conditions, I was not to be valued. And really, believing there was indeed a higher power who would have me as I am, took some reconciliation of mind. It was the Masters' easy-going attitude toward me that made me feel like a true sister in the kingdom. I was made to feel a part of the whole and prayed that I would not do anything to discount that status.

Faith for me was a long journey and appeared to have so many branches of learning. I had once believed there was indeed something I could do to either drive God from me, or to be punished by Him in some manner. The Master's reflection of the Father was so beautiful in the fact that it was so casual. It was obvious that what 'society valued' and 'what the Master taught us to value' differed in so many ways.

I really had to break free from my lifelong conditioning of 'unworthy' belief to believe that I was worthy; that I was not in need of continuous punishment, and to know there was nothing I could do to make myself a spiritual orphan. In the second stage of my growing faith, I came to know that struggle between the spirit and the animal. I realized that my work needed to be about the Father, and not about gaining credit for my good works.

As you are with some assurance that you are a participant in this kingdom adventure, you may almost believe at some point you should not make any more mistakes – and that if you did, Father would certainly be much more harsh in teaching you a lesson. Of course, this is erroneous thinking!

My friends, every mortal shall know this experience; and hopefully, in their life in the flesh, will come to understand that because you are with faith you are blessed to know better when you do make mistakes, and not with the feelings of punishment forthcoming and unworthiness. It is easy to feel punished or alone during your times when you have knowingly (or even unknowingly) set aside Father's will in favor of selfishness. Dangerous-thinking is when you still wear the mortal flesh and are believing that you are infallible.

The comfort in our topic this evening is that Father is your working partner. Our Divine Parent is not a punisher or loving you 'conditionally,' no! He is at every moment by your side, willing to show you a better way. Father does not want for your pain. As a good father does, He longs to see you closer to Him. He longs for your success.

In this modern age, what erroneous thoughts do we still hold of our understanding of the First Source and Center? It is understood the Urantia Book is simply a tool – but still, it is the best guideline you have in written form. Let us make effort this week to review its pages on faith. [Editor's note: Here are some other suggested links on faith: Child-like faith; Jesus' example of living faith.] This week, I am challenging you to use love more in your daily doings. Reflect upon the meaning of love. Is it an emotion? or an energy! Is love in short supply? or is it a never-ending well from which we can draw upon!

Our lesson is cut short, but think not less of the importance of our topic. Have some discussion. Know that we stand by and hopefully add to your well of this never-ending energy of which we speak of here tonight. As always, our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

I'm sorry, there are no questions this evening. We are due to be elsewhere. As always, we cherish our time with each one of you. Think not that we lose track of any of our student/friends. Our love is ever growing. From Abraham and myself, shalom.

Recognizing And Using Real Love More In Everyday Living

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-07-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Let us take a moment to feel the presence of our Father weaving in and out our beings. [pause.] How grateful we are to you, Father. You strengthen us in every way. You give us the determination to carry on. We are in awe of one who can do so much and ask for so little.

I am with gratitude to be among you, my friends and associates. Each time we meet I am made more. How blessed are we to have our fellowship and grow together as kingdom believers. You are correct in that the world as of late is buzzing with newness. In our efforts we are finding that individuals are turning to something higher than mankind; faith is being exercised. As you said, many still hold old beliefs in man's God.

In this phase of the Correcting Time, many erroneous foundations of faith are made to crumble; and unfortunately, this is creating some chaos in energy. As hard as it is, change is good. Evolution is always leading to an ultimate good. As we witness horrific events, we must keep with spiritual logic and know that Father is well aware of what is going on.

In your own personal surroundings, it is difficult to not be dragged into drama and emotional upset. Many mortals find this drama to serve some purpose. It seems to some that only chaos is productive. You that have been Mission students seek somewhat of a more serene ministry, yes, for it is difficult to deal with the anxiety going on around you. I mean not to set you apart as more blessed than another, but many individuals are not on a spiritual path and see serenity or peace as boredom. To some, chaos really does serve the ego.

Many individuals are starved for true love. We all know the Source of this true love, while some may not know it at all. Individuals search every day for an acceptance that cannot be fulfilled by their fellows. It is important that our ministry reflects an inner joy, an inner peace, and the fulfillment of true love from the First Source and Center.

In all our daily activities we can tend to lose the feeling of love; and as such, we can become accustomed to overlooking real love. Love, as displayed in society today, has a great deal to do with gratification and materialism. You know real love when you have it, for this kind of love is not fleeting and does not cause worry; it fulfills that inner peace that has been a struggle to recognize.

This week, I am challenging you to use love more in your daily doings. Reflect upon the meaning of love. Is it an emotion? or an energy! Is love in short supply? or is it a never-ending well from which we can draw upon!

Our lesson is cut short, but think not less of the importance of our topic. Have some discussion. Know that we stand by and hopefully add to your well of this never-ending energy of which we speak of here tonight. As always, our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Recognizing And Using Real Love More In Everyday Living

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-07-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Let us take a moment to feel the presence of our Father weaving in and out our beings. [pause.] How grateful we are to you, Father. You strengthen us in every way. You give us the determination to carry on. We are in awe of one who can do so much and ask for so little.

I am with gratitude to be among you, my friends and associates. Each time we meet I am made more. How blessed are we to have our fellowship and grow together as kingdom believers. You are correct in that the world as of late is buzzing with newness. In our efforts we are finding that individuals are turning to something higher than mankind; faith is being exercised. As you said, many still hold old beliefs in man's God.

In this phase of the Correcting Time, many erroneous foundations of faith are made to crumble; and unfortunately, this is creating some chaos in energy. As hard as it is, change is good. Evolution is always leading to an ultimate good. As we witness horrific events, we must keep with spiritual logic and know that Father is well aware of what is going on.

In your own personal surroundings, it is difficult to not be dragged into drama and emotional upset. Many mortals find this drama to serve some purpose. It seems to some that only chaos is productive. You that have been Mission students seek somewhat of a more serene ministry, yes, for it is difficult to deal with the anxiety going on around you. I mean not to set you apart as more blessed than another, but many individuals are not on a spiritual path and see serenity or peace as boredom. To some, chaos really does serve the ego.

Many individuals are starved for true love. We all know the Source of this true love, while some may not know it at all. Individuals search every day for an acceptance that cannot be fulfilled by their fellows. It is important that our ministry reflects an inner joy, an inner peace, and the fulfillment of true love from the First Source and Center.

In all our daily activities we can tend to lose the feeling of love; and as such, we can become accustomed to overlooking real love. Love, as displayed in society today, has a great deal to do with gratification and materialism. You know real love when you have it, for this kind of love is not fleeting and does not cause worry; it fulfills that inner peace that has been a struggle to recognize.

This week, I am challenging you to use love more in your daily doings. Reflect upon the meaning of love. Is it an emotion? or an energy! Is love in short supply? or is it a never-ending well from which we can draw upon!

Our lesson is cut short, but think not less of the importance of our topic. Have some discussion. Know that we stand by and hopefully add to your well of this never-ending energy of which we speak of here tonight. As always, our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Demonstrate The Master's Version Of Love, Without Judgment and Expectations for Self
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-14-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying this wealth of love and compassion for one another; it is what we hope for in the brotherhood, our fellowship.

It seems many times in this society that age is detested or unvalued – that is, materialistically-speaking. Should society view age with spiritual logic they could learn so much from those who know, for those who have lived have a great deal to offer the inexperienced.

Likewise, it is a great gift to those moving into Light and Life to begin to see with spiritual eyes instead of material – that daily life holds a great deal of meanings and values which does continue to drive individuals to welcome newness.

Back to the topic of love: I should say, I spent a few moments with you each this week; I find you to be very loving and caring individuals; you each show it in many ways. To me, in my day, I felt love was surely a weakness. Thoughts of love took me away from my focus on obtaining my ego needs. I was indeed bent on power. I valued wisdom and strength over the spiritual definition of love.

I found love to be painful; and yet, that was the very thing that drew me to question God, for I had longed to know the reason for pain and why love could make me do crazy things. Machiventa taught me that love is God's hand in action – an energy that held a great deal more power than anything, especially ego-needs. It seemed clear that conquering a city or obtaining more wealth was nothing compared to the smile on a child's face. That was a lesson well learned, and I used it throughout the remainder of my earthly career.

I had deep sorrow and pain when having lost loved ones or having some sort of turmoil with those I cared for. I almost became convinced that it is better to have not loved them than to be weakened by pain and the 'fear of loss.' Machiventa was so correct when he taught me that the true lessons of life were in my dealings with my loved ones – in learning to let go and simply trust God.

Yes, Machiventa was reassuring in the fact that God always brought about an ultimate good in any decision, good or bad, as the Master lived and revealed in his mortal life. It really is a part of our ministry to continually demonstrate the Master's version of love: He was acceptance without judgment; He was without motive or manipulation; He was without the fear of loss, or mistrusting the Father and the ultimate good.

As you grow in your spirituality, the next phase of your eternal career becomes more real and accessible. This life and the next will run together so that we can believe that in the end, all is made well. We can know as many people as possible and have love for them all – there is no limit, and believe me, it is all valuable.

This week, let us love as the Master loved – without judgment! and, without motive of expecting anything in return. Take upon yourselves the joy that real love brings. Let us allow the energy of love to create change. Have willingness.

That is all. Know that I am with growing love for you each. Know that we are always at hand should you have need. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

The Life of Jesus Helps Us To Have Full Trust In Father
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-21-2006

Back

[According to the Urantia Book revelation, this day, August 21st, is the actual birth date of Jesus, the babe of Bethlehem.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How blessed are we to have one another. It is wonderful to spend these few moments with you on this day, the day of our Lord's birth.

Jesus said to His apostles, "How much more you will learn when I come in a different form as the new Teacher." All these topics you have discussed this evening are with abounding hope that the Master's Spirit of Truth can easily handle things globally. Imagine millions more like yourselves who want for peace in the world. Individuals practically want for the same things in life.

Our gratitude to Father and His associates for putting the plan of correction into action. Progress seems slow, but we are talking about mortals on a mortal world where there is no magic wand! There is however, caring individuals who do what they can to promote truth, beauty, and goodness. A little willingness is all that is required to create positive change.

I am with the belief that when a child is in quite enough trouble they will eventually turn to the parent. I believe in this time of Correction, the child 'Urantia' is turning to its Universal Father. We rejoice.

I am MARY. I am with gratitude to spend this time with you who continue to look forward to working with the Master in everyday life. I am made glad to look back on His day to see how seemingly small beginnings on this world created great change.

The life and teachings of Christ did not cure the world, no! but it sure created great change or enough upheaval, so to speak, that individuals would begin to trust in the good Father who is unseen, as opposed to a cruel ruler who could make their lives miserable if they did not do His bidding. In other words, people began to trust God more, and to fear the material repercussions, less.

This Correcting Time is not a cure for the ills of society, it is only a step in evolution. Individuals must have the willingness to give of themselves to create greater change in any capacity. You that are the good citizen of your community, create positive change. You that are the good parent, create positive change. You that serve coffee with a smile to your customers, do the same. Yes, from individuals who serve in a large ministry, to one person who simply aids in a fellow's mood - these are those who will lead our world to different times.

Will we be more civilized? I don't know. but hopefully. At some point, we will all have that willingness to be open to creating change for the better. You may never see your name in lights or on the pages in a book. You may never be known by mankind or given all the credit you are due. But believe me, when you are with the understanding of what it means to be a kingdom sojourner, then you will know that any notoriety is not necessary, for you are with the new Teacher - the Spirit of Truth. While this Spirit of Truth is outside of your vision, He is becoming more readily utilized.

This week – as we think over the Master's birth let us review the good throughout His life. Let us not concentrate on those times of His sorrow or how certain individuals made fatal mistakes, no! but let us remember the Master's enjoyment in fraternizing with children; how He was so amused by His elders; how He was awestruck by the beauty of the planet; how He was so merciful even in the face of something that we ourselves could not possibly bear. Let us reflect on how good the Master was to His mother, His brothers, His sisters. How happy was Joseph to have had Jesus for those fourteen years? Believe me, Joseph was a simple man and Jesus brought him pure joy.

Also this week, let us remember how the apostles loved the Master – so much so that they were willing to give up all things earthly to serve in His ministry. And, as mentioned earlier, let us ponder upon how Jesus helped uplift the standing of women in communities. He was our example, yes; and still is. I would end our meeting with a prayer.

Our Father over all things, we are with humble gratitude to accept your gift of change from two-thousand years ago. We are in understanding of our place in the Correcting Time and want to make the most out of every moment. Help us to see more, hear more, love more, and live more. Thank you for our Master, our Brother/Father. Amen and shalom.

Living The Life Of Spirit Is Not A Life Of Ease. Real Life IS Our Ministry

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-28-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am here because of your faith. You each, as individuals, have a great deal of faith that is displayed daily. This faith does a great deal to help our cause.

You each have a history that has brought you to this point in time. You each have been placed carefully; this is not accidental. Your lives are not simply 'by chance,' no! a plan was prepared long ago. You were called, you accepted the call, and trust me, you are doing very well. Continue to carry on in your faith. Think not that every day is simply accidental. You are forerunners in this Mission and carry a message. You are strategically placed. Lose not faith. Lose not focus.

Many things will happen that you don't understand. These things are simply part of something bigger that helps our Correcting Time to grow. The world is at a crucial time of decision-making; there is a war in the hearts of men. We are fighting to bring awareness of truth, beauty, and goodness. Have not worry, my friends. Keep an eye single to the glory of God.

It is sometimes funny when people who are following the Spirit believe that normal life will simply escape them. Look at the apostles, they sought a place of honor and yet, there was none – they still had to work for their supper; they still had to find a place to lay their heads at night; they still had to clothe their bodies.

The apostles' ministry was 'as they lived their lives.' They were not set above normal life, no, they still had the same issues as anybody else. These men and women ambassadors were only with the Master about three years; their greatest work was after He was gone. When the apostles were left to themselves, that's when the real work began.

Yes, my friends – real life is our ministry. Your issues with family, work, money, community, is your ministry. Lose not faith. Remember to keep observant. Be aware of your levels of emotionalism – a calm mind has a greater capacity to receive Father's words.

I want to speak with you each personally this week. Make time for me in the stillness. Together we are to carry on. That is all. My love is growing for you always. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom. [There was a possible September 4th lesson, still not found.]

In Ministering We Also Need Ministered To
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-11-2006
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Grateful am I to be surrounded by such faithful children. Your inquisitive minds always drive me to do further research on my own for increased knowledge. It is an honor to be with individuals who can think of the universe—in its grandest form on down to its most microscopic. Such is our Correcting Time, our small ripples create great waves of change. And by that, I mean change in any manner of thinking; it could be positive or negative—either way, an ultimate good results.

This is the beauty of faith. We can look at what we are handed, and feel within the depth of our souls that this is not all; there is always more, there is always deeper meanings and values. The Correcting Time was never meant to abruptly shake man from his spiritual slumber; the Correcting Time was only to plant seeds that man would want to grow for himself. I appreciate knowing those small steps you each take in helping our Correcting Time to take firm root in an enduring and fertile soil.

The last time we spoke together as a group we remembered the apostles learning to live the ministry in everyday life. As the apostles had to learn, we must also learn – that the ministry is also for us, personally. We are to be cared for also. We are to learn and grow, as well as teach and uphold faith.

It seems there are certain times in the mortal life that one wishes not to be seen as needy. We see it as a propensity that even those who would consider themselves to be forerunners in a Teaching Mission such as ours can believe they are to minister to, and are in need no longer of receiving ministry.

As we look back on the Master's life, we can see His effort made to rally the apostles to uphold Him in His cause; but as mortals often do, they fell short. The Master, however, maintained His strength in putting total faith in Father and knowing that with Father all things are possible.

Things in this mortal life might not always turn out as we hope, but at least we can count on sufficient strength to weather any storm. Many things will seem to fall short of your expectations in this life. The most mindfully healthy thing we can expect is Father's participation, in whatever form that may come in.

This week, I ask not for assignments but for you to find rest and reversion. Take time to play and find the lighter side to living, for these past few weeks have created enough serious thought. This week we shall give our minds some rest. That is all. My love is ever growing for you each. Go in peace. Shalom.

Surrendering To Father Brings A New And Better Way
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-18-2006
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I thank you each for your participation in the wellness of our group. It is apparent that you each take a certain amount of responsibility to create peace. Each of you really do have a gentle side; your tact and humor have this area of our Mission running like a well-oiled machine.

I trust that you all had some sort of rest and reversion this week. It is healing in many ways - physically, mentally, spiritually - to rise above your concerns and find rest.

I am MARY. How wonderful it is to be with you again. It would seem that today's mortal life holds so many issues to ponder. It would seem that the world moves at top speed; and even then, to many, it never seems like enough.

In my day I mostly worried about survival. It seems that the larger issues of that day and age were 'out of reach' for the people; we were deeply involved in 'tradition,' and if one person tried to create change, of course they were going against what has always been taught to be right.

Today you have more freedom to break from tradition and to search out new and better ways for the quality of everyday living. Technology puts the world's issues at your fingertips; so much information is readily available. I suppose in my day, life was much more simple because of the lack of available knowledge.

We see the majority of individuals on Urantia as good people, all wanting a just and united world. Unfortunately, there are those still bound by old tradition that keeps the cycle of ignorance in motion.

My friends, how you live your very lives is the best you can do for our cause. Doing what you think is right and good sends a message - it is easy, really. Of course Father will set you up for special tasks that help in our rippling continuum for the Correcting Time. You can say 'yes' or 'no' to these assignments, it matters not, the time of Correction moves forward, regardless.

I do know that time made to clear the mind is always a blank canvas for Father. Stillness is one way to rise above those thoughts that consume your mind. There are other methods as well that refresh your mind and improve your attitude; and this is individual, of course. Those things you find that help feed your soul are also good for the mindal refreshment and rejuvenation.

As a young woman, I was plagued in mind with those things I needed to do to survive.

It was somewhat animalistic and all-consuming. How grateful I was to meet my sisters, who finally convinced me there was a better way. At first, I rejected my new sisters' ideas, wondering: "How would I maintain my self-support? "How will I eat? "Where will I lay my head at night?"

It took some surrendering, yes, to be open to those seeds that Father was trying to plant. It was a struggle for me to believe there was any better way, and that I could actually be empowered to create it. Surrendering, for me, was indeed cleansing; I felt a release from the pressures of the world. I knew that Father knew everything I had ever done – and still, He was there to help me change in mind. I was reprieved, so to speak, of my past sins, and new life was in the works.

This week, we want to suggest pondering the issue of surrender and what it meant when the Master said: "He who tries to save his life will lose it, and he who loses it for my sake will be saved." Rise above all that external stimulation, my friends. Find time each day to feed the soul.

We are so honored to be among you as kingdom believers. That is all. From Abraham and myself, we bid you, shalom.

Surrender Is Stillness And Faith, Allowing Father His Space | A Word Regarding the Muslim Faith

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-25-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am finding your new ideas for keeping your minds spiritually focused at our meeting-time very wise indeed. In this fast-paced world sometimes we must squeeze the most out of every minute. Your intentions are honorable; and for that, I thank you.

Every day you take these small pearls of wisdom out into the world and try to make a difference. I am made glad to know that you are seeking wisdom and focus on something that you know to be tried and true. We are grateful you are not standing upon wish-fulfillment, which brings us to last week's topic on surrender.

Surrender is not simply doing nothing; sometimes it is a grueling effort to forgo what outcome you would wish for and allow Father His space. Surrender, in our definition, is not the same as man's definition. Surrender is not weak or lying down to be overtaken. Surrender is stillness and faith.

We need not be limited by our own capacity for wisdom, no, for we have access to the eternal ages of wisdom. Surrender is empowerment to see various possibilities and find courage to take steps toward actual solutions. Surrendering is more of a mental cleansing – it is rest from the exhaustion from inner struggle; it is hope that you have help, always. Surrender is the assurance that you are not alone; it is a rescue, so to speak, from erroneous thinking.

With each generation there are drastic changes, and we as Mission participants have to be able to see long distances; we are going to require a great capacity from you each to accept the 'abnormal.' Surrendering our own wishful thinking will help to usher in higher thought, more understanding of the past, and encouragement for the future. Our Mother Spirit is quite knowledgeable of the most progressive way to welcome surrender. As we re-create the definition in our minds, let us request Mother's input. This evening I thought I would take questions if there are any.

HARRISON: Abraham, in Urantia Book there is a section where Ganid talks about the other religions of the world. And in reading this, I see that the good things about those religions were emphasized, but nothing about the Muslim religion – for that matter, in any portion of the Urantia Book. I wonder if you could comment on that. It just struck me as odd, given the situation today with the Muslim faith.

ABRAHAM: The Muslim religion was not pointed out and elaborated on in the Urantia Book, specifically, correct; but there are some truths, nonetheless, that are contained therein. I realize that at one time the Muslim religion was in a more pure form. Over the years, man has had too much liberty with the changing of its true practice (Islam) – and it is not what it once was. The Urantia Book, at the time it was presented, touched upon those religions that were somewhat well-known for that day and age, and the Muslim religion evolved long after Jesus' day. The Urantia Papers would never mean to exclude anybody. Neither would it endorse anything that was harmful. Our Father is no respecter of persons and He knows of the many people who cannot escape their tradition. There are individuals, however, that will be forceful in truth 'as they understand it;' and this will bring a slow awakening. Unfortunately, great negativity will occur before positive things can be felt that is lasting. Is this helping, Harrison? (Harrison: Yes, thank you).

MIRIAM: I've been reading the Urantia Book recently where Gabriel and Michael were chatting about what He was going to do when He came to our world for His seventh bestowal. Gabriel said, in essence: "You can take care of the Lucifer default, and then leave the Spirit of Truth." Now this is just my impression. When Michael got down here and lived His life as Jesus, He followed His Father's will and lived it a little bit different than what was planned. That just blows me away how powerful that is; and, how possible for all of us to seek Father's will. Jesus lived the human experience in reaching for Father and that just seemed pretty profound to me. Am I off the wall here?

ABRAHAM: No, I understand. Even the most elaborate planning will need some revisions. All was dependent upon the will of Father. Part of Michael's gaining sovereignty over Nebadon met with the terms of eradicating the 'Lucifer Rebellion,' yes. Michael could have worked in other arenas as far as the Rebellion was concerned, but it was acceptable to take care of that business while Michael was here on His mortal bestowal. The Lucifer Rebellion was taken care of before the pouring out of the Spirit of Truth. The Spirit of Truth was to replace Jesus' presence and allow each man, woman, and child a chance to know Michael, personally. Again, this was helpful in establishing the kingdom of God here on Earth; it helped to put spiritual 'potentials' into 'actuals' and subdue some of the fear from the erroneous thinking from that day and age. Yes, overall, what a marvelous plan. I am in agreement on how profound, as you say, Jesus' mortal example was. How fortunate and blessed we are to have been the recipients of Michael's seventh bestowal experience.

MIRIAM: Thank you, Abraham. Can I ask a quick follow up? So the Lucifer thing was settled 'before' Jesus' crucifixion, as you just said; but the Lucifer 'extinction' you've told us about – that happened only a few years ago? In our prior lessons, you said that 'he was no more' because he, and those who held strong with him, had made the final decision which was contrary to the Father's will. Is not this a 'cause and effect' thing? Did it just roll out like it was supposed to then? Is that it, in a nutshell?

ABRAHAM: Somewhat. The last and recent event was the adjudication of the Lucifer Rebellion. The Ancients of Days sat in judgment of Lucifer and offered him a plea to redeem himself. But he was to have none of it; he was to continue on saving himself and feeling remorse over nothing. You could say that Michael's bestowal captured and held him, some two-thousand years ago; and the most recent event had judged and sentenced him. Does this help? (Miriam: Yes. Thank you.)

TECTRA: I understand that all these things on this planet will work out with evolution, over time. But can you speak to what is going on with the extreme polarization of ideas around the globe? The terrorist thing, for instance – one could go on and on how it is really creating a fearful and judgmental attitude with lots of people. Can you elaborate on this 'polarization of ideas?'

ABRAHAM: Certainly. A while back we had discussed individuals needing to make a decision concerning spirituality. There is the pressure from those 'on high' to bring this awareness to the masses, yes. And of course, in man's own way, he turns it into some form of materialism. There are extreme opinions of this day because there are extreme measures. There are inhumane acts that continue to plague a great deal of the so-called 'civilized society.' This is an era for the need of self-mastery more than ever. Man has such a hunger for power; and, for those things that supposedly bring him this power. The associates of Light and Life are attempting to reach individuals on a spiritual note. And yet, many of the world's people are solely concerned with 'survival.' And this everyday survival is the most that many can find energy for. The 'extreme' thoughts of today are really no different than those of any other day and generation. You are correct in that it is part of our evolution. The most that we can each do for this day and time is to live purposefully as individuals who are in favor of Father's ultimate good. Is this helping? (Tectra: Yes. Thank you.)

With that, I shall take my leave. I am so honored to be among you as a friend and co-worker. You each are truly unique and wonderful. My love is ever growing for you each. Until next time, shalom.

View Everyday Difficulties As Challenges And Advancement In Spirituality

Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-02-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I am enjoying the peaceful surroundings here this evening. I am appreciative of the realness. I believe that your comfort level with one another makes our communication much more smooth and accurate, for your mindal mode is in somewhat of a surrender-mode. You are accepting of my words and open to multiple meanings. Well done.

I am EMULAN. I am honored to be among you steadfast soldiers for the kingdom. I am always with open ears to learn of your experiences and watch the tides of Urantia turn toward Light and Life.

I know this time of year can be heavy for some of you. On my world, we had similar seasons and the closing of warm weather seemed to turn mortal minds to a more serious attitude. I found that my times of seriousness were often times of great creativity. During such episodes I often found myself writing songs and composing music. We can see these times of creativity as an open door to heaven, or a temporary removal of the so-called veil.

In today's world we can see that our animal surrender can simply be a stilling of the mind and desires. To see Urantia move toward utilizing the ability of the higher mind, there must be those individuals who are willing to stay the course, to set an example. Our Mission participants can view their everyday difficulties as challenges and advancement in spirituality.

Yes, each one of you is an example of a light and a new hopefulness in what seems to be a chaotic and hopeless world. We do reach for divine assistance to 'rise above' in any circumstance - we can surrender and move forward. Each day you are in contact with various individuals that view you as someone who has insight into newness.

Yes, everyday life will happen, it doesn't matter who you are. Such is the mortal experience on an evolutionary planet. This experience is why you are here, it is the bridge to the next step in your eternal career.

As mentioned earlier, your focus is important. We have to believe in the good. We have to keep with faith. All experience, as you must know by now, leads to an ultimate good. I am with the belief that anyone with faith can travail the most treacherous path and become better for it.

This week, let our thoughts be simple and only dwelling within our own environment; take them not out into the world at large. Let us once again be with the mind of a trusting child and make effort to see Father's hand in everyday life. Let Father help make your lives more manageable. He empowers you with all you need. Have not worry.

That is all. Again, it is wonderful to be among you kingdom believers. Let us continue to go forth and carry the light. From Abraham and myself, we bid you, shalom.

Removing Those Stumbling Blocks On Our Spiritual Path

Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-09-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. You are a colorful group this evening. I am enjoying your enthusiasm. Your calmness in discussing other belief systems really shows your confidence in your own, and that is quite a step in spiritual maturity. It is inspiring to see you meet life as life is; we need not make it something more, we need not play into the drama. We accept nothing more than truth, beauty, and goodness - and that is certainly a reason to rejoice.

I am EMULAN. What a joy to spend two weeks in a row with you. I have learned a great deal from each of your unique personalities; I find every family member plays a role. Of course you always work toward the common good and place Father as your sovereign. This is good.

I have always found identity (or labels) to be rather fascinating - most interesting. In my earlier days as a mortal, I did seem to do well in life if I had a healthy outlook on who I was as a person. Of course I toiled for the opinions of others; I relied upon their acceptance, unfortunately.

It would seem that I had a certain amount of self-satisfaction, a fairly high opinion of who I was at that time. I was first of all, pleased with my blue-collar employment. I was a good citizen, husband, and father. The fairly high self-esteem, however, was to come crashing down and I was made to find the true substance of what I was made of.

I am loath to rehash my story, as I know that most of you are familiar with it - and then again, I am grateful to be in the company of those that understand me so well. I had lost my wife and daughter in a tragic accident; this had indeed crumbled my world. My supreme self-esteem was no foundation on which I could stand and remain strong.

My heartbreak caused me to be completely humbled and brought to my knees. Those things I thought were important were but mere shadows, and I lacked the spiritual strength from which I could springboard to new hope. This experience indeed drove me to such depths of anger, and the unfairness of it all caused me to hate God - "if there was one." I was terribly broken and made to start from the bottom and either disappear, or overcome.

In times of humility the angels whisper in your ear; they long to encourage you to be open, to receive ministry, to stay hopeful and not give up. Yes I realize - to be so very humbled it can indeed be difficult for one to listen, especially with an open mind or loving heart. I do know that with every step I took, Father took several towards me.

The time that was passing seemed to be the most difficult to accept; and yet it was necessary to grasp hold of some lasting growth. I learned it was helpful to talk with others. I indeed isolated myself in pity many times. It was my small attempt at fellowship that opened the door to hope. I had a great deal of emotion to harness and find the meanings and values therefrom. I really had to learn the process of making God my friend - for in my own mind, He was my enemy.

There was a great deal of inner work I had to achieve to understand that Father longs to help His children. My friends, He is accessible. Never is there a time in the mortal life where He is going to punish you into submission. He is indeed a loving co-worker. Many times we receive help from fellowshiping. Yes, many times the words of God come from the mouths of our friends, and vice versa.

This week it is suggested that you ponder Father being your friend, your co-worker. Make attempts to fellowship out among those in your small environment. Know that the Spirit of Truth delights in moving through the brotherhood. What inner work might you need to look at in order to remove those stumbling blocks that keep Father at a distance? That is all.

Again, we are with such excitement to be a part of you that are helping to bring about change. All our love goes with you. From Abraham and myself, we bid you, shalom.

The Spiritual Life Does Require Effort, There Are No Shortcuts

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-16-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying your conversation this evening. You are growing into the idea of new possibilities. The waters of spirituality stay not still for very long. I am inspired by your courage to go well beneath surface levels toward finding real answers, even though they may seem harsh.

I see positive change among you. I see how tirelessly you each have put forth effort to stay the course. I know when times become mundane (or realistically unpleasant) people feel a need for escape. I thank you for remaining real and continuing on with me.

I am also grateful for my friend and coworker, Emulan; his presence here brings us a confidence in our ability to understand the mortal living of today. Last week Emulan discussed removing stumbling blocks on our spiritual path and what were the small actions we could take toward having a continued hope.

I realize that the average mortal today has every amenity at their fingertips. Hard work is sometimes thought of as something to achieve while sitting at a computer. Those life efforts that were once so challenging are now as quick as the press of a button.

Spirituality, however, is the same as it always was - requiring faith, effort, experience, and time. There still are no shortcuts to obtaining mass amounts of memory overnight, no! Each lesson is slowly learned so as to become a part of the experiential foundation gained here as a mortal.

Yes, the spiritual life does require effort; and in this instant society, there is some conflict with that - "we want everything, and we want it now!" Believe me, I understand and can sympathize. My best suggestion for you is to remain committed to the work of spiritual advancement. Prayer, stillness, and study are requirements for this course. Acceptance of the realities that are before you will be helpful in your learning.

Never can you look out over your mortal life and declare "I have finally made it." Even the end of mortal life is the beginning of another. In our spiritual careers, we are always absorbing and making advancement. There are seemingly stagnant times when we see ourselves to be standing still in unproductive experience; I say these are perhaps times when we should stay most observant because the real lesson is probably occurring. Just because emotions are not in upheaval doesn't mean there are not lessons to be gained.

Father is very intellectual. The mind circuits are amazing in that they truly serve the whole – one mind at a time. Mother and Her adjutant mind-spirits also teach with senses that are beyond your scientific explanation. As spiritual individuals, we can rely on this, these are our tools. It is up to us to make effort to keep seeking.

This week, review your study habits. Make time for some reading, as well as stillness. Let us contemplate our moments of prayer – are they worthy of Father's attention, or are they given as a token to buy off the well-wishes from Father for the day? Who is prayer for? Have discussion next week on the unlikely benefits of staying in contact with Father and our divine universe Parents – Michael and Mother.

That is all. I am so overjoyed to see your faces each week. I am indeed blessed to be your friend and Teacher. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Following A Natural Rhythm Connects Mind, Body And Spirit

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-23-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Tonight there is such a feeling of faith. We all thrive on this energy and are literally better connected as the materially seen and spiritually unseen. I am grateful to know you are each active in living the Master's example. No one is perfect by any means, but your effort to me, personally, is quite touching.

There is really quite a large group of Urantians that are working in the solutions that will help bring this world toward Light and Life. I say, you are part of this group. I know of your personal struggle, and still, you continue to stay the course and work toward a new and better way.

In today's psychiatry, the most popular term used to describe common struggling individuals happens to be 'dysfunctional;' it would seem that the majority of the planet is somewhat 'mentally ill.' This of course is just rationalizing the human condition; it is simply a number of scholars explaining the lack of self-mastery in the world today.

There seems to be a number of reasons why one cannot seem to accept personal responsibility or handle accountability and common obligation. A good example is to look at the children (and even some adults) diagnosed with 'attention deficit disorder.' Adults go against the natural capabilities of learning/growing children by keeping them indoors for hours on end, and then wonder why a child can't learn properly.

In the days of old, children were taught a great deal of work around the home. Life was quite active and fitting for young children; there was something always holding their attention, and always something to learn simply to maintain survival. Book-time was short and yet, what was read was retained; where a child today may be blinded with the amount of light coming their way.

It is interesting to study those on worlds settled in Light and Life; they follow a most natural path. Everything on these worlds is done in a rhythm that connects mind, body, and spirit. Nothing is forced; life is lived peaceably and enjoyably. There are rhythms of the material body that work best when they are set by environmental factors such as 'when it's dark, bodies should have their rest.' Yes, when there is an urge to do certain things it comes rather naturally, without struggle.

For example - again referring to education and the growing mind: Many individuals have a dream of attending a college, and yet right in the midst of their years of discovering freedom or adulthood in the world, they go to college and then fail. Had these individuals waited a few years; had they a little experience and time to settle down and follow the natural rhythm of the mind, they could have found success at attending higher education at a later date.

Let us note that every individual is different. Each has different rhythms of the mind and also connects to the circuits in various ways. Society can no longer plan out an individual's life, limit them with boundaries, and then not expect them with the feeling that they do not 'fit in.' The world is correcting, have not worry. The circuits to Urantia are becoming stronger every day - more noticeable. Many will find more freedom; and some will squirm in the change.

This week, let us be still enough to find understanding of the rhythms of our own minds and bodies. Let us continue to be in the 'solution' and not so focused on 'what's wrong.' I am honored to be a part of you. I thank you for your dedication to living the spirit life in what seems to be unextraordinary times.

Again, it is my pleasure to serve with you in this Correcting Time. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Allow Ourselves Father's Pruning That We Might Bear The Fruit Of The True Vine
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-30-2006
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am sorry for the delay; it takes a few minutes to quiet the busy mind. I am feeling so connected to the energy here this evening. Our routine is somewhat disrupted, and still we forge ahead. I am grateful to our absent hosts for providing our meeting place. [Editor's note: Harrison and Sarana were not present this evening, but made their home available for this meeting.]

ABRAHAM: I am grateful to you, my faithful, for your willingness to learn and share our living gospel. No material circumstances stop us from working the Master's plan. "What the Son desires and the Father wills, is." We have spoken of the wonderful Vine that He is. We, His branches, are doing our best to be fruitful. Of course we are pained from time to time from the Father's pruning, but we have made our commitment to the Vine. Being Michael's branches, we are committed to the Father's pruning. The Father is the husbandman and He will see to the ultimate fruitfulness.

I am MARY. I am filled with an inexpressible love for you each. I have come to know you and I am intrigued by your unique personalities. Each one of you that adds to our energy this evening is quite inspirational to me. I am pleased to see the natural rhythm of the group. There is definitely a firm foundation of love and intelligence. I thank you for allowing me to be a part of you.

I am thinking back to when I had made commitment to the plan and purpose of the Master's cause. While there was true joy, there was a great deal of upset and transformation for me. This was not pleasant, but very much necessary in my spiritual advancement.

You see, I had asked for the change on a 'soul level.' I desired to be transformed in the depths of my heart and soul; and yet, when change came, on an animal level I was indeed with the mind of rejection. I had asked for change, yes, and I definitely received it. I was that baby chick breaking through the shell of growth. At first I was indeed uncomfortable with this change, this break-through. Do you see, once I had asked for it and had committed to it - and then when growth and change came knocking, my animal fear had tried to stop it.

My friends, know that this is completely normal in the mortal life and to be expected. With the Correcting Time, you will be set in various places that will create the ripple of change; and this is not always comfortable or pleasant, no! for there is always an adjustment in mind to be made. I was somewhat comfortable in my situation before my sisters had arrived; I knew what each day brought. There was somewhat of a freedom to answering to the animal self. I cared not of love, and I cared not of others or myself - this was my routine before joining the Master's cause.

My sisters brought to me hope and help to break away from my poor quality of life. I enjoyed their fellowship, their new hope, and the discovery of inner strength - which I did not know existed. I was feeling advancement. I was feeling like I was receiving new awareness.

In all this, I had begun to understand the plan and purpose of the Master. To know Him, gave me the desire to work toward His ultimate goal of learning and sharing the new gospel. In this understanding, I had made a commitment to Christ and the Father. I made a commitment to growth. I felt that connection of 'the branch to the Vine.'

In my commitment as a branch, I felt the discomfort of being pruned to become more fruitful. Mistake not my words, I also felt the joy in my connection to the kingdom, yes! but it took time to find my place of balance - to realize that while the pruning is uncomfortable, the fruitfulness is indescribable joy, a certain connection to heaven.

This week we are asking you to allow for the pruning. Be observant of the growth and make an effort to feel relaxation in advancement. Ponder in your daily living your connection 'as the branch' to the living Vine. I am with great affection for you, as is our mentor, Abraham. We will bid you farewell and shalom.

Mary's Dilemma Being Assigned Menial Chores By Her Dominating Sister Apostle
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-06-2006
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am feeling such comfort here this evening. There is either a peaceful countenance about you each, or just simple exhaustion. You always make me feel welcome and needed, and that is fuel to my soul.

We always speak of the Correcting Time; after all, it is our goal as Teaching Mission participants. I am amazed at how the Correcting Time and Michael's Spirit of Truth is blowing through every culture, every society, every group. We hear every day that some person who was set upon a pedestal, has fallen. We hear of the individuals who are in places of authority who find they are no different than the average person.

Correcting Time events have unfolded to connect every individual. There are no mortal heroes. There is not one seat higher than another. The Spirit of Truth continues to sweep the land clean of those that would cause separation. Beyond gender, race, and social standing we are simply children of God. Hopefully, events to be played out in the future will bring individuals closer together, not feelings of separation. Not one is better than another! and until this is common thought within each mortal the hard lessons must continue.

Is the individual who kills an abortion doctor better than the one who had the procedure? How about those individuals in certain religions who come out as homosexual? What about the college professor who is caught with child pornography? The Spirit of Truth is exposing the truth, yes - then the Father steps in for correction.

For some individuals today, staying with animalistic behavior is acceptable. But I can tell you, in this our Correcting Time, individuals are searching for deeper meaning. Many give up on finding the deeper meaning because Father's time appears to be too slow. You that have some experience, do know the meaning of endurance.

I am MARY. As always, I am honored to be among you. I have loved these past few lessons, but this evening I believe we will go about a different direction than normal. I always refer back to my own experience, for that has served me well.

When I was new to the ministry of the Lord I was eager to go forth and do His work. I believed that a godly woman served where she could and always did the right thing. There was a time where one of my ministering sisters was quite dominating with me. True, I was new to the ministry and was grateful for her help, but her domination began to create resentment within me. I didn't want to say anything that would hurt her feelings or appear to be ungodly.

This woman began to take advantage of my spiritual outlook and would assign me chores that everyone should have to do, not just one person. But I did them - after all "I was doing the Lord's work" was my thinking.

For wanting to be a spiritual individual I surely developed hatred for this woman. I felt, "who was she that she could treat me like a common maid?" She grew up in a wealthy home whereas I grew up on the streets. I felt my highest potential was not being utilized, and it appeared that this woman wanted me to serve her rather than the Master. Of course when there was progress to report to the Master, she was front and center. I was becoming so bitter that I wanted to scream out. I had done most of the footwork for certain projects and had received absolutely no credit.

I will stop there. Ponder this dilemma this week and discuss your views on possible solutions. What should I have done? I do enjoy my time with you. Abraham and I send you our love. Until next time, shalom.

Our Feelings About Self Results In What We Perceive Others Feel About Us

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-13-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am energized by your enthusiasm this evening. I understand your concern for worldly affairs. Your discussion with one another helps to create new thought. It is as if the universe is playing a game of chess and all are in anticipation to see the next move.

On a smaller level, I am with the belief that most Urantians want what is true, beautiful, and good. That definition may vary from person to person; there is a mass feeling of angst and lack of control. Have not worry, the Master has all of His players on board and has mapped out the greatest and highest plan of good; He has placed each one of you, as well, for your tasks. In your smallness, you do create a difference; you do create new thought that ripples even through the minds of surface-thinkers. On that note, I will leave you to our sister, Mary.

MARY: Greetings again, my friends. I am in awe of your ability to be open with one another; what a beautiful friendship. It was not too long ago where men and women could not sit together and have honest discussion without repercussion. I am happy to see this simple evolution.

I thank you for taking interest in my story and lesson from last week. Your input today is quite insightful. As I remember my frustration with that particular situation, [Editor's note: Mary's shared experience regarding the sister-apostle assigning Mary the arduous tasks], I am reminded of how I had gone to a few of my sisters and presented this dilemma to them; they were in agreement that this woman I had resentment of was indeed power-hungry and longed to be in control of situations.

I wanted to be of service and yet, my spirit was crying out for freedom. I had thought within my mind that confrontation with this woman would be useless because she would deny her faults and focus on mine. I then went to have a conference with Andrew, the Master's chief apostle. Andrew had not knowledge of the situation and had a difficult time grasping my frustration.

Andrew did relate with me through his understanding of his brother, Peter, and how he (Peter) was with the enthusiasm to jump into any situation without thought. Peter was like a child who continually longed for a pat on the head. I realized I was also like that child. I felt the need for continuous encouragement. Andrew was helpful, as was my sisters who put forth their caring and took the time to listen to me.

I continued on with my daily chores with a renewed mind of observance. I came to realize my own feelings of inferiority and that I had projected this into my relationship with this seemingly difficult woman. As I came to know the unconditional love of the Father and our Master, I began to have some real connection to the kingdom. I began to feel a part of the ministry, side by side with every individual.

At first, yes, my ego had struck out for attention and credit; I felt unworthy and undeserving of the 'familyhood.' As time had passed and I went about my smallness, I learned the larger lesson – that my feelings toward myself resulted in how I thought others felt about me, and therefore, I was treated accordingly.

I kept in touch with Andrew and told him of my progress; he encouraged balance and keeping a watchful eye on my emotions and tendency to jump to conclusions. As I felt more a part of the ministry, I was able to be more forthright with this woman. She began to realize I was not weak and someone to be ordered, but an equal partner who was to stand side by side working for the common goal.

Father is so good; His lessons to me are, and were, so perfectly planned; He can bring about an ultimate good in any situation to those who have a watchful eye.

In our mortal struggle to find self-mastery, how do we balance self-respect with being cautious of the intruding ego? In our day-to-day situations, are we seeing what really is? or a skewed definition of what our mind projects because of our own feelings of disconnection within the kingdom? With that, I give you back to our brother, Abraham. You are a lovely bunch. I thank you for your participation.

I am ABRAHAM. A wonderful lesson, Mary. We are blessed to have you working on our team. Your realness is a guide in everyday situations. We are about the Father's business. We will have several bumps in the road – many upsets, yes, but the Correcting Time moves forward. I am as always, with a growing love for you each. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Progress of the Feminine | Allow Material Concerns and Preconceptions To Fall Away
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-20-2006
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. As I let all things fall away – all thoughts, all concerns, all the issues, I am standing here face-to-face with you, my beloved friends. I am filled with such a life-force of love. I thank you for your beautiful devotion. I am always uplifted to view your interaction with one another. I see your emotional history. You may each have issues with one another but when all falls away there is love and the desire to wish for the ultimate good in one another's lives.

I am MARY. Again am I overjoyed to be among you as one of Father's kingdom workers. There is no doubt I was born 'all female.' I lived every day of my life being reminded that I was of the feminine nature, which in that day was considered to be an inferior status. I suppose I lived my life as if my gender was a hurdle to be overcome. I had done many things to hide this supposed fact – 'that I was born second class.'

I am grateful to be witness to the progress of the feminine nature today. I am familiar with the thoughts and emotions that women still face while living in a 'man's world.' My reason for this topic is that the universe of Nebadon is preparing for the upcoming celebration of our Mother Spirit. We are looking forward to celebrating Her universal influence.

I am happy to report that gender is no longer an issue from my perspective. I am now in the morontial form and am with the vision that the kingdom of God is a 'whole' made up of perfect parts. Not one is neglected, nor separated; it is the attributes of the spirit of an individual that is focused upon. Not one here, from my perspective, is attempting to gain power over another – for there is no need; we each are sovereign.

I really had a difficult time overcoming the differences in gender status in our earthly ministry, for I had viewed my male counterparts as dominating and abusive – and that was my experience. It was not right or wrong that I experienced such, no, for that experience is a part of who I am today, to which I am grateful.

I am reminded of an event taking place with the Master who was about to speak to a group of individuals. Noticing that my sisters and I were hurriedly setting up for the event while four or five of the male apostles were standing nearby chatting. I was indeed tempted to break up that bunch and ask for their help; but again, who was I to put 'a superior bunch' to work?

It was with loving discussion from the Master that I learned to set aside my feminine label and to find the love of a fellow sojourner as one in equality. As I allowed all preconceptions to fall away, I was able to go about the Father's business, unconcerned with gender or status.

The Alpheus twins were always an inspiration to me. They simply wanted to be useful. I must say, their sense of humor was in abundance and always was there fun to be had, because of them, in being small and useful. They thoroughly enjoyed serving, working with one another and finding peace in simplicity. Their seemingly simple status enabled me to work side by side with my male counterparts without worry of my self-imposed label.

All those who sincerely consider themselves as a kingdom participant will have a place and tasks to complete. This week, as we go about the Father's business, make effort to allow material concerns and preconceptions to fall away, and ask yourself – what have you then? I believe you have a fresh foundation from which you can lay your spiritual building blocks. Allow love to lead.

That is all. You know our love is continually growing for you each. Shine on, and shalom.

A Celebration Time For Our Universe Mother, Our Source For Intuition

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-27-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I can't begin to express my gratitude for having known you over these many years. I know it is difficult for you to grasp the fact that there has been, indeed, a great deal of growth – personally, and as a core group. You have made my time here so enjoyable and educational.

Many times I look out over the Correcting Time and I am overwhelmed by the amount of work there is to complete. Other times I am sitting amongst you in the warmth of your friendship. I am able to see the mechanics and the inter-workings of the Correcting Time. Every day, people are bringing us closer to the stages of Light and Life.

Over these past few days we have been in such a state of joy over the celebration and recognition of Mother and Her influence in Nebadon. Our pausing of everyday routine to acknowledge Mother, teaches us more about the attributes that connect us to the cosmic mind. My personal outlook on this event has been one of enlightenment; I am discovering areas of my personal mind where I may fall short, or ignore.

Mother is a creature of intuition. The feminine nature itself has a direct link to intuition. Believe me, all mortals have a feminine side, the gift of intuition is available to all.

There are times in our everyday lives when we would feel an internal nudge to perform some act of kindness. With the busyness of life, it is easy to push back these nudges and go about the daily trend. In these feelings of intuition is the will of our First Source and Center; our connection to the Adjuster is handing us a message or a task.

When we ask to be of service, we are given assignments. In your feelings of intuition (or that nudge of being driven to do some task) is your Adjuster giving you step-by-step instructions. We love this about our Mother, She simply knows what we need. Her eye is out for the well-being of Her children. She is simply glorious and a wonder to behold. Her beauty does infiltrate our souls. We are grateful for Her gift of intuition.

I also had the pleasure of witnessing Mother's lessons on healing an ailing spirit. We learned that many souls each day are in need of even the most minute (minuscule) show of love. A few simple words of encouragement is fuel for the soul.

We find every day - more and more individuals are connecting to this understanding of 'healing as they pass by.' Healing is not some secret ceremony, no! it is simply the passing of a kind energy. Always does our desire to put forth kindness come back to us wherein we also are the recipients of this healing energy. It is a suspicious world that we live in, and we are working to show authenticity.

As I have learned more about Mother and Her mind-spirits, I have come away with a new confidence that embraces not the ego, but is overjoyed to be a kingdom citizen. Teamwork is real; it is a moving force. Should something be the will of our Father, this moving force can bring about real change. My friends, you may be small in number, but are always with increasing energy. You do make things happen - each, as an individual; and, as a group.

Mother's confidence gives us a calmness that aids in our ability to rise above the fundamental church and stand by our faith. Mother's confidence is a shield against ridicule. Others' negative comments shall have no effect on us. She certainly is wondrous in Her ways. Her task to be the breath of life was certainly made just for

Her. We, all of us, including our beloved Brother/Father, would not be where we are today without Her. We are in celebration of Her attributes and are rising above our old beliefs of separation. Mother brings us together as a family.

Mary sends her love and will be with us next week. Until then, my love goes with you in all that you do. I thank you for being so dedicated and open to newness. Until next time, shalom.

The Feminine Nature | Mother's Nurturing Helps In Our Acts Of Kindness

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP

12-04-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. As we let all things fall away from our minds, allow us to envision light rising up to make us anew. It is quite the experience to be among a group with so much enthusiasm. It is quite contagious, and personally showing me that hope is everlasting. I am grateful you have allowed me to be a part of your lives. I am certain that we will always know one another.

I am MARY. I am always uplifted to visit this branch of our family tree. As Abraham has mentioned, I am indeed uplifted by the events of our Mother's celebration day. It is interesting to experience the basic instincts of the female mind; we can see her with a strong instinct to survive. Without Father, the feminine nature is animalistic. Of course with Father, a new entity is born.

As a child, I learned well how to simply survive. I was not educated to embrace morals. I could lie, cheat, and steal fairly well. I was without truth, beauty, and goodness. I was envious of the strength of men - it seemed as though they lived an easier existence than the females. This mindset surely became 'resentment' as I grew into womanhood. I reasoned within my mind that I needed to behave as a man to gain what a man has; and thus, I lost the benefits of the feminine nature.

In denying a part of my identity, confusion surely sat in and I embraced the animalistic ego. Truthfully, this even went on for quite some time during the ministry of our Master. It was Jesus Himself that opened our eyes to 'the beauty of the feminine and the masculine - in balance.' He taught us to rise above what the material eyes can see; to go within and be with a seeking attitude. I learned that I was not so much my material body, but a growing spirit with many facets; a prism showing unending angles of colorful lights.

I became more knowledgeable as I experienced actual ministry. As I worked amongst the masses, a natural tendency came forth from me to provide love and nurturing care. As I forgot about myself by providing service, the mind-spirits were able to transmit to me, instructions - and it was with little effort, it was purely natural.

I can recall a time I had come upon a woman who was beaten and bloody. I had grabbed her by the arm and lifted her to her feet. She told me she had been beaten by her husband for some trivial thing. I sat her down on a stone nearby and simply began to listen to her. I could literally feel my heart open and energy pour forth. She cried. She angrily expressed her feelings toward her spouse, how she had searched for an escape.

It was then that my mind was opened with pure intentions to help her. Our Divine Mother's nurturing forces were at work. I was able to help guide her toward a decision that would lead to safety for her and her children. I was completely honored that I could be a vessel for spiritual food. I was uplifted by the energy of our spiritual Parents at work in perfect balance, perfect harmony. Was the beaten woman the recipient of healing, or was it I?

This season of yours is indeed busy with all the details of materialism. It is beautiful that many find time to do good will. What a true gift it would be to ourselves - 'to do for others' throughout the year. Jesus taught self-forgetfulness; He knew whereof He spoke. In the self-forgetfulness, there are legions of helpers, kingdom ministers.

This week let us take time to do small acts of kindness. Feel the smallness - and in that, know there is ministry to both the giver and the receiver. Be aware of that opening of the heart. Allow Mother's nurturing to come forth. You are a joy, my friends. I shall take my leave. Next week we are preparing to take questions if any. I appreciate all your efforts, as does Abraham. We send you with our love. Until next time, shalom.

Father's Evolutionary Plan Shows In Bits Of Time, Reflected Back To Us By The Supreme

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-11-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am feeling at ease from you my friends; a warm welcoming spirit, and I thank you. I am indeed appreciative of your enthusiasm, of course, but a focused group makes my job a bit more easy.

I do enjoy each and every personality within this family. Those that are grounded bring us stability. Those that are thoughtful bring us ideas. Those that are lighthearted bring us balance. Fanaticism goes by the wayside and we are ready to take on our smallness and be about the Father's business.

I have always been fascinated by the human mind. The brain, from which you filter through all things, is certainly a marvel. From where I am I can see lighted circuits that you each connect to. Physical and mental fitness is necessary for these lighted circuits to connect; it is the key to the kingdom, so to speak. Our so-called 'organization' is unseen and out of the ordinary. We, on this side of life, want you mortal kingdom believers to be fit in all ways. How blessed are we to have this group as an anchor within the sea of everything.

I am MARY. I am in agreement with Abraham that the mortal task of living two lives--one foot in the spiritual world and one foot in the material--is indeed, difficult.

You look out over the political field in the world through your spiritual filter and there will be some confusion, yes. It seems that all answers are obvious, so 'why can't we just do them?' many wonder. You, as ministers, can observe another's life and envision all the possibilities before them, yes; but for some reason, some individuals are unable to take steps toward these possibilities.

Our minds are open to receive any and all things. Hopefully, we hold on to what is valuable and allow the rest to go by the wayside. It is difficult in your material state not to be affected by what your eyes are telling you – this is to be expected. We thank our Father for the endless possibilities of the mind and obtaining knowledge to living the spiritual life in the material world.

Many days in my sojourn in the flesh I was overwhelmed by the devastation I was aware of – there was such an injustice that I could simply not fathom. To be overwhelmed leads to feelings of helplessness – and eventually, hopelessness; and one becomes without energy to make effort anymore.

Envision the Master's career on Urantia. Wherefrom did His strength appear in the face of such travesty of injustice? Wherefrom did He obtain His calm demeanor and find strength to go about the Father's business? What kind of energy did He feel in front of an audience of unbelievers? How did He find the strength to go on?

We learned from the Master that the evolution of this world is so long and in bits of time – each bit building toward some unforeseen goal of the Father's. These bits of time are pieces of a puzzle that will add to the Supreme Being. Completed parts of the Supreme Being reflect back to this mortal world to push us forward in evolution. I truly believe that without the Supreme Being, man would have a long time ago simply succumbed to life's difficulties.

The Master's time here taught us a new and better way to handle these bits of evolution; He did indeed rise above Himself and those things His eyes could see. Jesus' closeness with Father gave Him an overview of spiritual goals; He was able to rise above His emotions and gather strength to carry on, to move forward.

How does your worries affect time and eternity? How are you handling these bits of evolution that are really a small part of a grand plan? Are you overwhelmed to the point of hopelessness? Or, are you empowered to rise above the mortal eyes' outlook, to connect with Father and the spiritual goal ahead?

It is okay to cry; it is okay to be angry – these are emotional seasons and indeed they will pass. Think of the Master's peaceful endurance and wherefrom His strength originated. Allow not the eyes to make quick judgment. Your dedication to fitness of mind, body, and spirit, will aid you in acquiring the Master's strength.

I am aware there are not too many questions. Abraham or myself can answer for you what you are desiring, I hope. Please feel free to ask me anything.

CALVIN: I sure am puzzled regarding the lack of momentum of people coming to this group, or to the Mission as a whole. Things are so different than in our first budding years in this Mission; it seems like many things have been diverted. Many are broadcasting dire warnings and predictions of events to come that just don't seem truth to me. It almost seems lately, other than what we see here in our local group as far as the Teaching Mission and Teacher lessons, that this format of teaching us 'to become better in daily life, and remaining as mere students in learning' has been lost out there to fantastic tangents and personal agendas. Is this why we don't see souls flocking to these lessons, to the Teaching Mission?

ABRAHAM: Understood. I am with the vision of individuals viewing this Mission as a child's video game, making effort to attain advancing levels. It is a game to them. It is entertainment. I am personally disturbed with this type of intrusion of our ministry. I say, take your games elsewhere, you are not about the Father's business. Our ministry is not new-age mumbo jumbo - it is individuals being about their smallness in everyday life to help individuals find the Lord. We will take back our Teaching Mission. Those who want to be about themselves - that is not a part of Michael's Correcting Time. I personally invite those individuals to step aside. Allow us to continue on with the tasks of Light and Life. Good question, my son. Stay strong in our beginning foundation of purpose. Be not distracted by those viruses searching for a host. I am indeed honored to be with you who have stayed the course.

SARAUNA: Abraham, I just want you to know we appreciate you so much. We are grateful to have you in our home. You make our lives with so much more value. Thank you.

ABRAHAM: And I thank you. I also find myself so blessed to be a part, a small part, of something that is so grand. I ask many times of my superiors that we might give you each a glimpse of what I can see; of course, you already know the answer to that.

I am growing each time I am among you and I thank you. Let us continue on with the work ahead. Be not distracted by those overwhelming emotions. Let us rally upon the Master's faith and make this world a better place. That is all. Our love is always with you. Until next time, shalom.

. Our love is always with you. Until next time, shalom.

Making Those Kingdom Connections Regardless Of Differences | The Woman With Leprosy At the Gate

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-18-2006

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying your thoughtful conversation. Your unity in rationalization is really something beautiful to behold. I am filled with such inspiration in viewing each of you making effort to stay small. Throughout your mortal lives you will have to continue to rebuke the ego and exercise the inner smallness of your blooming souls.

I am grateful to you that continue to be true to our Teaching Mission. We are not with fanfare and notoriety. Our smallness is our power and creating a path to Light and Life. Do what you will, the truth is everlasting and all things false will fade away. I am in quite an attitude of openness and love.

I have been witness to several acts of kindness, and the energy from that has fueled my soul. There are many individuals out there that are feeling such loneliness; their minds are feeling too much pain to reach out of their darkness and grab onto the light. There is so much good you can do every day just with a few words of simple encouragement.

Yes, you see people every day that are different, perhaps handicapped in some way; and definitely do they feel separated from the so-called 'normal' society. In our everyday smallness, there is so much we can do by reaching out to another and making them feel part of all there is.

I am MARY. Greetings to you, my fellow sojourners. How sweet you are to welcome me each time with open arms. I am sitting here looking at you and realizing we have somewhat of a history together. We have spent time getting to know each other and I am so grateful to feel more a part of your family.

I have enjoyed Abraham's words on 'kingdom connection.' I was an individual who was different from what was termed 'acceptable.' I believed I was such a lowly creature, and that 'there was none like me.' I always thought: 'Who would have such a creature of unworthiness,' and I indeed received my answer - Jesus Christ! In His wonderful way, the Master connected me to a family I could not have comprehension of. He made me feel useful and with purpose - a beautiful kingdom connection indeed. I was not odd and alone, no, I was part of something grand.

I went on to minister to a woman with a severe case of leprosy. She would stand by a gate into the city and beg for money or food. Of course, you can imagine many treated her worse than some animal that was abandoned. We became friends. I expressed to her that she was also a part of something grand in this world's history, and that she could use her disability for some higher purpose.

It was difficult for the woman to believe Father loved her, for she was so deformed in legs and arms. The pain in her eyes certainly did tell me a story of her loneliness. At first she was suspicious of my friendship. 'Nobody had ever took any interest in her before, why now?' she expressed! I shared with her the good news of the Master's teachings and helped to create hope in her - that after this life she would indeed be whole in all ways and run free and do any and all things.

This message of hope did indeed make a great change in her. This sweet woman still stood at the gate of the city, but did not any longer ask for money or food. She preached the glad tidings and spread hope to those who were downcast. In her natural desire to give hope and love, and not expect anything in return, she was well taken care of. She received more than she could ever hope for.

In her last days, her beautiful smile reflected her newfound hope, and she indeed greeted the other side with a peaceful countenance. What a blessing for me to have known her and be a part of a wonderful kingdom connection.

We all have opportunity every day to say a few small words that would let others know they are one within the kingdom - be they those who speak a different language, or those who may be handicapped, or those who appear to be loners, for instance. You need not be best friends with them or take them under your wing to affect a change, no! just a few simple words that say, 'we are all a part of a wonderful family and you are not alone.'

As the minds of Urantia mortals turn toward a new and better way with hope in Jesus, the circuits to the Supreme Being are strengthened, and our path to Light and Life widened. We have business to attend to, all of us – it is about all of us. As you feel more a part of the kingdom family you will attract others to your wonderful light.

The United States is quite the melting pot. Races and religions are mixing and we are simply going to just have to make room. Have not rejection of differences. You may not understand their language but your face can bring a message of greetings and a welcoming spirit. Every day you are making kingdom connections. Let us be about our smallness. Let us revel in the joy of something so grand that we are helping to build.

I understand we are taking next week off, so you have two full weeks to make plenty of kingdom connections. I will miss you in this group lesson format. From Abraham and myself, we bid you, farewell. Take our love, and Godspeed to all. Until next time, shalom. [no meeting December 25, 2006.]

2007 and 2008 MANSION WORLD TEACHINGS

Our Spirit Of Truth Provides Us A Banquet To Feast From Abraham, Michael & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-01-2007
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. There are many places we can go to refuel spiritually. Being with you is one of my most fulfilling places. Each day in the flesh is somewhat of a chore at times. How blessed are we to have a Brother/Father who has experienced the daily chores of life and can help us to live life to our best and highest light.

I appreciate this gathering, for I feel we are all seated at the Master's table enjoying the refueling of spiritual energy. I want to be a source of spiritual food. I want to help you in finding the joy in everyday living. I want us, as a group, to bring out the best in one another and also extend that to individuals we know.

I am MICHAEL. Peace be with you. How wonderful it is to meet with you in this fashion where I can brush by each one of you and feel that parent/child relationship. In the busyness of your lives, I become somewhat invisible, somewhat separated, and I am uncomfortable with that.

I am most definitely pleased to be in your midst and help to provide for you a spiritual banquet. Feel free to take the bread of life and know that I am always a part of you. Help yourselves to a serving of hope; in that, we can rise above what seems to be an embittered world and see the truth, beauty, and goodness on the horizon.

I am with the understanding that you know not how my hand works with yours and how close I am to you. You know not how we work together and can be more efficient when you are with a peaceful mind. I am the Spirit of Truth and am without limitation.

Together we can do small things that have great impact. Do not be sidetracked by promises of grandeur. See me not as a stumbling block. Please be open to the realization that I am your Brother/Father, and I hold my children close. I work for you. I make the way clear. I see to your well-being. I feed you.

Many of my children will come to realize that I am real. I am in the details. Falsehood is unacceptable. It is my duty to expose the darkness. It is my honor to bring the light. I am the door. Wander not outside the door. Knock, and all things shall be revealed. Come to me for your daily bread. Let not worry take space in your mind where there can be peace.

There is a great deal of work, and it will be in the joy of truth and fellowship that our work is completed. Remember that I know you and treasure you for the wonderful beings you are. I love you. Carry on.

I am MARY. Thank you, Master, for laying out before us this spiritual banquet. Thank you for making us each a place at your table. We are filled with new strength and hope. We are small, yes, and yet together there are great improvements in the path we are taking. I for one, am comforted by the fact that the Spirit of Truth reaches into the darkest places and opens them up for us to understand.

We are freewill creatures that know the difference between right and wrong. We can be strong and make informed choices. We can find that our dedication brings us a bit of self-mastery every day. As we grow in our spirituality, instant gratification isn't as fulfilling as we once thought. Material eyes lead us to desire one thing, and spiritual eyes help us to connect with the Spirit of Truth and make correct choices. I would thank each one of you for your participation and supreme show of faith.

We are getting into the realness of our Correcting Time. We can see the ugliness and the pain which this Correcting Time is exposing/disturbing; and I understand it does at times feel as though the spirit is beaten down. Your faith in the Master as 'Sovereign of our universe' helps to keep you balanced in emotion and clear in thought.

I am so happy to be a part of your fellowship and at this wonderful table. This week we will concentrate on spending time with the Master. Allow the Spirit of Truth to perform His duties. He knows well what He is doing. He is a light for us to work by.

That is all. We are with a loving farewell to you each, my brothers and sisters. Go in peace. From Abraham and myself, and our beloved Brother/Father, we bid you, shalom.

Father's Plan Works Always For Our Ultimate Good
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-08-2007
Back

I am ABRAHAM. I am loving the peaceful atmosphere we have here this evening. Our connection is made stronger by the quieting of minds. One thing I really enjoy about this group is your sharing of observations. I can always keep up to date in my work when I can view your reality through your eyes.

I appreciate the efforts you each make to place your spirituality as a priority. It is difficult to integrate the material and spiritual worlds – and I must say, you each are doing quite well. I believe a key factor in this success is your willingness to put Michael as your sovereign. It is a daily struggle to ask that Father's will be done and not your own. I see you each doing a beautiful job.

I am fortunate to have had this opportunity to return to minister to Urantia. I have been able to have a broadened view of history's successes and failures. All my experience and understanding therefrom has made me much more efficient at my ministry.

Seeing the world before Michael was here, I can see the after-results are quite vast. I am in full understanding of His accomplishments here in the world, as well as throughout the universe. It is wonderful to know somebody so highly ranked, spiritually speaking, and also be the beneficiary of the simplest form of His teachings.

I am MARY. Greetings to you, my friends, I am always with comfort to be exactly who I am with you. How honored I am to be your co-worker and friend.

During my time in the ministry, I always thought 'the more obedient I am to God, the easier my life would be.' It is funny to look back now and know that if my life would have been one of ease, I would not have realized such a caring Father who was always watching out for me. In the difficulties of my mortal lessons, I eventually understood the Father's part in them.

Many of today's modern people are with the belief that if they are good to God, God will be good to them. This is old-fashioned thinking, of course. We strive to live the laws of God because it is good for us. When I am with the mind of stillness, I am better able to be receptive to Father's words which help me in my daily tasks; I am better able to cope with stress; I can much more easily leave emotions by the wayside and pick up the tools of solutions.

When I was new to the ministry, much of my time was spent bargaining with God. In knowing the Master, it made my bargaining seem totally ridiculous. The Master was with wit and humor. He was intelligent and yet, so practical. It is said: "When you have seen the Son you have seen the Father."

I had always wanted to have children of my own. I had always wanted a traditional life. Somewhere in the back of my mind I believed that if I served well in the ministry that one day Father would fulfill my requests. Time was passing and indeed I was not getting any younger. My dreams were passing me by.

Every day I would spend time looking after many children who were either homeless or orphans. I would feed them, wash their clothes, have fun at play, and teach them what I believed the Master Himself would have taught. Yet, I wondered why Father was ignoring my request, my most heartfelt desires.

It was some time after the Master's resurrection that I realized Father had provided for me my desires – for I was indeed a mother to many children; not biologically of course, for that wasn't necessary. Father had tied many lives together - mine, and the children I had looked-after.

In my later years there were these beautiful people who used to be those ragged little children that had begun to turn the tide and watch over me. I had a real family. I had much more of the experience than I could have ever hoped for. I am still in contact with many of these once children; I will always love them and I am so blessed to know they will love me in return.

God our Father is so wise in His ways, so much more than we could ever conceive of. Much of the time we are blinded by our blessings, for they did not come in the form we had hoped. Much of mortal limitation is self-imposed. When we are open to Michael and Father, we see a blessing for what it is; we are not blinded by the wanting.

This week, let us spend more time with our Brother/Father, literally. Count your blessings - especially those that are non-traditional. Father is the supreme 'provider,' let our focus be on that. That is all. Know that we are with ever-increasing love for you each. Our availability is always at your convenience. Until next time, shalom.

Our Life-Experience Is Our Training To Be Of Service In Ministering To Others
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-15-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always impressed by your versatility and your willingness to embrace new ideas. I learn from your willingness to remain small and continue on with spiritual education.

You, my students, have matured beyond the point of having the desire to be seen as 'the chosen.' You understand you are average people in an average evolutionary world doing Father's bidding, and this is indeed propelling us toward the dawn of Light and Life. You that have chosen to commit to the spiritual life have also committed to extra training. I do know this training and preparation is difficult, but in the end, so rewarding.

I am MARY. I am always attracted to this group immediately because of the loving foundation you have each built. You make our messages easy to come through. Your unity is a wonderful invitation.

Back to Abraham's lesson on spiritual preparation: As you each know, I was not brought up in the traditional ways of that era. I was hurt many times over by adults that I thought I could trust. Yes, I was somewhat of a rebel - this was my self-protection. It was difficult to open up and take in new ideas.

The apostles 'being male' for example, I was especially rebellious toward them; I was acting as if I was better than they were. I had held a lifetime of resentment toward my male counterparts; and with my commitment to the spiritual life, Father was to heal me of my past pain by putting me right in the middle of what I most resented. I had many arguments with Peter, who seemed like he was such a know-it-all. He was sincerely trying to help me, but I felt threatened and my mind was closed off to the good energy he was trying to give me.

On the other hand, I always felt comfortable around the twin apostles, probably because I thought I was 'mentally' superior to them. They were always loving and I could be myself in their presence. It took many interactions with many individuals for my hardened mind to break down and be able to take in healing and learn to trust again.

I had on occasion even attempted to argue with the Master, who I was seriously no match for; He was indeed stern – and yet, made so much sense. This experience of 'learning to trust' was miserable, and I was not happy during those times. But I did receive healing, yes, and advanced another step in being able to take in knowledge so I could be of use to the ministry.

You that are committed to a life in the Spirit do receive training so that you can properly minister to others. Know that your training is an inner healing – a look at what has gone on in your life; why you are the way you are, and what can find healing. We know that after this life we are headed for the worlds of correction – the Mansion Worlds. Know that a great deal of correction will now occur in this life; and it does not have to be miserable, it can be as if you are holding the hand of God.

Father longs to take you in his arms and show you a new and better way. We are all working to clear the path toward Light and Life. We have a great deal of work before us; we must be diligent and stay the course. Allow yourself to look back and be healed. Trust Father, and allow the walls to come down. Take note of the skills that you receive by allowing yourself to receive training.

That is all. My friends, you are truly beautiful and we do send you with our love. From Abraham and myself, we bid you, shalom.

Past Mistakes Are Part of Our Training And Not To Hold Us Back
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-22-2007
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am so inspired by your faith. You know not from week to week what our lesson will entail, or even if we will have one. You show up with faith in Father and in our fellowship – well done. The maturing individual seeks unfoldment instead of forcing the unfolding.

Experienced individuals know well the wisdom of Father and grow to have trust in His guidance. Still, living in this material world we will always battle our animal tendencies – this is why we are here and are striving for self-mastery.

I am MARY. Greetings again, my friends. I am always in anticipation to hear the latest experiences regarding spiritual growth.

During these beginning times of our Teaching Mission, it reminds me of when the Master was here in the flesh. People of that day and age were ready for a change and yet feared to leave the boundaries of tradition. The Jesus-experience was new to them; He brought hope, and certainly there was a great deal of attention on miracles.

The 'teaching mission' of the Master in this day is likewise a glass of water to thirsty individuals; it is a light at the end of a long evolutionary tunnel. Again though, many individuals do expect miracles and a place of preferment within the kingdom.

Time has shown in both circumstances (in Jesus' day and now) that those willing to stay the course without self-recognition will be the foundation for real change. Yet, there is nothing like some 'new spiritual fad' to bring out an individual's true colors. All is understood, and a lesson, indeed.

There were times toward the end of the Master's earthly career that we did not see Him for days; we were left to ourselves to utilize what He had taught. It was not unusual for fear to set in and to see people go back to their old ways. Even those who witnessed the miracles firsthand began to question what they had really witnessed in the first place.

We know the human mind can always talk one in and out of what one believes. For a healthy and balanced mind, there had better be some sort of spiritual foundation from which to build upon when all seems lost. Your spiritual foundation is kept alive and strong by your ability to move forward – not sit still and regret the past, no, but learn from it and continue adding to your knowledge of spiritual fruits.

Another way to keep ourselves moving forward is to forgive yourself when not so wise mistakes have been made; do not dwell on them and/or make excuses for yourself. But rather, find the humor therefrom and know that the weight of the world is not on your shoulders, and that you do not have to figure everything out in the time allotted to you.

Yes, we keep strong and moving forward by knowing who our Sovereign is, and by acknowledging His presence in our daily lives. We are able to stay with a healthy amount of humility when we are able to recognize those who really rule the universes.

There comes a point in a child's life where they learn kicking and screaming gets them nowhere. As we mature, we are able to have more control over our own minds and allow the will of God to unfold. What keeps your foundation strong and moving forward? Are you sitting on the sidelines in confusion? Or, are you able to participate in staying the course and drinking the cup of 'come what may.' Do we seek miracles to get to Jesus? Or, when we seek Jesus, we find we are allowed to witness miracles.

Our lesson is kept short this evening. We are in gratitude to you that make such effort to accommodate us. We thank you for your dedication to serve. We are honored to serve at your side. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

The Busyness Of Living And Serving Brings Us Balance

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-29-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Your mindal energy this evening is definitely fuel for our souls. It is interesting when individuals are decreased in emotions, and increased in logic; our energy becomes like a string on a well-tuned instrument, it becomes useful.

I always look forward to meeting with you as a group. I am in appreciation of how you make spirituality real in your everyday lives. Spirituality is not some far-off dream to you, no; it is useful in how you live your lives. Your spiritual principles become integrated with your decision-making; looking to the will of God becomes a simple way of living; and the Father's will becomes real even though you still struggle with issues from time to time.

It is well and good to see you each with such acceptance of the fact that mortals are here to receive a spiritual education. Most experienced people you know will honestly say they would have no desire to go back in time and re-live those hard lessons of earlier days, for the experience they have so far, good and bad, has become the sum total of who they are; their experience has become useful.

I am MARY. Greetings, friends. I always feel a part of this family gathering, and for that, I am forever grateful.

I am with the understanding that mortals are happier when there is meaning in life. I learned firsthand that I was with some soul-satisfaction when there was meaning recognized and realized in my everyday tasks. It would seem that Father had a plan and purpose for all His children, and I always felt great spiritual comfort being of use.

As we look out into the world right now, there are a number of negative trends that seem to burden the minds and hearts of Urantians. Addiction, in its many forms, is rampant. Technology seems to be of such great value to many, and ease-seeking has become a way of life. There are a great number of individuals looking for somewhere to belong, perhaps somebody to belong to. It is hard to keep your spirits up when the worldly surroundings seem to be such an obstacle.

In my era, it was simply an accomplishment to stay alive. The rulers of that day could kill you without a reason. Especially if you were with the status of poverty, you had less meaning and value. If you were female - that was even worse. It was the Master who taught me about 'usefulness' and bringing meaning into my personal life. The more usefulness I felt I had and the more meaning I understood, the closer I felt to God.

In the height of Jesus' popularity, we felt we must always be on call and were drowning in usefulness in the ministry. Idle time was practically painful. We became somewhat imbalanced with the busyness of living and being of service. To keep a healthy balance in mind and spirit, the Master insisted we take a break, weekly, and engage in play or recreation. From time to time He would have us go out and do a fair day's work - in other words, those menial tasks that everyone has to do.

This remedy of the Master's certainly brought balance; it had us take a step back to gain a new perspective in going about our daily lives. It was then that we found our purpose. It was then that we felt useful. Yes, it was meaningful to be small and usable in simple chores such as helping an elder with packages; helping a child with learning some new task; helping a neighbor to plant a garden; or simply sitting and listening to a friend. This was life, and this was being useful.

As the years went by, I could look back and understand the great significance. How blessed were we then and are we now, to have our Master to be a light for us in what seems to be an unbearable mortal darkness. With closeness to Him, all things can be overcome and we are empowered to live our best lives.

As we have discussed before, the Alpheus brothers were such a wonderful example of usefulness. Unlike their fellow apostles, they sought not to have the highest seat next to the Master. They were always busy seeing what needs to be done. It didn't matter the task, large or small, they were on hand and setting such a wonderful example of self-forgetfulness.

I don't really ever remember having a long conversation with these twin apostles; it seemed they were always on the run. It was clear they were not self-absorbed and worrying about any lack of attention; they were seemingly balanced and living up to their highest light. What wonderful role-models they were for me as a new citizen in the kingdom.

This week, let us focus on being useful in any situation - this keeps our minds off ourselves and into the realm of the spirit. Think about honest productivity and how fulfilling that is. You that have committed to serving in this Teaching Mission are realizing that our small useful selves are quite enough; we need not stand above the rest but simply focus on what the Master taught most - and that was simply, love and service.

That is all. Know that we are with continuing love for you each and are in tremendous gratitude for your dedication. From Abraham and myself, we bid you, shalom.

Letting Go Of Our Agenda By Being Flexible To Embrace Fathers`

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-05-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying a look back at our long history together. I am with such blessings to still be using this method of communication to speak with you. I do enjoy meeting as a group for we each bring out the various flavors of personality in one another. You are a source of strength. It is good to refuel weekly to be able to go forth and to deal with what lies ahead. Your fellowship and faith re-energizes your spirit to go forth and be of use within the ministry.

I was not ever labeled an emotional character - heartless at times, perhaps, but I was always leaning toward the logic of life. I was loathe to ever be caught unprepared or inadequate. It was my life's passion to be on top of every little detail. I had goals, yes, and I had surefooted steps planned out, leading toward the completion of those goals.

You could say I was immovable! and certainly, I was focused. I did believe that this was the path God had chosen for me. If I had done everything perfect – according to how I defined perfection – then ‘certainly God found me acceptable.’ This was indeed a crushing pressure upon me, and I maintained it at great cost.

Gratitude to our Father for sending me our most honored teacher, Machiventa. Next to the teaching of the 'One God' fact, his showing me that God's plans are His alone, and not subject to my definition, was with great significance. I had my life somewhat pre-planned; and learning about Father's will, certainly threw a wrench into those plans. I was made to be flexible. I was made to be subject to change. I can tell you that this was quite a feat for my mentor to completely sink this into my understanding. I was with such habit and routine.

The thoughts of my superiority faded as I learned that we are each equal children of God, no matter the status of the person. MachiventaMelchizedek served by my side 'as a person' – no more, no less. The meaningful feelings I received from learning Father was that close to me, changed my passion for life. I was a new creature. I cared not about riches or armies. I found my joy in spending time with my grandchildren, talking to associates who became friends, giving love instead of orders. I became a likable man instead of a feared one.

Father's will and personality are changeless, but our understanding of His will is always subject to change. This is why we learn to be flexible in our spiritual careers. We can see the Master was always up to date with what He needed to know to provide to the ministry. He was committed to the Father's will, and this put Him in constant communication with the Father.

We know by now, after these many years in this Mission, that nothing is set in stone. Urantia is an evolutionary planet and there has been room made for various outcomes of events. We need to remain flexible and at one with the will of Father. We all still have our old ideas that tend to create limitation. We get our minds stuck on something and have a terrible time of accepting new ideas.

To be flexible is not to be with an aloof attitude, no. It is to be observant and checking in at all times with the Father; no detail is too small. You may check in with Father about anything you like; the path is not carved out for us. The daily life we are living is creating the path – we don't know how it will turn out – and that is the good news; it is exciting and most definitely challenging. The ministry 'is' our life; we minister as we live.

This week, let us focus on being open to change. How does being flexible put you in constant communication with Father? How does that aid in your ministry to others? Mary sends her love and will be with us next week. That is all for now, my friends. This has been time well spent. I am always growing with love for you each. Call on me if you should have need. Until next time, shalom.

There Is Opportunity In Every Moment | Joy In Past And Present
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-12-2007
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is truly touching to see how you help one another. Such brotherly love leads you to give unconditionally.

Discussing everyday issues here with each other helps you to put life into perspective and to use the tools and gifts Father has granted you. You each do well at making effort to live life spiritually and still remain grounded in a logical reality. It is true for me, that you enrich my existence; and I can see without a doubt, that you also enrich one another's.

How blessed are we to, for the most part, be not limited by church dogma. It is a fact that the percentages of people with depression or mindal disturbance increase every day. As students of this universe education system, we are learning how to live our best life; and this most definitely increases joy and meaning. People with depression are feeling limited or stunted – this increases their frustration and outlook of hopelessness. As we mature in spirit, we are learning to find the fullness in life, yes, the satisfaction of being alive.

I am MARY. Greetings again, friends. How fortunate are we to be able to become one with such beautiful cosmic information. Abraham, you have been a wonderful mentor to me and I so enjoy the lessons.

I am in understanding of heaviness in heart and mind. The feelings of having no control over things that should be controllable are so frustrating; the feelings of self-inadequacy are overwhelming. Depression is a hole that only gets deeper unless you can find the fullness in everyday living.

As a child I felt most unwanted and 'in the way,' so to speak. My thought pattern was so deeply ingrained that as I became an adult, I was with practically no confidence – this was very limiting indeed. Being a babe in the spirit I always questioned my worthiness. I always thought that others were much closer to Father than I could ever be.

Jesus was a most interesting character in the fact that He so enjoyed His work no matter what he was doing; crushing criticism never bothered Him. He was taking advantage of each breath He was alive. He saw opportunity in every moment. He saw joy in the past and present.

I recall the Master helping an elderly gentleman who was a bit confused about his whereabouts. He had asked the Master for direction, and as Jesus was guiding him, the gentleman began to disagree with the Master's knowledge of the city. Jesus simply smiled and was not about to argue with the man – in fact, He found it somewhat humorous.

Even though the Master was due at a speaking engagement, He offered to escort the gentleman to the designated area. As the Master and the man walked, they had a marvelous discussion about gardening, sports, and women. They laughed together and totally enjoyed one another's company.

The elderly gentleman was quite surprised to find the Master's directions were accurate. Jesus found this little stroll to be with enjoyment and meaning. Certainly, this was a much more important engagement than what was waiting for Him at the place He was due to speak.

This occasion was a simple event in the life of our Savior, but such a wonderful example of how the Master found the fullness of living. Can you imagine this event taking place in the world today with other individuals? Everyone is always in such a hurry; there seems to be no time to find the fruit in the harvest of living. This is what creates the feelings of depression and emptiness.

Each moment in life is filled with unlimited possibilities, but very few people take advantage of this knowledge. You were meant to have a life and have it abundantly. There is adventure to be had, and there is opportunity in the most simple of moments. This is not a license to be self-indulgent, no, but this is opportunity to find meaning and a reason to strive.

This week, let us slow down. Let our emptiness be filled with meaning. Take advantage of simplicity. Enjoy the present moment. Enjoy the so-called 'average.' There is fulfillment to be had; there is light to grow on.

I have enjoyed my time with you, my fellow sojourners. It feels good to be part of a team. You are my team. It is with great love that I take my leave. From Abraham and myself, we bid you, shalom.

Jesus` Birdhouse-Building Example | Preparing Us For Larger Tasks Ahead
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-19-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I really enjoy seeing you all together. It is such a warm family feeling when we can meet - to allow the old to fall away and welcome in the new. I have been thinking about our past few years together and how our 'Mission baby' has grown into a fine young person.

We have been the parents to something awesome. Our union has become much more solidified, and our family dedication has made a wonderful foundation to build upon. Each unique individual has brought many ideas to help in the rearing of this Teaching Mission child; it took each one of us to bring it to the point it is now. In each parent's life there is sorrow and pain, yes, but the love and joy that is received make everything worthwhile.

I am MARY. Greetings, my fellows. I am in understanding of Abraham's words. Even though I was not a parent on the Earth, I had many children however, that I did look after. I also had a great deal of experience on the Mansion Worlds and nursery world, with children. It is always inspiring to know that we will never miss out on anything. In our eternal careers, there will be opportunity to fulfill any longing you have ever had. We need not ever be regretful or lose hope.

The mortal life is the beginning to something great, and we all must start small and do 'the grunt work' as they say. I did not know Jesus when He was a young lad learning to build simple birdhouses. He disliked building the seemingly insignificant projects; He longed to work with his father on the more important ones.

We all have thought at one time or another how wonderful it would be to obtain instant knowledge without first learning the rigors of study and hands-on experience. Jesus' father knew well that starting small would help the young lad to learn manual dexterity about working with the grain of the wood, different types of wood, different types of fasteners, and the tools to connect each piece.

Jesus did pester his father to skip over any seeming 'child's play' in order to work on the more important things, and Joseph was tempted to grant the boy his desire. Joseph did give Jesus the choice - to learn things right the first time, or learn things the hard way; and of course, the Master experimented with both. As Jesus grew, He realized His father was really quite wise and knew his livelihood well.

I would bet you're wondering where I am going with all of this. While we have no rules, laws, or doctrine in our Urantian Mission community, we do have some basic knowledge of right and wrong. We can make effort to quiet the ego and our desires, to make room for Father's will; yes, so that He can guide us in a way that is most efficient, and the way that will help us to retain what we have learned.

Every day there are small opportunities that will test our patience. For instance, there are times where we are made to practice tolerance with those who are a real irritant. It would seem practical to slide through all of this petty drama and not learn from the challenge; and yet, this is the 'birdhouse' that leads us to attaining the skills to take on much larger things.

I must say, you are each doing much better with keeping your emotions at bay; but still there are issues to work on that help us to learn about the ins-and-outs of the human mind, our relationships, and our own personal shortcomings. This week, let us pay special attention to those small events that help us gain the tools to handle larger issues.

Every day in the world there seems to be more and more tragic occurrences. People are looking for the faithful heart and a logical mind; they are looking for meaning to their sorrow; they are looking for a reason to not blame God for everything. We will be there, and we will be a voice of reason. We will be a light in the dark.

That is all for this evening. You know that we are with continuing love for each one of you. How honored we are to serve side by side with you. Godspeed, my friends. Until next time, shalom.

In Feeling Weak or Stuck Make That First Step Towards Fathers' Help | Our Actions Speak Our Beliefs

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP

02-26-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a wonderful atmosphere we have here this evening. I am enjoying the variety of conversation. Your open minds and hearts bring spiritual values into useable actions we can take on a daily basis. I love the fact that you all make such effort every day to grow and find meaning and value in your experience. It is becoming apparent that you are finding the technique of detachment to be more useful in everyday living.

Our hearts say we want to 'save the world;' our egos can become somewhat frustrated that we can't. Our minds say we do what we can and trust Father to oversee – after all, it is His plan and we are blessed to carry out His divine purpose. As we mature in spirit, we realize the world does not need our saving, and all is as it should be at this time – in Father's hands! We are always moving forward. Have not worry.

I do remember my time in the flesh – that I was always a man of action. I was not one to lay down before my burdens and be defeated. However, I handled my issues by instilling fear into others. I used anger to push my agenda. I was a master at using spiritual poisons to appear as spiritual fruit. I see now that I felt like a small boy trying to wear men's shoes. I was fearful and always worried about my reputation. It was a heavy burden to always put on that mask of false strength.

What a wonderful relief to have been tutored by someone who has shown me genuine strength. Machiventa helped me to see that should I close my eyes and take a deep breath that my world would not crumble beneath me; and should I pause to be still and listen for Father's voice, certainly would I receive much more everlasting meaning and a solid foundation to build upon. It was difficult for me to slow down and listen and take in that divine wisdom. And now from another perspective on this topic, I invite Mary to address you.

Greetings again, my friends. I am MARY. I am finding this evening to be quite pleasant and educational. I do believe that as a youth I was one prone to lay down before my difficulties and be succumbed by emotion and depression. I found myself believing that life was quite unfair, and that not all individuals had the same opportunity for growth. Of course this belief became a reality in my everyday living.

Growing up, I was actually quite bitter and always ready for a fight. I do understand how mortals seek escape in their difficulties. It is hard to see a light at the end of the tunnel when wearing the mortal body. Of course, I would turn to God in my struggles and beg Him to do something to set me free; and when I felt not His answer to my prayers, I would of course, blame Him for my misery. What a cycle! I can see Father, throughout my mortal life, was always trying to help.

I knew a shop owner who used to sneak me bits of food. She would tell me stories that were somewhat hints to making my own life better. She was gentle and kind. Her smile filled my heart with light. I didn't know if it was her and her kindness that drew me to her, or simply the promise of food. This woman was extremely busy with her shop and her four children. Her husband had other employment and much of the time worked away from home.

Why would this busy woman make time for such a ragged child as myself? She made time for the small things and all else was taken care of. Her children were wonderful individuals and I enjoyed spending time with them. Their generosity taught me generosity. Their love taught me to love. Their example of belief in a higher power spoke to me.

This family was one of many channels who tried to steer me throughout my childhood and well into my adult years. I have always been inspired by those who are brave enough to act upon what they believe in, be it right or wrong; their courage to live their beliefs was always strengthening me to look deep within at my own core beliefs and strive to live thereby.

In this life we can be overwhelmed; be engulfed in self-pity and allow our troubles to overtake us. Or, we can look for that lesson that propels us to advance spiritually. Father listens to your actions. Intentions are many times a wonderful energy, yes, but your actions are what speaks your beliefs.

Think about those individuals you know who are weakened by their difficulties and seemingly stuck in a cycle of hopelessness; they make not effort to take one step toward a solution – and yet, Father is there waiting for them. Father needs to view a willingness so He can begin to help.

This week, let us bring inspiration to those individuals who sit in fear and cannot envision the simple steps they must take toward solution. Let us turn the light upon ourselves and see how we at times desire escape, rather than taking a few steps toward a solution which would bring such relief and joy. How can we find rest to re-energize without seeking escape from our difficulties? How can we be of inspiration to others who are buried in life's turmoil?

This is all for this evening. My dear ones, continue discussing your adventures in the spirit; I so enjoy them. Know that we make effort to assist you in your decisions throughout the week. My love to you each. From Abraham and myself, we bid you, shalom.

Taking Risk And Having The Courage To Face Growth | Live Our Lives As An Example Of Hope

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP

03-05-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I love to visit with you, my faithful. No matter what befalls you, you continue to uphold the plan and purpose of our Brother/Father. Not even death can stop us.

The material life and the spiritual are becoming more blended. It is becoming less important to see with your eyes, hear with your ears, touch with your hands; there is simply an inner-knowing that connects us each to the cosmic mind. Here in this group is your refuge. Here is your escape and rest. As we gather, we find ourselves re-centered and focused on our reason for being.

I often wonder how I would handle myself in this day and age; there is so much distress and distraction. It is a struggle to continue on with mere material difficulties if you have not hope in something more meaningful.

It behooves a parent to come to the realization that they have spent their whole lives to provide for their children, and yet they have missed how their children have grown. What a value it is to be in the presence of the growth of a human being, especially a loved one? Can you receive the benefits of spiritual growth if you have not participated in opportunities that were presented? Have not worry, our lesson here this evening is on taking risk, and having the courage to face growth.

I am MARY. Again, I am so blessed by your presence. How honored I am to be your sister and participate in this Mission of our Brother/Father. Always must I revert back to my experience so that I can give you somewhat of a memorable picture. In my day, as well as this present day, it seemed you were either born into opportunity, or simply thriving on luck.

I learned early on that I was not born into wealth or good fortune. My mother had died relatively early on in my life, and even as a child I did not get to really know her. I had a few scattered relatives that could give me a few bits of her personality, but she, for the most part, was an illusion I had chosen to participate in. I had little idea of who my father really was for he rarely was a part of the home after my childhood; he also was somewhat of a part of the mystery of my identity.

Everyone in the mortal body must have experience in order to understand true meaning. This is how we advance and grow toward being a citizen of the universe. Around the age of sixteen I had then, for the most part, been on my own. It was required of me to take risks in order to simply survive. There are times in mortal living where we are feeling in somewhat of a safe place in life; and yet, it is unfulfilling and stagnant.

At some point in our lives, we learn to sleep in the bed we have made; we come to know cause and effect. It is easy to become focused on the material world and forget the reason for striving.

We are at the foot of a huge mountain and there is beauty all around; the climb is the gaining of our meaning, and our effort applied is the price that we pay for the grandeur of the heights achieved. I cannot begin to describe to you what awaits; what adventures will be revealed.

Our reason for striving is all about becoming one with that beloved Fragment of our Father within. Our life-journey is not so much 'out in front of us,' but of that continuous climb within. Let us remember - with each foothold taken, there is the value of experience. Without the courage to continue on, we forgo the upcoming beauty and meaning.

As we go into the week, let us ponder our reason for striving. How close are you to living the life you really want? What are those obstacles that keep you from reaching for that next step in the climb? Our courage to take a chance is all about reaching out for our First Source and Center. The material life is secondary to what is our true purpose. To stay stuck in a rut of safety is to lose sight, to lose hope; it is to feel we have no choices.

My friends, you know what to do to gear up for the climb. You have endless options to keep reminding you that the next step is a requirement in your spiritual advancement. Your willingness to allow the mortal and spiritual lives to be blended is about all the equipment you will require. We stay not in the shadows so that we cannot be seen, no; we are sojourners in a wonderful adventure and live our lives as an example of hope.

I have not regret for my lonely childhood. I have not complaint. I have not sorrow for the past, no, for it was indeed training for the life that was to come. And yes, I have met and have spoken with my earthly parents, and all is understood – all is well. Nothing of value is ever lost.

This week my friends, let us remember why we strive. What brings us hope, and how are we a light to others? I know that with each time we meet I am growing more affectionate toward you. I thank you for your open hearts and minds. From Abraham and myself, our love goes with you. We bid you, shalom.

Not How We Believe, But Living What We Believe. Mary Shares Sea of Glass Experience
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-12-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Here we are again as empty vessels ready to receive. I am inspired by your faithfulness. It is becoming somewhat of a difficult task to live your truth and have to sometimes explain it. Sometimes it seems that you have simply fallen into this lot of life – some of that is true, but most of it is guidance that was followed, a call that was heeded.

From the moment you made a spiritual commitment, there has been training for further advancement. When you wavered in your commitment, of course things were slowed down. It is not to worry; grow as you will. Father is extremely patient and wants for your comfort. He desires your lessons to be lasting, and as always, a light to Paradise. In everyday life I see you join in the world and your fear is decreased. I am happy to see you live honestly.

Our ways of spirituality may be different, yes, and tests us from time to time. When feeling a need to explain to others how we believe, remember it is not as important as our example in how we live what we believe. The how is personal, it is not to be shared lightly. Just as in Jesus' day – He focused not on Himself personally, but the Father's teachings of truth, beauty, and goodness. Whom do we serve? And how are we free to live what we believe?

I am MARY. Greetings to you again, friends. I can relate with this evening's lesson quite well. As most mortals, I had gone through a period where I was deeply concerned over other's opinions. I was practically shaped into what I believed others thought of me. I was careful to hide my poverty. My sandals were well-worn so I had always made sure the fabric of my dress was extra-long.

I found it difficult to make eye contact with others who seemed to be better than I. Of course this thinking was spiritually juvenile, but something most everyone will experience. I believe it was 'spiritual thinking' that first pulled me toward freedom – freedom from the 'classes' of society and the burden I held of what I thought others were seeing me as. Countless hours with the Master had me with feelings of my cosmic citizenship. After this material body fades, we will all see that each being is an equal child of God.

The Master dwelt more on function than fashion. He worried not about other's opinions because He was freed by the love and acceptance of our Father. The Master knew well what others were thinking, and yet His vision was always higher, always positive. In His heart He simply wanted to help; He wanted to stay the course. He was on a mission and it was not about 'Him,' but about teaching cosmic citizenship and making each person feel welcome into the kingdom.

Sometimes even today, I still am with the temptation to compare myself with others. I want to be with the belief that I am 'on track.' Time with mentors and friends help me to be with the comfort that all is as it should be; and that I am not 'in a competition,' no, but in service to a world that needs correction in order to find salvation. I am so honored to be a part of that and to know that the best is yet to come.

If you could picture for a moment, beings upon beings gathered around the Sea of Glass, all abuzz over some upcoming announcement from some speaker, or even Michael Himself. It is an unforgettable energy, for we are all as one and the feeling of 'fulfillment' is truly complete.

As you go about your daily living, go with that picture and know that each person you see is your cosmic brother or sister; they are at one with you in the kingdom. Even though their beliefs may be different from yours, you need not defend your beliefs nor explain them, no; you don't have to, for that is personal. Simply strive to arrange for positivity in how you live.

We are about the realness of spirituality, and we are to feel that confidence that 'Michael goes before us.' We know in whom we serve, and that needs not explanation to anyone. We spread light where we can, and strive to live happily. A great deal of the time we are in confusion over the technicalities of our belief system. Father does not want this for us. He desires your inner peace.

This week, make time to have meditation and the visualization of occupying a seat at the Sea of Glass. Let us review our duties as a cosmic citizen. Life is as big as you make it. Be careful not to overdo.

That is all. You are with such patience, and for that I am grateful. From Abraham and myself we send you with our love. Until next time, shalom.

[Excerpt from the Urantia Book regarding the Sea of Glass of which Mary speaks in this lesson]:

UB Paper 45:2.5 – Once a week, every ten days on Jerusem, the Sovereign holds a conclave with some one group of the various orders of personalities domiciled on the headquarters world. These are the charmingly informal hours of Jerusem, and they are never-to-be-forgotten occasions. On Jerusem there exists the utmost fraternity between all the various orders of beings and between each of these groups and the System Sovereign.

UB Paper 45:2.6 These unique assemblages occur on the sea of glass, the great gathering field of the system capital. They are purely social and spiritual occasions; nothing pertaining to the planetary administration or even to the ascendant plan is ever discussed. Ascending mortals come together at these times merely to enjoy themselves and to meet their fellow Jerusemites. Those groups which are not being entertained by the Sovereign at these weekly relaxations meet at their own headquarters.

Knowledge Is Not Worth Much Without Experience and Patience

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-19-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am wondering if you each realize your link to the cosmic mind as you sit here in your willingness and faith. You, each of you, make this happen.

We are all one! and nothing can contend with that 'force of one.' I realize each day in the flesh is sometimes unbearable. Many times we feel we are alone in our endeavors. When you can feel that connection with Father, you realize you are not alone but a part of that force of one.

How we are each loved and cherished is indescribable. You have to learn to feel this intimate personal love on your own, no one can bestow it upon you. It is through your experience, willingness and faith, that shows you the heart and mind of our First Source and Center.

It is understandable that impatience can be your master. Without experience, knowledge is not worth much. You can know of things to come and you can prepare your mind, but you cannot make sense of it until you have first-hand experience.

For instance, in your religious upbringing you have understood somewhat of the birth of Jesus and His resurrection; but how much more meaningful is this knowledge when we know the entire story? It is the same with your own life - if you believe that life is predictable and holds no more surprises, and that you already know everything, then certainly, experience is not going to be as valuable in your mind.

In my mortal life, I was a possessor of that spirit poison of impatience. It was my goal to have as much material possession as I could. It was my goal to have power over individuals. Every day was an opportunity for me to breed fear, to feed my appetite for power. When things did not seem to be going my way you can believe that hell was about to rain down upon those involved.

Machiventa Melchizedek taught me the real value of knowing the 'One God.' I was with the previous belief that I needed to please the many gods until my mentor showed me that I was part of 'the force of one,' and that changed my outlook completely. You see, I had this new knowledge, yes, but I had not yet understood the skills I needed to change my habits.

It was difficult for me to look upon a servant, for instance, and believe he deserved the same respect as I; and that he was even in the same league with the force of one, as was I. My erring propensity was the same, unfortunately, toward those females I was involved with; before my awakening, I saw them as expendable. As long as I received what I wanted there was peace; as soon as a woman spoke her mind to me she was punished - and that, I deeply regret.

However, towards the end of my life I developed wonderful relationships with my female counterparts; I developed a great deal of admiration and respect for them. With time and experience, I saw their value. I learned of their personalized skills, and came to accept and know that they were also at one with myself in the kingdom of God.

Machiventa taught me there is no hurry, for we are at the beginning of our spiritual careers; we will pick up on the other side where we leave off here. Every moment is a gift. You never 'know it all;' you cannot predict what is coming. You have not 'been there, done that' until you actually have! and learned the meanings and values therefrom.

To limit your life by seeing life as 'redundant' is dampening to your soul. There is joy to be had in all experience. There is value; there is meaning to be had – and we must learn that patience is the key to unlocking the door to the adventure of experiencing such.

Look at the Master, day after day woodworking in His father's shop, and then at Zebedee's boat shop. Time and time again did he repeat: "My hour has not yet come." He did not force it; His focus was on His work at hand. He had a family to prepare for before His departure. He had money to earn to provide for His family until they could begin to earn their own wages to live.

My friends, this shows that Jesus was so about the Father's business; He was not jumping into the world hastily ready to show Himself as a Creator Son. All went according to plan – Father's plan. The Master, even though He was a Creator Son, was still mortal and felt every feeling of a typical mortal. He put His awareness into every experience and handled everything with the guidance of His Father in heaven, yes.

Your culture is about to celebrate the resurrection of the Master. Many religionists focus on His horrible death. Many focus on the pain. Many are stuck with that old belief that 'because Christ died for me, I owe Him.' How sad! That is not what the Master wanted.

As this seasonal event comes upon you, let us focus on the release of the Spirit of Truth and allow our own spirits to be washed clean and set free. We 'owe' Him nothing; and yet as we grow to love Him, we would give all.

This week, let us be with the eyes of a child. The world is new, and every day is not some series of predictable events, no, but a door open wide to adventure. How are we to gain patience and dwell in the excitement of experience if we live in what seems to be such monotony? Let us spend time with the Master in that woodshop – patiently awaiting Father's preparatory lessons.

Mary and I are with ever-growing love for each one of you. She will be with us next week. Until then, we bid you, shalom.

Focus Not About How Others Perceive Us, But How We Can Better Perceive Father
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-26-2007
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am happy to see your balance with the issues. While you can be quite logical at times you also balance that out with humor and wit. It is important to be able to be your true selves anywhere you go. That does not mean you will always be accepted, but the fact that you stay true to who you are is what is important.

Everyone wants to be accepted; it feels all-encompassing. Of course those who do not accept you do not need to be thrust upon with your personality. You cannot force individuals to like or accept you. You cannot become as someone you see who is accepted on life's public stage, and try to present that for yourself for individual's scrutiny. Overall, people know falsehood when they see it. Also, to give out that type of energy portraying falsehood all the time is really too difficult to keep continuing.

I am with peace and comfort to say that each of you feels safe here and that you feel free to speak your mind, as do I. With that, I thank you, and leave you to Mary.

I am MARY. Greetings, friends. It is always a breath of fresh air to meet with you. Your unique personalities help me to become a more diverse Teacher. I admit there were those days in the flesh that I had great desire to be accepted. I thought as spiritual people we would all just automatically love each other. The Master never said we would find total acceptance of one another, but He did recommend that we find our common thread and work towards the goal.

I do remember a time after I had come into the ministry that I felt I needed to be understood by everyone. I didn't know that some individuals were not capable of understanding me. I didn't understand that some personalities simply clash. I 'figuratively' made effort to sell myself as a regular citizen within the kingdom of heaven - although I did not believe that about myself.

I really was with the belief that I was inferior. I came from a poor background; I had no money, no status. I saw not the value of who I was as a person. Really though, I was just beginning to blossom. A few close sisters had helped me to see my worth as a person. Even though their background was quite different from mine, their underlying personalities were showing similar likes.

It is interesting to see children at play - they are not with the pretentious and padded belief systems that adults have. Their goal is to have fun, to seek laughter. Their egos are not trying to gain energy by appearing superior.

As I learned more about the Master, I saw how He cared so much for our Father in heaven. It is not that people were so unimportant that He could be unaffected by their thoughtless words and deeds, no. It was that He so loved the Father and kept His focus on the mission. The mission was not about Him being liked or disliked, it was about teaching the people about our Father; and our Father, about us.

As I began to know and love Father more, I was less affected by other individual's attitudes. My outlook so improved that I saw more good than bad. I became desensitized somewhat toward people and more sensitive to Father.

Knowing the Master, I found it easy to find the good. It helped me to feel at one within the kingdom; and my status as to what was expected of a woman of that day and age became less visible. You see, this helped me to mature in spirit, and I was granted a great many tasks. I was too busy to worry about what people were thinking. It was easier to focus on the goal – and my goal was to serve the Master and His ministry.

With Father, we always are welcome to a clean slate or a fresh start. As mortals, we will make a great many mistakes and Father is always listening when we decide to stop and ask for help. Are there any questions this evening?

CALVIN: Mary, thank you so much for your lessons. I very much appreciate your contribution and example of how you lived and to help us understand Jesus better, as well. I am wondering if you might have any advice for me. I'm open for any you might want to share.

MARY: Thank you, Calvin. Certainly, I see you for the most part as being happy and at peace. You will always have some drama going on in your life – all mortals do. You are becoming an effective teacher to your friends and family. Just know that the biggest surprises in life have not yet come. There will always be challenges, yes, and you will feel thoroughly tested. Have not worry, your training and dedication to the Master's plan should equip you for any challenge you may face. Be observant and know that those small irritations are great teachers. You do well.

MIRIAM: Mary, I have read several novels about you. They were interesting to me because of how hard the woman's plight was in your day. I am thrilled in how you share a lot about that with us here. You were quite a courageous individual. I am really glad that we get to know you. Your lessons are always just full of meaning, and you are so willing to give example and detail about your life; it truly helps me relate to my life. I just wanted to thank you for that. I am struggling coming back from this heart ailment, and I am trying to be patient, but I wonder if you have any feedback?

MARY: Certainly. Thank you for your kind words. I do understand the female agenda. It has occupied a great deal of my education. There are similar evolutionary worlds with issues of male and female...

MIRIAM: Do you mean where males are the underdogs?

MARY: No. I mean where females are physically smaller and weaker, but mentally – not. It was always my thoughts that women on this planet were the downtrodden gender and no one would ever understand. In my travels since my mortal life, I have met with females from other planets that also experienced the same plight as the women of Urantia. It is really common for the larger animals to try to dominate the smaller. Throughout evolution we find that the 'smaller' must rely upon their intellect to survive; and therefore, become stronger. As you each will find out, there are many planets that have some individuals who appear as abnormal, and will be somewhat downtrodden. It is all lessons for the ego, and is fascinating, really. About your heart procedure, we see that as advancing like it should. Eat those foods that are rich in iron to keep the blood healthy. You may do some small activities, but when you feel tired – rest. Do not force it. Each day you will become stronger and stronger; it will not take as long as you think to make full recovery. You are concentrating on a specific time-allotment, and that is in itself, overwhelming. Feel good about what you are doing, and that includes rest. You can always find things to do that sharpen the mind while resting the body. Overall, things are going quite well, have not worry.

TECTRA: Mary, I was going to ask if you have some words for Nina regarding her friend, Kyle.

MARY: Thank you, Tectra, very thoughtful. Yes, Kyle is in serious mental anguish. He cannot perceive love from others because he has no love for himself. He sees not the value in simple goodness, but only value in the material. My recommendation is to withhold attention from his emotional neediness while encouraging his humorous side. Downplay the drama and simply live your life as if the Master were right here with you. There is always some brother or sister we cannot fathom. Look at Judas; the individuals in the ministry were quite astonished at his betrayal. We felt guilty for our hatred towards him. As we moved forward as followers of Christ, we began to perceive the many possibilities that would lead up to the betrayal, and realized that he (Judas) was simply a self-guided individual. He could not let go of his vision for a seat as a 'chosen individual' above others. Nor could he see how Father's plan for the unfolding events could do any good. Also about your friend, Kyle, I say be observant; be practical and be safe. That is all. Thank you, Tectra, for your thoughtful question. Our time is growing late, is there one more possible question?

SIMON: In the last few lessons, you talked about seeing the details of the wider picture. Could you apply that to my situation? and any further words? Maybe your perspective will help it to click easier for my understanding.

MARY: I see you as a man who wears many hats. You are not quite sure which one to wear so you are constantly changing. It would be my understanding that in order for you to find joy you feel you must bring joy to others, and you are finding you need to keep up a continuous juggling act. I recommend that you stay quiet for a couple of weeks and really listen to people. Think about what really brings you joy. Take a deep breath and relax. You will find there is peace and comfort in the spirit. Overall, Simon, you do well. You are not one to ever lay down before your troubles. Your enthusiasm is admired. That is all.

For this week, let us remember what our focus is. How important is your need to be liked? How will your closeness with Father help you to maintain focus and find joy in being an example of one of the Master's disciples?

I find joy in you, my friends. Continue on with the work. Our love goes with you always. From Abraham and myself, we bid you, shalom.

The Master Sets Us Up To Learn Together, To Gain Growth
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-02-2007
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am moved tonight by this evening's energy. I can see a growing light among you. I appreciate your courage to be real.

You are living in an age where it is crucial to have a clear view of reality. There seem to be so many issues in the world that need attention. It is common to become overwhelmed and remain indecisive in your daily living. If we can focus on the simple tasks before us, we can harness our energies to help potentials become actualities.

I am MARY. Greetings to you, friends. It is always a warm welcoming spirit that dwells here among you. I am in understanding for the most part of what Abraham speaks of. The ministry at large seems to create an anxiety amongst the participants. In the healing aspects of our ministry there is so much good we can do by allowing a continuous self-correction. In our state of becoming, we will personally be our own greatest task.

You are each aware that spirit helps align experiences that create growth among mortals. We are each a reflection of one another in some way. I am taken back to a personal experience with one of my sisters in the ministry, Sylvina. She was seemingly always set before me as a stumbling block. Daily communication with her seemed to be futile for she was in constant need of energy.

Being a few years younger than I was, I made effort to give this sister the patience and the understanding I so needed for myself at that time of life. The Master had given she and I many tasks together. Every time I realized I would be sent out with her again I would be discouraged because she was somewhat of a fluttering butterfly, while I was made to do the less glamorous tasks.

There was a time we were ministering to an elderly gentleman who needed clean bandages. And as I cleaned his wounds and made preparations for new bandages, Sylvina engaged him in story-telling; and this brought great joy to each one of them. I chose to be irritated and did think of myself as 'the true hero,' the one willing to roll up her sleeves to aid the sick and downtrodden.'

Each day I spent with my youthful sister I was made aware of new things. Her liberty in living made me find balance in my conservative ways; and I believe she learned to take responsibility a bit more seriously. It was obvious that 'as a team,' I brought comfort to the body while she ministered to the mind.

This young woman reflected to me some characteristics I wanted for myself. In viewing her irresponsibility, I learned how judgmental I could be. Instead of fairly communicating with her of my needs to have her help, I chose to be petty and downplay her importance while harboring such spirit poisons. Yes, those spirit forces definitely knew of the corrections that could result from my being paired with this sister coworker in service.

Over the years, Sylvina and I became quite close. We could come face to face in anger and work through our differences. We could practically read each other's minds. This woman, who appeared to be a stumbling block in my spiritual path, ended up being a wonderful teacher to me. Yes, the Master knew us both and what we needed.

He set us up for growth. I am grateful to have had such individuals as Sylvina in my mortal life; what an excellent help that experience is to me now in this life as a teacher.

My friends, the Master sets us up to learn together in order to gain growth. Let us be aware of our patterns of judgments and anger. In the midst of common issues and challenges, what can help to ease our angst toward our fellows? By holding onto old behavioral patterns, what are those spiritual poisons that begin to take root. With your new spiritual training, can you instead take those steps to take on the sweetness of spiritual fruit?

It was enjoyable speaking with each of you during this last week. I look forward to further close discussion with you each on a personal level. For now, I shall take my leave, as will our mentor and friend, Abraham. We send you with our love. Until next week, shalom.

Allow The Real Spirit You To Override The Material You | Daily Meditation Practice
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-09-2007
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying your lightheartedness. I appreciate your individuality and also your willingness to become one with the Spirit. It would seem this group-setting is such wonderful therapy; it is fertile ground for the planting of new ideas. Your discussions bring new thought.

We are on the brink of seeing either weeds or the blossoming flowers. I believe the concept of 'group' teaches us to be better kingdom citizens. We are learning how to be calm and to know that we are safely within the family of our First Source and Center.

It is obvious in this day and age that individuality is quite celebrated. It seems that our youth screams for attention, and this starts to lean over into the selfishness of ego, and away from the closeness of family. Body adornment has become something to worship, while the concept of a budding soul is hidden. What our eyes can see has become seemingly more real than what the spirit can feel. We are all working toward self-mastery – and for the most part, that is letting go of the material and attempting to view life circumstances through the eyes of the spirit.

I am MARY. My greetings to you again, friends. I am in understanding of that longing for Spirit security. You are beings who have to exercise faith. I know of that longing to be 'in the knowing' of how you are perceived. Believe me, I was indeed quite shallow as a youngster; I was always in deep concern over my appearance; I wanted to belong; I wanted to be exceptional.

Working with the Master, He would have us meditate on simply being a body of light. Ten or twenty minutes we would meditate on our own beings as a simple portion of light. In this, the Master would tell us to see ourselves in the busyness of life dealing with our brothers and sisters – also nothing but beings of light. And in removing the 'shell' of the spirit – the mortal body – that therein lies the beauty, the truth, and the goodness. Jesus would then guide us into awareness as if going about our daily lives as spirit, as light.

This simple daily meditation helped me to become a better citizen and a much more sweet and kinder person. I came to view the lepers, for instance, as beings of light and to know they were well within the kingdom, equal to anyone. It felt wonderful to be an equal part of a link of all that is. I could make conversation with the wealthy as well as the destitute. I could see all my associates as children striving to make our way into adulthood.

I am reminded of the resurrection of our Master, and how the sisters and I had so badly wanted to go into the tomb and tend to His body- and upon our arrival, he was not in there! It was a dark empty tomb, and the empty vehicle that was his mortal shell, was gone.

You each are wearing the flesh that is temporary - as was His. It is our ministry to promote truth, beauty, and goodness while in the flesh - as did He. It is as simple as making everyone you meet feel welcome and a part of all there is.

I am pondering the future lessons here within this group. I believe we need to get to the simple basics of everyday living. There are so many issues to tend to in this day and age; and in that regard it is definitely a different world now than when myself or Abraham had worn the flesh. I am honored to be a part of this family, for you are indeed quite beautiful individuals. I am growing to love each one of you more each time we meet; your individuality strikes me in many different ways. Sometimes I laugh, sometimes I am concerned - but overall, I am always learning.

This week, try to make time to have a short meditation daily on allowing the shell to slip away so to reveal that beautiful spirit light - make effort to go about your daily business in that mode. Our lesson is kept short and we shall take our leave. Know that Abraham and myself are with ever-growing love for you each. Until next time, shalom.

Emotions Bog Down Our Clear Thinking. To Not Control Is Strength, Not Weakness

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-16-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Of all the issues discussed here this evening, I am glad you have been able to set them aside for a time so we can get down to the business of spirit. It is grounding to have the group to bounce ideas off of. It is healthy to have a well-balanced discussion that involves common sense and humor.

As we ponder the benefits of being involved in this group, we can see how the mortal life is filled with a series of such groups. I have found it a blessing to be surrounded by supportive friends who would always be honest with me - loving, and yet, honest. You would never let a loved one continually trip over a mistake; you would do what you could to give help. I find that you each help in a balanced way as far as this group goes; in personal life, however, we tend to be a bit more emotional.

Last week, Mary made comment to the fact that we will delve into more understanding on basic issues in everyday life. I believe those relationships that are close and personal are sometimes the hardest lessons to learn. Back in my mortal day, I had always worried about the pain of loss. While I acted as if it was 'in my loved one's own best interest' to use caution, it would really be in my own to not have to bear the pain of loss.

Parents always have these temptations that they could use fear into scaring their children to being wise about any situation; and I say, the child mostly learns to remember the fear.

I used fear to control my loved ones so that they would somehow keep their focus before them. I did not want to show real love because in my mind, that meant weakness. 'To control' was more masculine, to me. 'To love' was breeding weakness, I thought; and in those days I could not afford to be known as weak. How blessed are we that the Master did not have that same view.

No one who ever felt the Master's love would ever say He was weak. Those that could not or would not receive His love, made Him up in their minds to look inferior. Because the Master did not show great emotion, some mistook Him for cold. He had plenty of human emotion, it was just not on parade. His closeness to Father helped Him to harness the energy of emotion and put it toward actions He could take.

Jesus was not beaten down by His emotions or the pain inflicted upon Him by others. He always made His best effort in all things and would leave the results to Father – this freed up His thinking to keep going about the ministry. He was not bogged down by emotion that would have Him seek escape or have temptation to 'throw in the towel' so to speak. His thinking was clear and dwelt not upon hurt feelings.

Many new generations still find hate in their heart for Judas Iscariot, and have more emotion than Jesus ever did about that situation. The Master could love deeply, yes, and yet, not make love about 'emotions.' He trusted in Father to provide detailed guidance; He depended on this guidance to lead Him to the next task. The Master knew His time here was short and had not a moment to waste being petty or hurt. He had to keep a clear head about Him. Cry when it was time to, yes, and then move on.

This week, Mary and I are asking you to see how you can love without holding back. Is love a weakness or strength in your living? How does emotion bog down your thinking? What are those activities you can do to keep you connected to the Father?

Our lesson is kept short again this week. We will assess your experience for the week next time and move our lessons from that. Know that our love is ever growing for you each. Until next time, shalom.

Stillness Practice Creates Peace, Which Enhances Our Connection To Our Divine Caretakers

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-23-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. The energy tonight is glowing. There is such a feeling of enthusiasm and love. I am honored to be your brother and Teacher. I am amazed year after year at your faithfulness and dedication to keep supporting the Master's cause.

I am in understanding of your view of a chaotic world. It is not so much that the world has changed, it is mostly that your awareness has expanded and our link to the cosmic mind is more solid. It would seem that the human mind is bombarded with newness, for this is an age of increasing awareness. It would be part of our ministry to keep the peace, to extend calmness and spread the good news in an appropriate manner.

I am MARY. Greetings to you, fellow coworkers. I am always fascinated by your conversations. While I am trying to fulfill my duties as a mentor. I myself am also struck by the newness. We always speak of 'accelerated time' and then are somewhat confused while in the midst of it. You have the tools to keep peaceful in any situation. We still promote meditation to strengthen the mind. It is very easy for mortals to be pulled into dramatic situations.

We have to remember - while the world is becoming different, so are we; there is always talk of 'being on the cutting edge' in mortal matters. I say, we are also on the cutting edge of spirit matters. I am speaking of your personal relationship with God the Father, and Christ Michael - our Brother/Father. Through them, we have our personal link to the latest in spirit activity.

We can move; we can change and adapt in any situation. You have been trained to apply spirit; and while that may not be acceptable in the opinions of others, we remain unshakable in our stance for our Brother/Father's cause. Many mortals are frozen in the fear of everyday-living and they change not; they hold on to non-reality; fear makes them immovable and they cannot connect to Spirit. Our minds need rest and meditation to stay strong and to stay connected. And this is how we rise above fear.

Last week, Abraham spoke of emotions and real love. He means not that we hide emotions, no! but rather, to stay connected to Spirit. With that comfort in Spirit, one does receive an exercise for the mind that creates a balanced state; and in such state we are dedicated to allowing Spirit to transform us, to prepare us for our mortal career.

We allow not the world to damage us; the world changes us not. So many that are blind to Spirit allow the world to change them or build them up into something that is an illusion to where there is not real meaning in life - there is no satisfaction or fulfillment.

I do remember my beginning days in the ministry and allowing the excitement to control my emotions. I do remember coming upon an argument between James and John, the Zebedee brothers. While I disliked the controversy, I immediately jumped in with my opinions. The brothers could not even hear what I was trying to say, they could only see my high emotional condition. I did not create peace and solutions, no. Of course, everyone walked away mad.

The Master explained that had I been more connected to Spirit, I could have calmly explained my position, and that would have attracted their attention. How blessed was I with the Master's presence. His wisdom touched my soul. He literally made me better in all ways.

My friends, you also have opportunity to be this close with our Brother/Father; you do have access to His wisdom. High emotions will make it so you cannot hear Him. Practice your stillness and allow Him to communicate with you; and let that link enable you to create peace.

Let us walk in comfort this week knowing that ultimate good comes from every circumstance. Father does not allow ultimate bad things to happen when we seek to live in His peace. He does not pick and choose who will leave this life without all opportunities for growth. This is an evolutionary planet, and we are prone to the accidents of time – and of course, the animalistic tendencies in man.

This week, let us concentrate on creating peace. Know that our love is ever growing for you each. I am truly enjoying getting to know your unique personalities. I thank you for allowing me to be your sister/teacher. From Abraham and myself, we bid you Godspeed. Until next week, shalom.

To Serve With Joy Brings Light, Brings Peace, Enhances The Cosmic Mind
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-30-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Here we are again gathered in faith and hope that we will see the fruits of our group effort. This is a place where you ministers can find rejuvenation in spirit, mind, and body.

In the busyness of our daily lives, we tend to forget Father is at hand. It certainly takes a toll on the mind to have this separation. You really have to pull yourself out of life and into some stillness – some quiet, somewhere where the mind is sitting with a blank slate in order to gain this rejuvenation.

I am MARY. I am so very honored to be a part of your learning. Abraham brought me to share my experience, to show how spirit works in life. We are not about eloquence of words, no; we are about using spirit in this evolutionary life.

I do remember my days ministering to individuals in the crowded marketplace. I became well known and there always seemed to be needy individuals tugging at my sleeve. My mind was bent on solving problems, helping to get food and clothing, medicine and supplies. Often in the rush, I did easily set aside the Master's lessons. My focus became hazy and I was mechanical.

How blessed were we in those days to sit at our Master's feet and hear Him speak words of love and comfort – a pep rally, so to speak, to rejuvenate our energy. Jesus definitely reminded us of why we worked, why we strived to serve.

We could be in the midst of deep conversation with Jesus when a little one would tap Him on the shoulder and demand to play. That was a temptation the Master could not resist. He was definitely gifted at multi-tasking. He could give this child attention and at the same time show us how lightheartedness could clear the mind, and how laughter could free the spirit.

Said Jesus: "How blessed are those who have the faith of a little child, how wide are their eyes, how endless is their wonder."

The Master's rejuvenating conversations would encourage us to go forward in peace and love; it reminded us to serve with joy. Following His example, I was able to take one person at a time, give them the comfort that was needed, and really reap the joyful satisfaction that comes with being connected to the spirit. I could look throughout the market square and see my sisters also at work, smiling, bringing hope, bringing comfort, bringing joy.

You that have volunteered to minister to those who surround you are well trained, and you also need a great deal of spiritual rejuvenation. I see many individuals who reach out for physical refreshment, and the desire never seems to be fulfilled for it is truly spiritual refreshment that is needed. Those that knock, the door is opened. Those that seek, find.

I understand that you are pulled in many different directions. To move mechanically is not what our ministry is about. As the cosmic mind is growing, we must continue to bring light. To be joyful in ministry is to bring light. This is expanding the cosmic mind; it is expanding mass-awareness.

It seems that sometimes the world crumbles around you and you know not where to start. Remember, Father brings the ministry to you; He brings you your tasks and gives perfect instructions on how to complete them.

While there are so many events to be concerned over, let us not have our spirits dampened. Be aware of those spirit connections that create joy. Sit at the Master's feet. Look up into His face. Draw upon His energy. Know that His comfort and determination is unending.

This week, let us find joy in our ministry. Let us seek the true source of spirit energy. Rest the body; rest the mind. Make not worry a habit. When we think of abundance in this life, what does that entail?

That is all. We are honored to walk among you, to be your sister and brother in Michael's cause. Go in peace. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Loaf of Bread on a Windowsill. Self-Honesty is Freedom and a Strong Connection to Spirit

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-07-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. As I am here listening to you, I desire to spend more time with you. You are each captivating and I cherish our moments together. I am in understanding of the daily struggle between faith and animalistic tendencies. I understand your deep longings, for I have had them myself.

It is quite a task to learn Father's timing. To be still and accept 'what is,' so often comes with a lot of anxiety that is in need of harnessing. When we are conscious of practicing self-mastery it is difficult to be patient, to wait for the outcome. Mortals tend to force, and this does create struggle. There is no doubt that hard work brings results, but in the spirit kingdom, we practice to release the results to Father's will.

I am MARY. Greetings to all of you. I am always honored to be a part of your family circle. I am in appreciation of Abraham's words this evening. I understand about 'forcing your desires,' or allowing impatience to get the better of you. Growing up in that time of my desperation and longing, I felt like a lone soldier who was always in preparation for battle.

As a young adult, I had deep hatred for the world and blamed all its people for my loneliness and desperation. I would pray halfheartedly in a manner I had learned from others; it was more like wishing – if I thought long and hard enough about something, that I could have it for myself. Of course when my so-called prayers were not answered I was in doubt that there was any kind of God. I really felt over-looked and became resentful and rebellious.

I recall one day I had spotted a fresh loaf of bread on a windowsill. I quickly ran up there to steal it, and as my hand went up, I saw these eyes watching me. Of course, it was the baker of the bread. I quickly pulled back my empty hand and started to run when the woman called after me: "Come back, child." I turned to look at her to see her expression, and it was not angry, so I took a few steps forward to listen to what she had to say.

The woman took the bread, broke off a large piece and handed it toward me. No words were spoken. I was not this time punished for my rebellious deeds but handed a gift of compassion. Every day thereafter I would walk by this magical windowsill and there would be bread there waiting for me. How this softened my heart! How this turned around my mind! As I began to see through positive eyes, the world began to change my perception of it. There really was a bit of compassion in the world. There really were acts of kindness.

There were mortals who struggled as I did, yes, and it was very helpful to me to have conversations with those who were like myself. We learned that we could either sit and complain – or as we liked to call it, 'venting' – or choose to rise above. As I became closer to these individuals, we would speak of positive solutions to everyday problems. What a blessing for me. How this opened my eyes to believe that something good was really out there.

Make no mistake, the world still seemed to hand me my share of difficulties; but even these became challenges I realized I could find growth from, and I learned to act with integrity. It is true, you get what you give out. I learned to give and receive, graciously, yes, and it all seemed to begin with a slice of bread.

As we practice self-mastery, it is key to be honest with yourself. Worry not about any sort of punishment. Many people are deluding themselves thinking that should they have honesty with self, that that would reveal all to God, and it probably 'wouldn't look real good.' Father is not judging your every move. He knows your needs and understands your frailties. Self-honesty is freedom and a strong connection to Spirit. As we move about in our everyday lives, we are in understanding of how important integrity is. We must be people that can be trusted.

As you open your hearts this week to receive new understanding, let us make effort to see the good in the world; let us make effort to add to the good. Be open to new avenues, for Father may have you working overtime. There is a great deal of work to be done; and yes, individuals will come and go. Remember, the Master ministered 'as He passed by,' just as can you. You are a lovely bunch and I am blessed to be among you.

Know that Abraham and myself are available during the week should you have need. Just sit down and be quiet, we will be there. You know we are growing more in love with you each, every time we meet. And with that, we shall bid you, shalom.

As We `Pass By` Are We Vessels Of Light | Mary`s Personal Mortal Experiences
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-14-2007
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am so touched by your friendship. The love here is visible. You each put so much into your day. And even though you may be weary, you honor your commitment to this group and these teachings.

I am uplifted to see your group and others, striving to move forward with the Teaching Mission and the Master's plan and purpose. You know not where this is going. You have not seen, as we can view, the many wonderful results that have taken place because of your interactions in the world. You have put these lessons to good use. Yes, there is a real light about you; you don't need to take my word for it. You don't need to see it with your eyes, for you know well that you simply need to remember who we serve. Remember His love for us and how He longs for our wellness.

I am MARY. I agree with all of Abraham's wonderful words. I am encouraged to strive for new and better ways to serve. Over the years in my days serving the Master, I found myself experiencing a great deal of interaction with individuals I did not even know, or care to know - it was like I was a chess piece that was moved about. I would meet and speak with a great deal of individuals; sometimes I would only speak with them for a minute and then they were gone. I was placed in with different classes of individuals wherein we would speak freely and find a common thread.

In my earlier years of the ministry, I was one day interacting with children, and apparently, in the midst of simple play I became aware that I was a channel for inspiration. In the years following, I come to realize this was the ministry; this is what we had been trained for. It was as if the Father filled me with a spiritual energy that He would pour upon those who were around me - and in that, Father was creating awareness; He was planting ideas and attempting to become closer to His children.

I am reminded of an elderly man who was like a father to me; he would come by and talk to me every day. We would laugh and tell stories. I came to understand from our encounters that he was a light to me from which I found the renewed energy to go about my day. I wondered why he came to see me every day.

Later on, I learned that the man likewise found spiritual refreshment from our conversations. I had not known a real example of an earthly father until this man had entered my life. What a joy! I am still in contact with him to this day. He was an individual who touched many lives with his lightheartedness. Even though he was infirmed, he found strength in making people laugh. I simply adored him.

There was also a time where a woman was leaving a fruit stand, and the cloth she carried her goods in had opened and fruit spilled out everywhere. I stepped over to help pick them up and we got to talking about our preoccupations and our desire to do too much. It was only five minutes but I believe it assisted us both in creating an energy to go out and serve.

We know not why we're placed in certain areas and people come into our lives and then go. It may seem strange, yes, but believe me it is a baton of energy being passed. The cosmic mind has increased dramatically in just the last ten years, simply from individuals having spiritual awareness. As you know, we need not stand on the corner to preach our gospel, no. We are everyday people who serve 'as we pass by,' just as did the Master.

I had known another man who was a business owner and the father of six. His mind was so deep in his responsibilities that he had not known where his priorities had gone; he had forgotten how to love. His children were becoming quite grown when he had realized he had not really known them. We met when I had clumsily slipped in a mud puddle one afternoon. He was walking by and helped me to my feet. I was indeed embarrassed and he was nice enough to tell me his own stories of clumsiness. We laughed and walked on.

A few days later this businessman and I had bumped into each other again; our conversation turned toward real-life circumstances that impact us, and how in our busyness we can forget why we live. After a period of time, I had not seen him and I always wondered how he was doing. I did find out that the man had greatly decreased his business so that he may get to know his family. They lived not a life of luxury any longer, but they had something much more valuable.

How joyful were his children to feel their father's presence in the family. How happy was his wife to see this change in him. There were always some concerns over finances, yes, and yet their unity and desire to honor Father quelled their anxiety; they were able to live life learning all the usual things families learn. How blessed was the man to have learned this early on instead of being old and regretful.

Was the businessman's change because of my interaction with him? or was it the spirit of Father flowing through me to speak to his spirit. I was just having a pleasant time living in the energy of the Spirit, and knew not that was even ministry, for I was so honored to be a part of the Master's plan.

In this life you will meet a great deal of individuals. Remember that you are a vessel for light. It is not really an obvious circumstance, no; it is simply you being you, and allowing the Spirit within to be what it is - and together, work to reach souls. There are always opportunities missed because you may be in a hurry, or you may be shy, or you may feel unworthy and without confidence. I am saying this is not so much a matter of concentrating on doing good, rather it is about allowing. It is about being joyful and being just who you are; and in this, the Spirit is there.

Yes, we are led to certain places to have interaction with individuals. We do not know the outcome; we don't need to. We are simply helping the light to grow – and in doing so, we are helping the cosmic mind. We are helping create circuits that have not been before.

I believe next week, if you have need we will take questions. As for this evening, we will send you with our love. Know that we are ever so grateful to be a part of your family. From Abraham and myself, until next time, we bid you, shalom.

Accepting Ministry From Others Opens Us For That Personal Change Needed

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-21-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am so grateful we can be here together to regenerate in mind and spirit. This group is a well of health, truth, and life – like-minded fellows with which you can dip your cup and prepare for the week ahead.

In our ministry we sometimes get to the point where we are always in a mode of giving. Sometimes the origins of this mode go back to traditional church beliefs. "To be giving and self-sacrificing is holy," taught the church. Today we are more with the belief that giving is more of an exchange of energy, an ever-flowing river of truth, beauty, and goodness.

As we minister to others, we need to also look upon what is given to us. We are still students, ourselves, and in need of ministry too. At this point in time, we can see individuals stepping out of the church boundaries to really think for themselves. This swaying pendulum of insight will help us in taking a leap toward Light and Life. Individuals are finding more freedom and less fear, to question their lattice of belief.

I am MARY. I am again grateful to be with you this evening. As I get to know your personalities, I grow more in love with you. I am always in anticipation to meet with you students of the Correcting Time. You could say I was always a free-thinker, yes, but mostly I was just a rebel toward tradition. I disliked those people who appeared to 'have,' because I was always seeing myself as 'having not.'

Growing up mostly as a lonely child, I had gained quite a bit of mistrust toward adults. Those caring adults who tried to give me kind words, I saw them as people who were trying to get me to conform; and to me, that meant I was not good just 'as I was.' So therefore, I was suspicious of kind words.

Before my ministry with the Master, I remember having a bit of a crush on a young man named Jeremiah. He was kind and thoughtful. He knew well what topics to not discuss with me, and religion was certainly one of them. Little did I know then that he was a good friend of John the Baptist and was a witness to the beginning changes. He would speak of this so-called 'prophet;' and although I could see the enthusiasm in his eyes and total faith, I still felt I could not trust.

Jeremiah was from a good hard-working family – one of seven children. He was well familiar with balance in life – to give and receive; to love and be loved; to teach and to learn; and simply to prioritize life with the eyes of the spirit. I believe had I been ready for such an individual, I could have certainly spent my life with him.

Jeremiah was a good teacher. Many times he had told me the truth about myself and I thought he was simply being judgmental, and this was always an argument for us. My mistrust eventually sabotaged the relationship and we went our separate ways. I will always remember the light in his eyes as he spoke his true beliefs.

It wasn't until he had been away from my life for some time that I began to truly appreciate having known him. I had not regret because I had learned so much about myself through him – things which I was in denial about. I know Jeremiah went on to marry a wonderful woman and raise well-balanced children. We had always remained friends and had that connection that was on a level of spirit.

It was knowing people like Jeremiah that helped me to find myself, to figure out my place in the world. I realized my rebellious nature was not for loss, but for being open for the 'new' that was to come. It was my choice to embrace what I felt to be true. Coming to know the Master, this was exactly what He taught – that our closest connection with Father begins from within.

As promised, I will keep the lesson short to receive any questions you may have. Abraham also stands by, proceed.

CALVIN: Thank you for your words today, both of you. Abraham, it has been about sixteen years ago that we were students of our initial Teaching Mission teacher, Ham. Two questions: We understand now there were transmission errors at times; and yet, Ham's presence was very real to us. The thought has crossed my mind though – did we misunderstand and it was really you, Abra'ham,' all along? and we just got the 'Ham' part and rode with it? He does feel like a different personality from yourself. Secondly: I talked to Rebecca in Nashville over the weekend, and wonder if you have any words for her regarding Ham as her ongoing Teacher?

ABRAHAM: I was there in the beginning days, and Ham was my student and associate Teacher. Our names may appear to be close, yes, but mistake not, he is definitely his own entity. You can ask anyone who sat there for hours listening to him, they grew to love his unique personality. Ham is indeed a brave individual who dared to be one of the first to participate in the Correcting Time on this darkened world. Rebecca knows she can begin again with Ham at any time. We all know by now that these lessons are informal. I say to her to worry not, for all is moving as it should. Just remember to maintain personal closeness with Father. Have not worry about other's spiritual distance. Thank you, Calvin, that was a good question. Are there others?

MERIAM: Abraham, years ago I asked you about a couple of Teachers. You said you didn't know much about them, other than that they were highly skilled spiritual teachers. I have been listening to CD's of this lady and she uses beta/alpha, and theta/delta waves in her meditation tapes. I was wondering if you had any comment. Is that akin to 'vibrations in energy' which you have spoken about? Does her method help or enhance?

ABRAHAM: I believe that these vibrational waves help some individuals, mostly beginners who are still searching. As you grow in the spirit you feel these waves as a natural and normal part of everyday life. If you believe these help you to focus, then, by all means, utilize them. It is interesting to come upon those who are first seeking the spirit, and begin to feel those mindal changes which include awareness of these vibrational waves. It can be frightening at first, but as you grow in the spirit you learn to feel them as a natural part of everyday living. Is this helping?

MERIAM: Yes. Sometimes you mention how you see us 'as energy.' Are those 'waves' like a small part of that?

ABRAHAM: Understood, we can use those waves to attract attention; but as beings of energy, it, for the most part, is not necessary. With the connection of the spirit circuits, new energies will be felt, and it will go beyond what is common knowledge now. We are always learning to embrace the new. I know that as a mortal it is our tendency to hold on to what we know; but you that participate in the Teaching Mission are becoming accustomed to newness. While these ideas are not organized or labeled, those that stay grounded will learn about them - naturally; it will just happen. While it will take many years, all things are moving us toward Light and Life. Good question, my daughter.

TECTRA: This is something in the lesson that Mary touched on last week - "helping create circuits among us." I believe that what you are speaking about here is that as we get more centered and balanced, and the art of allowing Father's time with those we interact with - that that is creating circuits. Could you expand on that and how that works? And, what the ramifications of that are?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Well said. It is as if we are actual components on a circuit card. We are always sending energy through the circuits that effect every component. And when the components have some sort of spiritual awareness, then energy is easily passed through. There are always those who are with disdain and anger, and their world is certainly dark. When energy cannot flow in a certain path it will create new paths. And as we are feeling more a part of Father's kingdom and reaching more individuals to share with them the good news, then are there circuits formed that carry actual energy. You can be in a room with a lot of people and not be doing a single thing, and yet you are a component that is alive with energy - and people can feel this. People can feel negativity too. I can see the genuine connections between people. I can see a great deal of connection in this room; you all feel at home here, and there is love, there is no fear. As we are learning to take this into our personal environments and simply live as an example, simply being kind, this helps to create connections between individuals. And even if an individual does not identify this connection with Father, they are still components for Father to travel through. Good question, Tectra.

I am in appreciation of this evening's variety of questions. You are thoughtful of the world around you. That is all. I am with such gratitude to be among you caring individuals. Your love for the truth will clear our path. As always, our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

John Zebedee`s Example of Strength and Freedom of Mind at the Cross

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-04-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How wonderful it is to see the support in this room - true friendship, yes; it is a cold glass of water to drink on a hot day. We gather to become refreshed.

I am grateful to see the act of surrender so that we may receive our lesson. What a comfortable place to gather and let down your guard (or personas) that you use out in the world. We all know well by now that in here, ego does not serve. What a freedom! What a chance to become closer to Father! What an opportunity to remember real love!

I can now really appreciate the process of growing older. It seems that with each passing year you gain wisdom that is freeing you from the trivial of everyday living. It seems when we were younger, everything was so wrapped up in drama, and this took our every ounce of energy. What a distraction! What an imprisonment! As we have evolved and chosen a path of spiritual education, we can see how we have gained freedom.

I speak mostly of freedom in mind. Everyday-living in mortal life can seem to beat about your spirit. The technology you have now is really impressive, yes! and on the other hand, it gives you access to so much distraction. It is like your heart and energy goes out to all you become aware of, and that can create such a static between your mind and the spirit. When we are so distracted, we become spiritually exhausted; and from there is developed a hopelessness. How wonderful is evolution!

I am MARY. I too feel the wellspring of love and acceptance. I am always in amazement of Abraham`s lessons. They are so helpful in living spiritually in a material world.

I like the topic of freedom in mind. I have met individuals who were severely burdened by physical disabilities, and yet their spirit was so alive. I can think back of when I was quite young and lending my mind to uselessness; the experience was important, even though I was so exhausted and had not energy to spare. I thank Father so much for the gift of His Son. What an excellent Teacher.

It would seem to me that the Master was fazed by nothing; He was impressed by nothing. His mind seemed to be detached from all the drama, for He knew that all things lead to an ultimate good. Faith is really, an exercise in relaxation. To know that 'Father is in every detail' is such a comfort in that you can have freedom in mind, you can have clarity, you can find enjoyment in all aspects of living.

I am remembering the moments of our Master who hung from the cross, and those of us who stayed to endure the final hours. I was in appreciation of John Zebedee. He being the youngest of the apostles, it was encouraging for me to see his strength at the appearance of such horror. I do know that he wanted to crumble completely, but he maintained his mind and composure for the Master, who was still instructing him even from the cross.

John was a source of strength for me and my sisters, who had emotionally broken down. At that point, we were imprisoned by emotion and fear – hopelessness. Our little John would rally us in faith, remind us of the lessons the Master taught, and remind us of our focus. The other apostles encouraged John to run, to make his escape before he was also caught and crucified. John certainly felt torn by fear and loyalty, for he had received the last instructions from the Master to care for His mother, Mary; and John knew he must stay alive to carry out this task.

He rallied us for one more pep talk, and this surely cleared our minds to put energy where it should be going. We all knew there was work to be done and we went forward with a renewed determination. While we felt no freedom from our emotional terror, John helped us to find that small light of hopefulness and to focus on the work ahead. We had to take care of each other, for this was an event that would change history.

Our beloved John held us all with an embrace that I thought would give me injury. His energy was on such a higher level than emotion. His mind was free to receive spiritual information. He loathed to leave us but we encouraged him to go, to be safe for the work ahead. As the days passed, this influence from John put upon us such a seriousness that made us be quiet, listen, and remember the Master's plan and purpose.

My friends, in all the ugly events that occur on a daily basis, we can find freedom in our faith of our divine Parents and their total watchcare. We can be comforted by the fact that all is well within the kingdom. Every individual that listens to Spirit is given kingdom tasks. It is worthwhile to shut your eyes from time to time; take not in that material influence, and remember that you were given an assignment. And remember – in any drama we experience, we are to remember that higher level of spiritual energy that can be ours for the seeking.

This week, let us have thoughts about John's strength and his dedication in carrying out the Master's instructions. He set aside all his fear to listen to anything the Master had to say. His tremendous love for the Master did help him to have complete understanding on self-forgetfulness. He would have gladly given his life, there was no doubt.

I do know it is difficult to find clarity in a chaotic world, but we must remember this clarity is a path to spiritual instruction. It takes effort, no doubt, to turn aside from our fear or ego. Even though this planet seems so harsh, we must always keep in mind that evolution goes forward, and we are going with it. We are finding more and more freedom in mind. Let us be aware of it and truly enjoy it.

That is all. Know that I am in appreciation of all of you. We are deeply honored to serve by your side. Keep up the good fight of faith. Know that our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

John's Enduring Example To Martin While Imprisoned
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-11-2007
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, once again I am honored to participate in your group meeting. I must say, I am always made to learn a great deal. I appreciate you that keep the goodness of our Mission alive. I appreciate how you have learned to move beyond yourselves to move forward with the Master's plan and purpose. I enjoyed Mary's words last week on 'freedom in mind.' We are blessed to have her firsthand account to certain events in the Master's earthly career.

I am MARY. Thank you, Abraham. I am once again overjoyed to be back with this branch of our family tree. Last weeks' lesson got me to do further research on what freedom really means, and I was reminded of a friend named Martin who served time in jail with John the Baptist.

Upon seeing John, Martin thought he was simply another fanatic. He even taunted John from time to time saying: "Where is your Master now?" John, for the most part, paid no attention to this ignorant man. As it happened, they both ended up working side by side in the kitchen. Martin always had some rebellious remark to make to John and John never got mad. Martin really tried to agitate and push John's tolerance, but John always kept his composure.

While there were hundreds of men waiting for relief from this imprisoned hell, Martin noticed John always busied himself with what could be considered acts of kindness. This really irritated Martin. "No one could be fulfilled in such a place, let alone find any kind of joy," Martin thought.

As the men worked side by side preparing food, Martin decided to ask John the secret to his serenity. That began the wonderful friendship which was to help Martin endure his almost two years in prison. Said John to Martin: "I cry, I have anger - but I also have my duties as a kingdom believer. And if my Master is not here it is because the Father has said it is not to be. Jesus makes no move unless it is willed by the Father. I am determined to carry out my mission duties no matter where I am placed. I will continue to do my very best. Just because I am not getting my way does not call for me to act out like a child and forget all that I have been trained to do."

Many people said John languished away in prison while waiting for the Master. There was no languishing! John worked up until the day of his death. Of course he had fear of the unknown, as we all do! but his daily prayers and meditation kept him from going to a place of negativity. While imprisoned, Martin learned about the Master, along with several other men; this was the light of hope to many who lived in this darkness. John taught enough spirit light to individuals so that they may pass it on to others.

In time, Martin was one of John's and Jesus' strongest supporters. He also helped a great many who were in similar seemingly hopeless conditions. I met Martin a few years after John had died. He had plenty of stories to tell about John. John had his fanatical side, yes, and yet later on found abundant humor in his seriousness. But as far as prisoners go, he was fairly balanced. Martin was overjoyed to be released finally from prison so that he may meet the Master and begin serving Him.

We never know whose lives we may influence. We must always try to be a positive effect. Somebody somewhere will always remember what you said, or your attitude; or your example of how you handled difficult situations. To say that John languished in prison is indeed false; he flourished, and helped others to do the same.

This week, no matter what situation we are in, let us remember – the Master knows exactly where we are. He leaves us not. He does everything in the perfect timing of Father. We are to simply follow through with the ministry; in doing so, you would be surprised how much joy can be discovered. Also this week, study on the Master's self-forgetfulness.

That is all for this evening. Know that Abraham and myself are growing in love for you each time we meet. Until next time, shalom.

Remember to Knock at That Door Which is Our Rock
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-18-2007
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I always enjoy the atmosphere here. There is enthusiasm and yet, there is serenity. There is inspiration and still, you are grounded in reality. There is such a wonderful support of one another; it's like being home. I thank you.

I have grown to love your unique personalities. Everyone has something to add; it is a ripple of positive effect. I do make effort to spend time with you each a little during the week. We always have a ministry to pursue and I am always there for counsel.

I am finding it important to speak of rest. It seems that your lives are always in a fast-motion state and there is such a wear and tear on the body and mind. You are each wonderful to fulfill your obligations. Many of these obligations are mind-consuming and we forget to rest. If the body is not well, then certainly this discomfort occupies the mind; it does create a static between you and Adjuster guidance. This week, we ask that you find time to rest the body and mind.

I am MARY. What a lovely group this evening. I too, always feel at home. I can appreciate Abraham's words. I, even now, overwork myself.

It is fascinating to me how mortals change with time – priorities change; energy changes. It may cause some disturbance in understanding when one feels burdened and overwhelmed in everyday living. I believe sometimes that mortals can forget that they are on the Earth and in the flesh 'to learn,' and if you want to mature spiritually, then experience is a must, and experience is not always pleasant.

Many times life is brutal and we forget to knock on the door of the One who can help. Many times we are saying instead, "God, why me?" when we should be knocking at the door of our Brother/Father for assistance. There are many paths to Paradise, but said Jesus: "I am the door to true understanding of the eternal purpose."

We can allow ourselves to be victims of life; we can lay down before our troubles. What misery this brings! Our purpose here in the mortal world is to have 'experience' - experience to gain spiritual skills for the career ahead. We come before the Master because He is in understanding of how our minds work. He knows what we need. He had the experience personally, which we are having now. He makes heaven understandable and accessible.

As we go through daily living, let us remember to knock at the door. Allow the Master to define what is happening. He is the way to the Father. I can see Him now up speaking before individuals who hated him in those final hours. The Master knew He had not humans to lean on for support. Mortally, He was alone - and that in itself, is a serious cause for fear and anxiety. Even during the darkest hours, His rock upon which He leaned--our Father, His Father--was His strength to keep focused; to stay the path; to fight fear.

I am in understanding of the agondonter status. It can be difficult, yes! Faith, while in the flesh, takes effort. I see on the planet now there is great desire to escape pain. Simply put, there is great fear, yes! and when we are trusting of those unseen helpers who love us so much, then do we feel the strength of the Master; we can rise above being mortal - rise above animalistic tendencies, emotions, and the grip of fear.

Where is our rock? Can we stand before 'the door' and knock, in our everyday circumstances? The Earth is not a trap like flies stuck on flypaper, struggling to move, no; the world you live on is a stepping stone to a greater reality. Take the challenges. Ask the Master to interpret; He is our rock; He is our guide; He is our door.

Our time is up; we are due elsewhere. Remember this week to find time to rest. Remember to go through 'the door' for strength and understanding. The Master is our interpreter. Our love is ever growing for you each. From Abraham and myself we bid you, shalom.

We Can Spin Our Wheels and Yield Frustration, Or We Can Simply Put Our Trust Fully In Father

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-25-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I thank you for having such beautiful trust in our cause that you would allow me to greet you each week with such informality. I enjoy being your friend and brother. There is a point in our method of communication when you must let go and have trust that I will be here. You each do well to bring such a welcoming energy. You make my task easy and enjoyable.

I am with the realization that the world is extremely competitive, and fulfillment seems to be a far-off goal that is unattainable. It would seem that mortals are always in the mode of reaching, striving, or struggling. It is understandable that progress must be inevitable as evolution moves forward. There is such a mindset now that to be successful, one must attain this or that.

My friends, the striving, in itself, is energy-depleting to the point of frustration. Peace seems hard to come by. One's expected 'satisfaction' isn't really satisfying. Our mortal minds seem to be so 'out there' in the world – in the mainstream of mortal consciousness, and therefore we are in serious need of turning our minds inward – back toward the well of true fulfillment, the well of life everlasting.

As I think back to my time in the flesh, there were so many things that were seemingly so important to me; so many things that were a constant drain of my energy. This was a cause for me to be an emotional wreck. Do you see, I had to reprioritize my life. I had to think about what was truly important. Where was my energy going? I had to let go of the outer world.

It took me several attempts to learn to turn inward, to imagine myself face to face with my Father; to sit in His presence; to allow the outside world to dissolve – it was just me and Him. How healing this was for my mind. How energizing this was for my spirit. Father had taught me my true priorities and what to put my energy into.

Believe me, the world did not crumble as a result, but my life certainly did change, yes, for I learned to mingle among the people; I found such brotherhood, such love and happiness. I learned that money is temporary, and that love is sustaining. It was a matter of me trusting in Father – that all would be okay by allowing Him His role in my life.

Yes, it was difficult to put my trust in someone unseen. Even though I had my dear friend, MachiventaMelchizedek, I still had to practice faith and trust in those unseen divine caretakers. Trust has always been difficult for me as a mortal because I thought myself to be a self-made man. I figured I had climbed to the top on my own, and therefore I could only trust in myself.

Previous to my association with Machiventa, I can't tell you how many sleepless nights I spent with a suspicious mind – such unrest. Just when I thought I could not stand another moment, I was introduced to this Melchizedek in human form, who had helped to teach this old dog new tricks.

You live in a world where there is constant competition and continuous striving. You will always strive, yes, but 'for what,' is the question! We have to trust in One who deserves our complete trust. We have to lean on the One who is the only one worthy of leaning on. To live a life of unrest is such dissatisfaction – and believe me, that makes any kind of service in the ministry, impossible.

Father wants for your happiness, peace, and fulfillment. Let us remember to turn inward to Him from time to time. The outside world is what it is; and you are still you – a child of God with a ministry to fulfill. As such, we need to direct our energies toward a worthy goal.

Let us not lose that heartfelt connection by worldly distraction. There is always the One you can trust. There is always the One you can lean on, and He is not 'out there somewhere,' but within your very being. Share your life with Him. Let Him share His direction for you, with you.

This week, I challenge you to make effort to trust in Father and see what happens. Mary sends her regards and will be with us next week. It is always a pleasure to sit among you and look at your beautiful faces. I am filled with love and joy to know that we are working together, and will be for a long time. Go in peace, my friends. Until next time, shalom.

We Can Learn Tolerance By Turning Off the Nagging Mind And Being Observant
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-02-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. You are a group filled with so much life. I am honored to be a part of that. As I look around the room, I see so much talent, so many gifts to be offered. If you really thought about it, you would see that each individual here specializes in some social skill.

As we move throughout the ministry, we will find ourselves with tasks that call for us to use our talents. In such a diverse world we can find ourselves with many social frustrations. Mankind is still learning how to relate – and as you evolve, your behavior must also evolve; it is all really an exercise in tolerance.

I am MARY. Again, it is a joy to be among you. I am moving throughout the Mission and I can see how so many avenues have sprung forth. During this Correcting Time, we will address so many issues and assist a great deal of individuals who are in need of training and direction.

I had always admired the Master for His values in education. He was well-traveled and understood the mortal personality like no other. He was so adaptable to any situation. He was always Himself, of course, but He could relate with the very poor or the very prestigious. He had a love for people that came from the Father. He could always see an individual as a child who was in need of some serious learning; or, one who was making great effort and meeting with confusion.

The Master had not focus upon Himself, there is no question; but He did have a balanced sense of self-worth. With this balanced sense He could sit among kings, or lepers, and feel at home. He was always one of 'the people.' The Master had a genuine interest in others, and therefore, He would always ask them questions that would draw out the best in them.

As I move through the cities of many countries, I find intolerance to be rampant. It is a fast-paced world and so easy to forget about one of the greatest commandments – which is to love one another. Evolution has brought about blended families, and this brings great opportunity, through challenges, to learn cosmic citizenry.

The Master set such a wonderful example of treating a stranger exactly how He would a family member. In His mind, 'through the Father's eyes we are all family' – souls having come from a cosmic source while each going forward as a force gathering experience to feed our Supreme Being.

We all know the Master was talented at many things. His talents can easily be your own. To have tolerance within the world, one must start being tolerant. You cannot leave it up to somebody else or point the blame at their intolerance, no! somebody must start; somebody must accept the fact that we are all related, soul-wise.

I know for myself, I had immeasurable intolerance against the opposing gender. I knew that I had personal work to do to change my thinking toward being open to greater understanding. I will not go into detail but I can say, there were experiences placed right in front of my face so that I may learn healing and different skills to interact with the object of my anger. As the Master taught, I could see these individuals as a child of God who was not intending to inflict pain, but simply trying to learn. It was not my place to judge their level of advancement, no. It was my place to love the person as a child, as Father does. That was enough foundation for me to begin to build tolerance.

Every day there are situations before you that might be of great value in learning tolerance. Your task would be to turn off the nagging mind and be observant. What message is there right in front of you in these situations? That is all. It has been an enjoyable evening, and I am again inspired to carry on. From Abraham and myself, we bid you, shalom.

Let Not Self-Protection Hold Us Back From Living
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-09-2007
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am filled with such energy here among you this evening. Sometimes our daily tasks can become mundane and it is wonderful when we can get a burst of energy or inspiration.

In almost every undertaking we can find a lull, and it is important to allow time for the undertaking to grow its roots and to take firmly in the soil. As a mortal, I know it is difficult for you to bide your time and be patient with the outcome. I always have found it helpful to have some side-projects to keep my mind from impatience.

As mortals get older it is somewhat easier to exhibit patience but, then again, it is also easier to find a comfort zone and just stay there. In a way, I can really admire the youth; for them, there is no holding back. If they have need for expression (even though at times it may be unwise) they do not hold back. For the youth, their eyes are always wide open for adventure; their minds are not quite conditioned to be concerned with 'outcome' - and yes, that can be good and bad.

Mortals live a lot with regret for having held back in one way or another. There is always some meaningless reason to not take action. There is always a mode of self-protection. Many times we are more fearful of how we will appear to others than simply being open, honest, and seizing the moment.

I am MARY. Greetings to you all. It is always a breath of fresh air to be among you. 'Holding back' - this I understand. For someone like myself, so distrusting of the world at large, it was easy to self-protect. It was easy for me to sit by the wayside and watch life happen to others. The real work is in taking the opportunities before you and not giving in to how the ego may feel about it.

I was always with admiration for our Master, who never took a moment for granted. If there was something He felt driven to do, then by all means, He would put forth His best effort to do it. You know His family had hurt Him deeply by their non-supportive way; even His own mother had turned her back on Him. The Master could have allowed ego to keep Him filled with anger and desire to retaliate and hurt them back, but the Master saw that as non-productive and contradictive to Father's will.

Not even having spoken to His mother for so long, there, as He suffered upon the cross, Jesus asked John to look after her. Even then He seized the moment to show love. His short time here in the flesh was all about service, and He was definitely good at this because He was so good at self-forgetfulness.

To serve is to seize every moment; it is to put truth, beauty, and goodness into action. Bad things happened to Him in His life, yes, and He chose to keep living, to keep moving forward, to keep keeping His eyes on the Father.

What opportunities are we missing because we do not seize the moment? How are our egos keeping us from being our true selves and taking advantage of our time in the flesh? A child will run, fall down, cry, and get back up again only to continue running.

We will be hurt in this life, yes – but let not self-protection hold you back from living. Every time you choose to go forward with a decision you are apprehensive about, think of the Master going before you. He clears the way. With Him, all things are possible. Life is meant to be lived; be not afraid to live it well.

That is all. I always enjoy our lessons together. It is an honor to serve with you. We send you out into your week with our ever-growing love. From Abraham and myself we bid you, shalom.

Feeling the Adjuster and the Master's Presence Connects Us To The Cosmic Mind
Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-16-2007

Back

I am MARY. Abraham is elsewhere this evening. It will be just us tonight. I am overjoyed to have more personal experience with you each. I see a great deal of kindheartedness, a great deal of compassion. You each can see your flaws always out in front of your face. It seems we can focus a lot of attention on what needs to be fixed and overlook the simple joy of 'just being.'

I am grateful for my experience on Earth. It taught me how to climb to new and better horizons. I, many times, wish I can tell you what it is like from where I am now. Things that were priorities to me on Earth are simply fading realities.

Here in the spirit, I see no skin color, no gender, no status; there is no hate, no jealousy, nothing that is insurmountable to learn. I believe that mortals really struggle with being able to connect and to really feel the Father's presence. Here, without the flesh, I am with a feeling of love that is so real I can see it, touch it, and taste it.

You each know those things you can do to connect to Spirit. It is important to feel the Adjuster's presence because it connects you to the cosmic mind. This 'cosmic mindedness' is where I am - and in that reality, there is the feeling of a Fatherly love; there is a security that is not found anywhere else. In that loving security we can rise above the spirit poisons - anger, jealousy, insecurity. With the closeness of the Adjuster, we receive a new vision that shows us eternal life. You can rise above the flesh and feel hope and strength when you open yourself to that Godly presence.

Many times in my Earthly career I would feel I had reached a certain spirit advancement and that I was possibly beyond some of those immature spirit poisons. There were always some challenges to experience. There was always some obstacle to challenge me to move from my stagnating ways.

I remember my thoughts of the Master having first appeared to me after His death. I was struck by the feeling of who He was. There was such a light of security and comfort when I had recognized the Master. I wanted to reach out and hold Him so that He may not leave. What a beautiful experience!

I have to admit, upon running back to my sisters with the message of the resurrection, I wanted to believe somehow that I was chosen for this appearance because I was 'so dutiful in my ministry.' I really wanted to take this experience and use it to put myself in a higher place.

As I was running, I again caught that vision of the Master and His beautiful light, and I suddenly felt that security that comes with faith. I felt so loved and accepted that I had not need any longer to make this task 'about myself.' I felt His love and acceptance, yes, and I knew not of another place I could receive such a wonderful feeling; why would I need to feed the ego when the spirit and cosmic citizenry was right at hand!

I was not 'chosen' for this task to give the message of the resurrection, no! I was simply in the right place at the right time; the Master could have been seen by anyone. It took me a few moments to recognize Him, for I was in such an emotional upset. It took a moment of stilling my mind to actually recognize the Master. I tell you this that you can also know - when our focus is on Him, we feel that security of spirit, of being within the kingdom family.

This week, I am suggesting that we concentrate on our own relationship with the Master - and likewise, our internal Adjuster; this is our key to controlling the spirit poisons. Take a moment to stop and recognize His presence. In our closeness to Father, we are more likely to become better kingdom workers.

Also this week, let us sit in the spirit from time to time and remember that budding seed of faith which grows to yield the fruits of the spirit. Remember the Master who goes before you. Remember that Fragment of Father within who is your wellspring and guide through our eternal careers. Let us take this week to slow down and be close to our spirit caretakers.

That is all. Abraham will be back next week. I am honored to share this evening with you. I am growing more in love with you as time passes. You are each a joy and wonderful teachers. You do well. Until next time, shalom.

The World Needs Massive Mindal Cleansing | Simon Zelotes` Example Of Calming The Mind

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP

07-23-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I express my gratitude to you for your steadfastness. You each bring something to add to our collective mind. Your willingness to live faithfully sets an example for all those who seem lost. I missed you last week. Our Correcting Time expands, and always is there need to train new teachers.

It is apparent that living in today's world is quite non-traditional. It is a blessing, really, although it can be also a stumbling block. You can think back to when you were a small child; you were impressed by adults to have certain things in life. Children are susceptible to ideals and begin to dig a path that will take them toward the ideal.

As you have matured, you see that nothing is as you thought it would be. There is a freedom in the world now that never was before. There are elements of difficulty that produce movements in evolution.

We can look back and see the history of many churches that showed human frailties, weaknesses; and the people began to see church leaders as regular people, not God's 'chosen individuals' or channels, what have you. It would seem each religion has been brought to its knees in humility. People have seen that places of worship should be based on a group-conscience, not organized by one or two people.

Many issues of mortal living are being opened up so that individuals may see for themselves what needs to be done. Evolution is quite slow and it is difficult to be a small light in a great sea of darkness. The Correcting Time is to create many lights.

The world needs a massive mindal cleansing; the participants of the Correcting Time have felt this cleansing. Even though the hype to the Correcting Time has diminished, there are still deep roots that have taken hold and will create change. Many sit and say: "What is your will, Father?"

Father always answers us, yes, but His answer is not always apparent to the individual. It is understandable that many of us seek simplicity and ease, rather than the un-ease that change brings. If we are to grow, often we must have that element of disturbance - we must have increasing levels of difficulty that stimulates challenge and growth.

Father's will at times seems to be too easy and 'down to earth.' A lot of mortals expect something grand, something they can share with everyone instead of the simple beauty of taking His will and incorporating it into everyday life.

I am MARY. It is always a pleasure to learn among you. I am in appreciation of this lesson on freedom and non-traditional living. When I wore the flesh, I had always felt distant from groups or traditional societal themes. Jesus had always taught us to reach higher with our minds, for therein is the kingdom and a sense of belonging.

I was always impressed by the life of the apostle Simon Zelotes, a real-life zealot whose enthusiasm preceded his wisdom. His mind was so caught up in the drama of life; he deeply desired physical action. Change for Simon was difficult – he could hear the Master's words of wisdom and yet, squirm inside to do his own bidding. He dearly loved the Master and wanted so much to do right by the kingdom.

I admired Simon's desire to make personal change. He had often practiced meditation with non-productive results. It was beautiful to see how the Master adapted His words to help him understand the personal change needed to calm his zealot attitude.

Action by physical force to induce change is not always necessary, and usually not lasting. Changes in the mind must come first – and that works best when we can pause and take a moment to practice self-mastery and think about what we are doing.

Simon became successful in the endeavor of calming his mind. He had taken his energy and put it toward teaching children how to fish. The children loved him and he was always with abundant energy for them. In this outlet he was able to create balance in life – to not act rash but take a moment to ponder the Master's words.

This week we will take joy in our non-traditional living, our individuality in the kingdom family. What are those outlets that help you to calm the mind! What service projects can you take up to enjoy fellowship and feel the Spirit presence! Therein, is freedom like there has not been before; this helps us to widen our ministry.

That is all for this evening, my friends. You are indeed each a joy. Go in peace. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

To Face Our Fears We Might Be More Aware of What Father and His Associates Bring To Us

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-30-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am so honored you each listen for me. I am always comforted by your welcoming attitudes. I believe this helps me to be a better teacher and friend. Every week when I prepare for the lesson, I always give my commitment to Father; I tell Him He has the floor and we are open for whatever He may teach us.

I get somewhat involved in your daily lives, as does Mary. A lot of mortal living today is like our own issues of long ago; but then again, there are so many new issues that evolution has brought about. I am always made to keep training so that I can keep up with you and the Master's cause – our beloved Correcting Time.

I am more and more with the belief that aging is wonderful; all those trivial material issues fall by the wayside. With time and experience, we can dig deeper into spiritual education and receive meanings and values that are not of this world.

I am MARY. It is such a time of family unity when we come to visit. I am learning your personalities and you each bring a smile to my face. I am inspired by your efforts to endure and push forward to keep the wheels of our Correcting Time in motion.

As I think back to my days in the flesh, I have memories of such all-pervading fear; I felt emotionally paralyzed and mentally blocked. I had learned from the Master how our Father, with the assistance of angels, does create educational lessons for us to grow. It was strange how those things I most feared were right before my face. I wanted to grow in the spirit and yet, I hid from the actual lessons. We all fear pain, and our basic instinct is to escape. Father is in total understanding.

I can remember working with my sisters in ministering to the sick and afflicted, and yet I was feeling completely inadequate. I had some knowledge of medical assisting and yet, I had such fear of making mistakes. I was so nervous that my hands could not relate with what my brain was conveying.

As I felt more comfortable among my sisters, I seemed to gather some agility. I began to focus on the work and let myself go. I had accepted the fact that I would make mistakes. I still do make mistakes, yes, but we must always remain in a forward motion; we cannot stop to dwell upon past mistakes when we are in the midst of the Lord's ministry.

As I tended to patients, I began to feel healed myself. Some of these people were in the worst physical condition, and yet their spirit was so alive. These individuals really became a part of who I was becoming. In the moments of this loving ministry, I could find my true desire to help. My self-consciousness took a back seat and my instinct began to take over. The more I was connected to Father, the more confidence I had in my ability to do anything.

Abraham is right when he speaks of growing wisdom with the passing years. Those things that seem unreachable while you are young, become a reality as you gain experience. Love, serenity, healing, fellowship – all become a reality. I am thinking the mortal life is such a wonderful adventure, and awareness of that would be a wonderful emphasis to place as the top priority.

This week, I believe it is suggested that we face our fears and yet be aware of what Father and His associates might bring to us. I say, sit down with pen and paper and write them out. Be not afraid of those difficult lessons – trust me, there is peace and help on the other side to surmount these fears and difficulties.

That is all for this evening. If you so desire, we shall accept questions next week. We thank you. You know our love is continually growing for you each. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Accepting Reality As It Is Helps Us Loosen Our Grip On The Need To Control

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-06-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am in appreciation for your willingness to have me here every week. Over the years that I have known you, you have become more accepting of ideas that are new. You live in a world of on-going stress and yet, I am inspired by your various techniques to handle it. I believe that your lives are the sum-total of your decisions, yes, but always is there that 'Father influence' that keeps you always challenged.

I am MARY. I am always feeling at peace when we can gather together for our Master's cause. When I am viewing goodness at work in the world, I am seeing us closer to the goal of the Correcting Time. I am agreeing with Abraham when he speaks of the worldly chaos. It is a much busier world today than when we had worn the flesh.

I see a great many individuals in this society that are always in a mode of maintaining control. As you can see, when we are with the feeling that 'life is unacceptable,' it is a reality that you have become too attached to it. Yes, we all desire serenity and peace. We all desire well-being. Most of us believe that well-being stems from hard work - and while that is true to a point, many times the mortal mind will have the belief that 'the world will crumble' without our control.

I am taken back to a time when I had been serving in the Master's ministry for many years and I was to take on a protégé. We are always to hand down to the younger those gems of truth, beauty, and goodness in order to continue the ministry; and I was to train a sweet child named Sharla. She seemed to be eager to learn and had the most difficult time concentrating. She was distracted by the many tasks there were to perform while serving.

I was somewhat frustrated with this child. I wanted her to do exactly as I said because 'I had experience;' and not only that, 'I knew a great deal that seemed to have worked over the many years I had served.' Underlying my desire to teach was my ego, which simply wanted to appear superior; I really wanted to show others all that I had gained from my years of serving.

At first, Sharla was obliging and had me feeling like an all-wise teacher who deserved some credit. But this got old for her fast - she became distant and we struggled in our ministry together. We had difficulty communicating and there were indeed hurt feelings. Sharla wanted to try her hand at things - her way, and I wanted her to take my words for the 'precious pearls of wisdom that they were.'

The more I tried to have control, the more frustrated I became, and indeed was the Spirit blocked. I am sure that Sharla was also feeling restrained. I began to realize that I needed to allow this younger bird to fly, and that I was to be nothing more than a messenger to help her do just that! She took my techniques and built her own way of doing things.

Time and experience however, did bring Sharla and myself closer. As I let go of her (my attempts of control over her) I was liberated and more connected to Spirit; she was more open and felt less guarded. We had many joyful times in those following years. She was indeed like a daughter to me.

We can all see that the mortal life is something to be observant of. When we are 'accepting of reality,' this helps us to loosen our grip of control. This week, let us be aware of those circumstances that are really beyond our control, and practice some detachment. How are we exhausting our human resources to have the outcome go our way? And when we have done all we can do, can we let go? Let us be aware of how attachment and control can block us from our direct guidance from Father.

As mentioned last week, we would like to take a few questions. Feel free to address Abraham or myself. Proceed.

ANNETTE: Father Abraham, this is a personal question, and the language barrier will stop me from giving the right meaning. Is there a way to ask in my own Arabic language? [Editor's note: Annette was originally from the Jerusalem area but had been living in the United States now for many years. She grew up near the Mosque in Hebron where it is believed Abraham and Sarah are buried. Her Arabic birth name was Asenath – being named after the wife of Joseph, Abraham's great-grandson (Jacob's son) who was sold into Egypt. Asenath's American associates had a hard time pronouncing her Arabic name, so she went by the name Annette. As a sidenote: It was Abraham's policy, in all our years prior, to not answer questions in a manner that would provide proof of his reality. But this evening he did oblige Annette (Asenath) to ask her questions of him in Arabic (Abraham's familiar language) – which was quite a surprise to the rest of the group. There was no question of Annette's faith and appreciation of Abraham's teachings – especially, given her Muslim roots in Israel.]

ABRAHAM: I would love to hear the language, yes, but I cannot answer you in the same language because this provides proof that I exist, and I must be about the Correcting Time regulations. If you would like to ask, I would attempt to answer you, my daughter.

ANNETTE: [In her own Arabic language, Annette speaks her question. As a single mother, she has a 17-year-old son. There is no transcribe or translation of her question – only Abraham's reply to it.]

ABRAHAM: Just beautiful. I am deeply touched. You have done as well as you could, my daughter. Feel not regret for that. I do believe that your fear and concern is greater than it should be. This is like a spirit poison. It is harmful to you and those you love. I am in understanding of your feelings of being alone; I have had that experience myself. Believe me, there will be clear air to breathe when the dust settles. You have only to do what you can do. Do not place such a burden upon yourself. You are a lively spirit with so much to offer. You have so many connections. Take this time to allow your spirit to be strengthened. Allow not the spirit poisons to disrupt your everyday life. You have more protection than you know. Is this helping, Aranda? [Editors note: Abraham announces her spiritual name – Aranda.]

ANNETTE: [Asks a follow-up question, in Arabic. Again, there is no transcribe or translation of the question.]

ABRAHAM: I would not have such concern. You have raised a wonderful young man who will also be a light in the Correcting Time. You have started on a path that you must have faith in. Enjoy this time of freedom and trust yourself to follow your inner guidance. Have not worry about others, for Father is deeply involved in their lives also. You do well.

ANNETTE: [A comment, again in Arabic.]

ABRAHAM: You are welcome. Know that my affections are well with you. Thank you for all that you bring to this group, as well as all those you know. Is there another question?

HARRISON: Abraham, we have been asked to get more in touch with our Thought Adjuster, and I guess I struggle with that. I was wondering if you had some comments about how we might improve on making that happen – to gain that closeness, that understanding, and that assurance that we are communicating with our Thought Adjuster?

ABRAHAM: Good question, Harrison. I believe it is, as Mary said – to begin a releasing of control over things. Yes, to practice not being controlling. We do all we can to help; and yet, some detachment is required on your part so that you can attach to things beyond this world. As you are busy in your daily life, when you are with the feeling of wanting to be of some small help to another – this is probably the closest you can get to the Adjuster at this time in your development. When we are like the Master suggested, 'self-forgetful,' then are we in a place where possibilities are in bloom. I know this could sound somewhat calloused, yes, but when you are feeling without too much concern over anything, especially the selfish parts of you, then is there a freedom to be at one with the cosmic mind. It is like we are rising above the clouds into the clear blue sky; we can see the clouds below us and we have not worry for we know Father is where He should be. We certainly do all we can do – meaning exhausting our human resources, yes; but we are with a feeling of peace. I believe that this feeling is unrecognizable to some who are so caught up in things of the world. You are learning as you should, Harrison. Your kind heart sets a wonderful example for those who know you. Remember to think about being of some small help. It is freeing the mind to have spirit communication. Is this answering? (Harrison: It is, and I thank you.) Abraham: Are there any more questions?

SIMON: Yes, Abraham. I keep seeing our lives evolve in our society here; it seems to be going quickly. Do you have some pointers for me in staying balanced in the ebb and flow of relationships and communication?

ABRAHAM: Understood, Simon. I do believe that if you can become more clear on what it is that you really want, then surely will you attract that into your life. I believe some upsets of the past scrambles your understanding of your goals in life. You are quite the artist and have many big and brilliant ideas. It would be good for you to journal these ideas onto paper, and then set them aside. Have not worry about them; you'll get around to them in Father's timing. In your heart of hearts think about what you really need and want in the present moment. Father desires your happiness. Your clarity in mind will paint you a picture of your true desires. Have not worry, Simon, you do well. Strive for peace within. Is this helping? (Simon: Yes, thank you very much.) Abraham: You're welcome. Are there any more questions?

CALVIN: Abraham and Mary, thank you so very much for your never-ending wisdom, love, and help in these lessons. I think I have been torn with one of the toughest dilemmas in my life. I don't know if it is just me being too busy for Father-connection? or too stubborn to realize correction, or both! but I sure feel like I have exhausted my resources to know which direction I should go.

ABRAHAM: I think for you, Calvin, what is true and good for you will have a peaceful feeling; it will have endurance and the ability to stay. If something appears to be a continuous disruption and is not helping to create peace for you, then maybe you are needing to look within to find your true motives. If something is real, then it comes with a natural flow. Of course, we always work hard, there is no question there. But there comes a time when we can work too hard and must step back and re-center. Are you in understanding? (Calvin: I have a very good understanding, yes. I appreciate your tenderness on that. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. One more question.

TECTRA: I have a question, Abraham, but first a comment for both you and Mary. I just want to say thank you so much for the love and guidance you show to us here, and how you check in on our day-to-day things. I would especially like to say thank you to the eternal love and guidance of our guardian angels that are with us each and every moment of the day. It seems like to me that they are the real warriors of Light and Life, and I think we kind of forget about them in our busy lives. I just really wanted to express my appreciation to them. My question is for Mary: It is kind of a paradox to me about this whole control issue, because as we release control and get into the 'flow of life' - are we then to stay with how it flows in that new place after we have released our control. How can we do that more and more in our lives?

MARY: Tectra, first of all, I thank you for your eloquent words and the tribute to our beloved angels. We do not realize how hard they do work for us. Many times we are with seemingly chance meetings with individuals and soon realize that we have some issue to overcome. Yes, they arrange lessons for our growth. Every time there is a new realization by one of their pupils, they are elated. It is food for them to know that we accept them and their co-working. Wonderful words, yes! Well said, Tectra, my son. About your paradox, we can go back even to the Buddhist religion and see how they taught non-attachment. I understand that mortals have past issues to grow through, and have attachments to things they just don't understand. I use myself, for example, when I had such attachment to Sharla. I never had any children, and certainly this was sometimes a cause for hurt. I felt inside, that my attachment to her would bring me some sort of relief. I had talked this issue over with my friend and apostle, Peter. He had asked me several questions that led me to the bottom line of my particular issue. I had seen that my life had become so worthwhile and I indeed had many children around me - and in that alone, I had a full ministry. When I could 'let go' of Sharla, then I could become very close to her. I do believe it is the release of attachments that help create acceptance in life. Not that it is okay to be slothful in our day-to-day activities, no. Not indifferent either. To have such release of our 'controlling pattern' creates a connection to something beyond this material world, beyond this mortal mind. We are as large as the universe, for we are with endless access to a greater mind, greater possibilities, meanings, and values. Good question, Tectra. I thank you.

I thank all of you. Your faithfulness is a light for myself and Abraham. Know that time spent with you is indeed a treasure. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

There is Freedom in Knowing All Are Equal Children of God

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-13-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a comfort to be among you sweet children, again. We can look out into the world's chaos and have comfort knowing we will all meet again here in this group wherein we can find reason. I am encouraged by you taking on some new project. Always keeping the brain at work is indeed wise. The brain is the doorway to the mind, and to learn new things is always an excellent exercise.

In our busy lives we are always prioritizing, and oftentimes those good thoughts we have don't quite come to fruition. Many times we think our new ideas are simply frivolous, and therefore feel we need to stay on course with our perceived priorities. To explore is to keep the doorway to the mind, open. You can never learn too much. What is of value will stay, and what isn't will fall by the wayside.

I am MARY. Greetings to you, my friends. Companionship with you is always encouraging me to go forth with new ideas and explore possibilities. I am pondering the freedom that the Master bestowed upon His followers. This freedom told us we were in a new family, unbounded by the current mindset.

As a young woman, I was always concerned about what others thought of me; their response to me was like a mirror wherein I was bound by their reflection of me. I was apparently poor, illiterate, and without godliness. I was young enough to where I did believe in their treatment of me, that it was justified; but it caused me to have a great deal of fear in how I moved about in the world.

In our beginning days of the ministry, I was fortunate enough to view the Master's apostles and how their daily attitudes were. At first, I thought them to be better than I was, more spiritual, more close to the current status of the societal trend. I actually despised them for a time, but as I got to know each one, I learned about their love for the Master. When they spoke of Him, their faces became softer, their eyes actually sparkled. The Master's goodness was apparent for all to see. He made each individual feel a part of a grander scheme.

I was indeed blessed by working one-on-one with the Master and learning about self-forgetfulness. I was learning about the power of Father. I was shown a new freedom by knowing the truth - that all are children of God; that no one is better than the next, no matter what your material eyes tell you.

As you are more committed to the ministry, you can feel that others are your equal brothers and sisters. Of course they may not feel the same toward you, but still you are about the Father's business and other's opinions are not a reflection of who you are.

As the Master lived a good example, others learned from Him. The apostles (save Judas) were also a living example of what the Master embodied. Peter was always interesting to me because he knew he may not be as intelligent as others, but he knew his own mind and always tested the limits. He understood that many times he appeared foolish, but as he began to think about those reasons he loved the Master, he could forget about himself and speak with eloquence. Peter had a good sense of humor also, yes, but that came with time.

This week, let us think of our level of concern about how others view us. In whom do we serve? How have our levels of confidence improved since we have begun serving? That is all. Know that we are close at hand should you need us. I send you, as does Abraham, with our love. Until next time, shalom.

An Exercise In Letting Go Of Old Patterns That Keep Us In A Rut

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-20-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is good to be with you. I am filled with gratitude for this branch of our family tree.

This evening I am seeing a measure of courage that reaches the stars. I see you as growing individuals who are more and more every day, daring to step out of a well-worn pattern into a new life; I am blessed to experience this with the various individuals who live life within the kingdom family. You, as striving mortals, are moving toward living life as if it is eternal. Today is only the beginning. Every day is a new chance to progress.

I am MARY. My greetings to you, brothers and sisters. I am in understanding of Abraham's message to exert the limits of your current mindset. I am taken back to my times in the market square wherein I would feel invisible. It was difficult for me to make eye contact with people. My experience in life had naturally made me suspicious; and anyone's attention toward me made me filled with anxiety; this was such a well-worn mindal pattern.

It took many hours sitting among my fellows in listening to the Master teach, for me to allow change. He was repetitious to a point and yet, each word from His mouth was a treasure to keep. Jesus had on many occasions asked us questions that were really quite personal; this helped me to turn inward, to observe my pattern and figure out the origination of my ardent ways. The Master proved that 'practice and some mindal repetition' is helpful in creating new connections in the brain.

Change is slow and sometimes frustrating, yes, but the Master proved it to be true that an old dog can learn new tricks. I first began to change by trying to make eye contact with individuals. I uncovered my head and made my face plain to see. I had to accept that I was one of Father's own. I had nothing to be ashamed of for I was always making effort, always putting forth my best.

After I became somewhat used to making eye contact, I began to put forth greetings; I gave greeting to the wealthy as well as the poor. This exercise helped to create a new pathway in my brain that would help me to rise up out of my rut. It was exciting to view myself on the path to growth. As I put forth the effort in my little exercise, I began to really feel the joy in meeting people. I made new friendships that were nourishing to my soul. As I felt more of a part of the kingdom family, I felt more free to move about, to move beyond myself.

This week, let us ponder the changes we can make in creating new patterns. It is true – that Michael clears our way and Father holds our hand as we move forward. We can all see how society has become a slave to one thing or another. How are we a part of that, and how can we change it? What is the first small step you can take toward breaking old habits?

You are indeed a joy, my friends. Our minds and hearts are with you during this time of Michael's birthday on your universally recognized planet. Know that our love is growing for you each, always. Go in peace. Until next time, from Abraham and myself, we bid you shalom.

In Learning Self-Mastery We Become Skilled At Adaptation. Rebecca and Her Love For Jesus

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-27-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. You are each so thoughtful to have me back, week after week. It doesn't matter what you experience, you are never crushed and you always come back here to our rock. It does take time to shake off the world and open the door to our Father. When we can renew in spirit, we can help to create possibilities to bring about good.

All of your individual histories have made you who you are today, and nothing has stopped you. You may have stumbled here and there, but you haven't stopped. We are grateful for your endurance – your striving to carry on. Over the years in our Teaching Mission, we have each struggled to attain personal growth. There has been a good amount of effort go into this personal growth, yes, and we have taken it out into our world in trying to assist in this time of correction. You have done well.

I am MARY. Again I am grateful to sit and learn among you. It is somewhat like sitting with my peers of old, but much of the time you are new creatures to me. I have learned a lot in our short time together. I have made adaptation where I can, yes – that I might be better able to communicate with you. This experience for me was new, and I had some anxiety going into it.

In learning self-mastery, we all become skilled at adaptation. It doesn't mean we 'conform' or simply appease others, but that we are able to be like the Master and serve in any capacity. The Master was always interested in learning new things and meeting new people; He always had Father in the forefront of His mind. The Master taught us that there is always a way to serve without infringing upon one's free will.

If we were to go back in time to my day in the flesh, you would see a lot of people who would seem barbaric to you – their clothes would look well-worn and dirty; they had not moisturizers or hairspray. You, on the other hand, to them – they would be frightened. If given a little time to adjust, we would all learn where the boundaries are with each other; and while we might bump heads, we would still have respect for one another.

I am reminded of Rebecca, the eldest daughter of Ezra, who had a heart that would never stop longing for the love of Joshua Ben Joseph (Jesus). She did what she could to gain His attention. Of course the Master knew He was destined for other plans. He was nervous, yes, but made effort to go to Rebecca and be completely honest – telling her that His ministry kept Him from seeking the average mortal life of marriage and children.

At this point Jesus could sympathize with Rebecca and love her on the level of friendship, but there were those boundaries, yes. While Rebecca respected His decision, she had it set in her mind for a few years that Jesus would ‘come around’ and seek her companionship.

Rebecca was always active in the ministry; she in time began to know and understand the real person that was Jesus. She found her love for Him on the level of Brother/Father. This was fulfilling in itself and she saw not her years of longing as a waste. Rebecca was a wonderful spokesperson and brought many into the kingdom. Had Jesus not set those boundaries right away, things may have turned out quite differently.

It was always beautiful to behold the Master playing catch with a child, or teaching His fellows how to build boats. As well, He could talk to kings and reach their souls. We in this Teaching Mission are likewise adaptable beings when we are about the Father’s business. This week, ponder your own flexibility in your most outstanding circumstances. What are we to have in the forefront of our minds when changes are brought before us?

Our lesson is kept short but our love is not. You are each very dear to myself and Abraham. With that, we shall take our leave. Until next time, we bid you, shalom. [There was no meeting 9/03/07.]

Step Back And Allow The Unfolding Of God’s Will | Share All Your Moments With Father, As A Team

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-10-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, my friends, I have missed you. I am feeling quite content at this moment having our family security. Our time apart has increased our appetite for the Spirit. Tonight we are empty vessels waiting to be filled by Father’s all-encompassing love.

Each day is always a new adventure. At this point in my eternal career, I am not obsessing over where the path is going. I am more enjoying what is set before me, feeling our Father’s confidence in me, and knowing that He empowers me to make change.

As a mortal, and before my days as a student of the Salem school, I was always so focused on the end results of any goal – how it would play out; and in that, I was always in a mode of scrambling. My health during these times was deteriorating because my mind was tormented by anxiety and worry; this was self-imposed of course. I lived not with balance; I was mostly about my work. That was my identity, yes, and how I measured success. I thought myself to be ruthlessly successful; and with that attitude, my mental and physical state did indeed take its toll. It took a great deal of experience and hard falls before I simply wore myself out.

Machiventa, my mentor, was pure rejuvenation; he taught me how to start small and make effort to live a little with the Spirit in each area of life every day – work, family, play. Yes, my priorities slowly changed to a spiritual level. I became closer with my children and really got to know them for who they were. At first, it was difficult for me to remain quiet and not to pounce on a problem that needed to be fixed. I had to simply sit with acceptance of what was, and allow Father His perfect timing.

Machiventa always said: “If change is meant to happen by the power of your hand, then step back and allow the unfolding of God’s will.” He always brought me back to a firm foundation of spiritual reality. And this spiritual reality had to make sense to me, it had to be logical for me; Machiventa knew that, and taught accordingly. I learned that if I could remain in a mode of ‘observation,’ that time would not be a grueling factor for me; with patience I could have some clarity in my mind to open up my spiritual capacity.

Today your world always seems to be in a mad rush. It is so easy to be pulled into that confusion, as I experienced. Your mental and physical well-being will feel the effects of this common but depleting energy. Sometimes you just have to sit with ‘what is,’ allow the unfolding, and move with grace. I am in full understanding that life can bring with it such a display of brutality. Your ever-increasing capacity for faith in Father’s hand will help to bring meaning to it all. In every situation, Father’s ultimate good prevails. He does indeed work through us, and we will not always see the outcome at first.

As ministers in Father's work, we are open to follow Father’s guidance and keep our minds open to what may be next. Obsess not with trivialities. Stay with those small steps and remember how important rest and reversion are. Those that make such effort every day to work so hard must have a reason why they are working; and yes, this is understood. But remember, in living life with Father, there is joy to be had; there are feelings of contentment and satisfaction; there is inner peace and serenity.

Your study and stillness should help you to defend yourself against that negative energy of confusion that the everyday rush of life brings. As you take time to envision yourselves as empty vessels, be careful to not allow the negative in. Our strength comes from Father; His power is beyond our imagination. Every day I spend with Him I feel the closeness of a creative team. I have not fear.

As you move about in your daily living, try to find that ‘creative team feeling’ of you and your indwelling Father. He is not some unreachable authority figure in the sky, no! He is shoulder to shoulder with you, working with your hands and your mouth. We do what we can in this ministry and always keep our eyes forward. Father’s plan is not some hidden ideal, no! to us He makes it reachable and uncomplicated. His love is never-ending fuel for the soul.

Mary sends her love. That is all. Always it is a pleasure to be with you. I am grateful that you have me each week without hesitation. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Self-Discipline, Nothing More Than Organization In Mind | Being Father's Child Is All We Need To Be

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP

09-17-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am delighted to see you this evening. I am always honored to witness you in your best form. Your social comfort here, is obvious. How blessed are we to jump upon this never-ending circle of eternity with you who always keep returning to each other.

The mortal mind is most healthy when it can socialize and build upon ideas. How wonderful to have this spiritual commonality with each other. We know that the world can appear to be in total chaos; how wonderful that we can always return to speak with one another and find our foundation of faith.

Over the past few years, I have spoken a great deal on rest and its value in alleviating stress. As we delve more into self-mastery, we will learn more about discipline. Discipline has been a tarnished word to many because they thought it was Father who was the disciplinarian. When reaching for self-mastery, we learn that discipline is a loving action we participate in most personally.

I am MARY. My greetings to you, brothers and sisters. As Abraham mentioned, I also enjoy the feeling of family here among you. I can tell you that the topic of self-discipline was also one of confusion for me, and something that I fought. When you learn more of this subject, you find that discipline is nothing more than organization within the mind.

Much of my time in the flesh before knowing Jesus was spent feeling like I was a victim in a randomly-occurring life; everything appeared to be an obstacle – even a simple trip to the market would become a battle. My disorganization in mind damaged my self-esteem and it would seem as if life itself was my enemy.

Of course, disorganization in mind stems from life's challenging experiences; but when you grow older and have opportunity to learn, then hopefully your eyes and heart will be open for that needed change, with Father's leading. Especially those who study the spirit life should realize that Father gives you those lessons that will draw you ever nearer to Him. The perfecting process is all about change – new growth through a change that is everlasting.

The Master showed me a great deal when He made me feel a part of the ministry – the group; I was no more or less than a citizen within the kingdom. My experience at that time helped me to learn certain lessons that created some order within my mind. Even a child learns 'if you touch a hot stove, you will get burned.'

The experience in the ministry was a great teacher to show me how to maneuver through everyday life. I learned that each day, life was a clean slate; and much of what I perceived could now be filtered through a mind that was a little more organized.

This was not an easy transition – so many times I had wanted to fall back to the ways of old. Many times I felt weak and wanted to lie down before my troubles. The lessons I took from the Master's hours of teaching were telling me to allow the strong voice of the 'Father within' who was telling me: "Get up, keep going, do not stop. Do not allow the animal nature to prevail. You are my child, and that is all the power you will ever need to prevail."

This week, allow yourself some quiet time. Take in strength. Allow not your emotions to make you feel like an overrun victim. What exercises are there that can contribute to organization in mind - stillness perhaps? maybe some journaling? maybe some simplifying of usual routine?

We cannot take questions this evening. That is all for this week's lesson. Know that our love is ever strengthening for each one of you. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

In Living A Life Of Intention, You Feel More A Part Of The Overall Ministry
Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-24-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is good to see you discuss everyday issues and possible solutions. As I think about the world as a whole, you are a bright light that is really quite expansive.

It is apparent that you each work hard every day for self-correction and service to the Correcting Time. Knowing you each, I see that your intentions are always well and good; your heart is always in the right place. It is helpful and healing for you to have one another to make spiritual sense out of mortal living.

I am EMULAN. It has been a while, my friends. I have missed your kindness and willingness to make our ministry more progressive. For the most part, many of you know me and my history; I always refer back to that because it is where my greatest lessons stem from.

Later in my mortal years, I began to study psychiatry and the inner workings of the mortal mind. I have always found the connection of the material brain and the spiritual circuits most fascinating - it is your link to 'otherness;' it is a doorway. Many of life's experiences can close off that doorway. I am practically an expert on that subject.

After my most traumatic and heartbreaking experience of losing my wife and daughter to a tragic accident, I was certain that Father had no love for me whatsoever to have allowed this to happen. I was indeed closed-off in mind. I cannot begin to tell you the overwhelming experience of loneliness and darkness; I honestly did not want to deal with any part of that void. I was extremely angry and was bent on making somebody pay. It was a mindal trap that had a hold over me.

I struggled to just exist, and still could not break free for quite a few years. As I began my study of psychiatry, this activity, in itself, took my mind away from my anger. I found a lot of escape in my studies, and yet at the same time I actually learned a few things - such as, the human mind is at its best when life for the most part feels balanced.

We should always do our best to exhaust our human resources and exercise acceptance of what is. We cannot predict the avenues Father may go through to create plan and purpose, response and results. When we know we have done our best, and then run into obstacles that will just not move, that is when we are committing to going forward with what is – Father's way.

How strange it was when I discovered so much about faith through the study of the mind. I really endeavored to make the things of the spirit a science project. I found that my ever-changing interests in life were acceptable to follow through with because this helped me to have clarity in mind. It helped me to understand my anger and my loss. I knew Father did not want me to sit back and be inactive while life ran over me, no; He wanted me to do all that I could fathom within my own mind to do – and know that as I worked, He worked with me.

Life in the flesh is difficult, yes, and yet so necessary. It is such a blessing to develop, through experience, those traits and skills needed to live out your eternal career. We find that those who strive to live life 'with intention' feel more a part of the overall ministry; they feel more like a co-creator than a bystander.

When you have thought or desire to move forward with a project, it does not hurt to do a little research. If the doors open to further the project, then that is fine; if not, then perhaps the intentions behind it were misaligned with the Father's will. That is not good or bad, it is simply learning to organize the mind to have receptivity for spirit guidance.

Abraham tells me you each do what you can to maintain your mortal life, spiritually; and I can say for myself – that is not an easy task. You each are doing well. I am feeling honored and blessed to have visited with you this evening. I shall not wait so long in-between our visits. For now, I bid you, farewell.

Again, I am ABRAHAM. Thank you, brother and friend, Emulan; another wonderful lesson delivered. As well, I thank each of you for all the effort you make every day. I can honestly say I appreciate each one of you. Mary sends her greetings and will be here next week. Know that all of us send with you, our love. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

To Share Unselfishly Helps to Create Peace Within, And Within Others

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-01-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. You each have a way of helping me to have a different perspective. I can appreciate your life-experience when you voice your thoughts and speak from your deeper self. You are an example of dedication, and I am in appreciation for your hospitality, which allows us to teach.

My soul has grown alongside yours, yes, and we are alike in many ways. I know many individuals and am very socially active; and always when I return to you, I am feeling with a calm energy and with the comfort of family. You each help to broaden one another's views by your willingness to be of help. Here with each other you are more easygoing and able to lay down the ego.

We are family now, yes, and have no need to impress one another. This is a fine example of social growth. This is the ideal that the Correcting Time has been aiming for. Years in the Teaching Mission has taught you that you are not silly children fighting over a toy, no, but loving spirits who work together to bring a new era of Light and Life.

I am MARY. It is always a pleasure to meet with you, friends. I can appreciate Abraham's lesson because it was difficult for me to learn to fit in socially. A large part of who I was in my youth was one living in a society with feelings of embarrassment. I stood in the shadows and had not friends or family to speak of – at least not out in the open. I had a great mistrust for people; I was always suspicious they were trying to get something from me for nothing. I must admit, I was quite conniving and could always manipulate my way into a personal benefit.

I happened to be walking down a dusty road wallowing in my sorrows one day when I came upon a young woman about my age who was working in the fields. She had asked me if I had any water – and that began a friendship that would teach me how to be a part of a family, and to fit in socially under any circumstances.

I did work the fields for a short time with my friend. We would laugh and tease one another. She made me feel like I was okay just being myself. She had a large family who welcomed me with open arms and taught me so much about a family functioning like a well-oiled machine.

Growing up as I did, I had not learned to share; I had only feelings of self-protection and not allowing anyone in. My friend from the field unknowingly showed me that the more I could share, the more I could feel understood; and that created a great deal of peace within me. My friend shared everything. Her generosity was a teacher, and I had learned to be a little more open and a little less suspicious. Also, my time with the Master taught me a great deal about using kind words, and how a person having 'peace within' does help to create peace within others.

As you all know, energy is transferable. There is enough hype in the world already, and it would serve us well to know inner peace ourselves so we can begin to emanate it to others. How beautiful are my memories with my friend from the field – running and jumping, playing, taking time to stop and rest. We would often just lay on the grass and look up at the sky having not worry, judgment, or even pessimism – but simply have the wonder of an open mind.

As I learned to live and work among my fellows, I realized they were a lot like me; they were searching for someone to listen and have not judgment; they were looking for someone to have a smile and a good word; for someone with a peaceful energy and generous heart.

That is all for our lesson this evening; you know what to do. It is always an honor to visit with you. From Abraham and myself, we give you our love. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Building The Muscles Of Patience | Find That Place of Peace and Quiet to Open the Mind For Father

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP

10-08-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am lifted up by the light in your faces this evening. I am filled with gratitude to know you. Your unique personalities are glistening like a prism of knowledge well-earned from experience. You are always helpful in my continuing education. I am a teacher and I love it; and yet, always am I on the path to new learning with you.

During the Correcting Time we will address a great deal of social issues. You my friends, are experiencing these issues first hand; you are my link to understanding this day and age.

I always am faced with my impatience. I do wish to see hurried results and feel the satisfaction therefrom. That, however, is not how Father's plan unfolds. With each setback or disappointment in the cause for Michael's plan I am faced with an opportunity to learn patience. I still feel emotions rising up within my mind, especially frustration; it is always for naught because I eventually learn that Father has a much more successful plan in the works.

I am MARY. Again am I honored to be a part of this branch of our family tree. I am amazed with all the social issues that impact you personally. There is so much more to contemplate in your time now than there was in mine. I can relate with Abraham's shortness of patience. Impatience is a strange energy that creates a great deal of static from mind to mind.

Observing your world today is really quite an overload for me; I can imagine what it must be like for you. It is easy to view your surroundings and see the selfishness that extends from person to person. Every day, your eyes take in the scenery and you must interpret the meaning therein.

In the busyness of your lives, we always ask you to take a few moments to remove yourself from this external stimulus. Allow your muscles to let go and relax. Allow the negative energy that you have gathered throughout the day to lift out of your body and float away. It is acceptable for you to allow your mind to become blank and to simply rest.

Remember me and my wonderful friend who laid beneath the trees to watch them sway back and forth, to feel the wind upon our faces and the green grass beneath us; we were to be without gravity toward anything or anyone, any problems. Your family, your job, your health, your financial situation - this can all likewise be set aside. To constantly ponder over your difficulties burns up energy that could be put to better use.

In the blank space that you allow yourself, Father is able to plant the seeds of new ideas, new thought, new direction. Yes, with Him there is meaning to the aggravation of everyday living; He provides you with a clarity that shows your problems in a light that minimizes their effects upon you.

I know it is difficult to find the time, but believe me it is a necessity that you make effort so that you can have meaning to the happenings in your everyday lives. Even Abraham says a few moments each day is like a good medicine that works immediately, causing the static-energy of impatience to take a turn for the better; you can feel empowered to take action in any situation. You are certainly not helpless victims of life, no.

This week, work on building the muscles of patience. Make effort to see the good. Make effort to find time where there is a nothingness; a space wherein you can allow Father to come in and change the direction of negative thinking. In social situations there is always a mix of energies. You my friends, have the power to direct that energy toward positive thoughts. Your kindness and caring examples do help others to see that this world is still good, still beautiful, and still with truth.

That is all for this evening. Know that ever if you need us we can be there for you in seconds. Feel free to call upon us anytime. As always, our love is ever growing for you each. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

The Mind Must Have Exercise. It Is The Doorway To The Spirit

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-15-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I marvel at how I am taken back through the mortal life cycle when I listen to you. Your enthusiasm at being together is an energy I can see. I am grateful to you each because it is your faith that makes my words possible. Your unity is admirable; what a wonderful combination for a Teaching Mission group to have. To assist this world to go forward with the cause of Light and Life is cause to rejoice.

I am MARY. I also am honored to sit among you. As we spend time together, I learn more about your nature and I am able to arrange my lessons to fit. I am also amazed at the memories you each bring up within me. I can look at my mortal life without regret because where I am now is where meanings and values reside, and I am able to understand the various aspects of mortal life through the eyes of the spirit. As I look at each one of you and your personal lives, I can say that you are each doing all you can to integrate the material and spiritual life. I am saying that you do well.

I know at certain life stages there comes a point where you cannot see anything new for yourselves in the future; it is as if life holds no new lessons. It is common for mortals to say to Father: "I have experienced all there is on this Earth, now what?" These times in mortal life are really a blessing because it opens your eyes and ears a bit more to the mode of searching. When mortals give up the search is when life begins to lose meaning.

The mind must have exercise. A person cannot think they know everything because learning will stop, and stagnation within the mind will set in. A mind that quits learning, or is afraid of learning, will limit their capacity to see – spiritually speaking, of course. To continue learning is the right of every one of Father's children. We can see that the mind busy with fear, or not busy at all, disconnects brain receptors and causes the brain to regress.

Your mind is the doorway to the Spirit. It is important that you continue to learn and find meanings and values to living life. Even our beloved mentor Abraham, in our state of morontial existence, makes effort to expand his mind to be able to create a balance in his everyday living.

I remember back to my days of mundane chores; I always wondered when life was really going to begin - 'where was the gift of life!' A child would run up to me and ask for something to eat, or a sister would come and ask me for advice. I had no clue that that was life - it had begun. It was my job to take example from the Master and live the best life that I could, and that meant taking time to put down my fabric that I had been scrubbing, dry my hands, take the child to the kitchen and prepare something. Was it me going out of my way? No! This was my job! To converse with this child indeed put a smile on my face. To hear of the wonder of life and allow myself to see through the eyes of this child, was the gift.

The joy from such experiences does help to connect those brain receptors. Issues that make you think, make you dissect problems - this makes you look at the variables and then put the problem back together. This is making efforts toward advancement, mentally and spiritually. It is our job to live our best life here on Urantia. Be not afraid.

For this week, let us look into advancing those areas of the mind that lay dormant. Pick up a craft or hobby. Play a game with your children. Read a book. Do something that exercises the brain. A healthy mind is a link to heaven. Be good to yourselves.

That is all. Talk among yourselves to see if you should desire questions next week; we can oblige. Our love is ever growing for you each. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Father Is The Ultimate Physician Who Provides The Medicine of Experience Needed
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-22-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Meeting with you is good for me in the way that a nutritious meal is good for you. I feel uplifted and with renewed hope. I am witness to many events throughout the world, and I admit that it sometimes weighs heavy on my mind and my spirits are somewhat dampened from time to time. Seeing you and being with you, helps me to see that good things are happening, and that mortals really do care.

So yes, I understand how from time to time the mortal eyes can only take in so much chaos or static before the mind and spirit can feel overwhelmed; at these times, it seems that one can only see the negative which seems is developing at an overwhelming rate. God bless the mortal hearts that long to heal and make life better.

Sometimes it seems that life is too big and out of your control, or like the system is seriously flawed. Years ago, our brother Ham spoke about the spirit feeling beaten down - and this will happen on occasion, most definitely. Fortunately, we have Father who is the ultimate healer; He always provides a way for us to rise above the fog into the clear air of understanding.

Today in your world, the meaning of the term 'physician' can leave a bad taste in one's mouth. What used to be a profession of caring and ministering to the sick is now more about red tape, money, politics, etc. Father is the ultimate physician in that He helps you to heal yourself. His help is without condition, for the most part; He only asks of you for your willingness and trust.

'Father's medicine' is like the taking of medicine you remember as a small child - not having a pleasant taste but being with the belief that it will help you to get better. In Father's practice, He can see what you are in need of and He will make arrangements for you to have experience. Sometimes the experience is difficult and unpleasant, just like medicine. It is hard to recognize any good that should come from sudden or strange adversity. On that note, I shall leave you to Mary.

Greetings, friends, I am MARY. I am thrilled to be a part of your learning experience. I enjoy this topic of 'Father as the ultimate physician.' It would seem that one who cares for you should be filled with compassion and make you lie down, rest, and wait on you hand and foot. With Father as the healer, His compassion consists more of getting your mind into a learning mode through certain experiences - action.

After having been in the ministry for a while, I am remembering a time when I was caught up in the busyness of the ministry. I noticed I was called on quite a bit to solve many problems. I felt important and needed - validated, yes. I allowed this importance to run away with my ego and began to take on an attitude of superiority. I began to shout out orders to my sisters, asking them to do the dirty work of the ministry, while I took the high-profile jobs.

How do you suppose Father applied His medicine in my daily living? Did He want me to go down this ego-driven path? of course not! I ended up making terrible mistakes; I almost cost a man his life because I had instructed him to take a certain medicine when he had a totally different illness than what I thought. I was in the mode of self and it almost killed somebody. This mistake was seen by all eyes. I was so embarrassed, so humbled. I was positive I would never be forgiven. I took a few days away from the ministry to be alone with my thoughts and to hide for a time.

In the stillness, I had come to understand my mistake of allowing the ego an open door. Of course I did as many of you do, I would re-run it over and over in my mind and feel further embarrassed, and then self-punish. But as time went by, I began to see that had the mistake not happened I would have become an ego-driven monster who thrived on attention. This mistake was good, yes, but it hurt. Taking time out was the best thing I could have done so that I could find understanding of the total issue.

Father is smart and always aware of our steps along the path, every single detail. His love is beyond expression. His compassion is not having us to lay down and feel our illness and stay sick, no; He gets us busy with our own healing process. These small healing discoveries in mortal life are the very reason that you live. You live so that you may learn. Sometimes Father's healing medicine is not so bitter; but those times when you may be on the wrong path Father brings in the big unforgettable experiences where needed.

The next time you are in the middle of unpleasant circumstances, think about the message or medicine that might be there. How is Father trying to reach you? Can you take a few moments to pull yourself away from that issue and listen? Know that there are step-by-step instructions available, and that all things are possible.

It looks like for this evening we will take a few questions or comments. Proceed.

MARIN: Thank you for sharing your experiences with us, Mary. I feel like I have abandoned my flight plan, and I am concerned because it is a change in course for me – like where am I supposed to go or maybe I am being too rigid. Sometimes I feel like I have let the darkness engulf me or cloud-over the compass. So, just any thoughts that you have, please?

MARY: Certainly. It would seem as though you, my sister, are floating in a boat on the sea of everything, and everything is not reality as you would want or think. Father would have you search your heart for a few small truths that you know to be lasting; and from there, you can begin to build your framework for a strong spirit. The reality of spirituality is everyday life; it is what is before you, it is not some far-off dream. As you build your framework based on your few new found truths, then will you find some direction, some strength in who you are, some confidence in your decisions. Your heart is genuine, and it will open doors for you. Those doors may appear undesirable at first, yes, but given time and effort you will begin to have more confidence in your decision-making. You are not overtaken by any darkness. Have not worry, you are just learning like the rest of us. You do well. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, in your words tonight you addressed the chaos in the world; and I've felt moved quite a bit lately by considerations of the mounting tensions between the Islamic extremists out there toward the rest of the world. There doesn't appear to be a solution, that I can perceive anyhow, where they can be accepting of Michael or His plan. Do you have any words as to what you perceive to be a solution to that mounting tension? It is headed toward huge disaster, the way it looks. It is not scaring me, for I am sure it is Father's 'play out' of events needed for growth and change.

Certainly, I am ABRAHAM: I am in agreement with you. These extremists are not going to change their minds anytime soon. I dread the thought of the events that must happen to them as a group before anything is going to change. It is sad to calculate the adversity they must experience. Unfortunately, it will take many nations to agree upon a solution towards fending off these extremists. Until there is some unity among nations, these individuals will continue to create great destruction. As you said, not to worry, Father has His own plans for the difficulties over there. Sometimes evolution must play out – and yes, that seems cruel. You, as individuals, can only do so much. It is going to be important for Americans to vote in a president who will continue to protect the nation. Good question Calvin. Are there any more questions?

CALVIN: I have just one follow up. It seems to me that there are increasing programs/productions in our media, such as those on the History Channel and Discovery, which play an awareness role for the masses toward what needs changed, and what is true and with value. Are these productions the result of spirit guidance from on high? And are they effective, from your perspective? Do you understand what I'm asking?

ABRAHAM: Oh, I understand. Yes, that is what the Correcting Time is all about; it is bringing issues into the light. If nobody knows about problems then there can be no progress toward solution. It is good for you as individuals to discuss these issues. The positive thoughts do travel. Patience will be key. So, yes, to your questions; there are many resources for attaining knowledge, and always is there new knowledge being discovered.

If that is all for this evening, I would like to thank each one of you, from Mary and myself. We are in agreement – you are a delight to be around. Know that we are always available should you have need. Take time out for yourselves to find that inner peace for your mind and spirit; it is good medicine. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom. [10/29/2007 transcript, if any, still not found.]

How Does Denial Play a Part in Our Lives. In Humility We Can Better See What is Really Going On

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-05-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is truly a blessing to be with you this evening. I am always inspired by your honesty and willingness to find lasting solutions to current problems. It is natural for mortals to have fear and desire to use the methods of escape or avoidance.

You each, as individuals and as a group, demonstrate such strength to have willingness to go through life's trials and come out the other side with more wisdom. I admire your courage to work through everyday pain. You each are wise in viewing difficulties through the intellect and keeping a tight rein on emotions. Remember, it is acceptable to cry, to vent anger, to display a temporary disappointment. It is natural for mortals to have release, yes; but then should we pick ourselves up and move on with the busyness of living.

I know that in my mortal days there were many moments of denial and escape. I would simply not address certain issues and pretend that everything was in its place. My mind was strained with the belief that I should appear to be as perfect as I can be, and to be caught short of that would be a humiliation I could not bear to suffer – all ego-driven of course.

In those days with Sarah, we had a great deal of arguments over practically everything. She had a tender heart and loathed to see me have someone put to death for some trivial purpose. I always brushed her aside and truly believed she had no authority to even speak about such issues with me. Working with Machiventa Melchizedek helped to contain my ego enough that I could begin to view the beauty of honesty and truth. This new ideal helped me to better communicate with Sarah.

Yes, Machiventa taught me that truth should hold no fear, and if I was truly dedicated to becoming a man of the spirit, then I should have enough courage to sit with truth. Sarah may have been an emotional creature, but she was indeed a truthful one. When she proposed her ideas, it was not to gain self-glory, but simply to provide resolution to the situation.

My obstinate ways began to melt as I opened my ears to hear, and eyes to see the reality of those everyday difficulties. What a blessing to have those loved ones, Sarah and Machiventa, to aid me in my education. My softened view of life awakened my compassion for life – and my respect of all of creation.

Father was indeed more than I had ever imagined. As I made myself smaller, I could see into Father's personality – His truth, beauty, and goodness; I could perceive His interpretation of circumstances around me. Sarah was a wonderful messenger of His word. I am grateful she withstood this stubborn old man and continued to be courageous enough to voice her truth, come what may.

This week, let us ponder how denial may play a part in our lives. Is there a fear of reality? or truth? Mortal life is many times a messy situation on our path to enlightenment. Let us be thoughtful of dwelling in the messiness long enough to view Father's lessons for us rather than to side-step with denial. See life for what it truly is and be humble enough to listen and to see what is really going on.

That is all for this evening. We are indeed humbled and always honored to spend the evening with you. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Find the Wiser Way To Handle Life's Situations | Getting to Know the War-Torn Martin
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-12-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a blessing it is to me when we meet. I am always inspired by your stories. I am always made to think deeper when you bring up issues that mortals are concerned with. I see each one of you have your talents and feel free to express yourselves in this family setting.

Last week we discussed getting down to reality and being able to function in those high emotional states. I know now that circumstances that arise are for a reason; and it is frustrating to be patient, yes, but worthwhile in the long run. When I am confronted with a troublesome issue, I try to take in more education on whatever subject it may be. I cannot be at my best if I am ignorant. I always see that it is my responsibility to become knowledgeable on circumstances that are set before me.

I am MARY. Again, it is lovely to be with you. I can understand Abraham's words when he states that it is always wise to become more knowledgeable on an issue you may face.

In my mortal days, I knew this man who was quite elderly and sickly. He was not pleasant to be around. He was always in some sort of pain and it showed in his personality. His name, Martin.

I was used to Martin's verbal abuse when I had brought him food – and therefore, I had not much care for him. Yet, I wanted to make sure I was thorough in my ministry; I had to understand his problem so that I could help him to be more at peace while decreasing in his physical pain.

I learned from Martin's sister that he was a soldier who had served for many years and was accustomed to brutality. He had seen the many faces of death. Even Martin's own sister did not care for him much; but he was family, so she felt obligated to pay him a visit from time to time.

One day I sat down with Martin and asked him about his experience with war. He was reluctant at first to tell me anything or even be the slightest bit courteous. Then all at once, his guard was let down and he talked straight for two hours. He cried for his friends that were taken from this life too early. He felt guilty over a battle he was in charge of and had misdirected some orders that led to the deaths of some of his comrades.

I began to understand how disturbing this was for Martin, and that he never really had an opportunity to talk about it – to 'get it off his chest.' I did not really know what to say to him and decided I needed to confer with the Master. Jesus advised me to simply listen for a time and allow him a bit of sympathy and, a show of appreciation for his service. "Explain your perception of war," he said. "He will understand how civilians cannot understand him."

I took the Master's advice and built a relationship with Martin. He became like a father to me. I began to watch his face grow soft and his eyes seemed a little more kind. How wonderful to watch him stand up and walk around and visit with others. Simple research on my part to know more about him, and especially conferring with the Master, led to a wonderful healing in Martin. I could have chosen to ignore the bitter old man and yet, all the Master's lessons taught me to go a little deeper, to do a little research.

The more you can understand your fellows, the more you love them. Father is so wonderful in how He can set up situations so that He can reach the unreachable. The more you know, the better you can administer to your fellows; it brings about a healing for all involved. With time, Martin came to know Jesus and had truly the best days of his life. He was peaceful and quite content. When Martin was preparing to leave this life, he was at peace and resolved within.

This week, what do we need to do to find wiser ways to handle life situations? Is Father leading you to help in someone's healing? And in so doing, is He helping you to heal yourself? This life takes effort, and knowledge will not simply become a part of you through mere desire, no; it takes work to have a better understanding of how you can be at your best to serve those who may not even know the Lord.

As Abraham expressed, I am also inspired by your efforts made to handle daily circumstances. You are a fountain of knowledge for me to better serve. I thank you. That is all. Know that our love is always continuing for you each. From Abraham and myself, we bid you, shalom. [There was no meeting Nov. 19th.]

A Few Words Of Kindness Can Change A Person's Whole Day/Life

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is such a feeling of comfort and warmth when we visit. I feel somehow I am one step closer to Father when we are together. You each have the same light in your faces each week we meet, and that is indeed an anchor in the sea of everything. It is interesting to see this light when you take into account that your personal lives seem to be such a struggle. It is always something you have to work on to maintain this light, and each week you do. I thank you.

Many times it is actually a relief when you can take the focus off our own issues and help somebody else. Many times there is some hesitation toward getting involved in somebody else's life. It would seem there is always a price to pay, but when you actually begin the good deed, then you are with the feeling that you are one step closer to Father.

There are so many issues in daily living that would pull our attention away from the joy of living. As you learn to become responsible adults and to meet your material obligations, your minds are focused on your priorities, your awareness is all too busy, and joy seems to go by the wayside. Without the healing that comes from happiness, one can lose hope and think: "What is the point? "What am I working for?" "Why do I struggle and seem to go nowhere?"

It is wonderful that you each are dedicated to doing the right thing. Being responsible citizens, good parents, employees, spouses, friends, siblings - my friends, that is a worthy goal of course, but it means nothing without joy. There are so many things to be grateful for, yes, and many times we forget to have gratitude because we are so focused on keeping every day afloat. This brings imbalance, which leads us to more struggle and with less results.

I am MARY. Greetings to you, friends. I am finding your holidays to be interesting and very busy. It would seem as if individuals try to find more meaning in life at this time of year (Thanksgiving holiday in the United States). I am amazed to see the self-reflection and deep thought. I do wonder why this time of year would be different than trying to find meanings and values all year long.

I am enthralled to study the minds of mortals; it is interesting to find what they believe brings them joy, and all too often it is money which always seems to be at the top of the list. Having money is a temporary joy. And yes, being brutally honest, it is important to know that your physical needs will be accommodated - I am in understanding of that, having known poverty in my mortal life. But again I say, it is not a lasting or fulfilling joy; it is not true abundance.

I do believe the times when I was the most joyful in my time in the flesh were those times when I was with my fellow kingdom believers. Life was always a balancing act, and to spend time with these like-minded fellows set me upon a correct path. We, having spent time with the Master, learned of His general beliefs and exemplary living; and we would use that as our light to live by in the years following his time with us. Spending time with one another was a reminder of that light. It was our fuel to go back into the community and serve with abundant energy.

I had a friend who was always seemingly ill with one ailment or another and was always with a complaining countenance. She would make me feel as if I was drained of energy. She was with no joy, or any outlook of possible joy. One day I had taken about as much as I could of her constant complaining, and I became angry with her. Right or wrong I was indeed, angry. I expressed my anger to her and told her there are individuals who are really sick and see not the world as crumbling down around them, but rather, are grateful for the times when they feel well enough to sit up, or to speak with loved ones.

My poor friend was certainly shocked and did not speak to me for quite some time. I felt bad, yes, and yet, I was relieved that I did not have to deal with her energy-draining ways. I spoke to the Master about this situation; I was with remorseful feeling and asked His advice. He told me to have not worry and that He thought I was led to speak the truth. Said he: "Sometimes your brothers and sisters need to know your truth, and it is acceptable for you to put a stop to their energy-draining and constant call for your attention."

The Master told me to begin to make eye-contact with her, and small greetings. She would not look at me at first, but then slowly came around to having short conversations. It was 'miraculous' how her health had improved. While my words were harsh, she came to the realization that they were spoken out of love, concern, and frustration.

What an excellent lesson we both learned from this experience. Our time spent learning together was certainly a bonding for us, and from that time and forward we were like sisters. We spent many hours in laughter and conversation, sharing weaknesses, sharing strength, or hope and joy. My friend and I had learned that too much focus on the self can lead to negative places.

There are always opportunities in daily living to pull yourself from the busyness of life and talk to those around you - to let them know they are worth talking to. What a beautiful beginning to the ripple-effect of kindness. A few words can change a person's whole day. That is really quite powerful.

It is acceptable to go beyond a business-like attitude, and toward a loving friendship. This was the Master's attitude and example to us. He could meet individuals for the first time and completely change their attitudes with just a few words, and possibly never see them again in His mortal life. The point of His mission was that He shared love as He passed by. He was always with a wonderful attitude because He was so beside Himself. He was with the joy of knowing that life extended far beyond the material concerns - far beyond what seems to be the realities at the time.

Yes, my friends, our joy is in our ministry. Our 'healing' is in the kind words we have for others. We are powerful when we can show another they are worth our time - just as you are so wonderful, so patient, and so good to us as your teachers and unseen friends. We thank you.

This week, find reasons to be joyful. Answer the question: "What are you working for?" How can we exchange our focus from feeling sorry for ourselves, for the joy of knowing that life extends beyond what we can see? We send you with our love. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Through Faith We Accept Those Unseen Assistants That Are Just Beyond Our Vision

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-03-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am joy-filled to see you each allow yourselves to let go of your daily worries and know that every day is a new fresh start. From where I am I have not the material veil you have; I am with the surety that the spiritual life is a reality. You, on the other hand, are having your time in the flesh only – and must rely upon faith.

I so desire for you to see and believe how you are helped by the unseen; it is a perfectly-natural picture from where I am; but from where you are it would seem extraordinary, I understand. Imagine that I see a factory full of productive employees working side-by-side producing a wonderful product that will serve a great many. If you were to look at the same picture you would perhaps only see a small percent of the people that we see – and yet, still producing the same results.

It has been a long time since I have first been behind this veil but I can understand how difficult it is to exercise faith in the unseen. The more we study spirituality, the more we can find the logic in it. You are not with your heads somewhere 'in the clouds' – but in reality, are side-by-side with those unseen associates, working through the everyday mortal experiences. These experiences are truly important; they seem so 'down to earth' and mundane at times, but it is all indeed what you make it to be.

Raising children, for instance, can be a complete burden; or, an excellent lesson that has taught you about real joy in living and experiencing the mortal life. Working your job can be 'killing time for a paycheck;' or, it can be a ministry to your fellow co-workers and customers that gives you opportunity to set an example of faith in a higher power. You can feel as unimportant as an ant in an ant farm; or, as useful as a cog in the wheels that turn to create destiny.

You are unique, yes – and yet, not set apart as 'the chosen.' You each have a vision of what you can perceive – and trust me when I say that Father's vision exceeds anything you can comprehend. I could not have predicted my mortal life and what was to become of it. Looking back at it now at my days before the Salem ministry, I was not a 'chosen one' or set apart as special, no! I was an average man trying to lead a superior life. I could not have foreseen my friend, Machiventa, to have been my mentor. I had set myself upon a path that I thought was correct for that day and age.

It took some hardships to break through my obstinacy to be able to increase my spiritual receptivity. It was difficult at first, but worth every minute it took to put me on a truly enlightened path. For that time, for me, Father saw it fit to allow my material eyes to see and communicate with my spiritual assistants – I could actually see Machiventa Melchizedek. Father's chosen plan for this day and age, however, has more to do with the Spirit and the exercise of faith.

Where are we on our path to Light and Life? The Correcting Time has been deemed appropriate on this path, and we are again allotted certain gifts that will help us reach our goal. My message this evening is really directed toward faith and accepting that assistance that is just a little beyond your vision. I mean not to dangle a carrot of mysticism, no! but to bring you hope and an increase in faith.

This week as you are going about your daily business, think about those assistants who work by your side and are unseen by material eyes. Still, these loving assistants long to communicate with you and help you work toward the goal of attaining Light and Life. In the busyness of your day, make effort to have the Spirit at the forefront of your mind. Think about your unseen assistants and how rich and full the kingdom really is. We are so blessed. We are witnesses to the birth of a new age – how will you see your participation in that?

That is all. Look for me this week when you are going about your daily tasks. I would be delighted to be of any assistance to you, as would Mary. Mary is extremely gifted at social issues, especially those issues concerning gender. Take a minute or two to skim the Urantia Book text and re-familiarize yourselves with the many beings in our wonderful universe that are available to you.

Go with hope, my friends. We send you with our love and support. Until next time, shalom.

Let Not Materialism Keep Us Disconnected From Spirit. Remember, Jesus Is Here, Now Abraham & Christ Michael, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-10-2007
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am inspired by your conversation this evening because it brings our thoughts to new levels of meanings and values. The discussion this evening is productive, and positive steps toward spiritual advancement are highlighted. Many times we move through our lives without acknowledgment of positive events. To see your advancement increasing, gives you hope to keep fighting the good fight of faith.

Many issues in mortal living are always tugging at your faith and creating barriers between you and the spiritual life. To be so material magnetized builds barriers in front of the spiritual eyes. The mind and body can literally feel this disconnection – and for many, that is the cause of depression and illness. When we are close to the Master it removes those barriers between the brain receptors and the circuits. Think about it – when you can feel the spirit within your body, you can feel loving energy sensations, and this is indeed fuel for living.

This time of year, tradition shows the birth of a son who will be the Savior of the world. It is really a celebration and a rebirth in mind for many. Said Jesus: “I am the way, the truth and the life.” He is why we have our Mission founded in His existence. He was literally one of us. To connect with Him is to reconnect in Spirit and reprioritize daily living; the stress in life decreases, and the love for your fellow man increases.

This is a crucial time in en masse awareness – there is a tremendous disconnection from the Spirit; there is a war waging within the minds of mortals. Everyone will stand for something, and that 'something' could be positive, or negative.

When we look back over our mortal lives, we are joy-filled by the memories of loved ones and those events with our families and friends who have gone on before us. Material items do not create those lessons that move us on to the morontia life. With evolving technology and the race to be the best, don't be caught up in the mechanics and the dehumanization of a spirit-filled life.

It is amazing how communications have improved and we can see the world as one large family. Let us remember that each person has a face, a name and a soul. Fellowship is of high importance at this time; it is our rock; it is our foundation in which we can refresh our connection to the Spirit.

I am your Brother/Father, Spirit helper, MICHAEL. I wanted to speak with you to refresh your memory of me and our plan and purpose. I cannot find the words to describe my feelings for you. Your faces are imprinted in my memory and I so love each one of you. I am so grateful. The universal circuits are in motion and creating such activity, such change.

The prophets of old have predicted my Second Coming upon the Earth. I wish they knew I have been here all along, involved in everything that needs to be cleansed with truth. I am bringing all things that are dark into the light. My children will have to deal with these issues because it is in step with training for the spiritual career ahead.

You, committed ones, have touched my heart. I see you working. I see you helping. I hear you talking to me. I help you talk to your fellows. Good, is happening. In these years that we have been working within the Teaching Mission, you have a much more peaceful countenance. You have calmed down enough to see the Teaching Mission for what it really is - it is personal help to an enlightened age. I will be there. I will bring out those dark areas for my children to contemplate and make decisions.

The Spirit of Truth has spread over the land and has caused a wave of disruption that has unsettled the stagnant thoughts of the masses. I am the Spirit of Truth. Think of me and you will see I am as close as you need me to be. I am with ever-abiding love for you each. Carry on.

Thank you, Michael, I am ABRAHAM. I believe we are up for Michael's challenge. We can handle those dark areas that need to be dissected and eventually acted upon. Our Teaching Mission is so personal, yes, and yet it involves everyone.

For this week, think of Michael for your reconnection in everything you do. Allow not the materialism and darkness to build barriers between you and the Spirit. You know that our love is ever growing for you each. That is all for this evening. Until next time, shalom.

Through Service We Can Enhance Our Connection To Spirit

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP

12-17-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is such a blessing for me to have this time with you. I am grateful to Father, for His arrangements are perfect in every way. I may not always understand the mind of God, but I am comforted with the fact that I can know His heart. With Him, we are made to feel more alive. Father provides for us, always! I am meaning that in all the details of daily living, even though we may sometimes dwell in misery, we know there is always light at the end of the tunnel, and a plan and purpose.

I am MARY. Again am I honored to be with you, my friends. I am also inspired by our Master's message of last week. It seems to be easier to be distracted by the likes of materialism than to be attracted by spirit duties, which easily go unnoticed. The spiritual life is like the physical body in that if you don't exercise you find your muscles atrophied. In an unfit state, it is much more difficult to get up and get moving.

Jesus taught us that service work was always the right thing to do, yes, but also that the very act of service work was keeping us spiritually in tune. We can see that those moments in our lives when we were most withdrawn or self-absorbed were when we had not energy for anyone else.

Last week, Abraham spoke of the physical sensation we can feel when connecting to Spirit. To reach beyond oneself in the act of service is healing in mind and body. In the exercise of self-forgetfulness, we are learning to dwell less on the insignificant things of life and make each moment mean more.

We always want to serve because it is an act we can perform out of love for our Father. On the other hand, we can feel comforted by the fact that the more we reach beyond ourselves, the more we are ministered to.

I found this to be especially true as I was allowed to watch the Master, day after day, serve one person after another without fatigue. He never for one moment thought of His personal benefit, and yet He was always benefited by good physical and mental health.

The apostles, on the other hand, were a good example in contrast to Jesus where there was underlying selfish motivation – completely understood of course. History has served us as a wonderful teacher to show that it is literally true – the more we give, the more we get.

I have seen a few of you become un-centered with the stress of daily living, and I am in complete understanding. I would recommend that you take small steps in simple acts of kindness to find your spiritual center, and then you can take larger steps from there; do not allow your minds to be a burden. In your efforts made toward simple service, you can feel the lifting of heaviness from your minds. It is truly amazing what an intelligent and loving doctor our Father is.

For the days ahead, find at least one small act of kindness you can do every day. Note how the blood pressure regulates, the energy levels increase, and your desire to exercise the spiritual muscles will return.

That is all for this evening. Know that if you should have need of us, all you have to do is call – for as you know, we are standing by. Our love is growing for you each. From Abraham and myself, until next time, shalom. [11/24/2007 transcript, if any, is still not found.]

Live The Life Of Our Faith As An Example To Others That We Know Christ
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-30-2007

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I thank you for your offerings of warmth and family. Your unique input into our discussion always opens doors to further enlightenment. I am indeed honored to have been a part of you over these years; you have made the journey much more lighthearted.

I can say that I am well familiarized with each of you. I know that your experience has been training for the work ahead. Each of you have at some time made a commitment to the Spirit. Along with your commitment has come Father's calling and your personal training. In our experience we've all had choices – to become 'victims,' or to become educated.

I am inspired by your resiliency to overcome obstacles and keep fighting the good fight of faith. We all have had our moments of weakness when life has given us more misery than we could stand. We have each been overwhelmed by emotion, anger, sorrow, and despair. Our gratitude to Father for showing us the path out of our hell and into the light of eternity.

You are each using your experience well; you have allowed the Adjusters' deep-mind training – and this spiritual experiment of the Correcting Time is showing wonderful results. We have all noticed how time is becoming irrelevant; our new awareness of this brings us lessons that shape our state of becoming.

I am MARY. I must say I am growing quite fond of you each. I see you as my brothers and sisters working side by side in Father's kingdom family. I can appreciate Abraham's words because I feel my experience has been a wonderful teacher.

I used to believe that I was an unworthy child, and Father was out to punish me for my sins. I had hid my life from Him – so I thought. My hours spent learning from the Master indeed proved fruitful when I could be open and honest with everyone – but above all, myself and my Father.

As I ministered to my brothers and sisters who lay in despair, I could tell them of my experience of hopelessness; and in this, they knew I understood them. We created a connection that had shown a light upon a new path to spirituality, to Father, and the eternal career.

Making these small connections in your personal ministries is a measure of success in our efforts toward Light and Life. To use what you have learned to help others is indeed healing for your own spirit – it is fuel to keep striving for new and better ways.

As you are closing upon your time of this calendar year, let us look back at our experiences with gratitude and know that there is a lesson therein. In your moments of serenity is when you are most receptive for Father's ministry - His comfort, His training. Father gives all events, meaning; He helps you to find purpose and a reason to carry on.

Let us look toward the new year ahead as the year of making new connections. In living the life of our faith, an example is shown to others that we indeed know Christ - His love, kindness, generosity, and His patience. Have not fear. Dive into life and know that the adventure is safe; the Spirit is what will sustain you. Live 'on purpose.'

That is all. Know that we completely enjoy our time with you each. We are thrilled to work by your side. From Abraham and myself, we send you with our love and bid you, shalom.

Be Observant In The Events Of Everyday Life. Ask, What Is The Lesson In This
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-07-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am with you this evening in your feelings of gratitude. I am amazed when I view Father's overall plan and how every detail helps us to progress. Father's family is numberless and yet, He is integrated with each individual. I am humbled in the vastness of the kingdom, and yet I feel glad to be an important part of it.

I meet a great deal of people every day; I am still learning about human behavior. I want to be a better teacher - and I can do that by learning and gaining knowledge. At this time on Urantia there is such static in thought; there is such an overload in the minds of mortals. I meet with people that seem overwhelmed by regular living. I have, as of late, been learning to simplify and to prioritize.

As children of God, we must all come to a place in our minds that gives us a reason to strive to continue moving forward. Those that have somewhat drifted away from the Spirit feel lost and without reason to grow, to advance, and to carry on.

What is our reason to continue to try and to make the most of the mortal life? I can tell you my personal experience in the flesh was all about gaining power and always having control over every situation. I was immovable in my decisions - somewhat heartless, you could say. I did bring about many hardships due to my obstinate decision-making.

A man needs to be humbled from time to time in order to find those checkpoints of soul progression. Humility is a way to open the ears and eyes; it is a new view of options. When individuals seem to be lacking in options then there is a stifling of the spirit, and hopelessness sets in. We are freewill creatures, yes, and must be able to have options. This is exactly why organized religions fail the individual. In the churches, beliefs have already been set, and freewill is stifled. Many can live with these pre-made decisions, yes, but some feel that inner-turmoil that drives them to seek freedom.

I am MARY. Again it is good to be with you, my friends. I understand that restlessness of spirit, or that drive to 'seek something more.'

As a young girl living on my own and making my way however I could, I felt that life was pretty much set before me. As one who would always be scrambling simply to survive, I felt overcome by the ego or animal determination. Opening up the spiritual side of myself was indeed a whole new adventure. Finally, and for the first time, I could see that 'as a child of God' I had value; I had reason to strive; I had reason to advance.

We together, are like a scenic mountainous valley, with trees, flowers, water, soil, sky, and sun. Each element within this valley feeds the next. Each element is needed and important.

In my mortal ministry, I found my most joyful times to be talking with people, making them smile, and welcoming them to show their true selves. In this type of ministry, I found it easy and a joy to carry on. To strive to make things around me, better, was soul-fulfilling.

I was indeed blessed to work side by side with the Master and view His tireless countenance. He was such a wind of fresh energy. He was seemingly unaffected, and yet always allowed the Spirit to flow to those around Him. Knowing Jesus during His days on Earth, and even after, showed me my place in the universe and how available 'options' were to me. I was not just a stifled spirit or a 'poor girl from a crowded village.'

It did take some time however, to have any sort of confidence in my ability to open up to the divine Spirit. It was those small experiences with my fellows that taught me the most - those small aggravations; the mundane events; those typical life-humbling episodes. Through it all, I can say it was the times of uncontrollable laughter and the thoughtful conversations that helped me to see how I played a part in all there is.

This week we ask that you remember in those everyday events of your life, to be observant. Be not quick to act rash but to go within and ask questions, such as: "What is the lesson in that particular event?" Yes, this week take time to really feel the Spirit, the vastness, the freedom. Have quiet time to reflect on those 'options' we all have as children of God.

That is all. It is indeed a blessing for Abraham and myself to know you as co-workers, friends, brothers, and sisters. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom

Earth-life Is An Ongoing State of Becoming, Toward Our Eternal Career

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-14-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. This evening I am inspired by your levels of confidence to handle the material life. It indeed takes some spiritual knowledge and experience to maneuver through the struggles and on to the eternal rewards.

When I look at you working in this Teaching Mission, I feel a new level of confidence in the overall kingdom plan. I see you as a stable point of light. You have enough experience to wade through the mysticism and into the reality of the Spirit. To a certain degree, you are firmly rooted in the realities needed that will create growth in the Teaching Mission and the whole of the Correcting Time.

As you can see, there is a great deal occurring in the world today and the outworking of the Spirit of Truth is becoming quite apparent. We are so happy to see you well-adjusted individuals that work simply out of love for Father and His ultimate truth.

I am MARY. I am always honored to be with you – and believe me, I find you and your topics of discussion to be very engaging. I love our level of relationship as kingdom believers and fellow coworkers who have experienced a well-rounded life in the flesh. I can work from that standpoint.

There is such an energy of division throughout the planet. Many are compelled to jump off the fence of indecision, one way or another, and find a home ‘in truth’ – not simply ‘in comfort.’ It is such a struggle to break through that barrier of ego or animalistic tendencies. As we discussed last week, there is seemingly a large number of humbling experiences that lead one to open up to the Spirit.

As you mentioned earlier, those that choose to stay planted in their animalistic ways become victims, and never try to break through that ‘shell of imprisonment.’ Growing up on Urantia, I had developed a tough exterior. By the time I was really an adult I had levels of self-defense that were difficult to break through. I had been hurt, and my tough exterior was going to protect me from further pain.

I had not really known what a true friend in the spirit was until I had met those apostolic sisters. They accepted me for who I was, what I looked like, and how I acted. Their kindness brought out the best in me. My experience learning from the Master showed me that the mortal life is temporary, and simply a learning-ground to further adventures in our eternal career. That meant any disagreements I had experienced that caused hurt were not to be closed off in order to self-protect. The experiences I had here on the planet were simply to open the door to our next experience – experience that would bring growth and healing.

Yes, all events, all past pain, is open to a healing. Damaged relationships are not forever. There is understanding that in the next phase of mortal existence we have opportunity to make repairs. Nothing is to make us feel closed off; there is always another phase to learn from, and there are no wounds that will not heal.

As I grew older, I found that my tough exterior to repel the Spirit, as well as any self-protections from potential pain, had waned. Yes, for in my working with the Master, I found my emotions and old patterns to be natural, and simply a process to work through and eventually master. Rather than guilt and regret, I had permission to feel and reason. The truth always emerged to reveal new opportunities, to learn new spiritual skills.

This week, instead of always repelling the so-called animalistic tendencies to escape pain or discomfort, let us find new joy in feeling what we are supposed to really feel as young spirits. Be not afraid of any pain, for the Father is always at hand. In quiet times you can find wisdom that will show you how to deal with that difficult employer; handle the behavior of an unruly child; have understanding for your spouse; maybe speak kind words to those who are seemingly unreachable.

You all have learned certain defense mechanisms that would seemingly repel painful experience – and believe me, it is well understood. As we grow in the spirit and learn to master the ego, let us develop the skills that will allow us to have patience in our struggles, and to have not fear for revealing that softer side.

This life is temporary, yes, but our experiences here are not complete, for we are always in an ongoing state of becoming – to learn and grow from every experience. In this becoming, we have all the help we will ever need, it is our individual responsibility to be open to it; to ask for it.

That is all for this evening. Stay observant and know that we are building upon a foundation for the next life. From Abraham and myself, we send you with our love and offer to give assistance in any way you need. Until next time, shalom.

How Much Does The Material Life Trap Our Attention. `Things` Are Not The Path To Peace

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-21-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. On such a cold night we are so grateful to have somewhere to go. It is a real blessing to have the physical needs taken care of. It is easy to overlook what life must be like for those who are homeless and live out in the elements. It is easy to forget about those small things to be grateful for when life is in such fast motion.

Being physical creatures, the material life's comfort is really quite important – as well it should be. Bodily discomfort takes a great deal of attention off of the ordinary pace of life. Part of the mortal experience is tending to the physical needs. Some never really develop good work ethics and have difficulty finding a place to call 'home'. Then there are some who are workaholics who have all their energy going toward their employment while other important aspects of life go by the wayside.

There are many who have the standard and sufficient comforts of life, but incessantly seek to obtain 'more.' The more some people have, is (in their minds) a show of success; their energy is geared toward 'consuming' – and still they are feeling the emptiness of imbalance.

In my life, I was one who was bent on obtaining as much land as possible. I didn't need all this property; personally, I didn't even use it; I just wanted to be known and acknowledged for my savvy business mind.

All of this land took so much energy to take care of. I hired men to guard these empty fields and to put up fences to show that this land belonged to a powerful man. Of course I needed animals to control the growth of the field grasses; and therefore I needed to hire more individuals to take care of these animals. What an exhausting cycle of living.

I felt I needed to make use of this land, and so were plans laid to build upon it. I acquired one thing after another. I had no thoughts of giving. I simply had thoughts of obtaining more and more material value. I got little sleep because I had to manage my so-called empire. There were always problems to be dealt with – whether it was my employees' squabbling over one thing or another, or my family complaining that I spent no time with them.

I thought these things would make me happy – but instead, they drained me of my energy and ability to find joy. In obtaining material goods I had begun a juggling act that would put terrible stress upon me and my relationships. I was unhappy. I had everything I could ever want and yet, I was unhappy. My mind was busy with the details of my endeavors. At the end of the day, I had no patience for those loved ones who needed me.

Upon meeting Machiventa(Melchizedek), I found him to be what I thought an extraordinary man who asked for very little. He consumed very little. He wanted not for riches, or gold, or power. Said he: “Those things are not the path to peace and happiness, but a constant drain of your life-energy, a constant demand for your attention.”

The more time I spent with Machiventa, the more my desire had shifted to become more involved in the spiritual life. Machiventa taught me about generosity, kindness, compassion, and the inter-workings of the Father's kingdom. I viewed Machiventa taking such joy in nature's surroundings, animals, and children. He took joy in speaking with the elderly. He laughed frequently – and ‘that,’ I had not expected. I wanted to have this freedom in mind for my own.

I realized that I could not juggle such a materialistic empire and seek power, while trying to find peace, joy, and balance. I began to divide up the land to give to those men who worked for me. I liquidated my assets and paid off my debts. We had all we needed – physically and mentally. Emotionally and spiritually, however, was a different story. My family thought that I had truly lost my mind, but I told them I was to simplify my life so I could put my energy into those things that really matter. Obtaining goods was not a show of success. It was not a source of joy.

Father wants us to have abundance, yes – and yet, not to the point that we put all our energy into it. With material assets, one must always protect them, watch over them, and maintain them. One who lives with balance is one who has his material needs met and yet has time for family, friends, and fun.

If material goods should happen to multiply here and there, then that is wonderful – if it does not steal so much of your attention and focus. When the material life is satisfactory to the point where our comfort needs are met, then we can go out and find the true measure of success; we can find our real joy, peace, and fulfillment. Balance is really all I am speaking about.

This week, ponder how much of the material life traps your attention. Let us work to simplify and minimize the clutter in all aspects of our existence – material and spiritual. It is wonderful to know such hard-working individuals such as yourselves. Consider that your employment is really just an avenue in order to carry out the real work you are assigned to do to have a joy-filled life.

Do not run away with this idea. Keep balanced. I am not advocating that you give away all that you own, but to simply find the common sense in your endeavors to obtain the good life. That is all for this evening. Mary sends her love. We will speak with her next week. I am always honored to be with you. I enjoy each one of you. Thank you. Until next time, shalom.

Rise To The Challenge of Father`s Plan Over Our Own

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-28-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am here with the thought that in our gathering we are of a searching mind, which means we are to rise above daily struggles and those things that blur our spiritual vision. Our physical discomforts, our mental issues or stressful events, must be set aside for us to come together and have this collective inner-dedication to gather wisdom and strength to go forward yet another day.

Yes, advancement is always possible with your willingness to remain ever open to new thought, new ideas, and that truth which withstands the tests of time.

I am MARY. I am always with gratitude when we can sit together and know that all is safe within the kingdom. Your diligent search for truth over these many years touches my heart; it reminds me that Father`s plan is always at work and ever clearing a path for us to reach Him.

I can identify with your discussion on attachment and pain. Those are the experiences that bring a reality right before your eyes which demands your attention and to drive you to take action. Those that dare to think past the physical life – past the surface-levels of materialism – will find life with Father to be somewhat more challenging because daily experiences will call for your very best. Surface-level thinking becomes unacceptable, and your love for Father drives you to search on a soul level.

I can think back to my days in the ministry where I thought I was doing my fair share of spiritual work and helping others. There was a time I felt that these tasks in the ministry became a burden to me, and I had not the feeling of happiness nor growth. I was somewhat angry with Father and a bit resentful that I had not experienced more happiness in daily living. I felt I was doing my part, yes, and yet the rewards were seemingly nowhere in sight. My faith wavered, I must admit, but it was an opportunity to reach for more, for deeper understanding. It was a challenge for me to go beyond my desires and push for the good of Father`s plan.

There are trivial disturbances in daily living that put reality in your face and gives you a choice on whether to rise to the challenge, or be engulfed by fear or other spirit poisons. It is not bad or good, but just experience – an education that puts you ever closer to our First Source and Center.

When faith begins to appear selfish, then the ego has too much control. When your intentions are purely for selfish gain, then does it reflect in your actions and is apparent in how you live – it is not hidden.

The Master does call for us to make extra effort in this Correcting Time. There is so much personal work mortals must take into consideration when in the ministry. Father's plan is elaborate, yes; and yet we don't have to worry on this. For us, reality in Father's kingdom is in those moments where He has placed us; and it is then, in those moments, that it is our choice to act.

They say "life is what you make it," and it is true, yes! you can be open to new challenges; or, stay in a rut of discomfort. There are always opportunities to do something different; a repetitious pattern is not your fate. As we rise above the messiness of daily living and reach for our collective unified dedication, let us feel the spiritual empowerment to know that the Master goes before us in all that we do; and, with the knowing that Father literally walks us through our experience.

This week let us concentrate on doing for others. Consider if this appears to be a burden? or is this service something we can do to be closer to the Spirit. There is joy to be had, even in pain; have not worry. I am very much inspired by your willingness to press on. Your love for the Master is clearly visible to me, and I am honored to be a witness.

Know that we are available for your moments during the week when you are with the searching mind. From Abraham and myself, we send you with our love. Until next time, shalom.

In Our Pain and Hopelessness, Rely Upon Our Inner-Father Fragment
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-04-2008
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am appreciative of your hospitality. You make me feel welcome. I am in understanding of your issues of daily living. I find it such a blessing to see you each practicing 'pausing for a moment' to check in with your spiritual beliefs before you act on a concerning situation.

We are seeing our Correcting Time stir up issues that bring individuals to the point of looking inward, seeing their true beliefs, and attempting to take action. The mindal circuits are so alive, sending and bringing information at top speed. You, as a collective mind, will see trauma and define for yourselves what is the most loving and least selfish action you can take. The mortal life appears to be an off-and-on battle. It is our hope that people will look within and find the very best in themselves.

You can think back to certain instances over your lifetime and see that a seemingly negative event occurred which brought you to a place of realizing that love is most important. At such a time you had not care for your own pain; you had not thoughts of yourself. Yes, you can see that some experiences in life have brought you above surface-level thinking, to find your real priorities. Experience is why you serve time in the flesh. Advancement (the perfecting process) is your goal, and the 'disturbances of mortal living' is your teacher.

I am MARY. I also thank you for your kindness in opening up to us each week. I can understand Abraham's words, it brings me back to the time in my experience when I realized the Master was going to be captured and punished. All other worries I had fell by the wayside and I felt no control. I was devastated and consumed with the thoughts of losing my Master and friend. In my shock I would talk among my sisters; we had no ideas of how to change the inevitable, all we could do was pray and be still.

During my 'going within' I remembered the lessons that the Master had taught, and I thought of how He would handle such an instance. He would say: "If you are going to live, then live. If you are dedicated to the Spirit while wearing the flesh, then go full bore. Do not hesitate. Grab the hand of the Spirit and go."

I was with the understanding that this upcoming experience of Jesus was going to hurt, and that I must dive into it, feel it, understand it, take the necessary actions, find the meanings and values, and take in the growth therefrom.

Yes, the Master's words were a blessing and a source of strength. Often we had heard him say: "If you are going to live, then live. If you are going to hide and self-protect, then do not complain." That time for us was excruciating, yes; and yet we were with Him in every minute, witnessing His pain and taking in every precious minute that we had left with Him.

In my feelings of helplessness, I only had God; I had nothing else and nothing else meant anything. In my hopelessness I had only one place to turn; and believe me, I was not disappointed, for I felt strength from something unseen that enveloped me with strength. I could rally my sisters and begin to plan the actions we would take next. The Master had told us He would be leaving us, and He prepared us as best He could. It was upon us to act as we knew He would want us.

My friends, our beloved Father and Brother knows our highly emotional state that hampers our rational thinking. Your inner Father does make effort to give you some sort of preparation for things to come. He wants not for your emotional state to block strength and rationality.

This week, let us be open and thoughtful of how the inner Fragment of our Father may guide us. Think about the Master's words: "Are you committed to living?" How often might you find yourselves hiding to avoid hurt? Do not be discouraged for your human ways; know that there is value in everyday-living and always a reason to carry on.

I feel such a warmth from this group. I am always happy to serve with you. Know that Abraham and myself send you our love, and go with you throughout the week. Until next time, shalom.

Examples From Light and Life Worlds - The Diligent John the Baptist

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-11-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am in such gratitude for your lighthearted spirit here this evening. I love to see you each balance life encompassing a little bit of everything. Even though our priorities call to us it doesn't mean we can't have some enjoyment. In all of life's circumstances we can learn to blend the ministry therein.

Even though the world does not yet welcome it completely, we, as students of the Correcting Time, can always have with us Father's wonderful Spirit. There is a lot of chaos in the world right now. With the conditioning of the human mind by various cultural lifestyles, beliefs can be limited wherein we just don't handle things well.

On worlds settled in Light and Life, natural catastrophic events also occur, yes, but their minds are so different in how they believe or perceive. One thing that these enlightened individuals know is that there is always an ultimate good in every event – that Father's hand is in every occurrence. As well, these Light and Life dwellers know that death is not permanent, that life in the flesh is ongoing into the morontial life. When you believe this to the core of your soul, then traumatic events do not affect you in the same way.

Another interesting fact about our friends on worlds settled in Light and Life is that they are so selfless; their minds are really focused on the well-being of one another, and they do all they can to provide for that well-being. I am grateful to these forerunners who give us Light and Life examples; we can learn a great deal from them.

I am MARY. I again greet you with a full heart. We are becoming closer and closer each time we meet. I enjoy the intricacies of your personalities. I look forward to our meetings.

I am also grateful to those worlds that have trudged through their history and made something beautiful out of it. Our Light and Life example people are not merely individuals in denial or with rose-colored glasses; nor are they robots, no! they are just like you – yearning for fulfillment through truth, beauty and goodness.

These Light and Life citizens are people who have welcomed Father as their Sovereign and long to do His will. They live life with balance in all things. Work is not miserable. School is not mundane. Daily chores are not something to procrastinate. There is laughter and joy where they work. There is relaxation in worship. There is adventure in their education. Money and materialism is not their leader.

I am excited about this worlds' change; it is slow, yes, but taking a firm hold at the roots of our wonderful universe's evolution.

I think back to the days of John the Baptist; though I was not conscious of his work, I later learned who he was and his significant role as a precursor to Christ. John was one of a kind. He loved God the Father and had the best intentions for serving and performing in the ministry. He worked tirelessly baptizing one believer after another.

John was diligent, yes, and yet he found not balance in his work. He had not continual joy or peace. He could hardly find sleep most nights. While imprisoned, it was difficult for John to come to terms with the fact that his mission was cut short. Yet, he was determined to endure through whatever trial to beset him.

Had John not been so outspoken and determined to fulfill his role, as he understood it, he very well could have gone on to have a wife and kids. He could have even continued on with his own church and made great strides therein. Father wanted for John's happiness, always. He wanted for John's balance in living; to find the joy in work; the adventure in education; the peace of knowing Father's work is steadily progressing.

During that time of Michael's sojourn, there were tremendous strides being made in the expanding awareness of humankind; it was also a Correcting Time of sorts, as is now; it was a breakthrough time of freeing the minds of men and women, and showing them that Father is a benevolent personality.

The 'mission side' of that time, however, had to do with the purpose of Michael of Nebadon - His message needed to be heard. Jesus needed not antagonistic individuals to cause his mission to be cut short, no! but Father's will needed to prevail in this situation; and John was in full agreement with that, even though he was loathed to be imprisoned.

Many times, circumstances will be confusing; and we just don't need to know the outcome, we simply need to be dedicated to allowing Father to be our sovereign. His Mission is everything - and yet, everything is His Mission. Michael wants for us to have balance, happiness, friends, family - and always be open to learning something new. Our lives and the Mission are a blend of sorts where we can serve 'as we pass by.' We can adapt in any given situation as long as we keep Father in the forefront of our minds.

This week, let us ponder about our brothers and sisters settled on worlds in Light and Life. What do you think the main focus of their turning point was - that brought them through the drudgery of history, to a state of Light and Life? In all our circumstances this week, let us be conscious of having joy, and knowing that any individual may be a messenger 'for you' - or, you may be 'for them.'

That is all, my friends. Know that Abraham and myself are always overjoyed to spend time with you; and with that, we will take our leave. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Examples From Light and Life Worlds - The Diligent John the Baptist

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-11-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am in such gratitude for your lighthearted spirit here this evening. I love to see you each balance life encompassing a little bit of everything. Even though our priorities call to us it doesn't mean we can't have some enjoyment. In all of life's circumstances we can learn to blend the ministry therein.

Even though the world does not yet welcome it completely, we, as students of the Correcting Time, can always have with us Father's wonderful Spirit. There is a lot of chaos in the world right now. With the conditioning of the human mind by various cultural lifestyles, beliefs can be limited wherein we just don't handle things well.

On worlds settled in Light and Life, natural catastrophic events also occur, yes, but their minds are so different in how they believe or perceive. One thing that these enlightened individuals know is that there is always an ultimate good in every event – that Father's hand is in every occurrence. As well, these Light and Life dwellers know that death is not permanent, that life in the flesh is ongoing into the morontial life. When you believe this to the core of your soul, then traumatic events do not affect you in the same way.

Another interesting fact about our friends on worlds settled in Light and Life is that they are so selfless; their minds are really focused on the well-being of one another, and they do all they can to provide for that well-being. I am grateful to these forerunners who give us Light and Life examples; we can learn a great deal from them.

I am MARY. I again greet you with a full heart. We are becoming closer and closer each time we meet. I enjoy the intricacies of your personalities. I look forward to our meetings.

I am also grateful to those worlds that have trudged through their history and made something beautiful out of it. Our Light and Life example people are not merely individuals in denial or with rose-colored glasses; nor are they robots, no! they are just like you – yearning for fulfillment through truth, beauty and goodness.

These Light and Life citizens are people who have welcomed Father as their Sovereign and long to do His will. They live life with balance in all things. Work is not miserable. School is not mundane. Daily chores are not something to procrastinate. There is laughter and joy where they work. There is relaxation in worship. There is adventure in their education. Money and materialism is not their leader.

I am excited about this worlds' change; it is slow, yes, but taking a firm hold at the roots of our wonderful universe's evolution.

I think back to the days of John the Baptist; though I was not conscious of his work, I later learned who he was and his significant role as a precursor to Christ. John was one of a kind. He loved God the Father and had the best intentions for serving and performing in the ministry. He worked tirelessly baptizing one believer after another.

John was diligent, yes, and yet he found not balance in his work. He had not continual joy or peace. He could hardly find sleep most nights. While imprisoned, it was difficult for John to come to terms with the fact that his mission was cut short. Yet, he was determined to endure through whatever trial to beset him.

Had John not been so outspoken and determined to fulfill his role, as he understood it, he very well could have gone on to have a wife and kids. He could have even continued on with his own church and made great strides therein. Father wanted for John's happiness, always. He wanted for John's balance in living; to find the joy in work; the adventure in education; the peace of knowing Father's work is steadily progressing.

During that time of Michael's sojourn, there were tremendous strides being made in the expanding awareness of humankind; it was also a Correcting Time of sorts, as is now; it was a breakthrough time of freeing the minds of men and women, and showing them that Father is a benevolent personality.

The 'mission side' of that time, however, had to do with the purpose of Michael of Nebadon - His message needed to be heard. Jesus needed not antagonistic individuals to cause his mission to be cut short, no! but Father's will needed to prevail in this situation; and John was in full agreement with that, even though he was loathed to be imprisoned.

Many times, circumstances will be confusing; and we just don't need to know the outcome, we simply need to be dedicated to allowing Father to be our sovereign. His Mission is everything - and yet, everything is His Mission. Michael wants for us to have balance, happiness, friends, family - and always be open to learning something new. Our lives and the Mission are a blend of sorts where we can serve 'as we pass by.' We can adapt in any given situation as long as we keep Father in the forefront of our minds.

This week, let us ponder about our brothers and sisters settled on worlds in Light and Life. What do you think the main focus of their turning point was - that brought them through the drudgery of history, to a state of Light and Life? In all our circumstances this week, let us be conscious of having joy, and knowing that any individual may be a messenger 'for you' - or, you may be 'for them.'

That is all, my friends. Know that Abraham and myself are always overjoyed to spend time with you; and with that, we will take our leave. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Take Joy In Freedom Of Faith, Yet Be Conscious of Universal Law
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-18-2008
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am so grateful to you who keep the faith. You make my words possible. Even in strange times we can rally our faith and find some meanings and values. You that are searchers of truth accept not shallow-thinking and have become accustomed to finding a reason for all things.

I am always interested in how the human mind works because it does have a direct connection to the Spirit wherein education is unlimited. You that have your own rooted beliefs in the Urantia Book and Michael's Correcting Time will find your awareness highly sensitive, yes, because correction is taking place and circuits are being connected, constantly. We are all feeling the correction momentum; our awareness is expanding and our faith is sometimes running in all directions trying to keep up.

In the harsh realities of life, it is difficult to see the hand of God at work. You should hear the many voices every day, that cry for help. Even I am overwhelmed at times. We must remember to rein in our faith, yes, but on the other hand put not limitations on Father's abilities. This capturing of faith is always best handled through meditation and quiet time.

I am MARY. Once again, I am happy to be among you working for new and better ways. I believe Abraham is speaking about faith and the seeming chaotic directions it can take. It is wonderful that you in this small group have a system of faith that is open always to new possibilities. No one is encouraging you on what you are to believe. Many times the freedom can get carried away, and we can forget where we stand in the realities of spirit and truth.

I can appreciate your discussion this evening on the life of Jesus. How blessed are we to have Him for our example – the example of living our life purposefully, and having no fear of what that will bring us. I am also fascinated by the inner workings of the human mind. I can see how faith grew in my time on this world.

As a young girl I had not direction, and saw those who claimed to have faith as people thinking of themselves 'superior.' Those individuals appeared to me as quite judgmental; and since I was always ashamed of who I was, my faith in a higher power to be someone I could trust, was practically nonexistent. Through my growth and experience, I thought God to be someone who would be un-accepting of my lifestyle, my life circumstances, and I was indeed afraid of Him. Yet, I would sometimes try to live 'somewhat' morally because I feared punishment from Him.

As my faith grew in the ministry of Christ, I began to feel less judged and more accepted; and, more free to be who I really was. In knowing the Master, I came to believe that no person on Earth could force me into faith. Jesus was quite clear on that matter – that “you know what you know, from your own experience.” The love and kindness of Jesus always made me want to progress.

In my freedom of faith however, I had not lost my thoughts of living true to the universal laws –not the commandments that man had taught, no, but my inner-knowing of the 'universal laws.' All who receive their Fragment of Father have this connection of knowing right from wrong because we are with such freedom to choose such.

And faith does not mean we are exempt from living the universal laws; internally you know what these laws are – you can literally feel them; it is an inherent knowing of that which is truth, beauty and goodness, from that which is not.

In order for the budding soul to grow, we must work toward following basic spiritual laws; we do this by exemplifying the life of Christ in our actions. Abraham mentioned quiet time; and in this, there is an open connection to the Creator. He is our peace in mind. He is our Director to understanding the universal laws. He is that process by which we are producing spiritual fruits in our everyday lives.

When I had worked with the sick and elderly in the ministry of our Lord, I had an urge to attend to those who would bring me ego-satisfaction. To those I could not help, I strayed away from – and I learned with experience that spiritually and morally, this was wrong. Believe me, I did beat myself up over the situation. But with time and counseling from my fellows in the ministry, I had gained the ability to make correction.

It took some persuasion of sorts to turn from the animalistic mind to the mind of Jesus. In taking some steps to rectify my mistake, I felt with direction and comfort. Ministering to my disabled fellows became easier, and I came to feel joy with each patient, regardless of their condition.

This week, let us be conscious of our moral decisions. Take joy in the freedom of faith, and still be conscious of the universal laws. What are those steps we can take toward exchanging our natural minds that may be experiencing anger, despair, perhaps regret – with the mind of Jesus who embodies truth, beauty, and goodness.

I am grateful for our heart-to-heart connection. We are both indeed filled with overflowing love for you each. I thank you, as does Abraham. We send you with our love. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Hardships and Even Dysfunction Teach Us New Levels of Advancement

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-25-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It really takes quite a bit of effort for mortals to lay down their agendas and receive spiritual direction. I am appreciative of the effort you each make. My words are possible because you are willing to set aside your desires and listen to the lesson for the week. Having experienced the mortal life, I do know how hard it was for me to stop my racing thoughts and tune in to the meaning of Machiventa's words.

Over the last few decades, the avenue toward pleasure-seeking has become a main focus. The value once held in exercising delayed gratification has slowly faded away. Feeling any sort of pain or discomfort was abhorred, and the minds of mortals sought more and more escape from it.

As human beings, we each learn varying levels of pain and conform to our ability to tolerate it. Continuous pain in life is not necessary, really; pain and struggle is not the only teacher. But to seek continuous escape from pain is a foundation that is grounded in the ego-mind. The human brain was made for adaptability, and evolution has taught us that we are capable of enduring any hardship.

These days, psychiatric terminologies have brought many new definitions to traumatic events that come with life in the flesh. I mean not to downplay – for instance, the mind of a soldier who would return from war and have a difficult time readjusting to civilian life, no! I am speaking more about so-called 'personality disorders' and 'mental dysfunctions.' My friends, we are to experience a certain amount of dysfunction, yes, because it teaches us strength in character, adaptability in material life, and growth of the spirit.

Take children for example, and how their tendency to be unruly will lead them right to a doctor's office and a prescription. The typical educational system in the United States goes against their very nature – telling them to be still and listen; and when they cannot do so they are then diagnosed with a mental dysfunction. Children can learn best when it goes along with the grain of their mind. They are so willing to do good when they can see the reason behind doing good.

On the topic of feeling and dealing with pain, we must look to the differences in personalities or in physical makeup. Every person is not going to fit into a standard societal mold; people have their variations in mind and chemical makeup. Many times when we are experiencing pain, it is perhaps a self-imposed issue or feeling guilt toward 'not fitting in' with what society would see as normal.

The Correcting Time is a great deal about self-mastery, yes, but not about pressuring one into learning it. When one wants to learn to do better, the indwelling Spirit, then, is ready to teach. Father knows each child and how best to teach.

This week, we can ponder how popular it is to escape pain. How has past pain brought you to the levels of spiritual advancement you now enjoy? You hear of mature adults every day who swear they would never want to go back and start the growth process all over again; yet, it is what has developed their very character. This week's exercise is a difficult self-evaluation, but believe me, well worth it. I hope that you know I am speaking primarily about mental pain; emotional pain, yes.

Next week, Mary will speak more on this topic. For now, I shall take my leave, but not without expressing to you my love and gratitude. Remember, I am in understanding and at your side should you have need. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

In Those Difficult Times, Await Father's Comfort and Direction Rather Than The Quick Ego-Pattern

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-03-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I can so appreciate the depth of your faith. You have willingness to be present here and wait for the words of some flexible tools for mortal living. Everything is subject to change; even my words are not the final words. We are grateful that Father is steady, constant, and unchangeable. He is our rock and is somebody we can always count on.

Our realm (existence outside of Paradise) has varying levels of reality, and so many things are simply our interpretation. When you can feel you are at your best, meaning closer to Spirit than ego, then you can count on an accurate interpretation of spiritual meanings and values, no matter what my words are, or anybody else's. As Teachers, we do our best to put forth the most updated information possible. It is always your choice, however, to define the meanings, ascertain the values, and act upon what you believe to be best. As promised last week, I will allow Mary to get in a word or two.

I am MARY. I am always so grateful to be counted as one of your family members. I may be a teacher to you, but I, likewise, see you as a teacher to me. I learn a great deal from your discussions and am amazed at your passion on certain subjects. I learn so much about each of you when you speak your mind. It becomes easier for me to teach on various subjects when I can know you each, personally. A lot has changed from my days in the flesh, and I do want to be of service at your level of understanding.

Last week, Abraham spoke of mental and emotional pain in mortal living, and the tendency to desire escape. This topic is fascinating to me because it is worldwide and a growing tendency. I am always made to think of the Master in the garden before His arrest. Even He had sought escape at some point, for He knew of the deepest pain awaiting Him. I believe that He was hurt deeply by the betrayal of His fellows who could not stay awake with Him during this time of great despair. His good intentions were misunderstood, and what he had set out to accomplish seemed to go astray.

It took effort for Jesus to work through His mind the meaning of what was happening. There is always the animal-side that seeks escape from pain, or rebels against it. It is difficult for mortals to understand and be patient with the time it takes to work through difficulties. The Master cried that day in the garden; He felt great anguish. He had gone back and forth in His mind on what His choices were and what they would result.

During this time of reaching out for Father, the Master experienced a spiritual ministration and had come to the final decision that Father's will should prevail. Our Creator/Brother decided to 'drink the cup of whatever life had in store for him.' A lot of His despair was from the burden of having to make the actual decision. Once He did, peace had followed; a new strength in mind and resolve in understanding had come to Him.

Rash decisions usually lead in an individual's mind, and one never gets to experience the peace that follows a well-thought-out decision. I know this, for I have experienced pain to the point that my faith in Father was threatened.

After the Master was taken from us in such a horrible manner, I was loathe to continue the ministry because I had blamed Father for taking Him from us. Yet, even though I was in terrible doubt concerning the mission we had all undertaken, I somewhat thoughtlessly fell into the steps of carrying on, and I am so glad I did. As I looked around at my fellow believers in Christ, I realized we were all on shaky ground and would need one another to deal with the horrible experience we had witnessed.

It is said that when you are in the midst of painful experiences, to keep on taking the steps forward as calmly as possible. In these times, keep your eyes on Father. Allow Him to lead you instead of the natural tendency of turning to the ego or rebellious rash 'animal mind.' As I look back over my years during my mortal life, I can see how each painful experience was like taking a step up; it was a seemingly long staircase, yes, but the wisdom therefrom was priceless.

I can tell you that Father is in complete understanding of the mortal mind. He wants not for you to feel regret over any bit of your decisions made as you travel through this time in the flesh. He does desire for us to keep taking steps and always have our eyes upon Him.

When faced with harsh decisions, keep in mind the Master's struggle to finally decide to drink the cup of come what may. Choosing escape, however, is not sinful, but it is not advancement either. It is most important to have a strong foundation of faith. Put your efforts into building that foundation and you will find mortal life to be more understandable and tolerable. Remember in your decision to drink the cup of come what may, to be patient and wait for the peace that follows.

That is all for this week. Know that we are available if you should call upon us. My gratitude is never-ending. I thank you for your most gracious intentions. From Abraham and myself, we send you with our love. Until next time, shalom.

Father's Seemingly Harsh Humbling Is For Our Strengthening
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-10-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I can appreciate your determination to follow through with those ideas you find to be as close to truth as possible. It is understood that you are each so busy just living your regular lives, and yet you will keep in mind the ministry and always make time for that. It is well. Thank you for coming to recharge the mind and spirit, to go again yet another week filled with Father's daily lessons and possibilities.

As you are maturing in spirit you will find that you need not the attention you once sought. Your years of faith have brought you to lean more upon the Father's will, than upon that desire for credit and ego-satisfaction. I do see how you each are learning to pause in daily circumstances to see if an experience might hold a lesson or perhaps a task.

In our younger days, we have desire to be seen as a hero. It is not terrible to be desirous of attention, no; but as we experience mortal life, we come to find that all our gifts come from the Spirit, and that to feel a closeness to Father in our daily work, is reward enough.

The closer we are to our First Source and Center, the more we want to be helpful to our fellows and care not for any credit. Our real satisfaction lies in that peace that only Father can bestow. He is our source of strength. He is our fuel to carry on wherein we learn those experiences that take us further into our eternal career.

I am MARY. It seems like a chaotic time on your world at this time, but I can see solutions already in progress. I am inspired by the kind hearts of mortals who are in small ways making the world better every day. It is a joy to meet with you again.

Hearing Abraham speak this evening, I am made to think of the apostles of Christ and how much they taught us. They were the forerunners of a historical time. While they were in their youth, spiritually, still learning side by side with the Master, they were good examples of what to expect as we begin a journey into the Father's ministry. We had seen their egos manifest among them - the best and worst that man has to offer.

I was indeed blessed to have known of the apostles after the Master's departure, and how effective (for the most part) their ministry was throughout the rest of their lives. Jesus bestowed upon them a great responsibility; and yes, sometimes man will interpret that feeling as if they are individually set aside as special, or chosen. Such is natural, yes; it happened in the early days of your group ministry, and here even now it still happens on occasion.

For the most part, life together in this Mission training has taught us that our mindal stillness is key to receiving from Father those gifts that give us wisdom and strength – yes, to make the most out of our mortal experience.

Going back to the days of the apostles, every lesson was something useable to the next generation. It was through tedious education from life's challenges that the apostles became wonderful ministers. The words of the Master may not have been passed on complete and accurate in every generation, but surely you can see how the best of truth, beauty, and goodness came from seemingly negative events. Yes, the majority of the world today has heard of Jesus Christ, the Savior; and how many generations down are you from those beginning days of the apostles?

It was a time of correction then, as it is now. Believe me, as you grow in spirit, your effectiveness as a minister to others will also grow. Just as the apostles learned those spiritual lessons – together, you also have had your group turmoil that has taught you those valuable lessons that advance you – mentally and spiritually.

You can see in your studies how stern the Master was with the apostles. He wanted them to speed up the learning time, not through the ego but to cut right to the Spirit; so He did say those direct words that would capture their complete attention. He had to be sharp with them, there was not much time and so much work to do.

In your humbling experiences, take that as an indication that your mind is needing stillness and that Father would like to assist you in your spiritual education. Sometimes life's uncomfortable experiences are the much-needed wakeup call to set the ego aside and listen. The Correcting Time is quite serious and a necessity for advancement, and it will seem harsh at times. I can promise you, my friends, that the efforts made in our Mission will bring about those fruitful results that the Master had planned.

This week if you should find time, ponder the lives of our beloved apostles. What might you have in common? Have you an ear for the Father's seeming harsh words – words that would turn your attention away from any kind of ego gratification, and toward getting down to the real work of the kingdom?

That is all for this evening. We are kept quite busy these days and are off to visit other brothers and sisters. Know that we send you with our love and always our offerings for any assistance you may need. Simply think of us and we will be there. Until next time, shalom.

Machiventa's Example And Teaching To Abraham About Really Listening

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-17-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am made lighter by your willingness to see and accept life for what it is. Knowing you has helped me to be a part of the modern world.

Being able to view your many opinions has helped me to look within myself to see what I really believe.

I can remember a day when I was not able to accept anything new. My rude countenance with others would show them that my mind was closed and that their words were no good here. I was really fearful of the changing world. I did not know if I could find my place in it. I almost feared that my intellect could not grasp the changes and find adjustment. I would exert my power in a forceful manner toward those that I dealt with, and I maintained an unchangeableness.

While I had my so-called 'comfort zone' I also put forth a tremendous amount of energy on keeping my world as I always knew it. You can't imagine my initial disbelief at the new teacher, Melchizedek. What a blessing Machiventa was to me in showing me how change always was, is, and will be, throughout worlds of evolution. He taught me how the Supreme Being relies upon change because this is the doorway to knowledge; and that that is how growth and advancement occurs.

I suppose Machiventa couldn't have found a more stubborn student; and yet, his patience kept urging me to keep trying - to have an open mind, and have not judgment. I really felt I became with new eyes. With these new eyes, the world seemed to be a blossoming rose that bestowed beauty with each perfect petal.

I began to look upon my brothers and sisters with compassion and love. I came to so enjoy my visits with my associates and family in the city; I would lose track of time and return home late in the evening. I began to see my loved ones as not separate from me, and not people in whom I controlled, no! they were also children of God on a path of spiritual education, just as I was.

Machiventa taught me by being unaffected, and was simply with an attitude of being interested in what I was saying. I would bring my drama to him and he always maintained the same look on his face, a little smile while keeping his eyes upon me. He would always respond back to me with wisdom and simple kindness. His questions to me would put me beside myself so I could then view my dramatic interpretation of my current situation and see how I had responsibility in the creation of it; and, how I could always make it better.

My years with Machiventa were spiritually fulfilling, and such a blessing, yes. Many memorable and historic times involved great teachers who, like Machiventa, would cause small ripples in the current mindset of the age; and from that, such spiritual assistance would result. We all know how easy it is to become absorbed in personal drama and lose sight of what brings fulfillment and joy. In our desire to find a place of ease, we are seemingly pulled away from challenges that would bring growth. I say, in the place of 'no effort,' is a place of neither joy nor sorrow - it is a stagnant existence.

Machiventa was wonderful at teaching people to listen - listen to what was really going on in a given situation. You can always find a spiritual current when listening; it closes off the chatter of the mind and links you with a direct line to receiving assistance from 'on high' in how you can relate with others. As I learned to be peaceful with others, or unaffected by drama and really listen to my fellows and loved ones, I could then be truly in the moment; I could do what I was supposed to do, say what I was supposed to say – to enjoy the moment, the connection with Father and other souls within the kingdom.

I also learn nonstop with you, my co-workers, friends – loved ones on this branch of our family tree. I am appreciative of your time, your talents, your input, your humor, and your willingness to open your mind to new adventures in the spirit. Well done.

That is all for this evening. Mary sends her regards. I am always in abundance with love for you each. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Beyond the Flesh are All Equal | What Is It We Truly Desire
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-24-2008
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am sensing a great deal of peace emanating from you when I would half-expect to view chaos, given events of your week. I love your humor and good nature. I am inspired by your willingness to turn your minds toward the Father and attain and redirect your personal energy. I thank you. I am always made happy by our gathering because it is a good opportunity to step away from the material life and simply be a child of God.

Can you imagine if all your material bodies were to fade away (along with material issues) and we are simply a room full of souls ready to listen and learn. That is a lot of what it is like when you pass through the material veil into the next and morontial adventures. We are blessed to have the knowledge the Correcting Time has brought because we are seeing into eternity – our material lives become just another day in what will be a long spiritual career in eternity.

I am MARY. Again, so grateful to be with you. I am in agreement with Abraham when he ponders the spiritual career; I know it is a giant step to even think about. I believe he is speaking of the blessings that are upon us because of the Correcting Time.

I have researched this present age and I am trying to find the core reasons of what drives the mortals of today. I see you are inundated with information readily available at your fingertips; I see the popularity lure of the materialistic drive. I am in understanding of how the world will create classes of individuals that support a segregation of sorts.

I am overjoyed to see the individual who comes to the Father and releases any notions of individual worldly status – meaning, you really feel a part of Father's kingdom and accept the fact that your fellows are your equal brothers and sisters. Yes, beyond the flesh, we are all equal; and it is that view we focus on when working on self-mastery.

Does the flesh drive your life, your wants, your needs? Are we fulfilled by what we acquire from the animal nature, or do we seek the attainment of spiritual fruit?

I can give to you my own experience of that burden of the material life: For the most part I had nothing, and in that day and age it labeled me – and unfortunately, I listened to that rhetoric. It is strange now to look back at the person I was in those early days and to know that I longed to be somebody else. I thought the people who were in material abundance were satisfied with the mortal life. I had not the sense of family and the possibilities of knowing I could be loved exactly as I was.

I thank Father every day for those sisters who came to minister to me. I rejected their words at first. They were so patient in helping me to at least open my mind to the possibility that I was part of an extended family. As I mingled among the brothers and sisters that were serving the cause for Jesus, I began to see my equality among them.

The ease of attitude that the Master bestowed was permission to go beyond my material eyes and find my worth as a child of God. At that time, I had to really look within myself to find what I truly desired. Was it money? a suitable partner? children perhaps? Was it recognition or fame? Or, was it the solid faith in knowing I was loved and had a fulfilling destiny before me – and that it was truly up to me which course I would choose!

As I was saying at the top of this discussion, what is it that drives mortals to live as they do? What is most important? The Father longs for your happiness and would never deny you your dreams. He is there to help in your quest for happiness and has carefully set before you various tasks to complete that will bring fulfillment. He desires for your vision however, to go beyond the needs of the flesh. Said the Master, “See first the kingdom of God and all things needful shall be added there unto.”

This week, let us pay attention to our levels of comfort in a crowd or with an authority figure perhaps. How does our comfort with the spirit actualize in our everyday lives? Tell me – in your own time, what drives you to carry on?

I am with growing love for you each. Abraham and myself are so appreciative of your willingness to go forward with the Correcting Time. We can each only look back and learn – let us not dwell there long. As always, we send you with our love. Until next time, shalom.

Our Focus On Love Moves Us Beyond Past Regrets and Our Material Focus
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-31-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I know how busy your lives are and I am grateful you take time and offer labor toward our Mission; you cannot see it but your efforts go far.

It is somewhat fascinating to watch the struggle among mortals to go between 'simplifying their lives' and 'materialism.' It is well known by now that the more material you have, the more energy you are required to pour into maintaining and protecting it.

You can find the balance by measuring joy against stress. ‘If I have a new car, how much energy must I put into protecting it? I worry about damage to it and forget how much I enjoy driving it.’ The more stress that takes space in our minds, the more energy it draws from us and decreases our capacity to receive Spirit direction.

I am happy to see you put into practice your beliefs by living as close as you can to the fruits of the Spirit. It is so cliché to say, but nonetheless, love really is a balanced barometer of what direction your life is going. Many individuals do mix fear and love, and say that they are indeed just being protective of their loved ones, and yet fear is their main motivator. I say, there is not peace in this! There are so many phony definitions of love, and it is easy to forget the true meaning.

I am MARY. Once again I am so happy to be among you. You may learn while I am speaking, but remember that I also learn while you are speaking. I thank you.

It is an additional joy to serve with my brother and friend, Abraham. As we have spent great amounts of time together, we have come to know one another and have found a mutual love and friendship for each other.

When I had first begun training with Abraham, I knew of his history and status as a mentor and manager of the Teaching Mission. I was somewhat nervous to begin my duty – but as time passed and stress subsided, I found a wonderful equality between us. He is a real brother and friend. I see you, likewise, as friends first, then co-workers – and that is truly beautiful. You know well that it did not start out that way. A great deal of experience between you each, helped to knock down barriers of fear and stress – and mutual love and friendship resulted.

As you look back over your experience in this Teaching Mission, what has been most valued? You each have had some regrettable experiences, yes, and yet you pressed on with faith. Your friendships has been an anchor in the stormy seas of mortal living; I am happy to be a part of that. What a blessing it is in this mortal life to attain experience and understand the meanings therefrom.

Over these past few years in our Mission, can you not feel some strength in your increasing faith? There is always the glimpse of the animal-self from time to time, yes, and that is to be expected. But over your years, what has outlasted all experience? What has been the most important? What is your greatest treasure?

I am talking about love, yes, and how we learn of the idea that it can go far beyond material items or damaged relationships – even past regrettable experiences perhaps. If we view love as our most valued possession, then we are more likely to put our energy into that – it then becomes no problem to simplify the material life.

I mean not to live as a beggar on the street, no, but to pay attention to where your focus is. Where is that focus going, and how much of your attention is it taking? Many mortals put their value in those experiences that add to their identity – and all in all, that is understandably selfish.

Those that don't truly believe they are a child of God will search their whole lives for identity, and that is where their energy will go; they will perhaps miss out on the experience of spiritual fruits – such as love, faith, kindness, hope, truth, and brotherhood. Not to worry, spiritual education may be delayed, yes, but Father wants for you to have abundance in this life. And now that the world is purging the old and looking toward the new, He would hope that you get the most out of your efforts.

This week, let us be watchful of where our energy is drawn. What is the measure of stress versus peace? Is your definition of love padded with other meanings – like fear and self-absorption?

That is all for this evening. Like Abraham said, we are with gratitude to you for efforts made to this break in your busy lives. I am with growing love for you each, as is your brother and friend, Abraham. Know that we are always on call. Until next week, shalom.

Machiventa Challenges Abraham To Change His Judgmental Attitude | Five Steps on How to Minister

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP

04-07-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am so thankful you set aside your agendas in favor of Father's will. Yes, our meeting is open for His will, not limited to ideas from the ego. We have all had our struggles with the ego in our attempts at working in this Teaching Mission; those lessons brought us to where we are now, and that is what makes our meeting-time unlimited. Our actual desire to see what the spirit has planned for us is simply wonderful, yes.

There comes a time in the maturing spirit when we have not desire to have attention or take credit, or have need to be noticed. The maturing spirit sees the Father's will as the best that could be in any given situation. I have many students; some are still stumbling and some are even more advanced than you. This just goes to show there is a process to be experienced, and that we are evolving creatures. Our flexibility is a real benefit in working in the ministry.

There was a time I had followed our traditional understanding of religion as perfectly as I could. There were rules to adhere to and laws to learn. Many of these beliefs were difficult to unlearn when the new Teacher arrived. I can remember walking through our village with Machiventa and showing him all the people of the town. There was a story that went along with each person which was somewhat a common knowledge. For examples: One man was the town drunk. Another man was cheating on his wife with a well-known woman of the town. One woman was a beggar and really made quite a good living – she was not as poor as she would have led us to believe.

As I directed Machiventa's attention towards these individuals, his face looked discouraged; he knew that I was quite judgmental, as were others. He asked me if I had ever reached out to befriend any one of these people – and I had not. Machiventa knew the real story behind each individual; why they were the way they were.

It is difficult to break certain habits that we have learned; my being judgmental, for example. Also, I had always believed I was 'better than' the average person. When I grew in spirit and began to mature, I saw these individuals through the eyes of the spirit and they were no longer the labels I had put upon them. I could feel love and kinship with them. The more I practiced changing my view, the more joyful I became. It opened up a door of new possibilities.

I began to actually minister to these individuals whom I thought were trapped in a certain condition of life due to their own choosing. Sometimes it was just by listening to them that could affect a change; and sometimes it was to simply speak openly and truthfully as an equal fellow sojourner. To the drunk man, I tried to tell him about the Father, and how "with Him all things are possible;" and if he would just take one step in Father's direction, Father would help him to take the other steps. I showed him brotherhood, and acceptance. Machiventa was right; I felt a connection, and true love began to set in.

To the woman who was a well-off beggar, I said: "Your secret is not a secret. We all know that you scam others to serve yourself. How much better would you feel if you had worked an honest day?" I asked her, "What are you gifted at?" She said she was gifted with numbers and I told her of several places she could go to put that gift to work - real work; not degrading, demeaning, or dehumanizing begging, but actual fulfilling and honest work. I did not know if she actually went for my pitch, but I did not see her much around after I talked to her.

I began to look for small things that would cause someone to also want to put forth effort into doing a good deed. An energy of good is a reality; it is something you can witness as a reality if you are around it.

Many years we have been in this Teaching Mission and learned a great deal together. You are capable of ministering to anyone who appears to need it. It is simple - five easy steps:

- The first step is to show that you care.
- The second is acceptance of that person as your brother or sister in the Father's kingdom family.
- Number three is to ask them what they would really want and what their gifts are.
- Number four: Speak to them about your faith and how Father has worked in your life. Let them know that all things are possible, and that life can change if you really want it to.
- And five: Point out some human resources that they can try to get the ball rolling, like when I had told the beggar woman of several businesses that could use someone who was good with numbers.

This week, let us think about our maturity in the spirit. What have we learned so far, and can we put it into practice? Can those old habits be broken?

That is all for this evening. Mary sends her love, as I do also. To us, you are a light that is ever dedicated to burning bright. Until next time, shalom.

The Power of the Family Group | To See With the Eyes of Faith Is To Act Without Emotion

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-14-2008

Back

Greetings. I am ABRAHAM. I have grown to love the essence of you as a family. You can look at each other as different, but believe me, somebody new would look at you as a family with similar traits.

When you have grown with a group of individuals for a time, the soul-connection with one another becomes obvious and anyone could tell what family you are from. It has been an honor for me to watch you evolve – as individuals, and as a family whole. When one person is down, the others are encouraging. When one person appears stuck, the others get them moving again.

I am reminded of the Master's mortal family; even though there was a great deal of chaos at times, there was so much wisdom to be gained from the experience. After Joseph had passed on and Mary was beside herself with grief, Jesus was able to uphold the family. As Mary became strong again, Jesus had His time to grieve. Love was the motivator of that family's success.

It seems as if the world is far from any unifying force, yes, but we can see many groups of individuals who continue to support and encourage one another to carry on.

When we think about the apostles, we can see that each man had his task, and one was not more important than the other. Whether they were delivering a sermon to the masses, or simply ushering them, it took each individual to bring forth success. I can see how you each relate with countless individuals on a daily basis.

A great deal of your education comes from direct divine communication – some from your textbook, and some from being around one another. I can see over these years how you have wanted to help each other more than judge one another; I am glad to be a part of that.

Our time spent here in group discussion helps us to go about the daily world with more strength and endurance. Our time spent here is a well of wisdom that we can dip into for experiences we have need of in our daily lives. You each have done well to be a positive support.

I am MARY. I also thank you for your willingness to fill in, so to speak, in any capacity. I would always encourage you to be positive, yes, but also, realistic – and allow information to filter through your intellect, not just your emotions. We know by now that body, mind, and spirit are connected, and how important it is to make effort to have balance in all three areas.

The Master had once said: "If a man believes, then let him act like it." – which I take to mean that all information we receive is not simply about emotions but also about needing to be brought back to our foundation from which our faith was built. It is understandable that mortals tend to act from emotions. We stand at the beginning of eternity – and if we really believe it then we would do well to act with a little less emotion and be able to share with others a logical faith.

You that have made effort to grow in the spirit also know how powerful Father is and nothing is ever final. Many in the world today will succumb to depression upon hearing about negative events, and they ask: "Where is God?" You that are seeing with the eyes of faith know there is no need to be overwhelmed by anything, especially emotions.

I am so fortunate to have spent time with the Master. He had taught me a lot about keeping an eye on my emotions and allowing the spirit to make direct contact with me. In a highly emotional state, it is almost impossible to have direct contact with the spirit, and easy to be overwhelmed with hopelessness.

If a person is one of faith, then by all means, act that way, for you have each seen too much to go back now. You have been through too much to find those surface-levels of life satisfactory. I am grateful you take learning these life lessons in stride and often use humor to create balance.

This week think about how the group provides balance for you as an individual. How does the group-setting work in other areas of life? What are the steps one can take to remaining calm in the face of a storm? If one is with faith, then how may they display that in everyday-life events? What are some examples?

That is all for this evening. Again, we are appreciative of that essence that is our family. Thank you for having us. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Learning To Tame The Out-Of-Control Ego | On The Mountain-Top We View The Sea of Everything

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-21-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am feeling such serenity from this loving bunch of people this evening. I find that in the calmness it is easier to transmit the weekly message. I am so happy to have gotten to know each of you – your personality type and your basic attitude toward life. You help me to deal with certain difficulties with various mortals.

In knowing your struggles and viewing how you handle them, I learn what it is like to be a mortal in this day and age. I believe that you each also learn a great deal from one another that helps you in your communications with others. Mortal life is so much about communication and having understanding. Said Jesus: “The more you understand your brother, the more you love him.”

As growing mortals, you can see how your self-esteem would play a large part in your lives. Those who find little value in themselves tend to think others have not care for them. Mortals who have a balanced esteem are more open to believe that others have their best interest at heart.

We are learning to tame the ego; and unfortunately, it sends us a great deal of messages about who we are. In this evolving world, the ego doesn't work as it was planned to in the first place. The ego was designed to protect early man in the wilderness. The ego told man to continue to procreate and help the species survive; so the ego was then somewhat of a protector. Now we find many mortals' egos have been groomed to embrace selfishness and to chase after those ideals that feed the ego; then they wonder why there is still the feeling of turmoil within, and a burning un-fulfillment.

You in the Teaching Mission stand on a mountaintop and can see all directions – you can actually view the sea of everything. In these tumultuous waters, there are many ideas that individuals impatiently grab onto to stay afloat and to have themselves carried to a new shore.

You with the Urantia Book and its hours of study – along with your countless hours of sitting and listening to me disseminating a lesson every week – are standing on this mountaintop; you know you have many choices and directions available. The ego would have you jump into that sea of confusion and grab on to something that will make you feel good about being alive. Your Mission training, however, would have you wait in patience and calm for that assurance of Father's guidance.

The trait you each possess in this group as a family is your love for truth – you demand it, and nothing else will do. I am so touched by this faith and steadfastness. You know from experience that swimming in that sea of everything brings only temporary ego-fulfillment. Newness in haste may brighten your attitude for a while, yes; then there is that flicker of light from the Spirit of Truth and you are once again back on that mountaintop where we patiently view with Father's timing.

We can dwell in the midst of materialism – and worry about things that are temporary and food for the ego to lift your attitude for a time, yes; but eventually you feel sick from the sweet emptiness and crave something more nutritious and filling. So what are we to do upon that mountaintop where the air is clear and the truth is apparent? Our tasks from Father become more obvious, and we are helping other brothers and sisters emerge from that sea of everything where there is not clarity – to experience the clarity of truth from the higher viewpoint.

Our lesson is short this evening, but our friendship and love is never-ending. Always do I pray for your best. Mary sends her regards and we both send you off with our love. Until next time, shalom.

Rise Above Those Surface Levels of Materialism, of What the Eyes Can See

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-28-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enthralled by your topics of discussion this evening. I enjoy the higher-mindedness in this group. What a beautiful freedom to be able to speak your mind with your own personal spiritual twist. It is unfortunate that sometimes in regular life we wear a mask and only allow people to see what we want them to; it is understandable in those interactions where using higher-mindedness is not common or welcome to your fellows. I find that you each have a wonderful common sense about you.

I am MARY. Greetings to you, my friends. In observing you, I have learned so much. I am made to go back into my mortal life and remember some of the struggles and triumphs.

I do remember my first meeting with the Master. I had my ideas of Him– His character, His notoriety– and I was going to see for myself who He was. I indeed had my doubts, and upon meeting Jesus that first day I thought He was a bit cold or reserved. I observed He made like He was interested in sharing a conversation and yet, not pushing it on me or begging me to believe. But even in this, I felt peace; I felt freedom to question and research for myself.

I asked Him, "Who are you, really?" He replied: "Child, allow time to go by and you will understand me by feeling the growth of your spirit." He was happy and smiling. His eyes sparkled with relaxation and assurance that Father is moving and is living among us. I was made to smile as well, and I left Him that day taking with me a new joy and peace that I desired to share with others; and I did join with his group of followers.

As I did daily chores among my new friends in the ministry, I was feeling joyful to talk with my new sisters. We mostly laughed, but sometimes we would dip into that higher-mindedness and go above the surface-levels of materialism and what the eyes can see. It was a joyful and exciting feeling. There was not pressure to conform or to recruit; it was a simple happiness in just living, just trusting, just allowing.

There were difficult times, no doubt, but the vibrant spirit of the Master was always there to see us through; always there to give us that confidence we needed to move about in a world that has limited belief systems. We had not need for piety or for association with strange unknown things to make us feel important, no; I believe you know what I am talking about.

This week, I recommend we renew our relationship with Christ; His Spirit of Truth is creating a spiritual cleansing, so to speak. We can get busy with the inner-workings with that Spirit - and with joy, simply forget the busyness of living. You know every person you speak with is somebody who is attracted to that light within you. You need not push light upon them. You simply need to live by example.

Renewing your relationship with Christ will remind you of your reason for being. Let Him teach you. Let Him show you that life is not a battlefield, but a beautiful landscape with mountains, valleys, and adventures to be had. Go forth into the week with the strength of the Spirit of Truth.

That is all for this evening. I am feeling so blessed each time I can meet with you. You have indeed made my world more beautiful. Abraham and I send our love with you. Until next time, shalom.

Renewing our Relationship With Christ Helps Us to Take On Increasing Mission Tasks
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-05-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am grateful to view your reliance upon faith. I am grateful for your open-mindedness and how you allow the message to unfold. It becomes more apparent as you advance in the spirit that you are strengthened to do things you have never even thought of doing before.

This past lesson we were working towards renewing our relationship with Christ. We can see how many situations in daily living would create great upset for you. You have each learned to look within, to look at the larger picture and rally your emotions to a place of calm.

As we become closer to the Spirit of Truth, we are assigned new tasks that could cause us some angst. As you further your spiritual education, Father does indeed set up new operations for you to experience. With each experience, we draw closer to Father and our Spirit of Truth. When we study the apostles, can we not see how they were strengthened over time. I can say that many of them accomplished great things, they helped a great many people.

The world is ever-changing, and I promise you, if I was in the flesh today, I would be quite nervous. You have so much to absorb and interpret and to act upon. I can understand your hesitation to take up new things. When I say new things - I mean taking the initiative to right some small wrong or maybe help somebody in some small act of kindness. Perhaps you have repetitive thoughts of getting involved in some community function, and fight with that thought as it comes.

You Teaching Mission participants are going to have even further assignments if you want them. Your desire to do the right thing is a part of the Spirit of Truth's influence; it is a live connection into overcoming fear and gaining strength.

We can remember the water coming up on the beach, and only daring to wet our feet - feeling fearful of what cannot be seen; such is our beginning involvement in Michael's Correcting Time Mission. The connection with our Brother/Father--former man and Creator Son--is a source of love and comfort; but above all that, He is pure logic.

We can understand the experience of the apostles working side by side with the Master and learning His ways. The apostles were only with Jesus a short time, yes, but in that time, they certainly grew much, both spiritually and mentally. Having known the Master, they could take on much more than they could actually envision for themselves. Like them, Father may assign you tasks to complete, yes, but the Master actually empowers you to get the job done.

Many times in mortal life we must be beside ourselves, looking at life through the eyes of an observer and come to understand what all these annoyances, irritations, and instances of injustice are supposed to be. This is the mortal experience, like it or not. Remember when facing challenge, we can do all things in Him who gives us strength.

This week again, spend time with Michael and be conscious of your thoughts of newness or desires to do good. Know that many times the Master requires your assistance, and that He gives you what you need to take on any task. Look over these past years and see how your levels of fear have diminished, and how your courage has increased. Yes, "I can do all things in Christ who strengthens me."

That is all. I am with appreciation for you, dear ones. Mary sends her regards and we both send you with our love. Until next time, shalom.

Doing Our Part to Display a Positive Energy That Outweighs the Negative
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-12-2008
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I want to express my deep and abiding love for each one of you. Sometimes as coworkers, friends, brothers and sisters, we can take one another for granted; and from time to time it is well to speak of what is in your heart. What is in my heart is sincere love and devotion to you each. I am puzzled by your busy lives and always amazed at how much you can endure. Your resiliency is inspirational to me and my close associate Teachers.

I am renewed in hope when I can be witness to your attitude of faithfulness and your being unaffected by fearful events. I have spent time with many of you this week and I am so happy to see your calm methods of sharing the good news. When you look back at those natural unfolding events that just happen to come into play, you can see how much Father is involved. You are a peaceful light to those who sit on the edge of darkness.

I am MARY. I am honored to be part of your family. I can relate to your efforts in sharing the good news. When there are so many seemingly negative events in the world it is important that you, as Teaching Mission participants, point out the positive. It is true that negative energy spreads so much faster than positive energy; I am not quite certain as to why; maybe positive notions are to be found 'within,' and that takes time and effort.

As we are learning to tame the ego, we are feeling as if we can share the truth in love – love for our Brother/Father, and love for our First Source and Center. When we are first grabbed by the truth, we are wanting to share the good news in a forceful way, almost as if to say 'follow me' – which is, as we know, a mistake. Our maturing spirits would have others follow our Brother/Father, our Guide to Father.

I can remember feeling a firm foothold in the truth of the Master's teaching; and, I remember looking at others who may not have that truth, as 'poor souls.' My thinking was, 'I held the truth and therefore, I could save them.' It was painful to have people brush me aside as I tried to give my testimony to the truths I had learned. It was a feeling that 'I was special,' and the good news was secondary. I felt they were rejecting 'me' – not, they were rejecting 'the good news.'

I had told the Master of my negative experiences in sharing what I had learned – and He was, as always, so understanding and fairly gentle with His words to me. He said: "When you are feeling a family connection in the kingdom, then sharing the gospel is not about saving others, but feeling the joy of what you have learned, and 'this' is the attraction that others see."

My friends, if you should set yourself above them as privileged by knowing some secret way, then individuals you speak to pick up on this energy and are put off by it. When you can make others feel a part of the family, then do spiritual sparks fly between you. It has nothing to do with judging others' spiritual levels, no – it has everything to do with small acts that show kindness, or can bring a smile, or send out a positive and inviting energy.

The chaotic energy that once traveled the circuits is becoming more organized, and this 'new' is reaching the Supreme Being; we are within reach of feeling the fruits of His growth.

I am with wonderful memories of walking among the townspeople and greeting them by name and simply having a joyful time, open to tasks that Father may have for me. It was my relaxation and release of the desire to control situations or to be the enlightener of others, which was most helpful in my ministry.

This week, while events may seem to burden you, pray – pray that you allow not the negativity to reflect in your words to others. Father always brings out an ultimate good in any situation.

I believe I learned a great deal from Simon Peter in his later ministry years; He was so enthusiastic to share the gospel and give to others that joy he felt within. He had learned through experience, and a few harsh words from the Master, that some words must be carefully chosen. Peter brought a great many souls into the kingdom as he learned to refine his methods of preaching. He took a great deal of teasing from all of us and always took it well and laughed along. He was quite inspirational to many; of course he had a wonderful Teacher.

Our time is up, but next week I would offer a time for questions should you have the need. I also express my never-ending love for each of your wonderful personalities. Abraham and I send you with love. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Always Find Joy and Adventure in Life | The General and His Mask of Perfection
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-19-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a joy it is to look upon your sweet faces. I am feeling so at home. We are among loved ones – and with that, we cannot go wrong.

As we are teaching throughout the world, we are finding some people are coming to a more spiritual realization; they are finding that life must be dealt with, not escaped from; it is the reason we have been born on this experiential planet. I have also found many are having difficulties dealing with life experiences and are losing sight of the reason we carry on. I am with understanding of individuals who are simply overwhelmed and feeling weak and worthless.

I had a friend who was what you would call a general in the armies, and who made great effort to live a life of perfection. Any failure on his part was unacceptable and he was very much with self-punishment. He had loved ones at home who depended on his ability to provide. They had a wonderful home and many friends. He was well respected by his peers.

This general however, had worn such a mask of perfection that his ego had not allowed any understanding of life's failings; he grew tired. Being exhausted from all his efforts to be the embodiment of perfection, the general took his own life. He would rather be gone from this material body than admit to anything that simply needs to be dealt with. This man is fine, presently; have not worry. We find that a great many individuals are exhausted, as was he, and also are seeing their life as failure.

I would say that each life experience is very important, yes; and yes, there are issues you must face and handle to gain that strength and character needed. I could very well have ended up like my friend, the general. Melchizedek was so healing for my soul; He taught us that life is a series of issues that are put before us so that we can learn and advance, and that Father is always calling us through these experiences.

You can imagine a child learning to walk with her arms up, holding the parent's hands, taking a step, daring to take another step, and then a smile for the realization of new things. The child is daring to release her parent's hands and falls. Yes, she will fall many times, but she must keep going, trying, advancing, and realizing that this is what we do here on planet Earth.

There has been a great deal of chaos and devastation in the world as of late; and believe me, these affected individuals are not alone – the Spirit of Truth shines His light and exposes the injustices and the nefarious ways of those causing the chaos and devastation. It is a collective falling down, and there will be an ultimate good that comes forth. Believe me, I have seen the devastation first hand. These individuals that were affected are okay – have not worry, we have provisions for all.

Great changes can come from tragedies, unfortunate as they are. Life will be life, and Father will bring out an ultimate good if you can stand by, take his hand, and dare to take that step of faith and trust. Feel the rush of adventure in front of you – knowing that each lesson you learn draws you heavenward. Life is not to beat upon your spirit, no; yet it is your responsibility to find the joy and the adventure in life.

Yes, my friends, allow the Spirit of Truth to shine His light on issues that may cause you to have stumbling. He is a wonderful Teacher, our Master – an inspiration and reason to carry on. Have not worry about failings. Have courage to face what you believe to be disappointing and work toward a resolution, for this is what we do. Mary is with us this evening and we are prepared to take your questions. Feel free to talk to either of us. Proceed.

MARY P.: I'd like to know what you meant when you said something like, 'you would be worried if you were us.'

ABRAHAM: I understand. Yes. I spend time with many of you in your busy lives. You have so much today that you face. Communications are everything. You can know what is happening around the world in a minute. In my era, we had times of war and upset, yes – but overall, life became fairly easy – I don't want to say mundane or monotonous, but predictable. We didn't, in my era, deal so much with drug abuse, politics, homosexuality issues, gangs, guns, and the never-ending blasting of information in your face. I am exhausted just talking about it. [group laughter.] I would like to say, I am inspired by your courage to keep trying to make the world a better place. I mean to say you are handling what comes before you very well, and by my not having observed and understood your experiences I would not be adapted to your way of life and have attained any skills to deal with so many issues. I do feel inspired by each one of you who face these difficulties. Know that an ultimate good will come forth. You all keep trying and I am so inspired. Good question. Have you another?

CALVIN: To either one of you: You talked about the Spirit of Truth the last two lessons. I am still sometimes so at a loss as to what are 'truth-bells' ringing for me – or what is just mist-trust or 'suspicion.' Things just don't add up sometimes, and I have erred so many times on the side of suspicion. Maybe you have some words to help me to discern truth better.

ABRAHAM: Certainly, I can try. The Spirit of Truth is the Master. He has a tremendous love for His children and is sincerely desiring for correction. The Master seeks not for one's immediate perfection, no! but that one is moving toward perfection. But He will not tolerate injustice; He tends to bring out issues to the masses, or to Father's children, personally, so that injustice is exposed. I do see your problem is a result of personal events from many years ago. I am with the belief that you have not confidence in yourself and see not your worth. "Why would anybody love me?" you think; and this is where the suspicion comes in. It is self-sabotage, no doubt. I seriously would brush it away – don't even think about it. I receive instructions to say, let it go. You are a growing spirit, and I have seen you reach and embrace truth. I would hang on to your growing maturity from your many years of challenging lessons and compare how productive your moments of suspicion were, versus when you have exercised faith. Do you understand how when a person may grow out of something – they overcome? I believe you are experienced enough to brush these feelings aside and rely on your years of experience. Again, which was more productive – your suspicion? or faith! I am so honored to work with you, my son. We have been together many years. You have taught me a great deal and I am very much enjoying our friendship. You are doing well. Have not worry.

ARANDA (Annette): I am so happy to chat with you and thank you for all the lessons. I have a question about physical pain. One part, how can I deal with it; and the other question is about my eyes and if I have to go for another surgery. This is a very risky surgery and otherwise, I have to live like I am now. Could you help me with this?

ABRAHAM: Of course, I understand. I very much understand physical pain. I am understanding some of your pain still stems from your mind and the emotional hurt you have experienced over these past few years. You are wondering sometimes – if you had done something else would your life have still been intact. I say to you, my dear, you had done nothing wrong and you are sincere and faithful. You cannot change the fact that others will choose a path of darkness; no, you cannot change that. You can, however, accept the fact that you deserve good things. You deserve to set your fear aside and truly live. Dare to step out and not worry so much about daily needs. Dare to step out and find real love. Allow yourself that, and I can say that your physical pain will diminish a great deal. Your vision, however – I would recommend that you follow through with your physician. If you are not with comfort, there must have been a mistake in the diagnosis. I would definitely recommend you seek further medical attention. You do not have to live with such a burden, my daughter. You have so much to offer the world. You are a great teacher. Have not worry. Allow yourself good things. That is all. Another question?

SARAUNA: Abraham, I know this might sound strange, but oftentimes I think of you and Mary and I try to understand – how do you see your horizon? Like your horizon of the near future, or what you look toward; can you tell us about that in a way that we can understand what you see.

ABRAHAM: That is acceptable and understandable. My outlook is seeing a great deal of souls buzzing with energy and happiness. I see people all the time with faces of surprise when they have learned something new. We are very much with a horizon you can understand, very much like yours. We have work. We have fun. We have rest. We have time for education. We have time to volunteer. Mostly (in our realm) we are driven by an inner desire I cannot explain. There is no clock on the wall. We need not rush off to an appointment. I can awaken from my rest and I see a great deal of colors – beautiful yellows, bright blues, and flowers and beautiful trees. I am always with the feeling of new growth, for new growth is always happening. I am energized by that. I thank you, Sarauna. You are a sweet individual.

TECTRA: This might take me a bit to get to my question. A friend of mine was over last night. We had a wonderful dinner. She is a Urantia Book reader and works with people, an energy worker. She was asking me to ask you about entities. I know from the Urantia Book that when Jesus sent all these beings off the planet and that we have freewill, but what about people who have no idea about the Urantia Book? Can something be created in one's mind that creates some kind of negative energies that turns into something sinister? Do you kind of get the gist of what I am saying?

ABRAHAM: Yes, yes – you've given the question and answer all in one – I am impressed. I do believe when it was said: "If you should truly desire to be in the presence of evil, yes, that evil can be created." Not entities so much, but more-so out of the 'animal mind' – it can be very dark, but not 'evil demons.' There are many different branches of service in the spiritual realm. Human 'fear' is why many of these spirit or morontial entities don't make themselves known, because mortals do have such a fear of the unknown as 'being of evil.' We would see a great more activity by midwayers and such if we did not have this human/animal fear. I do believe that with the first breath of fear, the imagination can open to a scary realm. Mortals must believe in what is the more powerful – good, or evil! and come to a realization of what is the foundation of their faith? Is the evil able to overcome Christ? or even angels? No! The fear is a trap in one's imagination; and of course, we all know where that can go. I am enjoying your question. I thank you for having been such a wonderful support to your friend. You are indeed a light to those who know you. Well done.

I am with the desire to stop for worry I may make mistakes. I do want to tell you that Mary and I are so touched by your level of faith and devotion. You have not any idea how far you have spread the positive gospel. It's wonderful.

MIRIAM: Abraham, you said last week that you didn't want us to take for granted how much you loved us and you showed us that. I know I speak for everyone here – we are so grateful and love you both so much. It is huge what you do for us every day. So thank you.

ABRAHAM: I thank you. We enjoy your personalities. We are like proud parents. I am with great love for each one of you. You are resilient and always going forward. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom. [No Meeting May 26, 2008.]

Find the Beauty Of Life and In Life And In Service | Michael's Correcting Time Updates

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-02-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How fortunate are we to have one another. We share our lives in many ways. There is a genuine concern for each member of our group, and that truly signifies 'family;' I am honored to be a part of that.

I have been out sightseeing, so to speak. I am in awe of the beauty of nature. I can see why many individuals take to gardening. It is spiritually renewing when we can work with the Earth. I believe that natural beauty causes one to think of a Creator. Our Creator has filled in every detail of this world's natural beauty, but this is only a drop in the ocean of His many creations universally.

When you can see Father in the natural beauty of the Earth, or in other wonderful happenings that may occur in daily living, there are chemicals released in the brain that causes one to feel at ease. We speak a great deal on truth and goodness, yes, but rarely have touched on beauty. In my experience I see beauty as a direct line to worship.

Witnessing small acts of kindness is a most simple form of beauty, and is another cause for chemical release and feelings of comfort and peace; there are activities within the brain that commingle with the mindal circuits and truly do help in the everyday busyness of living. Volunteering also is an act of beauty wherein there is a feeling of souls opening toward one another. How strange it is to not feel such abundance in beauty when you are in a mode of giving.

All of your training and progress up to this point is a beautiful gift that is to be extended to others who might not feel a real part of this world or of any community. I am grateful at the fact that many of you have much more acceptance for those that are different from you - and this is truly beautiful. Progress like this is how we can measure the success of the Correcting Time.

We have had gatherings as of late amongst those on our side who teach and are in some way connected to the Correcting Time. Michael Himself tells us of the progress made in many areas of the world; for example:

- Gender equality is finally coming to the front of the people's minds and they are made to be open to new thought or policies.
- Race is also a factor in the top issues of society. The world's people are having to learn to live with one another in spite of the cultural differences.
- As well, religion has been a topic as of late too, and individuals who are traditionally trained are now learning that they need not a middleman to reach a higher power.
- New relationships are being formed with Father and old relationships are being redefined.
- We are also seeing science embracing a bit more compassion. Scientists are considering the possibilities of a higher power in the past and present discoveries; this will help with new technology.

Hopefully, the emotional individuals of the world can come to terms with having a little logic in society's hot topics. Michael has expressed His views of the Correcting Time, and He sees much more growth than expected. He is calling in reinforcements, so to speak, to handle the overflow of mindal energy. Today's society is really quite smart and can do a great deal of good when they stop to view the positive and beautiful things of life.

This week, ponder the real definition of beauty. How does it speak to your soul? Does it matter that what you find beautiful, is not to somebody else? Find time for stillness, yes, for there are universal broadcasts going out daily. Spend time with natural beauty – the things that feed the soul. I will have you know I find each one of you quite exquisitely beautiful. Your lives and your efforts to set an example, or live the Master's example, is truly touching.

Mary will be here next week. Until then, she sends her love, as do I. Until next time, shalom.

Life Is `For Us` Not `Against Us` | Allow Michael To Show Us The Value In All Our Experience

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-09-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a beautiful crowd this evening. I am honored to be counted as one of you, working for the cause of our Brother/Father, Michael. I am always touched by your steadfastness in making this meeting a reality. You help to bring Father a step closer to those who know you. You make Father understandable and set an example of using spiritual skills in everyday living – well done.

I am MARY. I am delighted to be with you this evening. I also have been studying various cultures and am becoming enlightened to the world as it is today. I can see each individual as having a role to play in their lives within their culture, community. I am inspired by those who have experienced the worst in mortal life and still are beaming with hope.

I am also realizing those who have been bitten by life are hesitant of fully experiencing it as it is. I can say from my own experience, I had such dread of fulfilling certain daily tasks that would require socializing. I had judged people as instantly being critical of me just by the way I looked or acted – when in reality, that was not happening. When misfortune seemed to strike, I had to blame somebody or have some excuse for a reason to continue to be bitter. It would seem as if life's experiences would bury me with anger and despair.

Listening to the Master's lessons, I had realized I needed to take responsibility for my own actions – my own thoughts. I realized I would ruin some situation even before I began to experience it, just with my negative thinking. The Master made me to feel a part of the grand family, and I learned that immediate judgment in any situation was a selfish draw of energy – it was to continue in being a victim.

I seriously admired the Master's ability to detach from drama or emotion; to logically dissect a problem and be open to Father's solutions. What a comfort to know that Father is so close that there is literally nothing to fear; nothing so insurmountable that you can't view a larger horizon. In improving my connection with my internal Father, I felt empowered to use my spiritual skills in everyday life. Yes, I could live my beliefs and feel that logic the Master portrayed.

It is said: "This life is only a day in eternity - live it well." I can see how Father works in various situations of life, but that doesn't mean I will always be blissful. I still feel great emotions and am still learning to take hold of the larger picture and know that somebody very powerful and all-inspiring is watching over me. Jesus was, and is, all about empowerment. He is about showing us how to go into any circumstances in our daily experiences with the knowing that there are educational messages; and, depending on your level of spiritual advancement, that you would receive what you would need.

This week, let us ponder on our realization of responsibilities we take in this life. Do we answer to our accountability? Do we live to our highest truth? How can we help others who are drowning in victimhood? I would also say that care for the physical body is helpful for the mind and spirit. I believe that you know what to do to take care of the body. Lack of nutrition is harmful to the mind and creates static to receiving spiritual help. I will stop there.

I want you to know how my love is growing for each one of you. I really do know you. I have a bond that will last for a long time to come. Abraham agrees. And with that, we send you with our love and offer to visit with you throughout the week. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Our Family Connectedness As Kingdom Members Helps Us to Keep Grounded

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-16-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always feeling so blessed by your presence. Your hopeful outlook makes me feel hopeful. Your seeking of solutions to various human problems does inspire me. Your portrayals of kindness touches me, and I am fortunate enough to see how far the acts of kindness ripple outward. Our relationship is important because it creates energy to the God-mind.

It is written that 'man was not meant to live a solitary life.' Your human connections are important and does help to make you feel connected to the kingdom, the family. It is well understood that you must live by faith with the eyes of the spirit. Human connections do help you find your spiritual connection. Of course, there are acquaintances that cause you to have anxiety and drive you from the spirit, but we can view this as exercise for our spiritual muscles.

'Like spirits' (individuals who share a want for the highest good) bring about an energy when they gather, and actually drive the planet to progress. They help the cosmic mind to connect and the Supreme Being to grow. You may not have many deep relationships in a day's passing - but instead, have many individuals you can greet on a daily basis with a smile and a good word. This human connection helps you to feel a part of the kingdom, and also helps the planet to move toward Light and Life.

I am MARY. Indeed is it a blessing to meet with you again. I am in agreement with this evening's topic. I can understand the difference between isolation and connection. I used to believe that the desire to connect on some human level was a sign of weakness or neediness. It was not clear to me that human relationships helped me to stay grounded in reality and connected to a correct spiritual thinking.

It was obvious at first how my shyness kept me from creating human connections; I had feelings of inadequacy and worried what others were thinking. As I sat at the Master's feet and learned how all of Father's children were completely equal, I could open up more and feel good about who I was, and go about the ministry feeling connected.

"Where two or more are gathered, there am I also," said Jesus. Most of your human connections invite the Spirit of Truth and a higher mind to be involved with the conversation.

This week, be aware of those individuals you come across that have an inviting spirit about them. Have for them a smile or a good word. Also, ponder those bridges you have burned. It is not that difficult to make amends and to feel not that regret which has caused separation. Pick up a phone and call some people you have not talked to for a while. Know that they'd love to hear from you. This week will be about improving our human connections to strengthen our spiritual connections.

Know that Abraham and I are always with ever increasing love for you each. Our Woods Cross group is taking a break from our weekly meeting to give our transmission-receiver, Ellanor, a well-earned rest. Until next time, shalom. [No meeting through till August 23rd this year.]

Face Our Disappointments And Handle Them With Honesty

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-23-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Welcome back. It is with great joy for me to be among you once again. I feel our time apart has been productive in that each one of us has experienced personal growth by learning self-honesty. One can delay lessons when lies are believed - and that is acceptable, yes. You that have committed to the Correcting Time, however, must 'take in' these personal lessons to be able to teach and spread the good news.

It is really quite valuable when one learns to face disappointments and handle them with honesty. As truth-seekers, we must see reality for what it really is and try to become somewhat emotionally unaffected. For an individual who is prone to believe in false positive thoughts, then when reality really does strike, depression is all the more devastating, reality seems brutal, and Father seems to be out of reach and cruel.

Yes, if you are willing to face your life with honesty - then are your emotions more likely to stay on an even keel because life is more balanced and the blows of disappointment are not so devastating. The summer break was somewhat of a spiritual cleansing. I realize after so many years of study we need time for our minds to make sense of the lessons. As mortals we need to be able to apply the spiritual skills you have learned in our regular daily living.

I believe over our summer recess we have each learned there is no hurry in attaining spiritual understanding. You have eternity, and Father wants your experience to be something you have desire for, not something forced or something you feel you must sacrifice yourself for.

I also believe that we have developed much more appreciation for one another in our spirit family. You each are in understanding of one another's beliefs, for the most part, and accept each other in your most basic selves. I see your experiences as of late and I am also reminded of a group of individuals who served with the Master and came to the same understanding that you have each come to, and that is - we are seeing how important it is to think of Jesus as 'the door.' He is the potential to actualities; He gives us fresh eyes and opens our capacity to receive insight as it is.

It is touching to see you celebrate His birth, year after year, and I have taken great joy from such events. I am in gratitude for each one of you in your participation and ability to carry on. Know that we are looking forward to this season of coming spiritual adventures with you.

That is all for this evening. Know that I am very much pleased with your presence, and that Mary and I look forward to more interaction. Until next time, go in peace. Shalom.

Our Mission Is About The Ever-Expanding New
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-08-2008
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am filled with such comfort to look into your beautiful faces. I have indeed missed you and your discussions on current events and the like. You make my task easy because you keep the spiritual life in perspective with balance of logic, love, and laughter.

I believe those who know you see you as a light of comfort and peace. You are a wonderful display of spirituality and yet, you are continually growing with common sense. Your open way with others helps them to make sense of what is occurring in the world around them.

It would seem that these times bring us to a place of 'forced awareness' wherein we are seeing a great many societal issues come into the light. Of course many will make a judgment and take a stand from where their belief system is set. It is important to you as teachers to make your minds clear from time to time. Allow the spirit to minister to you and keep your faith and hope alive.

You can become overwhelmed with too many tasks - too much responsibility. And of course when you have let your commitments slip, then self-loathing becomes easy and nothing good can come from that. In the stillness of the mind, Father strengthens you with new ideas - different aspects of ways of life that have otherwise become mundane or causing irritation.

Perspective is very important to you that try to live a life in the spirit. If you see our Mission as stagnant, for instance, and never moving into some sort of noticeable action – then that is what you will get. In this, your hope decreases, your connection is not the same. With a negative outlook, you cannot be open to receiving new spiritual information. This is why we recommend meditation or stillness – the spirit is always fresh and in the moment.

The human mind tends to hold fast to habits. We must see our Mission as cutting through the wilderness, making a new path. Together, we are removing fallen logs and boulders, battling thorns and insects; and still, we are finding new things to do upon the path. Even though life appears to be the 'same old struggle' – those who are empty vessels and open for Father's perspective will be filled with the new.

You know we, as a society, are overloaded with information, and it is well to be learning and growing; but when stress results, then we need to pull back and go within and find that Fragment who sustains us in all things. Can you imagine now, living without faith? the hopelessness and darkness that would result therefrom would be completely devastating. Those who are faith-filled know that there is nothing of value without our Father. "I am nothing without my Father. With Father, I am with endless possibilities and always in a state of becoming more and more."

Mary and I are excited in embarking on this new season with you. Our time apart from you, our students, has not necessarily given us rest, but has made us come to life with new realizations – realizations about the world and ourselves. It is easy to become discouraged, yes, and that is why we exercise faith. One fine way to do that is to read up on your Urantia textbook – what a refreshing feeling to be reminded of the hope that is living inside this epochal revelation. Yes, study is good. Stillness is good.

We are buzzing with excitement at the new ideas developing even as we speak. This week, during our casual conversations, let us try to stick to lessons learned in the spirit and help one another to exercise faith. Mary will be here next week with us. She sends her love, as do I. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Going With the Natural, as Opposed to Struggle, In Our Spiritual Education
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-15-2008
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a treasure we have here to be able to gather and create. We do share a great deal of comfort from knowing one another and understanding how to integrate the mortal and spiritual life. As we become more experienced we can see the value of hardship and the meaning that comes from knowing the Father.

What a difference any single experience can have over a person. Time is not so much a factor as is experience. I can say I can track my advancement in the spirit by the events I have experienced throughout my eternal career. I can say I am different today than I was yesterday – and whether that is bad or good, I know not. I am, however, increasingly grateful to know for certain that almost everything is in a state of evolution; and the one thing we can count on is Father, who is always there in all things.

I am MARY. I am joy-filled to be with you, my friends. I am with continuing hope and excitement to see you each make effort to master the mortal life. I understand that many mortals believe they are shaped by their experiences; but when they learn to embrace the life of the spirit, they learn they can actually shape experience.

I have had so far, a wonderful spirit career and have learned so much about Father and His many universes, but I am always drawn back to this experimental planet and how all the intricacies of life fit together. The nature alone on this planet is mindally expansive and leading us deeper into the personality of the Father. The more I know, the more I want to know. I feel fueled by the unveiling of Father's plans and how everything works to show how well we are taken care of.

I do remember a time when allowing nature its course was simply an inconvenience – something to be tolerated or battled. The more I knew of the Master, the more I knew I could adopt His love of science and work within nature, and not against it. As technology moves forward, nature seems to become more rare – and some even believe it is in need of special protection. I can say that nature does take care of itself. What is in need of attention is education – an enlightenment of how Father has made all things to work together; and that resistance to Father's natural outworking, is wasted energy.

It is easy to see that the ideals that man desires most are those seemingly out of reach; it is as if simple life is a competition, and anything worth having must be something worth fighting for. As a society, working with the natural grain of living has been overlooked, and struggle to attain is seen as commonplace. Father has meant for us to evolve and find meaning and value in the spirit. And that meaningful and personal experience will be different for each individual; it is not up to any one person to define what that is. Once man has set aside his ego, defining the meaning of life will not be such a mystery.

I believe most mortals have become used to struggling – they actually expect it; and this creates a whole new set of problems. Father has meant for us to discover life on an even keel; in a balanced momentum of living – not so much the high mountain-tops or the low valleys of life. Abundance and joy comes not from much stress and health problems (mental or physical); and it comes not through means of escape through addiction of one kind or another – no! but through a healthy balance of challenging experience and reaping the educational rewards.

Imagine arriving at a new destination, perhaps stepping off of an airplane in some new location on a vacation. What you do there is your responsibility. You can hire a guide to show you the sights; you can venture off by yourself and see what each new day brings. The fact that you are even there 'on' this journey is exciting and something to gain insight from.

Such is life on this planet. You are here to do something, and it is your responsibility to find out what that something is. You can struggle from worry about what is ahead of you; you can look for the path of ease. Or, you can commit to learning about what there is to know and take in what is of value out of the experience of Father's orchestration and timing.

My understanding is: As mortals on a material world, we would do well to get back to spiritual basics by finding the value in nature, or what feels natural. How much resistance do we put forth every day and yet still, simply end up feeling drained? It's not that we are searching out a path of ease so much as it is that we are working within our natural means to embrace that which does bring harmony in life.

If we view life as nothing but a struggle, then where is the joy? Where is the value and the reason we are willing to work so hard? When you constantly put forth so much effort, somewhere within your mind you are expecting some sort of reward. That's not to say that is bad, no; hard work does always reap some sort of reward; but what does that reward look like, and what is its true cost.

This week, let us find the renewed relationships with Father and the gifts of nature that are available. Continue to find time to study and have stillness. We are, as always, excited to be co-workers and friends. You do our hearts and minds good. As always, our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

A Closeness With Father Gives Us A Freed Mind – To Enjoy Life and Work Within Our Natural Gifts

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-22-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying the serene atmosphere here this evening. You make my job easier with your welcoming attitudes and open arms of acceptance. I am finding your group-experience to be a help with balance – each one having his or her own personal experience to share.

I can appreciate how accepting you each are of one another even though you may not agree on most subjects. Your willingness to take an active part in the Teaching Mission and Correcting Time is a great assistance to those of us here on the other side of the mortal veil.

When you work to become more spirit led, then the example you set inspires others to look within. If the Correcting Time was nothing but a large pot of soup, I would find this group to be the meat. You are what make our efforts of potentials turn into actualities. I thank you for continuing to do the work, for continuing to embrace truth and allow your disappointments to go by the wayside.

Last week we discussed going with the 'natural' as opposed to 'struggle;' it can be a confusing lesson, as I understand from your conversation. Allow me to clarify a bit: In these days of fierce competition there seems to be little time spent enjoying the fruits of labor. Minds are already set to beat (out-do) their best, and time is not set aside to enjoy the goals met; this mindset is worldwide and all of its own momentum.

I can say from example of my own life in the flesh – I was at one time a commander of armies, and upon hearing we had won some sort of battle, my mind would be off to the next goal. I was always catering to my reputation as a man of action. There was little time spent in a balanced manner that included free time or family. I could not allow myself to rest – and that, for the most part, was because I had to maintain a certain persona that would be well respected.

In other words, my actions were geared toward catering to my ego and about what others may have thought of me. To be imprisoned by what others may be thinking about you is to cut off the Spirit; it is ego territory and somewhat 'spiritually' damaging.

Most of you in the Correcting Time know that you must live by 'man's laws' here on the planet, yes – and yet ultimately it is the 'universal laws' we must answer to. Father is, or should be, at the forefront of our minds. He is of tremendous intelligence; and to be close to Him is to feel the comfort of a freed mind.

A freed mind does not worry about what others are thinking. The comments people may make that may throw off your game are futile and have no bearing on how you perform. Closeness to Father means that we know we have someone to watch over us. With clarity in mind, He can help us make good decisions and be balanced in all aspects of living the mortal life.

In this discussion on following our internal nature, we can think back to when we were children – we would aspire to grow up to be various heroes. As we grew older, we would of course find some life-purpose to settle on, or at least something to get us by for the meantime. You that have awakened to the Spirit can now see you are with certain gifts, and would do well to use them. One who has allergies should probably not become a florist. One who is skilled at woodworking would probably be most happy working with wood.

It is the trend however, to set aside gifts in favor of dollar amounts. What do you really love to do? Is your work really about that particular work, and are you fulfilling your Mission destiny? I find it wonderful to see people who think of their life's work as secondary – their ministry is first. This doesn't mean we do poorly at our jobs; it means our minds are not filled with that work only, but find balance in incorporating the spiritual life as well.

There is an imbalanced side to our desires to follow what seems natural – such as escaping certain inevitabilities of everyday living. For example, you have an undesirable habit that is hurting you in some fashion. Just because it feels natural – should you stay with it? No, of course not, we have to be logical about these notions of embracing a smooth flow of life.

I believe I have said enough for this evening; I will allow you to mull it over and put it into good use. We will speak again next week. In the meantime, please understand that you have assistants here on my side who would be quite joy-filled should you desire some help.

Find time this week to feel peace. Take time to walk outside. Feel the sun on your face, or the breeze, or the rain. Find small moments that tell you that you are connected to a larger part of the whole and there is nothing to have worry over. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Trust Father To Show Us And Then Help Us Work Out Our Personal Issues
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-29-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is always a happy time for me to meet with you and find out how you are doing on the path of life. I am grateful for Father shining His knowledgeable light upon the dark places of the soul that are in need of correction.

It is understandable that once mortals begin to move on in years, old habits become hard to break. This Correcting Time enables us to see those things about ourselves that we could not see before, and therefore, could not work on them. It is true that each individual will have time to correct any and all flaws, especially once passed on from the material body; but with today's Correcting Time, it is possible in this mortal life to dissect those individual flaws that create the feeling of stagnation.

Yes, every week when we meet for these lessons, we are asking Father to look at us – show us what He sees and what He wants for us. There may well be several issues to face before we are equipped to handle some Mission task; Father will then bring out those issues and show us where to start.

I am MARY. Greetings to you, friends. It is always an honor to spend time with you. In this particular lesson I am taken back to my mortal life when I was with the realization that my experience, up until a certain point, had taught me mistrust. It was difficult to trust those individuals I could see with my eyes – can you imagine the trust issues I had to work out with Father and those I couldn't see?

Yes, my mistrust of people led me to have difficulties with my ministry tasks in the years following. I was not a very good listener because I was afraid of what I would hear – and therefore, I did all the talking. That pattern was not very helpful in the Master's ministry, but it was very helpful in avoiding my own spiritual advancement. I came to realize that I had to face the difficult issues of why I had very little trust for others. Yes, I prayed for this healing, and Father showed me exactly what I needed to know – even though it was ugly and painful.

Many times we ask for a healing of some sort, and then find that the process of getting there is unpleasant, so we find reasons to avoid or delay. Sometimes, devoting oneself to total healing calls for some lessons that are uncomfortable; and in our discomfort we struggle from time to time, but always can we find Father with His definitions, meanings, and values – yes, if we should so trust in His outcome. Through submission to His observations of our dark places, we can envision those steps we can take to find correction.

With my own issues, I had memories of being a small child and being disappointed by adults. I had an armor of mistrust that, at first, appeared to protect me. I could not feel disappointment 'over and over again' because I would not ever get that close to anyone. So yes, this internal thought-pattern had interfered with my ability to minister in the Master's ministry.

Once I set aside my childish feelings, I could see how intelligent Father was, and that the lessons He gave me were perfect. Father always enables us to do our best. Don't let a meter of joy or sadness tell you whether or not a lesson is valuable. The majority of our personal lessons will be uncomfortable, yes, but once we feel a part of the co-creating team with Father, then do the levels of discomfort equalize and our understanding is accelerated.

This is all for this week, my friends. If you should so desire, next week we can take questions. Until then, be not afraid to see through Father's eyes and allow Him to bestow upon you His intellect. It is always with gratitude that we can gather and express our love, work together for the good of the whole – and, for the future. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

To Not Hold On To Our Expectations Gives Us Flexibility To Adapt Father's Methods
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-06-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. There is a comfort in meeting here each week; anything that may happen in the world is going to be made sense of here. Spending time together helps us to not have worry. We are part of Father's family and we do our best to fulfill our roles. I feel especially honored when you include me in on your personal lessons. I learn from them also.

There are many issues that mortals struggle with that I have simply forgotten about. To be a competent teacher I must have understanding of the mortal life; and knowing you, helps me to be a better teacher. This time in the planet's history is historical in the fact that people are feeling pressure from all areas of life and are having to go within and ask for themselves: 'What is the right thing to do?'

I am understanding we may have to forgo questions this evening. Not to worry, we will make up that time. We always want our message to be as accurate as possible. Instead, I will leave you with a few instructions for the week ahead.

What I am finding to be a valuable asset for mortals today is to have flexibility in mind. There are many issues over the course of our lives that become cemented in – fixed, and those issues that escape us tend to give us some deflation and disappointment. By that, I mean – you are committed/caring individuals who really want for God's will to be first, yes; and on the other hand, there is still that tendency to hold on a bit too tight to expectations. And of course, when expectations are not met, that seems to disrupt the balance of our lives.

If we are to maintain a ministry then we have to trust in the Father's methods – always! not just sometimes or when convenient. We have to trust in how He would make the way clear. We can perhaps feel driven to assist in some task and know that our willingness is there, yes, but when things are not unfolding as we would have them to unfold, we then begin to question Father's assistance in our lives. When we begin to doubt Father's hand, then that doubt starts to become reality in our own minds. That is real misery and a real painful delay.

This is why we teach to have regular spiritual practice to stay close to the Spirit – we need to keep our bond with Father strong so that we can maintain our trust in Him and what He sets before us. Father does not push us or force us into anything – He shows us the possibilities, and it is our choice to make if we should want to follow through.

This week, I am suggesting to research your own willingness to be flexible. How would that apply to integrating the material and spiritual lives! My apologies for the short lesson this evening. We do however, appreciate all of your efforts to carry our Mission into the future. Next available time we will take questions. Mary sends her regards. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Spiritual Wellness Leads to a Balanced and Healthy Perspective / Simon Peter vs. Judas Iscariot

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-13-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am grateful for our shared opportunities. We are at a significant point in history where we will be an integral part of a mass correction.

It is said that many times experience must be really negative to gain something positive from it. But I believe it is all a matter of perspective. Two mortals may have a similar experience; one may be uplifted and encouraged, while the other may be the opposite. You each know of the differing perspectives of experience and of the varying strengths of endurance – spiritual and otherwise. The whole point of knowing the mortal life is to learn and gather tools to move forward in your spiritual career.

I am MARY. I am honored to be with you again. I am inspired by your discussion on the topic of flexibility. I know that each of you has very different experiences. No one ever expects you to fit into a mold. Know that your diversity is welcomed and you have an eternity to learn what you will.

I can appreciate the lesson on perspective. As Abraham mentioned earlier, I was one who was self-protecting and prepared for the worst that was possible in any given situation. I would always seek to protect my feelings, my self-esteem, my ego. I felt that continuous disappointment was inevitable and I failed to see the possible lessons therein when things did not go my way. I was so fortunate to have trained with Jesus. His lessons were always appealing, yes, and yet they could not always hold my attention. However, it was His kindness to every individual which always spoke the loudest.

The Master lived exactly what He taught. He was exactly who He said He would be. To mortals of that day and age, that was somewhat surprising because, as I mentioned earlier, we all had that self-protection or varying perspectives which kept us feeling insulated. Of course that was, and is, an outworking of the ego; and simply blocking any opportunity to learn and advance, or to gather those tools we would need. I think of two of the Master's apostles when I think on the lesson of perspective, and how different these two men were:

Simon-Peter, a headstrong but goodhearted man who had always hoped for the best, found his mortal experience to be like a roller coaster, but always found himself in an advancing mode. He had a great love for the Master and the ministry, more-so than his own standing or status.

Simon-Peter saw the very best that man had to offer in his observance of the personage of Jesus. He already knew the worst, but having known the best touched Peter on a soul level; his love for the Master was ever-growing. Yes, Peter's love for the Master was what made him able to learn life's hard lessons; He may not have understood all of the Master's teachings, but he had true abiding loyalty and love for Him.

Love is so much more than an emotion; it is commonly defined incorrectly in this day and age – we can learn more about that later. We know for certain that love alters your perspective of life's meaning.

Another individual – whose perspective was the opposite of Simon-Peters' – was Judas Iscariot. Judas saw the world as a bad place, and mostly because his own thoughts were bad; his attitude, negative. He had love for the Master in the beginning, yes, but his hopes were for the increase of ego-wellness and how he may appear to be superior.

Judas saw the Master's goodness as possibly fake, or a ploy to get things done. His love for the Master and the ministry did not exceed his love for himself. He was evil within and therefore saw evil as a reality. His perspective was negative because that was what he truly felt inside. His faith wavered and he never gave it a chance to strengthen through stillness or humility.

Judas' experiences of everyday circumstances were seemingly unfair to him because 'he' was unfair to others. "Why would others not treat him as he would treat them," was his thinking? Had he taken a moment to truly feel the Master's love and know that all the best was wanted for him – for his very soul – then Judas could have changed everything about his inner evil and negativity; he could have seen the beauty in life, for it would have become a reality to him; his perspective would have fostered goodness and increased his capacity to receive.

I know firsthand this struggle, believe me. I find that when I focus too much on myself, then does my attitude change to incorporating the worst that life has to offer. It is better to busy yourself with some positive activity than to dwell on how unjust life is for you. It is a trap, really, a spiritual trap one imposes upon themselves and allows the ego to overwhelm the spirit. When our friendship with God is tended to, then are we more likely to feel His love and have that be our reality. A healthy level of spiritual wellness makes all the difference in the world in one's perspective.

We have to end there, but will resume again next time. I am always excited with anticipation to see how you will use the weeks' lesson to your advantage and spiritual growth. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

A Close Friendship With Father Keeps Us From Drifting Away From Spirit

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-20-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am so grateful to be in your presence this evening. What a blessing to have a caring family who allows you freedom to be yourself. It is difficult to live by faith and trust your lives to somewhat of an unknown future.

The further we drift away from Spirit the more we grab hold of the material life, and there is not the same meaning/satisfaction to that. When we make effort to practice faith and keep Father close, then are we more likely to walk with courage in any aspect of life; we can trust one who oversees the well-being of the universes; we can feel secure in our own abilities to make decisions. Yes, we can have a healthy level of self-confidence because we know Father co-creates our destiny.

There is a high level of anxiety with people that are concerned with worldly issues; there is tendency to become swept away with false beliefs. If we can refer back to our friendship and trust with Father, then these issues are not agonizing and we can filter them through logical eyes and a spiritized mind.

I see you, my students, spending great effort on pushing forward with that which you deem is right. As forerunners of the Correcting Time, we have to keep watch over our levels of emotion and have trust that Father knows all and has the very best plans in motion. When we doubt Him and His ability, we are like orphans – insecure and troubled. I have been meaning to take a few questions if you have any.

EMILY: I have been seeking your light and guidance to help me get back to a stronger connection and relationship with Father. I was wondering if you had anything for me regarding those areas.

ABRAHAM: I enjoy your personality and enthusiastic spirit. I believe your intentions are always from the heart. You are deeply passionate about various issues, and sometimes wonder why others cannot see what you are seeing. I have also had the same experience in my mortal days. I see that you are a good teacher to many; yet, sometimes your passion forces certain issues. And I would suggest – your deepening of a relationship with our Brother/Father Michael – or Jesus, as you may know Him, will help you to channel your enthusiasm. After all, He has experienced all that you are experiencing. He is an older Brother who wants for you to feel free to ask Him anything. He is the door. His methods of interpretation help you to see Father's instructions in a way that you can understand from a mortal point of view. You indeed set a great example for many who know you. Your inner light and faith is a magnet. I know that you are a daughter of action – and many people count on you for that. Forget not to tend to your spirit, your mind, and body. You have wonderful Mission tasks ahead of you, and this should bring you joy, not feelings of anxiety. You can relax and know that you have ability to know and follow the spirit within. Another question?

HARRISON: We recently had the passing of a friend and co-worker. I was wondering if you had words of comfort for his family, friends, and co-workers.

ABRAHAM: I can say that this brother is in good hands, not to worry about his spiritual survival. He knows all that he should about the past and where he made fatal mistakes. He does have sorrow and regret and wants his loved ones to know that if he could change things now, he would. Know that he is not judged by anyone here on our side. His deep mental pain was seemingly insurmountable to him, yes, and Father is in complete understanding. I cannot say much more without his loved ones asking me questions themselves. Are you in understanding? (Harrison: Yes. Thank you.)

ARANDA (Annette): Abraham, I need your advice about staying around my son like this for the rest of my life? or to move back to my home, my family. Can you give me advice for my choice for the future? [Editor's note: Aranda is from the country of Jordan in the Middle East.]

ABRAHAM: Of course. I do not see the need for you to stay by your son's side when communications and travel are so modern and accessible. You have done a wonderful job with your son and he is fully capable of living in the world. Father has plans for you both. You have your service to share; and while your relationship with your son is important, it is not necessary to stay in close proximity. Father wants for you to be happy; He wants for you to have fulfillment and satisfaction in this life. You will perform your Mission tasks 'as you live.' You are fully capable of receiving spirit instructions. You will always be important to your son, even in distances. You have laid a wonderful foundation in his heart and should not worry for the future. He is a wonderful young man. (Aranda: Thank you, father Abraham.)

ABRAHAM: I am delighted to spend time with each one of you. I learn from your varying perspectives. I appreciate how diligent you are in searching out the lessons in everyday circumstances. This week, I would suggest for you to think about your steps to overcome the force of the ego. What have you done in the past that has worked? How does the ego color your perspective? What was the most notable suggestion from the Master as far as how the force of the ego operates?

Know that Mary and I are both here for you each upon request. You think of us and we will be there. Have not worry. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Belief In Father's Promised Blessings Helps Our Roots Of Faith To Anchor The Wandering Mind

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-27-2008
Back

I am ABRAHAM. I am so honored to be a part of your spiritual foundation, the beginning of real spiritual growth. I thank you for allowing me to see what mortal life is like now in this day and age. I am changed from this growth; I am made to be more.

I can see the mindal turmoil in many; and as a result, the messages that are transmitted to the Supreme Being. I am understanding this 'God-in-time' sees a great deal of confusion in the lives of the earth's people. However, we are so fortunate, so blessed, that this evolving God can mold and maneuver this confusion into meaning.

I can think back on my mortal life and see how I was pulled in many directions; my focus was indeed scattered. I had learned from my brother/teacher, Machiventa, that spiritual faith must have deep roots in order to master the mindal turmoil and confusion.

Yes, our roots are strengthened by doing. Our experience helps us to evolve with understanding how life circumstances are valuable. We can, like the Supreme Being, mold and shape our everyday experiences into meanings and values. We cannot be a kingdom believer and act with animalistic tendencies. By living out your faith you are deepening the roots of truth, beauty, and goodness.

Machiventatold me long ago that God our Father has promised us blessings; this belief in the promise helps the roots of faith to anchor the wandering mind. The 'promise of blessings belief' is deep-rooted in our efforts made to grab hold of the value in terrible circumstances and be open to the lessons therein. The blessings are our reward for our efforts in finding meaning and value in our daily lessons. Upon understanding our lessons, making the effort, God's presence is true satisfaction and the real feeling of belonging.

This week, I am suggesting that each one of us be aware of the roots of our faith. What has held us? What was that truth? Remember the promise of Father that our lives will truly be filled with blessings. Mary is off on assignment, but sends her regards and will be with us soon. Know that I am with growing love and gratitude for you each. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Allow Father His Place in Our World, In Our Lives. The Correcting Time Is To Restore Father's Place

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-03-2008
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying your calm words of common sense. You each stuck to the most basic truths while full well knowing that all in the room have differing opinions. I am so honored to know you. I would like to see more of this method of 'relating' integrated into all aspects of controversial subjects.

As human beings, it is difficult to rein in one's emotions while giving out our personal truth. At times it seems that attacking another's viewpoint strengthens your own - yet, it is simply a tactic to sway others.

The whole of the world is appearing to be defensive; many are up in arms ready to defend their beliefs and push their personal agenda. How blessed are you that have a sound spiritual background. We need not project this attitude of defense because we have that inner confidence of knowing there is a higher power who sees to organization and order.

This historical time is creating an interest in all, even from our side. Never has the world utilized such consciousness en masse. There is a great deal of confused energy going every which way. Can you imagine harnessing this energy and using it for the benefit of the world's people?

Today's Correcting Time's purpose has been a call to mortals to go within and connect with Father. Evolution has a way of forcing mortals to see life as 'learning mortal survival techniques' instead of as gaining useful experience to further their spiritual career. When you ponder the world's values, what do you see as the one thing most mortals try to obtain? I say, that is what they live their lives for, and that is what they serve.

In our teaching to today's world as a whole, we have had some small advances here and there to help individuals learn who to put their trust in - and it is not another human being. The world has gone on far too long with faith in what they can see, with cravings to be fed, or to follow someone or thing of supposed importance.

During this time of correction, we will see many who will lose their faith in mankind's abilities, decisions, and judgments – and will look for something or someone to restore order and meaning. As we venture toward Light and Life you cannot have the masses with so much belief in themselves and put so little effort in the faith of our Father. The Spirit of Truth works diligently to expose darkness so that each individual can decide for themselves who, or what, they should serve.

I am MARY. My greetings to each of you. I also feel the excitement of opportunities for this world's people. I do understand the fear that the unknown brings, but more-so do I rely upon what I have already learned. There has been too much that has occurred in my spiritual career to have any doubt as to where this Correcting Time is going.

As a mortal, there was a time I had put my faith in a man who was supposed to take care of me-and in turn, I would take care of him. I had not knowledge of the disrespect which I experienced in the beginning of the relationship because that was expected in that day and age for most women. I was treated like a caged animal and thought that was acceptable- because in turn I had food and shelter.

I thought I could take the abuse as long as I was taken care of financially. I grew to loathe this man and to even plot his death. When I was free from this jailer, I had a great mistrust of all people. I would never allow myself to be open to that kind of abuse again. I really had lost my faith in anyone else's ability to take care of me, save myself.

This seemingly dark period created the desire within me to search for something better; there just had to be something that made sense! I was so blessed to become a part of the Master's ministry. When my faith in mankind had come to a halt, then my mind opened to the Father's possibilities.

This is not to say mistrusting your fellow human beings will bring you communication with God-no, of course not. This is to say that we must focus on the One who would never lie to us; would never cheat us; would never judge us unfairly; and would never ask us to do something to gain His love. That is the difference between men and God. Love your fellow men, yes! Serve God, yes!- and know that God is the beginning of all things and sees them through, all the way to their completion.

Do you see what I am saying? As far as the Correcting Time goes, man will be put back in his place. God our Father, will be restored. We can each see the value in allowing God, our Father, His place in our world and our lives.

Remember that the Master is a beautiful gateway to the Father. He is looking to show you how to move through the spiritual career and advance as much as you can. Know that the events about to happen will help us all to reclaim Father as the head of our table. He is 'the beginning of new things;' 'the organizer of life;' 'the ultimate interpreter of truth.'

That is all for this evening. We are with ever-growing gratitude for each one of you. You are a rock in which other people have, to lean upon. You all do well. Our love goes with you. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Father Assigns Tasks According To Our Levels of Readiness

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-10-2008

Back

[Editor's note: This meeting was just a few days after the United States had just elected its first President of African American descent – Barak Hussein Obama.]
I am Abraham. Greetings. I am always with growing appreciation for your willingness to allow the unfolding of these lessons. Your faith is a vehicle for my words to travel, but it is in the effort to live out your faith in everyday life that speaks volumes.

I can understand your experience has been a good teacher. As Mary had said last week, too much has happened in spiritual development to leave much room for doubt. As we look back over our years together, we can use our experience as a light to travel further onward. What a blessing it is to have learned firsthand that those things that are true will stay; those things that are not will fade away.

With the mass lessons that the world is undertaking together, we find there will be many variations to the issues and their solutions. We have to keep in mind that cultures vary around the world, and evolution is at a different level. What one country may have experienced a hundred years ago, another country may just be experiencing it today.

We are appreciative of you that have courage to maintain your position in the Teaching Mission and dedication to the Correcting Time. When we are out among our fellows there is energy that you display that attracts others. Your humble calm knowing brings peace to those who would be caught up in fear or uncontrolled circumstances.

We can see how at the worst of times the Master seemed unaffected; His faith never wavered in Father's abilities. The Master never thought to force His own desires, no, because He knew that Father had an overall view of any situation, and could better plan and create solutions.

While certain events may cause the world to divide, we have you, our Teaching Mission participants, to redirect confusion into a safe harbor of faith. You are knowing well that answers are available to each and every one of you; all that is needed is to quiet the busy mind. Father could use your willingness to speak His words – not in a way of controlling life, but to calming minds and helping to create unity.

Father knows of your commitment to help this Correcting Time and will assign you tasks according to your levels of readiness. If you have learned to detach from the temptation to absorb ego-fulfillment, then would He entrust certain assignments to you. It is important that we learn the most that we can from each lesson that happens in our lives so we can be better trained for these assigned tasks.

The world is being prepared to move closer to Light and Life, and we must have certain events occur to bring awareness. Remember that the everyday drama of life does not dictate the will of God. To serve in the ministry, we can take the Master's example of complete trust in Father. We need not have worry over 'what is to come' but awareness for 'what is the assignment of right now'.

This week we would do well to find those small steps we can take towards bringing a unifying spirit. I mean not to say unify minds or attitudes, but to bring about a subtle awareness to the inner spirit. The life you live and the genuine joy you feel will be a noticeable voice in your everyday ministry. There is a great deal of work to be done. Know that this work will vary from person to person, for each of you are gifted at different things. Worry not over 'saving the world,' but simply utilize your God-given gifts to help enlighten as you pass by, as the Master did.

We are scheduled to make another appointment and we will take our leave. First, we must express to you our growing love for you each. Know that we have faith and trust in you as our Mission co-workers. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Having Flexibility In Mind Keeps Us Open To the New

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-17-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always inspired by your flexibility with the ups and downs of everyday-living on this experimental planet. Mortals have been proven to be a great deal more adaptable than was once predicted.

There are many on my side of the veil who are learning from the evolution of today's people. There is a great deal of studying going on to be recorded for future universal endeavors. I am honored to be a part of this history and being able to further the research. If we have learned anything from participating in the Teaching Mission, it is flexibility in mind. We have always attempted to forecast Father's will, but we have rarely been on target. We know that plans can change in the blink of an eye, and we are made to empty out knowledge we had once counted on to make room for new information.

I know that mortals cling to security and find comfort in being able to predict life - how fortunate are we to find out that is not possible. We have not learned everything there is to learn; we do not know how to handle every situation that arises, and we will always be in a mode of learning.

I am MARY. Greetings to you, my friends. As you may have guessed, we have been busy with the changing world events. There are many things we as Teachers are prepared for; and on the other hand, there is a natural flow to life and events we are not prepared for. I am saying, we, the unseen forces on this world, are also working 'within' evolution.

In an evolving world where things are always changing, we are to identify issues of concern in which our superiors will train us on how best to handle them. I can appreciate the fact that I have a valued perspective, as does every team member. I feel heard, yes, and also do I maintain open-mindedness to hear everyone else.

We all work with consideration for the best of the whole. I am with continuing gratitude for my days with the Master because He taught me balance in being a contributor. Every mortal likes to feel needed and a part of the whole.

The Master did not assign us levels of personal importance – there was no seniority; there was not a man or woman more important than the next. In our ministry, all who desired tasks were given tasks according to their levels of training. This did not place labels of importance on anyone. The Master taught that we were all equal members in Father's family – each working for the good of the whole.

Many times I had clung to my old comfortable knowledge, and continued to act therefrom when going about the ministry. Even as I realized my old ways were not serving the new issues, I often kept maintaining my old habits. I thank Father for the presence of the Master who woke us up from our tendency to stay in our well-worn ruts. The seemingly harsh lessons were a good wake-up call to open the mind, allow the old knowledge to be filtered through new eyes – and when we were ready, receive new information.

You are blessed in this day and age to have the Spirit of Truth who is able now more than ever to bestow upon you updated information. When we remain flexible in mind and attitude, our eyes will naturally see new ways; it is more a matter of 'letting go' than 'forcing through.' When our minds and habits are rigid, then we are made to feel trapped and hopeless in a way, because we are not seeing new possibilities and a Father whose abilities are unlimited.

This week, let us spend the time allowing those cherished ideas to be left out in the open – meaning, be not so 'on guard' to hold them tight. Those ideas that take up space for no reason can be whisked away and room made for new training that is to come. We, as mortals and as unseen helpers on this world, are all working with evolution, yes, and must be flexible in mind and attitude. Find time to relax and put your lives, your concerns, into the hands of our most capable Father. Know that those things you should know, the Spirit of Truth will make a way for you to know them and actualize them.

We will talk more next week. At this time, we will take our leave. Abraham and I express our ever-growing love for you each. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Our Universe Mother Teaches The Love Of A Parent Who Speaks Truth Always to Her Children, Even Harsh

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-24-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I am enjoying these peaceful surroundings. I can certainly appreciate the manner in which you work with one another. I am happy that you are comfortable with me, it makes my communications more accessible. I can feel a wonderful security here in our spiritual unification.

During this particular time of year our thoughts turn to our Mother Spirit. She usually imparts a message to us, yes, and this year has come with a wonderful message: Mother has helped us to feel compassion for the many souls out in existence that feel no family connection. She has instructed us to teach more skills on tightening the family ties.

As we grow in our spiritual understanding, we are getting to know the parental love of God. You would understand from experiencing a parental love that a wise parent loves us enough to tell us the truth. A good parent would not sacrifice truth in worry about being nice or having some sort of self-reward, no; a good parent advises children for the sake of the children's best interest – for their well-being.

Yes, Mother's message this year told us to love others with a parental love – meaning that you want for their health and happiness and have not worry over hurting feelings or crossing lines.

The Master's life in the flesh was a wonderful example of this parental love. He loved His fellows enough to look them into their eyes and impart the truth as He saw it. He was not forceful in His manner with others, no; He was more of a caring friend who simply wanted to display assistance.

We know that the Master wanted no part of any personal glory; He was not worried about His popularity. Jesus was, however, concerned with His ministry, and made the utmost effort to always be honest and loving – maybe not so much with the tactfulness that people wanted, but always loving.

Jesus' hearers who were on a path of real correction could absorb His words in all their reality. They were genuinely helped by the Master's loving – but often hard – truth. Individuals who were more on an immature path, or who were self-seeking, took not the Master's words as help, but condemnation.

People of the world are beginning to see that carrying past baggage or hurt, is not helping one to make progress. Such mindset, at some point in Urantia's awakening, served a purpose, yes, but now it simply creates victimhood. You would do well to show that 'parental love within' to your fellows who are looking for a new and better way. People are looking for acceptance and a place to belong; your past training has helped you to know this parental love, and now is the time to put it into action.

I hope you are understanding me – we are not teaching forcefulness, but presenting simple truths. Mother's message this year showed each of us that we have grown in many ways and are finding out new priorities. What was once just seemingly important will be transformed into new progressive thought – that everyone has a place at the Father's table, and each gives and receives. This progressive thought is a satisfying fact of our spiritual education.

This week, make effort to have conversation with Mother. Allow Her to further your understanding on the love of a parent and how to put it to use in the growth of the Mission. We are entirely blessed with the loving and balanced personalities of our Divine Mother and our Spirit of Truth. Truly understanding this blessing fills the soul.

That is all. Mary will be with us next week and she sends her love. Know that I am always with great anticipation for observing your lives here on this evolving planet. Thank you for allowing me in. Go in peace. Until next week, shalom.

The World Is Not Going To Hell, But All Is Continually Getting Better
Abraham, Mary & Mother Spirit, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-01-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I truly enjoy the wisdom here in this group. You each have developed a loving philosophy. Your striving to do what you feel is right is inspirational. I know for a fact that each of you always has Father in mind when making decisions. As you grow spiritually, your decision-making abilities become more smooth and natural.

I believe we have learned to communicate better, meaning myself with each of you. Your communication with one another is also fine. I am saying that your desire to improve your spiritual skills has improved our communication. I am definitely pleased with your efforts.

I am MARY. It is truly an honor to be with you. I am learning your diverse personalities. I find that I love you each exactly how you are. I am growing in love for you as I get to know you better. I can see those good attributes in you that outweigh the bad habits – the mistakes you make do not stay long in my mind because I love you and because I see the good. With that, I give you our MOTHER.

Greetings, children. What a joy to look upon your faces. You each inspire each other to carry on. I see how difficult the world is and how you are overcome at times with confusion. I am in gratitude, as is Michael, for your dedication to serving in the Correcting Time. You have not given up after all these years. Even when times were slow and nothing appeared to be happening, moving, or evolving, you have stayed with us.

I can appreciate how you have taken your hardships, extracted the value from them, and put them to work for you in serving your fellows. Even though it is hard to see, you have helped us to make the great strides in moving the Correcting Time forward.

As Mary said, I see not the imperfections in my children; rather, I see the strength each one of you have as you push through. As you carry on, I would also ask that you dwell not on your imperfections and mistakes, but think about your strength and your link to me – yes, and how I see you.

I see you not as erring children. I see not the world as evil. I see you as that budding soul who will experience what you have to do to move forward in your spiritual career. Know that someday we shall be face to face and I will embrace you; I will tell you how much I love you and that you did do well. Don't worry about what your eyes can see, but know that with each passing day, hour, or minute, that everything – yes, everything, is getting better.

I say everything is getting better; you are doing better, and are advancing. The world is advancing, it is not 'going to hell,' as many believe. I ask that you live your daily lives as though you are advancing in every moment. Allow not those negative events to bring you down and close off your spiritual connection. Michael and I are overjoyed at the advances the planet has made. You are learning to communicate with one another, yes, and are doing fine.

We are also impressed with your efforts made to communicate with us, to talk to us as if we were your closest allies, because I can definitely confirm that we are. Take the confusing moments in your life and bring them to us. I long to help you, to strengthen you, to show you that there is no such thing as regression. In each moment we are definitely moving forward. Have not worry or fear; I am always at hand; I am always here for you. I do not judge you and I love you just as you are. Carry on, children.

I am Mary. We thank our Mother for her encouraging words. We are inspired to focus on the good and to dwell not on the negative. I thank Abraham, for he has been a wonderful teacher and a positive leader in our Correcting Time. Know that our spiritual army is stronger than ever. We are not in the shadows but in every detail of Urantian life. As always, our love is growing for you. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

What Is Your Life Costing You. Do You Measure Your Success By Materialism

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-08-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. As always, I am grateful for your open attitudes. It is easy to work with individuals who have vision.

Every day I am with students that are completely set in their old ways and who find life to be predictable and without joy. My friends, your life is what 'you and Father' make of it. These students that are so stubbornly set could have new possibilities should they dare to venture forth, but ease-seeking keeps them bound; fear of the unknown might bring misery to them, not excitement. I believe there is a belief in today's people that in one way or another there is some sort of a cost for everything; individuals get some sort of reward or punishment for their actions - not ordained by God, mind you, but of course self-imposed.

There is a great deal of pressure in today's world to have a lot of material items. Material items cost money; and to raise this money, one must expend energy at employment. The more one serves materialism, the more one must expend energy - and most of the time this brings feelings of emptiness. Many measure their success by materialism. This may satisfy the person 'on the surface' but deep down there is no meaning. When there is no meaning there is no joy.

What is your life costing you? We each know people who have ill health because of stress. Some of these individuals are willing to pay the high price of health for the reward they get for the ego. For example: A man who does really well at his job feels very important because he solves many problems on a daily basis; he hears nothing but praise from his superiors. In the meantime, this man's physical being is stressed out and his heart is pumping overtime. To counteract that, he begins to drink alcohol heavily and this starts to disrupt his family life.

It means more to this man to hear the praise from his superiors than to feel good, physically, and take care of his wife and children. Do you see which would serve the ego more? and, which would have more meaning that brings joy and happiness.

We have come to a point in our Teaching Mission that our ministry is the embodiment of meaning and a source of joy. The ministry is not difficult, it generates energy instead of taking 'from' you. We can see that those things the ego values have a high price to pay, while things with real meaning bestow upon you a soul satisfaction. It is easy this time of year to be pulled into that material want, or that ego gratification. I cannot blame you, none of us do. None of us judge you.

Throughout the week let's look for the deeper meaning in simple things - things that you may not understand but where there are noticeable doors open for opportunity. Take time this week also, to sit in the stillness and regenerate your spiritual battery. Lose not the sight of those who keep us strong.

As promised, I would answer a few questions - starting with an assessment for Harrison and Sarauna. [This husband and wife have been our Monday night meeting-time hosts for several years; they are moving to the east coast.]

Children, I am grateful to you for these many years here in this group. Your service has been greatly appreciated. You have done well. I appreciate your unique personalities and also the team perspective you present as a couple. It is really quite sweet. You are indeed kindhearted people and have the best of intentions - that, I know. I can assure you that no matter where you go, the ministry you serve in goes also with you. You will still have Teaching Mission tasks that you will perform in behalf of those individuals you will talk to about spiritual truths - not so much the Urantia Book itself, but about basic everyday truths; you will know that you have to meet people on their level. There are projects you both have been meaning to start; and the time, or window of time, is opening for you to get started on them. As I look back over your long history, I can see you were always courageous and daring to move forward and try new things; there is nothing stopping you from having that same mindset today. Mary and I give you all the support we can, and want you to know we will definitely keep in touch.

(To the group.): You know Father would want any of you to live out your dreams. Even if only to live within your means, He will be there, no matter what. You that have dedicated yourselves to serving in the Teaching Mission will always have tasks and assignments. Our Mission practices are beginning to move to the next generation and we will find that the attributes of Light and Life are simply normal and how things are supposed to be. Are there follow-up questions?

HARRISON: Abraham, I would appreciate reminders of things that I can do to improve my communication with Father, with Mother, Michael, and with you and Mary.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I see you best communicating with Father when you are helping someone else - when you are not thinking of yourself, but simply doing some chore for somebody else. Maybe it is working on their car, or simply listening to them. You are at your best when you are feeling useful. You have experienced a great deal of stress in these past few years and your spiritual understanding is a bit jumbled up in your mind. A new adventure will help you to sort it all out. You will find that peace you have been longing for. There will be time to talk and listen, cry and laugh, explore life's meanings - all you have to do is allow the unfolding. Is there another question?

SARAUNA: Abraham, I know that this feels like something we need to do, but I just feel like the whole world is jumbled and unsettled. I want to be sure, as sure as we can be in these times but at least going in the right direction. Letting go sometimes is a difficult thing, I am finding. Do you have a tip or two on that?

ABRAHAM: The decision is always up to the individual. Father moves along with the details. You can never be sure of any decision, you can only try to envision a plan through the eyes of the Father; with His vision, you can then foresee possible errors. Plan out certain strategies, yes, but you can never make a big decision and have absolute certainty within the human spirit. I can say that if you look back through your many years you can see how resourceful you and Harrison have been. Many times have you allowed for those opened doors to a wonderful life for you and the girls. A good method that I use for making decisions is – if doors of opportunity keep opening, then I keep going through them; if they keep closing, then I would rethink the plan. Does that help? (Saurana: It certainly does. Thank you.) Abraham: You are welcome. Does anyone else have a question?

CALVIN: Abraham, in your lesson tonight and also in lessons lately, you talked about detachment from the ego; I can see areas of my life where I need to do that even more. I have made some progress, I think. Any input you have for me on that, I would welcome. I have had some things in mind that I know has been in there for a long time. It is hard for me to distinguish what is fantasy or wishful thinking, and that which is truly inner direction from Father.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Isn't experience a wonderful teacher! We find in these accelerated times that what we do comes back to us faster than ever – meaning, we could almost call these times 'reflections from the Supreme Being.' We can act at times without some integrity, and then hours later it is shown back to us and it is seriously distasteful. The ego is showing itself to be this way. We do not focus so much on keeping the ego at bay, but through our many years of training, we have come to identify the habits of the ego and are able to steer ourselves in a more productive direction. Time and experience are wonderful teachers. I can see how they have assisted you in your life. Is there something more specific I can answer? (Calvin: No, I think that is pretty clear. Thank you.) Abraham: You are welcome. Another question?

SIMON: Yes, Abraham, I would like an assessment and your thoughts on integrating the joy of living, and how I can tame my ego.

ABRAHAM: Simon, you are indeed a man of adventure. I love your exploring spirit. I admire the scientist in you. I see that these days you are much happier, and I believe it is due to the lessening drama in your life. Well done. As I told Calvin, age is a wonderful thing; time and experience are excellent teachers. We learn that the less drama there is, the more reality shows itself – which creates more meaning and more soul satisfaction. I see you right now as happy – not perfect by any means, but happy; and I am happy for you. You, as we all do, have much personal work still to do, but that will happen when you are ready. I believe these days you are embracing reality much more. You are finding joy in the life that is here now, not the life that you can assume there is on the horizon. Well done! (Simon: Thank you.)

Abraham: You are welcome. Stay with your studies of science. You will do a great deal to help many understand how science and spirituality work together. Are there more questions?

ARANDA: As a Muslim, I simply just had a connection 'with God.' I was very happy with my spiritual connection through God. Now - after I have this new connection with you and Mary, Mother, and Jesus Christ, and I get confused wondering what the truth in everything is. I think maybe it is too much for my brain to understand. Now I am back with this group and yet I am feeling lost. I know the truth is here. What do I have to do to find my path so I can feel without this confusion? It's hard for me to find answers. The Urantia Book is difficult to understand. Can you help me?

ABRAHAM: My daughter, I do understand how confusing trying to integrate many spiritual truths can be. We wanted to make the Teaching Mission as plain and simple as possible so that it could embrace many religions. The prophet Mohammed wrote many beautiful sayings. He was a speaker of truth and there are many lines that he has written that does give you comfort. There were many religious teachings also in my life that had given me comfort, especially when I was a child. Know that your spiritual education will always move forward, will always grow, but never does Father want you to be confused and frustrated, no. Father wants you, above all, to have a wonderful connection with Him. The rest should be set aside and taken in small bits here and there, in small lines, small sections for your consideration. If you are going to read the Urantia Book, take a small paragraph at a time that is confusing, spend many days with it if you need to; don't worry about the rest of the book, just that paragraph. If you know the writings of Mohammed, you can spend many hours with his writings and feel comfort. There is no problem if you want to learn and experience different aspects of spirituality - that is fine. Simply take them in small doses is what I am suggesting. Do not confuse the larger panoramic view with what we should actually be focusing on - which is our relationship with Father. I would suggest that Jesus Christ is a wonderful Interpreter to the various spiritual meanings. He is indeed a great Teacher and knows of the many religions that have crossed the face of this Earth. He is also the door. Said He: "I am the way, the truth, and the life." You would do well to go through Jesus to understand the Father. Jesus is like an older brother who can explain to you how our Father is. Jesus and our Father would want you to be happy and close to them, rather than to be confused. When your spiritual learning gets to be confusing, set it aside. Concentrate on your closeness you have with your divine Parents. Stick with what you know and slowly add in small new lines that sound good to your spirit. Does this help? (Aranda: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: I can accept one more question if there is one.

REBECCA: Abraham, I am confused with the situation with my son, and I need to feel some peace with that. Can you help me?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Parenting is the most difficult job you will ever have. It is the best thing that will ever happen to you, yes, but certainly the most difficult. I can only answer you in broad general terms unless you can be more specific with your question.

REBECCA: Yes. He lives in another state. I believe I need to live close to him to feel peace. Is that true?

ABRAHAM: I am understanding that very few things compare with the force of a mother's love. It is important that you impart to him those things that you have learned in this life. I do believe it is important that he knows this. It would not only help him, immensely, but I believe it would also help you. The desire to tend to what we have brought into the world is overpowering for a reason. You have been given this driving sensation for a reason. If it is possible, then yes, I would say you are one-hundred percent correct in your feelings. Well done. Does this help? (Rebecca: Yes.)

I am going to take my leave at this time. Know that Mary sends her love and I am with ever-growing gratitude for each one of your beautiful little faces. You bring meaning to my life. I love you. Until we meet again, carry on. Shalom.

Our Mission Tasks Are For Every Move In Everyday Living

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-15-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Indeed, a beautiful display of brotherly love is here this evening. I enjoy the fact that you all feel comfortable together and are at ease to speak your minds. I am honored to be your teacher and friend. You have shown me the many ways the world has changed. Through you, I am able to make sense of what my eyes see in the world.

I know you each have your opinions, but I can tell you that I benefit from your willingness to share. Some days I will spend an entire day with one of my students. I am fortunate to see with the student's eyes exactly what they are seeing; this knowledge helps me to become a more balanced teacher and I can at least have experience of a little more of what I teach.

You each help beyond your understanding in that you help us to see the ever-changing realities within the world. I am so happy you do not allow the world to break your spirit, but to build it up. We can each see how important time is to the experiencing soul - meaning that sometimes we must experience many lessons before we can truly understand them.

Your spiritual education and mortal experience on this world are not just about working and enduring, no! it is also about having joy and love. When you go off each day to your job you can be easily filled with a negative hesitation for your outlook on the day. For many, the daily work seems to be monotonous, and some wish to merely push time forward so it can be over with. The student of the Master's Correcting Time will find their employment to also be a ministry and a source of joy, not just an obligation or a drudgery.

For example of this exuberance of which I speak: When you were each school children, recess was practically the favorite time of day; it was when you got to socialize and play. You can have this same enthusiasm as you go out to meet your work-day. This balanced feeling of happiness and well-being helps you to cope with the difficulties of the day.

When you are overly conscious of your ministry (stressed), there will be a great many opportunities that pass by you. My friends, it doesn't take much effort to find that peaceful balance. To pause when needed; to go within and share your day with Father, does bring to your mind an extra reason to make your job as pleasant as possible.

Any time you leave your home, really, there are always possibilities for Father's ministry tasks. We should be reaching the point in our Mission-training where we have not need to make it a special effort concerning this preparation for a peaceful outlook on the daily adventures, no! it should be simply a part of daily living – a natural part of our daily routine before we greet each day head-on.

I am MARY. Greetings to you, my friends. Having spent so many hours with the Master, I began to look at my life as a service for the ministry. I had my daily chores to accomplish, yes, but they were secondary compared to the mission tasks.

I mean not to say that I thought of my chore-work lightly, no! I am saying that I found the mission tasks in daily living to take up the greater importance. My life was not simply 'about me,' for I had learned to be open to the ministry tasks at hand.

As that school-child Abraham spoke of (running out for recess with excitement), I began to look forward to running off to do my daily Mission-chores because I knew I would always have opportunity to do something for Father as well. A trip to the market was not simply mindless shopping, no. I found it to be a social source of joy and a provider of mission opportunities.

We have to think to ourselves as we are leaving our homes to begin the day, that our ministry is in full force, and that we have been assigned tasks that will help to enlarge the kingdom and move us closer to Light and Life. We would each do well to wake each day with a prayer of gratitude and commit ourselves to making positive things happen.

You have probably noticed by now that others feel at ease around you to open their hearts and minds to you. This is a sure sign that you allow Father His place in your life. Individuals will recognize your kind heart and feel that they can trust you enough to confide in you. In this, you can trust yourself enough to be a conduit for Father's words.

So you see, work is not really 'work.' Life is not just 'life.' Your training helps you to be a good example of the living gospel. Your willingness to welcome us and others is also helpful in the fact that you are keeping us up to date – and that keeps our lessons fresh. We thank you for accepting this responsibility. We promise to be by your side as you carry onward toward Light and Life. We will stop there.

Know that Abraham and myself take great joy in talking with you, knowing about you, and working with you. The future not only looks exciting, it feels exciting – it is living excitement with a purpose. Again, our love goes with you always. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Keep Our Ego At Bay As It Seeks To Fulfill Its Own Agenda

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP

12-22-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is such a blessing to gather here with one another to rebalance our mind, body, and soul. It was always the intention of the Mission to help mortals with their everyday lives through their evolving spiritual understanding. If spirituality is not applicable in life, or just some unattainable dream, then why embrace it?

You knew from the beginning that our lessons would be helpful to you in any of your everyday circumstances. As we join hearts and minds, we can allow the stresses of the physical world to fall away. As we are making effort to find higher-mindedness, we can allow the minor irritations of life to go by the wayside.

Once again, we are finding our spiritual center so we can remember the reason why we make so much effort every day to move and grow toward something beyond us. When there is too much time that goes by without spiritual exercise, then there is a tendency to put more faith in the world and its treasures than to be open for spirit guidance.

In many ways, the world gives you the message of your worth through things you have, or the kind of person you 'should be.' Father's values are mostly unseen. As people of faith, we are learning to rely more on what we cannot prove to be real than on what the world offers in a material way. When we do not take time for spiritual study, stillness, and service, then are we likely to stray from faith and end up in confusion and unhappiness.

This subject comes down to a matter of wants and desires. An individual may wish to have certain things they may place in high value; and many times desire screams in the mortal mind and drowns out the ability to listen. A spirit-connected individual would have more ability to hear guidance and to be observant, yes, because he knows the ego is not successful in showing the individual their soul emptiness; rather, the ego wants its desires fulfilled and is really quite underhanded in how it tries to achieve that goal.

I am MARY. My greetings to you each. I can say I had the best lesson with this evening's topic when I was in the flesh working the ministry. I had a young woman I was training to work amongst the sick; I wanted to teach her how she should not only help 'materially or physically,' but also with encouraging words from what we had learned from the Master. I taught her about the mind/body/spirit connection and she did appear to be one to learn rather slowly.

One particular day my student was trying to tell me of a man that she had been helping; he was getting physically worse and she wanted to know what more she could do. I then asked her if she had implemented all my lessons that I had taught her, and she said she had. In my mind, I thought: "She couldn't have because it would have indeed helped the man."

Again, my student asked me: "What can I do to help contain an infection that seemed to be out of control?" It was then I realized she had genuine care for this person she was trying to treat. I had doubted her abilities because she was young and new to this work; and I did not want to hear of her failings because that put me in a poor light as her mentor.

I realized I was not answering her questions concerning the man's infection because my ego was up in arms about 'my own ability to teach.' I had somehow forgotten about the well-being of the actual patient. I followed my student to see this sickly man and finally understood what the problem was. Yes, I had to set aside my desire to see my own success - and instead, to make effort to hear what was really happening.

In a busy world, there are so many who are clamoring for their desires in attempting to get them fulfilled. This is all-consuming and destructive to the spiritual education.

This week, I would recommend that we really try to listen to what is truly being said - what is really happening. Try not to put it under your own scope of understanding, but allow Father to give you a fuller understanding of what is happening. We must remember, all our needs and wants will be met - that must not even be a concern; Father knows what these are and always wants for our happiness.

As Mission workers we must remember to listen to what is being said and know that even now, after all these years, the ego will still try to force its agenda. Practice those activities that help you to spiritually center - whether it's reading, praying, or maybe listening to uplifting music. Keep in mind, the closer you are with Father, the less the ego can force its agenda.

Also this week, let us relax. Be observant and allow Father to impart His words to us as He will. You each could use a break from the busyness of life. Even a short break would be of benefit. That is all for this week. Know that we are always with the greatest honor to serve you - and, serve with you. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

As We Relax We Receive More / And Those More Advanced Lessons Will Appear

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-29-2008

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am happy to be a part of your discussion on what seems to be personal reality. It is a blessing for us to come together with the difficult issues of today and find some hope, something that tells us the universe is in order.

You can each see by personal accounts of the past holiday that you are finding more value in your experiences; more now than ever before. Without your spiritual education you might not have seen the value therein, or possibly would have missed out on the lessons. In these times, mortals are discovering new territory within. Yes, in these experiences you are being tested and taught. You are lovingly given opportunities to advance - spiritually and otherwise.

You can review the past week and see the many individuals you have helped simply from sharing your own experience. You know whereof you speak because you have lived it. You have experienced deep sorrow and despair, and are skilled enough to show others who are discouraged how to rise above those gray clouds into the clear skies of understanding.

This is not by accident that you should have such skills, no! You have committed your lives to Father and the Mission, and therefore, have been well trained to carry the purpose closer to Light and Life. I am with deep and abiding gratitude for you each having stayed the course. Believe me, I do understand how adversity seems to beat down the growing soul. I can promise you that as time passes you will see these adverse experiences as advancing your spiritual education.

With the present status of the planet within the universe, mortals today are so much more sensitive to worldly occurrences; but then again, mortals are so much more aware because of communication technology. You are right to feel overwhelmed from time to time – we know this, as does Father and His many assistants. We are giving you our all to help bring balance, a peaceful joyful balance. There are many orders of beings in the universe that are attempting to regulate the incoming energy. Many times in mortal living, overwhelming feelings can bring out the worst in man. Our fellow regulators of energy want for man to have balance and become responsible and joyful citizens of the universe.

At this point in our Mission, most of the Teachers are here for support and encouragement. You have had a great deal of information to absorb over these years. As you practice these principles each day, they become part of your common behavior. As man grows into his higher-mindedness, then will he have new questions – and I say, we will be here with new answers.

It is our hope that you can face life's challenging circumstances with patience and simple observance. You would do well to avoid rushing to conclusions. The amount of inner peace you feel will be in direct proportion to the guidance you will receive. I am made glad to see each of you face your challenges in daily living and take up your responsibility. I can see each of you making time for your fellow brothers and sisters in sincere offering to be of service without desire for personal reward. You want to help, and that means everything – well done!

Our lesson is short this evening. Remember, as you relax and receive more, the more advanced lessons will appear and your minds will begin to formulate new questions. Know that I am honored to be an experiential friend and helper. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

2009 and 2010 and 2011 MANSION WORLD TEACHINGS

Request for Mission Participants to Step Up | Maintain Positive Outlook To Enhance Positive Outcome

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-05-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am impressed by the knowledge shared in this room this evening. You have brought up some great topics that are of interest also to us. Your careers that you have led up to this point may not have included science or politics, and yet you have done your research and can speak freely on these subjects. I learn a great deal each time we meet. Your interests become my interests, and I am compelled to research these things. I am driven to study, and I am grateful for that.

Some years ago, your group teacher – Ham, said you would be forerunners in the Correcting Time for points of light. [Editor's note: See below excerpt from Ham.] The knowledge that you continue to attain helps you to be a trusted source to your fellows. It is important that you try to maintain a positive outlook. Yes, environmental travesties may be occurring; yet, on the other hand, science is moving forward with new breakthroughs in technology.

Like a child who must be lovingly nudged, that is what Father is doing to His beloved planet, Urantia; you are being nudged forward into progressive evolution. If you are feeling driven to learn, such as through research or study, it is for a good reason. You each, being points of light, will engage in many conversations with your fellows, and to be current on certain topics will be a positive help to those you speak to. You each, having had your spiritual studies, have a spiritual outlook. When injustices are brought up in conversation you can lead the topic towards a spiritual resolution.

I am honored to be among deep thinkers. That is why you continue on in this Teaching Mission. That is why you stay in touch with one another, study the papers of the Urantia Book, and continue to strive each day for the ultimate truth. If you could see how we operate on our side, you would see all of us working non-stop. You could say all who are participating in the Urantian Correcting Time are working overtime. We are lit up, so to speak, moving with positive thought, enthusiasm, and in being about the Father's business.

In your world, we often see your collective energy as 'worry' and burning up with negativity. The talk of the global economy is not near as bad as the media makes it out to be [Editor's note: the recent global market crash]. Each individual is being called to step up, take responsibility, take care of themselves and their families, to quit coming forward with excuses, and to quit looking for escape. Yes, each individual, no matter what status of life they are in, are being called to step up.

We have on our side, no problem in picking up the pace. We know that you participants in the Teaching Mission also have no qualms about taking responsibility and stepping up to do your part as a universal citizen. We know that you are each well trained in the art of speaking and can impart words that encourage individuals to go within and find their Father. Let us not be overwhelmed by information, but through our own research, be enlightened.

Again, I am with honor to be among you, truth-lovers. Mary sends her regards and will attend the next meeting. Know that we stand by with love and support for each one of you. Carry on. Until next time, shalom.

[Editor's note: This excerpt may be what Abraham was referencing in the second paragraph above – from December 9, 1991: "You who are here this evening are the forerunners of a vast and far-reaching spiritual mission; you are the first, and many in later times will envy your position now. Carry out your duties and responsibilities with a measure of good cheer, lightheartedness, and a welcome attitude.”]

How Strong Is Our Faith Against the World's Negativity

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-12-2009

Back

[Editor's note: The "so-called change" Abraham speaks of in the 2nd paragraph of this lesson could be referring to the political environment – with the US having just elected its first black President. It could also be referring to the 'great economic recession' that had just occurred causing great panic, fear, and instability. Perhaps his reference pertains to both events.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. When I look upon each of your personalities, I see a common thread of graciousness. You are so accommodating to one another – and for that, I am touched. When I see you as a group I feel more at ease about the future. Each of you, having different backgrounds, beliefs and experiences, can coexist peacefully. There are some very strong-minded individuals here that have their beliefs, and yet are capable of having acceptance for diversity.

I am intrigued for the so-called 'change' that is to come upon your nation. It is a very popular unfolding, one that we on our side take interest in. As your nation prepares for material change, our Correcting Time is making spiritual changes. We are hoping that as each person steps up in responsibility, that the personal awareness of self-governance will occur.

I am MARY. I am thrilled to be back with you again. There is always so much to do, and I can say Abraham keeps me very busy. When we think of a civilized society, we think of individuals staying true to the laws of the land. In the Correcting Time we teach self-mastery and how to decrease the animal, and increase the spiritual.

Each person who is self-governing adds to the wellness of the whole. But to get to the point of wanting to add to the whole, one must believe they are working to complete a goal that is good. When you can see good, you are touched deep within and naturally desire to add to that good. When all you see is negativity, then the natural tendency of mortals is to flee, hide, and to find safety.

For instance, the media in the United States rarely reports anything good or positive. They are about making money and give their viewers what they want. The animal side of man loves competition and desires to see action. The dark side of men will cling to the media because it makes his own little environment appear to be more controlled. If you, as viewers, continue to be bombarded with negativity, how hard is it to see the goodness and have desire to add to it!

It is for you like a battle of 'good against evil' – when in truth, we know we must maintain our connection to Father to see the truth and the ultimate good that comes out of any and every circumstance.

I am not saying to close your eyes to the negativity out in the world and ignore it, no. Rather, I am saying – how does your faith levels compare to the information you are receiving through your eyes and ears? Do we have enough faith that when we hear of raging wars around the world that we will not be pulled down, feel burdened and chaotic? Can we not learn from history that this evolutionary planet is moving forward? – slowly, yes, but moving, nonetheless.

This week, we would recommend that you visualize positive scenarios coming from negative circumstances. Attempt to see the good that can arise from adversity. What is the balance between good and bad that your senses are telling your mind?

When individuals can see the good, their budding soul within is drawn to that and wants to add to it. Let us show our fellows we want to add to the good; the good so much outweighs the negative. When we can embrace the Master's teachings and the vision of the Father, we naturally want to bond as a team and move forward with good.

There are opportunities now to point out those common-sense lines from the text, meaning the Urantia Book; the time is now to subtly put that out there – carefully, gently, yes. I am feeling so blessed to be a part of you. We move, grow, and evolve with you. I can see you grow; and in that, I can also see my own growth. It is wonderful to spend time with you again. With that, we shall take our leave, sending you with our best. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Personal Freedom And How Labels and Negative-thinking Does Limit Us

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-19-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always thankful to be in the midst of the realness of any situation because it makes me think a little deeper; it helps me to go past my personal desires to see what I have really been missing.

I can appreciate those who dare to speak their truth without attempts to sway others. We all know that unbridled emotion is a manipulator and stemming mostly from the ego. The pure truth is what it is! and if it is our propensity to accept that without spinning it with our personal agenda, then we are set to receive divine messages from our Father.

I do keep up to date as far as your personal lives evolve so that I can stay current on teaching the lessons. I know that each of you have become more open to spiritual help as of late because many situations you may now be going through are new, and you are in understanding that your minds are gaining further training.

This week, I am driven to speak about personal freedom and how 'labels' limit an individual. Many times you have heard us speak about the negative 'inner voice' and how it trashes normal self-esteem. You will find, as we have, that age and experience is a wonderful thing. With age, you learn that no one person can say what you are; no one person has any right to make you feel 'less-than.'

I do not mean to speak on doing battle with that negative-thinking circumstance, no, but more-so about growing above it, believing that you are a child of God and that 'negativity behavior' is just what it is – negative.

In my mortal days I was thought of as a heartless tyrant, a perfectionist who had no patience with inadequate individuals. I wanted to be feared in the early days of my life, yes, but when my mentor came to enable my enlightenment, I felt my new growth had no bearing on individuals' opinions. I was still thought of as a man to be feared; and therefore, I had to show myself to be a new individual – not because I wanted to change the opinions of others about me, no, but because I wanted to further the plan and purpose of my mentor, Machiventa.

I did indeed, however, feel individuals' opinions of me were quite limiting and thwarting of my good intentions; it was frustrating, and I felt many times I just wanted to revert back to my old ways. This reinvention of my behavior took time for me to get the new self across to my friends and family. I had to have many conversations explaining my new outlook; I had to make my intentions known.

Yes, I was not so much trying to gain trust and respect of those who knew me, but building the foundation from which I could minister to others from. I definitely could not have had any success without the valued guidance I had received from Machiventa.

You each know that we always express our gratitude for you each that are staying the course. Staying the course is one thing that will be most helpful for you in building your ministries. Everything takes time and we must be diligent in our consistent actions; we must be open to explaining our intentions and why we have seemingly turned over a new leaf.

It is easy to see the many individuals out in your ministry who value the reflection from others. This can be good or bad. Popular opinion will say: 'A leopard does not change its spots;' and: 'Once a thief, always a thief.' This attitude, this thinking, is something each one of us must not only cope with, but transcend. We must simply recommit each day to staying the course – "I am in the midst of change and I shall not waiver from my commitment."

Each of us has been building a ministry for quite some time, and the foundation of this ministry begins with truth. I am in understanding about the impatience of mortals and how time seems to discourage people. I can only say that a fresh relationship with Father, each day, keeps you inspired to act upon those ideas you know to be true.

That is all for this evening. I would ask that you have not anxiety over our meeting here. As I said before, we are at a point in our ministry where we are concentrating on supporting each of you in your ministries out in the kingdom. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Ego Works For the One; Spirit Works For the Many | New Talents and Gifts Derive From the Spirit

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-26-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am appreciative of being among you truth-seekers this evening. I have found that no matter what issues may arise in this group your overall main intention is to have the truth brought forward. The truth may not always be what you would have wanted, but your spiritual and mental health allows you to work toward accepting things as they are. Our desire for truth enables us to have a more clear connection with Father and His associates.

We are coming to a point in our spiritual maturity where we want the truth in spite of any controversy it may cause. I have always gotten along well with this group because you are demanding of truth and refrain from mysticism. These spiritual practices you now think of as reality would not have been trusted in the past. Now you find yourselves, like the apostles, to have set aside ego-fulfillment for the reality of the Father.

I can appreciate the truth because it is simple – it is a logical look at a beginning place to start any project. Father has given us the gift of mind, yes, and we are learning to apply 'reasoning' to religion and 'science' to spirituality. The Correcting Time has long awaited the integration of various mortal theories – meaning that topics of new discoveries can overlap. For example, 'science' is not just science of the observable, it is becoming also related to things unseen.

Yes, mortal scientists are discovering still new things every day. Mortals are learning they do not have all the answers, but rather, that they are barely just scraping the surface. We are finding the lines of separation between the known and unknown to be blurring – and from that, more important things will come into focus.

As Father's children, we are finding ourselves more alike than we thought. No one is set above another. Each one of us has a destiny to fulfill. We have experiences that will map out our future. We can have desires for a certain career or post in life and find fruitful fulfillment, yes, especially considering that desire is not in contrast with your natural gifts and spiritual skills. What are you gifted at? What has Father helped you with in developing your human and spiritual skills?

Your spiritual foundation is for the most part, set and clear. When you integrate this with your natural gifts you will see yourself developing with new skills. For example – a person who wants to become a doctor may find they can use their spiritual skills to assist in creating wellness, not just to draw from the education they have to perform surgery and prescribe medicine. As well, a person who works at a bakery has access to the public every day and can draw on those spiritual skills to show care and concern not only in their quality of work, but also genuine care and concern for the customers. There are always opportunities to show the Father's love to another, yes.

Everyone is good at something; and when your desires are coming from your spiritual foundation, new skills are created. Yes, our ministry is designed for us. We might be cautious of the ego that craves attention and status. Maybe a scientist who has discovered a new gene will want his name put on that discovery – and yet, he has a whole team that assisted him in the breakthrough. The temporary gratification may be there for the one person, but it is not conducive to incorporating the whole. Many of the other researchers who helped in the discovery will not feel their work is valuable. I am saying, we have to be watchful of the ego who works for 'self,' and rely on the spirit who works for the 'many.'

I will look forward to hearing your stories of how your natural gifts and spiritual skills serve in your ministry. Do not doubt that you have them. Do not doubt the gifts. Work toward refreshing your relationship with Father, Michael, and Mother. Ask them for their assistance on making your ministry work at full capacity.

That is all for this evening. Mary sends her love and we both look forward to the next time we will meet. You have plenty to do – have no doubt that we will be available to assist. As always, our love goes with you. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom. [Editor's note: Have not yet found Feb. 2nd or Feb. 9th transcripts – if there was such.]

The Master's Example Of A Criteria For Problem-Solving. How Father Ministers To 'Us'
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-16-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am so pleased to be witness to your taking on new responsibilities as a worker in the kingdom and Correcting Time. Our time now is spent in utilizing these lessons we have learned over the many years we have been together. I can see how the world is on the brink of many changes, and we have individuals like you that are having to facilitate those changes.

I can see how spiritual and material ideas pull at you – especially when time has not been made to sit in stillness to receive calmness and balance. It is up to each one of us to strengthen our own spiritual muscles. You have plenty of material to study from and become strengthened by in order to freely move about in the world, and stillness is that catalyst which gives clarity and assurance. Your support here of one another also is a reminder of our Missions' focus.

During the next few months, we will be more involved in social issues. Each time one of you steps into a crowd you are a representative of Michael's Spirit and have access to His wisdom and words.

I am MARY. My greetings to you also. I believe that I admired the Master so much for His problem-solving abilities. I know that living in the everyday drama of life we can be driven to distraction, and simple problems become magnified. The Master could logically look at an issue and see the problem for what it really was.

For instance, there was a time when the group of us were to go out and minister to the multitudes, and there were arguments among us from time to time over which individuals we should desire to go speak to, and who among us should be assigned to which group.

There were many in the crowds – men, women, children, wealthy and poor, as well as the sick and afflicted. Some of the inexperienced among us wanted to have time with more discussion, teaching, and less serving or menial work. The older apostles had taken the issue to the Master and explained the seeming upset in assignments among the group. I had wanted to have experience with the more spiritually-polished individuals because they seemed to be a more advanced group.

The Master called us together and had literally broken down the problem for us by creating a chart of sorts in the sand. He showed us the real root of the problem was that we had become more concerned with our own credit than the true focus of the ministry; we were more interested in what we could 'receive,' rather than what we could 'give.' Most of us had no idea how limited our time was with the Master, or I do believe we would have made the most of our short time.

I say to you, my friends, when we do have problems, they are easily magnified by how we picture 'ourselves' becoming affected. When we can break down a problem and see it for what it really is, then it is much simpler to work toward a solution.

The Master had us look at our issue in this way: "Instead of worrying about who was going to minister to who, how about we simply allow Father to minister to us." and then He dispersed the group. We were each there with a common message and found a place to become useful. The crowds were definitely energized and enthusiastic for the good news to start becoming a reality.

I kept my eyes open that day for the possibility that Father would be ministering to me; even though I was there to work, I had many experiences with many different types of individuals, even men – and that was uncommon for a woman of that day and age. The men apostles found that they had received a true blessing of a ministering to their spirit as well.

In our ministry today, we could look at the Master and see Him as this complicated being with so many facets of His personality – when in reality, He shows us simplicity so we can have a clear focus on what our real purpose is. When we are confronted with problems, make your line in the sand and put the issues out before you to observe. What is your criteria for problem-solving? What problem-solving skills have we learned throughout our spiritual career?

You are each trained to go among the multitudes and be a source of good news, a source of peace. Many individuals appreciate your love for truth and will count on it in these years to come. Remember that we are in the middle of change and will not likely see the results until we come out through the other side.

I am love-filled being here with you this evening. I hope you know that we are both available should you have need. Perhaps next time we will have a few questions. As for this evening, we shall take our leave. Know that we are in appreciation for your continuous striving to become better, to help when and where you can. Our love goes with you. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Holding Firm to the Truth | Individual Assessments
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-23-2009
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. As I look around the room, I am reminded of a time long ago when I had sat in the love and comfort of many friends. In that aspect, this social scene has not changed much; there is still food and drink – accompanied with conversation of the latest issues of the day. I am enjoying every moment you spend together.

I am also impressed by your tenacity to hold firm to the truth. Everyday life can seemingly crush your spirit. Yes, you may go down with some despair, but not for long; your faith is indeed a branch to hold on to. I am overjoyed at the fact you are each willing to take the hard lessons and make the most out of them. Think back perhaps ten years ago when some annoying complication arose and your spiritual focus was not quite practiced. Remember the moaning and groaning and complaining. Today you can look at an issue with spiritual eyes and make a decision based on your spiritual education.

As well, I am inspired by your courage to freefall in some situations. Sometimes you have not any idea what is going on, or the reason for it, but you trust Father enough to go with the moment. You may not see the value in His method at the time, but believe me, the goodness that comes from it goes a long way. I offered up questions last week. Mary and I stand by if you do have some.

MIRIAM: Abraham, my friend, Emily, couldn't come tonight. She is so enjoying reading the Urantia Book and developing a friendship with you and Mary. This really means a lot to her and she wanted to know if you could share her spiritual name and if you have an assessment?

ABRAHAM: I don't usually share such facts unless the person is present, but I have met with her and can give her a few words. From my understanding of the English language, the spiritual name for Emily sounds like Vonna. I would recommend her to journal the most interesting facts she reads in the Urantia Book. Write down those lines that touch her soul. This is a good method of study. She does well. Next question.

BARBARA: I would like an assessment if possible.

ABRAHAM: Of course. My daughter, you have had quite the tumultuous year – and I can say, I admire you for your courage and stamina. I understand that you have worry over loved ones in which you cannot do anything to control or help. My suggestion on that topic would be to encourage your loved ones to grow up. Do not enable them anymore – no financial help. You have given a great deal of yourself, and it is time for you to be taken care of. I can promise you that the Master stands before you with open arms and longs to hold His daughter and give her the strength to carry on. You are in a position where you touch the lives of many; and our meeting is no accident for I have known you for quite some time. I believe you have always had the best of intentions, even if the decisions were not quite right. Don't be so hard on yourself. Your guilt does not help you become a better person; it does not help you live your life today, but is a hindrance and a deterrent for the growing spirit. Although, my daughter, you do well. Keep observant and make every effort to view life-situations through the eyes of our Father. Know that He brings out an ultimate good out of every situation. Another question?

TECTRA: Yes, Abraham, I have two questions: I want to preface this by saying thank you so much for the personal meeting we had last summer when we got together with Nina. I am so thankful for your words at that time. I would like to have you talk about what I have gone through, and still going through; although it is not as severe as last summer. It seems to me that my experience these days – that I am more alive to Spirit and goodness, just the awesomeness of life. Is this kind of what is going on all over the planet with people? It is distressing in a way to see these new realizations and new eyes that I am looking through. So my question is: Could you just talk on that subject on a worldwide scale?

ABRAHAM: Certainly, I can say a few words. I believe, in your circumstance, that it was unique because you are a minister in this Teaching Mission. There are experiences you have not yet had that will help in your training to become more approachable and have the ability to tap into the Father's words. On the other hand, there are millions of individuals who are feeling this quickening in their spirit, and it is due from the growth of the Supreme Being. Every time the Supreme Being is encoded with more information, there is a reflection back to the people on the planet, and this is felt physically by you. It is felt mentally as well, although it is sometimes confusing. You could say that the dose of incoming spiritual information you felt and perceived was perhaps ten times greater than the average mortal. We find you to be in an excellent position to reach people on a one-on-one basis. You have a wonderful perception of the Master, yes, and you do know Him very well. You have incorporated His best qualities into your personality, but I believe there might be some stifling of your emotions. Even the Master had emotion that did erupt from His being at times. As a mortal, sometimes you must let it out, let the truth come forth. Maybe your understanding of this truth is not the correct perception – and yet, it is not to be bottled up and brewing, creating chaos. Take the next few weeks to study over the strength of the Master; He was indeed strong – many times seemingly harsh, yes, and yet this was definitely Fatherly. Be not afraid to step out and be yourself. You are a wonderful man and it is an honor to work with you. Have you another question?

TECTRA: Yes. Thank you so much, Abraham. That was beautiful. I understand that the Correcting Time is ongoing; and I don't know how that all works out on your end, but I perceive there are myriads of angels and supernal beings working on our planet to upstep people's minds. And like you just mentioned, there is also the encoding from the Supreme Being happening regularly, to infuse us more. I am curious if there is also some kind of energy other than what is created by the Supreme Being, like energy waves happening that our planet is going through?

ABRAHAM: The only thing I can think of is energy created by human beings. As you know, we are with a great percentage of output of energy due to emotions. And this energy does conjoin with other's energy – sometimes this is bad, sometimes this is good. The hope for our Correcting Time is that our Mission workers would bring forth the light-energy that brings hope and sound solutions. Again, I can think of the circuits that carry energy. I can say that the Supreme Being also sends out an energy, and mortals can tap into this energy – or, create their own energy. I don't know if I am understanding the question...

TECTRA: Like where our planet is in space right now – is there anything from the outer realms of space hitting our planet right now to facilitate this awakening that is happening?

ABRAHAM: I believe it is nothing out of the ordinary, only the circuits that are quite busy; and that is possibly what you are feeling. We are, on our side, trying to become more organized; and we do have legions of helpers attempting to move this energy in a correct direction. Good question, my son.

MIRIAM: You know how they talk about co-creation – maybe this is very simplistic, but as I grow my love for Father in the universe, then does also the Father grow like does the Supreme Being? As we grow in our energy, is there an increase in strength and faith that would be part of the energy and vibration, or whatever you want to label it?

ABRAHAM: Yes, but more-so instead of 'Father' growing, it is your vision for Him that is growing. You are able to see more, to understand more, to hear Him better. So, not so much 'He' is growing, because He already is all that is, yes, and all that can be. It's more that your spiritual eyes are able to take in more and your understanding is enhanced. Is that helping?

MIRIAM: He is always going to be bigger than we are, always be ahead of us? Like eight-million years from now whenever I get to that place, Father is going to be eight-million more years ahead of me, because He is always going to appear to be growing more. Is that accurate?

ABRAHAM: To some point, yes, regarding your indwelling Father Fragment. But there will be that wonderful day when you fuse with your Thought Adjuster, and it will be as though you have the same experience, same knowledge; and the question of being 'slower' will not even occur to your mind. Yes, so one day you will be one with Him.

ARANDA: Thank you so much, Abraham, for all your advice you gave me since I started coming to this group. I am so honored, so thrilled, just wonderful. The things you tell me are very good. I'm almost over these poison spirits. I need to ask you my name, how to spell it – and, any advice for me now? I love you.

ABRAHAM: I do remember it sounded like 'Aranda,' but when you are on our side, it may be slightly different. I do think it is reflective of your beautiful personality: A. R. A. N. D. A. – I do believe. As far as an assessment goes: I am so overjoyed at the effort you make to understand these spiritual lessons. I am happy that you still find comfort in the religion you grew up with (Muslim) and can integrate the lessons you are learning now. You can see there are basic themes of truths that run through all religions. It has been such an honor to watch you grow and to not give up the good fight of faith. Your efforts to understand our particular philosophy is commendable. You do well.

I believe that is all we can do for this evening. Know that if there are more questions, we can always address them at a later date outside of our group-meeting time. I have enjoyed our personal time together. I find each one of your unique personalities, delightful. Continue in the good works. Mary and I shall meet with you again. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Four Activities That Keep the Mind Healthy and Spirit Connected

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-02-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am certainly uplifted by the positive thoughts here this evening. I find your personalities endearing and I learn from each one of you. When you are in the joy of enlightenment I am so blessed to share in that joy. You are a wonderful family. I know that as the years have passed and the times have changed, the definition of family is not so traditional or even so biological as before. Your connection with one another is a lighthouse in the stormy seas.

I am amazed at all those who have had involvement in the mortal design with the human mind – all beginning with Father, of course. Even after so many years of not having the mortal flesh, I am still learning about the mind and the design of spiritual connection with humanity. I, as of now, have faith come to me easily; but when I was like you, just beginning, faith was such an effort.

Our divine Creator has designed a literal spiritual connection in the brain of mortals – physically (materially). Yes, this connection is there; it is not named by your scientists but believe me, there is a connection to the circuits.

Father has put abundance before you on the Earth that you may live a balanced life. Living a purposefully balanced life is healthy for the brain/Spirit connection. As we have studied with the Life Carriers, we find four particular activities that help keep the mortal mind healthy:

> The first being stillness. Each day we must find a way to rise above the worries and concerns of the day and reconnect with our First Source and Center. Without Father, all meaning is lost – not forever, but for that time you are feeling orphaned. Yes, we must continue to reconnect with our Parent.

> The second activity is social is social connection. It is written – that Father has made each one of you – to share with one another of comfort, love, and wisdom. Every day we must connect with our fellows. The Correcting Time will be largely social, yes, and we would do well to feel comfortable in who we are as a part of the kingdom family; not more or less, just an equal family member.

> The third suggestion for maintaining the brain to Spirit connectivity is creativity in activity. Finding something you love to do opens that channel within the brain to connect with the circuits and find that calm place that is just yours. Working with the hands, singing, reading, sailing, skiing, etc. Where do you find your passion? What is locked up in you that could come forth as a beautiful creation? What rest and rejuvenation for the mind do you participate in?

> The fourth suggestion is continuing education – continuing to search for truth, beauty, and goodness. To exercise the brain in study of higher learning has been proven to keep the mechanics of the brain-connection to the Spirit, healthy. We can see that taking in information, filtering it through our spiritual eyes and having that knowledge on hand, is helpful in creating social ties. There are always topics you can connect with on a soul level with your peers.

For the most part, for having a healthy body and mind, you know what to do – good food, rest, and exercise. Our advice this evening is to take care of yourselves so you can grow in your position as Teaching Mission workers. We long for you to feel that healthy family connection.

Mary and I are aware of the upcoming changes that have an affect in your lives and on our Mission's purpose. Have not fear. That is all for this evening. Know that we are always standing by should you have need. Go in peace. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Remedies To The Stumbling Block Of Intolerance

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-09-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I have wonderful memories of our experiences together. I am appreciative of your flexibility over these years. You have each in your own way held this branch of our family tree together. I am always inspired when I see your easy transformation come about.

I have said that our meetings now are mostly supportive of putting your ministry into everyday living. The foundation for the Teaching Mission is set, yes, and each one of us will begin to build upon it. We really have no blueprint or diagram to follow; we have no idea of what our project will look like in the end.

Instead of building our Teaching Mission brick by brick, methodically, we are more allowing of an unfolding of natural creation and 'what is.' Will the bricks simply appear? No. It will take the good works of your ministry to build our Teaching Mission - a mission that will help one and all to enter into the age of Light and Life. I realize your personal ministries are probably more educational for you than for those you minister to - but still, a great deal of your ministry is about making others feel comfortable to be a child who is well within the kingdom of God.

I am MARY. Greetings, once again; I am very happy to be included in this intimate meeting. I overheard your conversation earlier about learning to have tolerance for the changing individuals in the world today. I can see how you are practically buried with various issues in the media: same-sex marriage; the economy; government corruption - the list could go on and on.

I am happy to view you in your personal ministries, reaching deep within for truth, beauty, and goodness. I know at times you are screaming inside for some sort of relief or logic. Especially as we move into our later years - typically, it is more likely we will become less intolerant. I am happy to say that those individuals who irritated me the most taught me so much about myself and how I can apply skills to move forward with a positive angle in any situation.

I know that I once believed Andrew to be so arrogant; I would avoid speaking with him because I was afraid I would say something damaging. It was strange how I ended up often face to face with him, and almost feeling forced into having to deal with his personality. However, I learned that Andrew's arrogance was a form of self-protection. He did have a fear of being looked down upon and/or criticized. As a boy, he experienced a great deal of pressure to become responsible. His parents leaned on him heavily and probably showed him less love than they did his brother, Peter.

In learning to understand Andrew, I learned about individual's various forms of self-protection and their frailties that place stumbling blocks in their lives. In time, I learned to speak with people in a way that would make them feel comfortable enough to open up and feel safe; they knew there was no judgment coming from me; I was there to listen and allow them to search for the very best in themselves.

The Master taught us about spending time with individuals – to really get to know them, asking them questions and allowing them freedom to talk – even if they were completely self-absorbed, arrogant, boring, etc. Many facets of our ministry will not be fun, and you will learn lessons in tolerance. You will see the world's people constantly changing, and you will wonder 'where is God in all of this'?

You cannot blame people for being so 'off course' – this is simply steps in evolution. We cannot allow our intolerance to cut off our possible ministry, like when I tried to avoid Andrew. I am so thankful for the Master giving me a reason to love and be tolerant, patient, peaceful and kind. I believe you each have such charm and finesse. People enjoy your ability to be easy going and the use of humor appropriately.

We keep in mind always how the Master ministered 'as He passed by.' He loved to learn new things and was always fascinated by the mortal mind and how it worked with the Father's plan. What I am saying is, we do not find an individual and make her or him our pet project, no. We are to empower individuals to find the best within themselves. We must be aware of becoming too attached because then we are verging into ego territory – and that can spoil our good works.

Last week, Abraham suggested taking good care of yourselves; this keeps your energy levels full so you can have the ability for maintaining tolerance when others become so annoying or so obviously ego-led. Not every individual will be on your level of spiritual education, but to think of them as inferior also takes you down a notch, and a lesson in humility will be forthcoming.

I am trusting in your ability to embrace diversity and minister to others just as Jesus did, with logic and very little personal attachment. Jesus simply loved people and wanted the best for them; He knew that they have access to knowing what the best is. Some individuals simply need a kind heart to exhibit some faith – some knowledge that all things are possible.

I have enjoyed our evening together. I am always told wonderful stories about you. You, cheerful mainstays, are a nutrient to the well-being of your brother, Abraham – he always says that. It has been an honor to get to know you and serve with you. I thank you for inviting us this evening. Know that we are with continuous love for you each. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Learning Tolerance, Acceptance, And Not Placing Labels On Others Helps Advance Toward Light And Life

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-16-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is a blessing for us to gather once again. I am so honored to have watched you grow over these many years. I can see that each one of you has overcome personal trials that has added to the person that you are today.

Many happenings on Urantia are still experimental. Oftentimes the universe assistants are puzzled in how to help Urantians. Many habits of the world's people are being studied and recorded. We are finally beginning to understand just how different each person is, and that there is no pattern to personalities.

You must realize how blessed you are to have your spirituality as a big part of your identity. You know that when you are making decisions, you will often first think of Father and how He would handle such issues. When you have integrated the spiritual ideals into mortal life, then you are able to live out those ideals; and people understand that is a part of who you are – there is no need to yell it from the mountaintops, your personality speaks for itself in your everyday actions.

When we fully grasp the understanding that Father is a part of us and loves us like no other, then do we find ourselves acceptable ‘as we are.’ Faults and shortcomings are not a main focus, but rather, something to be sat on the lighter side of life. When we can be at ease to be who we are, then are we reserving energy for much more important tasks. To put on a front takes all of your attention, and that uses up a great deal of energy.

As we become closer to Father it becomes unnecessary to have the acceptance of our fellows. We just know we are in the family of God; it is just a fact, not something to keep searching for.

Many times, and even at times within this group, I see that you are so hard on yourselves. Your inner-dialogue for self-chastisement is probably worse than anything anyone would ever say to you. When our minds are stilled on God, then we do not need to re-live mistakes over and over in our mind and be continually punished, no; Father shows us the lesson therein, and when we are aware He tells us to move on.

This is a new time on the planet; old ideas are moving away and the way is being made clear for the new. I am not speaking about money issues, but about people embracing diversity and the realness of life. Know that you, as an evolutionary planet, are still being studied and recorded. We find that you are doing well in comparison to other planets like yours who were affected by the ‘rebellion.’

This week, let us think about if we are putting energy toward a false identity; if so, then make effort to reconnect with the Spirit. Knowing the Masters’ personality and how He was with people, helps us know that we are accepted as we are – and believe me, that is enough! When you feel at peace is when you are accepting of yourself and, those around you. We can be tolerant of mistakes because they are lessons, they are obstacles to overcome.

Also for this week, let us let go of those labels we put on people – and instead, see them as spirit-siblings. We know that this state (Utah) is very much in favor of religious labels. For one week let us experiment with forgetting who belongs to what group, and see individuals simply as family members.

That is all for this evening. Mary will be with us next week to speak more on this topic. As always, we are appreciative of your efforts. Our love goes with you. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Exhausting Energy In Trying To Live Up To the Ideals of How Others Define Us
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-23-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. We are enjoying your conversation this evening on the realities and frailties of mortal living. I find that you each combine compassion with logic and that is a good formula for inner peace. We all know that we are not going to save mankind, but we can help a little each day in our personal ministry.

I remember there was a day when I was overwhelmed by the despair in the world and I had asked Machiventato say a few words to enlighten me on how to handle my emotions and also be a living solution. Machiventa had suggested that I should detach from those things that would bring my spirit hopelessness, and to strengthen my trust in Father's abilities. He reminded me that this planet is experimental and many of the issues that mortals face are 'supposed to be.'

Is there supposed to be such despair in the world? Yes, given the ramifications from the rebellion and default! Are we to have compassion? Of course! and at the same time, we are to detach our emotional selves and put that energy toward trusting Father who can do all things. In many situations concerning mortal life, Machiventa taught me to view situations with compassion, logic, and humor. This attitude helps our spirits to stay strong and keep moving forward with our ministries.

You have seen for yourselves that hopelessness is not helpful. Many times Michael will speak with the Teaching Mission Staff - encouraging us to keep exercising our faith and trust in Father, yes, because even we become overwhelmed from time to time with despair and hopelessness. So yes, we are in understanding. When we are made to feel hopeless, then it is likely, especially with mortals, to quit trying to make any kind of an effort.

Last week we had experimented with the idea of replacing labels we attach on our brothers and sisters - to simply seeing others as spirit siblings. I am pleased to hear your comments on that experience and I would leave you to Mary to provide further instruction.

I am MARY. Greetings, and thank you for always being so accommodating. I know that throughout history there have always been labels or identifications placed on individuals for one reason or another. It would seem that mortal life was better if you were wealthy, educated and 'a man.'

This Correcting Time is requiring that we each broaden our minds to view everyone as a fellow spirit sibling. I am meaning, we all start out life with almost the exact same gifts - we have mind, heart, personality. There are many factors that may shape us thereafter - from parents to environmental factors. But if one can see that this life is simply one step in our ongoing careers then yes, all our experience can make more sense to us.

For the most part however, at this time in history, many individuals are seeing their lives as either a blessing, or a curse from God - it is about 'chasing good fortune' and 'having luck on our side.' There is a point in our mortal careers that we need to stop blaming others for our status in life and take on the responsibility; that when all is seemingly taken away, we are all left with the same gifts: mind, body, and spirit.

I do know that looking back at the time of meeting Jesus at the tomb upon His resurrection, I had gained some popularity for being 'the first one who the Master had appeared to.' Some people thought the Master had chosen me because I was somehow spiritually advanced, and for a time I even thought this was true! But later, reality showed me that I was just in the right place at the right time and that I was simply one who would be willing to share the message.

It was a little disturbing how I had attached to this label of 'chosen one,' yes, because it brought me a lot of attention. There were further issues that my new label had me facing - and that was, people had expected me to have knowledge about certain spiritual ideas that I did not. It seems to be a common theme throughout history for people to want heroes, and at that time it seemed I was becoming one. I wanted to be one, yes, but I was having to live up to an identity which was not me.

I can see how my ego took joy in being made to feel special, and after a while, I became burdened with trying to hide my true identity. I was 'just another kingdom worker' with no more or no less gifts than anyone else. After meeting with the Master on a few of His resurrection appearances, I was brought some relief by Him showing me that I was important and loved 'just like everybody else,' and not more-than.

It was a great relief to let the façade of my being 'spiritually advanced' go. It was helpful to confide in my sisters that this strange occurrence was happening; it was somewhat humorous and yes, we had great fun with it. It was so much better to be my true self than the person that people thought I was. I found peace within to know that the Master knew of my mind games and still loved me, and was still showing me the value from such an experience.

We all want to be a hero and held in high accord with our fellows - and that comes naturally when you can live your life as the Master taught. Last week, Abraham spoke of us 'defining others.' This week I am speaking of our attempts of living up to the ideals of how 'others define you' - that it is wasted energy and time. What you value most is what you will become.

This week I would request that we go before the Father as little children. Let us release ourselves from the useless garbage we have piled upon ourselves and each other so that we can get down to the business of true ministry. Your Utah weather is a mystery, I know. As each of you are looking forward to Spring, take a moment to appreciate nature for what it really is - it does not try to impress anyone; it is what it is, and it serves.

That is all for this evening. I am overjoyed to be with you again, and sometime soon we will allow more questions. From Abraham and myself, we send you with our love. Until next time, shalom.

Overcome Those Mental Blockages So We Can Receive That Healing Love From Father
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-30-2009

Back

I am Abraham. Welcoming me each week touches my heart and soul. I am honored to be in the presence of individuals who are deep-thinking and socially conscious of worldly issues.

Our years together have taught us to be 'givers,' for in our studies of the Master, and the entire Urantia text in general, we have learned to be generous with our spirit. Have no doubt you are kingdom workers and have many tasks – some you have already done, and those you have yet to do.

The Teaching Mission is not about individuals calling for attention, but more about living your life as an example in honor of the Master. As givers, we have a tendency to forget about recharging our own spiritual batteries. I believe that when we gather, we are renewing our spirits and regenerating our ideals – and doing so with a positive energy.

Remember when you first became conscious of God the Father – the warmth that surrounded your body and filled your soul to overflowing. Such a feeling of love-connection and well-being gave you such joy – and naturally, you wanted to share it.

In other words, good news was practically pouring forth from your being. And as we have matured in the spirit, we have somewhat lost that enthusiasm. That is common and the reason why we should spend time re-filling our own souls with the Father's presence – His love-connection and well-being.

At this stage in your spiritual education, it is perhaps a good time to pause and reflect: There are incidents that have occurred throughout your life that you may feel has scarred your outlook, attitude, or soul. These seemingly damaging occurrences can create blockage between you and your spiritual goals if you are not open and willing to learn from them.

To be unforgiving, or stubborn in grudge-holding, does create obstacles between you and the good feelings you have with Father. For correction and healing, Father will nudge you with these issues from time to time; and when you are ready, He will show you the lesson in these past scarring events. You do have to ask: "What is the message here?" You have to be willing to ask Father: "What is it you want me to know?"

Father wants for your growth and closeness to Him. He wants for you to feel the spirit-connection so that you can overcome these mental blockages and receive spiritual information. Father wants for your enthusiasm to return. With unforgiveness or anger, you are not going to receive that healing love from Him.

This time of year we speak a great deal on the resurrection of the Master. How inspiring is it to have been shown a most wonderful example of the Man/God who put His life into the Father's hands without question, take the human punishment that He did, and still follow through with the Father's plan. In death, He was renewed. We can take a metaphor from this by putting our lives into the hands of our Father – asking Him to cleanse our spirits; asking Him to show us the growth we have to achieve by our daring to look into the dark corners of our souls for that residual that is binding.

By following the Master's example of putting everything into the Father's hands, and following through 'no matter what,' we can be renewed in spirit and regain that born-again enthusiasm. It is such a beautiful energy when the child realizes the Father has been there all along.

Let us allow our spirits to be cleansed of these spirit poisons so that we can once again feel the Father's love, the family connection, and personal well-being. We have a lot of work to do as givers in this kingdom. We must remember to refresh our spirits and allow ourselves the ministry of Father and His associates.

That is all for this evening. Mary sends her regards and suggests that next week we have questions. Know that you are each capable wonderful beings that are dearly loved. Go in peace. Until next week, shalom.

Find Our Personal Gifts And Put Them To Work In The Ministry

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-06-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I thank all of you for your efforts made each day to further the cause of our Master. It is an exciting time in our Mission because we are beginning to see the spiritual gifts more fully as a regular part of everyday life. The children that are born in this era will have these spiritual gifts as if they had always been a reality. You that have had to work by faith will see, and probably already have seen, subtle changes. When our intentions are pure then the gifts are naturally flowing. These gifts are helpful tools in our ministry.

When we look back on the life of the apostle Simon Peter, we can see how his experience with the Master had taught him to be a more eloquent speaker. In their beginning days, Peter was always the first to show irrationality; but time with the Master and personal experience showed him how to apply his thoughts to the best possible speech that would reach the masses.

We can look at each one of these apostles and see how their habits had changed and gifts had blossomed. Of course your gifts now will be slightly different because of the mended circuits and input from the Supreme Being. We can all be assured that everyone who desires these spiritual skills will be prepared to have them. The Master has His plan to bring Urantia into an age of peace and enlightenment. With your assistance, the plan is accelerated - up-stepped, so to speak.

Think about your years in the Mission and those skills that you have seen sharpened. Each of you have gone through a transition. Perhaps those participants that were quiet and shy are now more able to reach the souls of those they come into contact with. Maybe those that had deep desire for attention has found that attention from Father is all they need, and life has become more balanced. Those who played a role as 'a victim' in life maybe now see the difference in their life according to various spirit-minded attitudes they have put forth.

Yes, we can all see improvement and maturity. You have wanted it and asked for it, and I see you becoming more beautiful with each passing day. Well done. Let us take this week to find those gifts in our personal lives and put them to work in the ministry. You are a rock for many. I am aware there are a few questions if you should like to proceed.

MIRIAM: Abraham, the short version is HELP. The longer version: The past couple weeks' lessons have been really helpful. I feel like I am a chocolate mess. I think I am starting to find my way out of the blockages. These past months of my work engaged in the 'Women's Conference' took a toll on my health. I feel like I am struggling. If you could give me some pointers, or anything you could share with me.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I perceive your pain is from old injuries and you are doing what you can to exhaust your human resources. In your journaling time, I want you to answer a question: What did you receive from your service in that Women's Conference? Be honest because that is important in finding out if you are carrying hurt, which does not help the body. Your hard work over the past year has been difficult on your physical being, yes, and it will take time to get back to normal. I do know you, Miriam, to overdue on chores at home. I know you love the garden – and in a beautiful way, that is your salvation. I would recommend that you do your work in small allotments of time and be sure to rest. Have not worry over getting tasks completed quickly, but be in the moment of that thing that you love to do – the feel of the Earth in your fingers; the warmth of the sun; the kiss from the wind; and always, the gift of harvest. You have been so giving and kind with the many individuals you are in connection with – I would only suggest that you try not to take on so many assignments at once. Overall, my daughter, things are as things should be. You do well. (Miriam: Do you think I procrastinate?) Abraham: No, I wouldn't say you procrastinate, but I would say that those issues that are bothersome, you tend to set aside – not intentionally, but just as a habit that you have always had.

MIRIAM: Do you have a suggestion on that?

ABRAHAM: Yes. With various issues, I would put a priority on them and simply do one thing at a time. When something appears to be too much, be not afraid to ask for help from your friends and family. Many times when you can talk things through do you find most issues are not as big as you think they are. So put a priority on things that must be done; dissect them in your mind and take one step at a time toward completing the goal. It is common to feel overwhelmed, yes, but when you can break down a problem and have some sort of control, then problems don't appear to be so big. That is all.

SIMON: I would like an assessment with your wise counsel, please. We are wondering about something: In sort of spiritual mode, we are hearing some 'taps' and seemingly at the right timing. I would like to hear more about that – is this a manifestation?

ABRAHAM: Some of the noises that you hear are spiritual beings that are trying to get your attention. When you do hear these noises, be quiet and see if you have any impressions of a message. Be practical of course. Noticing these noises is a part of the gifts that I spoke of this evening. These noises have always been there, you are simply beginning to notice them. Each one of you has had physical changes in the brain that are accommodating to the needs we have in the Mission. In other words, you are becoming more equipped to handle spiritual occurrences that you would have had, had not the Rebellion occurred. I have faith in each one of your abilities to recognize spiritual messages. Some occurrences that may happen might only be a reality of the physical world; but I trust in your ability to recognize a message, where there is one. There are a number of gifts that Father has granted you each that you are only now becoming aware of. I do caution you, however – if you display any fear in noticing new occurrences then, of course, Father would slow it down until you're ready. The main focus is that we have our Master's plan and purpose to fulfill. Is this helping, Simon? (Simon: Yes. Thank you.)

ARANDA: In working 40 hours during the week, always standing, I have much pain on my feet, but also emotional pain. I know I have weakness inside; if someone says something I don't like, I start crying. I don't know what to do. I want to be strong in this. What can I do to make myself a stronger person in life?

ABRAHAM: Understood. I know that your job demands a great deal of energy, and the physical pain you feel is normal. I would recommend that you look within and ask: What is really important? Do you do an activity at the cost of your health? I know that most people must have employment and there are issues one must think about when going out to give out energy. At some point, you are emptying the soul and not taking energy back in. There needs to be time throughout the day where you are allowed to take in energy – such as resting; listening to music; talking positively with a friend. I see your priorities as a bit confusing. Think about those things in life that are truly important. Sometime, when you are able, stop and write down five things that you think are important. Then I would ask you to write down five things you think Father thinks are important. As far as your sensitivity expressed in crying, I see that as completely common. I don't see it as weakness at all. When we have pain, this present society has taught us we must not feel it or show it. There is absolutely nothing wrong with showing pain. That should take off some of the pressure you have. As far as the sensitivity causing frustration, I do believe it stems from issues involving your ego. I see you making transitions, and it is difficult; you are feeling pulled in many different directions. This is self-imposed – it doesn't have to be this way. If you want, I can make time to have words with you during your journaling time, just the two of us. Listen for me and we will chat, Aranda. Is there another question?

ZONYA: Yes, is quitting my job to do what I am doing now, a correct choice?

ABRAHAM: It is difficult to say without allowing time to pass. You know that changes in a career takes a lot of time and resources. I would always advise you to play it safe and make sure you can keep up with financial demands. As you gain more time and experience, you will become better at what you want to do – and of course, business will grow therefrom. But in the meantime, you still have to pay the bills. I would recommend that you play it safe and have patience, knowing that transitions take a lot of time. You are very bright and I know that others see you as a gift. You are a good teacher in showing others how to work and live lovingly. While you may be changing careers, your real ministry still is with those people you come in contact with every day. Don't allow discouragement to sneak up on you. Remember to play it safe. Is this helping? (Zonya: Yes, thank you.)

ABRAHAM. If that is all, I must express how much I enjoy spending time with you. I learn every time we meet, and I am made to laugh and know real joy. I thank you. Mary sends her love, and remember, anytime you have desire to speak with us, we will be there. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Resurrection Morning | Being Flexible Helps Us Evolve With Serenity Instead Of Chaos
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-13-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying the peaceful atmosphere here this evening. I really enjoy hearing you speak in this group because I feel you are giving your very best. You are not worried what others may think of you, you simply want to add to the overall truth, beauty, and goodness; this type of attitude will be helpful when ministering to your fellows day by day.

I can appreciate that you strive to live a balanced life – you work, rest and play; you make time for study and service. We know this is not our world, but it is our home for the meantime. To tend to obligations helps to make our lives better; and that feeling of ‘doing the right thing’ is a direct connection to Father. Even the smallest of deeds strengthens spiritual circuits between you, the Father, and your fellows.

I know each week as we visit, I am always renewed in spirit. The overwhelming sensations I have in doing my particular job seem to be made clearer and I am reenergized to go forth and be about the Father’s business. The Easter holiday that Christians just celebrated is a good reminder that this life is to go on into the next, and that we will be made into the resurrected morontia form, just as the Master was.

I am MARY. I am with great joy to see you once again. I learn as much from you as Abraham does. Even though the stories of old about ‘the resurrection’ are not quite right, they still perpetuate hope and feelings of goodwill.

Meeting the Master for the first time upon the resurrection, I had no idea who He was at first, I was simply trying to do what I thought was best, which was finding the body of the Master to embalm properly. This was such a devastating time for all of us who had just experienced His crucifixion. We simply wanted to take our traditions and pay honor to the Master’s flesh; I and my sisters had our plans for this, and they were not to happen because the body was gone.

It is difficult for us who have our little traditions and habits to set these aside and try to see the bigger picture. The bigger picture was – the Master had fulfilled His promise by resurrecting and appearing to me – not as I had known Him before but I recognized His voice and the manner in which He spoke to me.

For the Master to have appeared to ‘a woman’ first, really had done a lot to up-step women’s status in the churches; and as such, I went from a disappointment of not being able to continue the traditions when somebody dies, to being given a message by the Master to go and notify the men apostles that ‘the Master had risen.’

Many times we are so stuck in our traditions that it is difficult to receive new information. Even now, many of the Christian churches still promote the old information, and then wonder why the numbers of people are not what they used to be. Hopefully, the churches know they must evolve, just as everything else has had to.

Thinking back to those days of the appearances by the Master – this had certainly opened our eyes. Indeed, we were elated at this new information – and, of the confirmed realities of what would become of us after our lives in the flesh were over.

We each know that disappointment can be the closing of one door and an opening to another, and that it is difficult to keep the brain and heart synchronized. There are many issues that we wish to see come to fruition; and when they do not, we have to learn from history that maybe something else is in the works – maybe something else which Father wants to happen. We know He is our Sovereign and has full knowledge of all that was, is now, and all which will take place.

Yes, if we can quickly get over our disappointments then we can quickly reconnect with the Father to find out His will and what He wants to see happen. Maybe somebody had wanted to be a doctor and finds it is not going to manifest. Perhaps it is because this person has ties to the Correcting Time and will fulfill greater assignments than being a doctor.

This is not to say Father does not want you to have your dreams – of course He does! I am saying, your flexibility will help you to evolve with serenity instead of chaos. At this time in our experience and history, we have learned that anything is possible; our open minds will help us to reach our goals, faster.

This week, try to look for what is really happening in any given situation. Some surface-dilemmas are an illusion for some deeper occurrence to be realized. Be not afraid to stray from tradition, especially those that you have no meaningful understanding why you are doing them anymore. Your feelings of inner-peace can be a guide that will show you logic and practicality. Just like the Master's resurrection, we know all things are possible.

That is all for this evening. Know that Abraham and myself are overjoyed to spend time with you. We send you with our love. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

What Are Our Gifts In The Ministry | Time For Accelerating Into The Ministry

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-20-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always made to feel welcome and I very much appreciate it. Times have changed – from being mere witnesses, to excited believers, to now, dedicated workers. Dedicated workers will do the tasks of the ministry that are not fun; perhaps these tasks are even dirty or boring.

It is interesting to spend years here with individuals and see how they are growing in certain directions – directions that will take them either more toward the ego, or farther from. I can safely say that you, my friends, are farther from the ego of your beginning Mission days, and have developed a love for truth that is everlasting and which assists you on your way into the next life – the morontia life.

I am so honored to be able to watch you in your interaction with your fellows trying to promote the view of our Master and the Father. I know that various personalities in life can be difficult to work with, but I see you each in good balance using detachment and humor. ‘Detachment,’ meaning not easily hurt by someone’s reaction or rejection.

I am made glad to see how devoted you are to doing the right thing. While you know you have your spiritual tasks to complete, you still maintain the material needs. Yes, the material needs can be cumbersome, but in that busy interaction there are individuals that you work with who are in such need of being acknowledged and/or a little praise. A little encouragement brings out the best in individuals and opens the door to their higher power.

As I research the many areas of my student's needs, I find there is a great amount of people who are feeling lost and alone. I find it wonderful to see you make some casual conversation or eye contact to help weave these individuals into the fabric of our Correcting Time; as you know by now, it does not take much. Yes, a smile or greetings can do a great deal to make somebody feel important – important in a definition that does not put one above others, no, but helps them to feel like they belong.

The human mind is amazing in that practically each individual feels like they are going through some solitary experience that nobody else understands. In the recent Easter celebration, many minds are turned towards the life of Christ. These individuals can, for the most part, see the possibility for new, for change themselves. The churches (or traditions) however, would tell them they are not quite worthy of the possibilities and promises Christ offers. Such is a shame.

How blessed are we to know that the Lord Jesus is at hand, and His Spirit of Truth infiltrates the darkest corners of human living. If anyone understands the plight of mortal living, it is the Master. He has been through everything, from loneliness to terrible stress. He is a wonderful guide to talk us down from our despairing ledges and make the best possible salvage from our so-called wrecks.

I can’t express how elated I feel when I see you each caring like you do – so devoted and open to learn. We can find a sure bet that as we have learned our lessons well, the Master will be forthcoming with yet another. He longs to have you draw near Him. Therefore, the more you learn, the closer you are to Him – and that is His Joy. You have not any idea how He, Michael, our Creator/Brother, knows you each ‘individually,’ and loves you with complete unconditional love.

I can say with authority that the Master is greatly enthused by the success thus far in the Correcting Time. When you dare to think of your most adventurous game – daily living itself – think of the Master as your partner and Father as your coach; both, totally equipping you for the game of a lifetime.

This far in our Correcting Time our moves have been slow but sure. Now we are finding we must accelerate our moves; so therefor are we training you for more ministerial maneuvers. It is the hope of our Master that you will be challenged and find the unfolding most interesting.

Some time back we spoke of spiritual gifts. We ask that this week you pay attention to your inward leadings that show you what you are gifted at, as far as the ministry goes. Be practical and filter it through your spiritual eyes. You that are dedicated to the service must maintain good mental health; so we ask that you do self-exercises that facilitate that - such as stillness, meditation, creativity, rest, and recreation.

That is all for this evening. Mary, as usual, sends her best. We both offer you all the love that we have. Go in peace. Until next week, shalom.

Reconnecting With Loved Ones Who Are With A Spiritual Attitude

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-27-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am so grateful to see your beautiful faces again. Always before we start our lesson I pray: "Father, these are your children. Tell them what you would want them to know." I always rely on Father for the highest good to come forth when we gather. I feel blessed to know I am not alone or have to rely on my sole wisdom.

Every week I give you to the Father, and that makes my task of communication easier. I am impressed by your integrity as a group to stay on the side of reality - meaning, that you take our words seriously and put them to work in your own lives.

I am MARY. Greetings, my brothers and sisters. As is Abraham, I am in appreciation of your honesty concerning your daily lives - and, in the Teaching Mission. I also am grateful to know that Father is at hand - not just during our meetings, but always.

I see you each as strong and intelligent, always to keep fighting the good fight of faith. At times individuals that take pride in their strength will be overwhelmed, and life becomes a burden. It is freeing when you can get with your loved ones, explain your stress, and have that support from friends and family. Life, by itself, is a great deal to handle. Independence is commendable, yes! and yet when one is too independent, life can easily become a burden - and hopelessness sets in, as does perhaps, apathy.

I know when I first worked with Jesus, I was given various tasks to go and help the sick and afflicted; I had a lot of difficulties because I had not done such work before. For some reason, my pride would not allow me to admit my difficulties; I felt I would be exposed and seen as weak or defeated. Finally, the stress became too much, and I believed that I could not be of any help in the Master's ministry.

One day I just broke down and told my friends, my sisters in the ministry, that I felt overwhelmed and 'was not cut out for such work.' I had told them I wished to quit and go back into my life of solitude. In just speaking to my sisters, I felt unburdened; and of course, they had wonderful suggestions that could help me dissect my problems to be workable.

Yes, my friends showed me how to take small steps on various problems that I had, and worry not about the success or failure of my endeavor. They encouraged me to think about compassion for my work and who it was I was helping – and most importantly, how the Master would handle such difficulties. I learned from that point forward that to have friends and family (a support system) is important. Just to be able to talk to individuals and also receive feedback on various solutions, was so helpful.

You can see even in your own group here how helpful it is to free yourself of the mindal burdens of daily life; and with the sharing, you receive some sort of wisdom – and at the very least, understanding and compassion.

This week I am speaking about reconnecting with your loved ones who are with a spiritual attitude. Be not afraid to be your true self. I realize that for some of you, trust in others is difficult, and it seems you would be opening yourself to receive hurt or rejection. But I can say, those that love you will be of service and of support. You cannot live in the shadows and hold your burdens for long without negative consequences.

A person always can talk issues out with their loved ones, yes, and also be there for those who want to talk. This is the strength of the Teaching Mission – a large support system in itself. You always have your Father, Christ Michael, our Universe Mother and Her various helpers, you know that. But being mortal, it is refreshing to talk to someone face-to-face – to feel that true friendship and brotherhood.

This week, spend time with those who know you best; allow yourself to be known, and worry not. That is all for this evening. Abraham and I are due elsewhere, but we are both with great love for each one of you. Until next time, go in peace. Shalom.

Without Father We Are Nothing And The Purpose For Striving Is Lost

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-04-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I thank you for your warm welcome each week. I am amazed that the more time we have spent together, the more love I have for you.

I can truly say that you are not the same people you have always been. I see there has been growth in character and mind, resolving of personal issues, acceptance of the reality of our Mission, and plain courage. I know you each have a story that has put your integrity on the line, and you have chosen Father. I am honored to be in a room with such individuals.

We can think back to a time when the spiritual life was not a priority; there were not guidelines for daily living, no. Personally, I can look back at my life in the flesh and see my skewed priorities as a man with no God. I could say truthfully that I was mere animal – one who lived for my own self-satisfaction. I chased after those ideas that filled my need for ego happiness. When I became to believe in the presence of our Father, I knew at that moment I had to release from my life as a mere animal; and believe me, it was difficult, for I had dreams that I wanted to see come true – through ‘my own hard work’ of course.

Being reborn as a child of the 'One God,' my priorities changed and I let go of my personal dreams. It was important to me to start my life over as a spiritual creature. I can say, however, those dreams I had strived for did not go by the wayside, no, but were transformed and made better; Father showed me 'soul satisfaction' to be everlasting and adding to my growth as a child of God.

I believe one of the most important lessons I learned as a mortal was that 'without the Father, I am nothing,' I am loose and lost energy. Without Father, I do not know love – how to give it or how to receive it. As a human in the everyday world without any sort of spiritual knowledge, I had no real fulfillment. I had lived a life of fear thinking there would never be any real satisfaction, happiness, sense of belonging, or love.

As we look out over the world, we can measure the acceptance of faith by acts of love in communities; and we do see many communities without God, without priorities, without care for the brotherhood.

Ponder upon moments in your own experiences; those days or moments without Father – where was the meaning? Is it not 'meaning' that brings true soul satisfaction? I say, without God the purpose for striving is lost. ‘Without the Father I am nothing’ – I suppose you could say that mortal experience is a lesson in that statement.

We are however, entirely blessed that the Correcting Time is upon us. We have our human workers as well as the spiritual, to bring in knowledge that 'with God there is meaning, purpose, and soul-satisfaction to be had.' Father is not the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, no; He is not the great enticer of souls, no! He is a real Father who loves you as you are, and longs to have you near him and to be truly happy.

With God, we can say with authority that ‘I am! I have all things.’ Truth, beauty, and goodness become a regular everyday part of reality. Father is the filter we can use to find real meaning, to know joy and love. You Mission workers do well to plant those seeds of spirituality. It is important that you each stay strong in faith so that you can show your brothers and sisters that there is meaning to behold and soul-satisfaction to be had.

Our lesson is short this week but will keep you busy. You are indeed each a blessing – to myself as well as Mary. She sends her love. And with that, we will give you our farewell. Until next time, shalom.

To Stumble And Fall Is Normal | Guilt Serves No Purpose

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-11-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am grateful to be with you, my family, my fellow co-workers. It is a blessing to view the Correcting Time in movement, in forward momentum, yes. I can see how you have each made great effort to make personal change to adapt to your roles in the Teaching Mission. I know you have sacrificed and have always strived for the higher road.

I am in understanding of our guest this evening - a student in training as transmission-receiver. We are excited to see the Teaching Mission and Correcting Time move through to the new generation of kingdom believers. If you could view from our perspective, you would be filled with great hope and know that all is well. I am honored to have you, Jordan, here this evening, and would ask you to feel comfortable in receiving a few words if you are in acceptance. I shall give you a few moments. [Editor's note: Jordan (Calvin's son) waited in stillness for a while, but did not receive any words in which he felt clarity.]

[Ellanor TR]: I am MARY. The transmission-receiving process takes time and patience to grasp. I believe that with careful practice, you, Jordan my son, will pick up the words and assist in our Mission.

Our Mission is not a hard one; there are no persecutors for today's kingdom believers. For the most part we work on our self-corrections and share the good news with trusted fellows. I believe the most difficult part is the self-correction. I understand how seemingly weak the 'animal mind' can be. It is understood that you each seek perfection, but I can promise you, you will not reach it in this lifetime and you should not have worry about that. We all stumble and fall from time to time. I believe that every time we have difficulties - therein, is a message for you each.

I know that much of my mortal life I had spent in self-loathing; I could not quite live up to the expectations I had for myself as a minister and a child of God. I think that my self-disappointment had restricted my good works in those first days of the ministry. I know that I carried useless guilt over my life imperfections, and it was with great time and patience that I learned to release this negative feeling and put my mind on something else.

Guilt serves no purpose. It is true we all have a conscience and strive to do good, but I can say that self-correction is ongoing and a part of our purpose as a mortal.

I am aware we are taking some time off for the summer, but have not worry that we will not be around because in this space of time there will be lessons on self-correction and having acceptance for your own imperfections. I do know that many mortals believe they are outside of the kingdom, and feel empty. I know as you go about your ministry, your positive energy that flows from the Father through you will aid in drawing individuals into the love and comfort of the kingdom family.

Our ministry is growing, yes, and we are excited and enthusiastic to be a part of the movement. I know that Christ Michael and the Supreme Being are collaborating on further plans for the planet. They want us to know that they are in every detail; and, that knowledge is moving the whole. Think not that your planet is astray. Our superiors are working with us, side by side, helping each mortal to feel they are a part of the kingdom family; and, that they are able to receive God-consciousness.

It is our own self-correction that puts our spiritual concept into usable action. We always speak of taming the ego, and of course that is a large factor in the process of attaining self-correction. I mean not to say that mortals are born bad, or to say that over time they become bad, no! I am saying that the integration of 'spirituality and the mortal' begins with quieting the wants, and allowing the possibilities.

Jordan, my son, I would say to keep practicing and just allow. As for you, my brothers and sisters, we will have questions next week and prepare for our summer break. Know that our hearts are ever widening with love for you. That is all for this evening. From Abraham and myself, we bid you, shalom.

Work On Our Personal Weaknesses and Self-Correction Over The Summer Break

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-18-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am with such gratitude for our Father who clears the way for us to advance. We can call many events over our lifetime 'coincidences,' yes, but there are some instances that you cannot deny that has been the implementation of Father's handiwork. We will find over our summer vacation that those pitfalls that continue to trip us will be addressed and we will become equipped with new tools to surpass the ego and better know the spirit.

I will recommend that during our break you each make time for regular stillness with our divine Parents. And, we ask that you make effort to contact Mary or myself on your own for our continued fellowship and instruction. This is good practice and helpful in taming the 'animal-minded' ego.

You know Father does not expect perfection from you in this mortal life. You also know you may struggle in your efforts to overcome certain obstacles - this is not to worry however, it is only further training. Father does arrange many people for you to meet; these interactions are for you to show your faith and to work on your own personal weaknesses. I believe this will be both a challenge and, an education. With that, Mary and myself will take questions.

SIMON: Thank you, Abraham. My life keeps improving exponentially, and keeps my view of it coming from all kinds of interesting directions - both in science and personalities. Sometimes I think I do too much and other times not enough. Do you have any direction or words to steer me through it toward balance?

ABRAHAM: Understood, Simon. There is no doubt you are brilliant and have made huge strides personally. I would however, admonish you to beware of the pitfalls that may seemingly set you back. You must not let your progress made up to this point slip away. You know there is only so much one can do for community and the advancement of technology; but believe me, you have been a fountain of knowledge for many, and I don't doubt that you will continue to do so. You must have seen by now that people really love you for who you really are. You don't have to pretend or put on airs; as a matter of fact, you should not let feelings of rejection bother you at all. I do worry that you may 'throw your pearls before swine,' Simon, wherein your good intentions are not accepted. I am concerned that their rejection may hurt you and cause you some self-doubt. This is not to worry if you can keep up the daily practice of staying strong in the spirit through stillness, reviewing these Mission lessons and studying the Urantia text. Overall, I find you are on a correct path. Stay on that path. Well done, Simon. (Simon: Thank you.)

HARRISON: I am sure you are aware that Sarauna and I are living in two places to take care of my mother. I would welcome any thoughts or words you might have for us.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I admire you both for taking care of your responsibilities. I see that this is an adventure that you may be accustomed to living and moving forward through. I would also recommend that Sarauna speak her mind on her wishes and desires to plan out the life ahead. You two have made a wonderful team and have helped many. It is your collaborative gift that strengthens your marriage and your ministry. I believe the Father lays out your ministry right before you, and you will serve wherever you feel driven. My point is, that you make the decision together and have not worry about time being a factor. You will know that right thing to do when it causes you feelings of peace. There is no telling what Urantia Book study groups may come forth in North Carolina. Either way, wherever you each go to serve, make it a team effort. Does this help? (Harrison: Yes, thank you.)

CALVIN: I have a friend that is despaired and just wants to check out of life sometimes because of a condition in her head causing pain. If you know about the situation and have anything to add, it is appreciated.

ABRAHAM: My recommendation is your contact with her will help to drive her into a correct decision. There are many foods that cause headaches and along with that, also environmental factors. I mean not to say seek not medical attention – of course, by all means. Through you, she can learn that all hope is not lost and this is just the beginning. Overall, we have to look at her pain from her perspective. Most of us have no idea what she is experiencing and have no right to judge one's desire for quick escape. Father certainly does not judge her. You have been a wonderful minister over these years, Calvin. I have no doubt you can help her find the comfort she is looking for. She could possibly need to seek out a new doctor as well. That is all.

CALVIN: Our good buddy Marlin, living in Michigan, sends a question. He says there seems to be a lot of demons running around and causing trouble with people when we thought they were long gone. That is the core of his question should you want to reply to him.

ABRAHAM: Demons? No, not at all. There are updated occurrences that are involved now on the planet but have not to do with demons. Midwayers, angels, and 'life carriers' – yes, but not any evil influences at all. This thinking of malevolent spirits is a result of those teachings from his past. It is a deep-seated fear within him that seemingly brings such to life. More study with the Urantia Book combined with our Mission lessons, and more contact with other readers and Mission students will help to make his faith foundation stronger, and he will see not such an evil influence in the world. Many times I believe that people have their own evil behavior that causes guilt and they can project that off onto the world. He could check his own conscience. Have no worry, Marlin, for you have access to greater spirit forces that are above things seemingly evil.

MIRIAM: How are you doing, Abraham? Could you tell us your personal story? Also, I haven't heard anything about Machiventalately. What is he up to? Do you mind me asking?

ABRAHAM: No, that is perfectly acceptable. As you might guess, we are all very busy working with individuals, as well as groups. I have twenty-five transmission-receivers that I am working with at the time, and I am just one Teacher. Mary accompanies me sometimes; other times she goes on her own to aid in the unfair gender causes around the world. I have so much enjoyed the friendships I have made and the new ones I make daily. I still make effort to live a balanced existence – and with all the work there is, that is not always possible, for I too can be stressed. For the most part though, I enjoy the very best that the Father has offered us. Machiventastill works diligently but his Mission is mostly in management. There are so many involved; and yet, still so many are needed to help organize for what lies ahead, I can't even say. But I do know I am grateful that you each have made the decision to help us in the Master's cause, and just as we spoke last week of the new generation coming in to take up our work, we are now seeing our beginning students take on students of their own. Well done. Thank you for asking.

TECTRA: Can you just kind of give me some words or an update. I know you kind of monitor situations that I've gone through in this last year, consciousness-wise. Can you give me some words of things I could possibly work on in this situation with my consciousness and sensitivity?

ABRAHAM: Tectra, I see you working more with some volunteer groups because people feel comfortable with you. You do have an attitude like the Master's, who was not judgmental and was accepting of all. I see you taking up a side project or two. Do some volunteer work. In the meantime, I am excited about the responsible life you have made for yourself as far as the past year has been concerned. We all know that Jesus' apostles were ministers; and yet, they still had to put food on their table. You have come into a full understanding of that just in this past year and I am excited about that. You do however, miss the one-on-one ministry with certain individuals. I would recommend that you do a little research on this topic of a side project and find something that piques your interest. You are a wonderful minister. People feel comfortable with you, and therefore, will open up. Opening up is everything. Is this answering? (Tectra: Yes, thank you.)

ANTHONY: Do you have any help for those of us that are a little reluctant or not able to hear your voice in our own minds?

ABRAHAM: You don't have to hear it 'physically.' There are those who can simply grasp my meaning. It needs not be a big ordeal, no; to make 'natural' spiritual connections has been the purpose over these many years in the Correcting Time. This Mission is a natural endeavor. I would have not worry in expecting an auditory sound, but more-so that you have a simple understanding of what might be being said. If you hear it, you hear it. You can try to hone your skills, yes, but for the most part you can always get the message without having a material means.

SHYANNE: Can you give me a personal assessment before we go on summer vacation, please?

I am MARY: Certainly, I can say that I understand your struggle, my daughter, for I have experienced it myself. I would recommend that you find those things you are believing you need self-correction in; make a list, and then give that time. Perhaps what you believe to be the self-correction you need is really nothing, and Father will show you where you can put your energy. You have a wonderful heart and are a little afraid to have it be out in the open. Yes, this I understand. With our time this summer, let us concentrate on being observant on more of the immediate things that need to be tended to, not so much the long-term things. I feel you may be feeling overwhelmed, and we would certainly never want you to feel that way. For the most part, I know you want to be of assistance in the Correcting Time – and believe me, you are, to a point. After our summer training, you will pick up more ministerial tasks if you should so desire. Have not worry, but rise to the challenge. I believe you are a powerful woman in your own right. We have complete faith in you. Does this help? (Shyanne: Yes, thank you.)

JORDAN: When I'm sitting in meditation or stillness, listening, I hear a few different noises that can almost come into some clarity. Would there be any significance between the different sounds I hear? Does that make sense?

I am ABRAHAM: Yes. Sometimes what you are picking up on is the frequency of the cosmic mind. I know that our methods of communication use those circuits; some are sounds to get your attention, and some are nothing. I would concentrate on the formation of the syllables, not so much worry about sounds. After some time goes by, these sounds will not be confusing to you; but while you are being prepared as a transmission-receiver you will probably notice everything. I believe you want the very best or nothing at all. That is that mark of an adequate transmission-receiver. Focus on syllables being put together, write them down even. Try not to force it but to relax. Simply offer yourself available and that is all. If nothing happens, so be it. We are inspired by your integrity, Jordan, and will do all we can to work with you. I would recommend to make some time with your group transmission/receiver here, Ellanor, to have a practice session.

My words are growing weak. To you each, we have a few weeks rest and then it appears we will be meeting again as a group. Look for those self-corrections in your personal life that might help you to advance spiritually. Make time for rest. Let go of those ties that are self-imposed; and yes, relax.

Know that I will not be far away. We are with continuing love for each one of you. Have not fear, we will meet again soon. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

The Various Stages of Life Are Normal, Learn From Each
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-22-2009
Back

[Editor's note: This meeting was after 4 weeks of no meetings/sessions with Abraham/Mary.]

I am Abraham. Greetings. Our method of communication is a little out of practice so there may be delays. I can't express how wonderful it is to see your beautiful faces gathered here.

The love among you is a growing entity. I have been somewhat involved with your summer experiences. I can see growth, yes, and the effort you each make is truly touching. I am inspired by your desire to always do good. I find it interesting how the various stages of life bring with it certain behaviors – for example:

- A teenager who wishes to have piercings or tattoos.
- A person in their twenties may desire to start a family.
- A person in their thirties concentrates a great deal on material needs.
- A person in their forties looks back upon their lives and sees what they may have missed; a great deal of the time this stage brings about certain rebellious behaviors.
- Individuals in their fifties start looking ahead at how their life will continue on, even after retirement. This is somewhat stressful and can bring about depression and/or anger.
- People in their sixties look back upon their lives to see what accomplishments they may have made. For example, how did their offspring turn out? How may the parent have made mistakes and wished to make amends.
- Individuals in their seventies start to accept life 'as it is' and hold their hands in the air to let go of those ideals they thought were so valuable. The values and meanings are changing when somebody reaches seventy.

I speak on these topics to say that you, as mortals, are supposed to experience these events. You may go down the low path and make mistakes – yes, this will probably happen. With your practicing faith you can climb up out of this hole and reach for the Father's hand, He would gladly pull you into His safety. I am saying, as mortals you will make mistakes, yes; and you know you can rise above them. I pray you not dwell on these mistakes and not allow guilt to get the better of you. Every day is a new opportunity to do better.

I am MARY. I am with excitement to be with you and share your experiences. I find our break has been valuable in that each individual must make more effort to spend time with God. I can say that in my mortal experience I did travel down a risky path; my mind was curious and my heart was lonely. I found myself saying 'what have I got to lose.' I suppose I felt rebellious and a little self-destructive.

We will all make mistakes and perhaps choose a bad road, but I am in agreement with Abraham when he says Father's hand is outstretched waiting for you to take it – to strengthen your faith, open your heart and mind, and go on to the path of light. We really need not look back at the nasty details of our bad choices, but we do need to learn from them, yes.

When viewing the two paths we have taken – the right choices and the dark ones – I ask that we honestly reflect on which path has served you best? Which has shown you the meanings and values that help you to advance as a person and as a child of God? There is so much to learn from our choices – good or bad.

If ever you are in that indulging mode of thinking 'what have I got to lose,' I advise to take caution. I say this because there is a great deal of pain that can await – and some issues, some choices, you may just have to live with. Abraham and I are here to say that you can always start over, always start again at ground zero, always rebuild a new foundation of faith.

Many individuals who have made terrible mistakes dwell in guilt and constantly self-punish; and therefore, really never move out from the cycle. Do you know what I am saying? We can learn from our mistakes, and then move on! We can go toward the path of righteousness and feel the forgiveness of a loving Father who would like to teach you a new and better way, yes.

I do believe that mortals value love more than anything, and the purest form of love that grows your soul comes from the Father, the First Source and Center. This love is like a fuel that carries you throughout the day; it improves your skills to cope with events that may beat upon your spirit. Father's love is a shield that repels those that may try to keep you down. Father's love is empowerment that keeps you in forward momentum.

I am so honored to speak with you this evening. I have missed you and our gathering as a group. I am however, in understanding of the need for the break. Yes, it has been helpful.

I do believe that without our regular meetings - or our continual exercises in faith-building, such as stillness, reading the Urantia Book, and a review of our Mission lessons - that some of us may tend to move toward that dark side. Without faith-building exercise we tend to forget about Father and His goodness. It is, then, easy to find ourselves in an empty place, feeling spiritually orphaned. I tell you to reach out at these times, yes, because He awaits your touch.

I believe that is all for this evening. I am with growing encouragement for seeing the type of people you are, always embracing truth, beauty, and goodness. From Abraham and myself, we send you with our ever-growing love and bid you, shalom. [Editor's note: We are going to once per month meeting for the summer.]

Break Free From The Hold Societies' Values Have On Us

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-20-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always happy to meet with your warm and loving personalities. I enjoy each unique character within this class; everyone has something to offer and everyone also receives.

As I have observed your summer vacation, I see such busyness, almost too busy! and yet, I find you are discovering what is truly valuable in living. When you take societal traditions out of the equation for quality or value of life, you find all things not of eternal value can fall away; yet you are still with the truth of the living God. The more time we spend with Father the more we find out what is really valuable.

The lessons in your daily experiences are like a map that leads you, for the most part, toward advancement. You may veer off the road from time to time but you can always come back and find your right path. I say 'your path' because you are a child of God, and every child has a different path. When the majority of the world comes to believe this, then will you see the stages of Light and Life in motion.

I can understand that you must live a decent life in the eyes of society, and it is understood that you are prone to want and appreciate acceptance - or at least to feel normal among your peers. We, as a Correcting Time group, don't quite live up to societies' traditions, and yet we must remember that 'individually' our path is our own. We are not to feel dread nor guilt because our path is not like other dominant religions, no! we are to learn from our experiences and find growth therein.

Have not regret, but open your mind each day to the lessons Father has to impart to you. I mean to say you are not separate – you and your Indwelling Father; I am saying you can feel comforted by your decision to turn within and find your God, and know that there is value to be had in your daily life experience.

I am MARY. Greetings my friends, my warm spirits. I am with overflowing joy to be with you this evening. I am in understanding of Abraham's words that talk to us about breaking the hold that societies' values have on us and embracing our own path. As you each know, I had made faulty life decisions in my days in the flesh. I certainly had an inferiority complex about the life I had led. I had not felt as though I even belonged in the world, let alone in the kingdom family with the Creator of it.

I can tell you that lessons with Jesus had taught me the freedom of knowing I could go within for answers and know Father for myself. It wasn't up to anyone to judge me – especially myself! and no person was to define my life or have me stay limited. The Master totally lived this belief – and He did not shun the ways of the world, but found comfort in finding Father's definitions of what value there was to be had.

I know that there are so many of Father's children screaming for attention and trying to find love and acceptance. I can say that you, as ministers in our Correcting Time, are fully prepared to make these individuals feel comfortable and 'normal.' Those that feel 'abnormal' feel not accepted, and have no connection with other people.

If you have done your work to make room for Father's definitions in your living, then you have to feel confident that you are on a good path. While you may stray from time to time, those times are especially important, yes, to be observant and to obtain understanding of Father's definitions of those particular experiences.

That is all for this evening. I do believe next time we meet it will be around the celebration of the Master's birth on this planet. I am with happiness to envision our togetherness. Abraham and I would ask you each to make time for us to give you each a few words in your moments of stillness. It is our desire to have a small amount of time with you each.

Know that our love is continually growing, and we bid you go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

The Importance Of Fellowship and of Michael's Closeness | Forget Not To Feed The Mortal Spirit

Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 08-21-2009

Back

[Editor's note: This annual gathering to celebrate Michael's mortal birth was held at Crystal Hot Springs in Honeyville, Utah. Our sister TM mission group from

Pocatello, Idaho were invited.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am quite touched by your offerings and your willingness to partake of truth, beauty, and goodness. I find the spirit of man fascinating in that there are so many facets of the human heart and mind.

I have learned a great deal this particular summer. I have been allowed to visit with you each from time to time. I understand that every day for some is not a day for thoughts of our Father, and tending to the needs of the soul is neglected. It is likened to malnutrition – the obligations of your lives and what your eyes can see can sometimes take priority over feeding the spirit. And this is why we have taught stillness and promoted the study of these lessons and the Urantia Papers.

We as Teachers have helped to feed your spirits for many years; and this summer was an experiment of sorts, to see if our students can feed themselves. This is not to be insulting but to gain knowledge in teaching techniques, for in reality we are still learning about the fruitful connections of the human brain and mind with the cosmic mind.

There are so many angles in this experiment, yes. And in that, we've observed that all too often what one's eyes can see becomes more important than the commitment to understanding meanings and values. Believe me, it is perfectly acceptable – it is your path to take. I am not to say it is right or wrong, no! I am saying I am truly touched and intrigued by the spirit and resilience of man.

I can say, over our many years we have taught the importance of finding meaning and value in our every-day experience – becoming more honest with the self and advancing as a budding spirit and a child of God. And I can see from our break during the summer that you are finding out how important 'fellowship' is. It is comforting to know you are among other believers and truth-seekers, yes. It is comforting to know that you have a real connection to the kingdom family.

Yes, our fellowship is what tells us that what is before our eyes could be quite misleading, and that through one another we can enliven the Spirit of Truth to see and perceive more clearly. The world of today is full of illusions; and without fellowship, study and stillness, we begin to believe in the illusions. And then, when we are disillusioned by discovering the truth, there is a great chance many times, of becoming embittered or angered at God. We can see in this human frailty there are no lessons, no meaning; just simply learning to endure, or exist.

Father gave you one another so that you may have truth and happiness in brotherly love. In love, there is abundance; there is the ability to look beyond what the eyes can see, to a curiosity or drive to find out what the spirit can see. You know that your Brother/Father would like to be included in your fellowship; He would love to know your thoughts, yes, and help you to learn what meanings and values may be in each experience.

How appropriate on this day to think of Christ Michael as a friend, fellow traveler, a brother – one who loves you beyond your comprehension; one who finds joy in your personality, your outlook on the human experience. Our Brother/Father does organize the experiences of mortals with the cosmic mind and Supreme Being; He is fatherly in the way that He cares for His children and desires for each one to advance. Therefore, He must pursue His obligations to help you to learn, yes.

My friends, your experience to the Supreme Being must be defined by Michael; it is sort of reprogrammed, sorted and defined with each experience, to go back to the planet in new and advanced lessons. It is the desire of Michael, our Spirit of Truth, to be as close with you as possible so that He can fulfill His obligation to you and to this world; and also show that He simply loves you dearly as a fellow traveler toward Father. In your fellowship, know that Michael is among you. He asks that you forget not that he is at your side with the spiritual nutrition required for the growing soul.

In your absence from spiritual practice, forget not that Michael is informal; His presence with you needs not special time and place, no, but simply for your mind to find some quiet where it can rise above what the eyes can see. To be without spiritual practice is a soul-sickness that affects every area of life – there will not be real joy, happiness and love; nor will true meanings and values be realized.

On this occasion of honoring Michael's mortal birth on our world, let us go from our gathering with the intention to befriend our beloved Father/Brother throughout our whole day, each day. Let us add Him into our social circles as well as our private minds. Mary sends her love. Know that we are not far off. We are asking you to forget not to feed the spirit (soul). Let us go from here with the fullness of fellowship, friendship, and love. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Jesus and Nalda At The Well | Share With Our Fellows What We Have Learned Within Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-28-2009
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is such a pleasure for me to see your beautiful faces. I am honored to be with individuals who are with integrity and good intentions. From my position I can know you without really speaking to you. I can feel, so to speak, the person that you really are. I can see how you each have tried to help in some way to make someone else's life better – and I believe that is key to our Correcting Time.

You each have desire to be of service and set the examples that you have learned over your years of believing. I have found in my own experience that teaching others has helped me to become a better person, a better teacher. I have always opportunity to use these skills I have learned over my years of faith; and I am able to maintain these skills because I put them to practice.

I know that many times the mortal spirit can feel like a wanting child; the child can look in many places for fulfillment. I know that individuals who are willing to put forth effort to teach, or use their spiritual skills in service to their fellows, are with fulfillment.

During times of stillness or spiritual study, it is an excellent time to look up to Father and allow your spirit to be nourished by His love and wisdom. Then there is that time when we are in social circles and need to practice the spiritual skills that we have learned – to set the example that Christ has taught us.

As I take in spiritual study or nourishment, I am filled with desire to help my fellows. I have supreme joy in spreading the good news and fellowshiping with the many individuals – seen and unseen. Yes my friends, we cannot take our spiritual education seriously if we hold within, those meanings and values that have become us, and not allow ourselves to be known.

There are circumstances every day where we can use what we have learned to help others draw closer to the Spirit within. We can take the examples of Nalda and Jesus at the well: As we picture the Master, we can see He did not put on airs; nor did He wear a different personality – Jesus was simply Jesus as he shared with Nalda.

When we picture Nalda, she was not her true self but a creature looking to meet some sort of need. She was acting upon her more animal-like ego skills than her spiritual skills. As the Master confronted her with truth, she was able to drop her façade and draw closer to the spirit within. How simple is this story and yet, so profound. It took not a lot of effort on the part of the Master; He was simply being Himself; and having been full of the love of the Father, He wanted to reach out.

Deep down, most individuals would desire a gentle truth; and we know that Jesus was skilled at providing a gentle truth – allowing others to figure out issues for themselves. He trusted in His fellows to have some intelligence. He was encouraging and always showed Himself to be with individuals, not against them, sort of like a coach – meaning that we are all playing for the same team.

I know each one of you are spiritually skilled, and sometimes have hesitation to use what you have learned in your daily interactions. I would encourage you to be like the Master at the well – no façade, filled with the love of God and the desire to do His bidding and good works. I believe you would find great joy in passing along what you have learned through experience. This generates meanings and values, and a closeness with the Father.

That is all for this evening. Mary sends her regards and will be with us next time. Talk amongst yourselves if there is a desire for questions, and we can handle that situation when we meet again. Know that our love is always growing for each one of you. Carry on. Until next time, shalom.

Jesus in Gethsemane Overcomes The Animal Desires For Comfort

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-26-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I do much appreciate being here, gathered with like minds. I understand you each to be deep-thinking and always making effort to stay the course. I can understand the mortal life to continually pull you in many different directions. I know, having lived the mortal life myself, that the mind and heart are willing but the flesh can be weak.

I am MARY. I am honored to be with you again, my friends. As Abraham speaks of the various issues that may pull on your mind, I am reminded of the Master as He was coming to the reality that His time on Earth was over. There are times in the mortal life where the ego (or animal-self) screams for instant gratification; and many times, individuals experience pain which may cause them to seek this instant comfort.

We can all say that instant comfort may not always be a positive choice. In the instance of the Master at Gethsemane, where He asked the Apostles to stay alert and pray with Him, for His mind was in great pain – the Apostles, having a good heart and honorable intentions, could not help but answer the call of physical discomfort; and so they slept.

I sometimes wonder what difference there would have been had the Apostles remained awake to comfort Jesus in His time of need. I believe the Master was to be humanly alone at that time so He could feel a better spiritual connection. The Master could have very well opted for physical comfort. He could have chosen a different path out of mortal life; and definitely was it a struggle to answer the spiritual call to remain steadfast in the Father's will.

Mortal life is a series of choices. You can choose instant gratification, or you can ask the Spirit for assistance. Those that rely upon the Spirit are strengthened to cope with various issues that can be quite painful, but in the end, find an ultimate good. The real exercise of faith, is being patient with the Spirit and trusting in Father to take care of you, and to help you make those difficult decisions.

As we remember the story of Jesus coming to terms with reality in the garden; seeing His struggle, seeing His tears, we know that this took time and that eventually He was ministered to by the angel. The time that had passed was the teacher for the Master, because He was still part man, yes, and the human mind had to make a choice between escape and the will of the Father. The flesh (or the animal-self) does seek instant comfort, but the Spirit listens for guidance and finds long-term solutions to life's issues.

We have to ask ourselves: 'In whom do we serve?' I can say that the more you practice your faith, the more strength you will find to answer the call of the Spirit. The less you practice, the more the animal-self is in control. And I can say from experience, when the animal is in control, life is definitely out of control.

I am so glad to be with you again. I learn so much from your conversations and issues about everyday-life occurrences. I see you as having been strengthened over these years. I fully have faith in your abilities to continue to work with the Spirit and know that there is an ultimate good in all experience.

We will keep this lesson short. Know that Abraham and I are not far off. We are with deep and abiding love for you each. From Abraham and myself, we wish you a productive week and we'll meet again soon. Until next time, we bid you, shalom.

Our Most Difficult Moments Strengthens Our Minds | Time is a Teacher
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-02-2009
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am enjoying this serene evening. I feel a great amount of love and connection with you each. Even though we are small in number, the energy feels just right. Some of the time the excitement of the group is a cause for some static, so I find this evening to be a peaceful conduit for the lesson.

I see you each as people of action – and for that, I am pleased to also learn from you. We do well to wait upon the guidance of the Spirit, and yet many times individuals are afraid to go forth with action. The Spirit can nudge you in many different ways, and the subconscious (or ego) can reject the Spirit's suggestions.

Inside of the adult mind, there is still, partially, the mind of a child. The child's mind tends to be fearful and afraid to be one who is willing to take action when the Spirit guides. As you experience life and grow closer to the Spirit, you become strengthened by knowing spiritual things. The adult-minded mortal is more willing to adjust in thinking, and therefore take action in life's circumstances when prompted.

I am MARY. Again, greetings to you, my friends. I can relate with this evening's lesson because I feel I was a person of action in my mortal days – and yet my thoughts were rash. I am again made to think of the Master when in Gethsemane, who struggled to persuade the inner Childs' mind to adjust to the Father's will. His struggle to release the spirit poisons and take in spiritual knowledge is what had strengthened Him for what was to come. The Master experienced betrayal, along with mindal and physical pain, frustration, and thoughts of defeat.

As we ponder the rest of the Master's life from that point, we can see He acted with grace and composed His emotions; He could have stood in front of His accusers and made an emotional plea for His life, and yet He stood silent with strength and true grace. We know that much of His strength was gained from His experience in life with human aloneness, yes, and a reconciliation of the mortal mind to adapt to the Father's will.

As we have practiced the spiritual life, we can see how our most difficult moments strengthened our minds to be active in bringing forth a beneficial solution. I know from my own experience, I always had learned a great deal from being humbled, time after time. From those moments of feeling humiliation in my experiences, I learned to be quiet in the busy mind and to listen for the Father's guidance. In the busy mind, I had difficulty remembering all I had learned from practicing the spiritual life.

Friends, this transition to adult-mindedness is an effort that takes time and patience. It is important to remember the help we have instead of dwelling in our loneliness and 'child's-mind.' The Spirit of Truth is continually active in helping mortals to grow and be strengthened to cope with anything mortal life has to offer. Your indwelling Father is a source of comfort if you will simply seek Him out. Our Mother Spirit is a source of intelligence; should you call upon Her She will aid in control with your emotions and issues of spirit poisons.

We have help, yes, we have all that we need. The Correcting Time is teaching Father's children how to live their best mortal life, and to have faith in the life to come.

I know from experience that your spirit can feel overwhelmed and burdened. This is an open door to communicating with the Spirit if you can remember to do so. Allow the Spirit to help you see the whole picture. You each know how it feels to be a victim of life's circumstances; and yet, how different we can feel when we are close to the Spirit and feel empowered. Time is a teacher, yes.

I am again happy to see your beautiful faces. Always is my door open, as is Abraham's, as fellow sojourners who have been commissioned to teach. Our love for you is continually growing. And with that, we shall close. We bid you go in peace. Until next time, shalom

Seek Our Divine Mother's Help, Daily, To Keep Healthy Attitude and Perspective
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-09-2009
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am happy to meet with you again. I am so grateful that we as a group give sovereignty to Father; He sits at the head of our table and provides nothing but the best for us, His children.

We also thank the Master - our Spirit of Truth, our Brother/Father - for opening the world up to a new light. We have access to tremendous amounts of information because of the Spirit of Truth. All things that need attention will be shown, and does provide opportunity for Father's children to use their spiritual skills.

This time of year we also often give our thoughts over to our Mother Spirit who is always a patient accommodator. Her presence in the world now is so significant because it is helping to repress chaos and generate some sort of order within the human mind; it would appear at times that our minds can be our greatest enemy. Our thoughts can be manipulated by the world - or, freely given-over to the Spirit which results in peace.

I know the world around you can be overwhelming, and many do seek escape or some form of mindal freedom. I hope that you each know it is not a requirement as a mortal to do everything you possibly can in one lifetime. Our eternal careers will see to our experiencing everything that we need.

Many of us know that our thoughts create our attitudes, and our attitude out in society is a minister of sorts. If we are depressed and tired, then there is not good news to be had - which ripples out just like good ripples out. If our attitude is open and adventurous, our faces are magnetized to other faces which crave socialization and a generation of love.

The effort we make to communicate with Mother aids greatly in our peace of mind and daily attitude. She shows us why we think the way we do, where our original thoughts came from, and how we can change them to create a positive attitude and a source for peace.

I am MARY. Again, greetings to you, my friends. I think back to my days in the flesh where anything female was not respected. This concept of a 'Mother God' was difficult, especially for men, to take in. Having been raised by a mother with very little parenting skills, I was distrustful of taking in such a friend as the Mother Spirit - I definitely did not want to be disappointed yet again.

I was so grateful to take time to understand our wonderful Universe Mother, Her motherly ways and how She is one with pure intelligence and common sense. I made it a habit to take my fearful thinking to Her and have Her show me the origin of my thoughts and how I could change them; and also, change behavior. What a wonderful friend.

In this day and age, as when I lived this mortal life, the Mother Spirit is still not well recognized; but as time goes on, Father's children will see - that without the Mother-influence, the universes are off-balance. Yes, even in the heavens, everyone has their roles to fulfill. I am grateful to know Mother and find out more about Her every day. As the weeks go on we will make effort to understand Her, and the adjutant mind-spirits who assist Her.

That is all for this evening. Keep Mother at the forefront of your thinking this week, and have not fear to tell Her your emotions in various circumstances. Watch our Mother Spirit make chaos orderly. From Abraham and myself, we bid you go in peace. Shalom.

Mother's Intelligence Brings Logic To Spirituality | The Futility of Gossip
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-16-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is a wonderfully serene atmosphere here this evening. I appreciate your willingness to be seen 'as you are.' I hope that you know how much you are loved just as you are.

In this mortal life it is common to stray from the path from time to time; various instances may cloud your vision; obligations blindside your ability to make spiritual decisions. Many individuals feel a need to be productive all the time and there is an inner drive to keep moving; they may keep moving even though not much is productive - it just feels that it is.

As the world upsteps in technology and various high-tech adventures, there seems to be a need to always 'stay on top of the game.' This compelling feeling is an unnecessary pressure; we try to do too much all at once instead of taking time to really experience various circumstances. I know personally, I would like to have avoided those issues in my mortal life that were not food for the ego. My motivation was power, and that was where my energy went. Most of the time I felt drained and unsatisfied - perhaps foolish. I always felt there had to be 'something out there,' with more meaning and value.

I am MARY. Greetings, friends. I enjoy this particular lesson because I feel I have experienced it over and over again. We last discussed the helpfulness of our Mother Spirit and how close She is to us as far as emotions or higher-minded thinking is concerned.

I know that as mortals we can take in great amounts of spiritual knowledge. We can have memories of this scripture or that; this lesson or that; but these are simply theories until Mother breathes the breath of life into them and makes our spiritual experiences real.

As mortals, we know there are some things we can trust – a few things we can, and do, count on; and I believe these are lessons that have been enlivened by our Mother. For instance: As a mortal, I had a particular lesson on gossip and I knew it was of a negative mind; it was harmful to me, as well as others, and yet I still participated in it. One day I discovered some negative gossip about myself and my personal techniques of ministry; it was painful to discover. Mother found this an opportune time to show all sides of this lesson and make it real for me.

From this harsh experience, gossiping soon became something I would just lose interest in; I developed new skills to avoid it – for examples: changing the subject; or, I could find something positive to say about the person we were speaking of. Yes, it took experience, and Mother making this understandable for me, to realize that gossiping is futile and to have no desire for it in my life.

We can learn so many spiritual laws and higher ways of living – and yet, these new realities do not really stay with us; we know of them mentally, yes, but they are not a living reality until Mother finds us ready to take in the lesson on a soul level where our new awarenesses and new skills are deeper embedded. Mother helps us to find the truth in spiritual laws and to understand how they apply. She helps us to understand issues beyond the mortal and mental level, to cultivating the ability to know it on a soul level.

As you experience your mortal lives and you seek more training, you will come to understand Mother quite well because She coordinates with the Spirit of Truth to bring us understanding of lessons, or universal laws. While She appears to be far away, She knows each one of us very well and loves us with a protective love. Just like Michael, Mother wants us to continue on in our eternal careers – learning what we are ready for, so we can keep completing the goals that are set before us. Yes, our Mother is a wonderful helper in our soul development and education.

This week – as we begin to feel ourselves being pulled from our path, let us give thought to Mother and how Her intelligence brings logic to spirituality. Reading or studying is more enlightening when you have invited Mother to show you the realness of a lesson or concept. She breathes the breath of life into worthwhile theories. Know that those theories which you cannot understand probably are not that important for the present time. Mother knows you very well; and what you are ready for, She will give.

That is all for this evening. We are so blessed in knowing the Trinity works for our well-being. A complete understanding of Father, the Spirit of Truth, and the Holy Mother Spirit, will be beneficial in our upcoming lessons. Know that our love grows for you each time we meet. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

The Spirit of Truth And Mother Spirit Brings Truth And Our Understanding Of It
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-23-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is once again a treat for me to be with you. I love all your real-life stories and how you apply your spiritual principles to them. Know that with a thriving spiritual life we are more likely to be healthy in a mental, physical, and an emotional way.

I love to meet with you truth-seekers; you are willing to see all angles of a situation without personal prejudices. We know that we can enforce our angle of truth in our own minds to meet our personal beliefs. How blessed are we to have the Spirit of Truth who is patient in His teachings – and yet, direct. Some truths are only learned through repeated experiences; this is not to punish, but to enlighten.

You know that when we pass from this mortal life, we will hopefully have experienced some training on receiving more of the full truth of what to expect upon our awakening – or in other words, the sometimes 'bright but blinding light.' We each have to question some truths that we hold so firmly onto and which cause us to defend such. The Master can work more thoroughly when truths are accepted naturally than when seen through judgmental or tradition-bound eyes.

When you are so firmly grounded in beliefs, they are likely to stagnate, and higher truths are overlooked. The Master is a conductor of experience and new understanding; and as such, He teaches higher-mindedness – such as those truths regarding our Universe Mother. All we must do is call upon Michael and be open to His suggestions.

I am not saying to stop questioning theories as they come into your mind, no! but to measure your levels of truth with how you feel they could possibly serve. Are these truths self-serving? Are we stepping in the Master's way of providing His truth, to put a spin on truth to how we would have it?

It is an amazing combination – the Spirit of Truth and our Mother Spirit, who assists us in our seemingly uninteresting aspects of mortal living. One is powerful to uncover truth, and the other is helping us to decipher it. They are kind and loving Parents who do not sugar-coat truth; they will not change their ways to suit ours – we can try all we want. There are many gifts these two Parental figures give us that show us our own talents; and if we are open and without judgment, we can find new callings or discover new talents we have not considered.

We have all experienced the growth of intuition since we have begun our Correcting Time. Intuition is built upon both by Mother and Michael's Spirit. We can attain this gift for ourselves given time and patience. Yes, we can cultivate our gift of intuition by seeking the presence of our Divine Parents; they each have knowledge and power to make seemingly meaningless circumstances into something valued and easily understood.

This week, we recommend that you seek the presence of both Michael and our Mother, in connection with Father, in those typical difficulties in daily living. What gifts do they bring that help your gifts to flourish? Our understanding is they are the Trinity, and are with completeness. How blessed are we to know them on an intimate level.

Mary will be with us next week; and as usual, she sends her love, as I also do. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

The Trinity Teaches Us Meaning And Value Out Of Truth, Beauty, And Goodness
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-30-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am thankful to be with you once again. I can say with all sincerity that knowing you each has indeed been a blessing. It is educational for me to be witness to your experiences, yes, because my own experiences were from another era. I am to keep updated so I can adjust the lessons according to our present-day needs.

I can honestly say that I am often surprised by mortal events of the present day. Some circumstances of human living have remained the same, yes, but more and more every day am I finding out about new human behavior. I find today's human emotions of the average person quite raw and painful for those having the experience. With the planetary circuits having been reconnected, mortals of today feel more. Without spiritual foundation, human despair will win over hope. It matters not your station in life--male, female, rich or poor--a spiritual foundation is required to maintain hope and have a reason for cause and effect.

I am MARY. Always am I joy-filled when I can spend time with you. I do believe I can understand the mortal's emotional difficulties. I know very well how living is without Father. In my early days, my morality system was practically non-existent. I had not respect for myself or others because I had not incorporated meanings and values - I had only survival mode. When kindness happened upon me, I thought nothing of it; I thought not to pass it on but looked more at the situation as a chance of good or bad luck.

I am so grateful for the salvation the Master brought to us. Along with the knowledge that Father does dwell within us, He taught us we would never be alone or in such despair that we would never find relief. My spiritual awakening (personally speaking) took a while. It was with awareness of Michael's words, and a growing knowledge of spiritual assistance at hand - His Spirit of Truth - that meaning and values came to life. I began to understand that the more seeds of love I planted, the more love I harvested. The meaning in this came to me as one belonging to a vast kingdom family.

As I grew older in years I felt as though I had become one with the wisdom of the spirit. Looking back over the many years, I can feel the gratitude of having the Trinity as my salvation plan. Michael was enlightening us to the truth, while Mother showed us the wisdom - and our internal Father compiled the meanings and values.

We speak of our internal Father because He is most understandable and the closest personality to us. We are complete in our understanding of our progressive plan with Father and His personal indwelling, for He brings the power to make all things possible. I speak not of miracles or wishful thinking, but truth-revealing intelligence that is helping us to advance as mortals, as agondonters, and as kingdom citizens. As we move on into this coming week, let us ponder upon the complete plan of salvation - with our internal Father leading the way, Michael as our eyes, and Mother as our thoughts.

That is all for this evening. Know that I am humbled in your presence to know that you are swiftly moving over the obstacles of 'seeming hopelessness.' Know that we are close at hand to stop by and chat. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Father Helps Us Start With A Clean Slate | There Is No Value In Regret Or Guilt
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-07-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always in appreciation of these smaller more intimate groups because I get to know each of you on a more personal level. I am grateful to hear your views on the world's issues and how these issues can drown the mind with meaninglessness. I enjoy your deep-thinking efforts to also discuss various solutions.

I personally believe there are a lot of good intentions out there in the world - some perhaps are self-serving, but yes, a lot of good intentions. I am finding that in the confusion of mortal living, many individuals will throw their hands up and declare defeat. In the fast-paced world, some people have a difficult time finding a sure-footed path.

Yes, there are many times in mortal life when one must simply wipe the slate clean and begin simply to start over. Living with regret is not helping to clean the slate, so the point of throwing up one's hands in what seems to be self-defeat is actually good, humbling indeed. And from there, we can take the lessons of the past, sit them on a shelf in our minds and pull them out to review from time to time. Such lessons are with meanings that have helped you to advance as a mortal and, as a child of God.

This evening however, we are speaking of a type of mindal and spirit cleansing; a cleansing of the souls' slate. If one is to hang on to guilt and regret, it is going to be difficult to find hope enough to have a clean slate and the new possibilities of starting over - and I mean starting over with something new and better.

In this world with the renewed circuits, there is so much assistance; and really, hopelessness has no place. Meaningful humility, yes! but self-defeat, no! Do not go back to your old life and wish you could change this or that. Know that you are a budding soul and have all the opportunities before you. The Son gives you light, the Mother gives you wisdom to survive, and the Father gives you power to thrive.

In Father's kingdom you always get another chance to begin again, to see that white slate before you and add new meanings from personal experience - which does help the growing soul to advance. You are not your money; you are not your education; you are not your job. Nor are you somebody's wife, husband, sister, brother, no! You are Father's child with all of life's opportunities before you.

Do not become lost in the world of 'if only I had this;' or, 'if only I were this.' Take your blank slate this week and add those meanings and values (where fitting) that happened throughout your experiences. You can have your past-lessons available to draw from, yes; they are like a treasure trove that will always be there, and they will always be of assistance. Set your regret and guilt off to the side - allow it to create enough humility wherein you can throw your hands in the air and say to the Father: "I am ready for the new and better ways."

Mary can't be with us this evening but sends her regards and will return next week. That is all for this evening's lesson. See what you can do with your blank slate this week. Know that I am always available if you should call upon me. I cherish our time together, and send you forth with all my love. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Social Issues / The Small Branches That Result From the Larger Issues

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-14-2009

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I am feeling so blessed for having a Father who takes such good care of us. The events occurring in the world at this time are mostly positive and leading to an ultimate good. Many groups like you, form a bedrock that allows others to also stand upon it - to learn, grow, and also pass-along the good news.

It would seem at times the world is in total chaos, which is what the media wants you to believe. Mortals sometimes get hooked on the drama of negativity. I say, the mortal that does small things for others does more good than does an entire government. This Correcting Time is about reaching one person at a time. As far as the planets' status goes, we see more good positive things happening than ever.

We have each learned that evolution in itself can seem heartless; but this is where our lessons from living are helping us to become better. We can look at the treatment of minorities, for example: knowing the history on how they fought for equality - their fight seemed negative, yes, but there has been so much good that has evolved from it.

In all our life's lessons, we have these branches that sprout from the main lesson, and these are hopefully causing some re-thinking. For example, when women had gone into the workforce - they had to fight for equality; and yet, some of the branches that came off of this tree were that children were somewhat neglected; divorce rates became higher, and the importance of family was downplayed. These small branches of evolution are the social issues we can discuss with our fellows in an effort to find positive solutions; and as I have heard it mentioned, it is likened to a pendulum swinging back and forth - always in search of balance.

I am MARY. Greetings to you, my friends. I am always thankful to hear your opinions on the social issues of today. We see that money seems to take precedence over most anything. But I can say the evolution of this very lesson in life is starting to show the real truth - that money is not the indicator of happiness or success.

In my growing up, I remember a friend where in their family they had practically nothing; their home was run down; their clothes were shabby; their food was sparse - but they had no idea they were poor for they had each other. They had the outdoors to have adventures. They had laughter and closeness. Yes, they had no idea they were poverty-stricken. The father of this family had learned early-on of the Master's teachings, and found the joy therein - a joy that superseded all else.

Having a relationship with 'God the Father' who dwells within, fills one with security – you truly believe an ultimate good will come to pass in any situation. Today's mortals do know the status of money; and those who 'have not,' feel its impact in society. Through teaching children the importance of the 'fruits of the spirit,' rather than importance placed upon money, this helps children to understand that their joyful countenance walks before them. Yes, a relationship with God their Father who dwells within them, shows them they can feel confident in their school or community.

Abraham's lesson this evening is mostly about discussing social issues and how we all have to understand and deal with them; we all have to explore the small branches of the larger issues. It really is exciting times on the planet, yes, because new social issues come up every day. There are issues with money of course; there are issues regarding homosexual or straight relationships; drug and alcohol addiction; and one not so new – crime and poverty.

I believe you each contribute positive feedback to your fellows. Your simple listening to them shows caring and you are helping your fellows to feel valued. I love how Jesus always asked questions of his fellows – this helped to turn individuals inward and to seek a higher guidance; He brought out the best in them.

This holiday season can show the best and worst in mankind. I believe your examples of social kindness will help to spread to others and show the true meanings and values of good will.

That is all for this evening. Children, know that Abraham and I are always at hand should you have need. We are always growing in love with you more and more each day. Think not that you are a stranger to us. We do know you. Go in love and peace. Until next time, shalom. [Editor's note: There were no meetings through to the end of December.]

The Soul Needs Exercise Daily To Overcome The Animal Ego | Study, Stillness and Service

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-04-2010

Back

[Editor's note: This lesson is following one full year of a great economic 'recession' that had recently impacted the US and world markets. As well, there arose a groundswell of negativity on the political landscape having to do with the nation's first elected 'black President – Barack Hussein Obama' These two factors did bring much disharmony and mistrust causing quite a frenzy nationwide – and was exacerbated/driven greatly by factions of the mainstream media and the various Internet's misinformation capabilities – especially an onslaught of cyberoperations from various nefarious foreign governments.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am honored to be a part of your daily-living circumstances. I do realize the past years' events have been challenging, and I can see there has been growth therefrom. You each have various difficulties, yes, and I try to combine spiritual concepts to aid in your varied daily-living experiences.

In our study of life's social issues, there is an excellent variety of spiritual lessons we can learn, yes. If we lived our life on one continuous note though, we would not know of the vast symphony in the Father's kingdom. It is our own responsibility to open our ears and hear what is being played in concert with our personal note.

I am in understanding of how mortal life can be filled with obstacles. A great deal of the time we are simply looking for someone to hear us, and we make effort to relate with them to accentuate our issue. It is understood that when we are feeling that energy come from those who sympathize with us, then we are feeling 'connected.' There are times, however, when that ease-seeking ego comes up behind us and wants to feel that energy from others on an ongoing basis, and we lax in seeking that energy from Spirit.

We can see out in society how some have laid down before their troubles; they simply rely on others to feel pity for them - to give them their energy, or time, or money, or compassion. Mortals are ease-seeking creatures - and that is not good or bad, it simply is. We understandably seek for good feelings, and if the ego had its way it would always look to steal the energy from those who have a source - those hardworking individuals that seem to live life with ease.

We can easily become stuck in a rut of complaining and fear wherein we overlook our true Source - that one personality, Father, who will give meaning and values to our experiences. The further away we are from God, the closer we are to the animal ego, yes, and the more tempted we are to rely on the energy of others.

We can say that individuals stuck in this rut of the animal ego begin to shirk their responsibilities to feeding their own mind and soul; their complaints are, in reality, cries for guidance. These struggling mortals in this rut see all of life as negative; and therefore, they are drawing the negative to themselves wherein there never seems to be any good; their world is dark.

I do realize the events in the news and in your environment give you pause for concern and take up a great deal of space in your thinking. The more hours and days that go by without spiritual study or stillness - or even discussion with others seeking Father's guidance - the more negative the world appears. I am not saying to wear rose-colored glasses, no. I appreciate each of your abilities to see the realness in daily living; but I can say- without Father, the soul becomes lazy and eventually, famished.

With the soul's emptiness, there can be avenues sought that are temporarily gratifying, yes - but negative, overall. There seems to be many gods that mortals serve, other than our indwelling Father - meaning that they can be slaves to what they believe to be most important. I find that we must exercise the soul 'daily' for it to be triumphant over the animal ego and its patterns. Of course with our Correcting Time lessons and our Urantia text, you have plenty to study; and yet, it is always important to make time for stillness. I also recommend service. In these practices of study, stillness and service, we put the mind more in the 'nature of the spirit,' rather than the whining/complaining mortal mind.

Yes, my friends, we need not seek other avenues to be fulfilled when we know the true Source and Center of all that we need. You would do well to pay attention to your tendencies to complain and, how you draw energy from others. Along with that, notice how others would draw upon your attention. You each have that beautiful light within and know how to shine – people can see this. You would do well to stay on a positive note in your social discussions. Most importantly, keep your dialogue with Father, healthy and ongoing.

I will stop there. Thank you for having me. I pray for you each, always. Mary will join us next time. Until then, my love goes with you. Shalom.

Let Nothing Stand In Our Way Of Asking For Help From Our Divine Caretakers
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-11-2010

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I appreciate your honesty and sincerity with this evening's pre-lesson discussion. I can plainly see the desires of your heart when you are comfortable to freely share your thoughts. It is obvious to you now, that the spiritual helpers can only put in as much effort as mortals allow; meaning, that should you seek for truth and patiently wait, then are we as Teachers allowed to help.

We are not to force our teachings on mortals, no! we are to simply go with the learning momentum of the mass mind. Father works along those same lines. He can only give you what you can hold. Those of us on this side can watch our mortal friends stumble, and we have to wait until we are invited to help.

I appreciate the integrity of each one of you. You work hard, and for the most part, are willing to earn what you receive. Jesus said: "Knock and the door shall be opened." We are finding there to be some confusion in the minds of mortals – when you are in need of help, something often stands in the way of requesting it.

I am MARY. Greetings to you, friends. I have been attending to my own spiritual studies and am with excitement to continue learning about the kingdom and how we are all placed within it.

I can see Abraham's lesson this evening from a few different angles. For one, I can relate back to my own experience in the flesh. Apparently, I believed that once I had the spiritual foundation firmly set in my daily living, that I should be somewhat problem-free. I was under the impression that I was spiritually knowledgeable enough to solve simple everyday problems. I was prideful in a manner that kept me from asking questions or seeking help. I did not want to appear weak and ignorant.

One afternoon going about our daily chores, I was so fortunate to be witness to the Master asking Father for assistance with some simple circumstance. He could be seen to prioritize life so that He was less troubled in mind. In those days I could take some simple issue that was troublesome and blow it out of proportion like 'the world was ending.' I was bothered in mind and had great tension in trying to appear otherwise.

I was able to watch the Master delegate assignments and incorporate all into the Father's kingdom. He was unafraid to appear weak because His closeness with Father had not made room for the prideful ego to overtake what was really important. Much of the time the Master was surrounded by those that loved Him and believed in the cause; and of course, this is always a blessing, always comforting. However, He also lived an average normal mortal life and experienced the hate others could produce.

It was not weakness in the Master's mind to look to the Father for assistance, no! it was simple conferring with somebody who knew more and always had His best interest at heart. The Master always had full trust in the Father and had not worry of appearing weak or needy. It was obvious in His countenance that His mind was at ease. He lived to serve the Father and had not worry of His own reputation or how He might appear in the eyes of the world. Imagine living such a life of freedom. I am not saying to have license without wisdom - of course not! but to feel less burdened, less stressed.

This week, we are suggesting that you draw Father in closer for even the most simple issues of daily living. Be not afraid to ask Him anything. Allow Him to strengthen you towards feeling secure as His child. When you are with more freedom from ego, then are you more likely to utilize your spiritual skills.

It is acceptable to ask Father for help because it incorporates differing individuals (seen and unseen) into the kingdom, and makes them also feel with a divine purpose. To have an assurance of your celestial overseer's assistance will help to feel more clear in mind, yes, and we will be better able to serve. Let us also be aware of times when we are worried about how others see us. When you are filled with the Spirit, it pours out upon those that know you.

That is all for this week. No questions. Know that Abraham and I are always close by should you need anything. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Prioritize | Delete Worries So To Have Space In The Mind For Father's Calming Directions

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-18-2010

Back

[Editor's note: This week there was a massive earthquake that hit Haiti - Tuesday evening, January 12, 2010.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I appreciate your thoughtfulness towards those in the world that are suffering. The angelic orders are very busy right now helping to provide aid and comfort to those in an already poverty-stricken area.

How strange is it in the so-called civilized world that mortals complain about menial troubles. Many of those troubles are self-imposed. Life can be so beautiful - and yet, there are some individuals who thrive on drama and tension as if it gives them a purpose in life. It is sad for these individuals that they can never stop and take a deep breath, watch a sunset, or sit by a waterfall.

I can see you each also with some tendency to lean toward being overly proactive in daily life. I do understand how overwhelmed one can be with all the responsibilities of everyday living. I can see how some of those responsibilities are magnetized to cause one undue worry or stress.

It is my hope that you can see everyday chores as something that must be done for the good of the whole. For examples: being employed; paying bills; taking care of home and children; social issues such as in relationships. Yes, all these can weigh heavy on the mortal mind. It is those horrendous tragedies, such as the devastating earthquake in Haiti, that make our everyday chores and toils seem ridiculous, comparatively.

I am not saying that we should be grateful for what we have only when we view how bad things can really be, no! but that it is completely natural to think this way. Hopefully, you would find your mundane chores to be insignificant.

I am MARY. I like this evening's lesson because it calls for some prioritizing, some responsible organization. I believe Abraham is trying to say that when the mortal life is full of worries, then does it take up space in the mind. It is difficult to meditate when the mind is drawn toward other responsibilities.

I can understand how life calls you in various directions, demands your attention, and takes your energy. It is somewhat of a cycle when the worries keep coming around and there is not time for spiritual study, stillness, nature appreciation, creativity, or socializing with an upbeat associate.

[Editor's side-note: Discussion was had before the meeting started, regarding the group transmission-receiver's feelings of wanting a break from her group duties. This 'Woods Cross Teaching Mission group' had been meeting now for nineteen years - mostly on an every-week basis. Ellanor's request and group consensus was for a bi-monthly schedule.]

MARY: Abraham and I have discussed the issues that you have put forth this evening, and we can confirm your feelings of slowing down or taking breaks. There is a great deal of organizing in the mortal life, yes, and we are asking you to delete some of your worries so that you have time for those things which feed the soul. It was written and is so true: 'Seek the kingdom first and all else will be given to you.'

Know that we are supportive always of this group. We can confirm there are other transmission-receivers being trained. We ask that you not make this decision of a group transmission-receiver another worry to add to your burden of everyday life. We are asking for your joy in knowing there is another meeting scheduled, and that this gathering is not just another job.

Have not stress nor worry should you take a break between your meetings. It is not like we are going anywhere. We will always be with you when you call upon us. We suggest that you take a little time to organize the everyday worries and then push them from your mind. Do not run out and seek for more worries, but take time to connect with Father and to feed the soul. The souls' energy is a wonderful coping mechanism.

Know that your Father is close by and more than willing to help you with even the most mundane tasks. We are supportive. Have not worry. Our love continually grows for you. Until next time, shalom.

The Scale Of Low Self-Esteem Versus Too Much Pride Or Superiority

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-08-2010

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always made to smile when we can gather. I appreciate your sense of humor and ability to stay open to various topics. I learn something from each one of you that helps me in my function as a personality - and, as a Teacher.

It is a blessing that you can also have your fellowship with one another and the learning experiences therein. It is easier to talk with those you see before your eyes than those you must see only with your faith, such as ourselves and the morontial and celestial personalities that attend us. To have this balanced fellowship with one another does help us in overcoming life's obstacles - and also, appreciating the challenges.

I am made aware of the mortal difficulty of today in finding the fine line between positive self-esteem and the power of the animal ego. Traditional religions have taught us that humility and self-sacrifice were the ways into heaven. We can see the imbalance in this belief as being almost disrespecting of the mortal mind and is deflating of healthy self-esteem. On the other hand, we have the inner drive to not only survive, but to conquer our fears and, those obstacles competing with the animal ego that desires superiority.

Father wants us to know we are loved, yes, but also to understand that we are not the 'chosen few.' We are in the family of God, yes, but not at the head of the table. We have assigned tasks to follow through as mortals living a spiritual life, yes, but are not given superpowers. It is important that you have self-respect and honor yourself as a child of God - equal to all other children of God.

Unhealthy esteem, or no self-esteem, leads to self-punishment - and that closes or hides the doorway to higher-mindedness. Jesus taught self-forgetfulness. He did not mean for you to punish yourself into spiritual submission, no; He meant that we are a part of a huge network and have abilities to help one another to find balance and joy. It should be obvious by now to you, that if you do not think of yourself as an equal child of God, then none of your fellows will either.

On the other end of that scale of esteem, is having 'too much' pride, or superiority as far as 'over your mortal fellows' go. To allow the ego to put itself on a pedestal is to isolate yourself. Such isolation can really spoil the true personality of one's self and repel others from fellowship. They say it is lonely at the top; those that experience this have isolated themselves from their brothers and sisters. Life is empty without friendship. In the absence of friends, you can forgo possibly fifty-percent of your mortal lessons. Yes, we learn so much from each other.

This week, I would ask you to ponder this scale and find out where you are on it; and also, where you would like to be. For those on the low side of self-esteem, question your faith in your son- or daughtership as Father's child. Where do your faith levels lie? How do you treat yourself; and, how do others also follow your example?

In the months to come, we are going to need see some significant changes in our own personal growth – and we cannot worry what the world thinks about that. We have our tasks set before us and we must fully realize that what we most wanted for our spiritual education will indeed happen. That is all for this evening. I am with abiding love for you each. Mary sends her regards. Until next time, shalom.

To Step Forward In Faith Brings Enhanced Spiritual Understanding And Strength
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-22-2010
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am made glad by your willingness to participate in discussion this evening. I believe there are deep levels of comfort among you. It is inspiring to me to be witness to your complete honesty. I am happy that you feel safety and comfort among one another. I am also grateful that you trust me and Mary to be included in this branch of our family tree.

I appreciate your thoughts on the last lesson concerning self-esteem. There are many layers that go in to learning about that and how we can find a balance.

I understand the traditional season of Christ's resurrection is approaching, and there are many different beliefs we could adhere to, or have already cemented into our thinking as we have grown from a child. It is common belief that 'Christ sacrificed His mortal life for man's sins;' and therefore, many traditional religious beliefs say that mortals should also partake in some sort of sacrifice.

Christ did not sacrifice His life, but He did lay it down in favor of the Father's will – to fully experience the mortal life, just as it is. You could say His example to us for the time He was here on Earth was that He always had willingness to lay down His life, yes, and to also take up His responsibilities. In other words, He was always watchful of Father's will over his own, and had deep desire to thoroughly follow it.

As you study the Master's life you know He was never halfhearted in anything, be it spiritual or earthly. As far as faith and Father's will, the Master saw that as black and white, unchangeable. Jesus relied upon His mortal senses to receive spiritual guidance when He was young. As adulthood approached and as His experience taught Him, He was able to find new spiritual senses that helped Him to mature spiritually.

I understand there to be wavering faith as a mortal – this is not to worry. It does take effort to step out in faith, yes; and I can say, if one has the courage to do so, then the mortal senses advance into spiritual ones.

We all have seen in this Correcting Time how beliefs have grown, changed, and then become new everyday understandings. Intuition, for example, is not as farfetched as mortals used to believe. The understanding of coincidence and synchronicities at Father's hand, has also come to be expected. Transmission-receiving is also becoming un-extraordinary. Topics that used to be against religious rules are now becoming embraced by the masses.

Yes, man is finding out that having courage to step forth in faith brings an understanding that comes from beyond the material mind and the human senses. As we look out among the Teaching Mission – are we viewing spiritual maturity and the utilizing of spiritual senses? I can completely understand that the world circumstances can be overwhelming; and yes, I can see how this brings some lost hope and halfheartedness, but are we seeing these circumstances through our spiritual senses?

In this coming time of celebration of the Master's resurrection, can we look at the power of His faith; the change from child to man; and then the change from man to spirit. He was not meek, but wholehearted and driven. Can we contemplate the strength it takes to lay down one's life, one's desires, in favor of Father's? Is this weakness? No!

I for one, am honored to be a part of such a family with the Master as our sovereign; what a beautiful example of strength that gives cause for hope and a reason to fully commit to faith. That is all. I am with growing love for you each and also enjoy you immensely. Mary sends her regards and will be with us next time. Go in peace. Shalom.

Competition And Worry Blocks Us From That Inner Peace Wherein We Thrive

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-08-2010

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am touched to see your faithful souls this evening. I have known you for many years and I believe we will know each other for many more. A project has been started on the planet, and I understand that many of you will continue to be a part of the progress long after life in the flesh is done, such as do Mary and myself. I know that most of our lessons in life are spiritually based; we are always trying to learn to live a spiritual life as a mortal.

Over the past weeks I am beginning to understand how competitive this mortal life is; you have to be more wise in this day than in my own day – which was mostly about power and fear. I know that the financial world of today has many barely hanging by their fingertips, and the stress is 'literally' killing them. If this life were a mere game, we would choose to use foresight and look ahead to make preparations that would keep us from those life-threatening stresses.

I am MARY. Greetings, friends. To me, the world has always seemed competitive, whether a mother was at the market bargaining for food for her family, or the merchant who bargains for more money for his family. Healthy competition is normal, yes, but when it brings one to that place of physical and mental sickness, then it is time to scale back.

Those things you 'hang onto for dear life,' you have to question 'why?' Look at the technologies of today – 'how did we ever get by without them!' one might say. In my day, in the natural occurrences of health, medical technology was not available to keep an individual alive for so long – and perhaps they were not supposed to. It would seem that individuals of that day had a bit more faith and trust in Father's will, and cared not to 'beat the system.'

We each know individuals who thrive on this competitiveness for survival – and that is acceptable. There are also individuals who require peace however, and have not care to compete. For them, it is just better to let go of that grasping, that striving, and simply fall into the Father's will and see where it takes you.

The lesson this evening is many-fold. You are in a world where it seems you must have your wits about you to survive, and courage to play the silly mortal games. Yet on the other hand, we cannot let the stress of everyday competition take us down – physically or mentally. There are many aspects of the world yet to discover, yes, and still so much you haven't seen. If you are continually worried or stressed, then you are going to miss a great deal of the very reason for living and those very beauties of life available to you. To embrace truth, beauty, and goodness does make for a more healthy life.

That is all for this evening. I thank each one of you for listening and your participation. Every day you mean more to Abraham and me. Call upon us if you have need. Until next time, shalom. [Editor's note: Circumstances arose wherein the group didn't meet again for nearly two months.]

Mistakes Are Simply A Part of The Human Experience And No Need To Feel Guilt-ridden
Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-31-2010

Back

[Editor's note: Circumstances arose wherein the group didn't meet again for nearly two months.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Welcome back, my friends. It is wonderful to see your faces gathered right here before me. I realize that our absence has caused our group-flame to flicker, but it has not gone out. I pray that Father grants us the insight of the Master who knew true humility and was able to commune with Father, without flaws.

To have such enthusiasm to learn new things is somewhat a sign of beautiful humility, for it enables one to stand at open doors without fear or apprehension. Let us go on into the next phase of our lessons with new insight into the humble heart. By 'humble heart,' I am not speaking of low self-esteem or self-loathing, no! I am speaking of being open to new developments in spiritual education.

It is common thinking on this world that "what he shall sow, so shall he reap." In this mentality, many come to the belief that they have sown many bad seeds, and therefore, deserve punishment. I say, the bad seeds are mostly simple mistakes or misunderstandings. Mistakes are a part of the human experience; they are not a cause for regret and atonement. We can look at our mistakes as victories when we have learned what that particular lesson has brought to us.

To have 'lived and learned' is not a cause for regret or for guilt or self-punishment, no; it is rather, a steppingstone to higher understanding and better living. However, as society and various foundations wish to revel in another's mistakes, they are indeed asking the angels to put upon them the same experience. Man will learn how another feels either by remaining humble and open – or, by orchestrated lessons from the universe helpers, our Celestial Overseers.

I am EMULAN. I am with a full heart to be with you again. I express my gratitude to Abraham for allowing me to speak on this evening's topic. I believe the main point of this lesson is to look at life with an open mind without the shadow of regret from the past.

Most of you know my family died in an accident; and I can tell you firsthand, how I had blamed myself for their death. I had every opportunity that day to drive my wife and daughter to their designation, but I had thought it a menial task and suggested my wife simply do it and get it over with.

The accident was one of simple timing and material mishap, but I took that on as my responsibility. The pain of their deaths had led me to self-punish as if I could have stopped the accident altogether, or at least have died with them. I found everyday life to be a tremendous burden because I had guilt that I had actually murdered somebody.

My own personal guilt led me to believe that others viewed me as guilty, as a murderer, or at least as a negligent husband and father. I treated myself poorly by not tending to the body's physical needs and by finding ways to mentally escape the pain through chemicals. I had totally shut out Father, or any spiritual help; and in all this, I had found myself as undeserving of life.

I so much wanted to be with my family again. It was a long time before I could put this tragic loss into perspective. It was with a great deal of group and psychological therapy for me to quit blaming myself for the accident.

In having overcome this over-whelming guilt, and as I told my story to people of similar circumstance, I was made to see their beautiful intentions; I began to grow closer to the Spirit and farther from this guilt.

I learned that people were not looking at me as a 'guilty' man, but simply as someone who experienced a tragic loss, and who had a long way to go to reach mental wellness. When I had put the guilt on myself, then I believed others did also; and I expected to be treated poorly by them as I had treated myself – and of course, that came to pass. Father is so powerful in how He can shake us from our slumber of spirit poisons, and hold out His hand of promise, freedom, and joy.

I am not saying to not care what people may think about you, no! I am saying, let that be a thought that goes by the wayside; focus on Father and the task He may have before you. I say, keep moving forward. Keep paper and pen handy and give five or ten minutes to stillness. Write down your thoughts, yes, for they will be that help from your indwelling Guide. Father will help you to work out your self-imposed regret and guilt so that you may move on to the greater issues of the Kingdom.

This week, be conscious of how many times you are wondering what others think of you. How are you living to please others? Are you in touch with the Father's offer of promise – freedom, and joy? Also, let us revisit the word humility, or having a humble heart; think about how it is a technique of being open to learning new things.

That is all for this evening. I am with gratitude to you each, as also I am to Abraham, for allowing me this time. (A question from Tectra: Are you coming back, Emulan?) Emulan: From time to time I will see you. It is a favorite thing of mine to do. I send you with our love. Go in peace. From Abraham and myself, we bid you, shalom.

Our Social Interaction Help Ward Off the Dominant Ego

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-28-2010

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I thank you for coming this evening. It is wonderful to spend this time with you. I find that in meeting less we discuss more pressing issues and this time together becomes more valued. I am grateful to be allowed to watch your spiritual growth and your skills to tending to kingdom tasks.

I am understanding in today's world of 'high speed' that there is so much focus on the busyness of living, and individuals sometimes lose their sense of joy and reason for working so hard in the first place. In the Master's time of ministry, they had designated Wednesdays as a day of replenishing the mind and spirit. There was time for just socializing because it was a source of joy and rejuvenation.

As we move ahead in the Correcting Time, we will see how important communications between people become. Said Jesus: "Where two or more are gathered, there am I also." Those close individuals you feel comfortable talking with do create an energy that is generating Spirit - and of course, Spirit touches the heart and produces joy and wellness.

Over these many years, a good share of our lessons have been about sociology and learning to communicate with one another. It is our goal to help generate the Spirit in our social circles.

I also believe that with the fast-paced competitive lifestyle that is common in today, there are also those added difficulties the ego brings. The ego (or animal-self) typically desires to be the 'king of the jungle,' and is not sociable or a generator of Spirit. There is great struggle in today's world to 'stay afloat,' and this can bring out the instincts of the animal-self. In other words, we are merely surviving instead of thriving.

I hesitate to again discuss the ego, but it must be known that in the harshness of the ego-filled mind there is evil. I mean, in the sense of living in a competitive world where individuals would hold others down to gain status, there is a certain sense of evil in such selfishness wherein the most important commodity in one's life is 'power.' I mean not to say the son of self-love is running rampant, no! but I would have you be aware that the ego is not a toy, and that you will need to sharpen your spiritual skills to deal with it.

In your daily experience, let people know they are valued simply for who they are; not what they look like; not for their money or various gifts - but simply, show love for them as a brother or sister in the kingdom. As technology becomes more important and impersonal, the 'value' of souls may go by the wayside and we lose touch with love, joy, and a sense of 'belonging.'

For the next few weeks, sharpen your social skills by making eye contact, offering greetings, making time for conversation. Avoid negativity and make effort to generate a healing spirit.

I would like to offer some direction for Aranda. [Editor's note: Aranda is of Muslim descent, from Jordan and Jerusalem regions, but now living in Utah. She has been a member of Abraham's teachings since mid-2007.]

My daughter, I am in understanding of the stress you are under. I see you as handling your issues with grace. I believe you are with great common sense and I have faith in your abilities to make logical decisions. I am in understanding of your confidence in yourself and people around you. You are like a piece of coal that is being pressured into becoming a diamond. I would suggest that you make your decision – and therefrom, all pieces of the puzzle will fall into place. The fact that the decision has been made will, in itself, bring a great deal of peace. In the indecision, there is the unknown and a lot of fear. I believe you have a great deal of the facts of your health dilemma and are fully capable of making intelligent decisions – decisions like choosing a physician, treatment, and methods on how to remain financially stable. I would suggest that you look 'within' to see what your priorities are. What is really important? How are you going to face your fears with the skills you have learned over the past few years? I am thinking you should not have worry over various pains in the body because most are stressed induced. I believe you should look at your situation with a scientific mind. It is true – all you have valued is being tested; it is not for any punishment, I can assure you! it is an incident of time and material. As human beings, we do what we can; we exhaust our resources. I want you to know I have faith in you and your ability to make logical decisions. Know that Father is close at hand and shows you openings in the pathway of decision-making. You are never alone; you are never without guidance. Know that we understand your dread; and while we have compassion for you, we also will help uphold you. Is this helping? (Aranda: Yes, and I thank you.) Abraham: You are welcome. Is there another question?

CALVIN: As you know, I've enjoyed in the recent weeks listening to the recordings from Michael of Maui (Project Urantia and also Hello Earth). Do you have some input on how his teachings are impacting on the world stage? These two productions are listened to by approximately 100,000 listeners from across the world each week on Sirius Radio Network.

ABRAHAM: I know this individual to be very knowledgeable and makes great effort in his methods for transmission-receiving, and accuracy is important to him. I would simply say, apply all you have learned over these years to his words and lessons. What is true will stay. What is not will fade away. It is an exciting part of this technology of today to have communications with individuals around the world. Is this helping? (Calvin: Yes, thank you very much.) Abraham: Are there any more questions?

MIRIAM: In your lesson, you mentioned about how in Jesus' day that Wednesdays was a 'fun and rest day.' Was that just for the Master and His apostles? or all of that area's people.

ABRAHAM: It was just a day set aside for the Master and His apostles. I do believe Andrew arranged the schedule – at the Master's request, of course. It was draining on the minds of those kingdom workers to work with the masses. It was a constant outgoing of energy. There was regeneration, of course, in the Master's lessons, but it became important to have rest and time to reflect on the past occurrences and to make some flexible plans for the days ahead.

MIRIAM: I appreciated the suggestion of needing rest and reversion, and bringing our attention to it; and yes, it is reiterated in the Jesus Papers – but I personally tend to miss the boat in that 'rest' direction. Obviously, it was important in the Master's living, so I will give it better effort.

ABRAHAM: I also thank you, Miriam, for your outstanding attitude on everyday-life experience. You are a good example to those who know you. Well done. Are there any more questions?

MIRIAM: Two people have asked me in this past week why they keep seeing '11:11' on their clocks and other devises. Are there prompts like this going around that are generated on your side?

ABRAHAM: I am understanding that numbers are important in the lives of mortals, but really, they have not much to do with the work of the kingdom. It has been the tendency of mortals down through the ages to put a mathematical equation to the unknown or matters of faith. There is a great deal of hype about the 'ending of the world,' for instance; and yet in reality, it is more about the correction of it. In the re-encircuitment of the cosmic mind to Urantia, there are new senses that mortals will feel; and the mind may see these senses in the realm of what they already know. So I would not downplay their experience, but enlarge it with suggestions of the work of higher-mindedness. Good question.

As my connection grows weak, I will send you with my love. Know that I have deep and abiding faith in each of you. You are indeed a source of joy for me. Mary sends her regards; she will attend next time. Go in peace. Shalom.

Self-Forgetfulness Leads To Reduction Of The Ego-Mindedness

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-26-2010

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am with such a feeling of comfort to be here with you, this branch of our family tree. I can see you each as diligent hardworking mortals and kingdom believers. I do understand that sometimes we can see progress as slow, but I can assure you that today's spiritual lessons are rapid. The Correcting Time will help Urantia to move closer to Light and Life. The spiritual lessons you experience may not be what you expected, but have comfort in the fact that you are learning to be a productive universal citizen.

Each of you have varying life-experiences which culminate into a rich texture of social fabric that reaches out to people you know. It may be your hardships experienced that has made you an attractive source of light. I would say that the decisions you make in various life circumstances also play a part in your movement along the spiritual path.

The last time we met we spoke about the unforeseen tendencies of the ego and how it makes some points on the path look attractive. As your experience would tell you, these are virtually all snares that bring hard lessons of life. Many who experience these hard lessons are with tendencies to be in a self-protective shell that hardens their heart. 'If we are not that involved in life, then we avoid the risk,' is the common thought of these individuals. I can say that many who strive not for spiritual ideals are attracted to the empty promises of the ego.

As each child experiences growing pains, there are behaviors learned therefrom. These behaviors are usually either to self-protect, or to find a place of acceptance. Adults can go on to mimic these behaviors (to make them a pattern) rather than find growth from them – and therefore, bringing about further hard lessons and perhaps making continued bad decisions.

These challenging lessons are not all spiritually orchestrated, but Father does call to you during these times. Yes, your indwelling Father is never far away and always longs for you to call upon Him, especially in tumultuous circumstances wherein there is strengthening to be had.

Our First Source and Center has foreknowledge of your experience needed, yes, and with the aid of His Spirit forces does create each lesson He would like you to learn. From these hardships and challenging lessons, He brings out an ultimate good. Our challenge as mortals is to go past what the animal desires (what the flesh wants and what the mind craves), to a life with Father and his orchestrated lessons that surpass ordinary understanding.

I am MARY. I am with joy to look upon your faces once more. I am always amazed by the effort you make, each one of you every day, to remain positive and open to new lessons. I can relate to Abraham's lesson this evening through my own experience of having attraction to feeding the ego, which led to poor decision-making.

I practically grew up alone and raised myself with little or poor guidance. I had always the craving for attention, to be accepted and to feel I was belonging to someone or some thing. In my late adolescent years, I had a person who promised to care for me; and my longing for temporary ego-satisfaction took the path that would have been the easiest. I would drop my cares of the world and allow someone else to bear the burden of everyday living. I had made the decision to opt out of experience, and in so doing I had neither joy nor misery – I had nothing, I had emptiness.

I grew to have resentments which were again, imaginings of the ego; and again, I sought escape. I can tell you that I had spent a long time in search of a place to belong, or for something meaningful that fed my soul. With the experience of the Master's teachings, I learned what hard work was, and that escape will bring emptiness.

Being a part of the Master's plan showed me that self-forgetfulness is an important quality to strive for in maturing spiritually. Jesus always seemed so full of energy; He was many times so busy with the masses and did not have thought for how tired He was. You can even see in His daily routine experience, half the time He forgot about feeding the material body. He was busy and always about the Father's business.

As did the Master, I had also become quite compassionate for the individuals I began to work with, and felt a connection to Father that I had not before. With this new mindset, the temptations of the ego had decreased, and I felt a new empowerment. I came to realize that all along, I already had an acceptance and a belonging, but I did not know it.

Yes, it was experience and spiritual growth that had brought me Father's map; He orchestrated my lessons in such a way that I could move forward along the path of spiritual maturity. I was with the realization that the closer I was to Father, the smaller my ego and obstacles were. I felt driven to fully live, and to dive into life with the comfort of knowing that Father brings about an ultimate good.

The focus of our lessons for the weeks ahead will be making needed behavioral changes. Think about how the ego promises a temporary satisfaction – yet, in the long-run you have nothing, whereas with Father you have the map for eternal living.

My friends, the Correcting Time is so busy, and you are needed. Have comfort in the fact that you are supported by universe helpers, as well as the First Source and Center. You are with gifts and talents and can help to bring about positive change. That is all for this evening. Know that Abraham and I send you with our continuing love and acceptance. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Birthdate Celebration for Michael | What Is Our Reward For Daily Struggle

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-21-2010

Back

I am Abraham. Greetings. I am filled with energy and enthusiasm to be among you on this day of celebration. I am touched by your affection for each other. It matters not the time in which you have been acquainted, only the willingness to open up and be who you really are.

I am familiar with your life history and am moved by your determination to strive toward the light. I am well in understanding of your personal disappointments and am inspired to keep working diligently for the Master's goal. I am made glad to be among your discussions today and hear such positive reflections concerning family, faith, and healing.

Yes, we are the sum total of our willingness to learn and listen to the First Source and Center. I know for myself – I had moments of redundant toiling, certain disappointments, and seeming defeats. I also know that Mary, prior to her enlightenment, had also worked tirelessly for a life that didn't seem to be working back for her. Most of us also know the life history of Jesus, who set an example of the potentials man could reach.

There are many minds in the mortal life that are expecting grand rewards, and will live their mortal life on those terms. When hardship strikes, they have not the understanding of 'why life is so hard when they are so good.' Rewards in each mortals' mind vary from differing levels of personal understanding - or if you will, their education.

The Master exemplified how the Father's love was a reward all unto its own. During those human conditions of mortal strife, He had not an anxiety that could have made His circumstances worse, no; in fact, He had, rather, an empowerment of an inner strength - strength that helped Him to face any enemy or event.

Jesus did not think about putting forth good behavior to receive rewards or accolades of some sort, no; His reward was constant communication with His 'source' of strength - Father. And this was not for material eyes to see but for the personal gates of faith to be open, and the mind to understand.

Many have thoughts that 'being along the spiritual path is more stress-free' - as if one might have seniority in the kingdom family. I say, the path is, for the most part, the same for all mortals on an evolutionary world. The changes one might recognize most in the mortal life along the path of experience, is their own growth, their own personal discovery.

Yes, events and issues will always be, but it is your growth which helps you to attain the tools to move along. The 'incentive' to move along is that personal contact with Father; and your door to Him is why you have gathered today.

We are also with gratitude and happiness to celebrate with you the birth of our Creator/Brother/Father on this mortal planet. We would have you go forth from this celebration with the desire to ponder your understanding of reward. What makes you truly happy? What keeps you motivated and filled with living faith?

You are always a source for education and examples of how man can transcend those desires that pull him from the Spirit. Know that our involvement with you never wavers. Our love for you is continuous. Have joy and celebration. Go in peace. Shalom.

Lean Not On Emotions But Toward The Side Of Logic

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-27-2010

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I welcome you, my friends. I thank you for coming. I am with gratitude you are each still fighting the good fight of faith. We have had an ongoing lesson for years on human emotions and behaviors. It is an era on the planet now where anything extreme seems to be popular. This does not always work for controlling one's emotionalism.

It is a highly competitive world, and the more your competitors can make you emote good or bad, the more satisfaction they have in having done their job well. Jesus was a wonderful example of one who would not be carried to extremes with His emotions. He was passionate and logical; He was enthusiastic and yet thoughtful about the execution of intention and plans.

Mortals are an emotional people. I mean not to say 'don't have emotions,' no; I mean to say, 'balance them out' for the overall good of the Correcting Time. Highly emotional people are looked upon as unstable. To be more effective in furthering Michael's plan and purpose, we need to lean toward the side of logic. We have said all along that our way of spirituality is 'down-to-earth and logical.'

It was so obvious that the Master had no ego to constantly please. He cared not if He was right or wrong in others' eyes. His well-rounded faith may have made Him appear harsh at times, yes; for it was so logical to the Master that either you had faith or you didn't. He exemplified - 'you act upon that which you believe or you don't, there is not worry about what others may think.'

The Master always had an eye single to the glory of God and worried not about trying to sell somebody on some notion. As long as Jesus always put Father first, then could He have control over His emotions.

Emotions used to be deeply tied to survival and as a show of those who may appear to be most spiritual. I would say at this day and age, that emotions - especially from those which are on the outside of your close group here who are not as well-understood - are not to be completely trusted. The Master knew this full well and still gave individuals numerous chances to change.

Jesus, of course, felt pain. More often than not, the mental pain was so much more than the physical. The Master had most of His tearful moments in private, and saw the act of working through His pain as a reckoning of mind to the Spirit. We want to be taken seriously in the Correcting Time, certainly, yet we must remember to not allow our ego to have full rein over our emotions.

Another good point on the Master's behavior is that His emotions were so intact - yes, because He had a complete trust in Father. He worried not about the next moment. He had the ultimate trust in Father to put Him where He needed to be and how He should respond in any situation.

This week, let us review our levels of emotions. Do we use emotions as a tool to gain sympathy or attention? How seriously do our co-workers take us when we are rampant with emotion? That is all for this evening. I realize our lesson is short. We will plan for more next time. Mary sends her best. We both send you with our love. Until next time, shalom.

Our Mortal Life, Our Path, 'Is What It Is' For A Reason. Not To Fear It

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-25-2010

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I have always loved this time of year in this region. It is beautiful and powerful. The interworking of nature shows us a grand design that can produce 'appreciation' or 'fear.' We can sometimes think about Father in the way we would look at the power of nature.

The weather, for example, has a temperament of unknown origins. Your scientists can try to accurately predict what may be in the forecast, but even science cannot compete with nature. We can see the external environment as 'chaos,' or you can accept that it is 'doing what it does.'

Yes, when the hard winds blow and we find damage to homes, cars, etc., we can come to understand that the wind is just doing what it is supposed to do, regardless of man's material obstacles. Individuals adversely affected by nature are not victims of seeming poor luck, no. The weather is part of a grand design, not to be manipulated or controlled.

I am MARY. It is wonderful to be with you again. I also love the fall colors and changing of the seasons. I can appreciate Abraham's metaphor, so to speak, on the powerful force of nature affecting human beings and the environment. I believe he is speaking of the powerful forces that have influence over individuals and how that can produce fear in mortals - who would attempt to have control. or not have acceptance for 'what is.'

I, in my younger years, had my own way of manipulating individuals into helping me get what I wanted or needed. My mind was always at work with some sort of scheme that would help me to survive day to day. After a time, these individuals knew my scheming ways and had not trust, so I would again devise new ways to manipulate and control.

I am so appreciative for the transformation Jesus brought. He taught us that Father was indeed a loving Father - and yet He would not love you so much so as to spoil the soul, but to teach it to grow. Father is a source of power not to be manipulated nor taken lightly. Michael is like the wind and does what He does for a reason, as part of Father's grand design.

The Master taught us that we can have fear and attempt to manipulate our spiritual path to avoid challenges; or, we can have acceptance and open eyes - showing us that the natural path 'comes not without a struggle.' When life's difficulties rain down upon you, do you look up to the sky and ask 'why me?' Do you wonder what you have done in this life to deserve such mistreatment? Do we envy others - that their life seems so put together?

The Master taught us that Father is an awesome source of power. But 'that' power comes with deep and abiding love and loyalty. Father does not pick you up when you fall, but more-so does He give you instruction on how to get up on your own. He is teaching you to move through eternity, triumphing your challenges. Yes, He is showing you the way to Him through acceptance of 'what is.'

The education we receive here in mortal living is pertinent to the road we will travel after this life. We are being taught how to help this age move into a Correcting Time - toward the beginnings of Light and Life; and that, in itself my friends, is an honor; a responsibility, yes, but an honor.

Like the apostles who were mentored by our Master, you also have been given various gifts to use within the world to expand the Correcting Time. Your skills come from the experiencing of hard lessons. You can have fear of that and become entangled in ways to manipulate your will; or, you can see the path of eternity - that 'it is what it is.' Father's path is with defeat, it is with victory, it is with struggle, yes - but it is building an eternal soul; it is growing and everlasting character. At some point in your mortal existence you have committed to traversing this path, and Father asks that we accept that 'it is what it is.'

Know that Father is always whispering in your ear how to maneuver forward to Him - not manipulate, but maneuver. He is a source of power that even we on our side of the veil, cannot comprehend. He can make anything happen, but you have to trust Him. You have to allow your faith to expand to the point of acceptance that 'life is life;' but all the while knowing that Father is the source of all power, all love, trust, and loyalty. Honor that!

At this time Abraham and I recommend you take a few moments to think about the role of a real Father/Parent. The Father is love and compassion, yes, but He is also putting sparks under your feet. He teaches us to go to Him. Have not such mistrust. Look for the opportunities where Father's power is present and always watching over you.

Know that we are indeed humbled by your example of dedication. We hold deep affection for you each. Call on us if you should have need. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Learning To Communicate Within Our Social Network Enhances The Correcting Time
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-29-2010

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Thank you for coming out on a night such as this. We are always happy to see you - gathered or individually. We are always grateful for the effort you put in to strive for what is true, beautiful, and good. I am impressed by your topics of discussion this evening, and to see you rise above petty 'animal thinking,' to higher-minded 'evolutionary-thinking.' I am happy to see you, my friends, striving for balance in daily living; overcoming sorrows and incorporating joy.

I can see now, from where I am in my survival career, things that I could not see with the mind of the flesh. I would have hope for each one of you to know that you can have so much in this mortal life. As you mature in moral character and divine-mindedness, you will find the limitations you have in your thinking, lifted. You will not feel so much like arat in a maze, but a being who is able to rise above the selfish-thinking and connect to the cosmic mind.

I am with much gratitude to have you each in my social network. You help me to find new ways to improve my skills, to overcome obstacles, and to embrace abundance.

I am MARY. It is always wonderful to see you. I am honored to stand by Abraham and help teach and learn. Father has put us on this Earth to 'have life, and have it more abundantly.' I know that social surroundings have a great deal to do with living more abundantly.

I believe when Abraham mentions 'skills' he was talking about 'how to live within an environment with peace and harmony.' A most important skill each one of us must improve upon is communication. We are always filled with opinions, and much of the time have no problems with voicing them. You in the Correcting Time are learning to be an example of the Master – and as such, have responsibility to talk with people in a way that is best suited to reach their souls.

I know that most of us appreciate direct truth – it shows that someone is caring enough for us to be honest with us. But I say, many individuals every day are simply looking for a kind word or eye contact that says we are all connected under one Father. Living a life in the Spirit, we can be guided for how best to interact with our fellows. Learning to communicate responsibly and productively within your social network will prove to be important in the growth of the Correcting Time.

We can see even between the genders that communication is different – one may speak with feelings, and the other with logic. As Urantia is moving forward in evolution, the roles are becoming somewhat confused; however, each gender is growing in understanding of the other. I am saying, as we communicate with individuals on a daily basis it would be beneficial to think before you speak; to be aware that feelings may be a stumbling block. Yes, to have 'gentle' truth just may be what would speak to your fellows' soul.

With your forward momentum in evolution, you must know by now the gifts in communication are expanded with skills such as intuition or foreknowledge. A close relationship with Father helps this improved skill of communication to become activated. This is not anything new, no! On many other worlds, there are these heightened skills of communication wherein you can move in and out of your fellow's lives with inner-knowing – therefore, being able to minister to each other as you go about your separate daily duties. You have these gifts of communication available to you even now; your closeness with Father helps to activate them.

In the Correcting Time movement, we are assigned tasks that help to show our immediate social network a different light. I could almost say that at this point in your roles as Teaching Mission participants, the meetings (the encounters) you may have with individuals are not by accident. You are learning from individuals you meet, and they are learning from you. This is creating stronger and more efficient circuits within the cosmic mind. The cosmic mind adds to the Supreme Being, our God-in-time, which relays back to us messages of encouragement.

Urantia is becoming more of a unified part of the universe – even being an experimental planet. It is time we put aside any excuses for not excelling in becoming enlightened beings. Now is the time to use what you have learned over these many years and sew your experience into the tapestry of the Correcting Time. Do not focus so much on what is negative, but on how our Father always brings out the ultimate good. Evil is not in control in the minds of men, no – an ultimate good is! it is rising, and you are helping that to grow in your daily communications within your social network.

That is all for this evening. I am always inspired by you because you know humility, yet you press on. Abraham and I thank you and bid you farewell. Shalom.

Embracing Life `As It Is` Helps Us to Grow, Embrace Change, and Adds to The Cosmic Mind

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP

12-27-2010

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am familiar with this time of year being about the birth of Jesus on the planet. We can all see how commercialism is taking over. This time of year has shown itself to be mostly about materialism – and I do say, that can be viewed as a good thing in that it is a step-up in evolutionary thinking in the breakdown of various binding traditions.

Yes, we can see that what is in the hearts and minds of men is more important than words on paper or repeated traditions. Why is it at this time of year that goodwill is supposed to be more prevalent than any other time of the year?

As the Urantian mortal mind evolves, we will probably see more clearly that the worst that mankind has to offer does instigate the good within. There are various phases throughout history that have shown mankind to struggle between either embracing the animal within, or linking oneself to higher-mindedness.

I am saying that on a normal evolutionary planet these harsh events are most likely to occur, and when individuals have faith, the bitter cup of mortal living is more understandable. When difficult times rain down upon mortals, and they embrace faith instead of animal instinct, then is there advancement in mind – not just in the mind of mortals but also in the cosmic mind from the Supreme Being.

We can view the world in a pitiful state – wars, natural disasters, unjust governments, and be saddened. Or, we can embrace faith and know that these terrible occurrences are natural on an evolutionary world and that better things are to come. Just like the Christmas season being about materialism – man is becoming worn out on this materialistic drive and is searching for something more meaningful. This is good. Man does not have to embrace a baby in a manger, but he can ponder God's presence as the ultimate caretaker of the Universe.

In the past year, many of you have suffered some pain, some loss. And I am saying, if you would desire to have understanding and advancement therefrom, it is wholly possible. We must stand firm in our faith; not in tradition's meaning of faith, but in our personal relationship with the Father and His subsequent caretakers – Michael and Mother.

As your calendar moves you into a new year, let us go boldly into it with renewed faith and coping skills that will help us to embrace life 'as it is,' and know it can, and will, be better. I am happy to see each of you making a change that says you care not what people think. You know who you are and you are with the freedom to be that person. You are logical, loving, and always open to learning new ways. I am with gratitude to know each of you.

That is all for this evening. I do believe next time we will take any questions you might have. Mary sends her regards. I am also relaying to you my abiding love. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

If Jesus Lived In The Flesh Among Us Today | We Cannot Buy Meanings and Values

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP

12-18-2011

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is wonderful to see many of you experience true joy. We are learning that joy is a necessary part of living. The real meaning of joy is when you can feel the presence of Father in a given situation. Humor is nice and indeed an outlet, but joy is when you are with faith that Father is really there and working in your life.

We all know that there must be a balance in mortal living – work, play, and rest, yes. We know that sometimes joy requires work. When you have labored for something meaningful, the reward is a living energy that we can call joy. I can see how you have released some of your menial attachments; you are finding out what is truly important in this life.

If Jesus were to live on the Earth today in the flesh, how would we perceive Him? I believe He would be a wanderer as he was in his first sojourn. He would be someone who puts value on heavenly things rather than Earthly. He would take time for His fellows and bring comfort to those who have ailments in mind, body, and spirit.

Were we to cross His path in today's daily living would we even look at Him? Would Jesus wear a three-piece suit? drive a Ferrari? or live in a modern condo? The Jesus that you have learned about for so long – what would His presence look like if He were to set foot on the Earth today? What would be His priorities?

Yes, we could say 'He always waited upon the word of the Father;' as recounted in our Urantia text, 'He waited until His hour had come.' During this time He worked to provide for His family; He took time to have play with His brothers and sisters; and, He loved to learn and discover interests in science and geography. Jesus also loved to get to know individuals and find out, from personal experience, how the human mind was shaped.

Yes, I believe it would be that type of individual that would be here if He could live again in the flesh today, for He still has those wonderful qualities. His life was more good than bad; more positive than negative. He had pain, yes, but He was willing to endure – for the pain was fleeting, and Father's kingdom is forever.

It is interesting to view the economic status of the entire world right now. Individuals are finding they cannot buy meaning and values. True joy is the outcome of understanding meanings and values. Spiritual connection, while working this Earthly life, is building a road to knowing real joy; it is that feeling that puts you beside yourself – and for the moment, have tremendous 'awe' for our Father.

At this time let us think about Jesus as a man here on the Earth today. What does He look like? What is His occupation? What are his interests? What might you have in common with Him, personality-wise? Find the answer to the question: Did Jesus have attachments? What were moments that you have read about where He may have had moments of attachment and then released it to the Father?

Our lesson is short this evening but we are inclined to continue your Christmas celebration with you. I want you to know that as I think about the Master, I can see Him in each one of you. Take time to also see Him in yourselves and in each other.

Take time to find genuine restful peace this season, and allow joy to well up within you. Find time every day to count your blessings and we'll have further discussion next time.

Know that Mary and I send you with our unending love. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

2012 and 2013 MANSION WORLD TEACHINGS

The Supreme Sends Back To Us Updated Information Through The Cosmic Mind

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-29-2012

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am in gratitude to be with you this evening. I feel a comfort here among you that I feel not elsewhere. I am always inspired by your striving to move forward.

I love being a Teacher in this Correcting Time. I have spent many years in study to hold the position that I do. I know that as Teachers we are required to freshen our teaching plans and upgrade to meet whatever evolving world we may be teaching. In this age of technology, we are finding mortals to be learning at a rapid rate, and we are continuously as Teachers, upgrading our education. If we are to set an example for you to learn from, it must be current and flowing with the Correcting Time.

"Believe me, you are more than capable of knowing the information that takes you from merely surviving, to enjoying life and thriving."

As the world has grown, so has the Supreme Being; I cannot fully understand it myself, but as you grow as a part of the cosmic mind, information goes to the Supreme Being who is our God-in-time. The information He sends back to the cosmic mind is like an appetizer that makes mortals hungry for food. Father and His assistants orchestrate our life circumstances to experience this cosmic knowledge – personally.

When I go to classes to be updated in my teaching technique I am made to study and review. When you are taught new thought within the cosmic mind, you actually have new experience. You can say that some of the worlds' issues are cosmic lessons, and the experience is taking mortals down a path in which they have a more full view of where they have been; and yet, also where they should strive to be.

In the Urantia Book text, 'morontia mota' covers many instances which teach one to learn from seeing all sides of a problem. In the mortal life however, if one wishes to know justice, they must experience injustice.

There are many times in which we can regret our regular everyday experiences, when in fact they are an orchestrated part of our having an overall outlook on a problem. For example, if I were to pass judgment on an individual who seemed to suffer from some weakness – then in turn, that lesson would cross my path and I would experience that same weakness; I would realize my judgment of this fellow was not honoring them as my spiritual sibling; nor is it honoring the gift of life I have received.

Many religions teach karma, and that 'what you do comes back.' To this, I say it is true, yes, but the 'come back' is not for punishment, but is for learning. For example, if we are thinking to make a call of judgment on a fellow – I suggest, rather than yield to our old patterns, let us instead ask the Father for enlightenment, and I can say the needed lesson will come to you without so much upset.

Right now, the cosmic mind that is shared by us and all universe beings is filled with new information – some that might not be in your Urantia textbook or even in your realm of possibilities. With this knowledge, we cannot look at others and say they are perceiving life wrong. We that are Teachers can barely keep abreast with the new knowledge, and are to only teach it where it will serve best. When a Teacher believes a group is ready for such knowledge, then certainly is it imparted; and that imparted knowledge is available through the cosmic mind to all who are ready to receive.

You, my friends in the flesh, are in need of daily quiet-time to connect to this cosmic mind wherein you can receive new and updated information. Just because instructions are not written does not mean they have not validity. I am not saying gather all the free instruction you can in this quiet time so as to advance in some way, no; I am saying the quiet time would be good for you to sort out various experiences and arm yourself with new coping strategies.

Yes, find that Source and Center of the energy that carries you one step at a time through this life. Know that you need not merely survive this life, but enjoy it! honor it! make it a living prayer! I don't have to tell you of all the helpers that surround each one of you. Believe me, you are more than capable of knowing the information that takes you from merely surviving, to enjoying life, and thriving.

At this time, I would give recommendation to study a bit on the Supreme Being and cosmic mind. I am not asking you to read volumes, but only pieces that might help you to incorporate the concepts into your everyday living. Find time to have a few minutes every day to connect with Spirit. It matters not where you are in the physical environment, only that you can work up to the mental capacity to block out noise and take in information from the cosmic mind.

That is all for this evening. Know that anywhere you are, I feel at home. Mary sends her love and will be with us again soon. We look forward to our future events with you. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Mortal traditions are a significant aspect in living a balanced life. As we have observed throughout the Urantia Book readership, it has always appeared that mortal religious traditions were tripe, and for those who exercise not their faith or ability to believe without seeing.

The Roman Catholic Church, for example – for many years they have maintained a ceremony on the Sabbath that has helped individuals to reach and find faith within. Yes, they have their religious dress or spiritual garments that give them meaning to the overall experience of attending church. There are the well-known prayers and ceremonies that are more than what an outsider might view 'appropriate.' These redundant prayers are a mantra to some and helps them to have an opening within, to the Adjuster; there is communion that creates a feeling of family and community.

As you know, I am not always in favor of these traditions, but I find that any one such that will help mortals to open to the Spirit, is helpful. You that have been in this Teaching Mission find your own traditions to be rejuvenating the spirit and bringing the kingdom of God down to be within your reach. Just as when Jesus had worn the flesh – He had not looked down upon the traditions of mortals; He participated that he might show a brighter light on any opening there may be that was a more direct line to the Spirit.

Therefore, I am in favor of you bringing the kingdom of heaven to be within your midst – wherever that is, and wherever that is from. It is for mortals to also live by this new gospel; not just study, meditate or think about – but to live, work, and have their being in it.

Yes, it is a fact that if you find not meaning within some situation, then it is easy to forget about. For instance: Christ does not ask for you to celebrate His mortal birth, but knows it brings joy to the hearts and minds of the participants. The celebration is for you, and always is this exercise to be open to Spirit communication.

The cosmic mind works in a way as a community information status – meaning the cosmic mind can address the masses who would perhaps be open to it, such as the moment when the Spirit of Truth was poured out upon the people who came to support the cause of Christ. We have done a great deal of work on 'the individual' in our Correcting Time teaching that has helped us prepare you for living within the community.

There are also many social circumstances to address. We see you act from where your foundation is the strongest. For example, say that you believe money is most important – all other decisions you make will be an extension from that foundation. If the spiritual life is your foundation, how then do you perceive social aspects within the community – for example, politics?

Yes, how different are the two belief systems of money-pursuit, and spirit-seeking? What do we do that strengthens the foundation we want to have? If we want our spiritual foundation to strengthen, then do we go shopping? If we are all about our jobs is there any thought toward the spirit?

This is where I believe in bringing down the kingdom of heaven to be among you – living and working within it, having your social functions that aid in faith. If the kingdom of heaven is not real for you, you will toss it by the wayside; if it is far-fetched and out of reach, then why try? It is your responsibility to 'make real' the spirit. It is your responsibility to open that door to our Brother/Father, who leads us into the knowledge and understanding of our eternal and indwelling Father.

When we ponder the spiritual life, we at times wonder what it will cost and how much will we have to give up! I say, ponder this: What would we gain should we completely commit to the spirit? The cosmic mind teaches us that we are a people with a divine destination. It is not you - a mere mortal, against them - the unseen universe divine forces that assist us. It is not the differences between the two realms that we should sit in judgment on, no! but we are one in the same cause.

I am reminded of the two small ones that were slain by their father recently. That was a bell heard throughout the world. The grief felt throughout the many communities was also understood by the Supreme Being - that sends us information through the cosmic mind to aid us in our understanding of it all. From this horrible tragedy, lessons are forthcoming. This is an example showing this world teeters between the animal and spirit. We pray that mortals will be open to the new lessons of the spirit. [Editor's note: In the above paragraph, Abraham is referring to the dreadful events regarding the disappearance of Susan Powell from her home in Utah. Her husband (Josh Powell) being charged with her disappearance, followed with his slaying of their two young children in Washington state three weeks prior on February 5th.]

This week, we are recommending that there be some reflection of one's foundation. We would do well to view the mortal ceremony as 'on the side of the spirit,' not some ego-driven event. If you could view your foundation, what would it look like? Is it falling in places? Is it built with materials of the ego? or the spirit? From where do we make our decisions? How do we envision the kingdom of heaven in our environment?

That is all for this evening. Mary sends her regards and will be with us again next week. Know that my love and thoughts are always with you. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Mortal Traditions` Value | What Are Our Foundations Built Upon / The Powell Children`s Death

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-26-2012

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am with comfort in our family environment. Watching you live your mortal lives brings the Teaching Mission into reality for us as Teachers. You work, play, struggle, and have joy. I am inspired to watch you reach for more understanding, more meaning and value.

I am reminded of the two small ones that were slain by their father recently. That was a bell heard throughout the world. The grief felt throughout the many communities was also understood by the Supreme Being - that sends us information through the cosmic mind to aid us in our understanding of it all. From this horrible tragedy, lessons are forthcoming. This is an example showing this world teeters between the animal and spirit. We pray that mortals will be open to the new lessons of the spirit. [Editor's note: In the above paragraph, Abraham is referring to the dreadful events regarding the disappearance of Susan Powell from her home in Utah. Her husband (Josh Powell) being charged with her disappearance, followed with his slaying of their two young children in Washington state three weeks prior on February 5th.]

This week, we are recommending that there be some reflection of one's foundation. We would do well to view the mortal ceremony as 'on the side of the spirit,' not some ego-driven event. If you could view your foundation, what would it look like? Is it falling in places? Is it built with materials of the ego? or the spirit? From where do we make our decisions? How do we envision the kingdom of heaven in our environment?

That is all for this evening. Mary sends her regards and will be with us again next week. Know that my love and thoughts are always with you. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Mortal traditions are a significant aspect in living a balanced life. As we have observed throughout the Urantia Book readership, it has always appeared that mortal religious traditions were tripe, and for those who exercise not their faith or ability to believe without seeing.

The Roman Catholic Church, for example – for many years they have maintained a ceremony on the Sabbath that has helped individuals to reach and find faith within. Yes, they have their religious dress or spiritual garments that give them meaning to the overall experience of attending church. There are the well-known prayers and ceremonies that are more than what an outsider might view 'appropriate.' These redundant prayers are a mantra to some and helps them to have an opening within, to the Adjuster; there is communion that creates a feeling of family and community.

As you know, I am not always in favor of these traditions, but I find that any one such that will help mortals to open to the Spirit, is helpful. You that have been in this Teaching Mission find your own traditions to be rejuvenating the spirit and bringing the kingdom of God down to be within your reach. Just as when Jesus had worn the flesh – He had not looked down upon the traditions of mortals; He participated that he might show a brighter light on any opening there may be that was a more direct line to the Spirit.

Therefore, I am in favor of you bringing the kingdom of heaven to be within your midst – wherever that is, and wherever that is from. It is for mortals to also live by this new gospel; not just study, meditate or think about – but to live, work, and have their being in it.

Yes, it is a fact that if you find not meaning within some situation, then it is easy to forget about. For instance: Christ does not ask for you to celebrate His mortal birth, but knows it brings joy to the hearts and minds of the participants. The celebration is for you, and always is this exercise to be open to Spirit communication.

The cosmic mind works in a way as a community information status – meaning the cosmic mind can address the masses who would perhaps be open to it, such as the moment when the Spirit of Truth was poured out upon the people who came to support the cause of Christ. We have done a great deal of work on 'the individual' in our Correcting Time teaching that has helped us prepare you for living within the community.

There are also many social circumstances to address. We see you act from where your foundation is the strongest. For example, say that you believe money is most important – all other decisions you make will be an extension from that foundation. If the spiritual life is your foundation, how then do you perceive social aspects within the community – for example, politics?

Yes, how different are the two belief systems of money-pursuit, and spirit-seeking? What do we do that strengthens the foundation we want to have? If we want our spiritual foundation to strengthen, then do we go shopping? If we are all about our jobs is there any thought toward the spirit?

This is where I believe in bringing down the kingdom of heaven to be among you - living and working within it, having your social functions that aid in faith. If the kingdom of heaven is not real for you, you will toss it by the wayside; if it is far-fetched and out of reach, then why try? It is your responsibility to 'make real' the spirit. It is your responsibility to open that door to our Brother/Father, who leads us into the knowledge and understanding of our eternal and indwelling Father.

When we ponder the spiritual life, we at times wonder what it will cost and how much will we have to give up! I say, ponder this: What would we gain should we completely commit to the spirit? The cosmic mind teaches us that we are a people with a divine destination. It is not you - a mere mortal, against them - the unseen universe divine forces that assist us. It is not the differences between the two realms that we should sit in judgment on, no! but we are one in the same cause.

I am reminded of the two small ones that were slain by their father recently. That was a bell heard throughout the world. The grief felt throughout the many communities was also understood by the Supreme Being - that sends us information through the cosmic mind to aid us in our understanding of it all. From this horrible tragedy, lessons are forthcoming. This is an example showing this world teeters between the animal and spirit. We pray that mortals will be open to the new lessons of the spirit. [Editor's note: In the above paragraph, Abraham is referring to the dreadful events regarding the disappearance of Susan Powell from her home in Utah. Her husband (Josh Powell) being charged with her disappearance, followed with his slaying of their two young children in Washington state three weeks prior on February 5th.]

This week, we are recommending that there be some reflection of one's foundation. We would do well to view the mortal ceremony as 'on the side of the spirit,' not some ego-driven event. If you could view your foundation, what would it look like? Is it falling in places? Is it built with materials of the ego? or the spirit? From where do we make our decisions? How do we envision the kingdom of heaven in our environment?

That is all for this evening. Mary sends her regards and will be with us again next week. Know that my love and thoughts are always with you. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Nothing Good Comes From Being Negative | How Do We Handle Things Different Today Than 10-20 Yrs. Ago

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-25-2012

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is such an honor to work with you and also be called your friend. I have been able to observe many of you this past month and see how you put your best foot forward. I am so touched to have witnessed you set aside the call of the ego, and advise or assist your fellows with the best possible words you can pull from the spirit.

I know that you are each doing well in your understanding of struggle or pain; and I can tell how it has trained you to be a better teacher, friend, mother, father, wife, husband, brother, sister. When we are feeling empty of the spirit, then we have a tendency to listen to the ego. We all crave good feelings. Good feelings help bring meaning to our life. The ego brings temporary good feelings within, yes, but quickly shows that it was selfish, not of the spirit, and I know you demand real meaning and values to be a lasting part of everyday living.

I am MARY. Hello to you, my friends. I also am with gratitude to be a part of this seeming experimental time. I learn more than I teach, yes, and it is due to knowing you, my student/friends.

I can see the pain, the weakness, and the struggle of many of today's Urantian inhabitants. I am quite fascinated to see why some mortals choose a negative path and why some choose the positive; it is difficult to determine what makes a mortal choose the way they do. Some that have become embittered by life will carry on the negativity throughout their days, and their harvest is misery. Many times it takes an upsetting life event to wake them to a new and better way.

You in the Teaching Mission, however, make effort to follow a positive path - not always, but for the most part. With your life choices, we can see that you minister for the sake of the kingdom, not for personal attention or ego-building. Many times your assistance to others is simply out of the good within you. When you can truly feel the love of God, then are you in abundance to help others.

Many of my days in service to the Master's cause were filled with the sick and dying - and anyone who has taken care of these individuals know it is far from glamorous; many times I would lose my way and become bitter over having to serve in this seemingly degrading position. When one gets to this point, it is necessary to go away and be with the Spirit and be quiet. Father knows your levels of tolerance. He knows what you desire in your life. He does bring relief, even though it may not be as soon as you would hope.

I can say - when I had served, I felt sometimes as though I received nothing for my hard work. In my negative attitude I brought on more negative occurrences in my daily activities. When I had followed the Master's recommendation to go off and be alone with Father, I could refresh my outlook, attitude, and spirit. I could go back to work with enthusiasm. It was healing for the people I served, and it was healing for me. I received love, gratitude, and a closeness with Father. I can't say this positive outlook would last, but I knew what to do to change my attitude when needed.

You each have a great deal of experience in this spiritual education, and you know that you handle various life events different than you did ten or twenty years ago. This is living proof that your willingness to stay the course, fend off the ego's needs and make effort to travel the positive road, has been rewarding.

We are not the same people we once were, no! We need not act out in an immature fashion as we perhaps once did. We need not accolades or promises that a special position awaits us in heaven. Do you as mortals still have fear? Yes! Do you handle it differently than in earlier years? Yes! My friends – yes, you have made tremendous strides.

As you have your experience in this next month to come, think about how you may have handled events in your early days, and the peace and serenity you feel within now. As we ponder our growth we can think about the Master and His love for us. We stand at the door and knock; He is always welcoming us in.

Because you are people of faith, your outlook on the world is a bit different. When you hear of a tragic event, you are with certainty that Father is taking care of it. People everywhere are understood. Even though we may not understand them, Father does! and He fiercely loves His children.

I have been able in these last few months to travel from group to group, and even though the language and culture is different, there is the same desires deep down in all souls. I have a renewed enthusiasm that we are on a good path; even as a planet we are, for the most part, in sync.

This upcoming month, review your spiritual life as a garden; note how it has grown and changed with our Mission training. How have you tended to your garden and allowed good things to grow, and not let the negative things affect the good. I believe next time we meet, Abraham wants to offer you the chance to ask questions. So next time we may simply have a free discussion.

That is all for this evening. I thank you and I want you each to know that Abraham and I are close at hand. Feel free to call upon us in your quiet times. We are more than happy to visit and assist. Tonight our love for you is over-flowing. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Self-Governance | A Lesson Ongoing Into The Mansion Worlds
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-29-2012
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I feel such peace among you. Now that your days grow warmer there will be more activity and energy spent. These times of peace are a good way to regenerate – mind, body, and spirit. I want to thank you for making the way for my words to come to you. I want to thank you for allowing me to be a member of your family. I feel that I take much more with me than I give.

We are seeing the Teaching Mission moving toward action. Instead of reading about the right way to handle issues, we are more about doing it. Instead of studying 'what would the Master do,' we are actually doing it – it is becoming a part of our nature. The Spirit of Truth helps us obtain answers in the moment; when we are in the midst of some situation or some crisis, He is able to impart words to us that aid in promoting good.

We cannot be with the attitude: 'If my brother is good to me, then I will be good to him.' We are more with the attitude: 'I am good to my brother because God lives within me.' It is written that each day a man lives in dedication to the spirit, the easier he finds it to do the right thing. Now our Mission is in a mode of action, and you have been well trained to bring about the best possible scenarios in everyday life.

I am MARY. I am with gratitude to be with you again this evening. I want to say, though I have never driven a car I have observed your traffic, and many times have found my stress-levels to exceed normal rate. I am seeing those with these automobiles wield great power. Many have taken this power for granted and have made mistakes, and some even have died. In this example, you can find many good lessons about self-governance.

If only you could trust one another to follow the rules; but right now, in this fast-paced world, that is not going to happen. But what can happen is that you, yourself, can provide a good example. You can show that you respect your fellow drivers and follow the rules. It is true that once one steps into a machine, mortals tend to forget the life in that machine and the machines approaching, and assumes that those are lives of lesser importance.

We can think about what self-governance means to us as we live in the everyday world. Are only the events people can see, important? Does your intention have anything to do with governing the self? - 'I meant to do good but in a moment of weakness, I slipped.' Self-governance will be a lesson that is ongoing even on to the Mansion Worlds.

I am so grateful that the Spirit of Truth is always ready with an answer in any moment. We are always doing what we can, and self-governing, yes, is our responsibility. Also we have help from the Spirit that reminds us 'in whom do we serve,' and how that does help us make correct decisions. Do you have questions this evening, Abraham or myself can answer?

LINDA: I am new to the group. As you know I'm going through difficult times. I would appreciate some help you might have regarding my search for spirituality and answers.

MARY: Yes, Linda. I know you. I am in understanding of your history and present circumstances. I would hope that you take this time to know that you are being held by the Father, not punished for any certain thing. You have broken no rules with Him. He is making effort for you to get closer to Him as you experience this time of turmoil. He does not want to see you hurt in exchange for improper behavior. That is not happening, and not going to happen. Father is however, helping you to clear out the fog that has caused your perception to be sub-par. He is bringing in the light of His Son and showing you the real meanings and values of what this mortal life holds. You will still have tears and times of sadness, yes, but you will also have times of revelation and joy. There is a world of opportunities opening to you, and you need not feel left behind. I know life is different for you these days, and I know fear can cause learning to be delayed. At this time, I would ask you to ponder these words. Find out deep down, what are those fears that seem to hold you back. You are a daughter of God and have every right to move freely within the world. I would hope for you to make that your daily affirmation and have not worry that all is unfolding as it should. Sometimes we tend to hang on to what we think we know, even though it is uncomfortable. When we can let go, we are shown a new light and feel renewed in spirit and mind. Spend some time in journaling and write these feelings out; and as you finish you will know more about how to get past the fears and to allow Father to open your eyes to a new light. Is this helping? (Linda: Yes. Thank you.) Mary: You are welcome.

TECTRA: I have a two-part question: I am curious about the System circuits being re-encircuited. How far along in that process are we?

ABRAHAM: If you can view these circuits as perhaps the main and most important ones – those are one-hundred percent complete. There are still many more circuits to be repaired and some are non-existent because the worlds' experience has gone through a changed status. So there are new circuits being replaced with all the new experience just since the Adjudication (of Lucifer). But the main circuits that connect you with the Supreme Being, the cosmic mind, the seven adjutant mind-spirits, Father, Mother, and Michael, are all one-hundred percent complete and operating. Does this help?

TECTRA: Yes, thank you. As a follow-up to that: I can feel my experience in life with these new encircuitments happening. Can you say either tangible or specific things that we can, as a people, experience now from this re-encircuitment? I know that it is probably more of a spiritual nature – I am thinking about greater awareness sensitivity sort of things.

ABRAHAM: Of course. As you said, a greater awareness and sensitivity of mortals to the spiritual life, is ever-growing. I can also say that some natural abilities you should have had before the Lucifer rebellion will be becoming more apparent, such as foreknowing; intuition; ability to hear the Spirit speak; some communication without words between mortals; some communication with animals as well; your ability to know an individual, and know if you can trust them, will be more apparent. There are many assets that were lost because of the rebellion – and because you now are getting back what was gone, the human body will also have change and the mind will have growth. Does this help?

TECTRA: Yes. Thank you so much. I want to say too, that you may receive much from us, as you say, but I am so thankful – and I will try to speak for all of us here – for your time and effort that you spend each and every lesson that you bring to us. Your goodness of heart and goodwill inside your soul is pouring out to us. Thank you so much for your endeavors.

ABRAHAM: You are so welcome and we are also with gratitude to you for your enduring nature and logical love you have provided us over these years, Tectra, my son. Are there more questions?

CALVIN, for DAY: I well remember you, Abraham, telling me about ten years ago that Father had someone in store for me that would exceed my expectations as a soul companion. And now I am here, today, married to Day (Lanya) – and definitely does she exceed my expectations. She has asked me to voice her question. As you know, she has gone through much to leave her country and family, and now even her religion, to come here. As Linda's question, she would like to know if you, or Mary, have any words that will help her understand the meaning of this all.

MARY: Good evening, Day. I am Mary. I am honored to speak with you. I do see you have always had to put forth such great effort in everyday-living, and this was a way of life in your culture. Sometimes, now, there is no need to put forth that tremendous effort, and you are wondering what to do with yourself. I can see you are intelligent, and having any extra time would be good to study something that you love. For example, should you love flowers it would be acceptable for you to read books on flowers. If you are interested in looking for employment, that is a worthwhile research to participate in. You are a daughter of our First Source and Center and are accepted exactly as you are--equal to all Father's children--and have every right to explore, learn, and grow. You are a logical and joyful person. We find that your personal ministry will be of assistance to many that know you. Have not worry about feelings of non-productivity. Fill your time with the study of something you love. Does this help? (Calvin and Day: Yes.) Another question?

CALVIN: I am puzzled about the account in the Urantia Book where the children of Adam and Eve, after the fall of Eve, did become irate and went out to those just outside the garden killing men, women and children. It does not seem logical that the children of the Garden would do such a thing. I don't discount the Urantia Book's presentation of this, but still, it just isn't logical to me. Can you shed some light on this event?

ABRAHAM: I am Abraham. I would need also to further research this because there are issues I don't know first-hand. So at this time can you shelf that question and ask me later?

CALVIN: Yes, shelved! I have had so many coincidences in my life that seem beyond just happen-chance. One so very intriguing event was back in 1986 regarding my search for "the greater record to come that would reveal the mysteries of the universes" as foretold in Mormonism. After five years of searching, I found such in the Urantia Book - which was given to me by Marlin, who got it from Faye (Ellen) here in the group. At that time, I noticed its Library of Congress Catalog number is "55-10554" which is the same numbers as is my birthday, October 4th, 1955. Can you tell me if that is just coincidence? Otherwise, I've made quite a connection and significance as a result of this, given my long searching for it.

ABRAHAM: It is simple coincidence and yet, the feeling you have is real. I would say that your connection with the Urantia Book is more than synchronicity, it has become a part of your growing soul. And the fact that the birthdate is in alignment is like a medallion you can wear and enjoy. Is this answering? (Calvin: Yes, thank you.)
Abraham: Are there more questions?

TECTRA: What are some things we can say to people we are talking with who proclaim they are atheists? It seems they don't know that they're really searching.

ABRAHAM: Yes. I would ask them why have they the belief they do now. Most of the time you can trace it back to bitter religious training and the individual holding on to resentments toward God, instead of the messenger that brought His supposed word. Another reason why individuals may choose atheism is that they feel not worthy of a personal God that is just their very own, and who loves them more than they can comprehend, no matter what they have done. They feel that all those 'God-lovers' are in a special club, one in which they themselves would not be able to pay the membership dues. So my answer to you would be to get their story and start from there. I would ponder on how to relate with them. Feel free to share with them what you did discover on your own personal journey. It is a shame when people stumble over religion to get to the First Source and Center. I would not put down specific spiritual books or religions, but tell of your own personal story and beliefs as if you are just talking in conversation and not trying to convert them. Allow individuals to know they are welcome to have their say. It really is time, experience and opportunity, that enlivens a soul to the recognition of a higher power. That was a good question, Tectra, because we do have growing numbers of atheism, and it really is a natural outworking of the planets' spiritual evolution. It is a cleansing, so to speak. Sometimes it is better to start building your own spiritual foundation than to start with something somebody else has built for you and says you should accept it. Yes, well done. Another question?

CALVIN: I hear you and Mary often say you are near at hand and for us to call on you. I just don't hear you at all and I've never seen you. I'm sure you are there but unless you rattle some pans or make the dog bark like what happened last week, I just don't seem to make a literal connection. Perhaps my mind is just too busy or too tired from not enough sleep. I try to meditate but my mind is so busy; or, I am constantly itching which breaks my stillness attempt. Any help in this?

ABRAHAM: I would say your gift lies within your discussion with others. I believe you allow the Spirit to speak when the best of you is called for to aid in another's understanding. I understand that you love the truth and would always want to give sound advice. When you are without an answer you are asking Father for help, and in this, you serve well and are able to give an individual, words directly from the Spirit. Not everyone will receive in the same method. Sometimes it is just a calling for you to give the best that you have. You have good intentions and show a fine example of faith. You receive answers easier than you thought you would. It is not an actual voice or words to see, but so 'in-the-moment' of when you are desiring to bring out your best out of love for your fellows. Well done. One more question?

LINDA: I hear people called by different names. What is that about and what is my name?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. In the information I receive I am to interpret it into English, and then to you. Your spiritual name sounds like Jera. Is that making sense? (Linda: Yes, thank you.)

TECTRA: Could you explain again the basis of our spiritual names, please.

ABRAHAM: The spiritual names are actually not usually given when still in the flesh. The spiritual names are what Father knows you by. The reason we have allowed spiritual names in the Correcting Time is to help with awakening the minds' connection to the Adjuster. In all reality, Father knows each child - name or not. Your spirit name is more of a gift to you.

My connection grows weak and I am wanting to send you off with mine and Mary's love. Know that we are always at hand should you have more questions. Know that we are with ever-growing love for you each. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

The Reality Of Science And The Underlying Work Of Father

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-27-2012

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am overjoyed seeing the blooming of new life. My gratitude is overflowing today. I am grateful for all that I have known and experienced. My gratitude is a fuel that works on a spiritual level, where those that wear the flesh might experience gratitude more on a chemical level.

Mortal science has found that it is important to make connections in the brain of a baby, for as they develop, they are naturally with sympathy for others. It is important as adults that we also continue to make connections within the brain, and that can come about through feeling gratitude or love.

For adults to make a solid eye-connection with an infant creates a release of chemicals in the brain that creates joy and feelings of being well-balanced. To be within nature and take in the beauty of Father's creation also allows for a flood of chemical release in the adult brain.

Your scientists are finding God within the mechanics of the human body; it is hopeful that their findings will be made understandable to the public because people need to know that life is not chaos and random, but part of a divine purpose.

For you my friends here, I have never set you apart as special. I have never said that the Teaching Mission was elite. But I have said, those that have committed to doing tasks for the kingdom will be given further assignments. I am with awareness that many of you have had times of turmoil in your daily living, and I can tell you that Father is orchestrating the best possible outcomes for you and whomever you work with - to assist in all aspects of a more joy-filled and peaceful mortal living.

The flesh, or 'animal mind,' can become fearful and hold back; it can forget the commitments made to Father. However, the soul remembers the commitments made, and when you are spiritually fit, the soul is with peace and can more easily receive information from the Thought Adjuster, or from the cosmic mind.

I am attempting to help you see the reality of science and the underlying work of Father; the body reacts well to food for the soul. Hearing beautiful music; watching birds; listening to the ocean; looking into the eyes of your loved ones - these are a few examples of those practices that create those needed connections in the brain and releases your endorphins or hormones into the body.

We don't ask you to freefall with faith in just anyone, no! I understand, that having to live as a mortal, it is difficult to just take the words of a preacher or some leader, and simply have faith - and then are disappointed when you have those natural doubts. No, I am recommending you see the intricacy of all life as part of the symphony of a greater orchestra.

In times of sorrow or hardship, you may feel that Father has left you, and can easily feel that you are a failure. But believe me, this is the work of the animal ego; it is the fear rising up from the flesh trying to follow the natural instincts of the animal; it is not bad or good, it just is.

I can say that if you are not diligent in feeding the spirit, then the fear is more likely to compromise the natural chemical responses in the brain. I say, do not allow this fear to hang on. Rather, exercise your spiritual muscles. Enlighten yourself to the inner workings of nature, or the blessings of fellowship, or the several other ways we have learned to enliven the spirit. I say, to stay in that mindset of fear is not allowing the physical body to chemically react to balance the healthy functions of the mind.

So today I am saying that my gratitude is overflowing to be with you, soul to soul, friend to friend. I am with deep gratitude to Michael – the ‘door,’ and to our First Source and Center – our Father. I am grateful for our Mother, who holds our hand as she teaches us. I am grateful to stand in this family kingdom and know that love reigns.

This week my friends, let us tame the fearful ego with science and back that up with Spirit. Know that Mary sends her love and will be with us next time. That is all for this evening. I am with ever-growing love and gratitude for you each. Until next time, shalom.

The Path Of Ease-Seeking Is Not Fulfilling – It Brings No Adventure Or Faith-Building

Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-24-2012

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am indeed overflowing with the spirit that you have each placed a stepping stone to higher thinking. I am touched by your willingness to discuss reality with comfort. It is obvious we each bring out the best in each other. I count myself so blessed for having spent so much time with you and adding to the growth of the cosmic mind. It is obvious that during our time away from one another we are each reaching for answers and understanding. It is wonderful to see you each partake of the well of truth, beauty, and goodness.

I am EMULAN. What a treasure to again be with you this evening. I am in understanding of your difficulties in maintaining faith. During my time in the flesh, I realized that what I wanted 'physically' became the god I served. As you know, I experienced tragic loss of wife and daughter and was incarcerated for quite some time in a ward for the mentally disturbed.

During this incarceration, I spent a great many hours alone and began to envision a path in my mind – a path made of soil with boulders, grass, and trees. In this path, there was a fork. Down one side of the fork I could see a clear path for a long way. When I looked to the other side I could see great obstacles from falling logs and streams. It appeared to be rough going.

As I got to building my relationship with Father, I would believe He would have me take the rocky road of faith because I would be in training for my eternal career. But my animal ego-mind was definitely so strong, and I chose to take the clear path. On the clear path, I learned nothing. I got bored. I looked for outside interests and desires of the flesh.

It took a heavy knock to boost me out of this rut. I realized the path of ease-seeking was not fulfilling; there was no adventure or faith-building. My exercise of the spirit was small so the desires of the animal flesh became my focus. I sought escape through alcohol, drugs, sex, food – in general, risky living. And at the end of the day, I sat empty, I had nothing. I was indeed angry with God that He had not blessed me with a life of ease. ‘I paid my dues,’ I felt! ‘I paid with wife and child;’ and I felt I was owed or entitled to peace, love, and understanding.

They say, ‘don’t become bitter, become better.’ I say, that was not the case for me for I had become quite embittered. I realized I had to examine my thoughts, feelings, desires, and what I really wanted. I wanted to live my life as a tribute to the family that I lost and missed so terribly. I began to concentrate on gaining knowledge, soaking up every bit of information I could. I began to understand the ways of Michael, and Him waiting for my knock at the Door.

As I accepted the path of difficulty, and having sworn a resolve to go through whatever obstacle was before me – knowing that the Master would go first, my ‘animal instinct patterns’ began to change into ‘spiritual-seeking patterns’ – such as:

- 1) Finding out the meaning of loss.
- 2) Finding out the meaning of keeping the faith.
- 3) Finding out the meaning of attaining knowledge.
- 4) Finding out the meaning of ‘what God do you serve.’

I now became aware that as I sat at the end of the day, I was full; I felt peace; I noticed an intimacy and increasing companionship with the Savior. I realized that every moment with Him makes me want to put forth my best in any situation.

Friends, we must not think that our time-frame and God’s, align, no! Time is nothing. Time is a matter of what you fill it with. Do you want to fill it with escape? Unconsciousness of reality through chemicals? Do you want to fill it with worry of money? Do you want to fill your time with regret of the past?

How will you feel at the end of the day? Is your time spent in learning to build that scaffolding to the morontial life? What have we taken out of the spirit life? What have we learned? How do we feel deep down when we have that closeness with the First Source and Center? Will we know at the end of the day we did our best and did it with full-on approval from the Lord?

I am so honored to be among you this evening. Thank you for the lessons you have taught me, my brothers and sisters. I am with deep and abiding love for you each. Farewell.

I am ABRAHAM. Our gratitude to our brother, Emulan, for a beautiful explanation of reality – that it is not good or bad; it just is, and is an adventure.

For the weeks ahead let us put forth true effort into the God we serve. How does the ego-mind throw down logs on our paths? What are we going to do about it? You know Father will never let you lay down before your troubles. Take His hand and learn and do. That is all for this evening. My love is ever-growing for each one of you, blessed brothers and sisters. Until next time, shalom.

Let Not The Earthly `Fireworks` Distract Us From Our Responsibilities To Father
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-29-2012

Back

[Editor's note. In the past several months we had been meeting on the 4th Sunday of each month – which was typically the last Sunday of the month. This month, however, there were five Sundays, so we elected to meet on the 5th Sunday.)

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. We are happy for the rescheduling from last week and the chance to be in touch with you again, our co-workers, friends, brothers and sisters.

If we view the world right now, the awareness by the population is perhaps a little like watching fireworks; the changes on the planet now are sometimes stunning or fearful, and sometimes beautiful or blinding. It is understandable that many are frozen in their tracks. The work of the Correcting Time is not easy or even efficient, for it takes great patience and effort on the part of those who choose to live their lives according to the Master's teachings; and of course, there are at times setbacks and stumbling.

I would like to reassure everyone that communication such as this (transmission-receiving through the mortal mind, as is with Ellanor) is also available for each of you on a personal level. Those of you who practice the lessons of this Teaching Mission will help steady those who are frozen in their tracks.

Yes, with our Spirit-leading, we can explain a bit clearer of what is happening. As you have said, sometimes things must get worse before they are better. As such, with the access of media, you don't hear all of the facts – facts that would add to our definition of an overall picture of Urantia's happenings.

I am MARY. We are grateful for this opportunity to keep updated and encouraged. I believe my greatest lesson if in the flesh today would be learning patience; and, realizing that the universe has not the same concept of time that mortals do. I am saying, we as mortals have developed our own concept of time, and it is not the same as Father's universal timing.

I know that wading through deep and challenging lessons of life is sometimes damaging in various ways. However, if mortals should so choose to allow it, these times can be life-changing toward greater understanding.

What was so memorable for me was observing the Master's patience in many areas of mortal living. I was especially affected by the event of the crucifixion where He said: "I thirst!" and He was offered wine/vinegar as perhaps a buffer from the pain, physical and mental, and He refused. He wholeheartedly chose to go by the Father's will.

The Master could have escaped the pain of the scourging and the humiliation; He could have screamed out His defense – but His mind was so in tune with Father's that He knew exactly what to do in those moments. A pillar of strength, yes, and I believe that He attained that from His constant devotion to the Father's will.

I often wondered how Jesus could choose to not have a partner and perhaps some children. As we know, He knew what the Father's will was, and His own desires were modified.

Look within at your own pain when it is felt – each area in your life, be it physical, financial, or mental and emotional. With each event are you aware of staving off your desires for a time to allow Father to communicate with you? That's why I mentioned the time differences – because you have to be okay in waiting with patience.

The world today is so instant, temporary, and disposable – and you cannot expect Father to play in this impatient game. He is our Father yesterday, today, and tomorrow, yes; and His plan is perfect. With a devotion to the doing of Father's will, your connection is better. With Father and His universe helpers, your desires are changed, your picture is bigger. You will be able to have confidence on the path you are traveling because you know it is in line with Father's will and providing those needed lessons/experiences.

I am inspired by the Master's life because He did not choose the easy instant way out. He did not seek escape; He thought about it, yes, but His devotion to the doing of Father's will won out. How could one live a more perfect life in thirty-six years? This was not a long time, but throughout He chose strength over weakness, wisdom over mysticism, education instead of assumptions.

Where are your eyes to see with? Where are your ears to hear? Where is your mind at these days? Where is your free will leading you, and what have you chosen? Are you hiding in isolation and weakness? or are you striving to embrace the light? You are to live life on purpose, yes, not let life randomly 'live you.' Many times we can lose focus – and yes, it is completely understood.

We suggest for the month ahead, to think about how the Master made choices. Where was His mind? What was the practice in which He connected with Father? Where did such strength come from that He did not run and hide from His problems? Let's look up above these earthly fireworks to make connection with Father and His familial universe.

Know that Abraham, myself and the many others that attend you, love you no matter what has occurred in your life. No matter what you have done or who you think you are – we love you. We love you as you are. Embrace the light with us. And with that, Abraham and I shall bid you, shalom.

Our Creator Brother-Father Is Our Close Friend | To Know Him Better, We Better Know Father

Abraham, Michael & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP

08-26-2012

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Our hearts are with gratitude to be here in this time of remembrance for the Master's mortal life. I find it touching that you find these milestones in your lives to either celebrate, grieve, or to simply think about.

Think about your happiest celebratory moment here in the mortal life and know that that feeling is every day here beyond the veil. We find our happiest times are when we take moments for worship of the First Source and Center. Although we are assuming we are giving of our time, love and thoughts, we are actually receiving healing – mentally and emotionally; and with you mortals, this healing is also physically.

If the Master had His way, He would give energy to the joyful things in life instead of allowing sorrow to take its course. I am not saying do not learn from the past, no, but to take what you can and move on. Put your energies into something that you can make better. You can improve the future or even the present, with a good connection with God.

Isn't it wonderful we each have our own God within who understands us completely and loves us no matter what. A great deal of the population believes that God is in His throne on high; and therefore, it is difficult to relate to Him who is the Source and Center of all there is.

I am MARY. Love and greetings to you all. I am especially grateful for my time spent with the Master because He showed me that God the Father was my friend. God should always be the one we go to first – not the last resort when we are in trouble. In joy or sorrow, He should be as familiar to you as Abraham and myself.

Many of the religions today keep God and Christ as 'deities having given up everything for you so that you will give all to them.' Christ's mission on Earth never asked that of His friends. Rather, He showed by example how familiar He was with Father, how He could talk to Father like a friend.

I have felt, myself, in talking with the Master that He was also like talking to a friend. Never did I know of His divinity. As a mortal, never did I know what order of Sons He belonged to; nor had any universe knowledge whatsoever. All I knew was that Christ was my friend, my counselor, my example of how to live life – giving energy into things that really matter. And with that, I give you my friend.

MICHAEL: My loved ones. What a treat to meet with you all together. I would hope that you know we have plenty of time, one on one, but being together brings back the memory of my resurrection days. The joy and light on the faces of my fellows brought me a glad and full heart. Speaking of my fellows, I am with Mary and Abraham, whom I have known so long, and the generations of love shines such a beautiful light. I am with the same feeling with each of you – we are that close.

I am the door to the First Source and Center, and always is my door open. I am renewing my relationship with you, my children, with the hope that you can see God the Father sitting right beside you, listening to you, giving you guidance, understanding you. What other people may view as trivial, the Father does not. He knows your pain. As I am close to you, Father is even closer.

We are in difficult times on the planet. I am speaking of the Correcting Time. There are a great deal of my children who seek escape, or who choose to worship something else. I am suggesting that you make an example of how I am a friend to you, as well as is Father. I am asking you to live your beliefs not just talk about them. Those that know you shall also be inspired to think of me and Father as their closest allies – a real family – one which does not desert in times of stress or spirit poisons.

Overall, I would like to tell you that I am deeply touched by your faith and perseverance to continue on in this Correcting Time mission. Our tasks are not hard. Our assignments should generate energy and joy. In ministering to individuals, you should feel an abundance of energy and drive. Any time you are feeling empty or put upon, then perhaps that is not the task for you; if you keep good prayer and meditation practice you should easily know the difference, and find that direction from myself, Mother, or our First Source and Center, easy to understand.

What helps you to step closer to me? What helps you to listen for guidance, or to keep faithful when all seems lost? You know what these steps are, and it is individual of course. Believe me, I do know my children and desire to be close, just like a brother/friend. I am willing to take on your feelings of anger, disappointment, sorrow. Trust me, I can handle it and turn it around so that you are confident, serene, and energetic.

I shall return you back to my friends, Abraham and Mary. I give you my unending love and devotion. Feel free to call upon me, because I will call upon you. Carry on.

I am MARY. Thank you, Michael. We are with inspiration to go forward to believe that you are our friend right by our side, yes, in all that is good and seemingly bad. We thank you for making Father 'down-to-Earth' for us, showing us that He is not too busy and that our problems are not too petty. We feel loved and wanted in the Kingdom family.

My friends, for the weeks ahead, do those things that draw you closer to the Master, whatever they are. Talk to Him in all your times of emotional upheaval as well as your joy. Including Him in your life helps to make a better connection with the Father.

We thank you, as we do every year, for your remembrance of the Masters' mortal birth on Urantia. Know that the three of us send you our love, hand in hand and heart to heart. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Be Cautious of Going Down A Negative Path and Truthfully Assist Those Who Do
Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-30-2012

Back

[Editor's note: This year was an election year for the United States Presidency (Barack Obama vs. Mitt Romney). As per this Wikipedia article, there arose an unusual negativity, nationwide, that far exceeded anything previous on the political horizon in the US.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. To be gathered with you, my family, makes me hopeful – hopeful for new changes in the world; new changes in the hearts of man. I am a bit concerned about the masses of individuals that are turning not only away from God, but toward something evil. It is obvious that many have lost hope and only care about what their eyes can see and their ego can gain. It definitely is a trend, and believe me, if you call upon evil it will answer.

It is sad that churches have made the masses feel disconnected from the 'One God.' It would seem those who choose not to believe in a higher power will have an easier life where they can make mistakes and then gloat about it. It is difficult to come upon these negative individuals and try to stay on Father's path. The negativity of the individual pulls you into what would 'seem' to be an easier life, one filled with criticism and judgment toward mankind. It is important that we develop our spiritual muscles - to not only maintain our faith, but call out the negative individual.

I am MARY. Greetings, friends. Abraham has reminded me of a situation I was in when working as a nursemaid to the sick. I had a co-worker named Johanna. She was supposedly down in the trenches with me doing her best so that she could be seen in a good light by her fellows. She helped others to really help herself - and I can tell you, she complained non-stop about every little thing.

Johanna's negativity drew me in and I began to gossip and have judgment on others - which I can say, in that moment, your ego feels lifted as if you are better than everyone else. I could tell that my internal feelings were definitely disrupted with this negativity, and ego-boosting definitely went against the grain of my beliefs; I literally felt this disrupting negative energy.

Once I would meet up with Johanna and start in with the gossip and negativity it was difficult to pull out of that. When I would go home at night I would still carry that negativity with me - and the more I did, the further away I felt from Father.

When I realized what was occurring, I told Johanna to tell her negative thoughts to someone else because she was hurting my spirit. She was angry of course and we had words. I felt sad for this separation, yes, but also was I glad in a way, for my mind could begin again to focus on the right path - meaning, to attend to the sick because they are our brothers and sisters, and to spread the good word that 'the bad doesn't last,' and that 'good will come again.'

A few days after my words with Johanna she came to me and said: "You are right, Mary, I am low in spirit and do have excess ego difficulties - can you help me?" We both cried and hugged; and I said: "I will tell you what the Master has told me." Said He: "It would be most beneficial if you could sit in stillness and attempt to feel the Father's presence." We will go listen to the Master's teachings and take them in as a part of who we are."

I told Johanna that I was far from perfect and still learning, and that we can learn together how to create light instead of only seeing bad - always speaking of negative events and having a judgmental attitude.

As time went by, Johanna and I had become very good friends. Her attitude was lightened and she wore a smile most of the time. She began to genuinely care about her job as a nursemaid. She began to better care for the patients. She told me she felt new growth; she felt increased happiness; she felt the love of God and the Master, and wanted to do good just for them. She expressed that the love was so great that it was transforming.

So our lesson tonight is mostly about being cautious of going down a negative path. Also, it is important to say truthful and yet kind words to turn an individual within to where the God resides. It is important to allow individuals to know that you are not perfect and are still a learning child of God; and, that we are all learning together. We can bring up positive thoughts for the day instead of perpetuating the negative.

I am so honored to know you each. Your blessed personalities lead me to believe you have no problem in getting close to the hearts of those you know, and helping in creating light. There is a dark-growing trend out there. To those you know who are following that dark path, attempt to shed positive light; let them know that whoever it is they are seeking in that darkness is from the side of evil and is not who they really want. Those who are on a dark path, really, deep down do desire the true God of freedom, of unconditional love – and yes, some individuals do not believe that that exists.

Know that you each are surrounded by a light that touches others wherever you go. This light touches your children, parents, grocery store clerks, co-workers, friends, and neighbors. You have made a commitment long ago and our assignments are full-on. We are somewhat battling the darkness through our Correcting Time assignments. We are hoping individuals will see the difference, as Johanna did. In the light, it feels so much better in your mind, in your body, in your spirit, in your attitude – yes, the light feels so much better.

That is all for this evening. Next time we meet, perhaps we will have questions and more interaction if that is acceptable. With that, Abraham and myself take our leave, sending you with unending love, joy, and peace. Shalom.

Staying Close To Father Helps Us Shield Against Negativity

Abraham & Mary, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-28-2012

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is so uplifting to my spirit when we can meet. As you watch the children play you feel the love and joy that I feel when meeting with you. I am so grateful for our history. We have had many life-occurrences that have taught us a great deal about how to move, how to live and have our being in Urantia's current environment.

I have always found that the more I help others, the more I am helped. It is customary in the corporate world for individual's to constantly struggle to make it to the top. Urantians do have a need to have some attention, some interaction; and in this fast-paced world we find that some individuals are stepping on others to get that attention.

It was interesting to learn about the Master and His close relationship to the Father. He had not need to draw attention to Himself. He did not want the good news to be about Him, no, but about the relationship with the Universal Father and His kingdom children. I know there is a lot of struggle to maintain everyday life; we have learned from the Master how our focus on Father helps all other things to fall into place.

It is understandable for us watching you how negative sometimes your interaction can be with others. I do also understand hurt feelings and that little spark of revenge that pops into the mind. I am happy that you have studied the Master's life and have come to know that just because others in the world you live in act like animals, this does not need to bring out the animal in you.

When we are in good association with Father, then we are able to look upon others' negative action as just a misunderstanding on their part; but yet we do what we do as believers – we keep showing the light, we keep lightheartedness and hope. Through these years together, I am with confidence to be witness to how you help others and spread the good news. As believers, we need not allow the darkness to swallow the light; we are with knowing that the light is much more powerful.

I am always with the understanding that you each need time to rest, play and find some moments of serenity. It is important that you spend some time each day focusing on Father. Staying close to Him will help you shield yourself against negativity and not let your attitude be changed by the negative actions of others. It is understandable that you feel anger from time to time, but it is also logical that you have been trained to know a higher road.

When you are feeling defeated in life, it is because of an absence of the Father in your life. You can see how that close relationship with Father is a powerful tool to have in daily living. When the rain falls too hard, then are you sheltered by His love, understanding, and knowledge – rather than feeling drenched and defeated.

Father helps us not to react in a negative fashion, but to teach a better way. This reminds me of your so-called 'road-rage' – of the many individuals in machines having not common courtesy. I am sure we would all agree, this rage is really quite trivial. Because others choose a more animalistic behavior does not affect us when we are close with the Spirit.

I am MARY. My spirit is also lightened by our gatherings. I do appreciate this evenings' lessen because I lived that self-protective negative animalistic behavior in my mortal days. It really became simply a social negative habit. I know that when I was treated poorly by others, I also treated others poorly. It took a great deal of time to change my mind, attitude, and habits.

It is written that 'you can exchange your mind for the mind of Christ.' I spent many hours speaking with my sisters about how Father gives us the gift of compassion. Those that are negative live quite in their own hell. We can feel compassion, yes! and yet we can turn our minds toward what we can do to help the light grow.

I know I spent many hours in my own thinking and remembering and dwelling on 'the poor treatment I received;' and from that mindset, I would be low in spirit and bad in attitude. It took real exercise of the mind to 'exchange my mind for the mind of Christ.' I would still feel some anger, yes, and yet I learned I can look upon those events with compassion and understanding – that sometimes people just don't know any better.

It is necessary to make a commitment to the Master to have His understanding; His far-seeing ability. I came to have a real understanding of this spiritual Being. To have such understanding is indeed a feeling of calm – like, as you say, a duck with water that rolls right off its back and troubles are not so crippling. I know in my heart that life is eternal and this mortal life is only the beginning. Yes, we will be learning for eternity, and it is important to start your scaffolding with a sturdy foundation of faith.

I am understanding questions will be postponed. We are off to teach in other areas that are in great need. We are so grateful you have committed yourselves to being mentors and good friends. You know that the light is more powerful than any negativism, and that we will always be there to help you.

With that, we shall take our leave. Know that our gratitude to you is endless and our love for you is so strong. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Keeping The Mindal Well Clean And Ready For Faith-Filled Hope And Joy
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-11-2012

Back

[Editor's note as of May 20, 2024: Abraham's reference in this lesson regarding the nation's increasing trend toward "separation, hate, distrust" – is likely a result of 2012 political environment in the US Presidential election. The media's polarizing hype for each political side (Barack Obama vs. Mitt Romney), and the incessant social media's misinformation, had brought about a vast wedge between families, neighbors and co-workers, at a scale not seen before. This division and hate became even more profound in the US Presidential elections of 2016; 2020; and 2024. Many other countries had very similar political experiences. This environment gives a whole new meaning to the biblical passage in KJV Luke Chapter 12 regarding society's landscape prior to Christ's 'second coming:']

52 For from henceforth there shall be five in one house divided, three against two, and two against three.

53 The father shall be divided against the son, and the son against the father; the mother against the daughter, and the daughter against the mother; the mother-in-law against her daughter-in-law, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law. (KJV).]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am happy to meet in this casual format. I am indeed busy, as are many of the Teachers in the Mission. Urantia has been the focus of Nebadon as of late; there have been so many mind-altering events, so much emotion, that it has literally moved your world.

The mind is a well, and whatever you put in it is what you can expect to receive out of it. With this Correcting Time, there is so much desire for change that many are grasping at anything – grasping at something to fill the well within. So many events just in this nation have caused a great deal of separation, hate, distrust.

It would appear that emotions are what Urantians are filling their mindal well with; and when they go to dip their cup within the well, there is nothing of value, nothing substantial, nothing that can help. It only creates more chaos.

Time spent with the stillness can help to empty that mindal well – to clear it of emotional debris and prepare it to receive real comfort, knowledge, and truth. It takes dedication to surrendering the desires of the heart and mind – surrendering the temporary satisfaction, or the 'quick-fix.' It would be my hope that you each become skilled at keeping the mindal well clean and ready for faith-filled hope and joy. I can take questions.

CALVIN: You mentioned earlier in your words tonight regarding events that has caused all eyes focused on Urantia. Does that event have anything to do with the expected 12/21/12 predictions regarding the Mayan Calendar's supposed 'end of the world' thinking?

ABRAHAM: Thank you, Calvin. The events that are affecting the Correcting Time are happening now, and have been building for many years. I am mostly speaking of the spirit poisons that are moving Urantia into a negative direction. Some mortals are seeing the animals they can be – the teeth-bearing hateful, greedy, animals. This is causing individuals to look 'within' and try to find the miracle of change that is coming. In being 'human,' as you know, many love the mystical; and as you have discussed, the books that are treasured portray the death and destruction of the world with an outcome of the true believers creating the new heaven on earth. In our own experience on the planet, each one of us knows that many things predicted have not come to pass – that many things are attention-grabbing and ego-satisfying by those who give predictions. Many events in the world now have caused people to be humble, to be small and look around and see what is really important – life and love, truth, beauty, and goodness. Of course, history will go on. As mortals, we can only hope to learn from mistakes and be small, and look at the value in our role as a human being. Believe me, we are facing these global challenges and are finding that the majority are turning their face toward the Son, the light. No, there is no 'end times' in sight. Michael puts forth His all to be reaching each of His children – to help them rise up before their troubles and to teach them integrity, honor, faith, and loyalty. Know that those who have not deep and abiding faith will continue to embrace some sort of prediction; they will seek other reasons rather than to look towards a higher power – when all along, the answers are there, within. Each child has access to a joy-filled life; not an easy life by any means, but more joy than pain. Is this helping? (Calvin: Yes. Thank you, Abraham.)

SHYANNE: May I have an assessment, please?

ABRAHAM: My daughter, it is wonderful to see you. Yes, I believe I know your thoughts of troubling matters and hope that I can answer adequately. I am understanding how much effort you put toward your passions in life. I am understanding you are feeling somewhat exhausted from so much effort being put forth and not finding what you have hoped for. I know you to be a woman of courage and have strong intuition. I understand that it is not easy for you to trust that intuition; but I can confirm that you have a higher understanding of situations, difficult situations that others cannot understand. I know you to be an oasis in the lives of your loved ones, and the emotional connection to them is somewhat of a burden at times. I believe if you can quiet the emotions, you can connect to that intuition and have knowledge of handling situations that come up before you. Yes you have foreknowledge, and that is a tremendous gift. I see you as a teacher who helps others to keep fighting the good fight of faith. You help strengthen others to move forward and be responsible. Well done. I would recommend that some interaction with Mother Spirit would be helpful to you. Spend a few moments each day in stillness with intention of greeting Her. Have not the doubt that you are overlooked by Father. You are well known, well-loved and guided. Does this help? (Shyanne: Yes, thank you.)

LINDA: I am very grateful for you. I would like an assessment. Am I doing the right thing in my relationship? or to end it.

ABRAHAM: Greetings, daughter. I am with over-flowing love to meet with you. I have grown quite fond of you as I get to know you. I am in understanding of your struggle. I am loath to say if one is doing the right thing or not because it is one's personal experience to live and grow therefrom. I can say that in this experience you have gained faith, strength, and determination. You can only answer for yourself: 'Is my life better off now than it was with the relationship?' Daughter, I do believe that you are fully capable to answer this! Everyone will have their choices, will have decisions – to take the easy road or to gird yourself with the weapon of faith. I see you as being born again. You are more receptive to the spirit now more than ever before. You have a great deal to give; but first, you are to know the experience of morontia mota. Have not fear for the future. You are well receptive to Father's guidance and can find a reliable love in Him. "Seek first the kingdom of heaven and all else will be given," is a favorite line of mine. You are becoming stronger every day. Know that you are loved and have a great deal to do in the future. Focus on your receptivity skills of being in understanding how best to move forward. Also do I recommend you to speak with Mother; She is the one who knows about that through Her mind-ministries. Thank you for your question, my daughter. (Linda: Thank you.) Abraham: You are welcome.

CALVIN: Do you have some words for our transmission-receiver, Ellanor.

ABRAHAM: Thank you, Calvin. Ellanor, I know well of your thoughts. Your need to atone has indeed become destructive. I have a recommendation that you study your Urantia Book and remember the promises Father made to His children. It is not a random world. It is not about luck or punishment. You have a way with people and can do a great deal of positive work. I am recommending to you to focus on positive works. If you look around you, you can see the many that are in need of a hopeful word. That is all.

LINDA: Miriam would like an assessment of how she is doing with her health.

ABRAHAM: Miriam, my daughter, I am seeing you to focus much on pain. It is understood, yes, but it is possible to exchange your mind for the mind of Jesus; and I am suggesting that you take time to sit at the Master's feet and open your mind and heart to Him. Have your journal open. His presence is a healing light. I would also ask that you free yourself from past regret – for that is a dead end. You know that beyond the veil there is understanding to be had. For now, empty the mindal well and place yourself at the feet of the Master, and listen. He is with such love for you, such understanding, and wants for your progression. We will speak more. I will look forward to seeing you at our meeting-time. Go in peace, daughter.

CALVIN: Question for Day: She asks advice for how to help her brother, and what is her spirit name?

ABRAHAM: Greetings, Day. I am so happy your presence is with this group. You are a joy-filled spirit that helps in lightening any heavy mood. I am not with understanding of how to help in your brother's situation, but I can say you are helping him by being in contact. Do your best to contact him as much as possible. Do not worry about his faith in God, simply draw upon your own faith and be that peaceful light that he knows. You are with a great deal of wisdom and are completely able to be a stabilizer in anyone's life. [Pause.] I am believing I can come as close as possible to your spiritual name - Lanya. As you each know, the language between spirit and mortal is as different as is the language from nation to nation on your world. Lanya, it is indeed a pleasure to work with you. You are very important in the lives of many, and there are still so many yet to meet. I thank you for being open to the faith Calvin has presented you in this Mission; and, for your helping him in his path. You will be a source of love and joy to those who know you. Well done, daughter. I am slipping. Is there one more question I can finish up the evening with?

ANTHONY (Mike): Can helping people financially be an aid to them? or is that enabling them? Is there anything about the baby, my niece, which we mentioned earlier? What are your views regarding our Tuesday meetings? [the Urantia Book study group meeting in the Salt Lake City area.]

ABRAHAM: I am understanding that angels are present with the baby and not to worry. Your question is extremely pertinent at this time - there is a line to be drawn between financial help and enabling; it may be different for those who have varying levels of faith in the spiritual life. Money has become a god on this planet, and a false sense of security. There are many people now who are finding that money is not helping, and their souls are desperate and empty. I would hope that you each handle this desperate situation with your current levels of faith. You are knowing of where to draw the line of financial help, and enabling. If one is taking money to be of further destruction, then, of course, that doesn't help. If you find that helping an individual creates integrity and inspiration, then, of course, the money is well worth it. I would be wise about helping those that are seemingly downtrodden. Remember that some look to money as their god and are avidly serving that god. I trust that you each know how to invest in creating ongoing progress in one's life, or a situation that enables further desperation. Your discussions at your Tuesday Urantia Book study group meetings are full of generating deep-thinking. As long as Father sits at the head of that table, good will result. Good question.

My words are slipping. I am with such growing love for you each. You make me better in all ways. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Report On The Recent Universe-Wide Mother Spirit Celebration | Thoughts Can Clear The Way To Father

Back

[In recent years, around November, we have the reports from Abraham and Mary regarding the Universe Mother Spirit Celebration that, according to these transmissions, is a universe-wide event.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Thank you for coming tonight. We have all been spending much time together and indeed creating a great deal of light in the Correcting Time. I am happy to see how you each minister as you pass by others, just as Jesus did. I'm happy to see you integrate your spiritual knowledge into all that you do.

At this time of year, we gather to celebrate the Mother Spirit and all that She brings. We have lately been focusing on thoughts and how they are 'living thoughts.' Mother's message this year was about our thoughts and how they either clear a path in our spiritual life, or create destruction.

It is written that the Master said He would not pick you up away from your troubles, but would go before you. If we have not the Master within our thoughts, how can He go before us?

I am MARY. I am with gratitude to meet with you. I am also buoyed by the celebration of the Mother Spirit. Mother is a great comfort and yet, She is a well of knowledge – not just spiritual information but common sense, helping us to learn compassion and have balance in everyday living.

In my mortal life, I could feel time ticking away and that it was not productive. I would stumble on a negative thought and over-think it to the point of soul contamination. I was not clearing the path of a healthy soul-consciousness, but was cluttering it with my spirit poison. I do remember feeling guilty and self-loathing, and that I was of no use. It was networking with my sisters in the Mission that had helped me to have understanding of what was cluttering the path for the capacity of how my mind could travel.

It has been said many times to those who are hurt individuals to 'get over it.' That is indeed easier said than done, I know! But with the assistance of my sisters, I had learned I needed to look at negative issues in a logical manner. I tried to see with the Master's eyes what the difficulty was made up of; this helped me to cleanse my mind and soul of spirit poisons. I was able to exchange my mind for the higher mind of Christ and see where emotions may have cluttered my thoughts. Negative self-talk had me with no confidence in my ability as a human being or my value as a child of God.

In our universal gathering for celebration of the Mother Spirit, we concentrated on how our thoughts moved our lives 'individually.' We learned that mass thoughts are so powerful; and right now in the Correcting Time negative thoughts are causing static with the cosmic mind. You can see for yourself – when you communicate with an individual and have positive thinking, this sets another's thoughts in a positive direction.

Yes, we can see that a few positive and loving words can ripple out into many individuals, creating a great thing, a great happening, and a great outcome. As well, we can look at Urantia, for example, with all that has been occurring with the negativeness – the mass mind is creating a great deal of static, fear, uncertainty, powerlessness, and wavering faith.

As ministers of Urantia, we are blessed to help create bright lights all around in this Teaching Mission. We can help clear the static en masse if we can spread light from mind to mind. There are so many trivial events (or circumstances) that are taking the attention of mankind toward aggressiveness. With your help we can add some softness; we can, as Mission workers, shed light on situations with compassion, creating examples that show balance.

There is a lot of anger in the thoughts of human beings – but that is for the most part, caused from misunderstanding. We are shown through the Master's eyes how to dissect a problem and find solutions. We cannot sweep them away and we cannot fix everything; but we can shine a positive light to help others to clear negativity and believe in something more than just themselves.

We have also learned from Mother that Her seven adjutant mind-spirits are busy in the hope that Urantians will see that they have gifts to assist them in this life. Intuition and foreknowledge are becoming integrated with common thought. In just these few years there is so much change that we see in you, our students, family, loved ones; we can see how you use, in common fashion, intuition and faith-building skills.

Some years back we can see that the world had many questions; and for we that have been students in the Teaching Mission, many questions have been answered. And now mortals are building up again with questions. Like a pendulum swinging through history, the en masse thoughts are moving the evolution of mortals. In these days now of our Correcting Time, we are with action; we are trusting in the gift of the Mother Spirit to go about in daily life creating ripples of thought that focus on good, winning.

Abraham and I thank you for your diligence and time spent in the Master's cause. We recommend you to take a few minutes to refresh your memory on Mother's adjutant mind-spirits. Know that we are with ever-growing love for each one of you. You are so dear to us. That is all. Go in peace. Shalom. [Editor's note: The anger and negativity Abraham speaks of in this lesson and of late, at least in the United States, was likely due to the political environment. At this time Barack Obama had just defeated Mitt Romney for the US Presidency. This was a bitter campaign and many took sides aligned with much negativity – such as hatred and anger, which was predominately driven and greatly proliferated by the media and various digital apps and websites with nefarious agendas. It became evident that an increasing number of other countries were experiencing the same chaos and unrest as was in the US.]

Examine Our Motivation In Everyday Life | Is It For Our Agenda, Or For Fathers`
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-23-2012
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I find it wonderful to see you in your balanced mindset. Watching you converse with one another, I see your conversation builds something beautiful. You have concern and yet, logic. You have heartfelt sorrow and yet, hope. You have a wide range of emotions and yet, balance it with humor. I say, you make me happy.

This is a time of year where many focus on the birth of Jesus and the joy He would bring in salvation. When I say salvation, I mean in short, the ability to master the self. Salvation, to many religious foundations, has a different definition – and that is acceptable, and for the most part on the side of hope.

This month, we have been learning a bit about personal motivation, especially on the part of mortals and how we can help them. You can each see for yourselves how greed has played out in the world in the ever-growing desire for 'more.'

When we view the life of the Master, we can see His motivation was to serve the Father in heaven. Therefore, His desire was 'to not have desire' so that the channel could be free and clear for Father to communicate. This mindset put Him more into the Spirit instead of so much of the flesh.

We know that the Master loved people and wanted to be of help; and I believe His motivation was love – simply to give it, not to worry about receiving it. He found all of life on this planet miraculous and somewhat magical. He had real enjoyment from awareness. Even when the pettiness of living had Him concerned, He would pray to Father for understanding – and that would direct Him to see a larger picture or, to open His mind.

Sometimes Jesus had struggle with His mother, Mary, and I do know at times He thought of escape. He thought of avoiding her, as she tested Him frequently. However, this only helped to strengthen the connection between Father and Jesus because most of all, He wanted to do no harm, he wanted to bring peace and resolution. Yes, the dilemma did bring Him closer to Father by seeking direction and resolution.

Jesus' ability to have a broad outlook helped Him when He most needed it. He kept His desire to do the Father's will and not worry about bodily discomfort or mental irritations. And in this personal motivation, Father had granted Him with the tools He needed to act with the situation at the time.

Whether the Master was speaking to the crowds or dealing with a sibling, He was giving-in to His motivation to doing the Father's will, not His own; in this desire, the Master was strengthened to put His mind to work where it would serve best. He, many times, forgot to eat. He could withstand a tremendous amount of pain. It was through His desire to do the Father's will that opened a mindal channel for Him to overcome many negative circumstances.

Jesus had not motivation from the ego to have more riches or self-comfort. He had love for His family and wanted for their well-being, yes, but His motivation was always to serve the Father. Even as He waited for His hour to come, He was practicing patience and making effort to 'wait on the will of the Father.' This patience, for mortals, seems to be a great challenge, yes, but because of the Master's first thought, 'to serve the Father,' He was made to feel calm and confident.

It is understood that mortals are sometimes given unto depression or nervousness – and this is well understood, believe me. My suggestion is to examine your motivation in everyday life. If you are able to want for the Father's will, it will happen. Simply wanting to exert a spiritual life will help to bring ease to the mind and strengthen that channel between you and Father.

The Master's motivation was to keep clear-headed to receive Father's words, and this was a protection against spirit poisons. He could be patient with His mother and see her as a child of God, and indeed learn to treat her with love rather than show frustration. At Zebedee's He worked for a long time in the building of boats waiting upon His hour to come. Jesus knew His mission task was great and that a lot had to happen in such little time. He could not allow Himself to be anxious or concerned; rather, He crafted his boats and kept His mind on the moment.

When you can keep the Father's will at the forefront of your thinking, then is the Spirit going to overcome the worries of the mind and the pain of the body. We see in some cultures that there is such mindal training that many things can be withstood – it is a real occurrence. When you can keep your mind on Father, peace follows.

Let us celebrate this season with the motivation of better communication with our Father. Allow His peace to cure worrisome ailments and irritations. It is the season to show that your faith is alive – in a simple way.

Mary sends her regards and our lesson is kept short this evening. Again, I thank you for the joy you bring to me, and also for helping me to learn how to be a better Teacher. Know that my love is ever growing for you each. Until next time, shalom. [This December meeting was the last meeting until the following year – August 2013 – due to some unforeseen circumstances within the group. Some members of the group continued to meet bi-weekly to review past lessons.]

State of Affairs For The Correcting Time | Words of Love and Encouragement From Michael

Abraham & Michael, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-18-2013

Back

[This was the only 'group' meeting/transmission in 2013, other than personal meetings that were arranged on a personal basis.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I have such feeling of joy to look upon your faces and know that our souls are indeed familiar with each other. I am glad you heeded the call for today's gathering. It is efficient to touch base every now and then. We also want you to never forget that love is so important. It is a cure for so many daily human events.

Some years ago, many of you committed yourselves to the doing of the Correcting Time work. The training through daily experience would seem somewhat harsh, yes, but as we can look back now you know that when certain situations come up you now have the tools to assist. I am grateful I could meet with you for these many years and speak words that would have you incorporate the lessons into your daily lives.

The Correcting Time however, has moved on to the next generation. The reserve corps of destiny families are at work in reaching as many people as daily events will allow. It is miraculous for me to look back and see you teach your children about the Urantia Book. The seeds have been planted. The second generation of this Teaching Mission may stray here and there, but overall, they know what they are doing and can definitely reach people.

As of late we are finding about various stations in life that most mortals hold. Your training has shown you the struggles of mortal living – from being homeless to wealthy; from mental illness to spiritual wellness. You are committed to learning about the grip of addiction versus freedom from obsession; youthfulness versus old age; and, being able to relate to various cultures and sharing your culture and nature with others.

It is well understood that negative thoughts can come and go – there is no shame in that; it is completely human to do so as long as you remember Father. Look upon your old attitudes with humor and allow Father to show you love. To have love means not that brings eventual pain, or eventual loss, no – to have love in this life, as believers in the Urantia Book, is just the beginning.

Those that you've mentioned this evening that we have loved and lost over the years during our Teaching Mission, (Editor's note: We had talked about Rachel, Joshua, Bill Kelly, Roland, Jeremiah, Debbie, and Honoray.) yes, we will see again; they will know us, and I can say that never is love wasted. Love is an energy, and when you have it, people know it. And with this love energy you can change the attitude or the mind of the person you may happen to run in to.

Don't wait for the Correcting Time to start again; it has been going on for years. Each of you can receive your own transmission messages rather than wait for these group meetings. Your transmissions will look more like immediate assistance from God when you are attempting to minister to another. It is not mediumship. It is not mind-reading. It is simply connection to the cosmic mind. It is not out of the ordinary, but is the way it should be had the Lucifer rebellion not occurred.

You have been making great strides in the Teaching Mission and the Correcting Time. You are indeed like the apostles; and although no one will likely write a book about you, you struggle just as they did. You've worked hard; you were educated from your trials and challenges; you know humility; you know the rewards of faithful service; you know that God is the same today, tomorrow, and forever.

The apostles' greatest works were their small acts. Yes, they learned in the exchange of love between themselves and a fellow they were helping, that the eye-contact of the sincere look of gratitude was filling their chest with such love as to be over-flowing.

I am saying – you are Father's soldiers in today's world. You who have been busy with the Teaching Mission and furthering the Correcting Time, I pray that you are not waiting for something else, something spectacular on the horizon. What we have been engaged in, low these many years, is a most grand and fulfilling universe experience.

I am MICHAEL. My beloved children – life that fuels my inner being; the joy that makes my heart swell. Children, I am happy to be among you. I know that sometimes you think I have forgotten you or that I am busy with the world's issues. I can say to each one of you, face to face and with your hands in mine, I love you as if you are my only child. I am always concerned with your well-being and I am very pleased with your diligence in carrying on in this mortal life.

These days on Urantia are not easy. You can wonder from time to time: "How will mankind eventually save himself?" This is what I wanted to say to you today – when you are having these thoughts of overwhelming doom, remember that this is the thinking of the animal-mind in you. The higher-minded trusts that Father's plan is perfect.

This year, many have chosen escape – the economy has been difficult, addiction has been rampant and crime is high. Many are with the belief that something is better 'beyond' this world. You know yourself that where you leave off in this world is where you pick up on the next. Escape from this life is no escape. You are here to learn. Be sure to make the most of this life – the last time you will ever inhabit the flesh.

Nebadon looks upon you as having a great opportunity. I do trust your inner-instincts to carry on, to go forward and not worry about credit OR karma. My apostles did strive every day to take care of their families – to work, to grow crops, to build, to fish, and to make time for worship; believe me, this is the best part of human living.

Be an example that regular life with joy is something that is done, no need to just talk about it. Make time for fun – you deserve to enjoy these mortal lives. Please make time to do something you enjoy because really, even I don't even know how long you will be in these mortal bodies. Enjoy what you can. Learn what you can. Love all that you can. Relate with every living thing.

I love and appreciate your gathering for my Urantia date of birth. Know that I am only a thought away. Take the love I have given you and give it to others. Believe it or not, Urantia is getting better. The stages of Light and Life are not too far away. My love is ever abiding for you each. Carry on.

A Project For Disseminating the Urantia Book to the LDS Community
Abraham, Salt Lake City 09-20-2013

Back

[Andrea Barnes of the Urantia Fellowship Organization Outreach Committee, and Calvin McKee of the Woods Cross, Utah Teaching Mission group, had been strategizing to send out Urantia Books which would be donated by the Urantia Fellowship Foundation to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (Mormon) bishops and church leaders in the Utah area. This, on the heels of the Urantia Fellowship's International Conference (IC-2011) which was held at the University of Utah campus in 2011. Calvin, having grown up in Utah and of LDS descent, was asked by the Fellowship to spearhead a symposium at the 2011 Conference regarding a possible LDS (Mormon) and Urantia Book connection. That symposium was titled: "Is the Urantia Book the “greater things,” the “sealed portion of the plates,” as once promised to come noted in the pages of the Book of Mormon? Andrea, as the Fellowship’s Outreach Coordinator, rallied up some initial support from the Fellowship for up to fifty Urantia Books donated for this endeavor. Calvin suggested a conference with Abraham on the matter. Those present were: Andrea, Calvin, Lanya, and Ellanor as transmission receiver. (here is a link to Part II of the above-mentioned symposium)]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is a blessing to meet with you each. I am happy to see the Mission moving forward, always. I am touched by your enduring faithfulness to give others what you love. Can we start with questions?

CALVIN: I am certain you are aware of our project and intent to send out Urantia Books to as many of the LDS leadership in the Utah area as we are able, along with a letter or pamphlet explaining the intriguing similarities and possible fulfillment of their “greater record to come” historical expectations. Do you have any advice, direction, or change regarding this project?

ABRAHAM: One moment. I am understanding that there are many who are starving spiritually in this world. There are many individuals who feel separated from society and religion. I know for many that religion has let them down; and with that, they believe that God has also let them down. There is a new up-and-coming generation of young mortals who feel they are not accepted or fitting in anywhere. I am in understanding of your project and I would perhaps only give half of your attention to those people of that particular religion (LDS) – there are many people the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints does not make room for. Your project to this Church will be like a gambling bet – be prepared to lose what you have given. We see there are few who will follow through in reading the Urantia Book because they fear being disfellowshipped. It may be helpful, however, to send the letter ahead of time and allow this idea to sink in to the recipients. Include an address, and if they wish to follow up then, by all means, they are welcome.

CALVIN: What address, who's?

ABRAHAM: Whoever sends the letters. I am saying to send out the letter first without the books, and allow a little time to receive a response. If you simply give these books to members of the church they will, in fear, discard them. If you mail a letter to these individuals first and give them the opportunity to reach out for what you are giving them, the book would be better received by those who would take interest. As I said earlier, I would allow this religion half of your efforts; and, I am suggesting you reach out to others as well, with these gems of truth. There are many open-minded religions who would gladly accept and share such a book with their members – such as the many of whom belong to the gay and lesbian community. There are also those who sit in prison building their bitterness towards society when in fact they could be building their minds toward a new and better life. How well would the Urantia Book be received there? There are individuals in the mental health system who are simply left out of most religions. It would be wonderful if they could know that Father loves them – even with all their flaws. In this State alone, there are numerous of the Hispanic community that would welcome the Urantia Book, in Spanish of course, because they feel not fitting into the mold of Mormonism or Catholicism. For many truth-seekers out there, there is not a lot of opportunity to feel connected and loved 'as they are.' The people who stay in these religions are those who are served by them. Can you see, there are so many who have no place they can feel accepted and loved. I would say, when drafting the letter, speak to them your truth. Make it short. For the Mormon community, give them the opportunity to reach out and ask for the revelation. Send out the letters offering them what you have found to be their next gospel revelation. Give them the chance to contact you for a copy of the book. If some time goes by and you have no response, go ahead and send the book to where you feel led to do so. For the others (the other half of your efforts), you may donate the books. A long letter is not needed but perhaps a short note expressing that in these pages they will find their home. Is this helping?

CALVIN. Yes, very much. Would you prefer us draft the letter, or would you like to draft it?

ABRAHAM: I would like to recommend the high points of the talk you gave at University (IC-2011 Symposium). Keep it short and easy to understand, and make it known that you are a friend of the Church, not someone who is trying to correct them. The letters you send first will be enticing to some and you may send the books later. If only a few individuals receive the real message, then great changes can begin – it will be in small bites. Is this helping? (Calvin: Yes, very much so, thank you.)

ANDREA: Are there any particular religions that you feel important to send to?

ABRAHAM: I would suggest the Lutheran, Unitarian, and places that help the downtrodden. I do not recommend churches who are Bible-based only. There are many small churches that have open minds and would be interested in the Urantia Book. These places do not even have to be churches, it can be small organizations or movements. The knowledge of Light and Life spreads slowly but surely. For the most part, we are each ministering to individuals we meet daily. To contact large numbers of individuals may cause more blindness than if simply seeing the unfolding of truth – naturally, slowly and personally – through new eyes. Is there another question.

CALVIN: Andrea and I have felt there might be someone of the LDS hierarchy, the Quorum of Twelve, perhaps, who presently has an affinity to the Urantia Book. Do you concur? Is there any person in the LDS hierarchy you would recommend that might be open?

ABRAHAM: My recommendation would be to the females. There are many organizations where females would like to have more participation and projects. I would seek out women whether it's wives, sisters or daughters. That is all I have to say for that.

If there are no more questions then we will end our communication. I am grateful to be a part of your mortal endeavors. Do not hesitate to ask any of us for help. We are with faith in you each and your dedication to serving. Go in love and peace. Shalom. [Editor's note: There was no group transmission/meeting in 2014 – due to Ellanor's struggles and circumstances. The next transmission to the group was September 3rd, 2015 at the Parliament of World Religions which was held in Salt Lake City this year.]

2015 to 2021 MANSION WORLD TEACHINGS

A New Day in the Promulgation of the Urantia Book and the Teaching Mission

Abraham, Salt Lake City Group - "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission
09-03-2015

Back

[Editor's note: As a background: A request from Machiventa Melchizedek had been made in mid-Summer of 2010 for the Woods Cross Teachings/Transcripts to be a "stand-alone project;" and, a website developed for such to include all the Woods Cross Utah Teaching Mission transcripts since their beginning days of 1991. It was felt that such request, forwarded to Calvin through an anonymous source in Germany, was to be completed by August 2015 - which, for the most part, it was. It was the opinion of

Calvin and John Blackburn that the timing might have something to do with the upcoming 'Parliament of World Religions' Biennial Conference' which was scheduled to be held in Salt Lake City, Utah on October 15-19, 2015. We felt it a good idea to announce (launch) these Mansion Worlds Teachings (and the website) at the Parliament in various ways - including a full-page welcome invitation in the Parliaments' program, and two large billboard signs which greeted the Parliament attendees coming off of the 6th South freeway entrance in to the Salt Lake City which read: "Welcome To Change - Mansion World Teachings.org." Calvin and John spearheaded this project and sought Abraham's direction. John Blackburn, who was heavily involved in the Teaching Mission in the days and teachings of Ham at the Blackburn home in Woods Cross, Utah, is at the time of this meeting an executive with Disney Corp - and as such, has extensive qualifications and experience for those things discussed in this meeting - particularly, video and screen production. Present at this meeting: John B.; Calvin; Lanya; with Ellanor as transmission/receiver.]

I am ABRAHAM. The light of God surrounds us; The love of God enfolds us; The power of God protects us; The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

I am delighted to meet with you each again. I can feel a strength here that was not before. I am getting information on your project. [pause.] I am validating the seriousness of this undertaking. I am open to any questions.

oes the common man fit into today's world - if not fundamental religion, then where can he go to find direct contact with a loving being. [Editor's note: This picture is the finished product (roadside sign) from Abraham's suggestions.]

I am also believing that it is suggested to reach out more on a personal level as the religious conference begins. I find that this is our time to bring confirmation to what people genuinely feel inside and are not able to find that in today's religious sects. There have been in place now for many years, changes to bring this world's inhabitants closer to Light and Life. Mind you, we are still far from that, but mankind would do well to have some relief in knowing he is not below his fellows, or above - and that there is a place for every one of Father's children. Keep in mind, I am simply giving suggestions. I am in full understanding that you each are prepared in seeking information from those on high.

CALVIN: About the bullet links on the Welcome and Information page of the Mansion World Teachings website – is this too much? or not enough. As you know, I am notorious for giving too much information.

ABRAHAM: I see that it is fine. As time moves forward – if there are changes to be made you will be shown. I am finding that you did a lot of work that will prove to be of benefit to those that read it. As technology moves forward, continue to update the visual aspect to be pleasing to the eye. Many readers may be discouraged before they even start to indulge.

JOHN: I'm aware there are many methods we can use to advertise the website – various methods to make it more normal for folks. I have my ideas of how to present the Urantia Book and the Mansion World Teachings that would involve high-quality productions. Is this just something of my own thinking?

ABRAHAM: Not at all. I would actually recommend it. You know well yourself what is attractive to your fellows. And by 'your fellows,' I mean everyone who has experienced the worst and best that life has to offer. There has been a pressure building for quite some time that has tipped the scales of what would be seen as 'normal,' to what is becoming socially unacceptable. I mean to say – in our taking on society's problems and issues, we are providing a place to let individuals know how much they are loved and accepted. For example: Take society's issues of today – like homosexuality, money, addiction, politics, religion, mental illness, new science, etc.; let the people know through these productions that there are solutions from 'on high;' we no longer need to depend on the minds of men for the issues that face the world today. Does that help at all?

JOHN: Yes, thank you. I have one other question: How best can we make the Urantia Book teachings more accessible to more people. My thoughts on this feel right, yet I concede that maybe my own thinking is in the way. My training that has prepared me these past years suggests things such as a TV series, and I can conceive of various not-for-profit productions, etc. Is that spirit-guidance, or just my own thinking?

ABRAHAM: The beginning of the Teaching Mission is likened to the Master in wait for his hour to come. For some, this Teaching Mission campaign could not go fast enough. There was the desire for miracles – and as we know now, that is not going to happen. There was a hunger in the minds of men at the beginning of our Mission for 'new thinking.' There also were preconceived ideas of what the Teaching Mission was to look like; and it has not measured-up to many individuals' ideas. This is likened-to as we look back upon the hours the Master waited for His hour to come while his mother, Mary, looked over his shoulder and waited for the changes she wanted to occur. As far as the Urantia Book goes, we had initially kept it to be promulgated 'by word of mouth.' And from the time it began by the 'sleeping subject,' to the beginning phase of the Teaching Mission, 'by word of mouth' was acceptable; it reached a good foothold in the climb to search for understanding. It is now permitted from those on high to utilize larger means to present the text and the teachings, and to do so in a logical manner, and with honor and integrity. I believe you are one who can see this through. I would suggest that you keep watch on your expectations of your work. It would be easy to become discouraged in a short time, for this goal we are talking is long-term. This will require a lot of time and effort, yes, but is possible to achieve. I have instructions from those on high that we are not keeping the Urantia Book or the Teaching Mission under a glass anymore. I am of the understanding it is permissible to use larger methods of distribution. I trust in your ability to see if the doors will open, or close. As you have discussed, this project must be well done and accessible for everyone; not just those of high intellect or prestige, but likened to those in the days of Jesus when he would pass through the average everyday crowd. We can see this also in the timeline of today and what attracts people. Many today have lost hope in their churches, government, and media. Individuals are searching for common sense, love, purpose, and meaning. I think it would be wise to start small and gauge for yourself the doors that may open while keeping your expectations on the shelf. This short time in the Teaching Mission was simply an introduction to something greater. As a child would set out on his first day of school, he must learn what the rules are, and to follow them. He must know that he is responsible for a certain amount of work and is allowed a certain amount of play; and, on his way home from school – if he should tease a dog, he will likely be bitten. The Teaching Mission in its first few years had a great deal of unrealistic expectations by many, and mistakes had to be made before we could come to this point in time. There had to be allowed those who, on their own accord, delivered faulty instructions. Yes, there had to be allowed the misunderstandings, the grandiose and wishful thinking, for the reality to take root. Many, once going strong in the Mission, have been bitten and may not return – we expected that. If you could note the various elements that progressively make up the mortal mind, you would perhaps have the emotional, followed with the logical – and then, faith. I am meaning, we have, in a small spot in time, played out the emotional part of our larger purpose, and we are moving toward logic and science now. It is like mankind has all the information available to understand the equation; it's all there, the answer and realization is forthcoming, which results in increased faith. I believe, John, you have had a realization of what you were once walking toward, and now you may walk in a new direction and should not find fault with your past understanding. All is as it should be. In fact, we are grateful for your openness to receive. As well, are we grateful to Calvin for his un-ending desire to serve. And likewise for the girls in the room, Lanya and Ellanor, who believe they are bystanders; I say, they are indeed much more than that. To put it simply, the Teaching Mission is ramping up, and it is smart. It is becoming accessible to everyone. It is the change we have been waiting for. It is the opening to man's mind; the receiving of comfort that there is so much more to the mortal life than ever thought possible before. Is this helping?

JOHN: Very much so, thank you. One other question: Are we on the right track to further the Sonarington Corporation as it was originally intended in a non-profit manner wherein participants can contribute for various functions like an administrative forum for the Mansion World Teachings, and other service such as production projects? And, we would like to know if there is the need for translations to the various key languages of the world.

ABRAHAM: I am asking. One moment. [pause.] It is acceptable from our standpoint, yes. Machiventa finds it a progressive move in helping the good word to saturate and penetrate the masses. I understand this idea of Sonarington was the idea of Machiventa. Understand, we are not pressuring you at any time to go all in; we are suggesting the patience in allowing doors to open; and if not finding open doors, then allowing time to go by until they do. Believe me, this mission spans generations; and like you said, to start slow and small. You will see the momentum pick up for itself; there is plenty of help from our side to yours, to bring about fruition. Does this help?

JOHN: Yes, and thank you for your thorough answering of our questions.

ABRAHAM: I am overjoyed at our reunion. It fills my heart with feelings of reconciliation. Let us just say that this familiarity among us is like a warm coat on a cold day.

My connection is becoming weakened. As I retire for this evening, I am full in heart and mind with hope and love. We are at the start of another layer to the foundation which is the Teaching Mission. I would be happy to gather with you again in a few months to receive updates and help you in any way I can. Know that my love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

New Day in Self-Awareness, New Thought, Ideas, Solutions. Teach by Living a Balanced Spiritual Life

Abraham, Salt Lake City Group - "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission

02-28-2016

Back

2016 Teaching Mission Lessons - SLC UT Group

[Editor's note: This is our first meeting with Abraham as a newly formed 'Second Generation' Teaching Mission group which included some new participants. At this time in the United States there arose quite the chasm between political parties' candidates for US President (i.e. Hillary Clinton vs. Donald Trump)].

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. The light of God surrounds us; The love of God enfolds us; The power of God protects us; The presence of God watches over us. Wherever we are, He is.

I am grateful to be with you again. Your open minds and hearts draw me in and make my communication easy. I am in understanding that the time we have been apart has brought a lot of lessons in itself.

I am especially with gratitude that we have reached the deep thinkers here in this group and that you continue to carry on our message. For a long time, the readers of the text [Urantia Book] have been cautious in sharing their understanding of this grand revelation. I can say that there is no need for such caution; how you live your life is a message to others.

The Urantia Book is not a sacred text to be coveted, but a tool to be shared freely. There are so many groups of individuals that clamor for attention and claim 'their way is the correct way,' and without fully listening to one another the clamoring gets louder still. I speak of all groups - religious, political, cultural, social, etc.

It would seem that there is a great divide between mortals in today's world, it is as if everyone is gearing up and choosing sides. Many hold that belief that 'their side is the right side' and that 'if you are not with them, you are against them.' So many groups are yelling and no one can hear one another.

There is a tremendous static on the planet now and it is difficult to reach those who can't or won't listen. Our Correcting Time has been in a slow forward momentum, and now is the time that people are looking up from their closely-held beliefs to find deeper meanings and values. What was once treasured, is not bringing happiness. Many mortals, having not exercised their mind to infinite possibilities, are finding temporary rewards and are realizing they are not fulfilling.

I understand the mortal pattern of running mindlessly without sense of purpose. It is understandable that so many individuals would look for some sort of escape – relief from emotions or from their emptiness. It was especially difficult for me when I wore the flesh to create new thoughts, or having acceptance of living life with flexibility. We are seeing a great deal of this 'escape' thought-pattern in our so-loved mortals, and it squeezes our hearts – especially we who have lived a mortal life and are here to help you.

Yes, we are in understanding of the deep and abiding pain that resides in mortals of today. I wanted to reinforce in your mind, your thinking, that there is more help from my side than you would ever need; there are Teachers that wait for their mortal to look up from their closely-held beliefs and see the possibilities of new thoughts, ideas, and solutions. The Spirit of Truth does sweep the lands bringing light to the darkness where it can – and we understand that with the truths revealed, there will be static. The angels are at your very sides with calming thoughts and asking you to be mindful of the moment you are in.

Take a deep breath and relax. Know that the universe is not chaos. The Thought Adjusters are aware of the planets' thought-static and are more than capable of helping you to calm your mind, listen for guidance, and realize the love that is being poured out upon all who will accept it. The Father longs for every mortal to know that they are deeply cherished and watched over. Yes, that is simply the tip of the iceberg of the help I speak of.

I am sure you know individuals who seem to be able to cope well with the struggles of life, and you can know that they have a close relationship with Father. It is difficult to hear spiritual guidance when you cannot stop your worry or depression. It requires an effort on your part to simply be open; to feel loved, and trust that you are guided.

As well, we are hoping to reach the many mortals who, in their various groups, clamor for attention. I speak of those groups who harbor hate for other groups, cultures, polarizing political trends – that they might look up above the haze of perceived reality to some direction and clarity from those On High. There is contention among the races, yes, and that will be so for a long time, but what will you do as deep-thinkers of the Correcting Time to help these various situations in mortal living.

The time for the first phase of our Teaching Mission has ended, and we are on the brink of a new pattern; a new way to present possibilities to the world. No longer do we need to be vague about our beliefs, we are simply living them. The Urantia Book is not a secret, and need not be for you that believe in it. I do have faith in you each, that you live to the best of your understanding. You are lights in the static of mortal living.

Many individuals will need your ministry, and will need your words of encouragement; they will need you to not be shy or vague. The simple joy in life gets lost among the work of living, and we are with the hope that you each go forward to be a reminder to others – that Father has been generous. Allow those that you know or meet to be reminded that there is joy to be had; new possibilities to be envisioned; and always hope.

I am in understanding that we are to possibly meet monthly and discuss new thought patterns and solutions to difficulties – and, to strengthen one another in our journey. Are there questions?

BRIDGETTE (Ellanor's daughter.): I would like to get a family assessment.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I am with a deep love for your family and am in understanding of your concerns. I am recommending that you each unify and find the bond that once was. There was a time in each of your lives when one felt they could not exist without the other. It is a time to strengthen those bonds and know that you have been a family that has assisted many into an understanding of the light of truth. Having acceptance of what 'may or may not be' is perhaps secondary to the bond of the family that is 'right now.' Uphold one another. Bring the Father to the head of your table; give him your issues and have surrender. Have faith that any outcome that is left with Father is for the good. For you, Bridgette, you are a source of peace and comfort to your family members. Remember to fill up your spiritual reserves with prayer and meditation. We know that there is a memory which you all hold dear when you would sing and pray together. You each, with your little hands, would heal one another, laugh, fight and play. Nothing is too far gone to be saved. Fight for unity. Fight for love. Know that each family member will hold up their part of the fight. It is wise to unify at this time. Another question?

BILL: I was wondering what my role is in this new group.

ABRAHAM: I am in understanding that you bring various aspects to topics discussed. You seem to be able to understand things others cannot. You are also a gifted speaker and can explain topics in a way that helps others to understand. I believe you are in understanding of your role in this new season of the Teaching Mission. You are an example of faith – being the man that you are, a man of the world – to those seen and unseen. You bring understanding to those that hold firmly to science, yet so desperately wish for more. I believe you do quite well, my son. Is that helping? (Bill: Yes, Thank you.) Abraham: You are welcome. Is there another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, we have been discussing how to implement Melchizedek's 'Sonarington' direction (organization of such), and also the online 'Mansion World Teachings' website – its appeal and presentation. Do you want to give us direction on some further adjustments? or do you want us to do what the group voice feels best. Do you have any further advice on making it look more palatable? I've noticed quite a drop of people being led to the website since the changes we made in our last meeting with you a few months ago (September 2015), and I am wondering why that is. Anything you have to offer on this would be most helpful.

ABRAHAM: Yes, I like the website and believe that group input is always best. I would recommend for the Home Page to be simplified and have more of an ethereal feel. I do think that it would be beneficial to contact those still practicing in the Teaching Mission. Renew some of your connections there, and help to get the word out about this study group potential.

CALVIN: Do you mean 'about the study group proposal' that we have presented on the Mansion World Teachings website?

ABRAHAM: Yes. I find it a great benefit to review the lessons from time to time, as well as the Urantia Book. I believe you each practice the brotherhood of man. The website looks more scholarly and I believe it would be beneficial to add a spiritual feel - a little softer look; softer and simplified, yes.

LINDA S.: As I look at the previous transmissions over the years, I have had the feeling that it would be wise to take the transcripts from the transmission and unify the section of the message as one unit; and the questions, as a separate unit, rather than to follow after the body of the lesson that is given. Is this a good direction? or do you prefer the lessons presented as they are in their current state on the website.

ABRAHAM: I believe that those who are knowledgeable of the Teaching Mission lessons know that the lessons and the questions are together as in one meeting, but that those who are on the outside probably would not understand. I am in full faith that you, as a group, would be best to decide. I can see it both ways. And, I would find that whatever looks more like a puzzle fitting, will be the more palatable to the reader. Does this help. (Linda: Yes, thank you.) Abraham: Are there more questions?

TECTRA: I have a comment, Abraham. I just want to first say that sitting here, again, listening, has been very wonderful with feelings that reminds me of all the years of doing this; it's like the old familiar place again. The cadence and the introspection that comes through the rhythm that you speak is very comforting. My comment is: As you've spoken about our time on this planet, and the strife and the factions of people not getting along, and all kinds of contention that are happening - I am asking, what can we do? It's like people are out of control and coming after each other. And what helps me is, you know, I just live my life and I look for goodness and to do good. And that sustains me and brings a light and a meaning; it's like an energy to other people too. So I guess my comment and question is - is that the way? Just to live? Just to do the best we can? To raise 'light and life' in each moment that we walk through this path?

ABRAHAM: Beautifully said, my son. It has become as if there is more bad than good; and especially for non-believers, it is chaotic. But for you, Tectra, you are a power-source for those who are losing faith or hope. I do see your positivity helping all those around you. Your open non-judgmental approach of others helps them to relax, and helps in bringing out their best self. Well done, son, and beautifully said.

With that, I shall take my leave. Know that in this new season of the Teaching Mission we are with self-awareness – and yet, focusing on ‘teaching by living a balanced spiritual life.’ Know that in all things you do, we who are unseen – cheer for you, hope for you, and work for you. Go in peace and love. Shalom. [Next meeting – Sunday, April 3rd.]

MARY, LOVING OUR FELLOWS, TACT [DEEPER UNDERSTANDING AND ACCEPTANCE]

With the Practice of Acceptance We Can More Clearly See Reality And Make Our Decisions Therefrom

Abraham & Mary, Salt Lake City Group – "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission
04-03-2016

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. We are in tremendous gratitude this evening to see so many of our students here this evening. We thank you for offering your open hearts and minds. We thank you for your willingness to participate in this new phase of the Teaching Mission. I can see that this room is bright and bursting with light.

The beginning of our Teaching Mission was a lot about discovery of the inner workings of the universe and mortals’ relationship to Father; we had to wade through a great deal of curiosity to get down to the work of the Kingdom. With the re-encircuitment of the planet, we have discovered there is more chaos than previously anticipated. As you can imagine, the repaired circuits and the cosmic mind going forth to the ends of the Earth would cause mortals to question everything. Many took hold tightly to things they valued, beliefs they held; and some have discovered that much of what they held so dear was erroneous and encapsulating.

The Spirit of Truth has released awareness upon every individual who was looking for ‘something more;’ this gave individuals new freedom – and that new freedom was some of the reason for the world’s chaos. Money became either ‘worthless’ or ‘more valuable’ to mortals, depending on what mortals truly treasured. Many wanted to find out what was really meaningful, and the realization that money had nothing to do with it caused some static with individuals who were searching to simply be accepted and to be included.

Michael’s Spirit of Truth assisted the gay community to rise up as a people. He has also assisted the battered and abused, along with the mentally ill and addicted. I am saying, the light shown on these issues has created a great deal of static. This static will subside with the passing of time and the acceptance from the so-called ‘normal’ people.

With the world’s re-encircuitment and Michael’s Spirit of Truth bringing greater awareness, there is still more static to come – more upheaval, and more individuals screaming out for attention. With this, some cultures may be more tumultuous than others. It is difficult for people to simply have acceptance for all Father’s children. With the passing of time, there needs to be education and understanding. Those that are close to Spirit, understand that Father works quickly in each individual’s life.

I am MARY. I am overjoyed at being with you again in this setting. I am so happy to look upon your faces and feel such love and acceptance. This evening, Abraham speaks of the world's thought-static, the over-extended and expanded consciousness; he speaks of acceptance, and what that means for groups as well as individuals.

I had once met a beggar who sat in the market every day asking for valuables. He did not work for his gifts from others and in my hasty judgement, I thought him prone to the overmuch partaking of wine. I could not understand why this man, who was perfectly able-bodied and sharp in mind, had to beg for his earnings. In fact, the harder I worked, the angrier I was with that man; I thought him lazy and untrustworthy. I know that many people in the community also had resentment towards this beggar; and still, others had compassion and would donate to him.

I had asked the man one day while he was at his chosen begging profession why he could not get an honest job. He replied that he was an orphan at age twelve and had to fend for himself. He had been a thief and had been caught and imprisoned. Upon his release, he had turned over a new leaf and was ready to be a respectful citizen in the community. He had a small job herding sheep in the evening and into the night, and it was not enough money to get by. He found himself with a wife and baby to support. He was extremely tired during the day and chose to ask for goods as he rested.

I did indeed feel regretful for my judgment and resentment towards him. Again, I was taught that you don't really know how others are struggling and have not the knowledge to be their judge. The more I understood him, the more I accepted him; and, the more I could let go of my negative feelings. It was not my place to question this individual, but I am happy for the lesson I received out of this experience; it helped me in the future to be less judgmental and keep my mind more focused on my own life and the way I lived it.

Sometimes we are prone to believe what we want to, and can justify our emotions to fit. It is with this lesson-experience with the beggar that I learned of acceptance and had some relief from my negative thinking. I have met many individuals since, whose beliefs differ from mine, and I have acceptance that that is who they are; that is what they do. It does not mean I agree or disagree, but simply, accept.

There is unrest in the world because we are so busy trying to create a reality of safety and comfort. We might not see what is real, but what we want to be real. With the practice of acceptance, we can see reality more clearly and make our decisions therefrom.

I know many times Father has given me assignments that were not favorable, and I had resisted some or tried to go about the assignment in my own fashion rather than following the Father's directions. As you can guess, that did not go well! And those times when I had accepted the reality as it was, and trusted Father's wisdom, did I see a more suitable outcome.

I have such feeling of peace among you. Know that I am always available for you that desire to speak with me.

I am ABRAHAM. I do appreciate Mary's lesson on the importance of acceptance. I know that I, myself, have struggled with this. Time and experience have taught me that 'acceptance' brings peace. You don't have to be in agreement with somebody or something, some idea - but the acceptance of - 'it is what it is' - will help you to have less emotional discomfort, and possibly skip over negativity in favor of going right to Father for His direction.

This week, let us simply observe situations or surroundings, and ponder how acceptance is valuable. I am not to take questions this evening. Perhaps you can have some discussion before we meet next on the desire to have questions. I can't express how great my gratitude is to be among you again as family. Know that I am also available on a personal level should you need to talk. Go in peace. Shalom. Understanding From Where Imbalanced Emotions Stem. Balancing Wisdom With Emotion

Abraham & Emulan, Salt Lake City Group - "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission
05-01-2016

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am happy to view how you rely on the will of the Father and have not agenda. In the beginning phase of our Teaching Mission, it was natural for mortals to push their own agendas; or put another way, to drive forth their own wishful thinking. The Correcting Time was new and nobody knew what to expect.

It is pleasing to see you each simply allow this teaching to come forth. It is touching to be a part of your friendships, your soul-recognition of one another. Each one of us has had desires or wishes to fulfill, and many times we wonder: 'Where is Father! why does He see me struggle and offer not help?' Yes, many times we are pushing forth our agendas and yet the doors are slamming in our faces right and left. I say, that is an obvious clue that whatever we are chasing or pushing, is not to be.

It is understood now in today's world that our emotions can be an obstacle to peaceful living, and many times we have felt as though the universe was against us. I say, it is in the way that you cope with your emotions that will offer peaceful living.

I am EMULAN. What a pleasure to be among you this evening. I do understand Abraham's words on emotions. I had quite a bit of difficulty in coping with life's stresses. I allowed my anger to get the best of me. I allowed depression to break me. In the absence of my wife and daughter, I was in a shroud of despair and was living on the edge of madness. My emotions were like a boulder rolling down a mountain - unpredictable and frightening.

At my time spent in a psychological assistance program, I had learned that it is acceptable to feel my emotions, my disappointments, my rage, my grief; I learned to go about them like a boat on the ocean - there would be high tides of anger, yes, and if I could sit with that, rather than to allow frantic emotion, the anger would surely pass.

Many times I had to dissect a problem to understand where the imbalance of emotion was coming from. For example: regarding the driver who took the lives of my wife and child – he did not receive the punishment that I thought he should, and I felt that I wanted to kill him; I wanted him to suffer as I had suffered. In time, I learned to dissect this problem by believing this man was a child of God; and, the fact that this was his first indiscretion in the legal system.

I also came to understand that his children and spouse were depending on him to bring in income. I read his transcripts that revealed he was in a great deal of stress at his place of employment. He longed for some escape – and that happened to be through alcohol. Do you see, I could dissect this problem and see him more clearly with his human struggles. I could still feel the anger, yes, but I began to understand, and to ride the wave of anger to more peaceful waters.

You all know grief – and yes, it is indeed a burden. Grief is a rising tide that causes emotional distress. It is faith in our 'Father's hand in all things' that brings you to a wise mind – a mind that remembers there is a hope and promise of the next life. Father knows we will be beaten by our emotions at times, yes, but also that we will rise again.

This planet is fueled by emotion – whether it's the desire for power, or the burden of worry. I realize that those with faith can and do feel disappointed when life's trials and stresses cause those repeated outbursts from habit – and then, to feel the emotional aspects of pain when all along you expected to handle such issues with God's grace. I say, you are mortal, and it is okay to be emotional! It is even better though, to learn to handle your emotions with faith and with Father's assistance – that you may better cope with life's pressures and stresses.

The Master always said: "The more you know somebody the more you love them." That also includes you, yourself. Many go through this life and don't know who they truly are. Some even have a self-hatred. The more you can understand yourself, the more you can be watchful of what is actually happening in everyday issues. Today, myself, I still feel a slight rise in emotions from time to time, yes; but overall, I feel them changing my understanding, my perspective, all the time.

I am learning that the issues of this life don't have to mean simply one thing and to stay with that understanding and perspective. For example: in my life tragedy I had felt anger at this man who chose to drive impaired; and yet, I changed and came to feel sympathy for him. I learned I could sit with these feelings and know that they are ever changing me Godward.

Nothing in our emotions stays the same, especially if we are growing closer to the Spirit every day we are alive on the planet. I can feel despair over the death of a pet, for example; and I can also feel hope that the life-spirit will go back into the source of all life – the memory will live on and bring me happiness.

Humans are emotional creatures – and that is acceptable! It is in the way we cope with emotional distress that we can find peace or a clear resolution. It is always a good balance to combine wisdom with emotion. In wisdom, we are logical and confident. Balanced with our emotions, we are closer to spirit-mind. If we were all wisdom we would have not compassion or understanding for our fellows. If we are all about emotions we would be tangled up in drama. When you combine the two minds, we can achieve a balanced mind that is closer to the Father – and that brings peace.

I truly enjoy my time with you, dear ones. I shall give you back to Abraham.

I am ABRAHAM. I thank you, Emulan, for your helpful suggestions. I can understand the emotional mind, for in my days of power-seeking I did use my emotions to put fear into others to get my way, and to push my agenda. In the days I spent with my friend, Machiventa, I learned to reason, and to better communicate with individuals to seek a fair and peaceful solution.

My friends, I am grateful that you are willing to look at and consider these communications that are put before you. And with that, I am ready for questions.

CALVIN: Thank you, again, both of you, for another wonderful lesson. (Abraham: Absolutely. I am overjoyed at our meeting together.)

BARBARA (Shyanne): May I have a personal assessment, please? Also, what can I do for my son, Nick, who seems to be on an out-of-control course? I don't know what to do to help him.

ABRAHAM: I am in understanding, my daughter. I do know of the struggle you have. I believe you have invested so much into your son, and it doesn't seem to have any returns. I am understanding also that you put your life on the back-burner, so to speak, and have not taken care of yourself as much as you should. Your attention is focused on others and you feel a bit lost. I would recommend that you find time to care for yourself. It is like tending to a garden – sunshine, water and weeding, will bring a great harvest of peace and joy. I see that you would benefit from self-care. Even myself – in my existence in today's world, I find time to sit and relax in the forest where I can hear the birds; feel the sunshine; see the blue sky. I remember that I am Father's son and am well cared for. This is the feeding of my soul. As a mortal I would request my favorite meal; I knew that the joy from it would feed my soul. I also loved music and I would treat myself to that enjoyment, which also fed my soul. I still had problems, yes, but I was filled with an energy-source that would help me to handle my burdens. Yes, I cared for my 'self' – physically and mindally, and this allowed me to help others. If I neglected my 'self' then I neglected 'my spirit' – and there was not peace to be found. I know the love you have for your son. It is beautiful! and yet, it is also somewhat harmful. It would be good to remember more of who you are; you are the trunk of the tree, and your son is a branch. You have to maintain the trunk to help the branch. If you would like to be healthy and joyful and have harvest, you must care for the tree 'as a whole.' And if the branch has difficulties, perhaps you cannot save it; perhaps you have to accept it and allow the branch to find its own way to the sun. You can provide the nutrients and water to your trunk; you can even have affection for the branch – but you still must tend to the trunk and tree as a whole, and allow that branch to grow as it will. Does this help? (Barbara: Yes, thank you.)

CALVIN: I'm sure you are aware of Norman Lear's discussion with Oprah Winfrey which was aired today, and wherein he made mention of the Urantia Book as he and his wife's source of strength. Do you have a comment about this? And, is there a new spiritual influence on the world stage today?

ABRAHAM: I believe Mr. Lear's courage to mention the Urantia Book is admirable. He is at a point in his life where he is more or less finished with Hollywood and fears not repercussion from the industry. I do believe he wanted to bring out this information before his life here is finished, and he was indeed prompted to do so by the Teachers on our side. We are moving into this Second Phase with courage and knowledge. Everything that was hidden will be revealed. We are in appreciation of Mr. Lear's willingness to put this idea into the media mindset, which does enhance the cosmic mind, as well. Is this helpful? (Calvin: Yes, thank you.)

BRAD: I'd like to comment on your lesson on emotions. A friend of mine works with people in helping them practice a healthy way of expressing their emotions – which is helping people in these hard times. She's finding that the work she's doing these days is a lot about allowing people to have their emotions, and how to better express them. So many places in the world do not allow this, to allow people to feel their feelings.

ABRAHAM: Well said. I am in agreement that we are created with emotions. And of course, as we have evolved, some emotions perhaps have been twisted into destructive behaviors. We are not yet with the education and the science of how emotions rule in our lives, but I am pleased to hear that individuals are learning to feel safe in having their emotions; and also, being able to work through them with wisdom. Thank you, son. Are there any more questions?

BILL: How do we move forward in the teachings in our Thursday night group?

ABRAHAM: I understand that you are all doing quite well and we can see by the example of Mr. Norman Lear that the Urantia Book can be talked about in everyday life, such as over coffee, playing golf, etc. – it is going to be received as normal conversation. We can see from the many years of Earth's history that different religions were looked upon as 'false doctrine' or 'evil.' Mortal minds were closed-off to 'angels' – which later on, became popular. The same can be said with 'crystals' and 'metaphysics' – that all came out and is now looked upon as normal, it's just there. I believe that your Thursday night group helps the attendees to talk about the Urantia Book in their everyday lives; to be brave enough to share what they know in a humble manner, as did Mr. Lear. The revelation of these lessons (our teachings) will be slow in coming forth, yes, but firmly-rooted and will be successful.

I believe I am slipping. I am with such feeling of love for each of you. I am always interested in what your minds hold. I wish to express my loyalty and love to you each. Until next time, shalom.

Back

Our Connections of Close Proximity With One Another Keeps Us Connected to Father and Cosmic Mind

Abraham, Salt Lake City Group – "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission

06-05-2016

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is wonderful to be here with you gathered in fellowship and open-mindedness. At times I am so overflowing with joy that I must look to the Father and give him thanks. In this busy world, it is easy to be forgetful of Father's presence. We could be in despair over some life issue and not know He is right over our shoulder. Many times are the Father Fragments calling to you saying: "This way, child, I am here. It will be okay."

It is strange for us who lived in the flesh long ago to see how technology has taken over the world. In this day and age we are so distracted by beeping, buzzing, timelines, and can be swept away from the awareness of Father's presence. With technology, we can do many things at once. It has become a way of life, and the motto seems to be 'faster is better.'

It is easy to lose awareness or be unmindful of the beauty around you - of the good that is happening in your daily life. When attempting to turn your hearts and minds back to Father, it is not really necessary to stop to meditate ten minutes or more, but it would be beneficial just to stop, and in your mind, call His name; just stop your thoughts and take a moment to say: 'Father, my God, my Creator.' This exercise helps the circuits of the mind to be connected to Father and the cosmic mind.

=====

I am so grateful you have your fellowship with one another, it is indeed a positive in living. Staring at a screen tends to make one feel isolated; even though you can contact relatives around the globe, it is not the same as being in close proximity. You are life-giving positive energy to each other; you remind each other that the Spirit is near; that the world is mostly good.

I have concern for the younger generations who do not learn the art of fellowship and real socialization. Being in close proximity to a loved one or a like-minded soul does steer you toward the cosmic mind and a positive outlook. The closeness creates a connection of energy between you, the cosmic mind, and Father. Here on our side, we are able to communicate even without words; we are able to feel each other's thoughts and emotions; we are able to have a broader view if a friend is having trouble.

I am impressed with the technology of today, yes, and of course it is the way of evolution. But we must remember that the fuel of life comes from fellowship and keeping your eyes upon the Father, not technology.

It is always said that Christ Michael is the door. He has brought us our best ideas of who the Father is. He is an energy as well, and does indeed help if called upon. Michael is our Spirit of Truth and is raining down his light upon the darkest corners of the world. We are able to interact cosmically, yes, for I am able to talk to you; I am able to understand your concerns, and you are able to speak with those on our side and receive understanding, or to know where the door may open to further understanding.

I do know that the truth can be frightening and unpleasant, but I can say that those having good communication with Michael are able to see a more broadened view of many issues. Those that are willing to embrace the truth will certainly find Him. The Spirit of Truth does not simply turn on the light and leave us to ourselves, no! He breaks down His truth and brings understanding. This takes time on the part of the mortal. It takes time to have acceptance, to cope with emotional ways, and to be flexible to acclimating to a new reality.

You have more help than you know; and simply throughout the day, calling on the Spirit (whatever name you choose) keeps you connected to the cosmic mind. The Spirit does help in taking the issues of mortal life for what they are, and learning to grow up in the Spirit. You have each gained many skills over the years to handle life's problems – and that has helped you to mature. However, believe me when I say you are still very young in the spirit ways, and Father is close at hand.

Technology has its way with the world, yes, but so does the Spirit, and the Spirit is not subject to errors. I find that I love to be in nature and see the wonders of Father's creation. It is medicine for my soul. The rays of the sun, the wind, the grass under my feet, the smells of roses; I am at peace when I can go to the outdoors and heal my dings and dents of my soul.

It is easy to see that many individuals have had traumatic experiences and feel burdened, perhaps depressed. And to do the one thing that nurtures the soul can bring great energy and healing – spiritual, physical, and mental healing. Many love music and find that it transports them to a place of peace and mindfulness. Some choose creativity to focus on, which takes them away from a stubborn issue and clears the mind for more logical solutions. I know most of you have had great struggles and perhaps feel a bit beat up. Time spent doing what makes your soul happy, is a relief from burden and an insight to new ways of thinking.

Long ago in my village, I remember an elderly woman who I perceived as one who would act as if she had seen everything, knew everything; and yet I would find her always becoming surprised at various new things she could learn. She was inspirational to me. As I watched her practicing being observant, I could see how life opened up for her; she did not expect negative outcomes to every situation; she was more connected to Father and her fellows.

I believe I will stop there for questions, and I would like to begin with Nathaniel (Jordan McKee, Calvin's son – who is in the military and requested an assessment.)

My son, I am always in awe of you. Your courage and willingness are a source of inspiration. I am glad to see your enthusiasm for sharing the word of God. I am also happy to see your willingness to accept reality. I find that you do well and are experiencing those things that will help you share the word of God. You are a son, a brother, a father, an employee, a friend – and we hope you live fully in each role. You can read about the Master's young life when He had to experience what life was really about before He could go about teaching. He experienced death, betrayal, and unbelievable pressure. As He experienced life, he became more understanding of His fellow man and the mortal life. He learned to relate better with every kind of person – old, young, rich, poor – and I see that for you, my son. Experience is key for you right now. Live fully and stay open to new possibilities. You can relax in the knowledge that you have tremendous help from On High. Are there further questions?

TECTRA: Abraham, you talked about the 'technology in our world today' – and I am wondering about all worlds; obviously they progressed and created their own technology in a natural evolutionary way. My question: Is there something about the way our history, with our defaults and all, that is creating more hardship because of our transition into the technological way. Are we being hampered in some way because of our history?

ABRAHAM: Great question. You know what is like to go without food for a long time, to be hollow and obsessed with the thought of gaining food to fill the emptiness. This is like the world before the re-encircuitment, when Urantia was cut off from the universe due to the Lucifer rebellion. The worlds' inhabitants were hungry for connection, hungry for guidance; and the re-encircuitment of the planet was beginning to bring enlightenment. I don't believe that technology is hampering anything other than drawing individual's attentions away from the real things of life – for example, a married couple sitting at dinner, both looking at their phones. In some ways technology has made life easier, and in other ways, it has created a different kind of generation. It will be a positive if individuals can also learn to connect with the Spirit and learn about the cosmic mind – and know that in fellowship, they are connected. Is that answering, my son?

TECTRA: Yes, but I think I must ask a little bit more on this; it is really a relevant thing in this day and age. What I wanted to ask – because we haven't had our Planetary Prince since the 'rebellion;' and then the second default with Adam and Eve left us without our biological parents – I can see that on normal worlds they don't go through all this; they can see how technology is used, and therefore, can be more balanced using it. But on our planet, is it harder for us to integrate this technology and our spiritual thinking together, using it properly, because of our defaults? Do you see where I am coming from?

ABRAHAM: Yes, I like where you're going with this. (Tectra: Is that why it's harder for us to integrate here?)

ABRAHAM: I see the evolution out of the 'rebellion' as needing to be a natural/normal event; and I don't see that can happen by a disconnecting of mortals from evolution. I am made to think of the new generation and their lack of belief in the Father. For example, video gaming has somewhat hampered the mind of those who are obsessed with it in a way that they are not using the muscle of imagination, they are just bringing it to themselves. It is going to take a lot of thoughtfulness to be more creative, to be more imaginative. There will always be issues with the 'rebellion' where it concerns mortals; I am saying, with freewill thought and choosing in an agondonter world, individuals will interpret life as they see it. I find that, for the most part, the planet has moved forward with great progress as far as technology goes, especially with medical advancements. There will always be a race in the minds of men for better developments concerning technology. I appreciate this thought, Tectra. Well done. Is that answering?

TECTRA: I'll have to re-read what you've said and discuss with others.

ABRAHAM: If there are no more questions, I may be slipping. I just want to express my gratitude to each one of you. As I look into your eyes and see your smiles, I feel at home; I am with great love and affection for you each. Until next time, shalom. [Nina reported that Nathaniel's wife, Ashley - her spiritual name is Dara.]

Put Down Those Things We Are Tired of Carrying and Simply Be That Soul Who Is Connected With Father

Abraham & Mary, Salt Lake City Group - "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission
07-02-2016

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am indeed grateful to Father for His ongoing lessons in how to thrive in life. Can you imagine - if you let go of your path, your education, your flesh, bone and blood; you let go of your regrets and pain; let go of the mortal family; let go of country and planet - who are you? What is left? What is left is Father's child; and this is how He longs to communicate with you, just to be with you - His energy, and yours.

Over the years of growing up in this mortal life we tend to cling to certain things we think that protects us - it may be education; our employment; drugs and alcohol; our children. We are so padded with the outside world that it is difficult for us to focus on a spiritual life. Believe me, the outside world is important, yes, but it is not who you are.

Even one-hundred years ago, families stayed close and had their long-held family traditions; they had their family holidays wherein they assisted one another in the keeping of tradition. During this Correcting Time, we all have come to see that our families in the flesh are just fellow sojourners on a particular path.

Yes, during this phase of our Correcting Time we find more and more - that things we thought were true are now falling by the wayside; and that you are soldiers - so to speak - in a great work. Love is not reserved for just flesh and blood, families or friends, no! but is extending out to all living things. Tradition is becoming more and more by the wayside. If we are to forge ahead toward Light and Life, we must remember we are all Father's children, equally.

I am MARY. I am attracted to this particular lesson in that many of my days in the flesh were crime-filled, which brought me great guilt and regret. I was so relieved when in my morontial form, I was able to put that all down. Yes, I was able to put down the things that I was so tired of carrying. They say the mortal life is a day in eternity - and even now, I am happy to see what comes next. I am happy to continually lay down my regrets, my addictions, and appear on the next step of eternity as a child of God. I say, this - just the soul that I've become - is how God knows me; this is when I feel comfortable to be honest about who I really am.

Yes, it is somewhat humbling to lay all your mistakes out in front of God and know that He doesn't see them, but sees the real you. He doesn't see what you have regretted all your life, but He sees His child and wants to be connected. With Father's connection, we are able to see logic and let go of things that are not serving, not helping anyone.

I say, lay down those things that continue to punish you - Father doesn't want that!

We can take up our lessons and the things we have learned – and travel lightly, with joy. It is a new era. It is a new time to break down the barriers between you and the Father.

Yes, when I was a prostitute, I was so guilty and downtrodden that I believed Father wanted nothing to do with me – and I carried that burden around for many years. Even after I had quit such a life and had become of service to the sick and dying, still it took many times of listening to the Master saying: “God is spiritual and that does not require you to continually punish yourself by carrying around guilt and regrets.”

Deep down inside all of us, there is the Father Fragment protecting our budding souls. He longs to show us the wonders of the world and to discover new norms. Worlds bound for Light and Life are going to meet with turmoil, yes; and you, as soldiers, need to be protected with the Father's Spirit so that the work can be pushed forward through the fear, turmoil, and confusion. Today I walk with love. I see love; I feel love; I have love for myself – and that is quite a bit different than when I wore the flesh.

This week, Abraham and I would find it useful if you would meditate on stripping down to the soul and being at one with the Father; allow him to tell you which things in your life is important enough to pick up, and which to simply let go of.

Unfortunately, there are so many unbelievers among our youth, and it would do them well just to see you live by the Spirit. You need not show them books to read or tell them of those faulty traditions, no. Have not worry about the unbelievers, for they will slowly gain their footing climbing the mountain of truth in their way, in their time.

Thank you, Mary. I am Abraham. I appreciate Mary's visual of just you, a budding soul connecting with your Thought Adjuster. Allow the stress to drain from your body and know that you are loved and watched over. A short time for questions?

TECTRA: Yes, those are most beautiful words in that lesson, things to contemplate and grow ourselves from. My question to you, and I am certain there are many words in your lesson for Nina (Ellanor), but I ask if you have something more for her? Thank you and Mary for your words here today.

ABRAHAM: Thank you, Tectra. That was thoughtful, my son. I truly do appreciate it. The only thing I can tell you, my daughter, Ellanor, is that tradition, your personal pattern, is no more. You may tear off that baggage of depression and addiction, and that constant hope for your children. Be that budding soul that connects with the Thought Adjuster. Let Him show you where your journey should take you now. You need not have anyone with you, but have courage and confidence to make it on your own. You know I am always here to assist. I am standing by, don't forget. Go in peace and love, daughter, and be of service. Thank you. And thank you, again, Tectra, for your pure love and concern for your sister.

MIRIAM: Abraham, speaking of sisters – my sister in New Mexico and I are in a holding pattern with how we move forward. We have hit an impasse, and she and I are trying to find our way around it. I'm stuck in what I think I should do, instead of knowing what Father wants me to do. Can you help me out of this place?

ABRAHAM: Yes. This impasse does not serve anything, correct? (Miriam: Yes.) Abraham: Are there just emotional ties?

MIRIAM: It has to do with a decision that she made years ago that impacted my physical health. [inaudible.] I thought I had forgiven and let go of this, but she and I are kind of stuck right now. Ninety-eight percent of our life is awesome, but we have just not been able to get over this one issue/thing. (Abraham: Do you understand her side?)

MIRIAM: I think I do. What she did and why she did it, I totally get it - marrying someone that kept her in a wretched place for ten years and which tore our family apart. But even with your help, and Esmerelda's, and Ham's words to me through Rebecca - I just don't think I'm really letting go of the past. It's been about thirty years now, but I'm still in a hard place. [Editor's note: Rebecca - the transmission receiver for teacher Ham, is married to Miriam's uncle, and Esmerelda's brother - Hal Bynum, of Nashville, Tennessee.]

ABRAHAM: I could see you perhaps writing a letter of your feelings and just trying to get her to understand you. I feel that once you validate your feelings, you will feel lighter. I don't know, but maybe some things you'll never forget, you will never understand; yes, that happens. But I think if you could write down your side of it - what you see and what point you have come to - and tell her what you need from her. And, my words are the same to her as well - what does she need from you? (Miriam: I feel guilty to tell her. Also, I don't want to hurt her feelings, etc.)

ABRAHAM: I pray Father will allow time to safely allow you to air these grievances and see each other's point, and come to a place of forgiveness and love. God bless you, sister.

CONNIE: I have a question and I'll precede it with a statement: In traditional Christianity, the Holy Ghost is often referred to as one's 'conscience,' or "the still small voice" of spiritual guidance. The Holy Ghost is also referred to as the third member of the Holy Trinity. In Urantia Book terms we refer to the Original Trinity as - God the Father; The Eternal Son; and the Infinite Spirit. My question is: How do we explain to our fellow Christians the role of the Thought Adjuster and the Infinite Spirit when they have seemingly combined these two into what most of the Christian world calls the Holy Ghost?

ABRAHAM: That is a difficult question to adequately explain some clarity. My understanding lies in the thinking in which if a traditional Christian member would even want to know, without being afraid of 'change.' I would say that the 'Infinite Spirit' is like the Mother; and that which is from 'God the Father' is where the energy of all 'thought adjusting' and Thought Adjuster activity comes from. It is like Michael's function is as 'one' - Michael the Creator Son and, The Spirit of Truth. Yes, these are as one. The 'Infinite Spirit' is likewise 'one' in the creation and facilitating of that connection with Michael and Father - connecting each member to the cosmic mind, as well as the Thought Adjuster. The Thought Adjuster comes from the Father, and this energy (His energy) is handled by the Infinite Spirit. The Infinite Spirit is a conduction of sort, from Paradise, but we also see Her manifest on the local universe level as the feminine Organizer of sort, our Universe Mother. Does this make sense?

CONNIE: I don't know if that will satisfy the minds of people who have been steeped in the idea of the Holy Ghost in the traditional sense. I know some in Christianity would see the Infinite Spirit as a 'mother' aspect of Deity; but most, I'm afraid, will simply hold on to their long-held beliefs.

ABRAHAM: I would definitely keep it as simple as possible until they ask for more. It is like trying to explain midwayers or seraphim - it is just too much if they are not ready and not asking. You have to start very small and find some common ground. Likewise, unless they are truly interested in the Urantia Book they are not going to get it. As a suggestion, you can say: "This is what I have learned and this is how I believe. I believe there is a Fragment of Father that lives within us. There is also Christ Michael, our Universe Creator, who watches over the planet; He is also called the Spirit of Truth. But there is the Mother Spirit, who is the Connector, the 'source' of mind-endowment. She is the connector of mortals to the spirit realm." This is a difficult question, my daughter. Let me hear your updates. I feel like I am slipping. One more question.

CALVIN: Do you have any advice for us going forward with the Sonarington project as we have incorporated it? On one hand, I am in understanding that Machiventa (Melchizedek), in our earlier Teaching Mission days, was a part of this direction in initiating 'Sonarington' on Urantia; and a few of us have attempted to carry out his directions. But on the other hand, for some reason I just don't feel right about something, and I can't put a definite finger on it. This feeling has halted our plans at present. Is that just me dragging feet and being unduly apprehensive? or is there a good reason for me to be dragging feet? Do we forge ahead? or should we hold on for further direction from on high here, I guess is what I'm asking.

ABRAHAM: If the doors are not opening, I do not believe it is time to forge ahead. It would appear that many of the Correcting Time Teachers would likewise like to get a solid footing into your project right now - of disseminating their lessons, their transmissions. I say, it is not forbidden to bring forth a book to study from, for that is perfectly acceptable. The Sonarington ideal will appear when it's ready. Does this help? (Calvin: Yes, I believe so, with prayer and review of this lesson. Thank you.)

ABRAHAM: I appreciate each and every one of you. My heart is full. I am grateful to see you walk back out into the world with spiritual strength and assurance. Know that the world is better because of how you live your life. I love you. Go in peace. Shalom.

Back

To an Alcoholics Anonymous Group / The Effort To Keep the Flame Within, Alive
Abraham, Alcoholics Anonymous group - Salt Lake City, UT 08-05-2016

Back

[This meeting/transmission was an especially-called meeting with a few members of an Alcoholics Anonymous group gathered in Salt Lake City, Utah at the behest of Miriam.]

I am Abraham. Greetings. I can see a flame within each one of you. We can understand that sometimes this flame is burning bright, and at other times it is almost out. What I find so beautiful is the effort you each make to keep the flame alive. I am also deeply impressed by the Alcoholics Anonymous movement; it has served so many, and those who serve in it have assisted the many that were in the depths of the despair of mortal life.

I do understand the struggle of day-to-day living, and the world today is much different than my time in the flesh. The pressures of today sometimes do bury the Spirit. It is easy to get lost in what your eyes can see. It is easy to slip away from the Spirit. The fellowship within Alcoholics Anonymous has been an assistant to the spiritual realm.

I do as well, understand addiction. Mine was not so much to chemicals as it was to power. The need for it had a hold of my mind, and I could think of nothing else. There were some brutal experiences I had that made me lift my eyes to the heavens and ask for help. What my eyes could see told me a different message than what my spirit could see. The mortal awakenings that I had, made me aware, yes, but still I had to 'give up all' to receive that divine help I so needed.

Like your program, I had mentors that had helped me to find a different path than what I had struggled for. I projected my wishes onto others; I pushed my will onto others - and that fed my ego, yes, but I was never full. Until I embraced the silence, I could not find peace. My mentors led me to embrace my humility, to feel comfortable with surrendering. I learned new behaviors. I had new thoughts. I had a new direction. I had serenity.

As you well know, you can struggle and feel like you are cornered in the world, and that there are no options - and that leads us to wish for escape. And as you can well see in the world, many are indeed looking for an escape. It is with such gratitude that I give these words to your program - a program that has led so many to find the Father, to find the stillness, to listen to the voice within.

I know some of you that ask: 'Is this it? Is this all that life is about?' and then you find the next day you have again learned something new. I can validate to each of you that your experiences, good or bad, have been lessons learned; and I know each one of you carry wisdom you would not have had without these experiences.

Not always will we have serenity. Sometimes we feel others' carelessness - it creates a rage within us and it is up to us to handle the emotion. Instead of looking for a way out, or an escape-route, we are to carefully ride our emotions like surfing the waves on the ocean. We will have ups and downs, yes; and we will feel at times as though we are drowning. But holding on to our Higher Power, our God within, having communication with Him/Her, we rise to the surface where we can view the calm waters sparkling before us, breathe in the fresh air, and feel the sun on our skin.

I believe the Alcoholics Anonymous fellowship does assist those who participate in finding it easier to ride the waves, to find peace, to extract the meanings and values out of life's experience. I feel so blessed to see each one of you, and the flame you each carry within. [Personal Questions/Answers are omitted here.]

Push Forward on Life's Mission With Trust and Confidence of Father's Complete Assistance

Abraham & Mary, Salt Lake City Group - "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission
08-07-2016

Back

I am Abraham. Greetings. I feel a warm comforting atmosphere among you this evening. I am with over-flowing gratitude with your welcoming spirits.

It has been said, "Push on, for the road is long." As of late I have met with many individuals who struggle to get through each day with their heavy emotions and mindal interruptions - they become in somewhat of a survival mode. You can say that the majority of the planet is in that mode as well.

I am truly inspired by those who will push along the road no matter what is in their way. This is your eternal life, my friends! it has begun here. Some choose to hide and not really participate in living; they are more likely to lean towards surviving and miss the blessings of thriving.

This evening, I am to say - as participants in the Teaching Mission, the next phase is not an easy one. You that have had open hearts and minds and desire to follow the Father's will, may have a little more training to cope with the harder lessons of the mortal life. I am saying that your personal corrections will continue and that your ministry to others could perhaps seem a bit more difficult.

I am in understanding of your heart and emotions, and I know your burdens. But I can tell you that your striving, your dedication, your resiliency, will help you to go around the boulders on the path - to go through the waters of unknown dangers, to traverse the dark forest - all the while knowing Father goes before you.

I can say, every once in a while as you are pushing forward on the path, there will be a place to rest, a place to feel the green grass under your feet, to see the blue sky and clouds, and feel the sun upon your face - a rest, where there is peace and serenity, are yours. I would suggest you take advantage of these times. When the path is still smooth and you see the place to rest - then rest.

I say, our Father is not one for drama. He is not enjoying His children struggling as they traverse their eternal path, no! He is not asking for you to give up anything. Father does want for your happiness. He does want for balance as he prepares you for your mission within His Kingdom.

I am MARY. I am in gratitude to be with my brothers and sisters of the Kingdom of our beloved Lord. I am in understanding of Abraham's words. I did find times in the flesh where my life-lessons seemed to increase in difficulty. I had struggles keeping faith in Father, the mission, and myself. At times I felt completely alone.

I can remember a time when the Master had happened upon the market; and as He went through, He held the hands of many with perfect eye-contact and a welcoming smile. He had words of encouragement as He passed by. You could feel the atmosphere change as He met each and every individual. After His departure you could feel a definite change in the attitudes of the people.

My friends, this is your mission as well. In anything you do involving those individuals you meet, the road will be filled with some drama and events that would seemingly look like a waste of time. Remember the Master; in having His one-on-one contact with the Father, this helped Him to maintain his balanced emotions to every personality, every individual story He heard from His beloved friends and followers. He was not to be a part of 'emotionalism' – He was to maintain a secure contact with the Father and handle individuals throughout His daily life with balance, and always exuding peace.

Many of you will find these days of the Teaching Mission to be more 'in-depth' – and as Abraham said, sometimes more difficult. I hope that you receive it as further training, and as assistance to help you further your part in Father's mission.

I know that thoughts of the Master's lessons did indeed help with my attitude and adjustment of emotions. I had for a long time worked with a woman who was a bit older than I was. She did not always agree with my methods of work. She was prone to criticism of me, and often I was indeed caught up in ego and anger. Many times she and I fought with no resolution. It was not easy, for it took actual effort to allow her words to go with the wind.

I could receive the value out of this experience with this older sister by thoughts of the Master and how He navigated through the world. I had to step up to this woman and make eye contact, have a peaceful countenance, and tell her what I could hear her saying. I could help her to swing her emotion toward balance and calm. She could then see me as a human, a child of God, and a person that she could help. Instead of criticism she could help me to learn, and in turn I was also of help to her. We have been friends ever since.

The Master worked wonders with the people. He did what he could, yes, but He couldn't do everything. He couldn't help those with deep embedded egotism, for instance. However, He was for the most part with balanced emotion and calm – that this was the Father's issue and He was not to worry.

I am impressed with each one of you and your practice of staying close to Father – no matter what that is: meditation, stillness, music, working in your garden, attending a church, attending a group of good-hearted individuals that help feed your soul. I am with knowing that some deep emotions are paralyzing, and I can assure you that small efforts towards communication with Father reaps wonderful benefits.

I do enjoy this method of communication with you. You are also with this method when you speak to your fellows – this is automatic, in all actuality. You know when it is happening, I am quite sure. I know that many individuals who seek spirituality are beginning to understand that all have a message – all will give, and all will receive.

I realize that many individuals are off-balance on the emotional scale, and it is difficult to deal with them. I ask that you have visualization of the Master as he passed by in the market place with a beautiful smile, a loving handshake, eye-contact, and an open ear. He listened, and he gave inspiration that was directly from the Father. I say to you to do as well; you will do the same as the Master.

Know that I am with deep and abiding love for each one of you. I will take my leave. God's blessings.

I am Abraham, and am with such gratitude to Mary. What a wonderful spiritual assistant; she is a gift of friendship; I appreciate her outlook on living in this world of chaotic emotions.

You know that the Father will only give you what you can handle. I ask you to fear not of the increase of difficulty in your personal lessons and in your ministry to others. I believe that in doing this(to fear not), that in your trusting, you will find Father is a step in-front of you and goes before you. He is helping you to evolve and adjust with the world's ever-changing situations. He is hoping that you trust Him and move forward in confidence and love. Fear not. Know that each one of you are equipped to relay Father's messages to others.

I will conclude for I am slipping. Often I come by each one of you and look in your eyes, and I know your heart. I pray you know how the Heavens are assisting in knowing you, loving you, and helping you to push on. With that, I shall take my leave. Know that I am with un-ending love for you each. Go in peace. Shalom.

In our Discussions With One Another We Find Balance of Thought, Strength, Wisdom and Faith

Abraham & Christ Michael, Salt Lake City Group - "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission 08-21-2016

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is indeed a blessing to be with you this evening. We are amazed when we can view the world as it is today. We see many points of light across the globe of people who are thinking of Christ Michael. I am aware of the more in-depth lessons of daily living. It would seem that the spiritual life takes great effort. On the other hand, it is more about surrender and listening.

When we look back at Jesus' mother, Mary, receiving the visitation from Gabriel to announce that she will bear the child of promise, it was indeed a small message, simpleness. She did well with the information given to her. She did not have to uproot her life, change her plans, or do anything special. It was a simple message; and yes, there was some emotion, some stress; but overall, she did well with what she received.

When we look at Joseph receiving the message that they will parent this child of promise, we see he is leaning more towards skepticism than to wisdom - and his resolve was not overnight. He did indeed put some thought into this Gabriel message to his wife, and he did pray and asked for guidance. Joseph came to realize that he did believe in his wife, overall, and was then granted the dream of the heavenly messenger.

Joseph and Mary were regular people who had been asked to handle the tasks of raising this child of promise. Overall, they did not feel burdened, no, but that they were being handed a gift. And I can say that faith was not so much their strongest endeavor towards this responsibility – but their discussion with one another, was; and this was of great assistance bringing balance in thought.

Of course, Mary could be overly emotional, and Joseph could be skeptical – but it was in their fellowship with each other which helped them come to a point of wisdom and develop a strong faith. Father asks that you also do well in your fellowship with one another; it assists in balancing emotions and strengthening faith. The connection between you is life-energy and food for your soul.

I am, as well, life-energy reaching for you, sons and daughters. I am MICHAEL. I am so pleased to meet with you in this way. This is somewhat superfluous – but you know I am with you, heart to heart, and mind to mind.

It has been quite a busy journey for you, Teaching Mission workers. I see you each have excelled. Some have cooled down from their faith; and some struggle still, to accept how life really is. I would like each one of you to know how truly dear you are to me. I know your hearts and minds. I know you have seen me working on this planet that I love. I bring light to the dark. Things that are unknown will be known.

It is difficult as a mortal to accept new truth or painful truth, but I am dedicated to bringing the light so my children will see what they need to do. Know that these truths I bring also assists in your eternal education.

We are moving forward with universal laws. I am able to go before you in these lessons ahead, and open the doors to understanding. Know that I want to develop a more in-depth communication with you. I want to be that one you vent to. I would gladly hear your anger, your pain. I will be in each tear and have you know that I love you without question. There is nothing you can do or say to turn me away. I want to be that one who catches you when you fall. I ask you to have trust in me. Know that I will catch you.

Know that I am alive and well. You are not random children, no! you are my children. I thank you for gathering on my behalf and remembering this wonderful day that led me on a journey of understanding what it is to be mortal. Have trust. Go in faith. Above all, carry on.

Reconciliation | Exhaust Our Human Resources And Relinquish A Need To Control The Outcome

Abraham & Mary, Salt Lake City Group – "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission
09-07-2016

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is wonderful to see your faces here on this beautiful day. What is even more beautiful is the meeting behind the meeting – those you know and love on high who are standing with us, showing their support; sending us their energy and love. Greetings to all.

I very much appreciate the efforts each one of you make in your lives. You go forth with courage and do what needs to be done. I see a lot of spiritual growth here. I am glad some of the indecisive-thinking has gone by the wayside. Your solid foundation of faith strengthens you to put Father into everyday living and to act out what you believe. There is a balance to be had in this, yes, for many have the need to control every last detail whether it is important or not, causing much imbalance and instability.

I am MARY. What an awesome group we have here this afternoon. I am honored to be a part. I do understand where Abraham is going with this particular lesson.

I remember a time when I was tending to a sick child. He had an open wound which hurt him very much; seeing his pain also hurt me as well. I would disinfect and wrap the wound; and then as I moved to the next patient I would worry about the boy and I would hear his cry of pain. I would then go back and unwrap the wound and look at it - it was not changed from the previous time I checked it. Again I would rinse the wound and wrap it, and then try to move on to the next patient.

In thinking logically, I knew wounds need time to heal - and no matter how many times I tried to put my hand into helping the wound, it did not speed the process up. Nevertheless, I went back to the boy, time and time again, trying to help him, praying for him; I wanted his pain to go from him. It was at this time I felt impressed to leave the child alone. I reasoned that in my 'trying to help,' I could possibly be infecting the wound even more. I could hold him, or hold his hand, or tell him stories, yes, but I needed to keep my hands from the wound.

Through this experience I knew I had to exhaust my human resources and then trust that God would tend to the rest. When one has such burning desire or want, it is difficult to release control of it. You are to exhaust your human resources, yes, and then hand it over to Father. I can agree with you, this is a difficult thing to do.

I am reminded of the Master when he was coming to terms that his mortal life was ending. He cried. He lay face-down and perspired great drops. He prayed to Father that He would be able to fulfill His will (Father's). The Master had desired to go among the people and tell them about our wonderful Father who loves us unconditionally, and that they were not to fear anything - He wanted them to have that acceptance and assurance in their hearts.

Jesus did want His accusers to know He was no threat to authority. He simply wanted to let the people know they were not alone and that the kingdom of heaven was on Earth. As he lay there, He knew his time had come to an end. He knew He had to reconcile His heart and mind to the will of the Father in heaven. He cried. He perspired great drops, yes. He called for His apostles to stay awake with Him and pray. He persisted, and he reconciled with Father's will.

This is an important lesson to mortals - to find a way to get to reconciliation. Whether you cry, journal, pray, and find your way to come to terms with 'what is' - still, in exhausting your human resources you must relinquish your control over the outcome.

As a soul who has worn the flesh, I understand how important it is to set time for deep-thinking, meditation, and reconciliation. I believe that many are driven by emotions, or are with desires to have control over situations or people – perhaps even their own relationships. This 'need for control' is another mindal burden that blocks faith. And with that, I give you back to Abraham.

I am ABRAHAM. I do know a thing or two about the need to control. I could be fueled by my addiction to power, to have my hand in various situations trying to manipulate what I wanted to see happen. I could also be driven by fear; any kind of fear, really, even fear of loss – and would also have my hand in that situation trying to control the outcome.

Machiventataught me a lot about sitting with the Father; laying my problem before him and asking: "What is my part in this? Can I accept that and do no more?" He taught me the world was not on 'my' shoulders, and that I did not need to control so many things that were really, meaningless.

Machiventa and I would sit in the quiet and quietly present issues to the Father, ask for His will, and attempt to reconcile our minds to His will. I can say this brought a great deal of peace. I could see others around me were happier because they were more involved; they were happier because they had my trust, and they were happier because we relied upon the will of the Father.

What a terrific burden released from me to know that we are all pupils in the school of life. And the best thing we can do at those times when we have need to push our agenda is to sit quietly with the Father; let Him impress upon you His ideas for a best possible outcome. Yes, to reconcile your mind to the doing of the Father's will – I can guarantee, peace will follow.

We have not time for questions. I do want you each to take a moment and feel the various energies that are present here in this room with you today. [pause.] It is with gratitude, love, and fellowship that I take my leave. Until next time, shalom.

Remaining Flexible That We May Know All Sides Of Mortal Living As Well As Complete Mission Tasks

Abraham & Emulan, Salt Lake City Group – "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission
10-02-2016

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I feel so full to be with you here in this method of communication. I am honored to be a part of the conversation. I believe that my ideas are agreeable with yours. Overall, it is a wonderful day to gather in fellowship.

At times our mission seems slow, or even going backward. It would seem that we are made to go through the same lessons and experiences over and over again. I am happy to say that though some of the lessons are the same, yes, yet you yourself are different with each lessons' presentation wherein your perspective is enhanced to receive.

As mortals on this world, you are to gather as much experience as possible – it helps you to move forward in your eternal career; it also helps you to see all sides of issues from perspectives as do your fellows. For example, one who has wealth sees not the experience from a perspective of being poverty-stricken. Those that cannot understand addiction will likely have some time in their life where they will have experience with this.

As members of the Teaching Mission, our lessons have been accelerated and we will be learning all sides of experience. I do not say that you must be one thing to know another, no, but that there will be significant experience to gain an understanding of each life's challenges.

We all have our roles that we play in everyday living. One day we may be the caretaker and guardian, and then the next day we may be the one in need of care. With an understanding of our need for varied experience, we can learn to be more flexible; we can be aware that new instances are coming our way.

It is well known that mortals may become stuck in a certain routine, and I know for myself this is true. I do know that sometimes it would take a lot of experience for me to comprehend that Father had new lessons lined up for me. In this Mission, we are swimming a marathon. We cannot always predict the terrain of the whole sea in front of us, but we can trust that Father knows the waters just up ahead.

I am EMULAN. I am with joy to meet with you here like this. I know that when I look back over my time in the flesh, I see I had a great deal of personal struggle in my becoming used to new ideas or new experiences. I had a good deal of ego to contend with in my early years. I had believed God to be a crutch for the weak. I utilized my male status to dominate in my particular field of work and to intimidate my fellow co-workers so I could have my way and not appear as weak.

Upon the death of my loved ones, it was 'I' who had become 'the wounded;' it was 'I' who had become 'the weak.' I was unaccepting of this new experience and fought it internally and externally with all my strength. I had not come to a trust in a 'higher power' at that point, and my struggle was all the more tremendous. It was easy for me to blame others for my misery – for my downtrodden status in life.

It took a complete self-surrendering to hear the slightest call from Father trying to welcome me into the kingdom. As I grew closer to the Spirit, more understanding would unfold and coincide with my experience. This was very intriguing to me. I began to understand why I should know all these things of mortal living that I could not see before. I saw how I could both receive help, and also how I could best help others.

Yes, I became aware that my experience would add to the whole of the universe. I believe it was my greatest blessing to learn to become open-minded. I came to understand that I didn't yet have all the answers from any broad perspective, no! I did come to realize that I had a great deal of answers from my personal experience, yes, but not from every angle of this mortal life. As I was healing in mind and spirit, I became interested in assisting others in the field of psychiatry. I was fascinated by all the discoveries of the brain and mind.

My old experience had taught me to recognize roadblocks of the ego. For example, doctors have a certain perspective that others don't, and I was prepared on how to handle that issue for my own education; I was prepared to remain humble, helpful, and open to learn. As I grew older, I did learn the limitations of the physical body. I had a fear of aging and yet, I could see with the eyes of the spirit that this was a normal branch on the tree of experience.

The planet of origin is a school room. We are sometimes a student and sometimes a teacher; sometimes an administrator and sometimes the janitor. It is important to draw upon old experience, yes, to maintain flexibility and an open mind – and I understand that it is difficult, especially when we are feeling skilled in a particular area, to uproot and move to something unknown. It is Michael's hope that we look at these events of our life with excitement and anticipation – rather than reluctance, fear, or dread.

I can better understand your world, having gone through similar experiences. I do see there are many changes happening, yes, and many yet to come. The Teaching Mission can be a light in the unknown – and again, it can be a stumbling block to those who refuse Father's orchestrated lessons.

I am so happy to have learned along with you each, that we will yet see a great many changes, good and bad. Meanwhile, we must maintain our flexibility and be open to new roles we may play in life. We may become the 'caretaker' – and, we may become the 'cared for.' We may become the free or the bond; the rich or the poor. No matter what, Spirit is always there to help you with the transition. Your experience will help you in reining in the ego's desires. Your fellowship will aid you in your understanding of all experience. I give you back to Abraham.

I am ABRAHAM. I am grateful to Emulan for sharing his experience. I would express my gratitude for his suggestions. Remaining flexible is an important one so that you can know all sides of mortal living as well as complete your mission tasks. Everyone will give. Everyone will receive.

When some of life's lessons are not making sense and you feel you are spinning your wheels, then you are due for time with Spirit – with the Father, Mother, and Michael. When there is extreme confusion, then that is a sign to sit down and journal, to take a moment to speak with Father – ask Him, "What are these lessons trying to teach – where should my focus be at the moment." I can take a few questions.

CALVIN: Abraham, per our discussion prior to the lesson, I've been asked to give a talk at a Mind, Body and Spirit symposium in a couple of weeks here in Salt Lake City. They requested that I speak about the LDS (Mormon) teachings' similarities with the Urantia Book. It is my memory that in early 1992, either yourself or Ham did begin our regular Teaching Mission meeting that evening, at Thern's home in Woods Cross, with an "announcement" which made a huge impact on me. It was not part of that night's recorded lesson, but an announcement prior to the lesson; and from my hand-written notes: "Before we get started this evening we would like to make an announcement. Gabriel himself has made an appearance to the president of the LDS Church (Ezra Taft Benson) at the president's request regarding the validity and truth of the Urantia Book revelation. We are happy to report that Gabriel's message was well accepted by the President; but we are saddened to report this event was rejected by the body of the Quorum. This is the end of our announcement." My question is – did we receive that 'announcement' correctly? I am open to make any correction or disclaimer you wish. It may be an inclusion in my upcoming talk and I don't want to misspeak or misrepresent.

ABRAHAM: That is correct, yes; but be mindful, it is outdated. Presently there need not be too much focus on the beginning days of the Teaching Mission because so many bugs were being worked out at that time. It was then quite new to all of us. I do, however, look forward to you doing your presentation. I know this subject has been a passion of yours for many years, and your effort to express this passion can be contagious. If you were to perhaps preach of it however, then it would be a closing off – creating dis-interest. There are many parallels with the Mormon Teachings and the Urantia text, yes, and you would do well to talk about those things that interest you about the commonalities. As time moves forward, as slow as it may be, many religions will find that they too have similarities to the Urantia Book – which will become more well-known no matter how some individuals try to protect it, meaning the Urantia Book. I find it to be somewhat of an apprehensive time of history within the Urantia Book fellowship mainstream to speak your beliefs. However, I find this to be a good platform for you to work from, my son. Is this helping?

CALVIN: Yes, and I thank you for your help. (Abraham: You are welcome, Calvin.)

MIRIAM: My friend Emily has been struggling and has asked me to request an assessment from you in her behalf. [Question was not recorded.]

ABRAHAM: My daughter. I believe this lesson itself will be of great assistance to you. I do know how much effort you pour into those you love. Your work is very important. The mundane tasks that you do are important. You are a creator of peace. I do see, those that create obstacles for you is annoying for you, yes, but harmless. In the long-run, their input won't have much leverage. In the meantime, I would suggest you find time for something that is all yours; whether you are feeding the spirit, mind, or body – just make sure there is something for you to maintain a positive outlook. Overall, my daughter, I would say the sting of today won't be around forever; and these lessons we can receive from these trials are very important. Look for those underlying messages Father wants you to take from this experience. Are there more questions?

ANTHONY (Mike B.): Abraham, you mentioned some people trying to protect the Urantia Book, and I was already wondering about that with the recent publication of the new book, The Parables of Jesus, by Duane Faw. In the past, it was seen by the Urantia Foundation as a problem when someone printed Part Four about the Life and Teachings of Jesus separate from the first three Parts of the Urantia Book, which gives the bigger picture. I was wondering if you have a comment on this – whether or not it is appropriate for a separate book about Jesus' parables? Is this the right time?

ABRAHAM: This is the right time, yes. This is a time when the Urantia Book is going forward on its own momentum. It needs not many to promote it. It needs not man to protect it. Early on it was guarded-over until the completion was done – but once that had happened, there shouldn't have been as much focus on the book itself, but in its teachings. The book is in a well-established existence now, and it has been in rotation for many years. There should be no fear of various works that come from the book – this is how others will learn of its existence. Workbooks or pamphlets are not anything to worry about. I can say that the Urantia Book has a firm foothold now and will grow on its own momentum. Michael has not such worry of the words in print; they will be understood differently by individuals. Michael puts more focus on the living word – on the individual's abilities, and the impact of Thought Adjuster and child. Have not worry about the written word; the living word is before you. Does this help. (Anthony: Yes, it does). Abraham: Is there another question.

TECTRA: [Paraphrased.] Do you have any words of comfort or words for Nina for what she has upcoming this next Tuesday's court matters?

ABRAHAM: Understood. I am understanding how painful it has been for the entire family, and I would offer my help to anyone who requests it. I do sympathize for all of you, but I cannot comment on the laws of your land. I do know that one individual can cause a tremendous amount of pain within families. I am grateful however, that for the most part, the family promotes loyalty and love. For the most part, they do not tolerate lies, and they accept justice for what it is. Please advise family members that I am available for consultation. I also thank you, Tectra my son, for the offering to help and for being a friend – as all of you are. All of you have been through quite a bit together and know that your bond is a string that binds beyond the flesh. Have not worry, more balanced days are ahead.

CALVIN: Do you have any words for Bill here. He's been a new part of our group-family and has been undergoing some rigorous medical issues of late – of which the doctors are not quite assured of how to help.

ABRAHAM: I do understand how the battles of the past remain alive to this day in the veteran's minds. I know that you have certain worries with your health as in regard to everyday human living. I see you with great faith, and I know that the more 'internally secure' you feel, the better your body feels. I see you doing all you can to maintain good health. I would recommend that you not put as much faith in doctors as you would in our Father – who is also the father of all the doctors. Allow not humans to limit you. Know that it is your choice as well as your indwelling Father's, regarding your quality of life and what you will do with it. You will have good days and bad days, yes, as do many. But I say, your fellowship, study and prayer, are extremely important in maintaining a healthy body. I see not any extreme internal damage. I see you as having a good amount of influence over the body's system. I would say that you are with a great balance of science and spirituality – and in that lies a great deal of answers to healing. You know of others who are in your circumstance, and you each can be of benefit to one another. Have not worry, my son. You do quite well.

And with that, I am slipping. Know that I am always looking out for you, my little ones. I love each one of you endlessly. Until next time, shalom.

This Nation Today And Its Challenges Ahead To Bring Out The Best In One Another
Abraham & Mary, Salt Lake City Group - "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission
11-13-2016

Back

[This was our first lesson following the United States Presidential Election resulting in Republican candidate, Donald Trump's, narrow margin of victory over the Democratic candidate, Hillary Clinton. The nation, and so many throughout the world, were stunned, confused. Those who were elated with the win were near equal to those who were so expressively outraged. The two years of campaigning did very much bring about a great division. The media, and especially social media, helped to bring about a great chasm between families, friends, neighbors; it seemed everyone was expressing outrage, one against the other. The scripture: "And in that day, a man's foes shall be those of his own household," took on a whole new significance.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I would like to thank all of you for your fellowship and faith. I am in deep appreciation for you. I was prepared with a lesson of sorts; however, it is also my duty to remain flexible to the individuality of the group-needs as well.

A few months ago, I said our lessons would become a bit more difficult and in-depth; and I believe we are seeing some of those challenges coming forth. I know there are disappointments in the mortal life, and many times when we are not practicing the spiritual life the challenges are more painful.

I have been asked to say a few words about your nation. This nation is not the only one on the planet; there are so many instances and events that take precedence over politics. This present dilemma of the country could be viewed as citizens wanting the quick and easy fix for damage that has taken years.

With each new generation, you can see the various important events of that time period. This time-period is not really about who's in control, but is an awakening, overall. With the spiritual circuits open, there are people who are going to question the current rules. There is a place for an individual's voice, yes; and then again this, like many freedoms, can be abused.

The time now on the planet is like an electrical circuit with electricity running every which way, and people are not knowing the source from which the energy comes, or to the force it should power. So when we look at overall issues and events of the world, they are not wholly about politics, religion, or racism - there are deeper issues that are to be discovered.

The world is synchronizing its spiritual views. We can see the effects of the Correcting Time so far, and have always been aware of the bumps on the road; and for the most part, we are trained on how to handle the bumps. With such mass-awakening, there is static and confusion which may be played out as an upset in the very belief-system of individuals.

This is where our journey has taken us. Our lessons, our time together, has brought us to this very point where we will see how we will handle challenges. If we have committed to doing the Father's will, and we have had a great deal of training in doing so, then we have learned tolerance among us in this group. Yes, we have helped to open one another up to new ideas; and I say, for the most part have we brought out the best in each other.

This is your challenge - to go into everyday living and bring out the best in those you know. When you are with a spiritual energy, you have your well with which to dip your cup and be among neighbors, friends, and family - and show them the light within yourself. If you have not that light to give there is a natural tendency to stray farther from faith.

People (or countries), who can respect one another's differences, will be more likely to reach harmony and gain the lessons needed for a world to be settled in Light and Life. With the static of an agitated person, a group, a country, or a world - then is animalism more prevalent than a spiritual steady and growing mind.

I am MARY. Greetings. I am in agreement with Abraham on spiritual exercise and the ability to bring out the best in those you know. I would not compare the Master's time on Urantia to today's events, but I would comment on my experience.

In those days after the Master's death, many of us were simply in pain and not able to see a new way; there were not ears to hear nor eyes to see - only emotions. Even though we were well prepared with the pouring out of the Spirit of Truth, we were scattered after the Master's departure; there was a great deal of confusion and scattered thought for all of us. We definitely had to be patient and wait upon the word of the Spirit to keep our spiritual balance.

Evolutionary worlds are not expected to 'snap into step' with current problems, for time is mandatory to learn how to handle emotions. Yes, time is needed to handle pain of any kind. Where does the idea of 'a quick-fix' come from? One's limitations with time come from mortals' ease-seeking desires, and impatience for results.

It is well understood--yes, even now with Abraham and myself--that technology is huge on the planet, and many things are quite instant. This may be man's ways, but it's not Fathers.' Father expects individuals to take in the fullness of each lesson with an unlimited amount of time.

When believers are in touch with eternity, time is not a factor. With energy flowing in an unknown direction there is a great deal of fear for those who do not have some sort of daily spiritual exercise. It's easy for the eyes to see what is before you and to believe its reality - when in fact, it could be padded with all kinds of misbeliefs.

You were designed by Father to work in various ways; but if the spiritual muscles are not developed, then the earthly events will take its toll on you. When you are upset by the events of today, then there is some imbalance in your closeness with Father.

Take a moment every day to remember why you are committed to the Father. Take a moment every day to remember how much you are cherished by the One who sustains the universes. There is peace in pursuing faith; and, that Father is allowed to bring to you the full understanding of each lesson. I give you back to Abraham. Much love I leave with you.

ABRAHAM: Thank you, Mary. I am in appreciation of you sharing your experience with us. I am reminded of the impact it was for you at the garden of the tomb when you realized who you were talking with. I would pray for that feeling for all of our faith-seekers – to come to the living reality of our comforter's presence in these tumultuous times.

I am not permitted to take questions today. I would, however, suggest that you each have more communication with one another. There is a great deal to be found in kindred spirits. I know that a production in faith will reduce fear, and your fellowship will certainly assist.

I would also ask this month for you each to make a time often to sit in silence or in journaling; with Mary or myself, it matters not, for we are reinforcing our relationship with you each. We are each soldiers, so to speak, and the strength of the whole is important, as is the strength of the individual.

I am slipping. Know that I send you with my personal belief in each one of you. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Father's Lessons Have More Power Than Pain Does

Abraham & Mary, Salt Lake City Group – "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission 12-04-2016

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am filled with light and gratitude listening to you each participate. I believe this group to be a constant in the ever-changing world. I have so much appreciated spending quality time with you. I am in understanding of your struggles and your hope for a more balanced life. I have seen you each make effort to acknowledge Father and His works in your daily living. I have laughed with you, yes, and also, felt your tears.

My friends – if I can be this close to you each, how much closer is our Father! And, how much closer is our Brother/Father, Michael!

I am still learning with each of you, every day. I also receive lessons, as do you and your group. We have our meetings and updates. We set goals and work as a team. As you were saying earlier how you are all different, that is the same with my group – we have all come from various life experiences. We are rallying, so to speak, the spiritual forces to help bring your world closer to Light and Life.

In this last month, I have seen how pain can shape a person; be it mental, physical or emotional, it does have an effect on who you are. Doing daily spiritual exercises allows Father to shape an individual into truth, beauty, and goodness. Without spiritual practice, pain is allowed to shape personality wherein personality can become bitter or ugly.

We each have met people who are self-absorbed, standoffish, or self-protective. These are people who are shaped by their pain. With pain comes fear – fear of the future, fear of more pain; and their world darkens a little more every day. I say, this is why our ministry is so important – we are a voice out there to share with these suffering individuals that they would receive great assistance should they turn to the light.

There are many people every day who will randomly find strength in a tough emotional situation. We have seen individuals even be able to control their physical pain. I do like the fact that you each use logic in dissecting life's happenings, and make effort to find the meaning. Some of you may squirm momentarily in this effort – and yet in a flash, you see the hand of God; you feel Him fill you, and understand you, and comfort you. Much of our ministry is about self-correction, yes; and also is it ministering to others who are blinded by pain.

I am MARY. I feel so blessed to have spent time with you this past month, one on one. Whether you recognized my presence or not it is not important to me. What is important is that I have learned so much from you and your experience; I would have you know that it gives me hope for this world's people who are experiencing a great deal of static.

I do remember a man I used to see frequently when I wore the flesh. He was absorbed in anger and bitterness, and was abusive to me at times. It was obvious that his pain had shaped him into that individual who would lash out at others. His pain was his master; his pain drove him in various wrong directions. I felt compassion for this man even though he was so hardened. One day, I asked him about his spiritual beliefs – he replied that he had none. I spoke to this person about a man of hope, a bringer of light, one who is filled with love and not judgment – and of course, he scoffed at this message.

Every time I would see the embittered man, I would show an enlightened countenance; this, because I had been listening to our Lord. Having this peaceful way about me was eventually an attraction to the man and one day he wanted to know more, so I took him to a place where the Master was speaking.

As the man listened and observed Jesus, you could see the anger melting off of him. You could see his face change; you could see the weight lifted. The Master's words made sense to him; it was not religious rhetoric, no! but rather, was solid spiritual truth – a truth you can use in everyday life. The Master was with a suggestion on how to approach the Father, and this did help my friend a great deal in the days following; you could see that he was becoming a more happy person. The man still had anger issues, yes, but he did come to have acceptance for his life's path and desired to make a new path.

You are not destined to travel the same path repeatedly, and to handle issues with the same behavior, with the same negative outlook, no! In communicating with our indwelling Father, we are allowed to take that fork in the road and be with more balance, more peace.

Like Abraham, I was also happy to witness your conversations with one another this week. This is a wonderful fellowship. I have a great love for each one of you.

I am ABRAHAM. I am appreciating Mary for sharing her life's experience; she was definitely a woman of strength and a seeker of truth. How blessed were you, Mary, to be at the foot of the Master. I would take a few questions if you have any.

CALVIN: Thank you, Mary and Abraham, for those very enlightening words. You continue to amaze me of your love and help. Your lesson teaches on allowing our pains and hardships to teach us. I probably have not been a good student in that regard lately with this bout with cancer. Many times in your past lessons you've taught on the importance of total faith in Father and that with him all things are possible, even total healings. You have also taught us to exhaust our human resources and to seek medical assistance. I remember the healing you gave me four years ago; and then you told me I should seek a physician for a 'follow-up,' and I just didn't follow up because the pain and the bleeding immediately stopped. I realize now that I should have followed through. So here I am and now I am wondering if I should exercise faith in Father's healing hand, and bypass the upcoming bladder surgery? – or to simply submit to the doctor's surgical recommendations. I believe that you know my question well enough; I ask for your further words on this matter. [Editor's note per Calvin's cancer: Abraham had given Calvin a healing four years earlier, using the healing method we were taught in the lessons on healings in April of 1997. In the healing, Calvin was advised that the cancer had been stopped, but to seek a doctor to 'clean it out.' In the day's following this night's lesson, when the doctor's performed the surgery they found a bladder full of 'dead cancer,' and therefore cleaned it out (leaving the bladder in full tact) just as per Abraham's instructions four years earlier. As of the time of this edit, May of 2024, Calvin is still diagnosed as 'cancer-free.']

ABRAHAM: A lot of what you speak of is a matter of your personal choice. Do you want to continue on in this world? then you must follow through with all that you can do – exhaust your human resources. We all are individuals who experience accidents in time. These are our best lessons. These events that occur in our daily lives are a springboard to the eternal life. You know that the Master still had to fish and sell to the markets so he could provide a way for He and his beloved apostles. He was fully dedicated to experiencing the whole gamut of mortal living; He had made the decision to go 'all out.' He did have his moments of wanting to escape, to be free from pain, yes. You know that He would go apart for a while and commune with the Father and rebalance His thinking. If you want life, then sometimes you must fight for it. Father knows the desires of your heart and is working with you. He does not desert His children, ever! Even if you don't think of Him, He is still there. I would suggest that you do what you can to maintain your health. Does that help? (Calvin: Thank you. Yes.) Abraham: Are there any more questions?

CALVIN: I just want to say, again, thank you, Abraham and Mary, for these most wonderful lessons. You have made such an impact in my life and in our home. You have brought us great joy and are so appreciated.

ABRAHAM: You are so welcome, Calvin, as you are in ours, as well.

I should take my leave. Know that the Father's lessons have more power than pain does. Allow Him to shape you into truth, beauty, and goodness. Know that my love goes with you always. Until next time, shalom.

Too Much Emotion OR Too Much Logic Blocks That Sliver of Light Father Would Send Us
Abraham & Emulan, Salt Lake City Group - "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission
01-08-2017

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I thank you for meeting with us on this cold and snowy day. You can't see it while in the mortal existence but the adverse weather is beautiful for those of us who watch from on high. You that are used to cold conditions learn to acclimate to your environment; you prepare your automobiles; you wear warmer clothing; you put the weather condition into all your planning.

The weather is 'just the weather' - not good or bad. Likewise, many of life's instances are 'just instances' - not good or bad. Mortals do at times have such resistance to reality; so much so that they are in a 'flight or fight' mode; mostly fight. When adverse conditions occur and we have not acceptance, then there is a resistance to reality; the resistance can take such a toll on the mind. The mind is ever scheming to work around an adverse condition, or find some shortcut, or deny its reality altogether.

I am EMULAN. I am indeed appreciative of you, my friends, who have acceptance of reality and a knowingness that change is inevitable.

I can understand what Abraham speaks of, personally, because during my tragic years of loss I began to cling to denial. I could rationalize within my own mind of what I felt was right and what wasn't. I had resistance to reality and to a story I had told myself over and over again, to the point I did believe it. I believed the person responsible for my family's accident was evil, and I perpetuated hate, day in and day out. Hate was certainly resistant to any guidance from Father or love from the spirit that I could receive. Yes, hate was a resistant.

In not having acceptance for reality, I also blamed and hated myself. I felt I deserved bad things to occur in my life - a never-ending punishment to remind me of my failure. Non-acceptance of the truth had led to my self-punishment, and this was indeed a door slammed in the face of the Father. In all my resistance, I was exhausted. In all my scheming for a shortcut, I was preoccupied with non-realities, my belief-system was skewed, and I was very angry and bitterly disappointed.

Harsh emotions like this do not go away overnight. It took a great deal of prayer and reasoning to create a small opening where light could fit in, where Father could show me reality. And reality was that the death of my family was simply an accident of time - no one was evil, no one was to blame! Reality also was that I could have done nothing to save them from anything. Another reality was that I could do all I could as a father, a husband, a caretaker - I could prepare for various instances, but I could not know ahead of time these things were going to happen.

The small light began to make sense, and my resistance began to fade. I could see Father was making the best out of my situation - if I would let Him. If I resisted Him not, He could show me 'all is not lost,' and I could find a new path with which to put my energies on. I could leave the grief and mourning in the back of my mind - I did not need to keep an eye on it, it would always be there.

Father showed me I could set in motion new realities that would make a difference in my little corner of the world. Instead of resistance, I could think of acceptance. Instead of opinions, I could think in terms of reality.

My friends, what is the reality to your situations of today? Are you looking for a path of resistance? Are you looking for a shortcut with intent to perpetuate hate and disappointment? Or, are you doing that spiritual exercise each day that opens that little sliver which allows for the light to come in - that allows for Father to explain reality.

I do not mean to 'not question,' no! of course question everything. I am simply talking about those times when logical-thinking goes by the wayside and we tend to resist reality. We are a group of like-minded individuals; and yet, we have various spins on our beliefs. What is beautiful is that we have not concern enough to resist one another.

There are many religions that fear each other, and each exclaim the other must be 'from the devil.' It is a wonderful view from here among us that we have seen this path before! We have questioned it, yes, but we fear it not; there is no need to resist it or to accept it as our reality. It is certainly fine for others to declare their own path, for we have ours and we are not afraid of theirs. I give you back to Abraham.

ABRAHAM: Thank you, Emulan. I appreciate your definition of this mortal mindal static that won't seem to budge and is so difficult to allow that sliver of light, in. Your recommendation of daily spiritual practice that allows Father to help will aid us all in becoming more open to receiving divine assistance.

I would hope that in this month ahead, you will be able to recognize those parts of you that resist or rationalize occurrences in daily living. Where there is emotion, there is also logic to be had. It would seem that at this time in the world the scales are tipped toward emotions, and you must not be carried away. I say, too much emotion or too much logic, will decrease that little sliver of light that is able to come through.

I am indeed honored to be with you today. Know that Mary is here and also tells me to tell you of her availability should you need to speak. Myself as well, and Emulan - any time you should want to sit in the quiet and talk with any of us we shall be there. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Father Turns Feelings of Lost and Loneliness Into a Spiritual Confidence
Abraham & Mary, Salt Lake City Group - "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission
02-05-2017

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I could not ask for a more lovely group to spend this afternoon with. I am touched by your kind-heartedness and inspired by your wisdom. It would seem that these times on the planet are like the needed pressure to produce a diamond from the coal. I know this is what we have all been training for.

I know that our people of the Teaching Mission have their informal training – some of it by our meetings, but most of it by life's experience. Father does indeed know exactly what he is doing and is ever guiding Urantia toward Light and Life. As Correcting Time students, we are to learn self-correction first, yes, and then also assist our fellows through their self-correction; a few inspirational words can go a long way.

It is understood that in the mortal journey you can lose your way or lose sight of Father's plan and purpose – it is completely normal; it is also an opportunity to become stronger with Him and the heavenly associates. Faith takes practice; it sometimes requires great effort when you are seeing negativity before your eyes. You can think back to a time when you endured great pain without Father, without understanding His meanings and values; it was indeed a very lost and lonely time, certainly.

On other occasions we have had full faith during a life crisis; you had felt Father's presence and were strengthened and guided. You held a spiritual confidence – a knowing if you will, that Father is with you in all ways. I know from my own experience that life's challenges are not simply to be endured, but are lessons to learn from; tools to gain.

I am MARY. It is a beautiful day here today with you, my brothers and sisters. I thank you each for your continuing faith and support. I know there was a time in my life where I had not faith or a spiritual life, but more of an animal instinct. And I can tell you – when my stress was over the top I was fearful of everything, and anyone who would look at me could tell I was downtrodden. I believed I had to live by my own wits and take care of myself – that I had no one to rely on but myself. I could never feel at peace saying to myself: 'Don't worry, I will eat today,' no! It was always a struggle; and the struggles outweighed any moments of joy I experienced at that time.

As I grew in spirit and grew to know the Master, I became observant. I could think with the mind of a scientist wherein logic could outweigh emotion. In the years following Jesus' resurrection I could reason: "What was this Spirit of Truth the Master spoke of, and how can I also become empowered in my mortal life."

Lessons with the Master and the apostles generated faith among all of us. Every time we met, our faith was lifted up. Every time we heard the teachings, we were made stronger. And believe me, I did go out into my environment with a spiritual confidence. I knew my Father was there before I even stepped forward. I knew Father was to always go before me and be there as a light in the darkness.

Yes, my apprehensive faith was transforming into spiritual confidence. It became a 'knowing' instead of a 'hoping.' I was able to handle those who wanted to handle me. I was able to assert myself in a manner that made individuals think twice before accosting me. These people knew there was a change in my demeanor and attitude.

I had some who wanted what I had, and of course I freely shared; and, there were some who feared what was behind my new countenance. Either way, I was able to go through the crowds ministering to the sick, helping where I could, and literally forgetting about my own needs. Not on purpose mind you, but I knew I was well taken care of. I was enabled to go forth and do my work with confidence, knowing I am a daughter of God. My mind was fully capable of being at one with the cosmic mind and that I can do the Father's will.

This spiritual knowingness (or confidence) is not a shield against the accidents of time, no, but I can tell you it is certainly of great assistance. During the tears, Father does not condemn you for weakness. During the struggle, He does not ask you to be something other than human. He waits for you there, patiently, knowing that when you look up He can help guide you through.

So as Abraham just said, 'life's harsh occurrences are so much better with Father than in the darkness without Father,' I also say that it was during the most trying of times that we could see Father is at hand. For example, after the Master's crucifixion we all did lose our heads a bit. We all scattered and cried and worried, yes, but there was a pause, a moment of taking a deep breath and to just observe. My friends, that's all Father needs - a pause, one moment where your mind and heart is asking for guidance.

With a strong spiritual confidence, you are more likely to draw positivity to your life. Your mind is more likely to get into the habit of expecting good things instead of negative. Spiritual confidence is walking through this life knowing there is nothing that can take Father away; there is nothing that will leave you lost and alone. Yes, you all have had unique experiences in life, and that does make you a wide variety of ministers to the world around you. You can trust that Father opens the doors and gives you the strength to carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. Thank you, Mary. I always appreciate your point of view and personal touch in each of our lessons. You each know what helps you to feel connected; it is personal for each one of you.

It would be spiritually helpful to tap into that connection of strength once a day, or more. Do not let the negativity and the static around you bring you down. Take up your spiritual confidence and go forth with purpose and with strength. Know that our Mission is not to be side-tracked by the happenings in the world.

I am with more love for you than I can express. That is all. I shall express to you my gratitude and send you with my love. Until next time, shalom.

Pain Adds to Our Growth In Learning and Understanding Life's Lessons

Abraham & Mary, Salt Lake City Group - "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission
03-05-2017

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am grateful to meet with you like-minded citizens. I am in awe of your willingness to self-correct and also make effort to grow as a citizen in Father's kingdom. I do believe for the most part that Urantia is waking up to a sharpened awareness. Many of the Earth's people would otherwise not have such concern over events in the world today. I can see that your overall intentions are positive.

As mortals have evolved, we have found more ways to experience less pain whether it is physical, mental, or emotional. We have seen chemical addiction spiral out of control whether it is drugs, alcohol, or food. Somewhere along evolution we have found we are with less ability to cope with life's events. Newer generations have found that distraction keeps them from thinking about what bothers them.

Everyone should have hobbies, times of rest and enjoyment; and also, everyone should realize it is okay to experience pain. They say 'pain allows you to recognize the good.' With new technology, there is always something intended to make mortals be more comfortable – whether it's physical, mental, or emotional issues. With mental and physical problems, we are given prescriptions; with emotional problems, we are prone to seek a distraction. It has become unacceptable to experience pain.

As we all know, a life of ease-seeking is not a life of growth. We can see the wisdom of the older generation – they are less likely to act irrationally, whereas the youth tend to do something, anything, to break free from pain. It would do them a world of good to attain coping skills for life's uncertainties; and these coping skills come through challenges, even painful challenges.

If there is a problem in your mind that keeps nagging at you, it is obvious something needs to be done about it. You can distract yourself from the problem, yes, but you still have the problem. Rarely do individuals take a moment to spend time with Father, or even in the quiet, to envision the problem laid out before your eyes and to find solutions.

I am MARY. It is wonderful to be with you each again. Abraham's lesson today makes me think of a time when my friends and I were trying to organize the women's ministry; there was such confusion and we could not come up with methods to pay for medicine and services. There were a great many individuals who needed help – whether it was some food, or for someone to just listen.

You might not believe this but in all our excitement to push the Master's program forward, we all rattled off our opinions as quick-fix suggestions. Still, we had very little sound solutions to help with our problem, and of course, we argued with each other. It wasn't until we decided to sit in quiet and focus on Father, and listen for His solutions, that we would receive any lasting help.

This experience of which I was speaking was more of a group example, yes, but my part in it was more personal because I hastily believed my methods of fixing our problems were the best, and I fought the seeking of Father's advice – which had I done at first, I may have spent less time in anguish and worry.

This lesson was valuable to me because I learned to go ahead and face pain and discuss it with Father. Whether it was in prayer or in journaling, I had to learn to cope with the present issues of that time so I could cope with the more heart-wrenching issues that would come later.

Many people think they do not want to bother Father with the trivial. I say, Father does indeed want you to bother Him with any detail; He is happy with a close personal relationship with you. He does want you to disclose everything and to simply talk with him.

There have been many changes regarding 'faith' over the last century to where some have no faith at all. With the inventions of mankind, we have leaned towards a material way instead of the way of faith; and this is understood on worlds such as this, yes. Now is a time in evolution to find a balance between using your human resources and to have contact with Father - to embrace and utilize His resources. He is a good Parent and does not keep us from pain so much but does show us how to make sense out of it.

In every moment of mortal life, balance is always something to strive for. We have to be flexible and face our difficulties - yes, and yet, we need to involve Father to help us find meaning and value, growth, and solutions. I always found it helpful to write down the problem and then sit in the quiet - much like the method we use here at our Teaching Mission meetings where we clear the mind and wait for insight. I know that it does the mind well to rest; a calm distraction from our difficulties is good.

Wanting an avoidance of pain is completely understood, yes, but Father wants us to learn how to deal with issues, to strengthen us for the long career before us. This life isn't the only life we will experience pain and discomfort - we have a long universe career of education in front of us, and any tool you can pick up now will be helpful for our eternal career. I do know that when I worked out my personal issues with Father, I had cried and cussed, but that was not something Father couldn't handle.

Father loves you as you are! He wants you to always feel that someone is there for you. Eyes may not see him, nor ears hear, but the heart can feel. You know when Father has helped you to find answers - you feel peace and calm; you feel hope, and that all is not lost.

There are many things we would like to experience, yes, and pain isn't one of them, I know; but I say, pain is probably the most valuable of them all; it does keep us ever reaching Godward and teaches us with sympathetic understanding how best to help others as well. You all have your coping skills. May I be bold in suggesting you discuss among yourselves of your various coping skills and those methods you may use to handle stresses in everyday life. I love you, my friends.

ABRAHAM: Thank you, Mary. I find your suggestion to be a wise one. I do know that I have my own set of coping skills. And I do find that as I take my issues to Father, the sharper I become, for then do I find the meaning and value in the lesson; then I do find the blue sky through the dark clouds. I know that pain always promotes growth, yes, but I also know that many of you are quick learners and need not experience the full measure of pain in order to learn life's lessons.

I would like each of you to know that if you would like to hear from Mary or myself, please let us know. We also love the idea of being of assistance to you, for we have spent many years together and I feel completely blessed for it. Think about Mary's suggestion and we will be standing by. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

We Are Always In a State of Growth | Even In Our Spiritual Maturity We Have Setbacks
Abraham & Mary, Salt Lake City Group - "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission
04-02-2017

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I feel as though you have each given the lesson already. I am touched by your wisdom and ability to think above and below the surface. I am in such awe when I look over our history together and marvel at how we have spent these years with you in productive and personal communication.

When I see the overall experience of you and me, I am in deep gratitude for the branches we have grown. Each of you has these branches - they are connected to the Source, and you have been diligent in your effort to stay open and hungry for truth. I, also, try to figure out Father's overall plan and follow that path.

In each of our lives we have a ministry to give to others, and also to receive from them. Yes, we each have our part to play in the mortal experience. I look at this group and I see that your greatest strength has been the bond between you each. You are each unique and yet, are the same in the search for spirituality and purpose. The need to be useful is real. The need to be wanted is a root within the soul's growth. It is important to know you have a reason for wearing the mortal flesh.

I do see many individuals who feel as if 'life is living them,' they are not 'living life.' In your daily contact with a higher power, you are more likely to find out your purpose - or where you stand in Father's kingdom. So many today are seemingly lost and not likely to bring out their best self.

Yes, when one can feel at home, 'where they are' in life, then they are more likely to bring out their best self, their joy, and, their best abilities to participate in whatever life has to offer. You each do that with one another - you bring out your best selves, your true selves, in one another.

There is still a fine line between being an 'animal,' and being an 'intelligent soul' participating in history. I am saying, somewhere within there is always that animalism that can come out. And as you know, when painful events occur, an immature soul can still act out at any age. With the strong spiritual connection to Father and His universal spirit forces, we can draw closer to the 'intelligent soul' within, and thereby bring out our highest and best intentions and actions.

When I see you here you are each bringing your best, forward. I also see you during the week; I see your struggles and I know that the soul needs fuel to carry on. A connection with your fellows of like-mindedness, along with daily spiritual communication, can show that immature soul within how to transform into one who is educational-seeking.

I am MARY. I believe you each were my teachers today. I have hope and positivity looking forward at our future together.

I do realize that connections to your fellows are important for focus. You get fuel from one another here in this group, yes, but at times there are negative individuals that you work with, or live next door to, that is a ministry in itself. You don't want to be pulled down into negativity; rather, you want to help raise up your fellows who have a poor outlook. Again, it is through our seeking of 'Father's way' that we are most helpful.

You can see that a great deal of our learning is not only 'self-correction' but the ability to help your fellows look inward to a deeper source for truth and positivity. I do know I had some sisters who were seemingly not going to see anything good in life; they were more likely to gossip and bring drama. And in my youthful soul, I was prone to side with them – prone to bring forth my negative side.

I was so fortunate to have experienced lessons at the feet of the Master. I became more open to living a spiritual life, and in so doing I began to feel not alone in my situations. I began to feel a part of the whole, yes – and that sort of extinguished my negative side and opened up my abilities to bring forth positivity and inspiration to my sisters.

In return, these sisters were also there for me when I was in such pain or feeling distraught. I did find God in them, yes. I found comfort and hope that a better day was soon approaching. In that transition there was a moment of surrender, so to speak, when I allowed Father to shape my perspective.

These transforming lessons take a lifetime, they do not happen overnight. You can see that our experiences can shape us into becoming more animal-like – being protective, fearful and suspicious. Or, we can let Father and our beloved universe helpers shape us; and help us to fulfill our destiny, our spiritual path. Yes, I had allowed unfortunate events to shape me for quite a number of years. I did experience abuse – and of course I was defensive and untrusting. As I matured in spirit, I found some peaceful progress.

As we all know, troubles and challenges will always be a part of our experience, yes, but our pattern in attitudes and actions doesn't always have to be the same. I am saying, that we are always in a state of growth, and even in spiritual maturity we will find setbacks, yes. However, we have likely by then, attained tools to handle our issues with divine participation. My love goes with you.

I am ABRAHAM. Mary is a friend of mine, and at times when I feel disappointed, she is there to help me see a brighter side; and I am, as well, a spiritual helper to her. In the mortal life, most of our purpose will be with our brothers and sisters; most of our lessons will be with people that are in your everyday life.

I do enjoy seeing you each dissect the lesson and discuss it. I do speak about you to my friends. I don't mention any names, however. [laughter – the group felt he said that in total jest.] I have such appreciation for you each, and for your unique ways and abilities to participate in whatever life has to bring. Know that my love for you is never-ending. Go in peace. Until next time, shalom.

Turn To Our Divine Parents First | Before Yielding to Emotional Outbursts, Pain and Frustration

Abraham & Mary, Salt Lake City Group - "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission 05-07-2017

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I am uplifted by your enthusiasm today. I love this time of year on Urantia; the spring brings with it new growth and a cleansing of the heart and mind, so to speak. It is an opportune time to recommit your heart and mind to Father and His kingdom. It is also a great time to allow new growth in. No matter your Earthly years there is always room for new growth. Springtime always brings me to worship Father and His ways - that He has detailed every living thing.

I am feeling the need today to speak a little about adversity. I do believe that parents should teach their children early on about being flexible and acclimating to new conditions. It is difficult to adjust to change, and it is common to struggle against it or fight it. It is also common to attempt to 'control' adverse situations.

A few months back, we had our lesson on acceptance; and from that, we know that the sooner we can reconcile within ourselves that a situation or event is occurring and is out of our control, the sooner we can move forward with more meanings and values from the situation.

I do know about human emotions - that it is completely acceptable to cry, be angry, and at times to act out. But I have learned for myself - the first action you should be aware of, that is always positive, is to go directly to Father, Michael, or Mother, and ask for assistance; if this is your first thought after an adversity, the pain that could come about, and usually in an emotional direction, could switch over to a logical and more peaceful outcome.

I am MARY. It is a beautiful Spring day here on Urantia. The colors, the smells of fresh new life-beginnings, leads me to ponder how Father has seen to the well-being of every last organism.

I have known anxiety and adversity. I have learned in my years on Earth how to run from pain. My most painful situation was the crucifixion of the Master; my pain blinded me from all that He had taught me. I had spent many hours in learning strength from the Master and His associates - and still when I needed it, it was not available; my emotions took over my mind and I could not see any relief in sight.

I could not find anyone with any wisdom to help me with my pain. I could not find any control over the situation. I cried, I screamed, I struggled, I wore myself out. It was then that I remembered the Master had said: "I have come to Earth to teach men about the Father - that Father is within. I have poured my Spirit out among you all, that after I am gone, you can talk to me." Oh, and I did talk!

I could not understand how Father could let this happen! I could not understand that the Master only had a short time here to teach; and had people listened they would have found a new and better way. This was a moment of reconciliation – of acceptance and remembrance of the Master’s promises. In this surrender, I did begin to regain my wits about myself and lean toward logic. I was still grieving, yes; and yet I could think more clearly: “What can I do now? What is the next move? What is my next step?” And as I went to the tomb that early morning, I received such a wonderful gift.

I often wonder – had I not come to an acceptance of all that had transpired, and reconciled my mind to the fact that this was a reality now, would the Master have still appeared before me? Had I not remembered His promises and trusted in His words, would the Master still have appeared to me? I don’t believe so.

As we have learned from the text, (the Urantia Book) the apostles were all in hiding, fearful and in grief. The Master could have as easily appeared to them, yes, but they had not yet had their reconciling process. Therefore, I was tasked with giving them the message that the Master had risen – not in the form that we knew him, but His promise to rise again was honored. He was letting His believers know that He was here; and, that even after His morontia body would also be gone, that his Spirit would still be here and always available to assist.

I know as a human creature I was many times carried away with my emotions. After experiencing the Master’s death and resurrection, I had made it my first task to immediately make contact in prayer and stillness with Father, with Mother, or the Spirit of Truth – our beloved Michael. I do believe that in so doing I felt more calm and with clear-thinking – and, was able to receive logical solutions, comfort, and hope for the future.

There is rampant suicidal trends on the planet today – individuals are believing it is an escape from pain and life’s problems. Some believe that they can take a shortcut past this life, the life where you will learn the most, into a so-called heavenly environment. Many do not know that where you leave off here in this life you will pick it up again in the next. To think negatively of these individuals who would wish death upon themselves is very very sad. Believe me, Father does hurt for them.

This Correcting Time is a time of reaching out and allowing individuals in adverse conditions to know that there is hope, there is a better way. This life is an education, and the more flexible we can become, the better we can have that clarity of mind and communication with the Spirit.

I am so honored to be with you, my family. It is with great love that I take my leave.

ABRAHAM: Thank you, Mary. I do appreciate your words and sharing of your personal experience regarding Michael's mortal sojourn. I myself was not there so I have learned a great deal from your teachings. I do know that adversity does drive one to escape, yes, for I had experienced this myself in my mortal life. It is customary where I am now to go directly to the Father; it is a reflex of sorts, where you in the flesh have to make a conscious decision that when tragedy or discomfort hurts, to go directly to the Father.

We do know that even Christ himself had a time of reconciliation knowing His demise was sure to occur. He cried; He prayed, and it took time. These things take time, yes. He did reconcile himself to the fact that certain events were going to happen. In going to the Father first with every issue, does not mean an instant fix. It does not mean you won't cry or you won't get angry, no, because you will - that is common and not at all anything to be ashamed of.

In going to the Father first, you are connected spiritually and can lean a bit more toward logic than emotion. In having clarity of mind, you can accept what is occurring and reconcile yourself to the changes coming. It is an old and true saying that "He who seeks the Kingdom first and foremost, all other matters will be handled."

I am with gratitude that I know you each and that you teach me a great deal. I am hoping you will enjoy this time of new growth and rebirth. Know that I am with an unending amount of love for you each. Until next time, shalom.

What Is Good In My Life Right Now | What Is Going Well

Abraham, Salt Lake City Group - "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission
06-04-2017

Back

I am ABRAHAM. What an honor it is for me to be a part of your family. I give thanks to Father for this moment in time. We are gathered in love, unconditional love.

As of late I have been observing the many busy individuals of the world, and I have seen them wear themselves out to tears. And sometimes these tears are good, yes - it can be a moment of surrender, a moment of throwing your hands up and looking toward a higher power for answers.

I have been in nations where technological achievement is their ultimate goal. Individuals are judged upon the success of their life's work - and in this, I do not see very much joy. I have observed these individuals who will take care of the situation at hand and then immediately ask themselves 'what is the next thing to worry about.'

It is difficult in this era of busyness to take a moment and ask oneself:

- "What is going well in my life?"
- "What is going right, and what are the levels of my anxiety?"
- "When I ponder the negative versus the positive, does anxiety help?"

Mary and I are suggesting to take two or three moments out of your day to ask yourselves: "What is good in my life right now?" You will be surprised at the change in your everyday perspective and perception.

I lived a life long ago where I felt I must be on guard constantly to protect my life and 'what was mine.' This angst caused several ailments concerning my physical body; I was always pressed and ready to spring. I had begun to distrust those closest to me. In this condition I had lost any joy or opportunity to take a deep breath and say: 'All is well and I am protected.' Yes, in my negative and destructive thinking I took a lot of power away from God - or so I thought.

I am in unending gratitude to our Father for sending me my friend and mentor (MachiventaMelchizedek) who showed me my guarded way was somewhat humorous and animalistic. Up to this point I had lost out on the joy of my loved ones because my ego was not about to allow my enemies to take 'what was mine' (again, so I thought).

Machiventa showed me that nothing is mine, really! He showed me that Father can do a great deal more than I can as a man. My friend and teacher showed me to stop and allow myself a bit of time to breathe; to let go; to find trust. I had to find that trust in Father - that He was working with me, not always testing me, and not chastising me for my selfish ways.

Yes, Machiventagave me the gift of 'moments' - moments throughout the day to breathe deeply, to connect with Father, to find gratitude and to look for the humorous. Do you know how much joy that transition brought me? How that changed my life so completely, from darkness to light! It also changed others around me. I could see their fearfulness of me melt away. I could see them also take moments of gratitude and enjoy Father's gift of nature, music, and philosophy.

Machiventa taught me to draw meaning to my life; and in so doing I was not so much a man anymore who was questioning Father and His ways - always wondering when the next adversity would strike, no. He explained that in this less anxiety-filled way I am more connected to the Spirit. And when situations would arise, I could handle them with, first and foremost, a complete trust in Father; and second, the trust that Father is within me, working with me.

With Machiventa's influence I could feel Father's influence in my daily situations - and without so much worry of 'what was I to do!' Yes, I learned to live and to live fully, for I had developed an unconditional love. I still had all the natural experiences of any mortal, but living these experiences now became joy-filled, rather than with my old pattern of worry and anxiety.

Many times we do flee from those natural experiences that have to do with pain - mental, emotional, or physical; and my friends, this is something we must know as mortals, as agondonters, that pain is a necessary part of mortal living. Yes, we are learning, day-by-day, how to handle various situations with a trust in God; and a trust that God is within us - always assisting, always teaching, should we allow it.

Mary can't be with us today; she is assisting others. However, she does send her love and gratitude for your acceptance of her into your family. I challenge each one of you to take a few moments every day - be in that moment. Don't look for the next wrong thing to fix, but ask yourself: 'What is right in my life right now! What is going well!'

For me, right now in my life, I am so pleased with you, my longtime family and friends; and, I am pleased with the progress the Mission has taken. I am also with gratitude of the unseen individuals I know here, who are with me no matter what, good and bad. So yes, that is what's going right in my life.

I ask that you re-shape your mind with these moments of calm and connection to Father. Give yourself permission to have a time of relaxation. Let go of your muscles that keep you tense and bound. Be that child who looks to Father to bring meaning and value in all that is the mortal experience.

I know I have said this a million times that 'balance is our best bet for a life of wisdom and growth.' When you find yourself enveloped by work or other obligations, give yourself permission to take a moment to 'let go,' to feel the Father's presence. Experiment if you will - when adversity strikes, ask yourself: 'Can I completely trust Father?' 'Do I trust the Father-within, and can I give it over?' Know that His hands work through your hands. He speaks through your voice. He takes you where you need to be.

That is all, my friends, who are my good thing that is going on right now. My love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Providence | Father's Fingerprints | What Are My Gifts To Share
Abraham & Mary, Salt Lake City Group - "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission
07-02-2017

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I can't tell you how much I look forward to our monthly meeting. Your group is an example of how many groups are proceeding. I know there are many Teachers on our side that do look in on this group to receive training; I appreciate being a part of this.

In the last month I have found a good deal of individuals who are allowing fear to override common sense, and I thought it would be worthy of mention. When adversity takes place, some believe that it is a punishment from Father; and when good fortune happens, many believe it is a smile from God. This is very simple-thinking indeed, when Father is so much more than that! His intervention is intricate and well-planned out.

I am MARY. I also understand this Fatherly intervention to be perceived as either positive or negative. I do know that in my early days of rampant sin I had no belief in someone who loved me so much more than any human could. In those days I took it as though I had free license to do whatever I wanted, no matter who it affected.

I had hopes and dreams, yes, but as time went on and I matured a little, it seems that what I wanted was slipping further and further from me. Doors were closing to where I was not even able to feed myself at times.

At my lowest point I did look heavenward and said: "If you are, please show me - show me a new and better way." From there, I met my sisters who introduced me to the Master. Previous to meeting Jesus I had not known that all the closed doors and the blocks in my way were divine providence. I had not known that Father was calling me. I had no one to answer to, or any reason to become a better person until I was reborn with the Spirit of God.

Divine intervention can come in many forms, whether it seems like doors are continually closing or some may even be accidental – or so you would think. I always had the feeling that the maker of the heavens and Earth has more important things to do than to worry about one little sinful mortal – I should say even, iniquitous mortal.

Upon hearing the Master's teaching, I realized every single person is important and not ever is one lost; not ever is one thrown by the wayside and looked upon as hopeless. Do men who sit on death row in prison receive ministry from Father? Of course they do! Father does make attempt to intervene before a situation could possibly be worse.

I could have gone about my iniquitous ways embracing my selfish desires, yes! But this, for me, held no joy – no reward, no purpose. When I finally surrendered and began to see 'through Father's eyes,' I could see love, beauty, and goodness – and that made me happier than I had ever been. I'd see Father's children as so very important, yes, every one of them.

There is tremendous divisiveness in the world today. Each group believing they have the answers; many groups unrespectful of others. On the other hand, there are many who have acceptance for various groups. Father gave us one another to work together; and believe me, His intervention works as well with the masses as with the one.

Every single individual has a gift. A gift is something you love to do. A gift is something you are good at. A gift is something you love to give. If we are all willing to give and use our gifts to the best of our abilities, then are Father's works seen and far-felt, and we see His divine providence as fair.

Individuals may not agree on everything – but when a plan comes together and we see the fruition, there is no greater joy. I suppose I speak of teamwork – a teamwork by those not needing ego-recognition and are somewhat solidified as a family, even though there is no blood relation.

This month, Abraham and I are wanting to see your gifts freely given. If you don't know for sure what your gifts are – ponder that. Think about what you are good at: it could be a simple conversation with a stranger; it could be art that you share with the world; it could be reaching out to individuals who are seemingly forgotten.

We used to call Father's providence 'His fingerprints.' We could see His fingerprints in what we do, and that was a great comfort. He asks that we not thrash around and be so diligent, but more-so that we be peaceful and open. I know that you as deep thinkers do see things some others can't see, but for this next month we will concentrate on divine intervention and Father's fingerprints.

You know that my heart is overflowing for you each. I've gotten to know you individually, and I am in deep love and gratitude for you.

ABRAHAM: Thank you, Mary. I am in awe of your lesson today, and I will also heed your advice. Even where we are, in our mortal form, we also take in the lessons; we also look for Father's fingerprints; we also give our gifts freely. We are unafraid to remember those harsh lessons at Father's hand. Know that we are in deep love and respect for you each. My appreciation goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Life's Lessons Are Not a Test From Father, But Training To Propel Us Forward Abraham, Mary, and Michael, Salt Lake City Group - "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission 08-06-2017

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I thank you for your commitment to the Correcting Time and to the doing of Father's will. I do enjoy watching each of you bring out your best selves, especially in times of trial. It is an old-fashioned saying that 'God is testing us' - and to a point, it is true. Yet, it is more to the point of 'God is teaching us.' We all have differing levels of tolerance and what we can personally handle. It is when hard times are upon us that we are finding our levels of tolerance to be sharpened.

You know you can read about history in books and learn something, but when you can experience it for yourself your learning becomes more in-depth. Yes, what might appear to be testing from God is more of a training - in that He sharpens our skills to assist in His kingdom. Much like the apostles had their personal lessons to learn, they also were being trained for assisting the masses.

Many times throughout our lives we see our life-lessons have been accelerated. And when we are likely to use our best selves in any situation is when our lessons become more advanced. Father does like you to take your deepest fear and make it into something useful. That is a lot of growth when you can take what hurts you and hand it to Father with complete trust, and then relax on whatever outcome should come into play.

Many individuals choose not to believe in God because they are afraid of this so-called 'testing,' when in all actuality this testing is actually, 'training.' From the time you are granted the soul, which is the arrival of your indwelling Thought Adjuster, Father is ever calling you forward; and there are a great deal of lessons the individual has to learn. And when you are committed to assisting others, then you are taking on more lessons - lessons to learn how to help others to go inward for themselves.

I am MARY. Greetings to you, friends. I, also, have learned the difference between feeling 'tested' and feeling 'trained.' When my faith was beginning and my emotions were high, I looked at hard lessons as tests from God. I was either to 'pass' or to 'fail' these tests. Many of us thought that the Master's decision, 'to lay down his life,' was the greatest and last test from God for us all.

As we experienced the Master's resurrection and held close to the promise of his words, we were beginning to understand that there is a certain amount of time needed for human processing. As humans, we are not just to take what is handed to us without question, without emotion, or even without fear and concern, no, for these are part of the mortal experience.

I know that even after years of ministry I still had a great deal of fear - fear for my personal well-being as well as my spiritual. I could have been overtaken at times with doubt and depression, but I knew that if I were to entertain freely those doubts, that I would inevitably make things worse. I also knew that if I were to give those fears to Father, and feel a little more at peace in daily living, that I could cope and also continue learning.

I do know that some of my acquaintances were more likely to be negative than positive, and that did have an effect on me, yes – especially if I was to keep my opinions to myself. But if I could logically explain where I was coming from, then I was more likely to feel skilled and at ease. The feeling of peace helped me to trust in Father, as well as my own abilities to weather any storm.

Sometimes in mortal living we get to the point of emotional exhaustion and are not able to trust in ourselves and our abilities, and more likely to doubt Father. We may doubt Father's affection for us or even His very existence – and then a whole new set of problems would eventually surface. I do know that in the Masters last hours He cried, He prayed, He took time to reconcile his mind to the reality of his last few days on this mortal world. He was more than willing to walk through what he knew was the Father's will.

As agondonters, you might feel Father's will more 'intuitively' than 'literally,' and that is the beauty of your life – it is choice and freewill.

I am MICHAEL, your Brother/Father. It is with great joy I am seeing you in this method of communication. I know firsthand how hard it is at times to keep faith and find where you belong in this life. I know that each one of you has experienced a broken heart and thought it would never stop being painful. However, I know that you have also reached out to Father for assistance, and even acceptance of His will – and for that, I am over-filled with love and joy.

I would remind you how close Father is to you, and how good life can be; how you may find appreciation in the smallest of things. Father does know when you are overwhelmed or at your wit's end, and He is always there in your moments of silence to bring you clarity and training. He is a Father of love as well, and wants you to know how deeply loved you are. You're not a soldier in an army or a number in the heavens, you are a son or daughter as if you were the only son or daughter.

I can tell you right now that Father does not 'test' His children to see how much they will or can endure; He is beyond what the mortal mind would think. The mortal mind would think, 'this much pain in life could only be a test from God' – and I say, no! that is not reality. I do know that it is more important than ever for me to bring out truth in all matters so that you are fully prepared to do what you have to. Just know that some of the events of today that seem overwhelming are really, not. I can say that the waves of time bring with it the calm waters of clarity.

I do want you each to know I am as close to you as your own thoughts. Every day is not to be a habit but a new chance to experience different things. I am so honored in working with you and cannot wait until the time when our eyes meet. My love is always with you. Carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. Thank you, Brother/Father, Michael. We are always filled with the energy of your encouragement to do our best; to be our best. We are with gratitude to you and Mother, always.

So, our lesson before us is to not look upon life's hard lessons as a 'test from Father,' but as training that will propel us forward, spiritually. With that, I shall take my leave. Know that my love goes with you, as does Mary's. Until next time, go in peace. Shalom.

A Group Healing. Using Self-Mastery To Help Dispel The Blanket of Hatred and Negativity

Abraham & Mary, Salt Lake City Group - "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission
11-24-2018

Back

[Given the heated and polarizing political environment in the United States in the 2nd decade of the 21st century, by mid-2017 there arose quite a division among families, friends, neighbors, and work-associates nationwide in the US. This rancorous enmity was not excluding the members in the Woods Cross, Utah family of the Teaching Mission. In heated discussions, particularly in August 2017, lines of discord were crossed with certain members of our Utah TMgroup. As a result, Abraham summoned several who were the more severely affected, to this November 24, 2018 meeting. Most of that discord was concerning the political environment in the U.S., but it also exposed other pent-up issues and emotions. This meeting did effect a tremendous healing. Present were: Dorenda (Elaina) of Albuquerque, New Mexico; and Miriam, Ellen, Ellanor, Lanya, and Calvin - all of Salt Lake City.]

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you my brothers and sisters. It has been some time since we have gathered. It is such an honor to be with you here.

I have monitored your experience and progression for some time now. Some of you have experienced overwhelming heartache; some have health issues that has made them question their mortality; some have financial woes; some are steeped in worry and concern over the current state of politics.

Over the past few years your experience may have felt as though you were defeated by emotions and hopelessness. On the other hand, many of you have experienced holding the hand of God, and felt led. There is no better education than time and experience.

Today I would say a few words on self-mastery and how your actions can create positivity, or negativity. Most high emotions come from fear of the unknown and lack of trust in the heavenly caretakers. Many circumstances are worsened because one acts out of emotional pain instead of waiting for logical solutions from the Spirit.

The United States is a good example of the static of the emotional mind who is not looking toward a higher power for peace, stability and solutions - but rather, caught in competition and choosing sides. I have personally never seen more passion in the world than I have in these last few years.

It is touching to see individuals act on their passions. However, lines have been crossed and there is a blanket of hatred across this nation. This is why we are reaching out now to you, Mission participants; you have the skills to transform this hatred into logic. You are able guides who can reach to the inner core of another, and assist to change their thought direction.

I am MARY. My greetings to you. I am filled with joy to meet with you in this setting. I have some experience in the subject Abraham speaks of. I know for some time, in those days before I joined Jesus' ministry, I was so suspicious of this man who was causing such a stir in society. I wondered what his gain was and why He spoke to the masses as He did. Many of my friends thought him a 'wolf in sheep's clothing.' They would speculate about his purpose and say He worked for the evil one. I started to participate in these discussions and felt the poisons in my emotions rise up.

One day I happened upon the Master speaking, and I listened. His words redirected my emotional pattern – it touched my heart, and I knew it was real. Thereafter, when I had experiences with my friends and when they would begin speaking their path of poisonous mindset, I would immediately turn inward to what I held true – what I just heard from the Master, what I just learned. I would say casually: "I wonder if we listened to Jesus' sermons would we gain any knowledge that we had not before?" Their faces would go blank and their mind-path would re-set. Instead of projecting further hate on the subject, they would manifest an opening in the heart and mind, and welcome other possibilities.

Where there is hate there is nowhere to go – you are stuck, and it fuels further hate. Our Teaching Mission participants are able to introduce possibilities that may crack a stubborn individual's mind open, wherein hate may dissipate from inside. Such a stuck individual may feel the robe of negativity being shed, and the mind-flow may once again start toward new perspectives.

My sisters and I had learned to create an upliftment in our associates and friends, and regenerate new energy, new ideas; our ears were open. One lesson the Master taught us was that He was reliant upon the word of Father, and that we also had this method of communication with Father. If Jesus trusted in a higher power, why would not his students also! The Master worried not about outcomes; He worried about concentrating on the present moment where He could converse with the Father. The Master set a wonderful example for us to follow.

I do understand that in today's mortal living, circumstances are full-pace and so many things are being thrown at you. That is why it is still so very important to take a few minutes each day and think nothing, be still, to open yourself to further instructions-or, simple peace.

I do want to mention that sometimes mortals can be caught up in their past, and that creates a negative emotional state wherein it's hard to break out of; you feel you must atone every day as if to right past wrongs. I say, if you are in the mode of atonement, your despair 'walls-up' any possibilities of receiving new thoughts or guidance from the heavenly caretakers.

Again, I love you each. I do visit you from time to time. Thank you for having me.

I am ABRAHAM. I so much appreciate my friend, Mary. When I am overwhelmed with a negativity of some situation, she is there to dispel my negative outlook and remind me that Father is working in my life.

In this age of electronics and speed, it is easy to follow what your eyes see. If you find not time for stillness, then by all means, call one another. Help each other find that positive mind-path. Worry not of the past, it will take care of itself. We need not continuously feel a need to clean up an old mess.

I do know that you have read your text, the Urantia Book, and I would suggest that sometimes a refresher is in order – especially the Jesus papers.

I am not allowed to take questions at this time. Know that I will spend time with each of you alone and refresh our relationship. Know that my heart overflows with love for each one of you. I do know that our Mission can change the path of hate into a path of openness, and create a trust in the higher power. Man is just man. God is all things. Go in love and peace. And until next time, shalom.

Time Spent With Michael Strengthens Us To Combat Overwhelming Emotion and Reframe It With Balance

Abraham & Christ Michael, Salt Lake City Group – "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission 08-18-2019

Back

I am ABRAHAM. It is an honor to be here with you on this day of remembrance of Michael's birthday. We have had many of these celebrations together. I feel as close to you as I ever have.

I have had the honor of watching you each perform your apostleship as you had committed to. I can imagine the Master with his earthly apostles and the great love he had for them. In the mortal life it can feel as if you are falling and nobody knows, and you sometimes think nobody cares. In these times, I have seen you reach for the spirit-mind and also find comfort in one another.

Many are believing that the Teaching Mission was a fluke, or a one-time event; and yet, look at our years together. There have been major successes made in reaching out to the masses whether you realize it or not. We have been at work, yes. The conscious thought-pattern of mortals 'as a whole' is evolving into something that can move mountains.

Individuals within the Mission are realizing they are part of the whole, and they need to work their apostleship as well as possible. Each one of you have brought with you into this Teaching Mission a great deal of deep thinkers; new conduits to help put out Michael's message to the planet – that you are never alone and that you are deeply loved.

I am MICHAEL. In this moment I am humbled to be in your presence. I know that you have worked as hard as my own apostles during my mortal days in sharing the good news. Have you ever felt the consciousness of the world as present as it is today? You each may disagree on many issues – and whatever these issues are, I have never seen mortals care so much.

I do believe the Teaching Mission has led us to help the God-In-Time repair the broken circuits from the Rebellion, and Urantia is, as it once was, thinking deeper, feeling deeper, having the desire to go below the surface and help one another.

You know that my presence, or the Spirit of Truth, is not emotion-based, no! Balance has put our best foot forward. Logic has helped the consciousness, the mass-consciousness, to higher levels. I would say for certain that the universe feels your presence. We feel your desire to do good.

History has been a great teacher. You can look back on history and mourn the losses. You can look back on history and admire the evolution. You can look back on history and learn from it. More than anything it is my suggestion that you each try to lean more toward logic. In your mortal state it is not really how you were built (to be logical), but I can say you have all the tools you need to bring in more logic where there is so much emotion.

Emotion is not always constructive. A balance of logic and trust in Father helps to preserve what you have learned and to be able to cope with the realities of mortal living. I do know it can be harsh, yes; you can lose sight of the overall purpose of having committed your life to faith and promoting truth, beauty, and goodness. When you can set aside your emotion in any given issue, I promise you I will be there. The Spirit of Truth will show you above the clouds of confusion, to the clarity of balance.

I am so happy to see so many women apostles at this moment in time. You are not in the shadows, but joined with your brothers in promoting good for the whole. History has written about my men apostles; a new history will include the women.

So many issues of difference are becoming outdated and new understanding is becoming the trend, joining each soul to understand how loved they are, equally. I ask you each to spend more time with me. In moments of misunderstanding, look to me. Open your mind to my Spirit of Truth. Know that my words can be your words.

You think technology is fast, I am faster! The Teaching Mission got us to this point where our communion is instant. I do rely on you to take my words wherever you go and live them; put them forth as an example to your fellows – that God is not wishy-washy. Father is the perfect example of balance and logic and compassion.

I do love to meet with you in this method of communication. However, I expect for us to have more one-on-one. I would never, nor would Father, ask you anything more than you would be capable of doing. Life is a balance of work and play. There is more happiness than despair. Trust the indwelling Adjuster to guide you, to feel and trust in the happiness.

Many are suspicious when good things are happening; I ask that you instead, feel that joy – it is fuel for the soul. I give my love to each one of you. I hold you always. Carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. I am with such joy and inspiration from our visit from Michael. I do know that you can have this joy and inspiration at your fingertips. The soul does need its fuel. Small increments of time spent with Michael strengthens you to combat overwhelming emotion and reframe it with balance.

Know that you each bring me this happiness and inspiration. I do see how hard you work in all that you do. Know that you are apostles – workers in expanding the Kingdom; workers in assisting the God-in-Time.

I will let you know again when we will meet in this way. Know that you have a deep and abiding place in my heart. Go in peace. Shalom.

30th Anniversary | Words Regarding Both the Pandemic and Political Hatred of Recent Years

Meeting With Abraham, Salt Lake City Group – "Second Generation" of the Teaching Mission 08-21-2021

Back

[Original Woods Cross Group's 30th Anniversary Teaching Mission celebration – in conjunction with Michael's birthday celebration, held at Calvin and Lanya's home in Hooper, UT. Present for this transmission/lesson are: Fay, Nina, Calvin and Lanya, Tectra, Bill, Rebecca M., Marin, Dirk, Mike B., and Calvin's son, Jordan (who is in the military, having joined us via FaceTime. This meeting was on the heels of the worldwide Corona Virus pandemic; and, during a time of major political upheaval and division in the United States.)]

I am Abraham. Greetings. It fills my heart to see each one of you. I am impressed by your growth and strength. I do agree with you when you speak of the last few years' challenges. I know that the pandemic was trying for everyone, planet wide – a time of isolation. Individuals were able to see who they really have become.

There were so many lessons for everyone that came out of this trying time. One important topic was – the isolation from people showed everyone that it is important to have people in your life. It is important to speak to one another. The adversity taught everyone how it feels to be needed, or how you each missed your friends and family. Yes, it is a blessing to have one another.

The pandemic taught how important school is to children and to parents. You can see the great value in the teachers who shape our children. Also, the pandemic has shown that money is less important than sharing life with others. For instance, working from home is not as pleasant and rewarding sometimes without the camaraderie of your fellow co-workers. It is still questionable whether such isolation is good for individuals and their way of thinking.

The pandemic, we can understand. The amount of hatred that has come about in the last few years resulting from the political environment, we cannot understand. Actually, myself and my associates were astonished to see this rampaging river of hate flood the world. Many people governing the masses cause such hatred and one-sided thinking; they convince others to think their way – and if you don't comply, there is hatred. This is such backward-thinking and infringes upon the free will of all souls.

Just when we think racism is a thing of the past, it has blown up so rampant and adds to the raging river of hate. It is so important now that we believers deter the river from ourselves and people we love – and simply, all people of the world. It is so important to show in our lives and set examples that everyone is loved. Everyone is important and also a child of God. Even people who spread hate are still children of God; and for you to join in the foray of hatred will affect you deeply – mentally and emotionally.

Hatred will stray you from faith and communication from Father. Father will not participate in the hate; He will not choose a side. He will try to guide, but cannot when the heart is inflamed with hatred. Yes, we were surprised at the hate that came about and how it spread so fast. We can thank technology for that.

The attitudes of individuals who participate in this hate can become damaged – and to them, the world will seem bleak. It would feel at times as so overwhelming that there is less hope and only more struggle. Looking at the world, it is obvious how hatred is an energy of its own.

Yes, the political outlook seems so damaging; the world is so affected negatively by it. And adding to this upheaval there are the other strains of the Covid virus ongoing. Yes, there are terrible happenings in the world which you watch on the news; it sure can bring hopelessness and worry.

There were times in my mortal life when I had worried myself to sickness – and then I would remember Father. In fear, I forgot Father. In the worry, I couldn't hear him. I didn't pray much; I didn't practice my beliefs; I was emotionally sick. As I returned to Father, I remembered that no man can truly hurt us or affect an entire world from Father's reach, no! Human beings have power that comes from Father. Each of you have a bit of that power – you have the ability to show good, to show love, healing, and forgiveness.

Some of you have daily practices of prayer – it's just something you do. In that prayerful mindset, you are actually opening your mind to Father and His ideals. He can show you how to bring about more love and kindness in your daily occurrences with work, people at the grocery store, neighbors – and yes, it is that simple. Opening the mind prayerfully in the morning will point your vision toward Father. He can supply you with the tools that you will need to deter this river of hate. This river is not more powerful than Father, no! No man, and no man's persuasions, is more powerful than Father!

We don't have to worry about the outcome of situations, because Father knows – He already knows what is happening; He has people on it. Nothing occurs without the knowledge of God. He forgets not about his children. Those that listen will be given the tools to create a kinder environment. I would suggest take even one minute each morning and have a few words with Father; ask him to help you keep your eyes on Him.

As far as the Correcting Time goes, we are seeing the more advanced lessons in daily living coming at each one of you. You each have had hardships that have molded you and your thinking – and sometimes the feeling of defeat is overwhelming. If you can keep your vision heavenward, that opens the mind to receive messages.

We pray that these adverse occurrences will not shape you into thinking negatively, or being biased, or hateful. We pray that the adversity has built you up even stronger as a believer and a teacher. This Mission continues! We are still here. You are still here. I am appreciative of how open you are to share your life with me. I do listen. Father listens.

Let us not forget – faith, is a shield. Now more than ever, Father needs soldiers; He needs people to create the winds of change. With kindness and wisdom, overcome the raging river of hate. Let the winds of change build you up into a soldier for the word of God. We do make ourselves available to you to assist, all you have to do is ask.

Our hearts are so full. We are amazed at the longevity of this group. We are joyful to see the love you have for one another. ‘Thirty years’ is even more than I hoped for. I am deeply touched by your drive to continue to learn and be influenced by good; by God. Your environment is now – the whole world; the world is at your fingertips. You can influence others away from negative thinking. Let not the poison win. You are the healers. You are the winds of change.

We too have deep appreciation and love for Michael; we also celebrate this day. We have somewhat of a celebration such as yours planned for later. I am deeply touched and want to express my deep and abiding love for you each – and, for the next generation of this Teaching Mission. For you, the believers, I thank you. Go in peace. Shalom.

[Editor’s note: The above transmission/lesson from August 21st 2021 was the last of the Woods Cross Group’s Teaching Mission meetings (at least through June 1st 2024). It is noted herein that in the mid-summer of 2023 (July 24th through July 28th), the Urantia Fellowship was presented an opportunity to embrace these Mansion World Teachings as a curriculum for an upcoming “Melchizedek Schools” proposal to once again be administered on Urantia. The Teaching Mission had been rejected as a valid entity commissioned from on high by all three factions of the Urantia Book community – the Urantia Foundation; the Urantia Fellowship; and the Urantia Association International. With authority granted from ‘Midwayer Jack’ (ABC 208) and under his instruction – I, Calvin Mckee, presented a workshop at this July International Conference inviting the Fellowship to institute the Melchizedek Teaching Schools utilizing both the Urantia Book and the Mansion World Teachings as a curriculum. I include the below transmission from Midwayer Jack (ABC 208); note how it does tie in with what Teacher Ham had told us in June of 1992 regarding the midwayer’s involvement to assist in the dissemination of these transmissions in future years:

(Rebecca Bynum – Transmission Receiver – on May 20, 2023):

To Calvin

Let us begin. I am Midwayer Jack. Calvin, my brother, I am to inform you that you have the backing of the United Midwayers of Urantia in your mission to bring the good news once again to the Urantia movement. You are not alone. We are here under the command of Machiventa Melchizedek. You are deputized to represent us to those assembled. We seek to restart the schools. We must train the next generation quickly.

More to come later – Jack

At this IC2023 workshop, a promise was extended to the Urantia Book community that such an endeavor – the Melchizedek Teaching Schools, if embraced – would bring a much-needed spark of vitality to the Urantia Book family as a whole – which vitality, both the ‘Fellowship’ and the Urantia Foundation, do acknowledge they have lost in the recent decades. This promised vitality would include a live interaction between the mortals of the realm (students in learning) with the celestial administrators commissioned from on high. It is one thing to read about, and even believe that a celestial administrative presence is among us, but having a personal interaction ‘with them’ is a whole new reality! it is that vital spark so long missing on Urantia since the Lucifer rebellion.

Approximately 15 people attended this noted workshop including a member of the General Council of the Fellowship, Dr. David Schlundt, who was in favor of such an embraced curriculum (the Melchizedek Schools), but acknowledged such request was refuted by the General Council of the Fellowship. Calvin requested he be given a few minutes to address the main body of the Conference and ask for a vote directly from the Conference attendees, rather than from the General Council only, but that request was denied.

The following excerpt from the Urantia Book – Paper 37:6 Celestial Overseers – was the subject of the noted workshop – specifically stating that it is typical for all education on all worlds – beginning with the ‘worlds of human origin,’ for those ‘mortals’ just ahead of us to return to the worlds and mortals behind them as ‘teachers and guides’ – yes, our beloved Celestial Overseers.]

Urantia Book Paper 37. CELESTIAL OVERSEERS

37:6.1 The Nebadon educational system is jointly administered by the Trinity Teacher Sons and the Melchizedek teaching corps, but much of the work designed to effect its maintenance and upbuilding is carried on by the Celestial Overseers. These beings are a recruited corps embracing all types of individuals connected with the scheme of educating and training the ascending mortals. There are upward of three-million of them in Nebadon, and they are all volunteers who have qualified by experience to serve as educational advisers to the entire realm. From their headquarters on the Salvington worlds of the Melchizedeks, these overseers range the local universe as inspectors of the Nebadon school technique designed to effect the mind training and the spirit education of the ascending creatures.

37:6.2 This training of mind and education of spirit is carried on from the worlds of human origin up through the system Mansion Worlds and the other spheres of progress associated with Jerusem, on the seventy socializing realms attached to Edentia, and on the four-hundred and ninety spheres of spirit progress encircling Salvington. On the universe headquarters itself are numerous Melchizedek schools, the colleges of the Universe Sons, the seraphic universities, and the schools of the Teacher Sons and the Union of Days. Every possible provision is made to qualify the various personalities of the universe for advancing service and improving function. The entire universe is one vast school.

37:6.3 The methods employed in many of the higher schools are beyond the human concept of the art of teaching truth, but this is the keynote of the whole educational system: character acquired by enlightened experience. The teachers provide the enlightenment; the universe station and the ascender's status afford the opportunity for experience; the wise utilization of these two augments character.

37:6.4 Fundamentally, the Nebadon educational system provides for your assignment to a task and then affords you opportunity to receive instruction as to the ideal and divine method of best performing that task. You are given a definite task to perform, and at the same time you are provided with teachers who are qualified to instruct you in the best method of executing your assignment. The divine plan of education provides for the intimate association of work and instruction. We teach you how best to execute the things we command you to do.

37:6.5 The purpose of all this training and experience is to prepare you for admission to the higher and more spiritual training spheres of the superuniverse. Progress within a given realm is individual, but transition from one phase to another is usually by classes.

37:6.7 Before leaving the universe of Nebadon, most Urantia mortals will be afforded opportunity to serve for a longer or shorter time as members of the Nebadon corps of Celestial Overseers.

[Editor's note:] Many have questioned whether or not an ascending mortal of the realm can return to their native planet of origin. According the Urantia Book – yes, they are permitted, under certain circumstances:

[UB 39:4.15]

A mortal never returns to his native planet during the dispensation of his temporal existence, and if he should return during a subsequent dispensation, he would be escorted by a transport seraphim of the universe headquarters group.

[UB 146:7.2]

Jesus further explained to his apostles that the spirits of departed human beings do not come back to the world of their origin to communicate with their living fellows. Only after the passing of a dispensational age would it be possible for the advancing spirit of mortal man to return to earth and then only in exceptional cases and as a part of the spiritual administration of the planet.

[Editor's note:] It is clear in these Mansion World Teaching Transcripts that former mortals from our earth's history, Abraham and Mary of Magdala, have been commissioned to return to our world – in “an administrative role” – and logically so: Who among all males of our history has more ties to the hearts of mankind than does ‘father Abraham.’ Two-thirds of this world's 8 billion people align themselves as ‘the seed of Abraham,’ comprising Christians, Muslims, and the Jewish faiths. As well, what female of Urantian history has more intrigue in the hearts of today's people than does Mary Magdalene? Especially is this evident following the world-wide sensation of The ChosenTV series that premiered in 2019, and has, as of this date (June 1st 2024) produced 32 Episodes through Season Four. These profound productions are having a huge positive impact in the lives of millions. Abraham and Mary (along with the staff of hundreds of ‘teachers and guides’) surely fit the descriptions in the Urantia Book Paper 37 regarding ‘the Celestial Overseers.’ They have been, and still are, most wonderful friends and teachers to those students of the Woods Cross Teaching Mission Group – and likely to many other groups around the world. Our gratitude to Father, to Michael and Mother, to Machiventa - and all who have come to help our world which has so long been saturated in the aftermath of the Lucifer rebellion.