ABRAHAM: Understood. Yes, the severely destructive weeds should be maintained – meaning those weeds that appear to be out of control, so as to maintain the beauty of the whole. The problem is regarding those that judge which are weeds and which are flowers – what is beauty and what is natural. This is difficult, yes, and excellent that your own level of understanding this particular morontial lesson has shown you this concept. It is difficult to set particular laws by which morality is governed. It is difficult to say that a particular weed that appears to be out of sorts is unfit to share the soil. This judgment, this type of judgment, requires a person that is in understanding of each other's right in the soil regardless of a particular function. Without this understanding, the person who is not willing to move further within the field and observe the inner workings, is unfit to judge. Yes, human laws are difficult, and balance between logic and compassion is necessary to protect the just from the unjust. I am intrigued by your analysis; and I shall too, continue to ponder this.

I am made happy to connect hearts and minds with you each...

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I want to say one thing before you leave us. I, too, am glad that the soil was there for the weeds because all the time when I was growing up, my parents told me I grew just like a weed. [laughter.] (Abraham: Understood.)

ELWARD: Couldn't some people call some of the weeds Herb's to be used to benefit people in better ways than other things?

ABRAHAM: Yes, quite possible. You too are knowing the value of observing and reflecting. You are all connected to a well of information within your group here. I am honored to be a part, and I thank you each. Until next week, shalom.

Willingness To Be Led By The Spirit And To See With the Eyes of the Spirit Brings Unforeseen Joy

Abraham & Machiventa, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-15-1996

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I am happy to meet with you again. Thank you for allowing me to assist you in your morontial education. I am honored. You are indeed making these lessons possible with your willingness to forsake personal desires and work toward spiritual unity. We are learning too, as are you.

I am on a different level in my education than you but it is you, my friends, and this experience, that brings me to this particular level – I thank you. I, on this night, rejoice, for I see with the eyes of the Spirit. I have chosen to be God-like. I have chosen Father's will. I have chosen to be willing to be led by the Spirit, and for this I am made to rejoice.

In the lesson last week on observation and reflection, you appeared to me as a classroom of small children viewing something spectacular for the first time. In your morontial discoveries, I also feel the excitement and enthusiasm of a parent or teacher.

You stand on the shore of a vast ocean of morontial discoveries. You are willing to be led by the Spirit, and can you deny the excitement of this spiritual quest? You have a strong understanding of our field of flowers and will continue to grow and change in your understanding – for in your understanding, you have acknowledged judgment to be the work of our Father.

TR: He is saying to me, 'just a minute.'

I am MACHIVENTA, your friend. I am a worker in the field of flowers. My position holds me responsible for the upkeep of the field. I am to see that all of our Father's greenery receives an adequate amount of His rainfall, and even I am not fully qualified to withhold any amount of rain to any particular area of the field. I am dedicated to ensuring that all who desire the rain, receive it.

My time spent on this planet was also an excellent experience in my own education. I was sent so that others may learn. Upon meeting my friend, Abraham, I dared not ask: 'Who is this individual that he may receive such spiritual insight?' 'Who is he that he may know of my presence and learn of the 'One God' concept?' No, I dared not even consider: 'What are Abraham's qualifications that he may be worthy to accept this divine light.'

I was commissioned by my superiors to perform certain tasks and I did so without consideration of my personal opinions. I was willing to be led by the Spirit; and therefore, I saw with the eyes of the Spirit. To observe with the eyes of the Spirit is to be free from temptation to judge, to understand Father is present amidst the inner working of the field.

Yes, to observe with the eyes of the Spirit requires that you are to be led by the Spirit. Do you see – to be led by the Spirit requires you to trust in the Spirit, to hold faithfully to our Father's ideals, to have full confidence in your status as a son and daughter of His kingdom, to know that Father is.

I am ABRAHAM. We give our thanks to Machiventa. I am made to be joyful at the realization of our Father's presence in all things. I am made to be grateful for His watchcare and careful observance in our spiritual steps toward Him. He is wholly qualified to teach us what we really need to find Him.

I, at one time, was short in my vision of earthly experience. I often toiled in misery in my misunderstanding. I chose to obey the traditional laws then and lean upon the knowledge of that age – and I was left with a distorted view of living. I am grateful for this experience, for now I can see that many lessons evolved from this mindset I once held.

Today I am made to rejoice at actually looking through the eyes of the Spirit. I am secure and confident in my place and knowing Father is completely qualified to move the universes at will. My willingness to be led by the Spirit has brought me unforeseen joy, and for that, I am grateful to the point of worship. May we take a moment to express our appreciation:

Our Father, the Father of all fathers, we know you are so ready to assist us in our steps to you. We are in awe of your supreme power of your unending responsibilities. We are made to feel your tender touch upon our shoulders in a loving nudge toward you. We are small, yes, and yet, you tell us we mean everything. We would ask that you, our Father, help us to understand the steps toward being led by your Spirit and obtaining Spiritvision. Father, we ask again, make us like you. Amen. A few questions?

ROLAND: I feel like I am beginning as an infant to be able to follow the directions of the Spirit in me. My question is: I sensed that you, and Machiventa, and several other entities including Ham, were present in our gatherings at Spirit Fest (Tallahassee TM group), and also in Sarasota. I'm wondering, with the experiences that I had in traveling, and the events with those two gatherings that were such great joyful experiences – were you aware of what was going to happen to me? I guess what I'm asking is: Are you aware of things prior to what happens to us? I am seeing that everybody is having such experiences, not just myself; but I am wondering whether you have knowledge of the people that we will be encountering, such as those I did encounter during my Florida trip. Can you help me with that?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. The individuals involved in the divine lessons of living, attempt to create certain encounters unknowing of the outcome. Mortals and freewill play a significant role in the level of spiritual intake. I do not foresee certain outcomes to particular happenings; I am with instructions to carry forth, and that is the extent of my knowledge. Mortals do participate in the writing of the novel of their divine destiny, yes. We are not to interfere with free will and yet, we are permitted to teach those that will to be taught. Is this helping?

ROLAND: Yes, it is. This may seem a very simplistic question: On occasion when somebody asks what I am doing on these spirit quests I say, 'I am working for the spiritual government of Urantia and I am an operative in that responsibility.' I am wondering whether that is too presumptuous to say.

ABRAHAM: No, it's not. It is equivalent to saying you are working towards the growth of the kingdom. This is acceptable; and simplistic though it may appear, it is an honest reply from the heart. Another question?

WILLEENA: Yes, Abraham. I have a request for comment and then a question. First of all, I celebrate my exciting success with my father in completing our communication about my abuse and the healing. It was great and this weekend was sort of blessed. My experience was of being very Spirit led and I walked in a state of surrender. I frequently found myself turning over the weekend and the communications and the moments with the term: 'Thy will be done, Father.' Everything felt like it was very synchronized by Spirit, and perfectly so. Today, back home now, I'm noticing that I am missing that space inside myself - and so tonight's lesson talked to me particularly with the concept of being led by Spirit. So I guess this is the question: Would you say--and I suppose there is any number of ways of 'turning it over' and so the term 'thy will be done' is a way that works for me right now--to remember to surrender my choices to the very highest possibilities. Could you make a comment on that?

ABRAHAM: Yes, understood. You are entering into the waters of spiritual maturity. The surrendering of personal will shows definite progress toward being Spirit led. In the waters of spiritual maturity there comes violent waves and possibly, storms. This is an area of growth and not to be looked upon as 'unhappiness' but as the tender touch of our Father, who reveals to us the pathway to Him. And I say, in these spiritual waters when the violent waves are approaching, many times it is wise to just relax and float. Overmuch wrestling within the violent waves of spiritual maturity, you become exhausted, drained of energy that might be saved and used at a better time. You are correct in your attitude of 'thy will be done.' It is a step toward being led with the eyes of the Spirit so when the violent waves are approaching you are conscious of Father's tender touch upon your shoulder. Is this helping?

WILLEENA: Yes, thank you. Another question I have is regarding something else: I have a client who is fifteen and was raped probably more than once by her stepfather who is now in prison. In doing some of the work with people involved with her, part of what I have been led to do lately is to also include the perpetrator in the blessing for healing. So my question is, and because we are working a lot with light and love: Do I include being able to see him beginning the healing of his heart and his wounds? That feels correct to me. I'd like you to comment on that. My question is: Is there any danger in directing our focus on him being included in some healing? Is there any kind of threat at all, energetically, that he could come back with? Is this the correct way to go, and to include him in light?

ABRAHAM: I am sure that this is appropriate for a time with regard to the victims' understanding of the reasons why this perpetrator hurt her in this way, but there is a time that is needed to be angry. Has such time been allowed? (Willeena: Understood. That is certainly a part of my understanding and certainly will be included.) Abraham: Yes. When the intensity of the anger subsides, understanding of this crime is required - and then, yes, blessings for the perpetrator is acceptable and even healing. I say, dwell not long on this. The victim must focus on her own importance within the kingdom and come to understand her value regardless of what may have occurred. She is a child of God and no act of man can make it otherwise. Is this helping?

WILLEENA: One last question: She has lost some faith, feeling abandoned. I would like to assist her in coming back to a sense of safety and faith. Is there some way to let her know that God didn't abandon her, in a way that she might be able to hear?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Your own experience has brought you to a point in which you are understanding of the various cycles of the mind, and you are qualified to lead her from this darkness into the light. Worry not what can harm the body, focus on the strength of the soul. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, in your lesson and Machiventa's words of being Spirit led - in a lot of situations in our life we wonder: 'How can I quiet down and be Spirit led on how to handle a situation?' I've had a few instances for practice at this this week, but one in particular concerns my daughter, which has me baffled about her behavior. She's had hardships in life, yes, as we all have, but hers has left her feeling very unloved I guess.

ABRAHAM: It may be similar to your experiences in life that had you feeling unloved, but in a different way.

CALVIN: It seems like I am lost as how to help her other than to somehow explain that she is loved, that her Creator/Father/Parent does love her even if she doesn't perceive anyone else does. I don't seem to have much Spirit-led direction at those times when she is acting out so erratically. Maybe her tirades irritate me so much to where I am blocked off from this Spirit guidance. Do you have any words that can help? or a message which I can take to her?

ABRAHAM: I am aware she knows very well that she is loved, and this ploy she uses is to collect energy. She desires to compensate for her feelings of insecurity. I can suggest you to freely give her all the attention and energy she needs without feelings of guilt from the past of your separation from her mother. What's done is done and you now start from the beginning. Her age (thirteen) is difficult in that she is testing her wings. She is in a process of discovering who she is, and this is a long process. I say to validate her feelings, to say for instance: 'Yes, I believe you feel this way.' in showing her faith that she can overcome this phase. Reassure her that life is ever-changing and that the end to her so-called misery is forthcoming.

With that, I will say I am appreciative of your willingness to be led by the Spirit and listen to my words. This week, attempt to see what steps are needed to take in order to be Spirit led. Where is the stream in which you dip your cup? My love goes with you all. Until next week, shalom.

Obtaining Spirit Vision | A Contract of a Spirit-Led Individual
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-22-1996
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you all this evening. It is a delightful experience for me each time we meet. I am happy to assist you in your mortal lessons. It is wonderful how Father works in all our lives.

Last week, in discussing observation and reflection we came upon a most necessary subject: Being led by the Spirit and obtaining spirit vision. We discussed that to see with the eyes of the Spirit leaves us less likely to be judgmental. I am hoping tonight to discuss a little on steps toward being led by the Spirit and the affects of obtaining spirit vision.

As mortal sons and daughters, you are required to live by faith. This concept must be experienced, another cannot really assist you in believing without seeing. You learn by experience in mortal living and contact with your indwelling Father. I am saying, I cannot give precise instructions on the steps to being led by the Spirit. Your most crucial lessons lie within 'human experience' and contact with your indwelling Father.

There comes a moment in mortal living where one may feel surrounded by darkness, overcome with confusion, and indecisive of proper moves to take. In this moment of darkness, many reach out blindly in faith and ask for assistance from on high – from someone who would truly have understanding for them. In reaching out, a mortal has taken a step in faith and is open to possible forthcoming answers.

Upon being open, a mortal is able to feel the presence of something that eludes their understanding, but nevertheless knows something is indeed helping to strengthen. As a mortal learns faith-building, there comes a great deal of stumbling blocks through which the mortal is learning through experience to exercise and build the muscles of faith. As spiritual maturity sets in, a mortal relinquishes more ego while steering towards the will of Father.

Do you see, you are all approaching this reality – that Father is unmatched in His intelligence and watchcare. You are beginning to see that without God there appears to be nothing of value; and with God everything appears to contain value. You are trusting your Father to be the only Source in whom you trust, and are waiting upon His words of guidance. A little more each day you request: "Father make me like you," and a little more each day you become more like the Father. In aligning your will with Father's you are signing a contract which states:

The Father of all fathers guides me with a loving watchful hand in which I trust even in moments of darkness. I reserve this place in my mind, heart, and soul, to be for the Father. This place is indestructible. This place is devoted to Him who has loved me upon existence. I am, because He is! I trust His infinite wisdom to guide me to the shores of Paradise.

This is the contract of a spirit-led individual. I doubt not that you each have agreed upon such a celestial document, and I understand that your spirit vision becomes stronger, day by day.

To be spirit led is rather simplistic. Our recognition for our Father's love and watchcare for us leads us to believe in His ultimate power in the universe. Just as the story of the kind man and the abused youth that was helped by the man's unconditional kindness – the youth was drawn to the man, love resulted, and then loyalty, after that. To be spirit led, is easy, yes. To learn to use your new eyes of the spirit, is a little more difficult. To be conditioned to the idea that you see with your Father's eyes is perhaps a little strange at first – you find your emotions are different, your reaction to others, is changed, your understanding of your place in the kingdom, is also becoming different.

This is similar to the excitement one feels when preparing for a vacation or adventure – the adventure is unknown and yet it is most exciting to discover landmarks along the way. If one can get past the worry of small details, the vacation is much more worry-free and enjoyable. To worry about being adequately packed for your adventure is to overshadow possible breathtaking scenery.

Therefore I say, let not those steps of being spirit led or using your new vision weight heavy upon your minds. You are to set forth on a great adventure, and your experience and guidance from Father is your roadmap. You are well prepared. In using your spirit vision, you are looking out upon a vast scenery of mountainous understanding.

To see with the Father's eyes is to view what He views – and I say, He is in great understanding of each and every one of His children. You also will be shown 'understanding for your fellows' through the eyes of the spirit; and I say, to be judgmental will become almost obsolete. You may perhaps view Father's children as He does – sometimes frail, sometimes weak, sometimes confused. Yet, at times you will be astounded by discoveries – sometimes courageously taking steps toward being God-like, and sometimes laughing with indescribable joy.

Yes, to understand your fellows through your Father's eyes is to develop an unshakable love for them. To view life through Father's eyes is true liberty – you may set yourself free from being judgmental, and, being judged. I say, to build the strength of your spirit vision, you must desire to be spirit led.

Where is the stream of love, comfort and wisdom wherein you dip your cup? What leads you back to the desire to be spirit led? Many may read spiritual truths from books. Many may meditate and practice their stillness. Many may desire to create. Some may find their spiritual cup is most full when they are in the midst of nature. Some may attend groups just like this. I would again ask, where do you dip your cup for spiritual comfort and assurity? What brings you back to the place in which you find God? A few questions?

WILLEENA: Last week you talked to me about spiritual maturity. You mentioned violent waves or storms, and said to relax and float. I wondered if you would address what you meant by violent waves or storms?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. These waves are the experiences of everyday living, natural adverse conditions that grace all mortal paths. This is nothing to be feared but is wonderful to recognize Father's faith in you to come through these waves more experienced. Another question?

WILLEENA: Yes. I was wondering with regard to this accident: That day I was walking in a state of 'thy will be done' when this happened. It has been an interesting experience for me, relying as much as I can on that place where I come back to often in a day - 'Thy will be done, what's next Father?' I am finding that Father's way for me is much more slow and gentle, and more self-nurturing than my natural tendency. I am wondering if this has been a testing or a learning experience to help me get in touch with that place, that new way?

ABRAHAM: There is not much one can do concerning the accidents of time; and yet Father - with His broad vision - finds ways in which to teach spirituality and the fruits thereof. Yes, to be open to the spirit vision is to approach mortal concerns and conflicts with a broad view - combining logic, trust, and love, as a foundation. To believe that the universe is for you, not against you, is a benefit of obtaining spirit vision. Another question?

JOSHUA: Father Abraham, we have been told in the Urantia Papers about many different religions. The other day we were talking about the Bahia faith. Is this a new religion getting started? Can you comment on that, please?

ABRAHAM: I am unknowing about the particulars of this faith, but I can say that deep within the heart of man there is a desire to encompass certain truths for the betterment of those that seek. These religions are occurring in rapid numbers, yes; and yet I cannot express much knowledge in that area. All I can comment on is that a religion containing much truth is a lasting religion. Another question?

ROLAND: Father Abraham, you mentioned that faith - that is, believing without seeing - is primarily experiential; and that one cannot learn that from someone else's experience. Is it not true that truth is a personal experience - a reality; that we read spiritual concepts, yes, but we really don't read truth, we experience truth? I am wondering if I am off on that. It dawned on me when you were talking about faith experience. Can you comment about that?

ABRAHAM: Yes. This can also be said about truth. When mortals are open to direct communion from the Father, then truth is experiential. Mortals who are all too willing to rely upon the truths of others (religious organizations, perhaps government officials) then are they willing to take-on those truths of others. This practice appears to be safe; and yet I say, this is not reality. The mortal willing to experience truth will do so! and those that search not, will not view the truth in their experience. Yes, you are correct in your thinking. I am slipping. Is there one more question?

ROLAND: For me, it seems like I am beginning to understand that I have a certain capacity for spiritual energy expenditure; and it seems to me like we are hearing that in you when you say "you are slipping" with Ellanor. Is there a point in which we reach some spiritual exhaustion that we should retreat? or should we be aware of the spiritual exhaustion? Can you comment about that, now that you seem to be in that position?

ABRAHAM: Yes. I would say that yes, in your material form an energy 'recharge' is necessary. I refer back to the stream in which you dip your cup. My spiritual exhaustion is not so apparent any longer in my morontial form. I choose to quit when transmission accuracy becomes threatened resulting from the lack of energy/connection with the receiver.

Yes, I can discuss more next week if you would like. For this week, I give you my love and assurance that I will accompany you during the week for extra understanding. Until next week, shalom.

To Have Spirit Vision One Is Less Likely To Criticize and More Likely To Serve

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, and welcome to you. I am lifted up by your willingness to understand and share these morontial lessons. Know that we stand by to assist. We have discussed being led by the Spirit and I mentioned that this was fairly simple to attain. You will see that this practice will become more natural with time and experience. Tonight I wish to say a bit on spirit vision.

After you and your Father have reached an agreement to travel this spiritual journey assisting each other, you may note that your perception is moving from a mere 'hopeful wishing' to a confident 'inner-knowing.' With the circuits having been replaced, the spirit vision you develop will be compared to those that lived before the Rebellion. For a time, this vision will be confusing and appear to cause some mental anxiety; but I can assure that this is absolutely natural for a planet of your evolutionary status.

I can say with certainty, your new eyes will amaze you, possibly astonish at times; and yet, it will appear as though you have always seen with the eyes of the spirit. We discussed before about obtaining spirit vision, therefore lessening the temptation to judge yourself and others. Being endowed with a broader view of your earthly experiences leaves room for understanding - of yourself and others.

One who has obtained spirit vision is less likely to criticize based solely on ego-perceptions. One may still be within the boundaries of truth, yes, and yet, seeks not to criticize for self-aggrandizement, but to serve your fellows. To work in unison with the Spirit of Truth while becoming accustomed to your spirit vision is helpful in the fact that Michael, His spirit, is always revealing our true natures. The Spirit of Truth is incessantly working to shed light within the dark corners of the human mind.

I would say, in your steps to becoming God-like, to frequently talk with the Master; ask that He cleanse your heart and help you to gain courage for what you must know to advance spiritually. Michael is an excellent counselor during this time of self-understanding and being led by the Spirit. In your times of confusion, invite the Spirit of Truth to shed a little light.

In your desire to be Spirit led, you not only are less likely to 'judge' but more likely to 'understand.' To have understanding for your fellows is to open the circuits of love between you. With your spirit vision, you are learning to release your control over others, and know that they too are on a certain path. With your new eyes, you can see the watchful hand of Father working in everyone's life; you are filled with the knowledge that yes, God is trustworthy, for He values His mortal children and seeks to draw them to Him.

To see with the eyes of the Spirit is to focus upon your own learning and leave your fellows to theirs. You know by now that a space within you is reserved for Father; and, that you cannot fill that 'Father's space' for another. You can be helpful to your brothers and sisters while continually leading them toward their own inner Father. Yes, you can encourage others to have confidence in their abilities to locate Father – but I say, you may not impose upon another to understand what you yourself understand.

Your spirit eyes teach you that we are all on the path to Paradise; and that alone broadens your vision, manifold. On the worlds of Light and Life, mortals are unknowing of the contrast between spiritual blindness and spiritual vision; it is only through the history on other worlds that they are familiar with such, as is the case of your experience. Yes, you are living in an excellent era for planetary understanding and evolution. Yes, you are unique in your experience, collectively and individually. No, you have not been alone in your isolation status, but I say, the worlds of the universe are almost as unique as are its individuals.

I am saying, your experience at this time in Urantian history is indeed carefully observed and recorded. This world has much to offer in the way of setting the course for others who dwell in isolation. Upon obtaining your spirit vision, you understand this concept, easily. You are knowing of the importance of mortal experience leading to a planetary oneness, and the effects upon the Supreme Being.

Yes, your spirit vision shows you that Urantia is no longer a world of sorrows to be pitied among the universe, but a world of darkness that has survived to see the light of understanding, and to inspire all parts of the universe. As your desire to be led by your Father increases, so does your amount of spiritual intake. Your vision is broadened to integrate your thoughts – from individual to community, to country, to the whole world, and so on out into the universe.

In your morontial lessons, you will understand what your spiritual vision will allow. At moments of darkness, it is your decision on how to locate the stream in which you dip your cup for spiritual sustenance. Yes, this is all personal, and you each are best suited to decide where this stream is 'for you.' I say, it is not sinful to dip your cup from another's stream when you've asked permission. This is what Jesus taught to His apostles – when another seeks your understanding in moments of despair, then it is indeed your ministry to assist. Friendship is always refilling an empty spiritual cup.

Yes, as your spiritual vision develops, your expanded understanding will help you to focus upon the mortals in need of service. This, my friends, is your ministry – to serve. If it is your desire to be spirit led, to obtain spirit vision, to view yourself in this world as a part of the whole – then is it your ministry to serve. I say, broadened spiritual vision indeed increases your understanding of your fellows, leading to the desire to be of service.

Christ said: "Love one another as I have loved you." I say, this will be much more easy with your expanded spiritual vision, not an obstacle you must reach in order to advance spiritually. The love Michael asks us to have for each other will come more naturally because you have learned to look past your human flaws and into the soul that is a child of God.

I would ask that you consider this week: What other benefits might you recognize with the use of your spirit vision, and how may it help you to be of service? I would ask if it is so desired, please discuss this amongst yourselves. I am standing by.

As always, I leave you my love and my assurance that you each have full use of this spirit vision. Until next week, shalom.

Our New Spirit Vision Allows Us to Better Serve

I am ABRAHAM. I am happy to see you all here this evening. Thank you for having me. This road we travel is seemingly tedious – and yet, we take a turn and our scenery changes. This is a road of spiritual education, yes, but I say it is meant to also be joyful. I can say I am joyful to meet with you.

I know you each fairly well. I have accompanied you during times of overwhelming weakness, and I have also witnessed your victorious efforts to overcome darkness. I can say I see you through the eyes of our Father. Your human flaws disturb me not – nor do your moments of continuous complaining or moments of searching for self-glory.

You can say I have seen what you would deem to be terrible traits of your personality. Seeing through my Father's eyes I can say that your most selfish deeds do not subtract one bit of the affection I feel for you. Viewing you with my spirit vision is to broaden my understanding of the events that lead you to continuously complain or seek self-glory. My enlarged picture of your status as a child of God has led me to accept you without my own personal judgment or opinion of you.

With the use of my spirit vision, I am in understanding of the long road we all must travel to reach our Paradise destination. I seek not to change or manipulate you to grow more rapid because of my enlarged view of you, no! for I understand that you are on the path that you must travel. I am committed to the doing of Father's will, yes, and I am with His broad vision of spiritual realities.

With the use of your new eyes, you will also encompass more fruits of the spirit towards your fellows. Tolerance, patience, acceptance – these will become natural traits of your personality. You shall view your fellows with the same understanding that Father has.

I say, when this world does wake up to their new vision, the need for destructive competition will become obsolete. Jealousy and envy will be outrun by understanding – with the same understanding that Father has for all His celestial personalities. The need for war and control over the masses will become useless because your spirit vision will broaden your understanding of all peoples in all cultures. All will be viewed and given due respect as a cosmic citizen.

With practice and dedication to the doing of Father's will, your spiritual vision will increase fairly rapid, depending upon your awareness efforts of what you are observing. Spiritual vision is not particularly useful without intelligent reflection and effort to understand.

You are correct when you speak of planetary awakening. I am certain that this era will prove to be fascinating and stressful at the same time. Yes, many will undergo a series of confusing ideas; but I do say with certainty that we have come so that you may learn to assist in teaching those that are lost in this confusion.

Our place, regarding the teaching staff, is to help direct our students towards an enlightened era. I can say, your position in this Mission is almost the same, to help direct. We are not concerned over those mortals who refuse to understand us. We are not bound by fear over those who do not join us. We are settled in the comfort of our spiritual vision that tells us Father already is aware of any concerns we may have.

In our practice of spirit vision, we will also discover certain changes within ourselves. You may notice that not only do you become more understanding and less judgmental of others, you also begin to have more patience and understanding for your own imperfections. You are able to take a deep breath and say, "I am a child of God. I stand at the beginning of eternity. I will make an effort to keep trying."

Your own self-understanding through your spirit vision removes unfruitful pressure towards attaining your goals. Being more at peace enables you to keep clear lines of communication with Father. Allow your augmented vision to embrace your weaknesses and your strengths. Worry not on your level of success, for this is your Father's concern. I can say you are not measured by what you are today but by what you are striving to be. Are there questions?

CALVIN: It's good to know, Abraham, that we are seen in our 'becoming' humanness, in our immature selves, and still loved and accepted. And you are right, I can look back now and see that I've grown. With all these years of habit or whatever, I think we could easily still go on doing the same pattern; but now, with these lessons, we are conscious of what we need to truly change and grow. And with what you are telling us, we can have understanding that we are understood - and that we are accepted and loved, anyway. There was a time I felt shameful and ugly with stupid things done, wrong things done; and that feeling blocked a lot of growth. It is just easier in the growing process to not feel that way. Could you expand a little bit more on the 'self-aggrandizement' or 'self-glory' part you mentioned earlier in your lesson; I'd like a better viewpoint where I can better look at this in myself?

ABRAHAM: Yes. A child who is constantly praised and encouraged strives to continue that practice, for this child receives energy and is made to grow and measure self-worth. On the other hand, a child who is devalued constantly is likely to go about in a mode of destruction - believing that is his lot in life; he is believing that he can do no better. A child who grows in this way into an adult has learned to not accept any praise, even if it was deserved. Both children are being shaped to perform what is expected of them. The secure child has within, that inner-confidence and awareness of his status in the kingdom. The devalued child has learned that the only way to receive praise is to bestow it upon themselves. This child craves glory and love that was not ever received. A child such as this learns to go about staking claims upon various lands of self-glory, and this is where one such as this may draw upon a false well of energy. This person knows that he seeks love and someone to believe he is acceptable. When this expectation is not met, he must fashion it within his own mind and spend vast amounts of energy to continue the charade. Do you see, in spirit vision this is all understood? To view yourselves or others through the eyes of Father is opening the door to understanding how each individual came to be that individual. There is no judgment. There is no pity. There is no sadness. There is just understanding that, yes, this is experience in mortal life – it is part of the education. Those who seek truth know that self-aggrandizement is not part of truth-reality. Those that sincerely seek the will of Father are made to see that the love and acceptance only need come from their Father in heaven. Does this help? (Calvin: Very very much. You couldn't put it a better way for me to understand what you are saying. Thank you, Abraham.)

ELLEN: I have had a couple experiences in the past where I thought I was seeing through the eyes of Christ. It was like I saw this person with an increased compassion and tenderness that I knew wasn't me seeing this way. I am wondering if that is what you are talking about? or perhaps I went just a little bit crazy.

ABRAHAM: Yes, that is in the chapter of our book on spiritual vision, increased compassion and understanding for your fellows. To view another mortal as a family member is indeed fruitful use of spiritual vision. Your desire to be spirit-led opens the door to spiritual vision and increased morontial understandings. Yes, I would say these experiences are visions of the spirit – whether it be through the eyes of your Father or, the understanding of Michael's Spirit of Truth. Yes. Another question?

RACHEL: Well Father Abraham would that hold true with the situation similar to this when I watching the Olympics. At times they were so far away as I was watching them on TV. And much of the time when I'd see the groups and then they would show the faces up close, I felt like I was so full of love and appreciation for each and every one of them. I felt like I was there with them, to a certain extent. Would that be a part?

ABRAHAM: Yes certainly. An understanding that regardless of culture, race, religion, or gender, individuals had trained mentally and physically to represent their countries with equal love and devotion. Your understanding of these individuals quite simply enhanced your love for them. It is literally true, that love is a universal understanding and can surpass any cultural barrier. Good example. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, I have been reading the Starseed books that Anthony shared with me, and I feel I've grown tremendously, spiritually. I think I have increased my spirit vision tons as a result of your lessons and in conjunction now with reading the Starseed books. It helps me see the world 'as a whole' from a much larger perspective – the past, present, and what is coming in the future. And, it helps me better see the purpose of all that is happening now – our purpose in this Teaching Mission and what you are doing to help correct and teach. Is all this a part of what you are saying, 'seeing through the eyes of the spirit?'

ABRAHAM: Yes. It has been long in preparation. Our Mission is carefully orchestrated to synchronize with natural evolution. We are joyful that truth appears to be coming from many sources, yes, and has exceeded our original expectations. Is this answering?

CALVIN: Yes. I am sure there are many other sources besides that which I see presently; science, art, literature, and awareness of human history – it all seems to tie in perfectly. (Abraham: Yes.) Calvin: Just a quick further question: On my neck there is a little bump back there. I am wondering if I am building up some kind of needless worrying about it. I don't call it fear. I don't feel afraid. Is it just a visible thing that causes me concern? If you know anything on that, it would be helpful.

ABRAHAM: I am certain that you would feel better consulting a physician. To ease your mind concerning your physical health would remove much anxiety and make more clear the channels of communication. I am certain that you are entirely capable of any problems that may result from the physical or the mental. Does this help? (Calvin: Yes. I will get it checked. People have been sharing concern about it.) Abraham: Understood.

ABRAHAM: Ellanor, what is your question? You would like a little more understanding on the reasons to learning about spiritual vision. You don't understand the lesson from last week. One moment. [pause.] I am equipped to reveal certain amounts of information according to our morontial advisors. It is your prerogative to take what you will from these lessons. These morontial lessons are designed to teach mass personalities – even those from differing parts of the universe, yes. I have said that these morontial lessons would be different for each student; and I would emphasize there is no pressure to force any understanding. There is much time left yet in your mortal career for learning.

I would ask you each this week to look past all human flaws, to the pure souls that are the children of God. In doing such, please include yourselves. I leave you with my love. Until next week, shalom.

Our New Spirit Vision Allows Us to Better Serve

I am ABRAHAM. I am happy to see you all here this evening. Thank you for having me. This road we travel is seemingly tedious – and yet, we take a turn and our scenery changes. This is a road of spiritual education, yes, but I say it is meant to also be joyful. I can say I am joyful to meet with you.

I know you each fairly well. I have accompanied you during times of overwhelming weakness, and I have also witnessed your victorious efforts to overcome darkness. I can say I see you through the eyes of our Father. Your human flaws disturb me not – nor do your moments of continuous complaining or moments of searching for self-glory.

You can say I have seen what you would deem to be terrible traits of your personality. Seeing through my Father's eyes I can say that your most selfish deeds do not subtract one bit of the affection I feel for you. Viewing you with my spirit vision is to broaden my understanding of the events that lead you to continuously complain or seek self-glory. My enlarged picture of your status as a child of God has led me to accept you without my own personal judgment or opinion of you.

With the use of my spirit vision, I am in understanding of the long road we all must travel to reach our Paradise destination. I seek not to change or manipulate you to grow more rapid because of my enlarged view of you, no! for I understand that you are on the path that you must travel. I am committed to the doing of Father's will, yes, and I am with His broad vision of spiritual realities.

With the use of your new eyes, you will also encompass more fruits of the spirit towards your fellows. Tolerance, patience, acceptance – these will become natural traits of your personality. You shall view your fellows with the same understanding that Father has.

I say, when this world does wake up to their new vision, the need for destructive competition will become obsolete. Jealousy and envy will be outrun by understanding – with the same understanding that Father has for all His celestial personalities. The need for war and control over the masses will become useless because your spirit vision will broaden your understanding of all peoples in all cultures. All will be viewed and given due respect as a cosmic citizen.

With practice and dedication to the doing of Father's will, your spiritual vision will increase fairly rapid, depending upon your awareness efforts of what you are observing. Spiritual vision is not particularly useful without intelligent reflection and effort to understand.

You are correct when you speak of planetary awakening. I am certain that this era will prove to be fascinating and stressful at the same time. Yes, many will undergo a series of confusing ideas; but I do say with certainty that we have come so that you may learn to assist in teaching those that are lost in this confusion.

Our place, regarding the teaching staff, is to help direct our students towards an enlightened era. I can say, your position in this Mission is almost the same, to help direct. We are not concerned over those mortals who refuse to understand us. We are not bound by fear over those who do not join us. We are settled in the comfort of our spiritual vision that tells us Father already is aware of any concerns we may have.

In our practice of spirit vision, we will also discover certain changes within ourselves. You may notice that not only do you become more understanding and less judgmental of others, you also begin to have more patience and understanding for your own imperfections. You are able to take a deep breath and say, “I am a child of God. I stand at the beginning of eternity. I will make an effort to keep trying.”

Your own self-understanding through your spirit vision removes unfruitful pressure towards attaining your goals. Being more at peace enables you to keep clear lines of communication with Father. Allow your augmented vision to embrace your weaknesses and your strengths. Worry not on your level of success, for this is your Father's concern. I can say you are not measured by what you are today but by what you are striving to be. Are there questions?

CALVIN: It's good to know, Abraham, that we are seen in our 'becoming' humanness, in our immature selves, and still loved and accepted. And you are right, I can look back now and see that I've grown. With all these years of habit or whatever, I think we could easily still go on doing the same pattern; but now, with these lessons, we are conscious of what we need to truly change and grow. And with what you are telling us, we can have understanding that we are understood – and that we are accepted and loved, anyway. There was a time I felt shameful and ugly with stupid things done, wrong things done; and that feeling blocked a lot of growth. It is just easier in the growing process to not feel that way. Could you expand a little bit more on the 'self-aggrandizement' or 'self-glory' part you mentioned earlier in your lesson; I'd like a better viewpoint where I can better look at this in myself?

ABRAHAM: Yes. A child who is constantly praised and encouraged strives to continue that practice, for this child receives energy and is made to grow and measure self-worth. Spirit Vision Bestows Liberty. All Personal Liberty Is Because Father Allows It

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you here this evening. I am always fascinated by your unending enthusiasm and determination to move forward. You, my friends, are indeed learning that perceiving through the eyes of our Father is complex and enlightening. You are learning of the importance of obtaining spirit vision, but also do you meet with some confusion. I say, your desire to be spirit led will direct you toward less confusion and more accurate spiritual vision.

Now does this world begin to recognize certain evolutionary changes. Now do mortals begin to recognize the unseen energies that were not apparent before. Now do mortals recognize a deeper love and compassion than was previously experienced. I say, your world is taking great strides to get to the status that you would have held had you not experienced such planetary upheaval from the Lucifer rebellion.

On the higher Mansion Worlds, lessons in spiritual vision are few – for you see, students there are without the hindrance of material form; spiritual vision is quite natural and not labored-over as a positive spiritual trait – it just is. You, however, have experienced spiritual blindness and spiritual vision. You are knowing of the contrast; and I say, this is of great value.

Feel not pity for Urantian mortals for they have stood victorious over spiritual darkness. I say, yes, it was work on the part of all Urantian citizens; but I also say, this is of great blessing, for you are being educated to teach and assist your mortal fellows from those lessons learned from history. No longer is this world pitied by the onlookers within the universe, but given due respect as a cog in the wheel that enhances the growth of the Supreme Being.

We will continue to ponder over your new experiences with spiritual vision, but tonight I wish to say a few words on a direct benefit of the use of this spiritual vision.

Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty; liberty is a benefit bestowed by spiritual vision. To view yourselves and others with your new vision, you are released from the bonds of human judgment. There is liberty in the everyday mortal living when you are at ease to be your true selves; there is also liberty for those that you view with your new eyes. There is a comfort in being with one who possesses not judgment, but love and complete acceptance.

Do you see, when you choose to be spirit led – to obtain spirit vision and view all personalities as children of God, you are freeing yourself to be just that – yourself. Do you see, there is not a better thing to be? I do not say, take selfish concern and disregard your fellows' opinions, no! I say, look to your Father, for it is Him that created and defines you. Your fellows are at liberty to think and feel as they please, yes, but their opinion has no power over you. You are viewing all with your new eyes; you are seeing yourself and others as a part of the whole.

I say, to know that you are loved 'because you are uniquely you' is to experience indescribable joy, for liberty has found you. I say with certainty, that you will not likely experience the Father's freely bestowed liberty without the constant effort to utilize your spiritual vision.

It is said: "Judge not lest you be judged." I say, this is a mortal condition, but nonetheless, true. Your own release over your fellows' actions is to experience untold liberties. I would assure you that all liberty that stems from our Father is to encompass truth, beauty, and goodness – not those 'self-seeking glories' that have darkened your previous history.

Let me make that clear: All personal liberty is because our Father allows it. I would say that your loyalty to Father is evidence that you are quite knowledgeable of your personal liberty. You are trusting of your Father's watchcare, and you are led to love and serve through faith. Are there questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, we welcome Bob Devine from Idaho. We appreciate Bob visiting with us and his work in the Mission to draw people together and to make us all feel a common thread, interlinking each group as all one family.

ABRAHAM: Yes, well said. I also say, welcome to you, Bob; and I would express my gratitude for your persistence in keeping this Mission moving forward. Well done. Perhaps a question?

BOB: I do have questions that are not surfacing yet. I know there are some things I want to ask. So if somebody has one.

CALVIN: In teaching us of the liberty of the Father, is that the same as for us to consciously realize that we are free from what other people think about what we are doing – just freedom? like others' expectations of us just being lifted off us, and knowing we are free to be ourselves; free to move forward in our own path, being with mistakes or not? Is there more to it, deeper than that?

ABRAHAM: Exactly, exactly. Your new-found freedom would allow you to be the person Father intended for you to be. You are allowed to be a child of God and act accordingly to the will of our Father without worry or care about others' opinions. Others' opinions are confining and do not allow you to learn and grow as a child in this universe. Opinionated souls cast definitions, and many may find it so happens to become their destiny. Your new spirit eyes help you see that you are Father's child, and that it is His will that defines you and your path. You are equipped with wings, so to speak. Does this help?

[The second side of the tape was inaudible. This portion of the transcript is from Calvin's hand-written notes.]

CALVIN: Yes. It is as Victoria said earlier when she felt free from the expectations and pressures of her former religion experience, and now has a new enthusiasm to pursue life and truth. (Abraham: Yes, absolutely! And forget not that this brings entirely new levels of joy and worshipful gratitude. Yes.)

JEREMIAH: Could you give us further understanding on spirit vision versus 'spiritual insight' and 'spiritual foresight?' Is there a difference? and if so, what?

ABRAHAM: Spiritual insight is always forthcoming when there has been effort made to observe and reflect with the eyes of our Father. Spiritual insight is as a light at the end of a long dark tunnel. It is a struggle to journey through the tunnel, but the light at the end has made the journey worthwhile. Spiritual foresight is more in the area of your personal Father Fragment. I am to direct you to Him for additional information. Spiritual foresight is real, and yet, it often stands upon an unstable foundation – if I am understanding you correctly. Is this helping?

JEREMIAH: Yes. 'Unstable,' because it has the 'mortal self' included in the spiritual foresight?

ABRAHAM: Correct, and the margin for error is great. Yes, you are in understanding. Another question?

VICTORIA: You talked in your lesson about having spiritual vision that will give us liberty and free us from our self-seeking glory that has darkened our past history. Thank you for bringing that out for us. I now stand naked and yet I try to hold onto those past experiences and want to use them as a way to see my growth. As the old part passes, can I be assured that my darkest fears can now be my joys?

ABRAHAM: Yes. You are correct in your perceptions of growth. Your dark experiences have blessed you in the gift of spiritual vision. Your experience has been a great teacher, and your understanding is correct. You have indeed undergone training for apostleship and are able to assist others who believe they have been run down by life. You are trained to witness that your hardships have been a most successful teacher. I doubt not your abilities to spread a positive energy toward your fellows who appear to be caught up in tragedies. Your relinquishing of self-aggrandizement has emptied your spiritual cup to receive spiritual realities. I say, those that remain a learner, are taught. Those that remain in a mode of learning, are inviting Michael and His vast hosts to help guide and direct – personally and socially. Another question?

BOB: I have taken the summer to travel and learn. I've felt led and have experienced much joy. I am now near my journey's end and have come to the point of what to do next. Where might I go that would be a help to this Teaching Mission? Do I stay here? go to Colorado and then down to California, perhaps? I've felt I should just let my hair down and go with my insight.

ABRAHAM: Understood. I am aware that you know I am unable to give direct guidance. I am also aware that you are filled with a faith/trust that is at times hard to find on a material world. You have been 'free-falling' and I would ask you - have you experienced very much turbulence on the way?

BOB: Yes, mostly inward turbulence, not from people. I've experienced kindness and warmth, even from those who disagree. Turbulence, yes, but only with issues of what I want to do with the rest of my life, and to get through feelings of my past hurts and my longings for companionship - to instead, be in a relationship that is fulfilling.

ABRAHAM: Yes, I would say, your trust in Father to guide you has led you through an inner journey as well as an outer one. I would say, the inner journeys are always fraught with more difficulties than outer journeys. This has assisted you in discoveries of your true self. I would say, your sojourn in the name of this Mission goes beyond your rational thought-understanding. I say with certainty that your connections made are filled with spiritual benefit that will be lasting for quite some time. I cannot say you should forsake your material responsibilities, your social assignments, your interpersonal relationships, and travel in the name of our Teaching Mission. I can perhaps say to you what the Master said to His own apostles, and that is: "Our Father's kingdom is purely spiritual." I will allow you to reflect upon it from there. Are there more questions? [no questions.]

ABRAHAM: I am in gratitude to you, my friends, for your love and acceptance has granted me the liberty to teach you. I do feel at liberty to be my true self without pressure to perform in the hopes that this message may become more potent. I would ask you to be aware of your acceptance of yourself and freedom from judgment, and observe what takes place from there. My love to you. Shalom.

What Is It That Makes One Feel Spiritually Liberated

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome, my friends. I am happy to once again meet with you. I must say, I can certainly feel your loving thoughts towards me. Know that I also return those thoughts.

I ask you, from where did you notice your greatest amount of spiritual liberty? Some find their greatest feelings of freedom come from time spent in solitude. In your solitude, you are furthest from the ego. In your solitude, there is no judgment of your possible mistakes. In your solitude, you find your Father who you know to be understanding of your thoughts, actions, moods, and mistakes.

Yes, in the stillness do you find your Father to be a source of comfort, humor, and spiritual insight. I say, wouldn't this wonderful feeling be of great benefit throughout the day regarding your liberation from human definitions. To walk as if it was only you with your Father; to move freely without fear of personal ridicule; to move freely without doubt of who you really are - this, is true liberty.

This material world does not yet accommodate this idea of one's personal liberation. It is difficult to be yourself as a child of God with the steady stream of onlookers who constantly attempt to manipulate you for their own benefit. This seemingly immature action is, in actuality, quite detrimental to those who strive to be God-like. The harm comes when a person is pulled from their God-self toward a more material animal-self.

It is your challenge to not let others wound you but to become strong with a greater pull towards your real God-self. Do you see, in your liberation you are at times met by individuals who wish to attain your freedom. They know not how to attain it other than to berate or possibly say critical innuendoes that could reduce your level of spiritual energy.

I say, in your education on utilizing your spiritual vision, it is important to view yourselves with a fair amount of love, tolerance, and compassion, yes, but when your fellows tread upon the waters in an attempt to alter your particular course, it is acceptable to profess your dedication to the doing of Father's will, and of your striving toward God-likeness. This dedication must be professed in understandable and clear terms, yes. If there is one single thing that you don't have to tolerate as a mortal, it is those that attempt to confine your spiritual wings and who try to place definitions upon you. No, this does not have to be tolerated.

You are each knowing of your spiritual status in Father's kingdom. It is important that you continue to take advantage of your spiritual liberation and by all means, be that child of God – your true self. If your true self makes acquaintances fall away, I say as the Master said, 'so be it,' and be about the Father's business. Spiritual liberation is not a license to be self-seeking, but it is permission to be your true self. I say, there is not a better thing to be.

We all must learn to abide in peace with one another. Let your spiritual liberation include your attempts to help others liberate themselves from their life burdens; their past regrets; their unforgiven and unforgettable experiences. Attempt to minister to your fellows with the knowledge that their true self is, in reality, the most God-like self that they can be. Let not the lures of self-seeking glorification block you from the wonderful liberty that Father has bestowed upon you and upon your fellows, equally.

I would ask you to look within and discover who you are in relation to the Father and his vast universe. Who are you when you think of yourself as being the closest child of God that you can be? What would you note that liberty does regarding your spiritual vision; your capacity for worship; and your level of joy. A few questions?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I hardly know how to explain this, but you asked to begin with if we noticed anything as far as our spiritual freedom was concerned, or any happening. I don't know how to put this into words, but with Christ Michael being our Creator Father – yet, he is also our Brother. This was what I was thinking about and concentrating on. I have known this within my mind, and I thought was in my heart and within my soul, but yes, He is also, literally, our Brother. This whole last week this realization came over me; I can't describe it, but I felt like 'Oh wow is He ever our Brother!' I could sit down right here and feel so comfortable and talk to Him just the same as I could Joshua or Walt, my other brothers, or a mortal sister – any of them. I felt like I could just feel that comfort zone, and I don't know how to explain it any further than that. It was wonderful, and it's still wonderful.

ABRAHAM: Understood. Yes, I too experience that closeness with Michael. And I would say, your spiritual vision allows you to converse with Michael on a more personal level. Not just creature to Creator; not as a lowly mortal just beginning to ascend that spiritual ladder – but relate to Michael as a personality, which understanding can surpass all previous expectations. To be flexible within your belief system enables you to experience Michael – personality to personality. Yes, your description is very familiar. Doubt not that this is a real experience and is progress concerning your spiritual climb. Does this help?

RACHEL: It certainly does, and I thank you. You are certainly a blessing Father Abraham. (Abraham: As are you. Thank you. Another question?)

WILLEENA: Abraham, I had an experience recently that I would like to ask for verification in terms of having heard an actual voice. It was a male voice – particularly tuning into Melchizedek was my sense. I would like to ask if I was actually hearing from Machiventa. And if so, was I hearing accurately?

ABRAHAM: One moment. I am aware that this was indeed Machiventa in an effort to further your training as an apostle and minister to those whom you need to be a little more assertive with. Understanding, yes; compassionate, yes – but at times the Melchizedeks will teach on putting spiritual ideas into action. Does this help?

WILLEENA: Yes. I was being welcomed into training, and so now I wonder, are we proceeding on the planet with regard to the Melchizedek's coming?

ABRAHAM: I am under instruction to limit any discussion on Melchizedek material manifestations. Perhaps a more specific question, Willeena?

WILLEENA: I suppose a more specific question is regarding this 'training;' obviously this is underway in all of our lives. There is something about just feeling a calling, that is exhilarating. I liked the communication. I would like more of it. I have no other questions.

ABRAHAM: Understood. Yes, all training is proceeding according to plan; and I would say, the Melchizedek training schools are fully operational and functioning according to our Creator's plan. Another question?

CALVIN: I don't know how to put this one. It is kind of like you were saying, that the students in this Teaching Mission should realize that 'yes we are apostles in training,' and to stand up with that. I don't believe that saying such is ego-based at all, but one just can't come out and say to a fellow brother – in this day anyhow: "Hey, I am an apostle" – at least in this part of the world (Utah). Here, they believe the apostles are a very venerated chosen few, and that there are only twelve of them. I gather what you are saying is that it is in the doing of our daily actions that we can 'display' that attitude of our apostleship, not voice it?

ABRAHAM: Yes. At times when you are attempting to operate your God-self you are met with those who are not understanding of your commitment, and could quite possibly be trying to deter you from your true self. At these times, I am saying that your spiritual liberation allows you to carry on with your divine nature as apostles of Christ, regardless. I do not say this to be so literal; but rather, that you perhaps take upon the attitude of the Master, who moved with total confidence in who He was, and taught his apostles to do likewise. Many of His apparently harsh sayings were only a confession of His faith and dedication.

CALVIN: Yes, it brings to point a circumstance during the week where I said something that came across harsh to the one it was directed to; and even more harshly-sounding to the one standing by listening who said to me: "Wow, that was overly harsh how you said that." I kind of took his advice as good; but I thought of what you just said here, that many times the Master said some things that were harsh. So I learned from that lesson. I think he was right. I see what you are saying now.

ABRAHAM: Yes, the Master did not condemn His fellows so much as He was attempting to live by example. Jesus did much to rally the energies of His apostles to go forth and proclaim His teachings with wisdom. Yes. Another question?

If there are no more questions, I should like to take my leave to prepare for the upcoming celebration of our Brother/Father, Michael's mortal birth. I would leave you my love. Until next week, shalom.

Your Hour Has Come

Abraham, WOODS CROSS & POCATELLO GROUPS 08-25-1996

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I am in gratitude for your acceptance and cooperation to promote the growth of friendship between we, Teachers - and you, our students. We thank you. I wish to express my gratitude to my co-workers in the spirit; they have indeed assisted me in my faith and dedication. I am made glad by not only our positive working relationship, but I am always deeply touched by my fellow's personal concern for me. As well, they are certain of my continued love and service for them.

You, my friends in this Teaching Mission, are showing this day to also be dedicated to one another and to love without the promise of reward or compensation. You have gathered for the good of one another and for the upliftment of the whole of Michael's universe of Nebadon.

Our Mission is likened to the life of Jesus. Michael was born a human infant of the Earthly realm just as any other infant before and after Him. As He grew, He learned - and was educated socially, intellectually and spiritually. When 'His hour had come,' He set forth to share the good news of the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of man.

New Zealand was the birth of our Teaching Mission. Woods Cross was the period of adolescence - time to learn and grow; time to clear the fog of expectations. Our Mission has grown. Your hour has come. It is time to set forth and share the good news - 'Our Universe Father is a kind and loving Father, and the citizens of this world are indeed, His children.'

You who have had Mission participation, have indeed faced many struggles. And as Daniel spoke of today, you have retained your faith; you have not laid down before your struggles; you have maintained your unshakable stance and have abided in the Master's word. The apostles of long ago had once sat forlorn due to the removal of their Master - the one loving guiding light that graced their lives. During this time of doubt, confusion and despair, the memory of the Master, His life and His example in how He lived it courageously, seemed to be lost to them now.

I am aware this is a reality in which some will face, but I say, even upon the Master's resurrection, the apostles were still within the darkness of despair. But a worker for the Kingdom stood out declaring to the forlorn apostles; one, David Zebedee, said, "The Master said He would rise, and I believe Him." David was not a close personal apostle of the Master, yet, he showed his unwavering faith and dedication to come forth and bravely proclaim, "The Master said He would rise and I believe Him."

You my friends, are like this David. You have not sat in despair asking, "Where is our Master? Where is our proof?" You have stood unwavering proclaiming: The Correcting Time has begun and I shall serve according to the plan of my Brother/Father, Michael.

I say with certainty, your group inter-association has assisted you in your unwavering stance to go forth with this Mission calling. Your accepting attitude of one another is rare in this day of seemingly troubled times. Your dedication to the doing of Father's will is apparent when you are willing to go through the waters of adversity with your fellows. Your persistent effort to utilize your spiritual vision to view one another and your world, is a step further toward Light and Life.

I say, it is with great love that you are indeed making a difference on this world of Michael's birth - wherein He experienced mortality to gain His sovereignty over Nebadon.

I say, we are indeed all humbled to be in the presence of our Creator/Brother/Father. We would ask, "make us increasingly like You." I would extend my hand to each of you, my fellow students, co-workers and friends, in love and appreciation. Shalom.

Michael Is Our Source of Truth | The Light In Those Moments Of Darkness

I am ABRAHAM. Thank you for allowing me to be a part of your morontial education; impressive, yes, indeed. Your honest and open attitudes are almost like a discovery of a lost treasure.

Yes, it is entirely permissible to speak honestly without fear of rejection, chastisement, or ridicule; this is indeed a focal point of our Mission. You see not the millions of created personalities attempting to liberate themselves from the fetters of judgment. You see not the millions of inhabited worlds putting forth their contribution towards the growth of the Supreme Being. Yes I say, this group is small indeed, but a start it is towards eternal realities. I say this communication between you is a great step towards acquiring those beautiful qualities that the Master Himself held during His sojourn in the flesh.

Regardless of personal interpretations of the day of the celebrated Creator, I say to label it successful would be an understatement. Yes, you are unknowing of the many roots that took hold in the soil of faith. I say, this is crucial to the growth of our Mission.

Our Mission continues slowly, yes, but with unknown strength. This Mission, Michael's Mission, could not now at this point ever be halted or even slowed in any way. Your exhibition of courage to speak forthrightly about your inner personal feelings shows that indeed, your hour has come.

Spirituality is not a sideline hobby or for entertainment. Spirituality is real, eternal – and now, necessary. Do you see, this transformation has evolved from a purely material self-seeking fulfillment to an eternal and sincere care for the whole – the seen as well as the unseen? These spiritual realities are not to be thrown about verbally, but lived in honest effort and devotion to those that created you.

Michael is indeed honored on Urantia, yes, but I declare that Michael is also honored from the far-reaches of Nebadon. Do you see your part, your connection to Michael and His vast universe – with His innumerable legions of helpers? I say, think not that you (Urantia) hang alone in this universe, set apart, no. You belong to a larger family. I can say, not one sphere amounts to any more than another in the eyes of our Creator/Brother/Father; just as you, individually, are looked upon as all equally valued children.

I say, your discussion this evening has brought your morontial thoughts out into an authentic usable reality. My friends, this is what we are waiting for – honest, forthright communication tempered with love, consideration, and mutual respect. We wait for this on the personal level, group level, planetary, and universal level. Do you see, this contributes to the growth of the universe as a whole. It is entirely permissible to be at ease to be yourselves.

I say, give not authority to man. Give it to the source of all knowledge. Allow freedom for others, for yourselves, to truly believe that you are not beings full of unchangeable faults, but that you are explorers within a vast universe. Be not a stumbling block upon another's path, but an assistant to those that are weary. I say, you can be 'the good assistant' by relying upon your spiritual vision, see with your Father's eyes, love with your Father's understanding.

Fear not the right and wrong of it all – for I say, the Source of all truth blows across your land as an unseen wind that affects the environment; and yet, you are uncertain from which direction He comes. Michael is a great light in those moments of darkness. I say, to really know and experience His person is to become alive with new energy, new understanding, new faith, and new joy.

Michael desires to know His spirit-children, yes, but He shall not force you to know Him. He does not tempt you with rewards. He makes no promises to you greater than to love you without judgment; knowing you thoroughly, He loves you. I am certain that your planet, at some time soon, will be consciously, collectively and openly re-introduced to our universe as the Sovereign's planet of His mortal inhabitation; and I do say, this will definitely be noteworthy.

I wish to also give you my love and commitment to our friendship. I express to you, my dedication. Know that I do not hold the universe secrets, but I can assist you in searching for them. I leave you my love. Until next week, shalom.

Courage And Liberty In Recognizing Your True Self

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you all this evening. It is my great pleasure to meet with you. I do endeavor to reach each one of you, personally, during the week. I am not a personal Teacher to anyone; I am to assist in the education of the reserve corps members; and as such, I assist many. I find it my great joy to know you each on a most personal level, and help when I can in your education.

Yes, I have come to know you each; and I say, we have a real and growth-promoting friendship. Our friendship is not on surface levels, no, we know each other beyond that and feel at ease to be our true God-like selves. Your use of spirit vision has enabled me to be forthright and honest without injury to our friendship. You have made it clear that your choice to be Spirit-led is first, is primary. I do feel more at ease to speak without worry over pushing you away due to feelings of intimidation.

Yes, you know me, my friends, and accept me as myself; and I say that makes for excellent teaching grounds. I also know you, and I perceive you with my spiritual vision. I see that you are dedicated and have surpassed that desire for spectacular predictions and happenings. I see you as serious students – students who would not accept anything less than truth.

Perceiving our Mission with the Father's eyes is allowing yourselves to be within the will of Father and the word of Michael – anything less is not a reality for you. You are learning that using the eyes of the Spirit brings forth liberties that were not easily perceived before. Your new-found liberty has led you on an internal journey to rediscover your God-self, your true self, your very soul – a soul that works toward higher spiritual realities, hand in hand with the actual Fragment of our Universal Father.

I say, the journey to the soul can be filled with turmoil, and at times you witness many painful wounds that you feel have manifested into eternal scars. I say, these scars are your badge of mortal living; these scars are valuable and to be viewed as lessons in mortal experience. The journey to the soul – to the knowing of your true God-self – is one of seeming tedious repetition; but it is known that the older one is when they begin their journey toward the discovery of their true God-like selves, the more debris there is to uncover, and therefore, then more repetition is needed.

With the use of your spiritual vision, you have found Father's liberty, yes, and you feel wrapped in a cloak of courage. This courage, in combination with liberty, has armed you with the tools needed to excavate the debris from the true self – the soul. This is not difficult; this is mortal technique regarding use of spiritual vision – to discover what you are and, what you are becoming.

Yes, Father has made it known to His children that they are loved and valued ‘for their very existence’ – not for things they have done in error, or things done toward accomplishments. I say, Father's freely bestowed liberty has enabled you to search within without fear or regret. You are enabled to look within that part of you that combines logic with love. As you learn of your true self through your spirit vision, you are also feeling that combination of courage and liberty to go forth and be that person – that true self.

I say, I feel at liberty to be my true self with you. I am in understanding that you are attempting to view me with your spiritual eyes, and I worry not about offending you. You are my friends and associates. I would always accept you without doubt of your sincerity of our dedication to one another and to this Mission.

This week I would ask that you take note of those moments of recognizing your true selves. Note the feelings of freedom and courage to stand in unwavering dedication to fulfill your eternal destiny. Note the feelings of liberty, and pause to consider that ‘where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.’ Have you questions?

CALVIN: This liberty you have been talking to us about, I feel it is a bigger issue with us than what I am perceiving so far, but I am getting a glimpse of it with my daily associations. For instance, as I am readying to come to the meeting someone in my household says: "Oh gee, you are going there again? I thought we could go do something as a family." I don't have to feel guilty that I am pursuing what I feel is very important. I cannot worry if they are going to like it or not, for I know it is the correct thing to do – and, yes, to still make time to be helpful to them. It's probably a bigger picture than that, but before your teachings I would have felt more guilty about not spending enough time with them, and for choosing to come here instead. I noticed that it didn't bother me like it would have before. Is that just the start of this liberty thing?

ABRAHAM: Yes, understood. To those that accompany you through this mortal life that are not involved in searching for spiritual realities within the day-to-day mortal living, they are not perceiving these spiritual realities to be congruent with what they see before their eyes. I would say, your being dedicated to a force that is unseen also leaves you to question: “Yes, what is more important – my fellows that stand before me? or my Father whom I cannot see.” The guilt is beginning to be overridden by the use of your spiritual vision. The unseen realities you perceive with your new eyes are becoming more real and more easily understood. You have discovered the value of 'seeking first the kingdom,' yes, and it is not in error to profess this to your family. Spirituality is absolutely real for you, yes, and you are dedicated to pursuing it. Your fellows will understand in time, as they witness your devotion to spiritual realities. You are at liberty to be your true God-like self without worry. This is a part of Father's freely bestowed liberty, yes. Another question?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, now I understand why I had so much more debris to uncover than the rest of this group has, because I am that much older. Thank heavens the Father has allowed me some extra time. I hope I can wade through all of it.

ABRAHAM: Understood. I would say without a doubt that you have made that journey to your true self long ago and are now more at ease to be that true self. I would also say, your age is a plus. Another question?

JAMES: Abraham, I understand to some extent the idea of 'political liberty' because we enjoy more of it here in the United States than a lot of people in the rest of the world do. I am not clear on what is meant when we talk about spiritual liberty. Could you expand on that a little – define it as you are using the term?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. When the Master sojourned in the flesh, He came up against many who would have Him disregard His inner spiritual feelings, longings, and understandings. As the Master matured and begun to understand His Father in heaven He endeavored to live within the will of Father – and therefore, gaining the use of His spiritual vision. With the use of spiritual vision, you are seeing through the eyes of Father, and having Father help you to understand what He understands. The Master – in perfecting His human self, discovering His divine self and in choosing the will of Father – was freely given that liberty to search for spiritual realities and, to live a spiritual life without being affected by outside judgments or ridicule. Many disturbing things fell upon the Master; and yet He walked without worry, for He carried forth with the liberty of Father to be His divine self. Spiritual liberty is freedom to carry forth with your divine education without others putting stumbling blocks before you. Spiritual liberty is not a license to carry on in a selfish manner, no, but spiritual liberty is permission to be your God-like self. The world is changing, and it is through our association that the masses will be reached. Spiritual realities will become unextraordinary, quite natural and uneventful. Spiritual realities will appear as if they had always been. Is this helping? (James: Yes. Thank you, Abraham.) Abraham: Certainly. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, I get a bigger picture now of this spiritual reality. This past Sunday, I listened to a televised BYU devotional; and there are masses of people, as we all know, who listen to their church leaders, intently. The speaker said to the group: "If someone in the neighborhood had some higher concepts that they wanted to share, new revelations of higher insight, and invited you over (as he put the question to the group), should you go?" And then they were told by this speaker: "Absolutely not! unless your bishop says it is okay to go!" He even said, "Do not dare step one foot in that meeting!" Now to me, this is almost like cutting them off from any type of spiritual liberty they might have, to pursue Father and His Spirit realities. I thought, how drastic! And here you are teaching us to realize that we do have the spiritual liberty to open our spirit-vision eyes, and not worry about what a bishop or a leader or a neighbor thinks. That we can pursue truth without worry; and that even though we may misconceive here and there, and even with our human errors, yet as long as our hearts are in line for searching truth, those errors will be cleared.

ABRAHAM: Wonderful perception. It is the spiritual leaders that should move people to look within for understanding. The planetary awakening is occurring, and no amount of fear-promotion will carry enough momentum to stop any of Michael's good works. You are correct in your understanding.

With that. I wish to express my love and gratitude to you each. I will meet with you throughout the week for any questions you might have. Until next week, shalom.

Our Hour Has Come To Go Beyond Verbal Promises, To The Actual Doing
Abraham & Michael, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-09-1996

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I am happy to meet with you again. I am excited about the personal efforts you have made toward attaining your spiritual liberty. You have proven to be genuine morontial candidates. You are becoming more like you have desired. I see you, my friends, striving to know Father and be like Him. Think not that your efforts are unnoticed and for nothing. Know that you are carefully guided and that it is mandatory that true effort be made to attain progressive spiritual levels.

The spiritual path is not a river in which you float idly taking in the scenery, no. The spiritual path is more like a hiking trail in which you must overcome obstacles to move further; debris must be removed and all your attention must be focused on the next step. When focus has been interrupted there can occur a slight stumbling, but you know well that it doesn't take much to dust yourself off and proceed.

I say, your presence here weekly is indeed a good indicator that effort is being put forth to progress toward higher spiritual realities. Your efforts to study the written word are beneficial in your quest for spiritual knowledge. Your efforts made toward a fellow mortal, to assist them in times of darkness, is evidence that you have vowed to know Father and become like Him. Your weekly ministry to one another is again evidence that your concern for each other goes beyond words.

I say, your presence here says that you are a searching child upon the path to perfection. I cannot promise all of the answers; but I can tell you with confidence that I do intend to go through the shrubbery of uncertainty that lies along this spiritual trail, with you. I can say, it is your will that brings you here this evening. It is your will that speaks to Father saying: "I am ready to know what you would have me know and be who you would have me be." Yes, it is your will that allows me to speak so that I may at this time introduce to you the Master:

I am here, Michael, your Friend, your Brother/Father. I bring a message of good news. I seek to declare my joy for you. I do not, have not, and never will cry tears of pity for this world. I view you with my Father's eyes and I must say, you are truly beautiful.

Long ago when I walked in your same form, I also put forth the effort to understand our Father's universe and my place in it. I met with great difficulties, yes, but I say with certainty that each difficulty was transformed into a positive spiritual experience. This transformation was in part due to my use of spiritual vision. I desired to put forth effort in the alignment of my will with my Fathers`.

You, my children who have put forth that effort to understand Father's universe and your position in it, have been greatly tested. This testing comes not as punishment but as training to know our Father and be like Him. This testing has been your greatest blessing, and I know full well that you contain the strength to endure much more.

I have no doubt that your training has led you to put down the habits of fear, anger, jealousy, pride, and anxiety - to take up the tools of the Spirit: truth, beauty, goodness, tolerance, forbearance, and love. I have called you; and you have responded by laying down those binding habits of your mortal-like selves and picking up the tools of your divine selves.

Yes, your hour has come to go beyond verbal promises, to the actual doing of spiritual realities. I would ask that you join me in the upholding of those who feel plagued with heavy hearts. I would seek to recruit you to assist me in assisting those whose flame barely flickers the light of Truth. I would ask you to know me, to go with me on a quest to uplift those who appear to be downtrodden with mortal heartache. Assist me in bringing the light of Truth and joy of our good news to them.

I seek not to cure the ills of this world; I seek to empower each of the world's inhabitants to discover the cure of their own ills. I say to you, that our Mission is not a cross to bear. Our Mission is light, humorous and joyful. I would call you to accept a position with me on my staff - to uphold those in despair and reveal to them that the light of truth burns within them. Walk with the surety that I have already gone before you. Farewell for now. Carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. I would express our gratitude to you, Michael, on behalf of my students and my staff. Know that our pledge to you and our Mission goes beyond a simple verbal promise; it goes to the core of our reason - for searching and finding our Father in all that we do.

I would express to you, my students, my unwavering love and dedication to you each. I am in humble gratitude to serve and to know that Michael serves also with me. I would ask you to discuss Michael's proposal, and next week I would take questions. Love and peace go with you. Until next week, shalom.

Allowing Father Expression Through Us Helps Father Reach His Children

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you each. It is always my great privilege to act as an assistant towards your higher spiritual learning. I am happy to be witness to your discussions on spiritual meanings and values. It is always my great joy to watch your ideas blossom. You are knowing that the spiritual path is not a path of ease; no, it is a path of a tremendous amount of interaction with the Father Fragment; it is a path of much stumbling, dusting off and moving forward.

Michael, our Universe Father, can attest to these facts of realities in human form. As Jesus of Nazareth, while human and divine, He learned the value of time spent with His Father in heaven. He chose to reside in the will of Father and was thereby enabled to see His fellows with spirit vision. These steps in mortal living assisted Michael in further knowledge of His divine self – who He truly was.

As you traverse your spiritual path, you are also learning of your divine self. You have chosen to be spirit led, attain spirit vision, and to utilize your spiritual liberty in conjunction with courage. You have learned the importance of using logic with love. To gain a balance toward learning of your divine self, I have asked you to be that person that our Father had created; be that truly unique soul that was destined for eternal survival.

You, my friends, are taking yet another advancement towards that God-like self. You are indeed learning what it means to live as a son or daughter of the Most High. Is this not wonderful? Is this not cause to rejoice? I say, the steps toward understanding 'your real self in conjunction with your Father Fragment' is certainly cause to be glad. This is where your real work begins.

Likened to the Master's sojourn, He spent much time in education about His fellows – putting forth effort to understand them and how to serve them. I say, it was in His devotion to serving that helped Him to understand more of His divine self. The Master moved about freely, allowing His Father within to have expression. The Master gave His Father room to shine forth a loving light that affected many people, deeply. Yes, Jesus, while human and divine, allowed His Father to shine forth those pearls of wisdom and light to those that He, the Master, served.

I would say, you also are learning to allow your Father to shine forth in whatever form He may choose. Whether it be consoling a friend, assisting an elder, providing guidance to a child – whatever it may be, you are allowing for Thought Adjuster expression. I say, this is very much God-like.

Those who maintain an open attitude, willing to serve in any capacity, will indeed make room for Father to express His love in an obvious manner. Yes, the Master allowed the Father to minister to His children through Him, just as you are also learning this technique of accepting your Father to also serve through you. I say, in the very act of service, you are learning volumes of spiritual knowledge. In allowing for Adjuster-expression, you are running freely with the spirit of He that created you.

I would ask you – what was your answer to Michael's proposal last week? What have you experienced throughout this week? I can say with certainty that there were indeed examples of what Michael would request of your efforts. I ask: Was this difficult and overwhelming? Did you note the moments of joy and wonder that came from living in the Spirit and allowing Father's expression through you? Have you questions?

ROLAND: Abraham, it seems to me like what you asked us to do is to maybe go around the room and tell about what our experiences were; or, how we have viewed Michael's request that our hour has come. I would ask if that would be appropriate that we might go around, just expressing, each one of us, of how the week was; that is, if this is okay with our group members? [The group affirms.] (Abraham: Yes, that is acceptable.)

ROLAND: Then I'll begin. This week I have come across people who appear to be ready to hear. It seems like my tuning into their needs is becoming a little bit greater. I feel like I am evolving into more and more my time being spent as an apostle or emissary of Michael. I just received a transcript of my experience in 1992 where I was called to go to this convention where I met Don and Willow Gardner. In the early part of '92 I had brought transcripts, of which they took back to Tulsa, and which began the Tulsa Teaching Mission movement. So yes, I sense that my hour is coming, or has come, and that it comes in degrees. I'd like to get some feedback about that. It sounded as though I should 'quit listening and actually do something' - but it seems like we've all been kind of progressing into doing things. Is that as you see it? It seems like we have answered a lot of calls.

ABRAHAM: Yes, I understand. There have been many hours of training and education to bring us to this point in the Correcting Time. And now this type of training requires hands-on experience to have the desired impact. You could view your previous experiences as part service and part training, yes. It is excellent to move forward with courage and to take an assertive approach towards your fellows, as long as you make allowance or time to listen to your inner Guide. I say, to ensure that the accuracy of your spiritual message could not be jeopardized, it is most important to always approach your fellows with an attitude of 'may Father's will be done.' It is true, your education up to this point has allowed you to enable Father to shine His light of truth through you. Yes, this discovery of your true soul, in conjunction with the Father Fragment, is what lets us proclaim that our hour has come. Is this more clear?

ROLAND: Yes, that helps tremendously. A follow-up question for me: I truly believe that Michael is sovereign of this Universe and I believe fully that He has called me to be of service, and that my hour has come, yes. My question is - do I continue with the material-building process of earning a living so that I am supportive of myself? or do I sell all I have, give it to the poor, and walk the Earth as the apostles did?

ABRAHAM: It is entirely of your choosing. It is true that your mission is right where you are. It is not necessary to go far to minister and serve your fellows, no; you can see that much work is needed right within your community. It would be not necessary in this day to liquidate your assets to serve in Michael's Mission - but yes, this choice is strictly yours. Does this help? (Roland: Yes. Thank you very much.) Abraham: You're welcome.

ANTHONY: I have been trying to be helpful throughout my day, and to be more open with the people at work especially. But I guess where I spend most of my time trying to serve the most is with my girlfriend and her family. I guess my question revolves around - is my helping them, too much help? So much so, that I am not letting them do enough for themselves; and instead, I am being taken advantage of? Is this a good place for me to be serving?

ABRAHAM: Do you feel that those who you serve are growing spiritually? (Anthony: Not so much 'outwardly,' no! but I think that it might be helping their characters to be a little better.)

ABRAHAM: To assist overmuch is to stifle one's own desire to learn and grow. To help too much may quite possibly put you in a position that you desire to be needed, a position where you feel you are indispensable. It may be your desire to hold this position, and yet squelch their efforts toward true spiritual characteristics. On the other hand, your willingness and desire to serve is touching and can go so much further than you can perceive. Yes, your mission is where you are. Your mission is wherever you go. If it is your will to allow Adjuster-expression, then I would say, this is a clean intention. But if it is your desire to hold an irreplaceable and indispensable position, then I would rethink your intention. Know that you are indeed a son that has endured much testing, and you are qualified to go forth and share the light of truth wherever that may be. Is this helping? (Anthony: Yes. Thank you.)

CALVIN: Abraham, I know from my experience presenting myself before my fellows, that this has changed for me a lot because, unlike before in my earlier years, I do now view myself as a child of God and also as a helper in this Mission. Therefore, I feel I need to watch my actions more these days than I used to. I don't want the old careless me to get in the way of what Michael Himself would want in me to proceed with His work. I know there is still a lot of that old 'human me' in there. And I know I have no fear of presenting my understanding of things to people, but sometimes doing so comes across overly harsh, perhaps. I wonder if that is good for a purpose - that I present in a blunt and sometimes harsh manner? or if I need to be a little more refined in presenting when those opportunities to present my truth seem to arise? Then I have one further little thing that maybe I want to ask you. In answer to your question of 'How have I accepted Michael's challenge?' I mean I wouldn't think it means to just pick up and take off on a campaign, but to be that example of change and promoter of change in the environment that I exist in. I believe I'd have the faith that Father's watchcare would be there wherever I'd go, yes, but I see higher wisdom in what you are saying, 'to just stay put, there is plenty of work here right around us in our daily work and living.' That is very exciting. I see a lot of opportunity right here, to further help.

ABRAHAM: Yes, that is correct. There is much change that has happened since the times of the Master. The Master and His apostles were needed to travel about here and there to reach as many as possible to found the Christian religion. But I say, this is not necessary these days for mortals to travel about. That is the vocation of we, Teaching Mission staff; the Teachers may travel about and reach as many mortal contacts as they are able. In answer to your first question: It will always appear that your human self will overshadow your divine self. It may appear at times that you are not advancing spiritually, yes. Yet I say, this is the attitude of one who is progressing at a balanced speed and aware of the inner self-seeking agendas that may be looking to be fulfilled. You are quite healthy in your outlook of your spiritual progression and are learning to forgo any credit towards the advancement of this world into Light and Life. You are seeing this cause goes beyond a country, beyond a world, beyond a solar system, and on to the Supreme Being. Does this help?

CALVIN: Yes, it does. When you speak about our 'inner agendas coming out,' I have always been a little bit confused about that, you know, thinking I might have some secret agenda that's an inaccurate understanding and I keep thinking it will be exposed and 'iron out' revealing the correct balance of what my true tasks from Michael or from Father are. Are you saying there are hidden agendas, yes, but also is there that inner drive from our divine Parents that is instilled in us for a good reason – and for us to use caution, balance, and to identify what these are?

ABRAHAM: Yes, for at times there are hidden agendas which are perhaps a short-sighted viewpoint, and your exercising your spiritual vision allows for you to recognize this and re-focus towards the higher spiritual goal. It is not to worry for. Another question?

ELLEN: I really don't know what to ask. I have had a couple bad weeks which I know are probably lessons for my growth and so they have not yet unfolded to me. So I have no idea what to even ask. (Roland: About 'your hour has come.') Ellen: If that is true this has confused me even more.

ABRAHAM: Understood, and this is perfectly acceptable. Spiritual meanings and values come with time and experience. You are learning to accept your status and test your boundaries. At times, Father's training is not obvious and is even confusing, but we find once we have completed an assignment, we are another step upon the ladder of spiritual character. I do say, there is indeed a spiritual fine-tuning that is occurring, and not to cause you worry. You are skilled in allowing for Father to express Himself through you, yes; and yet there are times when old walls of self-preservation return. Father is seeing to your needs and we are in understanding of your faith and trust. Does this help? (Ellen: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You are welcome.

RACHEL: Well, Father Abraham, I certainly accept Christ Michael's request. I promise to the doing of the spiritual realities to the best of my abilities. I promise to help all of those that I come in contact with that are downhearted. But other than that, my brain is on furlough.

ABRAHAM: Your inner feelings and commitments are known and it is so wonderful to meet with one who is filled with such dedication and courage to proceed with Michael's request. Yes. It is known that you are willing to be of service, and it is greatly appreciated. I must say, your service will indeed be required – both in this life and in the worlds to come, and I thank you. (Rachel: Thank you, Father Abraham.) Abraham: You are welcome.

ROLAND: One of the questions that the group developed while we were discussing last week's transmission was that in the transmission Michael says, "I do not, and have not, and never will, cry tears of pity for this world." Yet in our small minds, I sense that when Michael was on the Mount overlooking Jerusalem He spoke the words: "Oh ye of Jerusalem, had you only listened to me I would have gathered you under my wings as a hen gathers her chicks." That is paraphrased. Then He wept in that instance. It would seem that would be 'tears of pity' for our ancestors in Jerusalem. And the other time was when He wept because His family did not come to see Him off on a trip, I believe it was. Both those instances are noted in the Urantia Book – the ones that I know of. In addition, there was once wherein I got a vision of Michael asking the Father if it is His will to allow Lucifer to choose to extinguish himself, or if there was another way. Then the Father responded to Him that it is His (Lucifer's) choice, and Jesus knew the choice was 'extinguishing,' and Michael wept in that situation as well. Give us your wisdom on how we clarify these apparent 'tears of pity' experiences where His tears are in contradiction. Or, is this error of the transmission. Can you help me with that?

ABRAHAM: Understood. On the Mount of Olives, Jesus, being overcome by profound sorrow and frustration, was brought to His emotional knees. In His human viewpoint, it appeared to Him that His Mission on Earth was too great for Him to achieve alone. And yet I would say His divine side understood that His mortal road was long and to be filled with great challenges. Jesus' tears were tears of sorrow, yes, but I would not attempt to say they were tears of feeling 'sorry for' or tears of hopelessness – 'tears of pity,' no. In Michael's message, He does not take on the attitude that many mortals hold to, that this world is hopeless and incapable of change. Michael's viewpoint is that since His sojourn on Urantia, the world has evolved beautifully, naturally, as it should have, and He is filled with joy. He views this world in a more 'light' than 'darkness' viewpoint. I could attempt to speak more on behalf of Michael, but I am not fully qualified. Time and time again in the life of Jesus He wept many times, as do many mortals. It is unknown to us the cause of why He wept when walking with Mary and Martha towards the tomb of Lazarus. Jesus knew full well that Lazarus would rise and yet, even the angels are puzzled as to why the Master wept; but we know these were not 'tears of pity.' Does this help?

ROLAND: Yes, it does. I am getting, then, that deep sorrow does not have to be piteous to the people who are apparently creating some of the sorrow; that is what it 'had' seemed to me. So what I am getting here is that in the sorrow, He wept for the object of that sorrow as opposed to pitying it. I understand the distinction now, yes. With our seeing the world with all its trials and tribulations, it is possibly an even greater experience for us to get through the challenges. So curing the individual is more important than curing the world; and in the curing of the individual, it cures the world. (Abraham: Yes, understood. I would ask – just one more question?)

ROLAND: Can I follow up on a healing question? In my mind, the Master said to us, said to the apostles of old: "These things you see me do, shall you do; and you shall do even greater things than these." I take it that He was referring to the things that He had done in the world. And in that retrospect – of what the Urantia Book gives us about the detail of His life, including everyone that He healed, and He even once healed scores of people in one fell swoop, according to their faith – in that retrospect He always said: "Your faith has made you whole." It seems to me like if we are modern day apostles we should have, or we would develop, the faith and the power that is dwelling within us to create wholeness in people who have faith. Do I err in my assumptions?

ABRAHAM: No. You are correct to a point. It is necessary to have such faith, yes, but also put effort forth toward the healing of the body, anxiety of mind, and strain to the soul. These connections will eventually lead toward a wholeness that cannot be deteriorated by any forms of illness. It is wise to begin from the starting point of allowing Father to express Himself through you in your life and in the lives of others.

I would give you my peace and bid you farewell. Until next week, shalom.

Father Opens Doors To Our Greatest Lessons, Through Experience, Wherein We Allow Father Expression

I am ABRAHAM. I am happy you are with me this evening. It is always exciting and joyful to meet with you. It is not so important the number in attendance; what matters most is how you use these spiritual lessons. It is a blessing to know and work with each of you.

Do you find it simple to step aside and allow for Father to express Himself through you? Do you find it may be a bit of a struggle to release your desired outcome, to allow for Father to perform His work through you? It is perhaps like exercising - you must first desire to be spirit led, which leads to spirit vision, which upstages you a level to spiritual liberty, allowing you to be your true self.

This exercise of spirit and mind will certainly succeed in this adventure in the flesh should you make it a regular practice. I say this not to be critical of yourself, no, it is only a matter of exercising your newly attained spiritual muscles rather than revert to old patterns.

Stepping aside to allow Father's expression to flow through you takes some practice, yes. You see times when the spirit appears to be with you and you are moving through daily toil rather efficiently, then there appear to be times of resistance and struggle. I say, the spirit is always present with you; you are learning what may perchance block any light of truth, and then how to navigate through to more clarity and how to even avoid stumbling blocks.

Yes, times of anxiety may appear to hamper your efforts to move aside and allow for Father to work. Moments of despair can also work against you in finding what Father needs for you to know. Anger practically severs the presence of the spirit altogether. Fear is still yet another poison to that unique being that is truly you. And last, envy; envy is so strong at times it would appear that it could make one regress spiritually.

I say, all of these stumbling blocks are detrimental in allowing Adjuster expression. It is inevitable and valuable that you will gain knowledge regarding these spirit poisons; but I say, as you move toward your divine selves you'll learn just as the Master learned - there are choices to be made; there are priorities to reach. The Master's choice was always Adjuster expression. His choice was always Father's will. His choice was to view this mortal life with His Father's eyes.

I say, you are not lowly animals incapable of growth, no. You are beings - human and divine - on an eternal quest for spiritual meanings and values. Do you see? You are not slave to your emotions. You are not slave to even your minds. You are not bound to your patterns. You most certainly have choices, yes; and if it is your true desire to live in and of the spirit, then it is so.

As you begin to truly walk with the knowledge that you are a child of God, you begin a long journey down a long corridor with many doors. As you set out upon your journey you see these doors as your choices. There are many doors to open, yes; and yet, Father has already opened much of the doors that you need to go through. Your choices are to choose and pick your own doors, or to be led and live by the spirit and choose those doors Father has opened for you.

Anxiety, despair, anger, fear, envy – these are a part of the mortal experience, yes. You will experience them, but these poisons of the spirit will not control you. I say your desire to step aside and allow Father to work freely through you is to maintain control and balance over those spirit poisons.

You are intelligent beings wholly capable of living in and of the Spirit – the First Source and Center. Do you understand your liberty within this lesson? the freedom to know God and be like Him? Allowing for Father to express Himself through you is to live as the Master lived, to serve as the Master served. The Master served in such a way that serving was not burdensome, no. Serving was always great joy – serving alongside His Father within, and being witness to Father's great power and wisdom.

My lessons are leading us toward the area of service – to use your spiritual tools without hesitation, without restraint. We, my friends, are moving into another level of our morontia education. The area of service will be your greatest task yet – to set aside personal wish fulfillment and self-aggrandizement, for the good of the whole and growth of the Supreme Being. Service is where you will receive your greatest lessons, human and divine. Service is the potentials of our lessons transformed into actuals.

This is not to cause anxiety. This is to say, in being yourselves, your service has already begun. In accepting your status of son- or daughtership with Father is upstepping you to know greater morontia realities. Service will be a testing at times, yes, but it will also at times feel triumphant. If the opportunity arises, I would ask you to discuss this with one another. And now I will accept questions.

CALVIN: Abraham, in your lesson you talked about the poisons of anxiety, despair, fear, and anger. All of those I get a pretty good picture of and how to identify them, but I could probably use a little more on the 'envy' one.

ABRAHAM: Understood. To envy, to desire what another has, whether it be material, spiritual or intellectual. Envy creates blinders so your vision is so narrow that you are unable to see and receive your own blessings. Envy takes your focus off the larger realities and places them upon a non-reliable foundation. Envy is to be overcome. Yes, to overcome those self-inadequacies that seemingly make you appear to be trapped. I say, this entrapment is not a reality for those who see with the eyes of our Father. Father's vision is not always padded for comfort. Father's vision is apparently harsh at times, yes, but nonetheless true. And to view through Father's eyes is to see things in a real light. Yes, envy will appear to be a non-reality to those who utilize their spiritual vision. Is this helping, Calvin?

CALVIN: Yes. Either I don't have huge envy, or I've got those blinders so bad that I can't see that I do. I can't tell which. On another note: I have been reading Ken Carey's book, 'Return of the Bird Tribes,' which is from a native American viewpoint. Then, I ran onto this native American, Wayne, who for some reason strikes a deep chord. We have asked you in situations like this before – if you are aware of the person. I gave him a set of your lessons. (Abraham: I know of him, but do not work directly with him. Is there more to your question?)

CALVIN: Yes. In meeting situations like that one where it isn't just 'hello, I know you from way back,' but sensing a real deep importance in him. Is that using this spirit insight you talk of?

ABRAHAM: There are many reasons that there is such a deep recognition of another being. But I say, most of the time it is the Father Fragment within that draws your attention to where He may need to perhaps perform some task. In your will to be in Father's will, you are able to clearly discern messages from Him and be willing to allow Father to work through you. Does this help?

CALVIN: Yes, it does. I can see much clearer what you are saying about allowing the Father to work through me to express Himself. If we are all tense and tight, full of anxieties, it would be impossible to do that. But you are teaching us to relax and enjoy; to accept our place in this world, this universe, without having to feel perfect, but that we are on a long enjoyable road to perfection. It is so much easier then, to reflect the Father through us. (Abraham: Yes. In the lessons regarding service there will be ample time for learning how Father communicates with you.)

TECTRA: Abraham, can you expand on when you were speaking about the journey down this long corridor – all these doors and choices, and how Father has opened doors for us already?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. The lessons that one is required to learn to attain deeper morontial wisdom could be these metaphorical doors. At times the doors that Father has opened are not entirely attractive; they appear to contain much labor and effort needed to move through these doors. Many mortals spend much of their lives avoiding these seeming difficult doorways in favor of an easier access to eternal realities. I say, that it's acceptable to take these easy access doors; but I would also say that there will be quite substantially more doors to go through in the long run than if you were to move through these doors that Father has already opened. It may appear that these doors are more work, more effort on your part, and at times this can bring discomfort, possibly fear. These choices you make are shaping your path for tomorrow. It is a matter of desiring to align your will with that of the Fathers' will, and learning that spiritual meanings and values take effort. Our Father has built the corridor and lit the lamps of guidance and support, and He shall walk with you every step of the way.

RACHEL: Father Abraham, in speaking of this corridor and the doors – is that for us now as mortals here on earth? or is that extending on to the Mansion Worlds?

(Abraham: I refer to your life now in the flesh. The 'doors' being your decisions you make. Is there one more question?)

CALVIN: Does Father ever open doors for us that we shouldn't take just to see if we'd take them. Is that part of testing or are those just natural life doors opening?

ABRAHAM: I am certain that Father would not lead you astray for testing. That would be cruel. No! His path for you is cut, and Father gently guides you where you will progress most successfully.

I am overjoyed that you have allowed me to express my lesson this evening. You, my friends, are loved and care for. My peace to you each. Until next week, shalom.

Spiritual Map Viewed Through Experience | The More Experience, the Broader View of the Map

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you each. Thank you for meeting with me this evening. I always look forward to our group interaction. This week you may have had opportunity to serve or practice the technique of allowing Adjuster-expression. You may have had opportunity to watch Father minister to others through you.

Also, you may have learned a bit more about those doors that Father leads you to. I say this is all a part of the lesson format. Those who wish to learn these morontial techniques will do so with the allowance of Father to lead. I say, you are sure to meet with some resistance on your part, but if it is your desire to advance, then I say your greatest lessons lie in experience.

Your experiences shape you into a God-knowing individual. It is through mortal living that you learn about the true personality of our Father. Through experience, you gradually learn what our Father's personality attributes are – and, are not. Through your own use of the cosmic mind and universal circuits, you are able to envision your spiritual map laid out before you. Through your connection with the universe, you are better able to understand this map and travel this path with greater understanding. To travel with the assistance of your spiritual map, your experience is your technique of travel.

The more experience one has, the broader view is there of this spiritual map. Your experience is invaluable, yes, and there are not many shortcuts. Some can get by with shortcuts regarding experience, yes, but the morontial education is lessened. This is not bad, only delay. Those who drink enthusiastically from the cup of experience will indeed view and experience a much larger portion of the spiritual map that is laid out before them.

Do you see how spiritual vision is so valuable in this lesson? To view with your Father's eyes is to wade through the waters of adversity, challenged and confident, knowing your Father/Brother also did wade these waters. If you have chosen to be Spirit led, you use your spirit vision; you walk with liberty that allows your true self to be known; you have embraced the courage that stems from liberty. Yes, you have chosen to move through those doors Father has already opened, and you find that experience within these doors are the directions to the Isle of Paradise- where our Universal Father resides, arms extended, in loving welcome to all.

Do you see how anxiety would detain you from taking full advantage of experience? How despair may suppress the enthusiasm of drinking from the cup of experience? How anger may create a damaging resentment towards experience that may perchance come to you? How fear may keep you from experience altogether - dimming your view of Father's map? How envy leaves you unfulfilled and unsatisfied with your own Father assistance, your own view of the map and the distortions thereof? Do you understand how these spirit poisons may set up blockades?

When traveling this map of experience, do you not understand - your experience is the very hand of Father's that guides you to Him? Do you understand that a great deal of your experience contains the greatest value through serving? Be not afraid to experience or serve, for these are necessary in morontial education and Paradise destination.

This week I would suggest that you note those moments of spirit poisoning. Understand their origin, and what it takes to overcome them. What is your spiritual medicine? Is it perhaps in stillness? Perhaps in creativity? Possibly communication with your fellows? What is your spiritual medicine that eludes these poisons - and allows you to experience this mortal life and attain your divine map? Have you questions?

RACHEL: Well Father Abraham, in serving others does it matter if they are strangers, or friends, or loved ones, or relatives? Does it make much difference?

ABRAHAM: This is a good question. Many times are you each led to serve another; and yet, you may feel moments of hesitation because you do not want to impose upon or be more of a burden than an mere assistant. It matters not, family or friends or strangers. It is important that you listen to the spirit-within that asks you to help. The spirit within is wholly capable of relaying to you when it is your time to serve. Many will pick and choose whom to serve; and I say, if this is according to their inner guide then so be it. But I would refer you each to the Master who served all without hesitation, without self-concern. The Master served whoever was placed before Him; and His Spirit within you indeed holds the messages or instructions that the Master would minister with. Yes, good question. Another question?

RACHEL: I wanted to follow up a little bit. Also, a couple that has a family are constantly serving those children and each other as spouses in one way or another continually. I think that is all a part of it too.

ABRAHAM: Yes, correct. The good parent not only serves their child but also teaches that child to serve. The family unit is perhaps the best experience to gain wisdom of spiritual realities through service. Yes, good comment.

RACHEL: I have another one I would like to ask; I don't know if you can answer me or not: I've asked you before about you and your son, Isaac. I'd like to ask you, can you tell us what Isaac, your son, and Jacob, your grandson, and Joseph, your great-grandson, are doing now? Are they serving on another planet as you are serving here?

ABRAHAM: I am happy to report that my loved ones who are not being educated are indeed serving. I enjoy fraternizing with them periodically, but as to their specific assignments, I am not allowed to speak of. Does this answer?

RACHEL: Yes, and I thank you kindly. I am glad you can fraternize with them once in a while. (Abraham: As am I, and thank you. Another question?)

CALVIN: Can sometimes staying in one place do more harm than good though. Sometimes I think there is a new door, but that might end up in leaving this place where I am, leaving someone. Should one only open a new door when it is not going to hurt someone else?

ABRAHAM: A very intriguing question. Without specifics it is complicated to answer, but I can say - those who are dedicated to the doing of Father's will, know the moment of when to move forward. Many things must be considered, and one in particular may be, "Is my move for selfish gain?" To understand the process of moving on, one must consider the well-being of the whole. Does this help? (Calvin: Yes, thank you.)

If there are no more questions, I would like to express my gratitude to you each and leave you with my love. Until next week, shalom.

Love And Accept Each Unique Soul And View Them With Your Spirit Vision

I am ABRAHAM. I would commend you on your efforts of willingness to be honest and forthright. I would say, your attitude toward one another is truly an openness to serve and be served. There is no room for embarrassment, ridicule, or downcasting, no; there is much love and understanding in abundance regarding your group interaction. This is what we have endeavored to teach. This is a fine example of our efforts to escort this world into Light and Life.

Your level of comfort with one another is high and we would desire to teach you to take this same comfort out into the world to others. One who is comfortable in their status of son- or daughtership with the First Source and Center is better able to feel at ease when ministering to various sorts of one's fellows. With one another, you are at ease to allow Father to express Himself through you; there is no pretense and no self-seeking glorification that may hamper our positive atmosphere.

You all know full well that all that is expected from one another here is love and acceptance for each unique soul that contributes to the group. The Teachers endeavor to assist you in taking these feelings of comfort for your group fellows into your daily mortal living. In this group, you are feeling as a family member.

We would remind our students that those individuals you would meet with daily are also your brothers and sisters. We would think it a positive step in your education to view your fellows with your spiritual vision. Yes, take this comfort you feel here with one another into the world and free yourself up to allow Father to express Himself. Know that the news of the kingdom is good news, it is wonderful news; and to portray this to your fellows is of great benefit to the growth of the kingdom.

I am in understanding that many of you this week have experienced the 'spirit poisons' of which we previously discussed. I am sure of your understanding of the negative effects the spirit poisons can cause. We would ask you, did yesterday's gathering provide some medicinal value to your fellows who feel anxious because of your Teaching Mission involvement? Did your fellows not gather to view one and all as average working human beings at a moment of leisure? Yes. Are not mortals all clothed by the same flesh in which to provide food and shelter, love and security? Yes. [The group members had a picnic-style social at Nibley Park in South Salt Lake City.]

The gathering yesterday assisted far beyond your expectations and will provide support to the future of our Mission. Your human contacts this week were perhaps lessons on allowing Father-expression through you, and in this manner, you are to be educated in the area of service. It takes the use of spiritual vision to know whom you are serving and how best to serve. Just as you view one another within this group and are at ease to serve, this is the goal to serving one another outside this group.

It is my request that further group discussion is needed. Therefore, my lesson is shortened to provide you adequate time to assist and serve one another in your understanding of spirit poisons and Father-expression.

Would you have questions? [no questions.]

It is necessary, you see, for pondering and reflecting upon these spiritual realities I have spoken of. I would give you instruction this evening to reach for your own understanding and attempt to share this with one another. And, I ask, allow Father to be expressive through you. My love, as always, go with you. Until next week, shalom.

In Spiritual Maturity One Loses Desire For Elitism. How Does Anxiety Affect Us
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-14-1996

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you each. I am always happy to meet with you. I would mention, tonight's discussion was a prime example of Adjuster-expression. You have discussed your innermost heartfelt topics without need for recognition or self-glorification. You have had your discussion with one goal at the forefront of your thinking. That goal is, "Father's will be done."

You have each desired to learn all that you can, and this is the simple basis for allowing Father to express Himself. None desired to appear mentally or spiritually superior. None desired to pass up their fellows. All were in agreement that to fulfill a hidden agenda would endanger any Father-expression - and that, my friends, you have indeed outgrown. You are perhaps coming upon spiritual maturity.

In becoming more mature in spirit, there is the loss of desire for elitism; there is no longer any desire to appear as a chosen people. In your spiritual maturity, you have unified your minds to one everlasting truth – that Father's will reigns supreme. In your willingness to relinquish self-aggrandizement, Father is now closer than before; He is appearing to be more in alignment with your own thinking. You are appearing to be more accepting of Father's decisions; and I say, the results truly bring about a beauty that is rarely, up until this time, witnessed on Urantia.

You my friends, may appear at odds in your thinking; and yet you are quite willing to allow Father to speak His truths through you. There is nothing to lose. There is no discomfort of judgment or ridicule among you. There is a genuine love and respect and friendship – which always does outweigh any topic you may find yourselves at odds on. Your spiritual maturity brings you to a level which is the level in which we send our students forth to serve.

Do you see, your spiritual maturity has brought you to align your will with Father's; it has brought you to move ahead, but not alone. You have endeavored to include your fellows in this Mission of spiritual upliftment. In your spiritual maturity, you have only to gain insight – spiritual information; and now you realize the most efficient process to go about in gaining your spiritual information is to stand aside and allow Father to speak.

You know not of the many Adjusters that were in service this evening. This is truly beautiful, and I am grateful to be included. Spiritual maturity is not spiritual superiority, no. Spiritual maturity is not to say, "I am mature while my brothers remain ignorant," no. Spiritual maturity is to recognize your cosmic responsibility and make your decisions therefrom.

This week I would ask you to note the various times when Father may appear to be speaking through you. What did you do to step aside and allow Father His expression? What steps do you take to align your will with Father's? Are those steps still needed to arrive at aligning your will with Father's? or is it always existent? Is Adjuster-expression always available? What spirit poisons would you note that would hinder your efforts to your cosmic responsibility, and what is your medicine to overcome these poisons? Have you questions?

RACHEL: Well, Father Abraham, what are, in your opinion, the best steps we could take in order to align ourselves with Father's will?

ABRAHAM: It has been my experience to witness mortals not taking enough time to ponder upon this topic. Inner wish-fulfillments are usually the driving factor to accomplish daily tasks. It really must take a certain amount of time to ponder and reflect certain questions and attitude adjustments, such as: Do I have real and abiding faith in my Father to trust and allow Him to care for me? Do I trust in Father's supreme power to rule His own kingdom? Do I trust in Father's ability to care for each individual as well as the whole? And lastly, if I can't say yes to all three questions then I would ask myself this question: Do I have the ability to care for myself and the world as a whole as would a supreme being? 'Supreme being,' meaning the Universal God, not the God of time. It is wise to trust in yourself, yes, but not to go so far as to make decisions and do Father's work for Him. Do you see, many beings have a starting point and work up therefrom? Father is never-beginning and never-ending. He is always all-powerful, all-knowing and matchless in wisdom and love. I would emphasize – a short amount of time in stillness would be very beneficial to aligning your will with Father's. I would express my faith in this method and say, yes, this is very beneficial. Does this help? (Rachel: It certainly does. It was beautiful and I thank you.) Abraham: You are welcome. Another question?

CALVIN: Anxiety is a word I didn't quite catch I guess because I feel saturated with it. Being one of those blockers of spiritual understanding, can you give us better insight on what our anxieties might be? How anxiety is displayed in our daily lives?

ABRAHAM: Anxiety, my definition, is mental torment which one feels there is little control over; to be overly concerned about one thing or another to the point of physical distress. Anxiety is not highly recognized as a physical enemy; but I can say, many of the world's ailments have stemmed from anxiety and worry over the desire to have control. In the days of old, perhaps before civilization, anxiety was not great because knowledge was not so present. There was little to be concerned over and safety was dealt with when the time called for action to be taken. In today's more knowledgeable society there is (seemingly) endless number of topics to worry over – images to put forth, homes to be upgraded, and levels of living to portray to this world that, 'I am acceptable because I maintain a certain image.' There are always small anxieties to be burdened upon the mind, and it really is your part as a mortal to believe that you can control the level of intake of worry, yes, but possibly not so much the circumstances that brought on the anxiety. Your willingness to align your will with Father's, and allow Him expression, is certainly a good medicine for overcoming anxiety. Does this help?

CALVIN: Yes. It helps very much. I view that word 'anxiety' as being overly anxious – like opposite of relax. So yes, I do want to enjoy, and to be aware of being too anxious, too busy. Yes, I can relate to what you're saying.

ABRAHAM: Yes, understood. I am grateful for my position here and my morontial training. I am anxiety-free, as one day you also will be. I would express to you my appreciation for allowing me to be a part of your education, and your determination is indeed admired. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

It Is As Important to Accept Service As to Perform Service

I am ABRAHAM. Happy am I to meet with you this evening. It is my supreme pleasure to know you each and share your experiences in mortal living. It would appear to me that you are learning from where to receive your spiritual medicine. You are indeed learning the source firsthand how to overcome the illusory power of the spirit poisons. You have taken steps further toward your spiritual maturity and progress.

These steps were not on an easy path, no. There was much study, experiencing, falling, and progressing. Yes, there will always be some stumbling, but I say, your dedication to your eternal career will always assist you in getting back on course. We know the importance of allowing Father His expression to serve His great many children. Also do we know how the spirit poisons block Father from expressing Himself, reducing the success of any service.

In our teachings on service, we must always ask our students:

1. Are you able to be served as you are able to serve?
2. Do you allow divine blessings that may perchance come to you?
3. Are you fully aware of accepting those blessings as you are aware of your desire to be a blessing to others?
4. Do you find that certain blessings that may come your way are perhaps just good fortune, perhaps luck?
5. Do you find gratitude in this?

We have found it is as important to accept service as it is to perform service. It is popular in certain cultures that martyrdom is altogether selfless and holy, and these individuals accept not any blessing that may chance to counteract their understanding of holiness. I would say, this is outdated and certainly misunderstood. Father does not ask you to sacrifice anything for your son- or daughtership with Him.

It is known that there are lessons of wisdom and love to be gained from adversity, but I would say to you this evening, this is not necessary – to feel you must be burdened by adversity to receive good marks from Father. No, it is not always necessary to overlook the divine goodness for what you feel you should deserve. It is not necessary that you are your own supreme bookkeeper. Mortal life is not about service in suffering, overcoming adversities to appear victorious, no. The spiritual life is adversity, yes, but also is it filled with divine goodness and indescribable joy that is yours – free for the taking.

Those dedicated to the spiritual life make great attempts at keeping focused on the eternal goal. The eternal goal is not always accomplished by self-denial suffering, no. In the path of those who are spiritually focused, there is need to attempt to accept their Father's joy just as the Master Himself had done. The Master, being the best that man can be, continually looked for His Father's great abundance of joy and wisdom.

The Master had spent much time alone in silent communion with Father, enabling Him to know more of the Father's perfect joy. The Master, in such excellent communion with His Father, had achieved much through inner-knowing. He experienced, yes, but I say, His communion with Father enabled Him to know so much more. How else could one accomplish all His human requirements before age thirty!

Yes, the Master found it not only necessary to accept Father's hard lessons, but also His divine blessings. Jesus knew He was loved and loved well. He was wholly worthy of Father's blessings, not because He was a potential Sovereign ruler of a universe, no, but because He was a son of the Father of all father's.

The more communion the Master had partaken of, the more He understood His divine Father. Adversities or blessings, there was no difference to the Master; they were one in the same, all coming from a Source that loved and believed in Him. The Master had learned to recognize Father's love in return. He had learned to recognize those gifts which Father had put before Him – be they joy-filled or fraught with difficulty.

Yes, Jesus was accepting of His Father's supreme knowledge. I would say, the number of one's difficulties does not put them progressively higher in Father's spiritual kingdom, no – it is what one learns from those difficulties that does propel him closer to Paradise. I would say, when trudging through the dirt and mud of everyday living, forget not to look up into the blue sky and feel the sun upon your face. Mortal living is not to be 'endured;' it is to be 'celebrated.' Have you questions?

RACHEL: Well, I am ready to celebrate if everybody else is.

CALVIN: It is quite hard to feel like celebrating in the middle of those drudgeries of daily responsibilities. I guess that is where our growth is coming from here? I know when I get in the middle of a big muddy day it is easy to forget the celebration-feelings for that day, but at least I know that there will be one tomorrow. I think my understanding of this is better than what it used to be – I used to feel like there was no hope; I felt stuck to a life of burden, thinking that's what I deserved because of my mistakes and weaknesses. I now know that the dust is going to settle and it will be a better day tomorrow. My question: Are you saying that during the frustration times we can have joy even in today? I don't see how that is possible.

ABRAHAM: That is somewhat correct, but I would say my lesson tonight is primarily about receiving and accepting blessings 'through joy' as opposed to 'through adversity.' It is possible to receive understanding through your willingness to step aside and allow Father to work. And I say, this is not always through a difficult means, no, for I would also say that many spiritual lessons also appear in the midst of joy and your allowance to be loved and served by Father – personally and through your fellows. Jesus, at the last supper, chose to demonstrate to His apostles that even He, a man and a God, would kneel to wash His brethren's feet. He demonstrated that all who would be served in the kingdom must also serve. He demonstrated to each of His fellows that His humble act was proof that His love for them went beyond mere words. His actions spoke volumes. One and all knew of His divinity – and yet, they each humbly allowed the Master to wash their feet, even the feet of the one who would betray Him. Do you see how the Master would stop at nothing to serve? Jesus genuinely loved His fellows and proved it every day. I am saying this evening, that Michael still desires to serve you, as does also the Father. You, His children of light, are wholly deserving of the divine blessings. It would be of great benefit if you could recognize these blessings and be in humble gratitude. Without allowing the Father to bestow upon you His spiritual gifts and divine joy, you are only reaping half of your spiritual harvest. To be accepting of Father's divine gifts you are beginning to understand His heavenly attributes; you are beginning to recognize His divine love. Father's divine love is an unstoppable energy that rules the universes. Do you see, I endeavor to teach you a balanced spiritual curriculum. Mortal living is adversity, yes; blessings, yes; but one who is dedicated to the doing of the divine will is perceiving all this to be good. Is this helping?

CALVIN: Yes, it is. I had always looked at the story of Jesus' washing the apostle's feet as Jesus teaching them, 'Hey, you are no better than anyone else, and therefore should you wash the feet of your fellows.' But what I hear you saying also is to allow ourselves to 'be served,' equally as much as in allowing ourselves the enjoyments from the benefits of serving. (Abraham: Yes, exactly.)

RACHEL: Last week, Father Abraham, you told us to ask: Do I have the ability to care for myself and the world as a whole as would a Supreme being? My land, I don't know what mortal on this Earth could ever answer yes to that or have the gall to answer yes to that. I think you were putting us on right there.

ABRAHAM: Understood. I also know not of anyone who would be qualified to power the universes with divine love. I agree with you. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, a quick question about my daughter, Lindsey. You must be aware of the situation. Both Kamille and I think we have come to a standstill, a roadblock. I don't know what else to do. I know I should learn to be more patient, understanding and loving - less angered and etc., but there has got to be some other way for help for this child who is perceiving herself miserable, and who just hates life. Any suggestions that you would have?

ABRAHAM: I am aware she has a powerful hatred towards herself, but the source of this cause is only known by her. I would assure the child that you are willing to bear with whatever may befall her and you, and attempt to retrieve the source of her self-hatred through communication and assurance that you would not abandon her. There is something that troubles her from the past and this is as a thorn in her side, and she seeks relief. I am also happy to assist with this. I would ask Amelia to fear not for she is a daughter of the living God and has all the answers at hand. Reassure her of your dedication; and it is permissible for us, Amelia and I, to meet.

Are there more questions? [none.] If there are no more questions, I would recommend that this week to watch for Father to serve you and how it affects your service to others. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

In Service We Display Fruits of The Spirit. Utilizing These Fruits, We Reap The Harvest Therefrom

I am ABRAHAM. I would welcome you each and express my appreciation for your willingness to help in this Mission. I have always found that serving in Michael's Mission is not looked upon as work as you would define work. I find that service is my great privilege because Father has trusted me to do His bidding, and in this I find multi-levels of joy. So service for me is like setting forth on an adventure; and to be involved in this Mission has to be my greatest adventure yet.

I have experienced much growth, much camaraderie and unity - with mortals and non-mortals alike. I would dare say, to serve on this Mission has been my greatest experience in spiritual education. My time being taught about service cannot compare to the actual doing. This, my friends, will be a similar experience for you. I could speak for hours about service, but your real education lies in your experience.

We have discussed steps to take toward aligning your will with Father's. We know that in all your decisions it is quite wise to take a moment of stillness to commune with Father. We have discussed the importance of stepping aside to allow Father to express Himself through His children while being watchful of those spirit poisons that may hamper any spiritual progress.

Last week we discussed Father's divine blessings in accepting His service and also, accepting the service of your fellows. We have learned that to accept service is to aid others in their spiritual progress; and, to find Father's significant meaning in daily living. I say, you have also learned to care and minister to one another. Without the burden of self-glory-seeking or pretense, it becomes quite easy to allow assistance from the many Father Fragments.

I must say, you do quite well in your efforts to become God-like. There is no meter or scale wherewith to measure your spiritual growth. However, there is always the fruits of the spirit to inform you of just how much you have learned. To use these spiritual fruits is a good indicator of how far you have come. To be in a God-like mind-frame – to show kindness, patience, forgiveness, forbearance, tolerance, love, and generosity – is to live as the Master lived, with the use of Father's ideals in a material world where practicality is necessary to survive.

You are each knowing of the fruits of the spirit and you desire to use them in your daily living, yes, but at times you find it difficult to do; at times it may appear that it is easier to be driven by the spirit poisons than to be led by the fruits of the spirit.

It is literally a universal law that you reap the harvest of the seeds you sow. To be driven by the spirit poisons is to reap the harvest of them. To sow the seeds of the fruits of the spirit is to likewise reap the harvest therefrom. You will find that this is certainly true regardless of my words to you. In your own experience, you will find that your spiritual harvest is becoming more of a reality every day.

Our Mission is at a faster pace and you will begin to see your spiritual crops come into fruition much more accelerated than before. Michael has set the course; He is wholeheartedly dedicated to the upliftment of this planet. It is urgent that our plan move forward without hesitation, perhaps without obstacles that may impede our efforts.

This Mission is definitely not games – but a great honor and privilege to serve with One who is so concerned and love-filled for this world. This Mission is not about endless toiling through barren fields, no. This Mission is about that anticipation that underlies every unexplored territory through lands full of scenic wonder. To serve and be served is not to be viewed as the enduring of hard labor, no, but to witness and realize the trust that Father has in His universe children to carry on His legacy.

This week I would ask that you study the subject of the fruits of the spirit. Is it possible to be led by them? or is the spirit poisons more of a driving force. Have you questions?

RACHEL: Yes. Father Abraham, last week I heard that Pope John Paul said that it is entirely possible that the human beings arrived here on this Earth through evolution. He said that is not against the Christian belief or religion because God bestowed the soul upon all mankind. My question is: In your service, with you and your associates, have you been working with Pope John Paul?

ABRAHAM: It is my knowledge that Michael's Spirit of Truth has been moving through the large religious institutions to help purify religious intentions. It is my knowledge that many years of man's wish-fulfillment has distorted much of the message left by Christ. It is most likely that upon the more full reception and acceptance of the Spirit of Truth's purifying mission among the churches, is when a great many Teachers will join in and help to reconstruct the churches of the world to serve the people in a more God-like manner. Does this help? (Rachel: Yes, it does. I just wish we could get the authorities of the LDS church to admit that. That would help a whole lot.)

ABRAHAM: It is entirely possible, yes, with the Mission taking an accelerated turn towards Light and Life. Another question?

TECTRA: That is kind of what my question is Abraham. Why is this acceleration happening?

ABRAHAM: We have found that with the deterioration of meanings and values in the hearts of human-kind, also comes the deterioration of care for the environment of the planet. We find it is necessary for the health of the planet to upstep our Mission. Every day, humankind is turning their hearts toward Father, but this is a long process. And with the re-encircuitment of the planet, it is entirely possible for mortals to receive a much greater amount of spiritual light than before. We find that as we assist in the upliftment of humankind, that this does assist the planet in its natural healing. Is this explaining? (Tectra: Very well. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, how much participation in this Correcting Time Teaching Mission is expected from your students, and the students in this Mission? Are you counting wholly on us to be there when some upstepping is needed? or is it a combination of enlightenment from your side, with us helping where we can by what we can do?

ABRAHAM: We do depend a great deal on those mortals that will listen and desire to be included. The mortals assisting do wonderful work on a small scale. It is known that several legions of seraphim, midwayers, Melchizedeks, Teachers, Mother and Her mind-spirits, Michael and His Spirit of Truth – are certainly in full force; and there is no stopping our Mission now. But as I have said, service is a great privilege and can bring you to multi-levels of joy and worship. And I say, the act of service is not difficult, not to be a burden, no. It is good to be able to measure this by your utilization of the fruits of the spirit.

I am slipping. It is always my great privilege and pleasure to work with you each. I would express my gratitude and leave you with my love. Shalom.

What is My Dedication To A Life In The Spirit

Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you, my friends. It is always good to meet with you. I do assist you throughout the week on the lessons that we are focused on, but my ministry is limited to just that. Your spiritual growth is directed by your inner Father Fragment. My part is to provide certain educational topics, and it is your decision to heed to your inner Father's instructions and take what light you are able to.

I receive no obvious credits or rewards for my mission here on Urantia. No, I do not receive any specific recognition either – nor do I feel the need for it. I work not to receive spiritual promotions. I endeavor not to impose my own specific views on universal meanings and values.

Do you see, I must remain open to the Father's will. I am trusting in His power and greatness to serve through me. I have naught to gain from this, nor do I crave any such recognition any longer. I feel completely a part of the kingdom of God. I rest in comfort knowing Father is in His watchtower; His view is broader than my own and I am able to wait for His signals and directions. It takes naught from me to set aside my personal desires to allow Father His expression.

I am happy to assist you in understanding your connection within the kingdom – and the knowledge that therein, all creatures are equally welcome. Jesus said: "There is no place of preferment at my table." Do you see, there is nothing to gain; there is nothing to lose; there is nothing to fear or be anxiety-ridden over. If all peoples are in understanding of this concept, it makes our Mission sail more smoothly and at a faster pace.

I am understanding that your concept of your connection within the kingdom is coming along quite acceptably. Do you see, to choose Father's will you are choosing to be led by His Spirit and produce the fruits therefrom. To understand there is nothing to gain or lose, relieves you of any competitive pressure. To know that all are loved and equal within the family of God is to be empowered to set aside selfish wish-fulfillment and to allow Father to lead.

One who is trusting in their Father is at ease to reach for His hand. It is easy for a child to be led by a knowing parent, providing the trust is present. I am saying, it is easy for a frightened child to reach up for Father's hand; it is a little different, however – when a child insists on going about in playful unconcern, to look for Father's hand for guidance. I say, it is always acceptable to reach for your Father. This does not take from you, from your personality, from your identity, no. This widens your pathway to your eternal Paradise destination.

We have spoken of stepping aside allowing Father His expression and trusting your equality within His kingdom. We have also spoken of trusting in Father's all-knowingness, allowing yourself to be led and producing the fruits thereof. In the lessons on service, it is always studied in depth – the 'fruits of the Spirit.' With each experience, being led by the spirit becomes more natural – meaning you are taking less conscious thought of your cosmic responsibilities because your natural benefits from being led become more apparent.

With service, you will learn more about the fruits of the Spirit than perhaps with any other subject. To be led by the spirit and produce the spirit fruits is indeed a step in the direction of the brotherhood of man. Service leads us to strengthen the bond between all humankind. Father's goodness leads us to serve. Service strengthens our bond within the brotherhood of man.

ELLANOR (the group TR): Hey, what about the 'sisterhood.' (Abraham: You know very well my meaning. Are there questions?)

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I think everyone here would agree with me that those of us who have been receiving your lessons – we feel like we know you; and do bestow upon you all of our love, our gratitude, our affection, and thankfulness. We do thank Father, for you.

ABRAHAM: This is known and very much appreciated. I also return my gratitude for your love felt towards me and your dedication to your position within this family. Another question?

CALVIN: Teacher Abraham, I am trying to assimilate what you have just taught us. I think you are teaching that we simply mellow out; to follow the will of the Father and not worry if we are doing this or that 'right,' but to just relax and know that Father's will may take us here, or it may take us there. We really don't know where our Father's will is taking us other than to grow and be peaceful inside? Or, should we 'consciously' have Father 'Adjuster' communication that prepares us to go here or go there, to do this or do that?

ABRAHAM: Yes, absolutely is there always Father's communication. It is also understood, there is always a sense of mistrust when your origin comes from a planet that has somewhat stumbled through evolution, yes. There is somewhat a tendency to assume control over human duties, for there is that natural thought pattern within your human mind to do so. Yes, it takes effort to maintain faith and trust. Your world is beginning to overcome this thought pattern of mistrust that has plagued your isolated planet. Mortals once again will begin to naturally feel their cosmic connection and begin to know more than what their intellect tells them. Vision through the eyes of the spirit will become more dominant, and hesitation pertaining to your duties as a mortal will begin to cease. Is this helping? (Calvin: Yes. It will help more when I read it back. Thank you.)

RACHEL: Well Father Abraham, it seems to me that in our daily lives, one thing that most all mortals are looking for is 'recognition,' whether it is in the workforce and trying to receive promotions, or whether it is in religion – trying to receive promotions within organized religion. It sounds to me, from what you have said, that you, in your progression, have overcome all this as far as a need for recognition is concerned.

ABRAHAM: You are correct, but I must say, I did not arrive at this without much effort and education. It was a long journey from seeking self-recognition, to giving due recognition to our Father. You are correct in your perception that many seek worldly recognition from their peers, when all the while they are oblivious to the one whose recognition stands above all else. Those who recognize the Father within daily living are given in return, Father's recognition; and many find this fulfilling and need not look elsewhere. Those who can allow Father His expression are learning to realize where all goodness stems; and this feeling is truly felt beyond mindal – it is a knowing within the soul. It will be apparent one day that Father's recognition is like giving an ocean to a man who only desired a cupful of water. The scramble for self-recognition will lessen, and Father-expression will begin to create great changes. Does this help? (Rachel: It certainly does. It was beautiful and I will tell you right now, you have my recognition about that topic.)

ABRAHAM: It is within you each to feel the Father's love and recognition within your very souls. Yes, a good question. Is there another question?

CALVIN: What advice would you have for me for Randy at my workplace? He is asking me to see what you have for him. I guess he is receiving information from the spirit sources quite often and it is beautiful to see him perk up over this. Is this kind of what you meant when you said 'people of the world would be able to see?' and that vision 'through the eyes of the Spirit' would become more dominant? And, that the Randy's of the world – not even expecting anything, just being a good person – would see more of the Spirit-doing of things. Do you have any advice on how I should work with Randy?

ABRAHAM: That is one way to look at it. There will be many who receive from various Teachers, yes, and also from Thought Adjuster contact. But if there are not serious roots deep within the soil of faith, and fruits produced therefrom, then these are just words. If there is significant change and growth towards the positive, then I would encourage Randy to proceed. It is wise to dispel his mystical-thinking – that this is not just a new phenomenon. This method of communication has been around for quite some time; although I must say, it has been improved with the recent opening of the System circuits. I find that Randy is a seeker of truth, and in his way that best suits a somewhat rebellious attitude, he is acquiring accurate information. 'Rebellious' – meaning, to 'go against the grain,' and 'march to the beat of a different drum.' It is a wonderful friendship you have. And you are, yourself, quite capable at this method of communication wherein you are able to assist Randy and counsel him.

With that, I shall take my leave, suggesting that you continue your study on 'the fruits of the Spirit' and answer this question: What is your position within the kingdom? What have you to gain or lose by your dedication to a life in the spirit? Until next week, shalom.

Father is Everything. We Can Understand His Attributes

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you each this evening. It is my great pleasure to be here with you. I am aware of your experiences concerning spirit fruits, and your discussion this evening helps in your understanding of them.

Last week we discussed your positions within Father's kingdom and your gains or losses thereof. I spoke to you about how my experiences in serving won me no obvious credits or rewards. By that I meant, I receive no special privileges, no plaques declaring my credits in serving, no particular recognition from my fellows or co-workers.

My desire for such a display of recognition is diminished for I have discovered our Father's love and recognition. Upon knowing this heavenly attribute, I can settle for no less. All other recognition is pointless, as you will discover in serving – that you serve to be near our Father, to do Father's bidding, not for any particular recognition.

Trust in our Father means to be put in the areas of service that Father may need your assistance. To be trusted by our Universal Father fills us with such joy that there are no words for it. To know that Father has placed you in His stead is to feel a universal connection, to feel unity with all your universal brothers and sisters, to feel a connection with the Supreme Being and your part in contributing to the history of the Universe. This is not special recognition; this is not rising above your fellows – this is to know God and be like Him.

To understand our Universal Fathers' attributes, is to have everything. To know God, is everything. Do you see – the want for any other recognition becomes obsolete! To know our Father's personality, His values, His understanding, is everything. To understand His love for us, is all there is. To be competitive for that love is not a reality, no, it is perhaps the erroneous thinking of humankind down through history within organized religion.

We are learning to serve and be served. We have found our spiritual liberty to move forth with this Mission. We have gained the courage to move aside and allow Father His expression. We are learning to overcome the spirit poisons through our efforts to connect with our Inner God and produce the fruits of the Spirit. In learning to serve your fellows we are endeavoring to teach you to accept service – and in this, you are learning to overcome the animal self and step towards your divine self. In learning to serve, you are learning to master the animal self with the higher divine mind.

It appears that evolution moves slowly, yes. Some may feel God has forgotten them, that this world hangs in space, alone, without any concern for it. We have learned that evolution may indeed be slow to the finite mind, but as you progress, you are trusting that Father's time is perfect. Father is matchless in His wisdom and concern for the whole.

We are moving into an era that speeds up our efforts to communicate to the world's inhabitants that no, you are not isolated and alone, without watchcare. Some time ago Michael requested that you assist Him in bringing this good news to your fellows – and what better way to share this good news than through service? Father's timing is perfect, and to lose trust in Him would create stumbling through evolution, as past history has proven.

This evening I wish not to focus so much on service and self-mastery so we can take a moment to recognize an intricate part of our education in learning Father's attributes, and to recognize His presence. In a moment of a grateful heart, we can allow some time for worship. If I may say a few words:

To you, our Father of all fathers, may we take this moment to show our gratitude, for without you there is nothing. We recognize that your presence is all that is that we need to know. We have your love and recognition, and we live, breathe, move, and have our being, therein. We, as your students, wish to recognize your matchless wisdom and awesome power to rule your universes as you see fit. We declare to you our dedication to our eternal search for you. We would ask you, Father, to help us all recognize your presence, both within and without our beings. We would express to you our understanding of our place within your Kingdom. We know we are equal in your attention and love. Competition is useless. Recognition is also useless. We endeavor to know you, Father, and to understand your personality attributes and universal meanings and values. We pledge to you our unending love and dedication. Amen.

My students, I would ask that this week you study worship and how it affects your relationship with Father. How does worship assist you in understanding your Father's attributes? Do you find Father's attributes to be what we call 'fruits of the Spirit?' Have you questions?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, this evening we have a new guest with us. Her name is Deborah. I would like to introduce her to you and also ask her if she has a question.

DEBORAH: I am very glad to be here. I feel like I have been guided here. I have had a lot of happenings of late that I am very grateful for. When you speak of the gratitude of the heart my heart is really full, for I feel like I have been getting answers to questions. I have one question that I'll just ask: This summer my husband was hurt in an accident and was very close to death. I got a lot of help from everyone and I felt a really strong guidance through that process. I have been feeling insecure in asking to name what that guidance was. I was wondering if you could help me with that?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I would take a moment to welcome you and confirm your feelings of being guided. I am aware that your experience with your husband was indeed a turning point in your relationship with the Spirit. I know that you have always been somewhat Spirit led, yes, but this experience has moved you towards knowing, towards understanding, towards self-trust – meaning to trust in yourself to receive Father's guidance and directions, and to take action from that. Through your experience, your insecurities about receiving Spirit guidance was weakened and your trust in Father, and your understanding of His trust in you, regenerated a new spiritual energy that you could act from. I am aware that to be Spirit led, by no means, is without hardships. To be Spirit led is not a life of ease; there is constant learning for those who demand it. You have reached up for Father, and He is reaching back. Your lessons, even though you may view as confusing or faith-robbing, is indeed your Father looking to reestablish your position within His kingdom, a place at His table, yes. I have no doubt that you are receiving spiritual information. This source, I can confirm, is mostly your Father Fragment, but I would also confirm Teacher-involvement; and, as always, assistance from the seraphic daughters – the angels. Is there a more specific question you have in mind? (Deborah: Not at this time, and I thank you.)

TRUDY'S SON: How can we prevent the ozone layer from disappearing?

ABRAHAM: It is my understanding that the youth of today carry the questions of adults. It is always touching to be witness to children who are concerned for the watchcare of the environment. It is also my information that it is the youth of today that will carry with them the answer to your particular question into the future. It is all a matter of consciousness and education. Mortals are very aware of what damages the ozone layer – and yet, still continue to go about unconcerned for future generations. I would say to you, the Earth does indeed heal itself if it is allowed. For example, the Earth can produce certain healing chemicals that replace the Earth's ozone layers, such as with its volcano eruptions. I would say to you that you are already assisting this problem with your consciousness of it. Well done.

I am grateful to our Father for allowing me this opportunity. I leave with you my love. Until next week, shalom.

Worship Brings About Renewal Within Soul And Mind

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you here this evening. I wish to express my gratitude for your trust and dedication to our cause. As I watch and listen to you, my friends and fellow co-workers, my heart is full. It is now so apparent that you are allowing Father to express and serve you, His children.

In your willingness to step aside and allow Father His expression, I also learn; I also am served – and for that, I am made glad. You each are discovering that spirituality is not out of reach, not wishful hoping, not game playing, no. Spirituality is becoming as necessary as food is to fuel the body. Spirituality is to rekindle that flame within the Spirit.

Some years ago, my fellow co-workers on the Teaching Staff set out to begin our Mission to bring the Correcting Time to mortal consciousness. Time after time we met with difficulties and witnessed such un-spirituality that we found it hard to keep filled with that light of hope. We perhaps viewed our positions here within this Teaching Staff as a sponge attempting to wipe up the ocean. After many discussions with Michael, He had us convinced that Father is deeply in love with this world's inhabitants and is not about to forsake any one of them. Michael had poured out His courage upon us and we have endeavored to go forth, endeavored to carry on.

My fellow Teachers and I have seen great change within many areas of mortal living here on Urantia. We have seen improvement in the rearing of children, improvement of marital relationships, improvement in financial justice and equality. We have observed greater concern on the part of mortals for the planet's environment and the watchcare over all forms of life. We have witnessed intelligent and loving acts of kindness.

We are so blessed to witness our students look to us for Mission instructions; and I can say with this fullness within my heart – thank you, to our Universal Father; in loving gratitude I am filled with your love. Yes, I am so blessed to be of service to Father, to witness His great works, to view firsthand, truth and goodness in action. It is almost without words that I can be this full of the Father's joy.

I am re-experiencing such a reconnection with the spirit. My feelings of rejoicing make me to believe I have been renewed, mind and soul. I am trusting that my students also feel this renewal from time to time; to take a moment to comprehend our Father's awesome works; to be witness to truth, beauty, and goodness in action; to feel the breath of God breathe through you; to hear with the ears of God; and to look into your own eyes and view your Father looking back at you. I say, this is absolutely possible from your mortal standpoint – it is your cosmic right as a universe citizen.

To serve selfishly takes much energy from the spirit, from your spirit, from your soul. To daily recognize your Father's hand in your life, brings about a renewal within your soul and mind. Your recognition of His loving attributes is to know God and desire to be like Him – to acquire His loving attributes to produce the fruits of the Spirit. Is our Father not kind, patient, forgiving, loving, forbearing, enduring, peaceful, confident, and joyful? I say with authority, these fruits are your birthright. They are attainable. Are there questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, thank you again for your teaching. You mentioned earlier regarding when the Teaching Staff began this project on this world. Are you referring to this last five- to ten year-period? or way back in early century? or beyond that, wherein 'it seemed quite hopeless to get things started?'

ABRAHAM: I suppose I speak of some time ago when I was fairly new to my position. I had little experience in this area and I suppose I did not know what to expect. It was overwhelming to view such devastation such as war, world hunger, racial segregation. I must confess that working with Michael as I did, I learned to begin with small steps; to learn as I experienced; to take moments of time to recognize our Father and His all-powerful works. I learned that in doing this I was more inclined to follow the leading of Father and produce more fruits – thus producing more joy and compensating for my feelings of being overwhelmed. You see, as time went on and this Mission evolved, I also evolved. I also learned to take on the Master's enthusiasm and good humor to complete those tasks which Father assigned me. Is this helping?

CALVIN: Yes, it does. The thought crossed my mind that you probably have great sympathetic understanding of Adam and Eve and what they went through – their days of pondering how to turn things around on such a parched world. I can relate to my feelings before your teachings here to us – my thinking the world was an unchangeable mess. Yet, with just a change of my attitude, I am seeing now that this world is a beautiful and advancing place instead. Thank you for that new insight.

ABRAHAM: Yes, understood. I also studied the plight of Adam and Eve, you are correct. My experience within this Teaching Mission has brought me to even greater understanding. It is easy to lose sight of Father's works, and that is always highly possible when worship has been omitted from daily living, yes. Good comment. Another question?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, were the mortals of New Zealand your first group that you taught on Urantia in this form of teaching? Was that your first experience with mortals since your return to this world?

ABRAHAM: No. There have been several other groups and individuals that I have worked with over the years. It is difficult to work with those mortals and not interfere with freewill thinking, but our methods have greatly improved, and the re-encircuitment of the planet has enabled us to reach many, more efficiently. Does this help? (Rachel: Yes, it does.) Abraham: Another question?

CALVIN: How is our relationship forecasted to pick up stronger with you and the other Teaching Staff? Will we see our connection with you becoming similar to what Michael had with the heavenly hosts and with His Father during His mortal stay? I know we are nowhere close to His status, but will we become more naturally connected with you? It seems right now in this very room that we know you are here, yes, and we trust you are here to help us. We trust your lessons, yes, but for my own experience it seems like you are in some other realm or something – an existence, a place that I can't quite get a grasp of, literally. I suppose I want a more tangible connection. I would like to know that someday soon, while in this world, we can grow to where we are just like one in the same room with you and your teaching staff, and in the same purpose here. (Rachel: He wants to physically hug you, Father Abraham.)

ABRAHAM: Yes, these feelings are known and understood and returned; but our purpose within our Mission is to make the connection between 'you and your Father' more easy, more accurately. We will always be friends, but one day you and your Father will become one, and that is cause to rejoice. I am aware that you are skilled in this method of communicating. And as we all work together, my presence will be more easily recognized. But yes, our main goal is to connect with the Source of all knowledge, all love – our Universal Father. One more question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, when you were sharing that the 'Father is deeply in love with this world's inhabitants,' that is such a beautiful phrase – it's so tangible. As you were talking about how these things are attainable and they are ours, in our grasp – sometimes when I'm in what I call 'the flow, or I guess what you guys would say experiencing the fruits of the Spirit, the process to me is almost like 'a remembering.' When I feel like that, it feels very natural. And then, I guess the part of me that feels unloved and unworthy, brings me to a doubtful 'no,' with a feeling that I am learning for the first time,' as opposed to remembering what's natural. I don't know if that makes sense, but could you clarify or shed some light on that, that knowingness?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Man, by nature, is at animal status. It is through the receiving of the Father Fragment within that begins our soul growth. And as the Adjuster teaches, the soul learns and grows, experiences and knows. And I would say, yes, you can call it 'remembering.' It would not be inaccurate to identify this with your indwelling Father Fragment and be open to His leading. It is likened to possibly reading a book you have already read – yes, you can refer to it as 'remembering.' We would also call it 'allowing' – allowing the Father to express Himself through you, and remembering your status within the kingdom, your son- or daughtership with the Most High. Yes, once we are believing in our son- or daughtership with Father we are moving in and of the Spirit. Yes. Good question. Does this answer? (Miriam: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You are most welcome.

I will bring our meeting time to a close for tonight. I would suggest you continue your study on worship and Father's attributes. Are you, yourself, able to recognize any of these attributes within your own personality? Are you able to receive the Father's spiritual energy from worship, and reach out to your fellows in service? I would express my confidence and faith in you, my friends. I leave you with my love. Until next week. shalom.

Mission Report | Worship The Most Efficient Medicine Against The Spiritual Poisons

I am ABRAHAM. I welcome you all this evening; I am happy to be speaking with you again. It always brings me joy to stop by this branch on our family tree. I look forward to your discussions on our weekly lessons. It is always amazing to me how great the level of spiritual knowledge increases when all are in participation. You each learn a great deal from one another's thoughts and feelings; I also learn, and I am grateful to you each for allowing Father to be expressive. I am honored this evening to welcome my friend, Machiventa, to say a few words.

MACHIVENTA: Greetings to you, my friends. It is always my honor and great joy to speak with you. I am aware of your educational itinerary. It is wonderful that you are so receptive to Abraham and that you take his lessons seriously. It is wonderful to witness your dedication to your position in this Mission. I would say, in our Mission there has been many unintentional miscarriages, misunderstandings, miracle-seeking - this is not bad, this is natural evolutionary growth.

In our Mission there have been a great many obstacles to overcome. I can say, down through history there have been those well-intentioned individuals who desired to create change for the better, yes, and somehow defaulted through hidden agendas. This is not to cast judgment, no.

I come tonight to perhaps clear the record; to bring some light to those topics in which you have wondered on. As most of you know by now our Melchizedek teaching schools which we have endeavored to establish are indeed established - this is no surprising announcement to those who already have felt this, no. Our schools are to assist in the upliftment regarding meanings and values for our responsibilities as universe citizens.

It is with great joy that I say, Michael is our Headmaster and He sees to your educational curriculum. Michael is aware of your spiritual necessities and has designed our program to meet your needs as well as the needs of the universe. I am happy to assist in your morontial training. I now turn this time over to Abraham.

I am Abraham. On behalf of my students and I, we would express our thanks, Machiventa. Many of us remember a time in the early days of our Teaching Mission when the Melchizedek schools were believed to be built 'materially.' Deep within our Mission, we endeavored to surpass those human thoughts that were so cemented in materialism and in wish-fulfillment. I would not call this prediction error, no. I would not blame anyone for the misunderstandings that occurred. I would, however, bring this topic into the light for a purpose.

Within a few short years, your thoughts have been slowly molded to embrace the greater realities of the kingdom. Many have exhausted their hopes for actual material dwelling places to learn spiritual realities. I say, many now know that Father's kingdom is not material. Our Mission is led by the Spirit and built on a spiritual foundation. Our schools contain no instruments wherewith to teach, no. Our schools are spiritual and mindal.

I do not mean to cast judgment or ridicule, no. I am joyful to expose the truth that you, our mortal students, have surpassed your desire for physical proof that our Mission exists. You have come to accept that our kingdom is spiritual. Our Mission is spiritual; and with that, I can assure you that spiritual information is forthcoming.

Universal broadcasting messages are once again able to reach this planet, and I can say with authority that you are welcomed back into the universe, it is as though you were never isolated. I do not say there has been no learning from this isolation, no! I say, although the Father has never forgotten you, it was necessary at one point to isolate our rebellious world. We have lived through this isolation and have learned, and it is over. Yes, you are fully welcomed back as Nebadon citizens.

Do you see how far you have traveled in your thinking? Do you see how your growth has affected the whole of the planet? Thoughts are pliable; and if Father is allowed to teach then does beauty result. You are learning that Father is at hand. You have endeavored to understand your position in this universe and give thanks for it.

In your efforts to understand worship, I would ask that you allow your minds to be pliable. Worship is neither here nor there, this nor that. Worship is living, as truth is living; and I would ask that in your efforts to worship you must become childlike. As a child is allowing his parents' watchcare, so it is with worship. Worship is an understanding between you and your Father. There are no labels to be put on worship, and there are no definitions to be cast. Worship is that connection with Father that reminds us how much we are loved.

Through our efforts to praise and show love, we are shown that we are loved. Worship is not any one set prayer, or thoughts and feelings to be repeated, no! Worship is an opening, a reconnection of child and Parent. Worship is not necessarily an exercise, not set ceremonial words, no! Worship is the heartfelt connection to the Parent of all parents, an understanding of your son- or daughtership with the Most High.

We would ask ourselves: What have we to give the Father who needs us not? What have we to offer the 'One God' who has everything? Do you see - Father asks not from us nor needs anything from us. There is nothing we can do to give to Him. Are you understanding that although we, having nothing to give, Father desires very much to know us and call each of us forth as His children? And we say, "Father, you are everything. Make us like you."

Worship is known to be the most efficient medicine against the spiritual poisons. With worship, with gratitude, there is not room for spiritual poisons. With gratitude, there is no fear, no anger, no despair, no confusion. Do you see, worship is perhaps the single most healthful and growth-promoting thing we can do. As we worship, we are not only healed of our spiritual poisons, we also receive healing in the areas of emotional, mental, and physical.

Worship is a living energy that the universe 'as a whole' has in common. Worship is the 'part' (oneself) in gratitude for being included into the 'whole.' It would be beneficial for you to further discuss worship and your understanding of Machiventa's message.

I will accept questions next week. I am grateful to you for your patience and kindness in allowing me to speak with you. Until next week, shalom.

Confer With Michael to More Fully Understand and Know Our Father

[Prior to this evening's meeting there arose heavy discussion and a little discord among some group members regarding last week's lesson and other group issues.]
I am ABRAHAM. I am honored to be a part of this team effort. It is wonderful to see you each dedicate yourselves to the will of our Father. Through stepping aside and allowing Father to speak you have made your decisions based on what is best for all. Think not that I stood idly by and did nothing, no; I participated in your discussion, just as did several Father Fragments. It is surely wonderful to see our lesson be put forth into action.

Last week we discussed your living understanding of worship and how worship is not a ceremonial 'obligation,' but 'reconnection' of our Parent Father to His spirit child. This week you have learned that Father works through and with all avenues, and that He is surely unpredictable and quite awesome in power.

We also discussed your welcomed status back into the universe and, the benefits from that. This planet is fully capable of receiving universal broadcasts and information. Our ability to understand worship enables us to more easily receive universal broadcast messages. It is these messages that assist us in our evolution - mentally and spiritually. It is this method of understanding that allows all residents within a universe to know and understand the God-in-time, the Supreme Being.

We find this most recent progress most uplifting, and we are made to give thanks and express our joy to Father. It is most interesting to be included in this particular planetary awakening. After surviving much spiritual upheaval, this world has run the race of time; and although it has stumbled, it has always returned to continue the race.

Michael has said He has not cried tears of pity for this world - and I am understanding that by that, He meant of Urantia's continuing endurance to run the race of time, and never giving up because of a few brief moments of stumbling. Michael is in great understanding of this world and its citizens. It is exceptionally wonderful that you have taken Him in as your personal confidant, brother, and friend.

I say that Michael has gone before you and is fully understanding of your mortal defeats and triumphs. With such a friend, it is at times tempting to give Michael our thanks and praise. This is not wrong because I say that all thanks and praise does reach the Source of all there is to be thankful for. Michael is in understanding of this. He is accepting of your love and personal friendship; but as for 'worship,' He passes it along to His Father. Yes, this is understood.

We have discussed our Father being matchless in wisdom, love, mercy – and we are in understanding of His personality aspects more every day. You are each beginning to know Father and strive to be like Him. You are learning of the worship-connection and how this enables you to understand your universal citizenship.

I would add one more perspective to this area: I would encourage you to speak frequently with our Creator/Brother/Father – Michael. He, and His Spirit of Truth, are ever prepared to answer your spiritual questions, perhaps cleanse your erroneous thoughts, and bring new light to old mortal problems. It is most wonderful also to know that in learning of your Father's personality aspects – and, your knowing of His presence – that we may each be assisted by the understanding help of His Son, Michael. Please be at ease to confer with Him at any time. Are there questions that pertain to either last week's lesson or tonight's?

RACHEL: I'd like to make a comment, Father Abraham. I think it is just wonderful after all these years and years that, finally, Urantia is now included with all the rest of the planets and that the isolation has been lifted. I think that is marvelous. I am thankful.

ABRAHAM: Completely understood. I also, having my origin on Urantia, find this all very uplifting, exciting. It sets me to be in wonder of Father's awesome power and knowledge. It is quite beautiful to have had my mortal experience and then be able to serve the planet of my birth. I am also grateful, yes. Good comment. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, on this reconnection with the universal broadcast circuits, do we now come to more of a reality of other existences in our universe and connection with them? Or, are you talking more-so of a better connection to our spiritual minds and thoughts, perhaps like how you are connected with us now? I am a little foggy as to what that reconnection really is.

ABRAHAM: Yes, understood. Your world's new-found reconnection is bringing a greater amount of light. This light is creating an increased environment of love and peace. Upon entering the stages of Light and Life, your understanding of your citizenship within the universe is paramount because it adds to the growth of the Supreme. Yes, it is mostly spiritual. The advanced spiritual understanding inevitably brings about a greater understanding 'universally.' This understanding spiritually brings about a great deal of knowledge about the universe – materially and physically. As Urantia becomes used to its new universal status it will regain that spiritual momentum which was forfeited long ago, and return to a more God-conscious state. This

God-consciousness connects you to these universe broadcast messages. Your understanding of worship enables you to be prepared to receive these messages. Your understanding that worship is moving and is living, assists you in understanding messages that may hail forth from the corners of the universe. Does this help?

CALVIN: It is, then, quite an influence. As well as by responding to that influence we would be enabled to pick up increased understanding of who we are and our place in this universe. (Abraham: Yes.) Calvin: Would that enlightenment then only come to those who are spiritually-minded? For instance, would the scientific world pick up on this? meaning those who are not spiritually-minded?

ABRAHAM: Those that listen with the ears of the spirit will no doubt receive more information than others, but it is highly possible that the scientific world will awaken with their new understanding – that Father and His vast universes hold the cures to all ailments – mentally, physically, socially, and spiritually. Yes, good question. Another question?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, on Sunday I read an article in the newspaper that goes right along with what you are saying. It says, "Physicians believe in the power of prayer. In a recent survey of two-hundred-sixty-nine doctors, ninety-nine percent of them said they were convinced that prayer can heal." They said they feel this way because they have seen it work. This Dr. Herbert Benson, on Dec. 15, is heading a Harvard Medical School conference on spirituality and healing. It is to be held in Boston. Then another one is scheduled to be held in Los Angeles in March. Now I would assume that all of this is coming about on our planet because of everything that you have been saying the last two or three lessons.

ABRAHAM: Yes. (Rachel: Are you going to attend the one on the 15th?) Abraham: It is unknown, but I am aware that the medical profession is receiving what would appear to be greater understanding of the relationship between mind and body. In their efforts to study and document their findings, they are stumbling across the ideas that there exists a spiritual power. It is now becoming apparent, as you yourself have seen, that a change appears to be taking place – a feeling of 'knowing,' that was perhaps not present before. Mortals (spiritual or not) will pick up these new awareness feelings, insights. Those spiritual-minded will understand and be educated on how to define them. Those towards the 'non-spiritual' may perhaps become confused and misinterpret these new feelings of awareness and knowing. Yes, these conferences in which you speak, I am informed they have been a long time in the making. Does this help?

RACHEL: Yes, because they said, just like you're saying, and I quote: "We see it all the time and can't deny it. We've seen that it is powerful in conditions, including angina pectoris, asthma, ulcers, congestive heart failure, diabetes – and on all forms of pain." I think that is wonderful that they are recognizing all of it now, and the spirituality part of it.

ABRAHAM: Yes. I am in agreement. I also believe this is wonderful progress. These circuits are enabling mortals to know and perhaps spot things which are untrue. Father Fragmentsassist, yes, certainly; but to incorporate with the cosmic mind allows you to know, personally, if things are true or false. Yes. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I have a question; but first I spoke with Rebecca (in Nashville) yesterday; she asked me to tell you that she loves you and that she appreciates you so much in everything that you have done for her. I wanted to share that with you. My question is regarding the end of the isolation, this time of 'stepped up circuitry.' My question is regarding the other 'celestial' things that have been going on in the past recent years – the light workers; the other transmitted information; the other minds and hearts that are opening up. There is a lot going on right now, and I am wondering – with me being new to you all, do you look at these things as separate from this Teaching Mission Correcting Time? Or, as a part of the whole? And if you don't mind, could I ask about two channels called Orin and Daben. They have been doing wonderful broadcasts. I just wanted to ask you about that?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. First, I also send my love and gratitude to Rebecca, and say she is most certainly welcome, and I would also thank her for her dedication to this Mission. If I am understanding your question I would respond: The re-encircuiting of this planet was a time-consuming process; it was not rebuilt in a day. With the slow process of re-encircuitment, many individuals received small amounts of light at a time. Those individuals that have been reborn of the spirit have received small clues that this re-encircuitment was occurring and is being completed. Individuals who appear to be reborn of the spirit, are at this time somewhat slammed by this spiritual light, perhaps overwhelmed. Individuals who have remained spiritually balanced in this new understanding are those that have taken in bits of light one at a time, so as to not overwhelm. Yes, individuals at present who are fairly new will indeed receive a great amount of light which can appear to be overwhelming. I say, it is with a balanced understanding of worship, humility, and faith, that rebirth of the spirit will be able to be gradually tamed and directed towards a cooperative area of growth. As for the Teachers Orin and Daben, I am aware of them, yes. We are not working closely with one another, but I would confirm they are highly skilled in spiritual education. Is there more you would understand about this?

MIRIAM: You help a lot in confirming that. In being new to the reading of the Urantia Book, I am feeling a little self-conscious, in a way, and I feel like I need to negate some of the things I had accepted before. I mean this is me doing this, there is no one else – I am feeling like everything that I have learned and the awareness that I have achieved, I am questioning validity to that. So that helps in confirming about those beings. The negative part of me was thinking that you were going to say, 'no, they don't exist, you're up in the night.' So that helps me very much.

ABRAHAM: Understood. I am under instructions to be careful in what I can say. I am limited due to upsetting your freewill choice. I am not at liberty to provide proof that our Mission exists. I am restricted in what I can answer, but I would confirm that your indwelling Father is at liberty to release such information to you without restriction. Your inner Father is most qualified to shed light on those areas which may be dark or confusing. You are learning to trust in Him and understand His trust in you. Your next step may be to trust in yourself the way Father trusts in you; and know that this life is not so serious, so heavy. One more question?

CALVIN: On this, the Melchizedek schools and the so-called 'Melchizedek appearances,' I can see how easy it would be for us to expect that Machiventacould incarnate again, because he did do it once during your day. I have still not ruled out whether your comments are saying that he won't. I don't know if that is part of something that you want to clear up or not. To me it wouldn't matter whether he did or didn't; I can see the importance of us learning to live with spiritual enlightenment, not physical proof, like 'wow, he is visibly here' proof. But yes, he did come once before and did incarnate, so I can see how so many did get excited about him incarnating again. Melchizedek clarified a lot about the schools last week, but not so much on our record about himself and his incarnation. Is there more that you would like to say on that subject?

ABRAHAM: Again, my information is limited in what I can say. I am aware that Melchizedek's material presence is not necessary here at this time. His physical presence is not necessary. His spiritual presence, however, is in great demand and we are grateful to have it. This is my understanding. I cannot say that Machiventa's material presence will not ever be made manifest here on Urantia. I can only confirm that it is not necessary at this time. It was once viewed that this world perhaps needed a physical presence to shake them from their slumber. We have found it wise to follow Michael's plan, and it has been unnecessary, presently, for the Melchizedeks to materialize. Michael's plan has been successful without material proof that our Mission exists. Yes, we also find cause to rejoice in that.

This week, as you understand your Father's personality aspects and attributes, look to the Creator Son on how and where to look. I would leave you with my love. Until next week, shalom.

A Little Worship Daily Brings A Healthy Balance And Attitude

I am ABRAHAM. I welcome you each here this evening. It is my supreme pleasure to speak with you. We have built a strong and lasting friendship that leads me to be at liberty when I communicate with you. I very much appreciate your friendship. I promise to always be as truthful with you as possible. Friends have everything to learn through each other. I am grateful for what you have taught me.

As you have discussed this evening regarding petitioning to Michael for His understanding, I also have benefited by our Brother/Father. Michael is a warm and understanding friend. He knows you and judges you not. Michael knows this mortal path and is enthusiastically awaiting to assist all those who seek Him out. I must say, through my association with Michael I have better understood the true meaning of worship. Michael has shown me His heart, He has nothing to hide.

Through my friendship with Michael, I have learned His definition of worship, and I must say, it is truly beautiful. I would have you know that through your relationship with Michael He can also reveal to you His heart and the meaning of worship - the appreciative value of your son- or daughtership with the living God. Many can understand that worship is moving, living, growing; and certainly, know the problems that present themselves when worship is absent.

You must sense that some of your daily living is efficient and flowing, and there are those times when you feel small in the world and walked on, unnoticed. Do you see, your worship-connection reveals to you your eternal son- or daughtership with Father, and the absence of worship tends to make you forget your status of son- or daughtership with Him? To forget your status is to lean towards your more raw animal-like tendencies. To forget your status is to feel small, inadequate, unloved, forgotten.

Do you see? Worship is not for Father's benefits; not for Father to gather praise to Himself; not for Father to gain power or numbers within the kingdom, no! Worship is acknowledgment that you are a child of the living God who most definitely adores you. Spiritual education is quite incomplete without worship, for worshipping is your acceptance of Father as your Father, and you as His child.

We find that worship assists us in the area of service to our fellows. It can replenish us with new energies. With these energies, we are not only able to serve our fellows, but to serve them cheerfully. Worship is a living energy also; when it affects rain down upon us, we are filled to distribute this as truth, beauty, and goodness. I would ask that you take an extra minute regularly, to sit in worshipful meditation and attempt to feel the Father's energy. Look for that change in attitude.

Just as when one goes without food, there is malnutrition, illness, and weakness; and on the other hand is there unhealthy repercussions for those who tend to overindulge in feeding the material body. This is the same with meditation - too little is not nutritious; too much can be over-burdening. A healthy balance is when meditation will fill you with new energy and enthusiasm to serve; and, feel Father's peace and comfort as a universe citizen. Have you questions?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I have been in meditation practice a lot lately. I have been meditating about an hour a day and reading the Urantia Book and enjoying my experience with worship. I am wondering if there is imbalance - maybe too much meditation. Could you explain that a little bit more to me? I am thinking maybe I am imbalanced.

ABRAHAM: Understood. An hour a day spent in spiritual learning, reading and meditation, is balanced, yes; but I would say that an hour of just meditation is too long. Perhaps thirty minutes would be more sufficient to receive the Father's energy and be uplifted by it, rather than to have overmuch and be weighed down, diffusing this worshipful energy. Very insightful question; yes, you are correct. It is helpful to begin with some reading to find that worshipful place within. Some would perhaps listen to music. There is a period of about ten to fifteen minutes that the mind must find its spiritual foundation from which it proceeds into worshipfulness. The clearing of one's thinking takes a few moments to feel a real connection with Father. So I would say, your format is good, just a bit lengthy. Does this help? (Miriam: Oh yes. Thank you.) Abraham: Another question?

TECTRA: A follow-up question on that, Abraham. Are these guidelines for Miriam herself? or is this kind of a general guideline that you are giving. I know lots of people that meditate for hours and it seems to really help them; they are in a really good place with that format. Can you speak a little further about that? I know there are Yogis and others that meditate a lot and come to new awareness in their spiritual being?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I suppose it is a general guideline for everyone. I am aware that the first few moments of stillness are the purest and most tangible connection with Father. This is where Father's energy is noticed. There have been many who meditate for long periods, and I understand that this serves them well in what perhaps they are seeking; but as for our Mission purpose, it is not necessary. But yes, for those where it serves them to spend hours in meditation, this is perfectly acceptable for them. In our morontial lessons on the mansion worlds, there will come a time when meditation will be lengthened to serve the spiritual needs of an individual. The knowledge beyond this world is indescribable, and lengthy meditations are practiced for universal understandings. Perhaps those individuals who have reached morontia levels are inspired to meditate for lengthy periods to attain these universal truths, but I would not recommend it as a general rule. This lengthy period of meditation perhaps is the exception. Does this help? (Tectra: Yes. Thank you.)

RACHEL: Well I'll tell you what, Abraham, I am surely glad that you said that shorter period of time is good because if I tried to meditate for an hour I either be climbing the wall or I'd be snoring - I don't know which.

ABRAHAM: This is quite common, and will be so as long as you possess your earthly frame. It is a wonderful notion however, to imagine what the possibilities would be without the burden of the material body. Yes. (Rachel: But right now a little dab will do me, huh?) [laughter.] Abraham: Yes, indeed. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, a couple weeks ago Melchizedek came and he said he'd "like to clear the air" on a few things, so to speak. One of those still in my mind - a few years back - and it has to do with the universe broadcasts circuits being reestablished, and the work that Van El was doing with us, so we thought. Did we get carried off in a tangent on the Van El thing? Is he still ongoing - or was he ever? Can you give us more insight on the Van El subject? [Editor's note: Van El was an unseen entity such as midwayer or a power director, who was assisting some in the group in 1992, to synchronize in our reception of universe or system broadcasts. Most didn't quite catch on.]

ABRAHAM: It is my information, and that is in itself quite sketchy, that the information on Van El was somewhat accurate, yes, and yet a bit blown out of proportion. Let it be understood that natural evolution in understanding is always best, and your experience in this has led you each to be learners within our vast universe. Your experience has led you to your exceptional group honesty and friendship. Any intentions that may have caused some exaggerations are innocent and a part of your natural learning.

I am slipping. I would confirm to you each that the answers you sincerely seek are within, and I have much faith in you each. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Come To Me, I Am The Purifier. I Will Show You My Heart, and Yours

Abraham & Christ Michael, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-16-1996

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you each this evening. I am happy to be here with you. I am aware that you, each one, should have experienced this week contact with the Master and His Spirit of Truth. You could deny my statement, yes; and yet, if you would review your week you would find my words to be true.

Most of you have experienced a bit of unsettledness within yourselves as of late; and I would say, that is most likely when you have encountered the Spirit of Truth. To find yourselves at confusion at times gives you the opportunity to be open and inquisitive. Perhaps this week the Master did shed some light on your obvious fears and confusions.

The Master has shown you His heart, and He also shows you your heart. Michael is highly skilled at revealing one's areas of confusion without casting bad feelings. He is able to assist you as a co-worker and not as an employer. Michael is like a best friend who would reveal to you only truth.

I would take this moment to pause and allow our beloved Michael a few words.

MICHAEL: Greetings, my children. I am joy-filled to share my message with you. It is my great honor to serve 'with' you; it is my great honor to also 'serve' you. Part of my joy comes from your willingness to follow me. I would make it known to you that there is nothing that you cannot lay before me. I know you - your thoughts, your desires, and your shortcomings; there is nothing to be hidden.

I would not pry into your affairs where I am unwelcome. I would however, teach you without the burden of judgment or guilt. I would welcome you to see my heart; see who I am; partake of my knowledge. Co-create with me your eternal path to our Paradise Father. If you would grant me the privilege to see your heart, I would shed a most beautiful light upon it. I would assist you in looking at your fears and discover the spiritual method to overcoming them.

Yes, I would ask you to bring me your fears; allow me to make the path more illuminated so you may see how best to solve and understand all things. Come to me! I am the Purifier! Allow me to know you and show you how to take your steps on this mortal planet - practically, through spirituality. To understand my Spirit of Truth, one must be willing to embrace truth - be it positive or negative.

Fear not. I have gone before you, and I will also go 'with' you. Carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. On behalf of my students and myself, I would like to express our gratitude to you, our Brother/Father. We are in understanding of the importance of truth, and I shall make it my duty to further enlighten your mortal children on the benefits that come from knowing you.

Michael has said He is the Purifier. Those that are willing to allow Him to shed light on those places of darkness will be benefited. I must say that Michael's light is not always shining upon comforting places, no. I would dare to say that His light may reveal things that are dark, unappealing.

Those that are willing to go through these dark places with the Purifier find themselves in His wonderful comforting presence, a place without fear or feelings of unworthiness. It does require effort on your part to brave these rough waters with Michael. It is not easy to advance in spirituality; it is a labor that will bring you comfort and peace that you have not known before. Michael is able to reveal to you your spirit poisons, and in the revealing, begins the healing.

It is said: To have a friend, one must be a friend. And I likewise say: To have a brother/sister, one must also be a brother/sister. As well, I say: To have a Father, one must show themselves to be a learning child. Yes, your relationship with Michael is of much importance. And as we continue our spiritual lessons you will find this to be more and more true. Are there questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, I join in expressing our love and appreciation to Michael – and, for his lesson tonight. We are all so grateful for your kindness in presenting these lessons to us, I find them so very helpful. I can see in all the principles and teachings you have taught us that now you are bringing us to an awareness of our connection with our Brother/Creator. As Samuel, Faye and I were talking outside before the meeting – sometimes it feels like Michael is so far away; and yet when we look back, we can see how He was always there, as He is tonight with us. How can we be more aware in ‘the present’ time of His presence when out ‘in the world’ instead of having to look back and find that He was there? Does my question make sense?

ABRAHAM: Yes. When one thinks of the Master, they envision feelings of joy and comfort. But I would say to you that Michael is also the Teacher of hard truths – and this does not always produce joy and comfort. Michael is understanding of this mortal life and is able to lead you in the most successful route to our Paradise Father. To know Michael is to feel joy and comfort, yes, but I would say that to allow Him to reveal to you your areas of needed work is to experience much deeper levels of joy and comfort. Does this not lead us all to thank Father and be worshipful for His loving watchcare? Michael has earned His sovereignty over Nebadon through His bestowals; and, it is known that He could have easily accepted sovereignty over Nebadon without participating in those final days of His seventh and final bestowal. Without question He was certainly qualified, and yet He chose to remain within the will of His Father and experience the mortal life. Michael was not ignorant of what He was getting into, no. He was aware of the hardships of mortal life. He chose to accept this challenge and move through His mortal life victoriously. It is the Master’s experience that grants you, each, strength to endure, to carry on, to take advantage of your experience in mortal living. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I'm going down to visit my family for the holidays, and I'm unsettled. The unsettledness that you were talking about strikes a chord with me and my experience this week. My whole family, including my mother and my sister, are reading the Urantia Book and they just recently got to hear their spiritual names. So also, is my uncle and my aunt – it seems everyone is involved. It is a time for joy in my family, but it is also a time of confusion. I was wondering if you had some words of guidance – other than to simply rely on Michael and ask for His help throughout the day, like I have been trying to do. I guess I'm just asking for some personal guidance. I feel like I don't know if I am doing a good job. Yes, I want to be doing right, and I don't want to stir things up. So that is my question.

ABRAHAM: Understood. In the learning of spirituality there are no shortcuts; nothing can you skip-over; each experience is valuable and required. The experience of you and your family is an important lesson that you will all receive together – it cannot be passed. Your understanding of spirituality may differ from those you love – and yet, I would recommend that you each give over all authority to the Father in heaven, and remember that you are each a learner in a vast ocean of spiritual knowledge. Not anyone is higher on the spiritual ladder than another, no. Each one is at different levels in their learning, and each one must be treated as an equal. This season is always intense and stress-causing, yes. But I would remind you each that this holiday – not being Christ's actual birthday – is a wonderful time to focus on your gratitude. Yes, gratitude for your salvation from the fetters of time and poisons of the spirit. Yes, gratitude for your salvation from ignorance. And, a grateful attitude towards 'the hand of Father in your hand,' showing you the way to Him. Does this answer? (Miriam: Yes, and I thank you.) Abraham: If there are no pressing questions...

RACHEL: I'd just like to make a comment, Father Abraham. I want to thank Christ Michael for being here with us tonight. I know that He knows how much we love Him and appreciate Him. And, I want you to know that you are certainly appreciated right along with Him. I know that He did tell us before, in a message that I took for one of His birthday's, that it didn't matter that His birthday was celebrated here on Urantia on the wrong date as long as He was remembered, and that He certainly enjoyed all of the celebrations and the beautiful lights in the trees, and all that took place in His behalf. That's all.

ABRAHAM: Certainly, yes, and the appreciation is known and returned.

To you each, I would request that you attempt not to flee from your overpowering negative thoughts – but look at them as if Christ Himself was showing them to you. My love goes with you, my friends and students. Until next week, shalom.

The Father and Son Support Team | Seeing Beauty In The Works of Father In Liaison With The Son

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you this evening. I am in awesome wonder at the spiritual upliftment that is occurring now on your world. Father and Michael (His Spirit) have been successful in reaching the hearts of Urantians to further promote growth – individually as well as collectively.

I say, had it not been for Michael and the pouring of His Spirit upon all flesh, this world would have been so much farther behind. I find myself in such splendid gratitude for our Universal Father and His Creator Son.

Last week in Michael's message He had declared Himself to be the Purifier. I have found this to be a wonderful blessing for me. There is not anything I cannot take to the Master. I am not prone to feel shame, no, for I am at ease to allow Michael to cast His beautiful light upon my confusion.

I still happen to experience adversity, and yet I am not bound by hopelessness, no. Now, I find myself intrigued by Michael and His methods used to unlock the doors of adversity with His spiritual keys.

I am still somewhat prone to the poisons of the spirit – and yet, I shy not away from the Purifier for He casts a beautiful and understanding light upon my shortcomings, to allow me to acknowledge and find solutions. I fear not in allowing the Purifier to show me what's in my heart, for I must say, I am shown without being degraded or belittled in any way.

In allowing Michael to show me my heart I am allowed to experience the Master's personality attributes: His mercy, love, humor, and wisdom. In being shown the Master's personality attributes, I am also learning to take on these attributes also.

We have spoken much about the spirit poisons and the medicine to overcome them. I would highly recommend a close personal relationship with Michael. Michael is the bridge to understanding our Paradise Father. He is the Comforter to those who seek Him out. A close personal relationship with the Master is to invite into your lives His mercy, love, humor, and wisdom.

When we speak of serving, there was no greater servant than the Master; His close personal relationship with the Father enabled Him to overcome the poisons of the spirit with the fruits of the Spirit. The Master's unbroken communion allowed Him to have on hand – Father's understanding; Father's wisdom.

Do you see, this is like the Spirit of Truth. To love and embrace truth is to invite the Spirit of Truth into your lives, allowing you to have on hand the Master's understanding and wisdom. Do you see the beauty in the works of Father in liaison with the Son? This is truly cause to rejoice and give thanks.

This week, I would ask you to look for the spiritual team that supports you in your daily living. In this recognition of the 'Father and the Son support team,' is it not cause to be thankful and worship? It is! Are there questions?

JOSHUA: I have a question. I don't know whether you'll be allowed to give an answer or not. You told us a few weeks ago that the Teaching Mission was alive and well. I was wondering if you would be permitted to tell us what nations or states they are in?

ABRAHAM: I am permitted to say our Mission extends into several countries, several different languages. And yet, the Mission is not usually labeled by the name of 'The Correcting Time.' We have reached many, yes, and yet not all groups of peoples would understand our full intentions and trust us, as you have. We are still endeavoring to gain trust and to release more information where we can.

TECTRA: Abraham, I have a question. Could you give me an example of how you are still somewhat prone to the poisons of the spirit? What does that look like for you?

ABRAHAM: On my level, these experiences are easily handled most of the time. There does arise those occasions when I feel unequipped to deal with certain personalities I may meet. I have witnessed what I would feel to be unspeakable unbrotherly-like qualities – such as on your world: child abuse, war, natural disaster – realities that would prompt me to rise up in anger and want to voice my anger and sorrow. I, at these times, would endeavor to seek out the Master when I am overcome with such enormous confusions. I have been sufficiently trained in these areas; and yet, from where I am I can still feel the pain of an abused child; an elderly person in isolation; or perhaps what appears to be grave injustices. It is a saving truth that Michael certainly cares about each and every detail of your lives. It is not to be embarrassed over or shameful, or attempt to hide these painful feelings, no. The Master is at hand to assist you in what you feel to be hopelessness. And, I may not go so far as to feel hopeless, but I do on occasion come against the spirit poisons. Does this answer? (Tetra: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

RACHEL: I just have a comment, Father Abraham. This is the season of festivities and everyone is celebrating the birth of Christ Michael here on Urantia, and people at this time of the year and season are far more loving, tolerant, understanding, giving. It would be wonderful if that could remain all year, but it just never seems to. I do hope you and all your associates enjoy all these festivities as we plan on enjoying.

ABRAHAM: I would thank you for your well-wishes and assure you that we do enjoy this season of open hearts and minds. It would indeed be wonderful to have this experience last the year, yes; and I would say too, that you are indeed helping us with your warmth and friendliness. We are not worried about this season being insignificant because of material tendencies, no. We have witnessed great changes in the hearts and minds of Urantia and we would acknowledge you as a fine example of one who would share and spread goodwill year around. Thank you. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, could you give us maybe a little more enlightenment on what you refer to as 'the Christ child being spiritually born' in this day and age of the Earth's existence – from your perspective?

ABRAHAM: From my perspective – it would appear that the world's present experiences are in upheaval and are likened to labor pains. And the birth, as I would see it, would be for the world's citizens to see Christ in His reality – who He really is; and that Urantia, having gained back its circuits, is once again functioning as a part within the whole of Nebadon. It is the world's consciousness which is upstepped (more capable) that has gained you this status/opportunity thus far. It is your desire and willingness to be participants in the universe citizenship that will be the birth of Christ consciousness. Does this help?

CALVIN: Yes. It gives me a bigger viewpoint, a larger universe-wide viewpoint instead of an individual or even a worldwide viewpoint.

ABRAHAM: Yes. I am grateful to know you each and serve you to the best of my ability. I would express to you my love and devotion. During this festive season, forget not to communicate with your spiritual support team. Love and peace be with you each. Until next week, shalom.

The Flavor of Life | In Living In the Fullness of Life, There In The Midst, Is Our Father

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you each this evening. It is my supreme pleasure to be here with you. It is known that you each have had various experiences with Michael's Spirit of Truth. Michael is ever so merciful when revealing life's hard truths. In His technique, we are shown a more efficient solution to spiritual difficulties - without feeling small or inferior.

Michael, in His ever so merciful way, reveals to us those spiritual realities that are required to travel onward towards our Paradise destination. In His mercy, we are shown universe realities, and His methods on how to live within them. Michael's Spirit of Truth is enabling you to better understand your inner Father Fragment. Father guides us into all truth, and Michael assists us in understanding what truth is. With such assistance, there is no cause for hopelessness or anxiety.

Yes, your 'spiritual support team' (Father, Michael and His Spirit of Truth) is always prepared for any human complexities that may arise. This, in itself, is cause to relax and be joyful.

In our learning to serve as the Master served, it is altogether wise to study His life. The Master was not one for passive inaction. He always rose to the occasion where He could put forth His spiritual tools and be about the Father's business. So it is with His Spirit of Truth through which Michael is always prepared and willing to stand forth in positive action. You would do well to know and understand your spiritual support team when in the act of serving.

As I view you this evening, I remember our past together. I understand your efforts to travel Paradise-ward in a material body. I do know of your difficulties, yes, for I have experienced them; and yet, I can see where a life in this day and age may be somewhat more complex. I am inspired by your courage to carry on regarding your mission purpose in the face of possible humiliation, ridicule, and misunderstandings with loved ones.

I am inspired by your determination to live within the will of our Father and the word of His Son. I must say, in your efforts to grow, you have overcome many of the spirit poisons - and although they may still befall upon you from time to time, you are not left feeling without hope. Do you not agree that most of what causes you anxiety never comes to pass?

I do have some understanding of the mortal path and the tendency to lose awareness of the present moment. In the rush of material living, the flavor of life is lost; the feeling of love is somehow out of focus and the small appreciations are unnoticed - and therein, one can lose the ability to feel and know the presence of Father. Are there not moments when you feel appreciative for one thing or another, and then become distracted by your obligations? This compares to a painting where an artist may keep repainting the background and be unable to move on to the detail of what makes the painting 'the painting.'

How often would you stop and utilize your five senses to view a beautiful sunset, to hear a wonderful symphony, to appreciate the words from a child? I say this is the flavor that brings joy into life. I do not say to surround yourselves with material adornment, no! but I would ask you to acknowledge and feel with all your senses, the present, the present moment. Yes, in living in the fullness of life - there in the midst, is our Father.

A year is passing. A new year will soon begin. I would say to you, my friends, that in your mortal experience there is goodness in living within the fullness of the present. There is not guilt or worry over obligations. There is the ever-efficient presence of Father who leads you to your true obligations, priorities. Father asks that we have life and have it abundantly. There is not guilt in enjoyment and appreciation for the splendor of mortal living. Living in full awareness of the present, enables us to make direct contact with our Father and His never-ending abundance of wisdom. Are there questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, thanks again for your thought-filled and much to reflect-on lesson for another week. If I am grasping the point of this one, for myself, it is to learn to find Father in the moment and to let go of worry and strife and the cares of the material world - because in doing that I miss the realness of life. It does seem like I am way too busy for what few moments it takes to do that. I know you are not saying we should regimentally schedule a certain amount of time each day to shut everything else out and to find the Father; but I think what you are saying is to find Father in everything we do - in our work, in our play, in our humor, a beautiful sky, and so on - to do this in the moments of where we are.

ABRAHAM: Yes, and to stop and give full awareness to your appreciation, and allow yourself to experience joy. Too often do mortals find themselves deep in obligation and crisis without taking those moments of awareness to appreciate the beauty in things. All too often you are clouded by what you should be doing as opposed to being within Father's presence and asking Him, "Father, what should I be doing?" In mortal's efforts to endure life they have forgotten how to enjoy it. Does this help?

CALVIN: Yes, very much. May I introduce a friend of mine, Kamille's brother-in-law, Chad Smith from Las Vegas, who is here with us tonight. He is welcome to ask whatever he might want.

CHAD: Abraham, you are choosing to speak through somebody right now. Is that your preference? or do you have other ways to communicate with people, directly or indirectly?

ABRAHAM: I am choosing this method with Ellanor because she allows it. If she did not, I would attempt to perhaps use different methods, such as speaking to Ellanor through her friends, her family; or perhaps through meditation where messages are felt rather than heard. To speak through another is not uncommon. We have perfected this method over time. I would agree that everyone here this evening is quite capable of using this particular method - but whether there is a willingness, is another question. But I say, those mortals who claim to have exclusive rights on this particular method of communication are not being truthful. All are capable and indeed welcome to experience this technique; it is a matter of willingness and trust and allowance on the part of the receiving mortal. As time goes on, this method of communication will appear to be quite natural and not at all the phenomenon some proclaim it to be. Still, as this world progresses further into Light and Life, this particular method of transmission-receiving will be outdated and unnecessary in order to reach the masses, for the natural abilities of those who seek to live within the will of Father will easily have all needed information at hand through the universal circuits and the use of the cosmic mind. Does this help? (Chad: Yes, thank you.)

RACHEL: Father Abraham, this has to do with Mary (the mortal mother of Christ Michael here on Urantia) who is also known as the Virgin Mary. There have been so many reports lately from back East and around different places, of visitations from the Virgin Mary to groups and to individuals. Do you know of this, Father Abraham; and if so, can you tell us any more about it, if this is actually Christ Michael's mortal mother, Mary?

ABRAHAM: I do know of two occasions when Mary, mother of Jesus, has made herself known; and I can say, it is with full authority of Christ Michael that she assists in the Correcting Time. I would not agree all the appearances are Mary, no. Also, our Universe Mother Spirit, is deeply involved in our Mission. She and Her angelic daughters are known to on occasion appear with good tidings and messages of hope. Does this answer. (Rachel: Yes it does, thank you.) Abraham: One more question?

CALVIN: In references to the two questions of Chad's and Rachel's - this transmitting and receiving method of communication, versus 'visual' appearances such as occasions with Jesus' mother, Mary - we understand through past history that also Gabriel and others have made actual appearances. In your summation, why would your message be better received through transmission-receiving rather than through a vivid personal appearance? Is there more to this than just 'so we can believe without seeing?'

ABRAHAM: I am assigned to you as a part of a spiritual education group who are open to my teachings, whereas those who may witness visions are not at a status where they would so easily receive my teachings. The appearances of Gabriel, for instance, were and are where hope has been lost. And I would say, upon Mary's messages of hope - after the fanfare dies down, I am more able to teach the spiritual lessons. We are finding that those who embrace God with love and intelligence are prepared to receive our teachings; and those who may not be prepared for such light receive only what they can believe and understand.

I would express to you my love and gratitude for your patience and kindness towards me. And, I would remind you each to live in the fullness of each moment; be aware that Father dwells therein. My love is with you each. Until next week, shalom.

1997 MANSION WORLD TEACHINGS

Living Revelation, A Natural Gift To All Requires Our Dedication of First Doing the

Will of Father

01-06-1997

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you each. I am happy to be among the faithful and dedicated. You should have had obvious experiences this week with your spiritual support team – your indwelling Father, and Michael with His Spirit of Truth.

We have spoken about Michael's hard truths and having the courage to view them as positive experiential necessities. Also have we spoken about rediscovering the lost flavor of mortal living; and, finding that in the present moment, we know that is where Father dwells.

I endeavor to teach you these truths because it is important to lead you into the area of living revelation. Throughout history, many have claimed to speak the truths of God. Some claim to be witness to visions or dreams. Some have been accurate in their revelation messages, and some have not.

As you traverse the Mansion Worlds you find that the information you are most desirous of obtaining is easily done through revelation – an open mind and heart to those on high. In learning to live within the present, we are in tune with our Father and our Creator Son. Through sincere dedication to the doing of Father's will and submission thereof, you are prepared to receive the living revelation from on high.

In history, men and women have sought various methods wherewith to reach God in a more personal and loving manner. Many mortals have followed those human paths that lead to human beliefs. And, there are those mortals who have received divine revelation and have sought glory or good fortune from it. But yes, there are those mortals who have received divine revelation and lived it within their daily experience; they have sought to set examples for others to learn from and perhaps minister to those in need.

To comprehend living revelation, one must be completely submissive to their indwelling Father. One must be accepting of Father's decisions and Michael's hard truths. To receive revelation is not a call to go and preach to the masses, no. It is perhaps more of a call to live the example of Father's revelation in your lives.

In the pre-isolation period on Urantia (before the Lucifer Rebellion) the practice of revelation was not meant to be extraordinary, not anything to be regarded as mystical, no. The understanding of revelation was that it was endowed with each mortal as was mind. I would say to you, my friends, this recognition of living revelation returns to you now in this new day. And in your practices of living in accordance, you will feel the immediate understanding of Father and His hosts.

In learning the practice of living revelation, it is most likely that universal broadcast messages can be heard more accurately and easily. There is much understanding to undergo in order for the gift of living revelation to become practical, and learning to live in the present moment is a wonderful start. Have you questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, I need to go back to a statement you made. You said: "One must be accepting of Father's decisions and Michael's hard truths." Could you give me an example of what you mean by 'hard truths?'

ABRAHAM: These are the hard truths that Michael, in His merciful way, reveals to us to obtain higher spiritual learning. There are many hard mortal truths that the Master had to face during His sojourn on Urantia. Michael was strengthened by His unbroken communion with Father and was afforded the spiritual energy that He needed to complete His tasks. I would say the universe is friendly, yes, and yet many of the truths appear to be harsh; this is as it should be. For example: When deep in discussion with another, you feel as though you are speaking to one person when in fact it is highly likely you are also speaking with that person's parents, siblings, friends, teachers. And you realize that as this person views and speaks back with you, they are also speaking with not just you, but 'what and who' has helped to shape you into the self that you now are. In this discussion, you may actually discover your old baggage that hangs on your back as a burden. This at times, can appear to be embarrassing, ugly. You may wish to not face this, for it is a hard truth. Michael's hard truth seems to be most hard when they reflect your particular personality disorder. If one is eager to set aside the ego and let the good Teacher teach, then does this burden become light and easier understood. But the first initial look at this truth-realization is defined as a hard truth. Does this help? (Calvin: It helps very much. Yes, I do see much past baggage attached to my presentation when speaking with others - which needs refinement. Thank you. I'll let someone else ask something.)

JOSHUA: Father Abraham, a couple weeks ago I asked you about the Melchizedek schools and you were not permitted to give us an answer. But could you possibly tell us how many are in the United States and perhaps what states they are in? I do not want to contact them; I am just a little curious.

ABRAHAM: It is more correct to say that all mortals involved are attending only one Melchizedek University. Our Melchizedek University is spiritual; and therefore, only one in number. However, our pupils extend beyond my own knowledge. Does this help? (Joshua: Yes, very much. It puts a whole different light on the subject. Thank you.) Abraham: Certainly.

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I don't know if my understanding is clear with this or not: How may I discern the difference between a revelation, a message from my indwelling Spirit, or a message from you or some of the Teachers? Are all these, revelations?

ABRAHAM: Yes, there is nothing wrong with referring to spiritual messages as revelations for they are the revealing meanings of spiritual realities. There is hardly any difference. Some revelations will be personal to aid in your spiritual growth. Some revelations will be to aid you in helping another's spiritual growth; and still, other revelations will be known as aiding the growth of the Supreme Being - your assistance in the enhanced growth of the well-being of the universe. Does this help?

RACHEL: Yes, it does. Does that include actually a spiritual visitation where actually you do see some form?

ABRAHAM: Not necessary. In those that have shown themselves to be so faithful – those visual aids will be rare; and yet, I cannot say never. I would, however, have you to reach for a clearer spiritual understanding through living in the moment with the First Source and Center, and Michael – His Spirit of Truth.

I am always filled with energy when I am with you each. I am in anticipation of your exciting earthly adventure together. And I would admonish you to remember – the good teacher teaches with mercy, humor, and wisdom. Attempt to integrate those fruits in your teachings – when learning those hard truths from Michael. I would wish you peace and my love. Until next week, shalom.

Living Revelation Is Our Answer To Overcoming Evil With Good

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. I am joyful to witness your efforts to find unity. It is wonderful to watch each participant put aside self-interest in favor of the whole.

Michael's Spirit of Truth, though merciful, can appear to be rather harsh for the sensitive. As your morontial capabilities develop, you find your emotions are somewhat controlled while your logical thinking is apparent. As your spiritual development advances, you find you are spiritually grounded with practical feet.

We all must realize that understanding one another is our greatest task yet; and for true understanding, we must learn to consider the well-being of the whole. For understanding, we all must be willing to embrace truth – and yet, be fearless and tactful in verbalizing our truths.

The spiritual life is not a life of ease where one can feel free from everyday responsibilities, no; the spiritual life is willingness to traverse the rough terrain that leads us Paradise-ward. To embrace those hard truths with an open mind is to gear up for our eternal adventure.

You have shown yourselves to be willing to put forth effort into your spiritual education. You have shown your trust for Father and your own courage to embrace Michael's hard truths. Your dedication to your spiritual path has remained the foremost important reason for carrying on. This strong foundation of dedication is unshakable against the forces of the ego. Your willingness to embrace Michael's hard truths has strengthened you against the elements of the world's injustices and the ego's agenda.

As you strive to be aware of the flavor of life and live in appreciative worshipfulness of each moment, your Father is readily available to assist you in doing His bidding. Father is always ready to assist and uphold His children. Those who embrace each moment of mortal living find themselves in the presence of Father – and in this presence are Father's words. This living revelation is our key toward Light and Life. This living revelation is the answer to overcoming evil with good.

You, my friends, have matured on your quest for spiritual enlightenment; and I say, even though this is just the beginning, you have indeed overcome many obstacles that would cause many a normal-minded person to forsake the spiritual life. This is cause to rejoice!

It is said that only the strong survive. I would say, only the spiritually strong survive, eternally. You are willing to be within the moment of mortal experience while receiving new revelation from Father, experiencing Michael's Spirit of Truth, and embracing this truth be it simple or difficult. Yes, you are learning to be spiritually strong.

You have lived many of these lessons together, and many more still will you experience together. You have proven your dedication to the true focus of all our attention – and that is learning about God and striving to be like Him. This is spiritual strength! This is authentic spiritual character strength; and I must say, this is indeed a wonderful trait to assist you on your mortal adventure.

Michael in His mercy, does reveal to you those spiritual truths that strengthen your character. You view Him as the good Teacher – not as an arbitrary father who would hand out punishment to those undeserving children; you have grown beyond that, yes. Are you seeing now how good overcomes evil? positive over negative? love over hate?

This week, I would request that you continue our efforts on 'living worshipfully aware of each moment,' recognizing Fathers' presence in all that you experience. Mortals ask every day: "How do I discern the will of God?" I would say to them – the will of God is known in the present moment awareness; the will of God is moving and growing, transforming. Your willingness to embrace your mortal life is to be within that moment and receive Father's will firsthand. Are there questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, when you said that 'only the spiritually strong survive, eternally,' I gather that is meaning every individual either becomes spiritually strong at some point, whether this life or the next – or, does cease to exist. Am I to understand – those that die in this mortal life and are not 'yet' spiritually strong – that they are going to survive? But there comes a point when it is known if a person chooses not to grow in that direction, then cessation is inevitable. Am I understanding that correctly?

ABRAHAM: Yes. You are correct when you say there is ample time for learning, whether it be here or on the Mansion Worlds, yes. There are great amounts of understanding to be had; and, as to why one must develop their spiritual strength. Our spiritual strength reflects our willingness to be in the will of our Father – anything less is unacceptable. To be spiritually weak in the mortal life is understandable; but beyond this mortal life spiritual strength is continually gathered to gain the courage to advance the many eternal experiences to come – all, while pledging our dedication to God, our Father. Do you see, there is no confusion in where our loyalties lie when we are girded by the armor of spiritual strength. Our courage will come forth from this strength enabling us to carry onward in the forward struggle. This spiritual strength will usher us into eternity. But I would try to keep the focus on the transformation that spiritual strength brings in mortal living. Spiritual strength is perhaps taking on the attitude of the Master – seldom was His feelings hurt by harsh words. Continually did the Master view situations in living, with logic and love. I say, this is quite possible for you to embrace this Good Teacher's attitude; and to be less affected by emotional burdens, and more uplifted by morontial understandings. Does this help?

CALVIN: Yes. You are saying to be less affected by emotional burdens, and more uplifted by morontial understandings – in spite of my emotional outbursts?

ABRAHAM: Yes, understood. The less the emotions burden one down, the more able is the Good Teacher able to teach. Another question?

CALVIN: Here in this group we have witnessed a lot of people falling away from attendance in our weekly lessons. Is it because they just didn't want to commit? Or perhaps is this because of our tactlessness causing people to go away – maybe they would have stayed had we been more tactful. I think you know my question here.

ABRAHAM: Understood. Always can you each learn to be more tactful, yes, but never should truth be sacrificed in ransom for group attendance. Always should all authority be given to Father, first and foremost; and from that, there should not be too much to worry over. You know that many things in mortal life become a steppingstone. Many have used this group as a steppingstone to other mortal adventures, and this is acceptable. Many find the openness of such a group to be fearful in their display of dedication to truth. Some have left because they were unsuccessful in pursuing an executive position. The reasons are unknown as to why some do not remain, and it is not that important in the long run. You need not worry about your actions as individuals and as a group – as long as all authority goes to Father; and, in putting forth the best interests of the whole group while celebrating your individuality. Does this answer? (Calvin: Yes. It sure does. Thanks.)

ELLEN: I have been thinking about the circuits. Do those circuits actually, literally, affect the brain circuitry causing pressures and a lot of the different sensations that I feel on my head?

ABRAHAM: Yes, absolutely. The various physical sensations are new, wouldn't you say? Yes, these are new to Urantia, who is experiencing a welcoming back into the fold of Nebadon. There are indeed those electrochemical transmitters within the human brain that enables mortal man to experience many more of the morontial senses which are now available – universal broadcasts and understandings within the cosmic mind. These transmitters are not only located within the brain, but in various locations along the central nervous system. So, I would ease your mind when experiencing these new feelings. And I would admonish that you attempt to be aware, for these different sensations are perhaps meaning different things. Does this help? (Ellen: Yes. Thanks.) Abraham: Another question?

KAMILLE: Abraham, I have had a lot pressure from my family about the LDS Church's ceremonial blessing of my child, Duran. I have let them know how I feel. They keep pressuring me, and I wondered if there is any advice you could give me about how to handle the situation?

ABRAHAM: You know that this blessing is a mortal ceremony not causing one to go heavenward or be hell-bound. I would say that this is indeed your baby, and no amount of pressure is ever going to change that. If your family could focus on their love and respect for you, and trust you in your decisions there, it would restore some family harmony. This decision is entirely a human decision, not creating much of a difference either way. Whether you succumb to your family's strongly-held beliefs, or stand by your declaration of independence – either way, it matters not. It is, however, your decision; and I can confirm you are fully qualified to make this decision. It is a decision I would make according to what my inner spirit seeks to tell me. Does this help? (Kamille: Yes. Thanks.)

I am grateful for your friendship and participation. I am slipping. For now, I look forward to your mortal adventures and spiritual lessons therein. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

There is Spiritual Strength in Submission to Father and In Allowing Father To Lead Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-20-1997

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you each. It is in humble gratitude that I thank you each here this evening. You, my mortal friends, have trusted me to teach you on the subject of spirituality. I fully realize your trust is not to be taken lightly – or your intelligence insulted by mere niceties.

I am certain you are serious in your search for spiritual meanings and values. I hold high regard for your status as a mortal of the realm. I am in full understanding of your dedication to go beyond temporal emotional comfort, to spiritual actions taken to promote truth, beauty, and goodness. Do you see how your efforts and willingness has brought us to this point in these teachings? Do you understand, in your quest for truth my teachings have helped to build a strong foundation?

You each are knowing that this group-understanding did not arrive without much effort and trust in our Father and His subordinates. Your group is where it should be in this moment in time according to your desire-level for truth. You can each see now that your spiritual lessons have helped to shape you into one who receives comfort and desires to share it with others. Your spiritual lessons (or adversities) have not run you down but have helped to create your spiritual armor. That, is strength.

It has indeed taken much strength to allow me to disseminate my lessons and counsel you. You did not go by blind faith, no, and this is certainly wise. This particular method of transmission-receiving requires you each to filter all messages through your intellect, as well as your inner self which is your soul.

Our Father would not expect you to receive these teachings any other way. With the building of character strength, you find your emotions are not so controlling; your perceptions are from an intellectual standpoint as well as a spiritual. Mother has bestowed us each with mind, and without mind there would be no purpose for personality, no reason for Father to be so adoring to each individual child.

Many times mortals worry over loss of identity due to submitting personal will to God the Father. I can guarantee you that this submission takes not from you; the releasing of mortal concerns into Father's care takes nothing away from your unique soul/personality that is you. The submission to Father is a show of true spiritual character strength. It takes a strong individual to allow Father to watch over their most important affairs in mortal living.

There is a prayer that is repeated throughout the Mansion Worlds adventure: Father, who is all-knowing in all things, help us to allow you to lead us to you. Amen. This prayer is said as an affirmation to allowing Father all authority within our lives – individually as well as collectively. We find we are re-focused and re-strengthened by this small prayer and feel more equipped to deal with our daily tasks. The giving over of your will to Father takes not from you, but adds to your reservoir of spiritual energy with greater accuracy of living revelation and the courage to carry on when all others who dwell in mediocrity might give up.

This week, attempt to submit yourself fully into Father's custody and note the changes. Is there a feeling of spiritual strength? Is there finding Father within each precious moment? Is there guidance when it is needed and expected? Note any decrease in emotional sensitivity and increase in intellectual awareness. Be aware of the feeling of love, the true basic feeling of plain love. Are there questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, in these last few weeks I feel my direction of growth heading right toward this lesson that you have given tonight. In the past, I have found that I have misread your lessons here and there. I have been learning at work to say, 'relax and enjoy,' and to not worry about this big burden of material life wherein I am expected to meet certain quotas to get by on. Rather, to relax and allow Father's watchcare. It's now coming to a head where even those around me say, "Oh yea, relax huh? God isn't going to do it for you, you'd better get worrying again." I am sure you are aware of the situation. So, I feel like a person hanging on a branch and God is saying: "Let go if you believe I'll be there to catch you." I knew this was coming. Am I catching the impact of your lesson correctly and these last few lessons?

ABRAHAM: I am aware it is exceedingly difficult for men. The responsible providers particularly find it difficult to release their burdens into an unseen force. Lives are depending on the responsible provider, and this appears to be a position without end. Father does ask you to let go of this ledge from which you are hanging, yes. He is waiting to direct your fall to a more-sure footing, yes. Father is ever efficient in directing even the most mundane of chores. He is always aware of certain paths that need to be traversed by His mortal children. I would say, there is not release from the material burden or responsible-providing, but Father is certainly willing to show you a more efficient way in which to direct your energies while connecting with events and individuals that promote spiritual learning. You are a responsible provider in that you are attempting to care for many. Do you understand the example you set before your children and others, that concept of a real father as a responsible provider? Although you may not see it now, to carry on this role is affecting many areas of spiritual learning and revealing the values of mortal living. Does this help?

CALVIN: Yes. It re-emphasizes my faith in your understanding of my days and my weeks, and makes it easier to 'let go.' From what you just said, it helps very much.

Thanks.

ABRAHAM: You're welcome. Another question?

RACHEL: Yes, Father Abraham. I'd like to follow up on Calvin's question from last week where you said that only the spiritually strong survive eternally. That bothers me because I thought that everyone that had a true desire would be alright and would go on eternally. I realize that all of us have completely different strengths, spiritually, and I would imagine that would be on different spiritual levels in our Father's kingdom. I also thought all the others would survive, eternally. Would you help clear that up a little, please?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Would you describe Lucifer and his comrades spiritually strong? I would not. To be spiritually strong it requires submitting your will to Father. And this complete trust and faith in Father does require a great deal of experiential turmoil to gain wisdom and understanding for your responsibilities as a universe citizen. Lucifer was strong in his sense of self. He was strengthened by his desire to promote himself. He was indeed blinded from the meaning of true spiritual strength – and in that, he was an adequate example of spiritually weak. Do you see my meaning in that? It requires a truly spiritually strong individual to allow Father to have (under His watchcare and direction) everything – to turn everything over to Him. To trust Father fully, and to live this mortal life with Him in full control, is to believe Father really and actually exists – and that in His existence He is complete in providing all that his child needs. Lucifer, in his exchange for 'love of self,' became spiritually weak and unable to give himself to Father; unable to trust that Father's love would be transcendent of everything, including self-absorption. Is this a little more clear?

RACHEL: Yes. It is more clear; but also, one thing that I was trying to get at is that we as mortals are so different that our spiritual strengths are all different. So how can we all be on the same level? How can we all be on the same level even in the hereafter if one person is spiritually stronger than the other, even though we survive?

ABRAHAM: Yes. I understand. No, individuals will not be at equal levels; it is enough that they are dedicated to the degree that their faith-level allows them. Strength levels will vary but there is always opportunity to understand and gain strength through submission to Father. There is definitely opportunity after opportunity for understanding and promotion of spiritual strength. Is this better? (Rachel: That helps, you bet. Thank you.) Abraham: You are most welcome, I always welcome any question you might have. Thank you, Rachel.

I am slipping. I would express my gratitude and love to you each. I will assist you throughout this week on this lesson. Until next week, shalom.

Wellspring of Strength When We Give Full Submission To Father. What Is My Mission-Statement

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you each here this evening. It is my most humble pleasure to be your Teacher and friend.

Last week our discussion was on finding spiritual strength through allowing Father to have full authority in our lives. We discussed how this submission brings you to acquire spiritual strength. Do you see how these are intertwined? Do you see how you need to take that first step towards submission to Father to know and understand spiritual strength, and the source in which we retrieve it?

Many mortals in this life experience disappointment from others, time after time, and tend to think of Father in this way – that He also, will disappoint them. Some may tend to hold back and guard their really important desires and goals. There is fear that Father is somehow unable to take upon Himself the burdens of the world.

Some would feel that Father does not know their true heart and do not trust and depend on Father to hold and orchestrate their most important aspects of mortal living. It is true that you are mostly taught to be independent, and the thinking is ‘if you are unable to care for yourself, no one else will.’ There is indeed wisdom in learning independence, yes, but this unstable independence causes much confusion and fear. Those that use faith with intelligence find the courage to lay their desires and dreams in an unseen force.

It is known that in the willingness to be completely submissive to Father, there is a wellspring of strength to be gained. Those that find they have nothing to lose, find being submissive to Father quite easy; this is perhaps the case with individuals who find themselves chemically addicted and have no hope in earthly assistance – therefore, ‘turning it all over to a higher power.’ I say, it is not always necessary to be brought to a place of hopeless despair to completely submit to Father's divine will, but even in this, there is value.

Mortals ask every day, “How may I best find balance in my life?” and I frequently respond, “through present moment awareness.” In the fullness of the flavor of life there is to be gained unbroken communion with Father. In this present moment awareness, if there is not desire to the doing of Father's will, there is a loss of accuracy in communion with Father.

To be a willing learner one must possess questions. If one is filled with personal desires and wish-fulfillment there is not room for Father's divine direction. To give over everything to Father is a big step for you, yes, and almost not possible without experiencing Michael's hard truths. Father's will is there, available. Michael's display of truth is available. It takes an exertion of faith, intellect, and courage to be willing to lose everything in order to receive.

It was always taught that self-denial was altogether holy and righteous. Michael has taught us that Father asks no sacrifice from us. Instead, He asks us for our companionship. Within this present moment awareness with Him is where He desires to teach us about Himself and His universe realities. A soul, who is perhaps drowning in fear through something that holds them in an obsession, finds it necessary when they have hit bottom ‘to look up.’ I say, this matter of ‘looking up’ is entirely possible without hitting bottom – it is done through submitting your will to Father's and gaining that spiritual strength every soul needs, yes, to survive eternally.

Yes, Father's spiritual strength is an endless reservoir of spiritual energy and divine guidance; it is a connection into the cosmic mind of Nebadon; it is an understanding of the Supreme Being. Such spiritual strength gives a surety of son- or daughtership with Father – the source of love, true love, without condition, without gains or losses. You would find a vast area of knowledge through understanding this spiritual strength; it is the power to cut those ties that hinder you from spiritual growth; it is the courage to live a spiritual life expressively without worry of ridicule from your fellows.

Do you see, if Caligastia and his cohorts had chosen submission to Father through their love for Him they would have discovered this wellspring of strength, hope, and love that is beyond definition – a love that is far more fulfilling than adoration of self. They had everything to gain, yes; and yet, felt it was not necessary to go the spiritual path that most beings must travel. Even Christ Himself has traveled this path of submission to Father. I would say that Caligastia chose temporary self-gratification over eternal 'living revelation' from Father.

I would speak next week on the dangers of self-gratification and the imbalance it brings. This week, I would ask you to understand what keeps you from living out the spiritual life. What fears may hold you back from full submission to Father and gaining your armor of spiritual strength? What is it that makes you feel blocked from attaining your spiritual goals? What would you write as your personal mission-statement for earthly living? Are there questions?

RACHEL: Yes Father Abraham. I have a couple questions that Joshua wanted me to ask you; but first, we have two newcomers to our group this evening: Esmerelda and Fernando. We would like to welcome them and present them to you. (Abraham: Yes. Greetings and welcome.) Rachel: The first question that Joshua had is: He has been trying to reach Jeremiah on the telephone, and he hasn't been able to. So, he wanted me to ask you if he is all right. (Abraham: Yes. Jeremiah is well and can be reached. That is all.) Rachel: His other question is about Branagan. His spiritual name is Marcese. He did call Joshua and gave report that he has been back to Ireland where he did try to start a study group over there and was not successful. Joshua wanted to know if there is anything you can tell him about Marcese? (Abraham: This is unknown to me at this time. I am sorry.)

WILLEENA: Abraham, my question is: I feel like I completed a healing in the experience I was having about the abuse issues. Not very long after that, I had a box land on my head and went through some challenging lessons. And now, very recently, I've had several mishaps. My experience right now, and from your lesson, is that Father is working with me in learning to submit my will. And I feel very spirit led at this time in spite of the mishaps. I would like to ask your confirmation – maybe I am mistaken, but if you could enlighten me on my progression?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Father does assist you in your understanding of your challenges, yes, but does not 'create' mishaps to promote His divine will, no. Rather, He would use your mishaps to help further your understanding. Most everything has value and can be used. I cannot say Father does not create certain adversities to teach; but rather, that adversity is quite in abundance and not needed to be created purposefully. I would indeed confirm your feelings of being spirit-led and your progression in moving passed those mortal anchors that keep you from taking advantage of the vast spiritual ocean of knowledge that is set before you. This is good, and you do well. Does this answer? (Willeena: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Is there another question?

FERNANDO: Abraham, on my path of speaking truth it has cost me suffering and great losses. I have a feeling it is going to take me to an early grave if I keep this path. Or, should I keep my mouth shut?

ABRAHAM: This is completely your decision, but I would say – in your search for enlightenment, Michael has become an important companion to you in that He promotes truth. Michael would desire truth in all things for the good of all. It takes a spiritually strong individual to go forth bravely and live in full view that he is a believer. It is known that your life of adversities has helped shape you into a qualified teacher of spiritual understanding. This would be what I would focus on in making your decisions. Michael is the Purifier. He would ask that you go freely to Him. His Spirit of Truth is able to shed a most revealing light to promote understanding, but this understanding does not come without some pain. It takes a spiritually strong individual to allow Michael to reveal those hard truths and receive also Michael's comfort, wisdom, love, and humor. I would ask you to trust Michael and know that you are loved and carefully watched over. Does this help? (Fernando: Yes.)

CALVIN: [Paraphrased: A question about what to do when there is misunderstanding when taking notes of these lessons – when something seems to be in error either from the transmission reception or an error in the transcribing of the transmission.]

ABRAHAM: I would comment that this method of communication is quite imperfect, and at times it is a struggle to give you my full meaning. I would let you each know that I count on you to assist Ellanor [Nina, the group transmission-receiver for Abraham] in the accuracy of these transmissions. You are without a doubt qualified and welcomed to promote the truth and accuracy of these transmissions. Is there one more question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, a couple weeks ago you answered a question that I had, and then asked if your answer was clear to me and said: "Does that help?" I want to say that my reply to you wasn't honest because it wasn't clear. I felt frustrated and I was afraid to come out and say, "No, it is not clear!" I'd really like to hear some more about that. I just wanted you to know that I am really appreciating you and it means so much to me to grow and learn. I accept you as an honest friend and so I want to be honest with you and let you know I held back. I didn't feel good about that because I wasn't totally truthful.

ABRAHAM: This is understood and very common. It is important in how each would ask questions. It would perhaps be helpful to know that in asking broad 'general questions,' the answers will be broad and general without detail. I am not allowed to predict or impose upon your thoughts. It is forbidden for me to provide proof that I exist, and that our Mission is real and is done for the glory of our Father.

I am in deep gratitude to you, Miriam, for your honesty and excellent example in sharing this truth. Yes, I am quite grateful for your honesty, and I would assure you that your truth is joyful. Know that I am not hurt or offended in the least. This is an excellent example of how each group member should feel in sharing ideas/thoughts. There is no cause for offense but surely cause to be joyful. Thank you, Miriam.

I would express to you, my friends, that my love is growing for you each time we meet. And I would pray to Father that I assist you in your understanding of spiritual meanings. My love goes with you always. Until next week, shalom.

Self-Mastery Through Submission. What would Father Say Is My Mission-Statement For Earthly Living

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you each. I am filled with joy to be counted among this group of friends as I make my weekly visits to assist you on these lessons. I am touched by your love and sincere devotion to our Father and His Mission. Our lesson schedule is quite substantial in that you each may take my lessons differently. Know that my lessons have many meanings, and you receive light according to your capacity and desire-level for attaining it.

Last week we discussed finding spiritual strength in giving all to Father, trusting Father with our most valued possessions – that being our souls, the very proof of our existence. Did you find that 'allowing Father to direct' stirred up feelings of anxiety? or, did it create feelings of knowing comfort? Did you chance to discover what limits you in living out your spiritual life?

Many this week discovered what hinders them in the participation of promoting truth, beauty and goodness through spiritual living. I would say to you, you are well on your way to discovering how to quit stumbling over these limitations in regard to spiritual living. The lesson on full submission to Father is one that you need to commit to daily. What does this submission mean to you? What have you to lose by allowing Father to help guide your destiny?

I am a Teacher. I work to assist this planet to move towards a new and better age. My choice in methods of communications is 'transmission-receiving.' I do so with permission of the mortal receiver. I am not in control in any way. I do not possess the minds of my mortal contacts, no. I give to those that would receive me. You each are not about to allow any past fallacies to corrupt truth, no. You each assist in these communications; but I say, it is with permission that this mortal subject allows this communication – I do not take from her, I do not add to her, there is no 'loss of identity.'

Do you see – in order to give these communications, I must be allowed (or invited). Mortal subjects are not being submissive to me, no; it is through the use of spiritual insight and intellect that I am received. Do you see, Father also does not invade your life. He does not possess your mind and attempt to reform a bad seed into a beautiful flower, no; there must be an allowance (or invitation) to Father. If these petitions are not genuine, Father is still kept at a distance.

You can say, "It is my will that Father's will be done," and yet cling to fears of loss. Last week I asked you to ponder your mission-statement for earthly living. I would, this week, ask you to ask Father: "What is my mission-statement for earthly living?" Write down what you would think Father would have to say.

As we go from learning about service, we have had many a chance to come up against lessons on self-mastery. Do you not agree, we each have had to learn to overcome certain character weaknesses – and in doing so, to make spiritual choices. In dealing with your fellows, you have gazed into the mirror of your own reflection; and this, my friends, is one of Michael's hard truths – be the reflection unappealing or be it beautiful.

In the lessons on self-mastery, it is taught that temporary self-gratification is a stumbling block to higher spiritual attainment. I say, the temporary needs of today, all too often find first priority among most mortals. The fears can be overwhelming when one must ponder upon the emptiness of 'going without,' 'being caught short,' 'looking small;' or, when we are in general emotional upheaval.

In this day and age of anxiety, the 'path of ease' is always considered first. The path that brings the most temporary satisfaction is usually one's first choice. I say to you, children of the Father of all fathers:

- You are learning of your cosmic citizenship and relation to the Supreme Being.
- You are finding your self-gratifying urges exchanged for higher eternal realities.
- You are beginning to make your decisions from an eternal standpoint.
- You are discovering that your decisions are affecting many.

In choosing higher spiritual attainment, self-gratification can be a stumbling block. This is not to say there is no self-gratification or joy-satisfaction to be had, but there are different degrees in which you can attain these; there is all the joy to behold and shared throughout the universes.

Do you see, the goals you seek joy from now are based upon 'eternal understandings.' Your most gratifying moments will be in that acknowledgment, that knowing, of the closeness of your Father. I do not promote self-denial and affliction, no. I do however, know that the spiritual self can find harmony with the lower animal-like self. A few questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, in trying to understand if it is our own wishful thinking, or Father's will – if we are 'not sure,' does that mean we have not let go of the 'mortal self' enough yet? because we are not clear? For instance, like whether to turn right or left; or like Faye said, whether to stand up or sit down. Sometimes it is like we don't know. I may feel inclined to move this or that direction, but stop to reflect, and feel "no, that is just my own thinking" – I am not sure if that is Father's will, or my will. So, what should we do to make that connection more clear to know what Father's will is, so we can then say, I will do it; or, I can't?

ABRAHAM: This is where our exercise comes into play: "What do you think Father would say is your mission-statement for earthly living?" This exercise will assist in clearing up some of this confusion. You should have a little better understanding on following Father's will when you have no preference in the outcome of what you believe Father has you doing. When there is no underlying motive to seek self-glory then there is a loathing towards outside praise concerning this task. When Father has you on an assignment, there is really not much thought in what goes into it; there is little hesitation towards choosing to do a certain assignment. Father's assignments have their difficulties, yes; and yet, you are learning along the way that His way is valuable concerning universal realities. Does this help? (Calvin: Yes, it does – and will be more clear as I reflect back on your answer. Thanks.)

RACHEL: Father Abraham, may I follow up a little bit on what Calvin asked because that is one thing that has bothered me for a long time? When in asking for this help from Father about 'our mission-statement for earthly living,' and receiving our answer, are we asking directly from our Universal Father? And if so, will it come back to us through Christ Michael that we are to write down and bring next time, or will it be directly from the Universal Father? How is this going to work?

ABRAHAM: This is to be what you would believe Father would write for your 'mission-statement for earthly living.' In this, you are allowing submission to Father. In this, there are clean intentions. It will promote closeness between you and your indwelling Father Fragment, which is also our Universal Father. Does this help?

RACHEL: Yes, it does, but He will probably say, Rachel, you are getting so damn old, you better hurry up. You haven't got much time left. [laughter.]

WILLEENA: So Abraham, to follow up with this line of questioning, did I understand you to say – to do this as an exercise, daily, to ask of our Father Fragment, what would our mission-statement from Father for the day be, in terms of keeping on track in our daily walk?

ABRAHAM: The assignment is just one, to perhaps write what you would believe Father would say your mission-statement is for earthly living. Last week we spoke of your understanding of what you believe your mission-statement is. This week, in learning submission to Father, we would have you write what you think Father would say your mission-statement is, but earlier I did say that submission to Father is helpful if each day you recommit yourself to the doing of His will, no matter the gains or losses therefrom.

FERNANDO: Yes, Abraham. Am I ever going to get rid of my fear of rejection, and also, am I ever going to get rid of my anger when I am rejected?

ABRAHAM: This is a question that only you can answer. This has been brought up as your stumbling block towards living out the spiritual life. In rejection, you believe yourself to be almost deserving, and this anger comes not only from your hurt-self, it also stems from that child of God that is you. The mature side of you knows that your status as a son of God is secure, and anger is surfaced when it is challenged. On the other hand, your more human-self feels a lifetime of pain and constant rejection that has become commonplace, almost expected. When you fully believe that the One who created you loves you regardless of your shortcomings, then rejection from mortals will not seem so important or painful, for you have the one true acceptance that is not to be surpassed by any other.

I would wish you each a week of wonderful discoveries and thought-provoking equations. My love goes with you each. Until next week, shalom.

What Is My Mission-Statement For Earthly Living

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you all. It is such a joyful time when we can meet. I have spent much of this week assisting you in further understanding Father's will and how to be submissive to it. I find myself in such a place of excitement for you and your discoveries regarding spiritual realities.

In learning spiritual realities, we find Michael's hard truths that can tend to promote feelings of discomfort; you find your spiritual muscles being exercised. It is a constant awareness that we must continue to exercise throughout the adventure in the flesh. Always with faithful exercise, results are apparent; and even though they have taken some time to appear, we are filled with a true sense of joy and healthful watchcare.

In the week previous to last, I asked you what your mission-statement was for earthly living, and your answers were adequate according to your level of understanding. I can say, your learning to submit to Father's will, has brought you to a deeper level of understanding, a morontial understanding.

Last week's exercise on 'what would Father say is your mission-statement of earthly living,' has shed a new light on the definition of being submissive. Submissiveness is not sacrifice; it is not loss of spirit identity, no. Perhaps Father said something like this to you:

Child, my mission-statement for you concerning mortal living is: Bare all things with me. Learn all things with me. Love all things with me. Be with me. In the 'here and now' you are allowing me to live. In this moment you have allowed me to have reality, to be real in you. Child, your mission is to allow me to attend with you on the eternal adventure. Partake of my presence-perfection. Allow me existence in your existence. Allow me life in your life.

Yes, this is perhaps what Father has described as your mission-statement for earthly living.

Father asks not to live our lives for us, just with us. He asks for your awareness in each moment, His presence-perfection. Is this `not a simple concept to grasp and incorporate within your daily living? Being submissive means nothing more than allowing Father's existence in your life. Do you see, this takes not from you! This, if anything, adds to the fullness of the flavor of life.

Do you see how Father's presence would add to every area of your mortal life? Father does not give you Himself in the hope that you may glorify Him. He offers you His presence because He loves you. There is no holding back. Father does not hold back for fear you would misuse His assistance or cause Him pain, no. Father faithfully and fully gives of Himself to you because of His love for you.

Is it also saying – that to allow Father full authority in your life is also a commitment of giving yourself to Him? Yes! And in this giving, is this not submission? Do you understand that Father withholds nothing from you? Do you comprehend His trust and faith in you as His child? Can you feel Father's desire to be close to you; to be so close it surpasses the definition of personal? Is this not a truly beautiful thought? Can you imagine anything else to be more gratifying, more fulfilling? I cannot!

As the Master taught us: “He who would save his life selfishly would lose it, but he who would give his life for me shall save it.” Do you understand, that he who protects his treasures for fear of loss loses the benefits of the safety Guardian of all? And, that He who guards his treasures, personally loses out on the meaning and values of the treasure. Are there questions?

CALVIN: I thank you for another wonderful lesson, Abraham. In our upbringing, we have been taught to ‘save up’ and to prepare because that is the ‘boy scout thing to do.’ And I know that is speaking mainly on a material level. Is this lesson you just gave about hoarding our treasures, or guarding our treasures, does this apply both materially and spiritually?

ABRAHAM: Not so much ‘materially’ – I refer to your treasures as your life situations, your relationships, anything you value – even your spiritual education. In allowing Father to have access to these treasures, you are reaping the benefit of His spiritual insight, His broad understanding for real value. In safeguarding your treasures for fear they are only of import to you, you are withholding from Father and are missing the benefits only He could provide with His far-overseeing vision. Does this help?

CALVIN: Yes. I see it as ‘not hiding your candle under a bushel, but on a hill for all to see and benefit from.’ (Abraham: Yes.)

MIRIAM: Abraham, this ties into Calvin's question. A couple weeks back, I shared earlier that you said that I was being shy, and I have been trying not to withhold me, but to share. There is just something I don't understand – I'd like to think I have made some progress in this. It is like peeling layers of an onion wherein I think I've got it; and then it comes again, and I am again with that feeling of ‘less-than.’ It is like when I do share myself, and then feeling a little stupid about it, but I'm knowing that it isn't stupid. I know I have asked you about this before, but what is that... like when I get to a place of understanding that I am loved by the Father, and know it, but then I go to another place which seems I'm back to my old self; and then later, it feels like I am learning it for the first time again, and I know I am not; I know am making progress. What is that about – the humanness of it? I know I'm not the only one that feels this, so why does it feel like the first time? Do you know what I mean? Does that make sense?

ABRAHAM: Yes. In striving for God-likeness and Father's perfection, there can occur an imbalance of overmuch humility, just as can occur an imbalance from healthy self-love to self-adoration. There is a tendency among mortals who are in the race for perfection to stumble upon their regrets; they do so as if they were able to fix them by re-doing past mistakes. To live from regret to regret is not submission to Father. It is not trust for Father's overseeing vision, no. It is not 'allowing the good Teacher to teach.' Each must embrace humility in order to keep the flow of learning, moving. But to engage beyond this healthy point of humility, is to move toward the spirit poisons – such as spiritual envy; or a hopelessness: "I am so far behind I will never catch up to my fellows." Another would be perhaps lack in belief in your status as a child of God: "How can I be God's child when I continue in this way?" Yet even another spirit poison perhaps one would anger out: "How can I ever understand, when I continue to stumble and constantly regret my decisions on the spiritual path?" Do you see, when you have gone beyond 'balanced humble attitude' to the spirit poisons, there is not submission to Father and viewing His definition of what you view to be a mistake? No, there is only mortal definition; and this can be biased. Does this help?

MIRIAM: Sort of. It does help me to understand about my living in regret and living in the past, and taking humility to a place that is not healthy. I guess more specifically – just let me ask this for me instead of broadening it to a question about humanity: When I experience this feeling it is so sudden – and I'll cut to the quick here: I think I am doing great, and everything is just swell, and then I walk through a place of 'fear of doing something that I think is the right thing to do,' and I get to this place of sudden fear-awareness again, this naked raw place, and I just feel like a cry-baby. Where does that come from? When I know I'm cruising in the right zone, spiritually, or at least I think I am; but maybe I'm not, I don't know? Does that help a little bit more?

ABRAHAM: My understanding is that this is imbalance, and with the conditioning of spiritual muscles this will level out. I would suggest that in these moments, let not your intellectual self be overwhelmed with your emotional self where there can be feelings that are not reality-based, but stem possibly from the ego. Doubt not that this is an assignment that Father would have you look into completely, and without fear or hesitation. Does this answer? (Miriam: Yes, very much. Thank you.) Abraham: Certainly. One more question?

If there are no pressing questions, I would express to you my love and unending friendship. I shall continue to assist you throughout the week. Until next week, shalom.

Submission to Father and His Universal Meanings | We Gain Everything Through Submission

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you each here this evening. It is once again my supreme pleasure to meet with you. I assisted you during the week on this particular lesson, and I have noted there were many surprises to behold. In learning to give yourself completely to Father there are always unexpected circumstances that don't appear to fit in with your spiritual education – this is part of Father's intriguing mysterious personality. In Father's attempts to be close to you, you are at times almost overlooking Him.

My question to you this evening would be: Were you living out your personal mission-statement for earthly living this week? Or, would you say you were living out Father's definition of a mission-statement for earthly living? Perhaps a combination? Perhaps there was a bit of a struggle and some stumbling? This is to be expected in learning to be submissive to Father's will while gathering reserves for spiritual strength and energy to carry on.

It was said by the Master: "He who would save his life selfishly would indeed lose it, and he who would give his life for my sake will surely save it." This is the core of our lesson on submission to Father and His universal meanings.

I ask you, what have you without Father? What have you to gain by subtracting your spiritual understanding from earthly living? What is missed by a life not lived in recognition of spiritual attainment? Do you see, that our phrase: "He who gives his life for my sake shall surely save his life" – means, one who is willing to forsake selfish designs and look to Father for understanding of spiritual meanings, will have everything to gain by Father's broad overview?

Do you see, your willingness to trust and commune with Father in His presence-perfection is to gain entrance to the door of the cosmic mind and comprehension of all things? Your willingness to step aside gains you passage into Father's understanding. Your commitment to set aside personal desires for certain outcomes opens you to Father's level of cosmic understanding of universal meanings. Do you see how in the 'letting go,' there is everything to be gained?

In this lesson on submission, we find it is certainly wise to re-commit daily to the doing of Father's will, and draw upon our spiritual strength to be prepared for Michael's hard truths. In the exercising of spiritual muscles, we find there can be some injury, some pain; but it is in the pain that we are made stronger. Do you see now how almost everything has value concerning our spiritual education?

This week I would ask you to be aware of that spiritual training; and in that present-moment awareness know that it is helping you to attain those spiritual muscles that will carry you onward in the forward struggle. I say, in your present moment awareness, note the small voice within that is helping to guide you. And forget not that in your spiritual conditioning, rest is important in-between sets of spiritual exercise. Are there questions?

CALVIN: If there is not proper rest, do those moments lean more towards the delusory or fanatical realms?

ABRAHAM: Sometimes. When there is an insufficient amount of rest, the ability to deal with the actual exercising is inevitably more exhausting, and the chances of the spirit poisons invading your lessons are quite high. I am saying, the drive to learn these morontial lessons need not be constant; even the Master retreated to the hills for rest and time for communion and comfort from Father. The rest is almost as important as the lesson itself, for without the rest, the lesson is not fully understood and embedded. Another question?

MIRIAM: Could you answer a question about tonight's lesson, which you mentioned last week as well – could you say a little bit more about 'presence-perfection' of the Father?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. "Be you perfect even as I am perfect," was Father's request to His mortal children. In striving to be like Father, we are learning of His perfection process, and it is this perfection desire that leads us closer to Him. In your commitment to live in the moment, His presence-perfection is easier noticed and more accurately understood. We strive to be God-like, and God is perfect in all things. This is best comprehended through your present-moment awareness. Does this help? (Miriam: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, could I ask another question? (Abraham: Certainly.) Calvin: I've never had anybody in my family die before. I have had friends die and it was somewhat of an emotional thing in my past. Now my father dies, and it is like life goes on, no big deal. I find myself going a day or so and not even thinking about it. When I do, it is like more of a beautiful thing, not a bad or sad thing. Is there a chance that I'm getting too caught up in my spiritual path and not a caring-enough person – do you know what I mean? Others have told me that I'm pretty cold-hearted about this.

ABRAHAM: Understood. It is not cold-hearted or lack of emotion, no. It is a valid attitude for this man who was your earthly father. This is perfectly understandable. I do confirm your maturity of spiritual understanding and knowing God is overseeing everyone's well-being. I would, however, make a note that your attitude is based strictly on the knowing of this individual being in Father's hands. Had this deceased individual been perhaps someone closer, for example, a child, your emotional attitude would have been otherwise. But it is a wonderful thing when you can trust your loved ones into the watchcare of our Father.

I am slipping. I would express to you my love and never-ending friendship. Until next week, shalom.

In Being Submissive We Receive Advanced Morontial Lessons

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you here this evening. It is my most supreme pleasure to meet with you. I am assured each time we meet of the strength of this Correcting Time. Look at your efforts towards your spiritual education. Note your passion to strive for God's goodness and understanding of life's hard truths.

In your efforts as a student of these Correcting Time lessons I can see a fair amount of new growth. From where I stand, my view is broad and it is reassuring to view you, my mortal students, hard at work to understand spiritual realities and have the courage to carry on.

In your efforts to learn spiritual realities you are allowing your personal prejudices to fall away. In being submissive to Father's will, you are allowing Him to teach you with accelerated speed. In your desire to follow the divine will, you are setting aside your personal desires for what you wish to be learning concerning the Father's kingdom. In allowing the Good Teacher to teach, you are learning His lessons with much more efficiency and, with timely experiences, to coordinate lasting understanding.

Do you see, you who have elected to be subject to these morontial lessons (Mansion World Teachings) have opted for Father's will in place of your own; in this, are you in understanding that life's lessons are slightly more difficult. Yes, you who have chosen to be submissive to the divine indwelling Father Fragment are candidates for His lessons; with these lessons comes a higher degree of difficulty than in your regular life.

I would admonish you – harboring fear towards these difficult lessons will cause them to cease. This is not bad, no, they can resume when you are ready. I would ask that you be watchful with complaining if you would choose to remain on Father's timely track. I say, there is no hurry to learn these divine realities and to know you are beautiful in your personal evolution.

I would say also, to cast a negative light upon your lessons is almost a request to be slowed down. Know that your experiences are simply for these morontial lessons and not meant to cause so much anxiety. It is my desire to say, in submitting to Father with a whole heart you will surely receive advanced morontial lessons – which will stretch your spiritual muscles. Yes, this is to be expected; not to cast a fearful light, but to excite you towards awareness of Father's presence.

It is my information that your exercises throughout this past week were somewhat strenuous. I would ask: Did you each allow time for rest and repletion of spiritual energy? – it is certainly necessary in seeking advanced spiritual understanding. I would ask that you have some discussion on those familiar phrases: “He who would save his life selfishly will surely lose it.” And “He who would give his life for my sake will indeed be saved.”

I am at liberty to receive only a few questions. Are there questions?

HONOREY: Father Abraham, are you aware that Mantutia Melchizedek is with us tonight? I was wondering if he has a message for us? I do appreciate your wonderful lessons.

ABRAHAM: There are many beings with us this evening and we are due to gather this evening to discuss the affairs of the kingdom. This is quite possible you noticed the personalities who dwell among us this evening, but no message. (Honorey: Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, I am still a little foggy as to when it is that we are to have courage to speak and when my speaking out is ‘out of order’ in following Father's will. I think you have been teaching us that sometimes it requires courage to speak up – and yet, it is so easy to do that because of my past pattern to speak up. I think I often ‘speak out’ simply out of self-habit. You spoke recently of using tact of when to speak up. In light of our discussion previously, can you shed any more light?

ABRAHAM: I would answer your question according to my information. In your mortal status, there is always constant need to be aware that the ego is always looking to be fed. As you progress in your spiritual education, you become more aware of the way of the ego. Jesus, many times, was confronted with His human heart; he knew the desires, longings, pain, despair, which each mortal must experience. I do say this is partly the reason for my instruction to find rest and seek present moment awareness – perhaps through stillness practice or prayer. It is always possible to sway the human side towards your more divine side, and this is what I speak of when I talk about not being fearful of the hard truths and facing them with courage. When there is fear or fatigue, there is tendency to distort Father's messages. Without prayer and stillness practice, there can occur an imbalance of your human will, over-controlling the divine will. My recommendation in what you speak of is to perhaps retreat a few moments for a time of prayer or balance within your present moment awareness. In the praying, there is a question and a willingness to be submissive to Father's will. Does this help?

CALVIN: Yes, very much. Thanks. Are there times when you say things that you wish you hadn't said in your broader viewpoint of things?

ABRAHAM: Yes. At times I am given the awareness that I could have been more gentle with my words, and I rely on this awareness to educate me on my spiritual journey. I would remark though, that truth is 'above all' in this realm, and not by any means, to be avoided or feared. I communicate with the expectation that my friends and co-workers are also all-embracing of the Father's truth.

I would leave you with my love. I recommit to our friendship and ask that you remain open to receive further instruction in the coming week. Until next week, shalom.

The Source of All Fulfillment Can Be Found In a Rich Prayer Life. Passing of Jeremiah~Group Member

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you all here this evening. In light of the recent events our lesson will be kept short to allow for more questions. It is my understanding that you each have experienced a week of hard truths and practice in submitting to the will of our Father in heaven. Do you see, your willingness to complete assigned tasks augments your spiritual strength and stamina.

Yes, it takes a truly strong individual to be willing to lose his life for our Father's sake – to give all that you have to your divine Guardian and trust that you will receive His care; yes, it is quite an exercise of those spiritual muscles. In the exercising, it is of great importance that you spend time in prayer and communion. To have a balanced prayer life can be helpful in being submissive to the divine will, accepting the divine will, and then the carrying out of the divine will.

Mortals ask every day, "How do I align my will with that of our Father's?" Where I was trained it was taught that a healthy prayer life is a great source in which to dip your cup. To be in that present moment awareness with Father is to soften the ego's agenda and strengthen that faith and trust that assists in bringing you to the point of choosing Father's divine guidance.

It is in your best interest, as a mortal dwelling in the flesh, to personally re-ignite that spark within your prayer life. Many go to be 'filled spiritually' at churches when the source of all fulfillment is within and is easily found through a rich prayer life.

This week I ask you to note what you pray for, when you pray, and why you pray. Next week we will discuss more on praying. Have you questions?

RACHEL: A couple weeks ago you said: "In learning to be submissive and gaining spiritual strength, the emotional well runs dry and our intellect is exercised along with our souls." I can understand how we 'exercise our intellect,' but will you please explain more how we 'exercise the soul'?

ABRAHAM: Your soul - that which makes you uniquely you - is designed by our Father; it is loved as if your soul were the only one in number in the universes. It is known that as you progress through the steps of morontial progression and beyond, there are various techniques in which you would use to promote soul growth. I must say, prayer is indeed helpful in the exercising of the soul to create a being with cosmic courage and an infinite viewpoint. You must know that as ascending mortal beings we are here to be tried and tested through various techniques that our Father chooses. And if we are submissive to His divine will, we have volunteered to exercise the soul to further promote growth. Does this help? (Rachel: Yes, it does, and I thank you kindly.) Abraham: You are welcome, Rachel. Another question?

WILLEENA: Father Abraham, it has been a little while back, but you, in answering another question for me, mentioned that it is well known that the Melchizedek Schools were in place already. Did I hear you correctly, or am I misunderstanding something?

ABRAHAM: The Melchizedek Schools do operate now in this, what is known as the Correcting Time. Our students are those who choose to assist us in our cause, to be responsible to the growth of the God of time - the Supreme Being. Our kingdom is not material, no. Our Teachers will not teach with the latest material technology. We will not wait for prestigious buildings in which to gather, no. Our schools are fully functioning and our tools wherewith to teach are already existing within each of our students.

CALVIN: Abraham, last week you left us time to discuss part of your lesson from that week and the week previous. Did you gain from our responses that we are catching the import of this lesson? Do you have anything to say from our discussion?

ABRAHAM: It has been my observation throughout the week that you are beginning to understand the concept of "He who would save his life selfishly will surely lose it." And "He who would give his life for the kingdom shall surely be saved." You, in beginning to grasp this concept, are perceiving those particular steps in which to take to the actual doing of this concept. Does this help?

CALVIN: Yes. For me, it usually takes looking at it, analyzing it, and then experiencing it, to really grasp. Yes, it seems it is not until I am in the middle of the experiencing of it that I actually grasp – catch on, and then it sinks in. You also said last week that you had a meeting to attend, to talk about the affairs of the kingdom. Is there anything that you would have to report from that for us?

ABRAHAM: I am happy to report that many mortals who we have attempted to teach have responded with great enthusiasm, and that our human forces grow daily towards helping Urantia to become a productive part of the System – and therefore, the Universe. We are at this time engaged in many projects that have to do with the racial ministries and to the promotion of equality of all God's children. We are also benefiting by those who know the Mission from both sides, mortal and morontial – meaning, our midwayer associates. Does this answer?

CALVIN: Yes, it does. I know, from my viewpoint, there are many movies that seem to help with issues such as the racial issue. That's got to be a big part of these projects those unseen helpers are assisting us with – to influence screenwriters, producers, directors and so on. Is that part of it?

ABRAHAM: Yes. This technique reaches the masses and is somewhat directed by the Teaching Mission staff. This work is known by its fruits. The public will recognize value and will embrace it, yes. Another question?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I have a twofold question. One: Would you mind speaking to us some about Jeremiah and his present status? Secondly: Were you up there on that hill with Joshua when he almost went off the cliff this past week? Were you helping to hang on to the tailpipe of his car so he wouldn't go over? [Editor's note: Rachel's younger brother of about ten years, Thern Blackburn (known in these lessons as Joshua, who is about seventy-one years old), had taken a drive up into the Wasatch Mountains during the week. In trying to turn his car around on a narrow road, his car nearly went over a cliff-edge. Also this week, Jeremiah, our group member since our first year, 1991, passed away from the effects of a brain tumor. Jeremiah (John Wormeck) had been a 'nuclear physicist' based in Albuquerque, New Mexico, and became a member of the Woods Cross Teaching Mission Group – making the long drive to Utah, weekly, for a few years before marrying Nolus, also a member of the local Urantia Book study group and became a student of Abraham's teachings. They made their home in Eden, Utah – working full time in the promotion of the Teaching Mission around the United States.]

ABRAHAM: Joshua is just a very lucky man. It was my pleasure to keep him company for a part of this time, yes. And to behold Joshua's Father Fragment hold him in such beautiful watchcare was quite touching. Jeremiah is safe. I have seen him face to face. I am sorry for your loss and yet, we here who are with Jeremiah, do rejoice. Jeremiah was a shining example of one who was totally submissive to the Father. It mattered not to Jeremiah exactly what Father's will was, it only mattered to him that he could carry it out. We are accompanying him these next few days to reassure him that those he left behind can carry on. It is important to Jeremiah that all go forward in this Mission. He is truly blessed to be one who will be able to assist this Mission in the mortal and morontial capacity. I say to you, my students, my friends, to display to your friend Jeremiah that you have the strength to carry on with enthusiasm and cheerfulness, just as you always have. Assure Nalus that Jeremiah is wonderfully safe and has spoken with both of their Teachers. I can assure you, all is well. [Editor's note: It is evident from this statement regarding Jeremiah's 'consciousness' after his mortal-passing - as is likewise, in Abraham's words regarding Joshua's consciousness after his mortal-passing in June of this same year - that upon death, mortals (or at least some spiritually-advanced mortals) maintain a consciousness before their 'unconscious' seraphim transport to the mansion worlds. It is evident that a 'morontial soul' can be developed at quite a functional level while still in the mortal realm. This does shed new consideration on Jesus' morontial appearances in the days following his mortal body's death wherein he states several time, He had "not yet ascended to my Father."]

I am sure to see you throughout this week, and I will be ever willing to help lift your heavy hearts when needed. Until next week, shalom.

Without a Balanced Prayer Life, Life is Off Balance

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you. I am overjoyed to be witness to your discussion. It would appear that you have started my lesson without me. You can see how everyone's participation brings understanding and growth in concepts. It is a wonderful thing to behold the brotherhood in action.

Our past week was full with meanings and values concerning our divine goals. I believe that each one here is in understanding that without a balanced prayer life, life is 'off balance.' Without earnest effort to commune with Father, thoughts become overwhelming and distorted; and therefore, life thus appears to also become overwhelming and distorted.

WHAT IS OUR NEED TO PRAY? If there is complete dedication to the doing of the divine will then what is there to pray for? one may ask. In our everyday attempts to go about doing service, it is always necessary to touch base with Father and His immediate guidance. Without His guidance are you that qualified to be of service to your fellows?

WHAT DO WE PRAY FOR? We might pray for a willingness of our souls to follow the divine Spirit. We might pray for awareness of those spirit poisons that can be waiting in the wings. We can pray for courage to make those spiritual decisions and to faithfully execute them.

WHY DO WE PRAY? In this simple question is a vast amount of light to absorb. Our Creator knows us through and through and is overlooking a broad view of our path we must travel. In overseeing our individual paths, He is also attending to the well-being of the universe. Our Creator is fully worthy of our trust. Mortals are handicapped with a material form and are not so fortunate as to have this broad view as does our Creator. And in answering this question, "Why do we pray," it is best answered in this way: In learning of our cosmic destiny and our responsibilities, we are trusting in the 'One God' to attend to the well-being of the whole. An individual mortal is not qualified to fully oversee certain universe problems and solutions. We connect with our Creator through prayer to receive spiritual insight and a broadened view on how best to promote what God wants all His children to understand.

HOW DO WE PRAY? There are various techniques in which to connect with the Spirit – that we might be submissive to the will of God and attain the courage to carry out His will. The Master always retired for a season to the hills for close communion with Father. Upon any event, great or small, the Master always consulted with His Father. In the Master's full and total trust of Father His prayers were not so much to ask for anything, no, His prayers were usually used to attain Father's understanding in certain matters. Jesus prayed to change His own understanding of meanings; He chose not to rely upon His own understanding, but that of our Father's. This was a mighty force that served Him well when He wore the material flesh.

Prayer is a vital part to all those who are ascending Paradise-ward. Prayer is a song in the heart that sings to the melody of the divine Spirit. Have you questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, thank you again, for this lesson regarding a balanced prayer life. A couple weeks ago we viewed a documentary on the Donner Party. This was an event in our history about one-hundred-fifty years ago, wherein eighty-seven people were struggling to reach California, and got caught in a deadly non-stop snowstorm in the high Nevada Sierra Mountains. I'd bet those people were brought to their knees in the most expressive and pleading form of human prayer, "God help us," as much as anyone, ever! We witnessed the history of about half of them starving to death, having to eat one another's corpses for survival, and so on. I understand that prayer cannot always pull us out of the accidents of time and the inhumaneness of some circumstances, but do people in those situations have peaceful deaths, or agonizing deaths? They have got to be, at that point before death, in a total agonizing condition and pleading, "Father help me."

ABRAHAM: John the Baptist sat in prison waiting for word from the Master. And yes, this was indeed agonizing. A mortal wonders: "Does God know my situation? Am I forgotten, perhaps looked over?" Mortals in terrible circumstances and without faith, agonize deeply; their minds become lost to rational intelligent thinking. Those who dwell with faith and trust of Father's watchcare view their circumstances with a clearness of mind, there is much more possibility for Father to communicate solutions and give comfort. The human spirit is an amazing mystery. There are those that have survived untold hardships and have been strengthened by them, and there are those that have become embittered by them. One fact that always remains true is that when all things temporary have fallen away, the spirit is left standing. Your spirit, now encased by a finite shelter, is always destined to infinite survival. Fear not those things that could harm the material body; focus on the one thing that can save the soul. Another question?

ALAUNA: Father Abraham, you said something that kind of struck me a little funny. You said we are handicapped with a material form. I have always kind of thought of myself as being what I call mortally handicapped because I often felt kind of trapped in my mortal body and yet, I had the desire to serve in ways beyond what my physical self can do when I joined in this Teaching Mission. And statements like you made: "We have a cosmic destiny to tend to the well-being of the whole" is a little frightening except, as you said, that 'through prayer' then perhaps we can. Recently

I realized that from your comment (and I was writing words that were not in line with what you were saying, but picking words out of sentences) I happened to write the sentence that says: "The individual is not qualified to solve the problems of the whole, but that we can connect through prayer and individually view the answer to solve, promote, and understand." By writing this I realized that even though it is our destiny to tend to the well-being of the whole that we, as individuals, really need to tend to each other as individuals - and it makes the Mission seem easier for me now because now I don't feel like I have to solve the big problems. And in knowing that, we can attend to each other in our group; and, that we can attend to and reach individuals outside this group. In coming to understand that, I just want to tell you that I appreciate your lessons, and I hope I can continue the mission I am supposed to be on here.

ABRAHAM: Understood. Being materially handicapped is perhaps not an adequate definition. You are though, grasping my meaning. The ways of the flesh appear to dominate the spirit, but we are in agreement that it is the goal to reverse that. It is understood that you, in your willingness to trade your insight for spiritual insight, are able to serve many. Whether it is a friend or family member, you are one with courage who can take initiative to complete assigned tasks. You are, in your individual way, contributing to the whole. You do well, Alauna. Thank you. Another question?

TECTRA: Abraham, I have a question about a book we talked about a little earlier called Mutant Message Down Under. I thought it fascinating in this book that here were these aboriginal people that many people on the planet would think so backward and primitive - but in a way, they are so much more advanced in one aspect, and that was in the way they mentally spoke with one another and hear messages from each other across great distances. I guess what my question is: Is this where we are going? Is this something that all humans can do or is it just something for those beings because of the lifestyle they lived in being so pure and open to divine oneness - that they were able to achieve that. Is that something that we can do once we become more spiritually enlightened?

ABRAHAM: You are correct. It is highly possible for the so-called civilized man to communicate in this manner, but it could take much time. Because of the non-stop information that mortals consume with news, various means of entertainment, the endless number of reading materials and electronic technology, there is hardly a chance to practice this method of communicating. The Aborigines, living within nature and at times hear nothing but silence, are open mentally to receive communications from their fellows. These peoples have not been conditioned to not believe this can be done; they are with faith, and their open minds create an arena for the ideal peaceful community. Mind you, there needs to be progression, spiritual progression; they are unlike the civilized world of material progression.

I am slipping. I am grateful for your patience and dedication to this Correcting Time, and I will assist you throughout this week. Watch for me around prayer time. Until next week, shalom.

Use Prayer To Exchange Our Mind For The Divine Mind

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, my students and friends. I am always gladdened by our meetings together.

TR: He is saying, "The baby bothers me not." [Calvin and Kamille's one-year-old son, Duran.]

CALVIN: I'm not worried about bothering you, Abraham, but worried if the crying is bothering Ellanor's reception of you by others who are trying to hear.

ABRAHAM: Worry not. This is what our Mission is about. All are invited and it does well for the children who are in my immediate presence. I am always happy to be within the realness of our Mission. Our lesson last week concerning prayer is a lesson you will understand on various levels. When you begin to comprehend how prayer creates change within you, then can you begin to perceive Father's unlimited power.

"With God all things are possible" is a famous saying, and many mortals have found this to be a true source of peace and freedom from anxiety. Mortals experience numerous happenings. From birth and forward, life continues to be measured by great events pertaining to trauma or glory. Most of you in this Correcting Time view your adversities as necessary lessons for attaining higher spiritual learning. In your learning you are faced with the everyday possibilities of the spirit poisons - you 'know what you know,' and yet are still feeling overwhelmed by these spirit poisons.

This is where our prayer-time becomes a crucial factor in learning your spiritual responsibilities and maintaining a balanced physical and mental well-being. To 'know what you know' doesn't keep you from reverting back to that old mortal habit of hanging on with everything that you are; in your spiritual lessons you are still somewhat subject to those anxieties of the flesh and the ego. A transition through these spirit poisons takes time and experience, yes.

Prayer is an effective antidote to everyday worries that would cause your mind and body overmuch anxiety. This anxiety can create somewhat of a block in communication from those on the spiritual side, from the spiritual realm. I could say, eighty-five percent of all physical afflictions are due to stress and absence of prayer time. To pray is to connect with Father and request His assistance for your growth. To pray is to also comprehend His divine will and gather courage to the carrying out of it.

When you, my students, are confronted with confusion and troublesome worries, it should be common practice to engage in communion with Father. Pray, yes, pray. I say, it should be a common practice to be persistent in your praying. If you find you are burdened by something, it should be prayed about. If you find you have allowed time to pass and are still burdened by this same thing, pray again. Later, if you are still burdened by this unending problem, pray yet again.

Do you see, your prayers are for your own change of mind? It is an exchange of your mind for the divine. In your persistence to understand Father, I can guarantee positive results, for he who seeks, finds. Father is always attentive to His children and is all-knowing. You are praying for this knowledge of Father's, for His spiritual insight.

Be ever diligent in your reach for spiritual understanding. I can say, this reaching is your responsibility. In the act of praying, you are reaching. In taking this responsibility, you are helping to alleviate mental and physical pressure that might act as a barrier to divine insight. In your responsible actions you are helping to create a body and mind of well-being.

This week, be persistent in your praying and note the positive aspects that come forth. A few questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, in praying to Father I have learned from your lessons that it's okay to pray for anything, be it in the physical life, daily routine of things, or spiritual things. I feel sometimes a little bit selfish to say I need help in the physical life here. It's like, 'well, just let time ride things through and things will somehow work out.' I think I all too often expect a 'yes or no' answers from Father in my reaching and in my meditations; and then, when I don't get any clear direction, I guess I have no choice but to 'just let time work things out.' But then, when it comes down to decision time, I really, still, don't know which way to go - I do my best from my feeling and insight at the moment, but then wonder if I made the wrong or right choice. I am sure there is a more clear communication than that, somehow, somewhere. Maybe there is too many spirit poisons still within me to get that clearer communication. This again just happened in the last few days on a decision of great impact to me.

ABRAHAM: Understood. It is my information that you reacted wisely and with thoughtful concern for all those involved. You were making your decision based on universal understanding. Mortals each are containing within their beings a personal Fragment of Father - not one Fragment of Father for every ten mortals, no; not one Father Fragment for every one-hundred mortals, no; but one Father Fragment for each and every individual. You are unable to be selfish in your request of God because your particular God is for you to teach and guide you to the best capacity of your receptivity. God expects to be included in your mortal undertakings, no matter the seeming smallness of it. The Master lived His life in this manner and Father was consulted on all matters. It is not that Jesus prayed to change the mind of Father to permit Him to plan things as He saw fit, no. Jesus prayed to have His own mind changed or in alignment with Father's, and as He progressed, He became more skilled at discerning the divine will, just as you will. In your willingness to make decisions based upon your spiritual understanding, you are making a request for divine intervention. I understand it is difficult with your mortal shelter (physical body); and your feelings of 'let time pass, wait and see,' could very well be your personal Father's divine guidance for you. Does this help? (Calvin: Yes. Thank you very much.)

TECTRA: Abraham, I am getting an insight here on your words speaking about prayer. Tell me if this is correct in how I am looking at this. You are saying to exchange our minds for the mind of Father, the mind of the divine. Now, this is a little different in how I really thought about prayer before. In what you say here, it is like being interactive - to be active with prayer in exchanging our mind for Father's mind; and in that way, we get insights from a higher source so that the answers will come. Whereas in how I was thinking about prayer before – like saying this prayer, as today in this meeting, I am sending it out there and waiting for something to happen or hoping for something to happen. So, in what you are saying, it is more like the insights will then come to my own mind because I am exchanging my mind for a higher source, through prayer. Is that kind of what you are talking about?

ABRAHAM: Yes. In learning to follow the divine will it is exceedingly difficult at first to discern what the divine will is. I have regarded prayer as an antidote to this mental confusion and physical atrophy. Mortals can be so burdened down by everyday happenings – and pray and wait for change. I say, the change comes from within your own mind – not a change from the source of all knowledge, no, but that the ‘source’ helps you make the needed change. Many believe their prayers are not answered – and therefore, continue to search outside for some transformation of their burden. I say, in this there is anxiety of mind and imbalance in body. To be persistent in your prayers for spiritual insight requires that, yes, you take an active role in drawing closer to solutions. This active role lessens your mental confusion whereupon you can put trust in Father. With lessened mental confusion, there is a more balanced wellness of body. Prayer is many things, and hopefully, it is always growing in our understanding. Yes, prayer is asking to exchange your mind with that of the divine, broadening your view to see effective solutions. Does this help? (Tetra: Very much so. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome.

It is my desire to know you each on a personal level that I might further your studies in our Mission. You may see the small shoots of growth in our cause, yes; we mean to strengthen those shoots by close counseling with each student. I am thanking God for our friendship and look forward to each week when we all can meet. I'll continue to assist you in your understanding of prayer. Until next week, shalom.

Mind And Prayer | Overcoming Depression

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome and greetings to you, my friends/co-workers. It would appear that you are grasping my message. In the forward struggle, you will find prayer to be a wonderful source of spiritual nourishment.

It is my experience with prayer that each time I would pray I grow a bit, spiritually. Each time I pray I am renewing those lines of communication between my Father and myself – leaving me subject to spiritual growth. It is my will to move forward without questioning Father's authority or ability. So each time I pray I am open to Father's possibilities and strengthened to the doing of His divine will.

Last week we spoke on how prayer is an effective antidote to those anxieties that may afflict the mind and body. This week, I desire to speak a little more on mind and prayer.

Depression is rampant throughout the world today. There are numerous medications scientist have formulated to treat this so-called ailment. There are chemical imbalances, yes, but a large percentage of depression is due to a lagging spiritual life. Mortals are learning that all the medication they can find is only partially helpful. The real work to overcoming depression comes from looking within.

You each are in knowing that a balanced prayer life brings good health to mind and body; and this knowledge comes from within your own searching heart. There is not medication to nourish a balanced spiritual life, no. There are not mortal physicians to prescribe to you a balanced spiritual regiment to live by. Your own inner searchings and efforts to commune with Father has opened your mind to be a patient to the Doctor of all doctors.

Do you see, there is not a human authority upon this planet to prescribe to you a well-balanced spiritual life? Through your efforts of prayer and dedication to the doing of Father's will, this enables you to a direct link to all the knowledge you would need for living a balanced spiritual life. Prayer brings you this. Do you see how you need to put forth the effort to do all you can to contribute to your spiritual life? Your willingness to show effort is your measure of spiritual knowledge you will receive.

I can help you to understand the purpose of prayer, yes, but your best understanding will evolve through your personal experience with it. We are learning about prayer on an 'individual' level, and this will lead us into praying on a 'collective' level - a connection with the cosmic mind of the universe. A close knowledge of the happenings within the universe will become commonplace. The ability to feel and know all thoughts will be natural for you. The enhanced ability to know your fellows and understand them will help you better to serve them.

We are standing upon the beaches of a vast ocean of understanding - not only individually 'on Urantia,' but on all worlds throughout the universe. Do you see your relationship to the Supreme Being? This appears to be a difficult concept and yet, through prayer are we all linked to the Supreme Being and the wellness of the universe.

Your world, in discovering these new benefits, can be confusing at first, yes; but I can say that within an accelerated shortened period of time, these things will appear to be perfectly natural. Are you in understanding that your prayer life reaches beyond your own immediate surroundings? It is not uncommon for great changes to occur when many minds have joined together for good. I would ask you to join me in a small prayer:

Father, we, your children of time and space, request your guidance to use to your benefit. We are indeed recognizing your love for our unique individual selves; and yet, we would offer ourselves to join in your cause for universal truth, beauty, and goodness. We would request your strength in all our undertakings. We will gladly allow you your space in our lives. Our gratitude to you is beyond words, and our ongoing request to you still stands - Father, make us like you. Amen. Are there questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, in part of your prayer you say, "We request your strength in all our undertakings." I am just putting this out so I can better understand. Is that also saying, 'if I had not asked, He would not give me strength?' 'I will the Father to give me strength, but if I do not ask, He will not give it?'

ABRAHAM: Yes and no. In asking for His strength, you are allowing the release of your own understanding in exchange for His. In this asking, there is an opening within your soul to receive His divine guidance. In the asking there is faith – faith that might not otherwise be there; you have made your petition to Father and are assuming His strength will indeed be there. In your spiritual search and understanding of new concepts, there comes a new confidence and courage to live the divine will – to make your spiritual choices without interference from the ego. Prayer is for the change in your own thinking. Father's strength is always there, yes, but are you always open to receive it? Is this helping? (Calvin: Yes, it does, very much.) Abraham: Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, this is kind of a leftover question. In your lesson I think from last week you said that mortals learn in times of adversity; it makes us stretch and grow. Your lesson this evening especially touches me in my life because of problems I have had – I was diagnosed with manic depression in my early twenties; they were like places that were rocks that I couldn't get around. I always felt like it was me being led spiritually. By choice, I wouldn't choose to work through those things the way being prescribed, but something within just made me get around them to where I got off the Lithium and just kind of went my path. I have always had these physical disease-type things in my life that have helped me to grow, learn, and grow closer to the Father. I appreciate that. My question is: Is it possible to learn in joy instead of always in adversity? Do you understand my question?

ABRAHAM: Yes, now I do. The answer is yes. Lessons can be learned through joy, yes; and yet, can be easily forgotten. It is a transient joy that is on surface levels. To learn through adversity and recognize Father's fingerprints is to know real joy – deep, spiritual, worshipful joy. As you progress, the lessons need not be so dramatic and harsh. As you become understanding in Father's ways, lessons are more easily understood through more balanced events. It is wonderful that you have learned from your adversities. I would dare to say, your adversities were perhaps like scenery upon your path – and Father, the guide, has perhaps just told you what to look at. Do you see, Father is not the sole cause of adversity; and yet, He still is always ever willing to traverse your adversity with you. True experience leading to spiritual growth cannot be escaped if spiritual growth is your desire. One needs to be trusting in how Father presents your lessons; and I can guarantee, your joy will grow many many fold. Does this help? (Miriam: Oh yes, yes.) Abraham: One more question?

RACHEL: In talking about spiritual growth and balance – Father Ham used to tell us back in about 1991 that we were like trees growing in the forest and, some of us were a little out of balance in our growth. I would imagine this is about the same thing you are telling us about our spiritual growth. I would imagine that is what he was meaning. Is that correct? (Abraham: Yes. Is there more to this?) Rachel: Yes. Also, along with that, about the same time I was wondering how he could even see the growth of our trees because he said when he looked at us, our lights looked like we were little embryos. Have we grown to a kindergarten stage yet?

ABRAHAM: I would comment on your growth in 'growth pertaining to the tree' metaphor. Ham did teach that some can be off-balance due to the outside elements. I would like to add that prayer is a wonderful nutrient to add to the soil of your spiritual life; and from where I am, I perceive you to be quite beautiful. As far as perceiving your soul illumination, I would confirm there has been indeed much progress.

With that, I shall bring our meeting to a close for now. Again I would say, everything is proceeding as it should. Your group-mind has made great strides in furthering our Mission cause. Your friendship and dedication to those things spiritual have reached beyond this solar system. It is my great pleasure to be with you and learn alongside you each. I will continue to assist you during this week. I would leave you with my love. Until next week, shalom.

Praying And Being Prayed For. Notice The Positive Affects From Your Prayers

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you this evening. It is always my pleasure to meet with you to discuss the spiritual affairs of the kingdom. In the midst of mortal living, you may not view yourselves as being within a great and powerful kingdom; but I can say to you that every day, you grow closer to understanding the true definition of the kingdom.

Some two-thousand years ago the universe watched as their beloved Creator, Michael, bestowed Himself upon a strife-torn world to complete His needed experience to assume sovereignty over Nebadon; and also, to reveal to man that each was a beloved child of God. The universe grew to have feelings for, and attain knowledge of, Urantia. Those spiritual beings that witnessed their Creator experience mortal living, grew to become interested in Urantia and its inhabitants.

Those who viewed this bestowal of Michael via the universe broadcast circuits were citizens from worlds advanced in Light and Life. These are citizens who grew to have not only interest but great love for this small planet that hosted their Creator for a short time.

Yes, there were citizens who prayed for the well-being of Urantia. There were citizens, spiritual and material, with knowledge of your troubled world and who did indeed send prayerful thoughts to contribute to the well-being of the planet - for its progress, spiritually and socially.

Are you in understanding of my meaning? Those within the enlightened universe joined in Michael's cause to promote truth and love on a seemingly backward planet. I cannot fully disclose the progress of which these citizens contributed to the well-being of your world; I can say, however, that without such loving prayer and good thoughts being directed at Urantia, there would be less progress than there is now.

You know not of the great strides your world has made in these past two-thousand years. Michael's bestowal brought the attention of the universe to Urantia; and the universal citizen's good thoughts helped to further Michael's good cause. Those universe citizen's prayers were not wasted words falling upon deaf ears, no. These citizens, with the deep and abiding love in God, chose to promote wellness of all Nebadon; and in order to have wellness for the whole, the part was also prayed for.

Do you see the power in praying? Your prayers carry so much farther than you can see with your mortal eyes. Evolution appears to be slow, and at times impatience may get the better of you; but know that in your praying you are asking for a change of attitude and a greater understanding of mind. Know that in your praying you are also being prayed for. Do you see how this connects us on the universe circuits?

I would ask you, in this past week, how did your praying bring about positive effects? In your praying, did your divine-self have authority over your more human-self? Was it necessary to pray repeatedly in order to bring about positive effects? Or, was there a surrendering to adversity without effort to be persistent in your prayers? Have you questions?

CALVIN: In relation to other worlds that saw what was happening with the Creator Son on our world, and their concern and prayers, which has helped to change our world in the last two-thousand years – from the mindset then, to our mindset now, our capability now – what happened on those other worlds that were also in isolation; a couple of which (according to the Urantia Book) were very much on our level but who did not have the Creator Son's personal visit in the flesh. Was there 'universe attention' focused equally on those worlds as well? How are they doing?

ABRAHAM: Those worlds that are advanced in Light and Life are fortunate to have access to the universe broadcasts wherein they are, and were, informed about the fallen worlds; these worlds of isolation are known, and also prayed for, yes. There are circumstances that are not known though; and therefore, are not prayed for and given opportunity to be recipient of the benefits of praying. The position that the Spirit of Truth has on your world keeps important issues at the forefront of society's collective mind; therefore, is there attention that is focused, yes, and changes made by good thoughts and desire for the positive. The Spirit of Truth keeps the gospel of the kingdom ever fresh and anew. Most worlds in Nebadon are privileged to have the Spirit of Truth as a unifier of thought. Does this help? (Calvin: Yes.)

RACHEL: Father Abraham, you said that while we were praying, we were also being prayed for. Is that because we are praying for one another, or did you have a deeper meaning of that statement?

ABRAHAM: Yes. My meaning comes from the far-reaches of the universe of those who do loyally send positive thoughts in your direction, and practical prayer in Father's direction for you. It is true that your world's citizens pray for one another, yes, and that is truly beautiful; yet this is only a part of those who continually look on to assist in whatever capacity they may. I am saying, the prayers for this world come from many worlds. Does this help? (Rachel: Yes, it does. That whole explanation was beautiful, and I thank you.) Abraham: You are welcome. Good question.

I am slipping. I would give you mylove and have you know that I will continue to work with you each in showing you how to participate in evolutionary progress through prayer.

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I do have a request I'd like to make before you leave us.

Would you please give our love and appreciation to the midwayers for all they have done and, all they are still doing for us? I don't think they receive the recognition that we should be giving them. I would appreciate that; and we thank you.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Yes, and noted. Until next week, shalom.

Advancement of The Brotherhood Meaning. In Acts of Service, Do Good Without Expectation in Return

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to all here this evening. I always look forward to your discussions on spiritual lessons on mortal living. I am honored to be a part of your education and to be counted as a friend. In our Mission we are always reaching for more insight into truth, and I say, truth is ever changing and may be unrecognizable at times, yes, but always do we believe that prayer is a wonderful clarifier.

Last week we discussed how you can participate in universal communion to create good. We also discussed how other worlds prayed for you as a part to benefit the whole of our universe. The mindal connection to the universe carries weight whether it is positive or negative.

The despair of Urantian mortals over these last few decades has been felt throughout the far-reaches of Nebadon. Your universal brothers and sisters know of your plight and continue to assist you with prayer. The circuits, having been replaced, does cause individuals on Urantia to receive in a greater capacity. So therefore do I say, the despair that ripples out from your planet continues to be more felt by other world's citizens.

Your reinstatement into the fold of Nebadon has endowed you with a great collective mindal power. I say, this has created much confusion wherein there has been a great deal of mental and emotional disorders. I do not deny that there are mental ailments that plague your citizens; I do however say, when you review your history, you can see how as citizens have continued to advance mentally and materially, the risk for depression and the like came to be more frequent.

I say, in the confusion of living it is essential that you continue to create a balanced prayer life. In learning of your connection to other world citizens, it is always routine to have some instruction on the advancement of the brotherhood. In learning of your individual destiny, you are also beginning to understand your cosmic responsibility.

Through prayer, the divine self is learning to have more influence over the human side. As the divine-self begins to take a more active role in your life, you begin to see past your own immediate circumstances, whether they are bad or good. Your divine side, in taking an active role, begins to be concerned for others outside of yourself. I am meaning - in understanding that you are within the kingdom of God, you begin to view the brotherhood of man and its role within the kingdom on a universal scale.

I would like now to decrease my lesson down to a more personal level. It is difficult to understand the 'cosmic brotherhood of the universe' if there is not brotherhood among you as a civilization. What does the brotherhood mean to you? What role do you play? In your search for spiritual understanding are you overlooking the small lessons to be gained from your fellows?

Many go in search of meaning and go to great lengths, when all along, true spiritual meaning lies before them in small acts of service to their fellows. There is no obvious glory within these small acts of service, and many times these acts are unattractive to those who still cling to their human side. I can say, there is a significant amount of spiritual understanding to be gained through your efforts to give service, to go outside of yourself to do good without expectation of return.

Do you see, in the small steps to understanding your worldly brotherhood, there is a great path that leads you to understanding the universal brotherhood. I say, in your prayers, there is power. In your collective desire, there is power. In your willingness to submit to Father's will, there is power.

This week, take note of those small acts that may present themselves to be a burden at first, and note the spiritual understanding they can bring. Have you questions?

MIRIAM: Abraham, there is this experience that I have when I've come across this understanding - you know, when they say that if you have a resentment about someone, pray for them, or like in the St. Francis prayer, it is to then understand and be understood. Some people say that when you 'cop an attitude' about someone, it's because it mirrors something back to yourself about you. I think that all rolls into the same experience of feeling that 'it's a magical thing.' It is like when I get out of myself and want to be a part of humanity, when I have the experience of praying for someone instead of praying for myself, there is just this magical thing that happens. I don't understand it sometimes. If I have an attitude about someone and I start to think maybe I have an attitude about them because it's something about what I don't like about myself, and something I need to work on also. I am saying that I think it's neat, but I still get confused with it. Can you help me with that?

ABRAHAM: My understanding is that for so long have mortals been burdened by self-loathing, self-unforgiveness, and disappointed in expectations of their goals. You can see there is confusion between stepping away outside of yourself because of this self-hatred, versus stepping outside of yourself because there is security in your status as a child of God to serve another. With our Mission, there comes many healing factors. To regain a 'sense of universal well-being,' is among the lists of goals we have set out to accomplish. In your balanced prayer life are you inclined to embrace truth and every facet therefrom; there is such a communion with Father that you are secure in your status as His child. From there, comes a balance of self-understanding, self-forgiveness, self-love, self-forgetfulness. Do you see, in your own well-being, is it your greatest desire to step out of yourself to be of service to others? Each mortal must strive to attain these understandings to become cosmic-minded. Is this close to what you are understanding?

MIRIAM: Yes, Abraham. Why is it when you are in the act of doing this it seems almost like a remembrance? I think, 'why can't I keep this all the time.'

ABRAHAM: Understood. Your varying perceptions are Thought Adjuster-related, wherein your Thought Adjuster ever so patiently teaches through your experience. At times mortals are lacking in experience, and the internal Father must wait. Does this answer? (Miriam: Oh yes. Thank you very much.)

CALVIN: Do you have just a short helpful 'what to do' hint regarding my son, Christopher? I know I have a lot of experience to learn in time about proper parenting. You have been very helpful in my situation before - to speed things up.

ABRAHAM: In understanding children, we must go back through the memories of being a child. A child can feel extreme loneliness and isolation. It's as though the child feels abnormal and misunderstood. A child must be reassured that they are perfectly well within Father's kingdom. There is no sin they have committed to change their status. Christopher must be reassured that his stage at this point in time is not out of the ordinary. He is a completely normal growing boy. It would do him well to relate to the Master's childhood. An interest in Jesus as a youth would perhaps bring Christopher some understanding of how Jesus felt awkward as a boy growing up. Make this easy for him to understand. The more complicated it seems, the more Christopher will view himself as failing as an individual. Most importantly, teach him to actually have communion with the Master and know that he can easily attain the Master's understanding.

My communication is slipping. I would convey to you my gratitude for your friendship and patience in our cause for the upliftment of the universe. My love go with you. Until next week, shalom.

Beginning Teachings About Prayerful Healings With One Another

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you, my friends. I am especially anxious tonight to get our meeting underway. We have entered into a new phase of our Mission. Our lessons from here on will require a bit more interaction between you. Our Kingdom is spiritual, but also is it active. I am honored to be a part of your spiritual education. My most humble gratitude to you each for your patience and persistence in understanding these morontial lessons.

Our lessons these past months have brought us to this new beginning phase in this, the Correcting Time. We have learned how being submissive to Father's will enables us to receive immediate revelation. We have thoroughly reviewed prayer and the benefits thereof. As we learn more about the reality of the brotherhood, then do we find ourselves more active in the area of service.

Your world and its mental and emotional plagues have been of great destruction to the incoming universal information. I do not mean to imply this is abnormal, no, not at all; your world experiences evolution as it should. These plagues of the mind can indeed be overcome through prayer. This is where prayer meets the brotherhood. Through service are you able to assist one another in overcoming these mental obstacles.

Your willingness to understand your fellows leads you to love them. Many desirous of serving their fellows are in some confusion saying, "What can I do to assist my brother or sister that appears to be in so much pain?"

It has been said: "No greater love can a man have than to lay down his life for a friend." I would rephrase this for these modern times, "No greater love can a man have than to earnestly pray for his friend." I am requesting of you this evening to begin a prayerful service for your fellows.

This act of prayerful service will begin small within this group and go forth from there. I will perform these acts of prayerful healing myself until your level of comfort is adequate where you can take over. I would ask for your prayers for one another to be verbal, in that it creates a greater reality for you. I ask that one or two of you to spend time in prayer with a recipient who may be suffering from the emotional disorders I previously mentioned.

To engage in verbal prayer with your friend creates a sharing connection not only between you and Father but also the Supreme Being. Prayers are healing. Prayers bring comfort to those clouded by despair, anger, and other various spirit poisons. To engage in prayer with your fellows is to create a mindal healing, and therefore, even physical healing is affected. I would ask of you in this new service to create a more brotherly and sisterly connection between you in the group. In time we will go beyond just those of our group.

This world, in its mental anguish, can receive comfort and healing through the care of another who would spend time in prayer for them. There are great benefits to behold from these prayerful healings. There is peace, confidence, a security – and a knowing that comes from these prayerful healings. Do you see how our lessons have led us to this point? I would give you a few guidelines to this, but your inner feelings are always trustworthy to follow when praying:

- It is helpful in the transfer of energy to be closely seated by the healing recipient.
- It is always wonderful to begin with a pledge to the doing of Father's will and acknowledgment of His all-knowingness.
- There would be great benefits to acknowledge yourself as Father's child, loved completely as you are.
- It is wise to have the healing recipient state their desire. This allows them to participate in their own healing; whether this is verbal, it matters not.
- To pledge faith and belief that the prayer was indeed heard – the answer is forthcoming, and peace is on the way.

This form of healing can be done by anyone. Anyone is also a candidate for this healing. Those in need of assistance due to mental aggravations may put a request to the group, and volunteers will remain after the meeting for this prayerful healing. I would at some point desire to give a demonstration. As for now, are there questions?

CALVIN: Is the main focus of this new exercise not so much for our physical comfort, but more-so our mental/mindal peace and comfort?

ABRAHAM: Yes, which also benefits our physical well-being and renews connection to the cosmic mind. Another question?

TECTRA: Do we hold the prayer session while gathered in this group, here? or do we do it on our own time while thinking of each person in the group?

ABRAHAM: Your prayers, while you collectively pray for another, have influence in the universe, yes. To pray personally with another is to promote healing, personally, and this is always more effective when done with some privacy wherein a prayer recipient feels more at ease to receive, and the energies that are used are more organized and focused on incoming information. But I say, it is according to your own comfort level how you will choose to do this, if at all. I would not make this a demand on you. I am just now allowed to authorize these techniques of mental and emotional well-being. Another question?

CALVIN: Should these prayers be concise like you taught us on meditation, not long-drawn-out energy-draining, but shorter?

ABRAHAM: Yes, not as long as the stillness; and yet, long enough to find some unity in the thoughts of those praying and the one being prayed for. There are many times where mortals can feel burdened by spirit poisons or misunderstandings, and it would be of great benefit to them to have their fellows spend a moment to join in caring prayer to provide some clarification. I would desire at some time to do a demonstration. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, you know how we have been spending all this time learning of effective prayer. You have been with us helping us, guiding us along – and now you are saying we are stepping up to another phase? (Abraham: Yes.) Miriam: Is this phase not only for what we were talking about before the meeting – about being a part of the brotherhood, having a fuller understanding of that, feeling it and connecting with it, and to practice doing this in our group – but is it an exercise of walking through our fears with each other and learning to trust each other? feeling open to communication? As you know, sometimes people feel uncomfortable and shy about praying out loud.

ABRAHAM: Yes, you are in understanding. There are those who feel discomfort in verbal praying; and yet, can help maintain an energy connection through kind willingness to go an extra mile for their fellows. It is asked that all be involved in these prayer healings; yet, only one need be verbal in the praying. I hope not to frighten anyone with this task; it is not required that you participate in any way. Your willingness to participate, however, will bring a greater bond within the group, and myself. Another question?

RACHEL: Well Father Abraham, I know that you know that in my prayers during meditation that I do pray for everyone in the group. And I go farther than that; I pray for all of God's children whether they are mortal or spiritual. Here I do pray silently; but at home, most of the time I pray verbally. Has most of my praying been sufficient – more like you are talking about here tonight?

ABRAHAM: Yes, where in your prayers, you are in dedication to the doing of Father's will, yes. There are many forms of praying, yes, but I would say, to pray with another activates a healing energy; there is a concentration in praying that is not there when you are praying for many. (TR says to Rachel: "Can I see your hands?") [Ellanor holds both of Rachel's hands while Abraham spoke to her.] Abraham: To pray with another with such earnest care can create healing effects, and that is our focus. To spend time with another does show of your love for them. Do you see?

RACHEL: Yes. I think that is quite beautiful, really and truly, and I thank you. I do have another question before you get all worn out and lose concentration with the whole works. Have you met with Debra R. (spiritual name Rutha) since leaving her mortal body? [Editor's note: Debra was the transmission-receiver for the Pocatello, Idaho group and passed away this week due to her ailing heart/lung condition.]

ABRAHAM: One moment. She is in the company of Daniel at this time. He is counseling her on how to release her mortal responsibilities. She is somewhat distressed by her stepping out of her mortal life into her morontial. It can require some time to adjust. She is aware of the pain that is within her own group, and she also feels this pain. Rutha knows that her Teaching Mission group can carry on successfully, with Daniel continuing to teach. This does not concern her. In discovering that she will assist us on this side with the Mission will help to ease some of the discomforts due to this adjustment. This is all my information at this time. Perhaps I will have more at another time.

I am slipping. I would ask to demonstrate this prayerful healing technique next week on whoever may desire it. My love go with you. Until next week, shalom.

Spiritual Reality Is Increasing Over Visual Reality | Demonstration of Prayerful Healing

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you each, this evening. I am excited about our upcoming lessons. Your spirituality will begin to go beyond these doors at your Monday meetings.

When I first taught you as a group, I vowed to make your spiritual understanding more of a reality. We are at the point in our lessons where our spiritual understanding takes action. The scales of 'spirituality' are increasing on the side of reality - almost to the point of necessity in our daily living. Yes, the scales of visual reality are in decrease due to universal meanings and values.

Our lesson from last week asks that you serve one another through prayer. There are always great burdens to bear and it can seem there is no end in sight. It can seem as though your human-self has power over your divine-self. To participate in this prayerful healing gives you greater capacity for receiving spiritual insight.

With the re-encircuitment of Urantia, this prayerful healing technique has great benefits. It has such realness to understanding your status within the kingdom of God. To request such mindal healing is not a show of weakness or slothfulness, no; to request this service is to be active in expanding your capacity to receive spiritual understanding and to make clear the way to participate in gaining solutions to those problems seemingly unanswerable.

To perform in these healing exercises is not so difficult. Your love for your fellows will lead the way. Your devotion to Father and the wellness of His children does make this a technique you feel you have always known. To pray with one another is not a new concept, but I say it has certainly changed in how it affects mortals. The effects on mortals are with a new concentration; this is due to the welcoming of Urantia back into the fold of Nebadon, gaining back the spiritual circuits.

Mind you, this technique is not miracle-working, no. It has to do with mental and emotional healing. The healing has to be accepted in whatever form it may appear. By that I mean – to receive this prayerful healing, and then discontinue your efforts to promote it, may possibly weaken the strength of it. With each healing I recommend several sessions of stillness practice by the healing recipient.

It is my desire to have our demonstration now if it is possible. Is that appropriate? Are there volunteers?

CALVIN: Would you accept me as your first volunteer? (Abraham: Certainly.) Calvin: Would you like me front and center in front of the TR? (Abraham: Yes.)

TR: He is saying he would ask Ellen and Rachel to assist.

CALVIN: Where would you like hands of Ellen and Rachel to be?

ABRAHAM: Anywhere it is comfortable in your immediate presence. [We simply joined hands.]

ABRAHAM: Father, you are the Father of all fathers. We know you are unmatched in power and grace. Your love for your children is confirmed by the witnessing of your fingerprints in their mortal living. Father, this is your son, one who experiences some difficulty that takes a tremendous amount of energy in unfruitful directions. You are the maker of all things, and no task is too big or too small. We would ask you, Father, to touch this your child, Calvin, to be open to receiving your presence of love and well-being.

It is at this time Calvin would state his desired results from this healing.

CALVIN: I desire that I can develop full trust and confidence without worry and anxiety over my responsibilities – first to you, Father, and secondly, to my responsibilities in life; and, to do so peaceably, without fear and anxiety. I desire to be more open to your peace and to open communication; and help me be more loving and serving. Thank you.

ABRAHAM: We are with faith that Father has heard our petition. We are in knowing of His greatness and wisdom. His will always reigns supreme. We each here are accepting of your will, Father, and we hope we can each be open to your direction. Let us have full faith the answer is forthcoming. We would express our gratitude to you, Father, for your love; and we also return your love with a most humble heart. Amen.

The words need not be exact. You will easily find the words are there when you are reaching out in service for your fellows. Is there another here tonight who would receive our prayerful healing?

HONORAY: You don't need to ask me twice.

ABRAHAM: I would ask again for your participation, Ellen and Rachel.

Father, we have gathered to request of you an opening of the heart and mind, and to receive your abundance of love and comfort. This is so easily achieved through faith in you, our Supreme Father. We know this. Our faith is strengthened by our bond between each other. This, your daughter, is no doubt your beloved child and this is known to the core of our beings. We would ask you, Father, to allow Honoray to be open to your will, whatever that may be. With us, your will reigns supreme.

Honoray, in your own words, what would be your desired results from this healing. It need not be verbal if you wish? (Honoray: (silent pause.) Did you receive my desire?)

ABRAHAM: The Father is knowing of your most deep scars and is already at work on the softening of the stubbornness of mortal mind that can perchance block His words. You are understood, Honoray.

ABRAHAM: We would express to our Father that His guidance is so needed and appreciated by each one here, and the answer, we know, is forthcoming. The openness in mind and heart is now occurring. We are in deep appreciation to you, our Father. Our love to you always. Amen.

This technique is fairly easy and not to cause anxiety or cause embarrassment. We are promoting the brotherhood on Urantia. If a person is not up to this technique, there need not be any forcing, for your desire to serve will come in time. This should be kept simple. And I say, it does the recipients good to share the understanding they receive from this prayerful healing. I would take a few questions.

CALVIN: Abraham, thank you very much. I would have much to share and some questions with the group here on this healing technique topic. Say for instance, my nine-year-old boy, who probably at this point is not going to say, 'Dad, I need a healing.' Does the child, or any person for that matter, need to request this healing?

ABRAHAM: No. It is wise to explain to the person all the details and benefits that are involved with this healing technique. You can explain that this type of prayer is really not much different than what the Master himself did to help open the spiritual eyes of all He met. Children, in their understanding of the power of prayer, are excellent candidates for this prayerful healing because they receive as a little child – full of faith. Children are entirely welcome to participate, yes. It does our youth well to feel the importance of the focus of adult attention – to be accepted as an equal kingdom believer. Yes, an equal pilgrim in the kingdom, not as a less significant person because of age. Is there another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, while we are learning this technique and getting a grip on it, are you suggesting that the recipient be here with us so they can sit close to us? and later on, maybe we can use it with folks that aren't here?

ABRAHAM: Yes, Father's ear is always available for all your petitions; but I would request that to gain full effect from these prayerful healings the recipient needs to be in close proximity. Does this help?

MIRIAM: Yes, I understand. Like say for instance, not just me praying for someone here in our group, but like using this technique for a member of the Teaching Mission who is not here – would that still be just like plain old prayerful petitions? Do you know what I mean?

ABRAHAM: Understood. Yes. "Where two or more are gathered in my name, I will be there," is a promise that Michael has kept up unto this very day. Your gathering to pray and to direct energy toward one who is not present does certainly have the greater benefit of concentrated energy. Yes. Does this help a little?

MIRIAM: Yes. If during the week, any of us needed help and we called one of our group fellows and said, could you help me with this – do you support that? Do you support us practicing this technique during our week such as over the phone? or would you rather we wait till our next meeting time?

ABRAHAM: There is not need to wait. Certainly, I support this technique for 'when the occasion does arise,' yes, for it is wonderful that you would find time for your fellows and to assist them. You know that mental anguish can at times be even more painful than something physical. It would be of great blessing to those willing to participate in this at any time. I would give you some further examples of these prayerful healings for a short time, just to allow you time to gain confidence in this technique. Does this help? (Miriam: Yes. Thank you very much.)

RACHEL: Well, Father Abraham, is it true that a good part of the time it is our mental anguish that creates physical pain?

ABRAHAM: Yes, certainly. A great many afflictions are due to distorted perception. It would be of benefit to this form of mental anguish to receive prayerful healing. You are correct.

RACHEL: Would we be capable to go home and heal someone of our own family through prayer at this time, or at least perform this healing prayer you are teaching us?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Our technique is to provide mental clarity and comfort; it is to open the human mind to receive divine insight – which surely can indeed lead to better health, overall, yes. But better physical health is not our focus so much as is our strengthening the connection between Father and child. Does this help?

RACHEL: Yes it does, and I thank you. I have been performing this with my son for the last two or three evenings, which I imagine you do already know that.

ABRAHAM: Yes. It does carry weight. I can say to you, it is wonderful and health promoting. I am slipping, but I would express my faith in you each, as confident carriers of the good news. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

More Prayerful Healings | What Does the Brotherhood Mean To You

I am ABRAHAM. It is my extreme pleasure to be with you this evening. I hold you each in high regard. I feel privileged to be counted among you as a close friend. I know you each very well and can say my fondness grows every time we meet. You are each so unique with positive and negative aspects to your personalities; I know this, and I can say with a deep heartfelt honesty that I truly love you – each one.

I find these prayerful healings with you such a joy. And, I can say I am also greatly uplifted, for in my own personal opinion I find serving within the brotherhood energizing and enlightening. As goes the part so goes the whole.

I find myself feeling such a strengthened connection to Father in tending to His children. I indeed find new levels of joy with each act of service. To pray, with and for, any one of you, is my privilege. I so enjoy your trust in me – and, in these morontial lessons.

I would ask you this evening to look within your minds to understanding what the brotherhood means to you. How much of yourself would you give to serve within this brotherhood? I would also ask that you allow me to continue in our demonstration of these prayerful healings for those who desire it. After our lesson is over, I would ask two or three volunteers to practice with our new technique, and I will continue to assist.

Those willing to receive prayerful healings please come forward. (Bridgette – Ellanor's nine-year-old daughter comes forward.)

ABRAHAM: Father, it is known how close your little ones are to you. In faith and capacity for love they are unmatched. In these times of anxiety we would express to you, our Father, that we know you are without fallibility. We know you are complete, and that you are able to help us mend our deepest sorrows. It is known that these, your children of today, will carry forth our Mission of tomorrow. We would desire Father, for your assistance in our understanding of a well-balanced mentality.

It is at this time my child, I would ask that you picture in your mind what you would like to see come from this prayer healing. (Pause. Bridgette's reply is silent.)

It is my understanding, Bridgette, that you are in doubt of your capabilities but full of faith in the capabilities of Father and His Son, Jesus. Worry not child, this will carry you where you need to go.

Father of all Fathers, we would express our faith in you and your matchless wisdom and power. As we go forth with your love, please accept ours in return. Know that with us, your will be done. Amen.

Is there another in which we can pray for this evening? (Ray comes forward.)

ABRAHAM: Father, it is our supreme pleasure to know that you are qualified in your mighty workings. This, your son, is no doubt recognized as yours. We would express our faith in you, Father, to open the spiritual eyes of faith and let the fountains of peace flow freely through the channels of mind.

My son, it would do you well to express your expectations from this prayerful healing. It is your choice whether it is verbal or not. (Pause. Ray's words are not verbal.)

Father, we are in such comfort knowing that the small children of Urantia are so carefully watched over; and this, your son, has your magnitude of wisdom and courage to carry forth your word. It is wonderful to know that this, your son, is a fine example of a carrier of the good news. Father, we are in understanding that peace has already begun. Our faith in you has brought us these open minds to begin to heal. Amen.

Is there another? (Joshua comes forward.)

ABRAHAM: Father, we would speak to you about your son, Joshua, who has carried a fantastic burden. Joshua is a son of yours who, as you know, lives with great uncertainty in his purpose – but there is no doubt his faith in you is mighty. We, your children of time and space, would request of you an opening in our minds and hearts – to allow your understanding to be with us. You are a Father without limits, and your encouragement to us takes us far.

Joshua, my son, would you express your expectations from his healing of heart and mind. It can be private if you wish.

JOSHUA: I wish to overcome my loneliness and anxiety.

ABRAHAM: Understood. Our Father has indeed heard your heart and knows of your plight. The Master, who also knew of such loneliness and anxiety, is a wonderful example to behold in that these things that plagued Him were sustained by the one and only Father. Father is our uplifter and can remove all obstacles from our mortal stubborn mind. You, my son, are preparing to feel the touch of our Father. We are with full faith that this is forthcoming. Our thanks to Father, and our love goes with Him always. Amen.

You my friends, are grasping this concept. I have full faith in you to resume our prayerful healing once our meeting has ended. This is my greatest joy – to serve. When I have served my fellows, I have served my Father.

It is always wondrous to me how Father performs His mighty deeds. Yes, healing, in whatever form it may be perceived, is always healing. I mean to say that if your mindal anxiety becomes increased, this is temporary and not to worry. It is sometimes necessary to bring forth the elements that plague you to begin to find solutions.

You, my friends of faith, are a small part in the force that moves the brotherhood forward. I would say that yes, even though you are not many, yet your impact is great through your example of faith and dedication to the doing of Father's will. The courage to take action within the brotherhood is to bring about a new re-energized connection between you and your Father. Have you questions?

RAY: Yes, I have a question. When I pray, I am praying to the Father in behalf of myself, which I see as one form of prayer. I feel there is another form wherein I pray for somebody else; I pray to the Father for that person, and that Father intercede for him. And there is another way that I am wondering about how prayer would work, and that is if I put the person's face in my mind, and pray to the Father and talk to that person that I am looking at – face to face so-to-speak – asking them to understand, and to love the Father, and bring about the brotherhood of the kingdom. I was just wondering if that was another form of prayer?

ABRAHAM: You are correct, if I am perceiving you correctly, for you speak of appealing to another's indwelling Father Fragment. Yes, it is helpful in that you are also helped by this technique; this is our understanding. You can pray for others and attempt to sway them towards the kingdom, yes; and yet, you can be rejected. I say this is not wasted prayer – it is indeed an educational experience. Yes, good can appear in many forms. Your openness to show examples of the Father's love is commendable, and I would say this does great things for those that know you. You are correct in that this is another form of prayer. I would hope that I would not confuse any of you by our exercise to promote the brotherhood through this prayerful healing technique. I say, this small beginning in these new enlightened forms of helpful healing – is to create great strides in changing the thought patterns on Urantia. Does this at all answer? (Ray: Yes.)

CALVIN: Abraham, you know my boy Lance, I am sure. I just have a question about his attending. He says he would like to, but I think I would like your input as to whether he should read past lessons first, or just attend. I would not like to see him come into something that he doesn't grasp onto, or something he is not prepared for. You know him I think better than I do.

ABRAHAM: Lance coming to our meetings by his own choosing is excellent. He need only do what he is willing to. Concerning his personal life difficulties, it would be helpful to him to be directed to particular lessons by you, his father; but I say this young man does well, and he is always welcome. We hope he can find peace and joy within our fellowship. It is of great importance that the world's young people become involved in our Mission. It does them a great deal of good to learn of Father's wisdom, peace, and love. It is also valuable that the youth of today also learn to serve as well as be served.

It is my desire to ask you to go forth and continue our prayerful healings. I will continue to assist you. As for now, I would allow Ellanor some rest. My love to you. Shalom.

Allowing Father Full Authority Strengthens the Brotherhood. View Our Fellows Through Father's Eyes

I am ABRAHAM. I am so impressed by your willingness to embrace truth and display such fantastic faith. You have made your commitment to membership within the brotherhood of the kingdom. As we have learned to perform our prayerful healings to receive mindal clarity and emotional stability, we have also somewhat unknowingly received some group healing. You, as a spiritual link in the universal chain, have displayed your willingness to put your desires for wish-fulfillment aside in favor of universal wellness. This is a great stride in your journey together.

The Master, in all His understanding, would repeatedly come up against His apostles' diverse thinking. The Master, always ever patient and far-seeing, worked within His fellows' understanding to always promote light, to always stay positive.

The 'brotherhood' that the Master talked about is beginning to come into reality. The kingdom of heaven is at last displayed before your eyes. You and your fellows, allowing Father full authority in all things, is the brotherhood. To 'allow Father His full sovereignty' is to be released of the burden of the ego where the brotherhood is concerned - it would do you well to keep this concept at the forefront of your minds.

Father is unmatched in wisdom and power, and we allow Him full authority over us as individuals and as a group. The integration of this concept within your minds, individually and collectively, is to receive a group healing of sorts where truth is easily spoken and not forced; where light is shown but not blinding; where the head of the table at your meetings is always reserved for Father. Yes, these are marks of the brotherhood.

In our previous meeting, we exercised the prayerful healings. I supervised in a way so as to help guide, but overall, I was elated by your willingness to participate. It is my understanding that you are grasping the importance of these prayerful healings. I would ask that you, one or two, volunteer to remain after - to continue this service for those who would desire it.

Our lessons about the brotherhood are extremely important to our spiritual growth, and many times experience is required to gain further understanding. Your interaction this evening is an excellent example of understanding the true meaning of the brotherhood. To view all your fellows as dear friends is going to require such an opening in the heart and mind. To view your fellows as the Master did will be a tremendous task; and yet I say, it is quite achievable.

My request for you this week is to make effort to view your fellows through Father's eyes; attempt to glean what understanding you might gain from them. With our newly opened circuits, you will find that understanding may come more rapidly than before. I say you can surely learn to love your fellows through understanding them. This is the heart of the brotherhood. Your common thread that runs through each of your collective experience is love. Have you questions?

CALVIN: You are aware we have had Melchizedek expectations generated by erroneous transmissions, wish-fulfillment-thinking, and so on, before. Some have the viewpoint that Jeremiah is speaking to us from the Mansion World where he is, and also, Rutha - which is maybe a wildfire infiltrating the Mission. Other's viewpoint - another viewpoint at least - is perhaps all this is helping us realize a realistic new opening of the system circuits. Anything you would want to put on the record, as you did on the Melchizedek 'materializing' issue, to help us not get too far on one side of misunderstanding reality? Or do you want us to sort it out on our own. Here is a good chance to clarify, maybe?

ABRAHAM: Understood. It is difficult for me to comment on. It is perhaps like Anthony's question, what was the reason for rolling the stone from the tomb? It is a matter that goes beyond our present understanding, but perhaps when we see the real learning experiences that come forth, we will have been made to rejoice. Another question? [There was discussion prior to tonight's meeting wherein Anthony had posed the question: Why did the midwayers have to roll away the stone at the time of Jesus' resurrection?]

RACHEL: Father Abraham, we have been taught that we can receive knowledge through adversity, and that we have soul growth through adversity. Is it possible for one individual to be so over-burdened with adversity that it can be detrimental to the soul?

ABRAHAM: This question could be answered 'yes and no.' It is known that we are Father's - His well-loved children; His own creations in which nothing can destroy. There are some individuals, however, that can become so connected within a certain mindal rut that the soul could perhaps become dented, but not destroyed. Your experience does indeed have its effects upon the soul, yes, but it is through one's own will to aim Paradise-ward that ensures that he remains strong throughout the journey. The choosing to do the will of Father is like a protective shield from those elements that would be damaging and yet still allow for growth. You see, beyond this life many things are understood that were not while in the flesh. What you could say was destructive to the soul in this life would perhaps be constructive in the next. Is this helping? (Rachel: Yes, and I thank you.) Abraham: You're very welcome.

I would express to you each my never-ending friendship and love. I would ask that you be available for prayerful healing after our lesson. I will continue to be with you throughout the week to further your understanding of the brotherhood. Until next week, shalom.

Through Your Experience Together You Gain Insight Into The Brotherhood

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I am here tonight with a grateful heart. I would thank you each for your devotion to our Mission. It is excellent to see that your spirituality stems beyond mere intention. You have actually helped to bring about the brotherhood within your own immediate surroundings.

To go forth bravely practicing your spiritual understanding is a glimpse into the kingdom of heaven. No more will you wait on the sidelines looking for an opportunity to show what you know; now are you taking the initiative to be a vessel for Father, to show what He knows. Yes, the spiritual life is an active life; not active in a way that would cause you to be apprehensive in behaviors you are not accustomed to, no! Active meaning, 'where you are, there also is your Mission assignment.'

Do you see, the path you each had to take was a path that would qualify you for specific acts of service or apostleship. In your seemingly uneventful lives are there Mission assignments. These assignments do not appear particularly difficult because you have already been trained to handle these difficulties. Through your experience have you gained insight toward self-improvement? Yes, and through your experience together will you gain insight into the brotherhood.

You have indeed grown 'individually' and will continue to do so, yes; but also is there a 'collective' growth. And through the understanding of the brotherhood, and actual service experience with one another, will you create collective growth. In our prayerful healings we have served our fellows through our desire to love them. In these small acts of service, the recipients are made to feel lighter, well taken care of, and perhaps with greater capacity to understand those things Father wishes them to. In the act of praying for a fellow there is a comfort that is more well-received by the recipient than if he or she would have prayed alone.

Do you see, your presence with your brothers and sisters creates an opening for them to receive – not from you, the one praying; but from Father – the Creator of all that is?' Do you see how your willingness to pray with another enlarges their capacity to receive? It matters not the choice words or correct format in which to pray, no. It is your willingness and love that creates this healing of the mental and emotional.

Your discussion with one another earlier this evening demonstrates a true brotherly respect and devotion. Your words were about the realness of life, not on the controversial topics that would perhaps drag you down. Your hearts and minds stemmed from the foundation of love and respect – wonderful brotherly qualities. The willingness to embrace truth and love is ideal for creating a safe haven where one would not fear to expose their true feelings.

The apostles of old had their moments of clinging to their juvenile practices of maintaining their status, yes; but when hard times came to pass most of the apostles banded together in the realness. Emotional upheavals are not necessary for you to band together in realness, no. Your honest everyday complications in mortal living are all you would need. To be wholly faithful in your status as 'a child of God among other children of God' is a beautiful beginning to understanding the brotherhood.

This week I would ask that you recognize those moments of realness, and know that within this realness is your Father. Be not afraid to be your true self, your real self. Ask yourself this: In these moments of realness can I identify my mission? Are there questions?

MIRIAM: Abraham, my experience this week was in reference to what you are saying this evening; but I need a little clarification. You're saying for us to "take the initiative to be a vessel for Father;" and, "to show what He knows," creating a safe haven where we wouldn't fear to expose our true feelings and not be afraid to be our true self. As I was sharing earlier, how do I know the difference? It felt like what I was saying was on my path and was right; but on the other hand, how do I know when I'm on my path – or, when I'm getting into other people's business? I get confused. I would really like some help with that because I don't want to do harm.

ABRAHAM: Understood. It is my understanding that the Master would fear not in exposing His true feelings to those who would give ear; it is a matter of productive feedback. If the recipient of your words appears to take no offense, then by all means proceed. But if your recipient appears to be receiving too much light, wherein more would not be helpful or perhaps cause fear, then it would be wise to ease back. It is not a sin to be yourself, but it is perhaps more damaging to act as others want you to act. It is best to have faith in your status as His child and proceed with His wisdom. Of course this is not free license to go about correcting those you find wrong, no. It is, however, an act of kindness, common courtesy, to show concern. Yes, this does no harm. As you feel more at ease in your status as Father's child, then will others also feel more at ease with you. Remember, some may fear truth, but always is love, welcome. Does this help?

MIRIAM: Yes. It's great. Thank you. May I ask one kind of off-the-wall question? Do you have any feedback or opinion on the book that is out, Conversations with God?

ABRAHAM: With most reading materials I give the same answer. [laughter.] Truth can be found in many sources. I try not to promote any reading material so as to not disrupt your path of enlightenment. Does that help? (Miriam: Yes. I understand. Thank you.)

CALVIN: Abraham, I was reading in the Urantia Book this morning in Jesus' teachings – which conveyed that the Jews and those people of Jesus' day thought of the "kingdom of God" or the "kingdom to come" as Jesus himself being the fulfillment of the expected Messiah – "the King to sit on the throne of David," and so forth. I believe the Urantia Book states that it was not Jesus' choice of words to use the 'kingdom of God' phraseology in teaching the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. So, my question: Would there be a more correct phrase we could use? Rather than 'the kingdom of God,' maybe a more correct phrase and meaning could be 'the family of God.' Is there significant meaning in that phrase 'kingdom of God' that you are using?

ABRAHAM: You are quite correct in that the Family of God would perhaps be a better choice of words. To you whom I speak to here, it matters not. I am perceiving your definition of 'kingdom' to mean the embracing of all creatures – those material and spiritual – those on the path of ascension Paradise-ward, and those who assist the ascenders. I am most grateful to be included with you though in our Family of God.

It is my greatest joy to continue with you on these morontia lessons. My love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Humor Enhances Realness Within The Brotherhood | Overmuch Piety Is Stifling

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you, my friends, my fellows within the kingdom. I am happy to meet with you weekly to assist in your spiritual education. This position as Teacher has meant a great deal to me. I find that in working with my students I not only learn but experience deep levels of joy. Within the realness of the brotherhood, I find much to be joyful about. I at times experience great humor. It is said that laughter is a healing medicine to almost any ailment.

Over the ages, to be pious was indeed the mark of a true Christian or spiritual person. To exemplify reverence was the most valued virtue one could present to his fellows. In this long-held belief, much of Christ's message was distorted. Jesus stood upon a firm foundation of faithfulness and devotion, and He expected as much from His fellows, yes. But this faithfulness and devotion was a small part of what the Master had taught - Jesus had also taught us we can live life more abundantly, and this includes lightheartedness and humor.

Much of civilization of this day, in competition for the best and the most, have become calloused with a sort of mechanistic-thinking. To these people it is critical that they be held in high esteem from their fellows - this is such a false sense of power and security. Those who live their lives for the opinions of others fall short of the true meaning of joy, the true meaning of value. The world today is overburdened with guilt and regret from those who live their lives knowing that they fall terribly short of perfection. Perfection 'to them' meaning - what is valued as normal, what is expected, what is more than a fair share?

It is not surprising to us here on this side of the veil to be witness to the horrible human suffering and sorrow on this world today given the so many that are unknowing of the One who loves them without expectation of anything in return. Yes, man is wholly ignorant to the One who knows them through and through; and who, without a doubt, totally loves them, unconditionally. It is no surprise to us that the scrambling in the world to 'gain more over your fellows' is a popular practice. Few are realizing that the true source of all love and happiness does lie within their very being.

Do you see how our Mission will assist many of these scrambling individuals? It is you, my students, who will assist in revealing this beautiful light - that God is among us and happy to be with us. Father delights in His children's company. He seeks only to love. He seeks only to guide. You, our students, among other Missioners, will continue to reveal this understanding through your personal contacts. This type of work is not usually performed before the masses, no, for this is highly personal.

Yes, you are fully trusted to assist in this sharing of the good news. This is what makes our education about the brotherhood so important. It is a pledge to move forward while assisting others to also move with you, just as I assist you in moving forward with me. I can say, a show of piety and reverence is outdated to reveal the good news. Rather, it has shown to be successful using humor and lightheartedness when sharing with your immediate contacts.

The scramblers of this world will begin to take notice of those who appear to move joyously through life under any circumstances. You, as apostles, will indeed have opportunity to demonstrate Father's strength. I would emphasize – your discussions among you here weekly are important to your understanding of the brotherhood. I would ask that you continue your discussions here, weekly, and attempt to incorporate more humor and feelings of comfort within the group. Are there questions?

CALVIN: This lesson is in good timing for me. I've had a lot of people this week say to me, "Hey, what's wrong?" Is my deep serious thinking getting in the way of my lightheartedness and humor?

ABRAHAM: There can be imbalance, yes, and while deep-thinking is important to spiritual growth, there is the danger that the ego can magnify the importance of the self within this deep-thinking, and this will throw you off balance. Deep-thinking comes when it will. Father sees to it that you have what you have when you need it. Constant deep-thinking is to put an unreachable expectation upon your spiritual growth, and a blockage to the understanding that your life is a lesson in eternity – it reveals a spiritual humor where you can allow it that can help create balance. To be lighthearted and grateful is to maintain receptivity from Father. You are each relying upon a good foundation of faith. You have learned that the Fatherhood of God does teach us devotion, yes, but also does the brotherhood teach us, fellowship. Does this help? (Calvin: Yes, thank you, Abraham.)

RACHEL: Well, Father Abraham, maybe I have been negligent lately about bringing humor to the group. I was doing it for a while. So, I will tell Calvin a joke. He is used to dealing in cars all the time so he should appreciate this because years ago we had a saying: "Well, for Chrysler sake, you make my Essex ache. Dodge around the corner and Whippet." (Ellen: Rachel, do you expect me to type this?) [laughter.] (Ellen: What is an Essex?) Rachel: You don't know what an Essex and Whippet is? (Ellen: That must have been in Abraham's day.) [much laughter and too many more comments to type.] Rachel: I'm sorry Father Abraham, they don't understand anything, do they! I'll have to make it more simple next time, won't I?

ABRAHAM: I am in great gratitude for your humor and I find you are quite balanced in that area, Rachel. You are a wonderful example of one whose firm foundation of faith springs forth sprouts of joy. It creates such an opening for others to receive the real meaning of life's purpose. Yes, I appreciate your humor. Continue on because I am indeed understanding your jokes. (Rachel: Father Abraham, you're old enough to remember those cars, aren't you?) [laughter.] Another question?

CALVIN: About Joshua and his expectation of 'forty years more' of living – would you like to comment on that? [Joshua was approximately seventy-one years old at this time and expressed that he'd received a message that he'd live forty more years.] It may be one of those 'rolling the rock' things that you can't answer but I've looked back at things we once thought so real, and later to learn they were 'wishful transmissions' maybe. I am not saying he can't live forty more years, I'm sure he will if Father will let him, but he sure is convinced of the realness of the transmission from Ham's lessons – or perhaps it was through Jason or Rebecca, not Ham, that told him he would live forty more years. He is not going to give up with that. I don't know what to do – to encourage him, “Yeah, you'll live on,” or to try to help him understand that perhaps he put too much faith in perhaps wishful-thinking transmissions. How should I handle this one – it does concern me?

ABRAHAM: I am forbidden to interfere with his belief system. It is not my place to correct him or encourage him. I would also relieve you of this burden to help your friend to change his beliefs. Do you see this is the actual path he must travel? All of this is his decision, his learning to allow Father's will to reign supreme in his life. Your ministry to him could include humor and truth. Your truth to him being, "I understand what you believe Ham said in those beginning days, but I ask you what now does your Father say to you." Do you see, a Teacher does not take the place of Father who knows you through and through? A Teacher's position is not so personal as is our Father. We are instructed to focus upon our mission – to assist Urantia into further stages of Light and Life. You are one who has a comforting presence, and your humor acts as a beam from a lighthouse.

You each, my friends/students, are these beams that will guide those who struggle within their own imperfections. I would thank you personally, for sharing your happiness and humor with me. My love is with you always. Until next week, shalom.

Abraham, Machiventa & Ham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-26-1997

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you, my friends. It is always my honor and privilege to meet with you. It has been a fruitful week concerning these lessons on the brotherhood – fellowship within the family of God.

I can say with such gratitude that my fellows closest to me within the brotherhood have helped to sustain me in my spiritual education. My fellow co-workers have greatly lifted my feelings of being overwhelmed by the work before us. Bringing humor into our perception of the plan has helped to eliminate the foggiest of uncertainty. I truly feel a loved member of the brotherhood and do count on my fellows to assist me in my view of the path that is before us. I would ask you to hear these words from Machiventa.

MACHIVENTA (Melchizedek): My fellows within this great kingdom, I would express to you my gratitude for your support in perhaps doing those material things that we have not yet been permitted to do. I would say a few words on my understanding of the brotherhood. I have been most grateful to have fellowshiped with the Master for He has helped me to see truth. Yes, with the assistance of my Brother/Friend, Michael, I am able to enthusiastically seek the truth. I, in His presence, fear not any possibility of default for I am trusting in Michael's watchcare and love for me.

I am aware that when mortals begin in their comprehending of this brotherhood, it is not often thought that Michael is alongside you in this great family, for He, Michael, is perceived as beyond the brotherhood – ‘higher up’ if you will. Yet I can say, from a personal experiential relationship with our Creator/Brother/Father, that He is well within the brotherhood and is always ever willing to promote truth in all our spiritual understanding. Michael has my best interest at heart and is always ever willing to lay His truth upon me in gentle fashion, always kind and tactful in revealing what I must know. His fellowship within our brotherhood is a gift of guidance and comfort.

I would also express my appreciation for all my fellows who would always allow me my truth. I am always with my understanding (my opinions) on subject matters. My fellows seek not to change me for my own good, no. My fellows only seek to assist me as a part in the whole.

I am HAM. Yes. Greetings, my friends. It is always a joy to connect with this branch of my family tree. It has indeed been a wonderful journey learning about the importance of the brotherhood. I find I am lifted by my fellows' faith and good humor in those times when I am deep within my own thinking. Their continuous support of me 'as a child of God' grants me liberty to be my true self.

My fellows may not always support my opinion, and yet they do always support me as one of Father's own - with individuality. I also give my support that they may be granted that same liberty to be their true selves. Do you understand Abraham's lesson? that there is not one within the brotherhood who would climb over the back of another to reach Paradise first! No.

Those that scramble within the world today understand not that one does not move forward 'without' his brother or sister. I am always made to feel more at ease and balanced when I can gather in loving fellowship. Are you understanding that you are also my brothers and sisters that grant me liberty to be my true self? My love is with you each, always. Farewell.

I am ABRAHAM. It has been our supreme pleasure to hear these honored guests this evening. My gratitude to you, Machiventa and Ham.

On behalf of myself and my students, it is certainly wonderful to be a part of something much larger than myself. I am made to overflow with joy at the thoughts of my numerous family members. To know that those within our brotherhood do likewise seek fellowship and truth, is quite comforting. It is discomfoting knowing that those who choose isolation are those who would step on the backs of their fellows for gain.

I would ask you this week to recognize your fellows as family members. I know there is not always unity in thought or opinion, but perhaps there is unity in the knowledge that there is not an expressway to heaven.

I am departing you now for I am due to meet with my brothers and sisters. Next week our time will be spent mostly on questions. It is my understanding that some have personal questions; therefore, I would allow next week to be a night of personal questions while you also engage in brotherly interaction.

My love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Personal Questions-Living With Someone Chemically Addicted, Etc.

I am ABRAHAM. Thank you for letting me be with you here this evening. I am so happy to speak with you about your personal concerns. I am happy to serve you, my brothers and sisters, and to enjoy an evening of fellowship. Last week my associates and I spoke about the brotherhood from our own personal perspective. You can easily see that our understanding is varied due to each of our own experience. I hope this past week was filled with experience to assist you in understanding and promoting the brotherhood. If it is acceptable, I would take questions now.

ELLEN: Okay Abraham, I'll ask one for Nina. Do you have any advice for her as far as living with someone dependent on mind-altering chemical addictions? We all have our addictions, yes, but some are worse than others.

ABRAHAM: Yes, certainly. It is always amazing to a former chemically dependent individual to realize how his using did not only affect him but those who know and love him. While one is in the midst of addiction it is difficult to see beyond one's own desires. Along with a physical dependency, there is also a mental and emotional dependency as well, which can stem as far back as early childhood. As a child, you are certain to experience pain, sadness, and loneliness. Without the caretaking of the loving parent, a child can carry this through adulthood. As an adult, one can take responsibility for the amount of pain intake. Those who depend upon chemicals to control the amount of pain they might experience learn to lose their edge for accomplishing goals. And not only is the physical affected, but the mental and emotional joins forces with the ego to convince the user that he is better off with the addiction-crutch than without. My advice to Ellanor is: You have done what you can. Your focus is to remain in your status as a child of God, first. Your indwelling Father is ever ready to guide and endow you with wisdom, as needed. Learn all you can from this particular situation, although it is at times, painful. I would advise to take not the actions of another on as your own responsibility, for you can only control yourself. There is great comfort in the everyday practice of stillness - start from here and note all you can. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, what information can you share with us about what I picked up off the internet regarding claims of Melchizedek's interaction with the mortal corps of destiny. I am speaking of an event which seems to have started in the early 1900's, continuing up until in the 1970's where they organized the E.O.O.M. (Earth's Order Of Melchizedeks.) It seems to me that their interaction is/was more on the line of developing a united order governmental administration on the world, not so much as spiritual lessons and teachings as we are receiving now through this Teaching Mission.

ABRAHAM: If I am understanding you, my comment would be that there have been numerous helpers who have assisted Urantia in the hope that it would move Urantia into those first stages of Light and Life. Being an experimental planet in isolation, we have required the assistance of the Melchizedeks to record information concerning the development of the races and the dissemination of new information - and this is all common knowledge. What you are referring to is a group of individuals who have a portion of their message correct, yes, for the most part. There is a tendency on the part of some mortals to play up the mysticism while losing sight of the Melchizedeks' actual loving ministries. The universe order of the Melchizedeks is not mechanistic science fiction, no! The Melchizedeks are dedicated to a great deal of this mortal planet's upliftment - through love, compassion, and education. Does this help?

CALVIN: Yes. With that information, it gives me a viewpoint to study this by and analyze it. This is interesting information. (Abraham: Yes, certainly. Another question?)

RACHEL: Yes, Father Abraham. I'd like to ask: Are you and your associates working with and guiding Robert Schuller of the Crystal Cathedral? (Abraham: We try.) [laughter.] Rachel: He seems to teach so much right out of the Urantia Book. He broadcasts to so many nations and it looks to me like he would be a great help.

ABRAHAM: Robert is a source of positive spirituality for the masses. Some with the means to reach many, will; and we work with him to help keep the focus on positive spirituality. There is negativity within the Bible and Mr. Schuller has assistance to help him stay focused on those messages that might help to inspire people and draw them into wondering what is this faith Mr. Schuller has. Does this answer? (Rachel: Yes. Thanks.)

TECTRA: Abraham, you are probably aware that in a few weeks I am going to be doing this week-long personal growth seminar called The Awakening. I was wondering if there are some things I should focus on to help prepare me for my experiences that I will encounter in that seminar?

ABRAHAM: You, my son, Tectra, have always been a man of peace, and this can be somewhat a source of confusion at times. There is not sin in showing strength of character or verbalizing your true beliefs. Jesus was the embodiment of 'strength combined with gentleness,' and this made for a well-balanced mentality. You are a man with wisdom and strength beyond your understanding. It would do you well to extend yourself at this seminar - to be more involved than on 'just a learning' level; I am saying, extend yourself to also serve. You do well. Does this help? (Tectra: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

ROLAND: Abraham, I had an opportunity to meet a man, his given name, Mark S. He transmitted words from an angel for me in my backyard in the language of angels, to begin with, and then restated that into English. I am wondering what can I do to serve this man, if anything? I felt the Spirit of Truth in my heart about the words, but I also felt he was defensive when I expressed my experience within this Teaching Mission event. Can you help me with this?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I am understanding that this man has great faith in his spiritual practices, and exhibits it freely. There are times when well-balanced words would not serve one who is so attached to their own spiritual beliefs. The Spirit of Truth is always ready to tap the chord of truth upon your heart, letting you know how to invest yourself in service. Jesus knew who He could speak with openly, yes, but he likewise knew who not to waste time with. Always did Jesus work from within His fellows' belief system - not spending time in casting shadows of doubt upon their understanding, but revealing rays of light through love and honesty. You can best serve your fellow with a show of humbleness while expressing your honest heartfelt thoughts. In your show of humble truth, his defenses are not likely to appear so as to guard him from those things which might interfere with his attachment to his beliefs. You are well trained for this particular situation and should act upon this with a touch of lightheartedness. Is this helping your understanding? (Roland: Yes. Thank you very much.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

ELLEN: I was wondering just where do you draw the line between selfishness and self-respect?

ABRAHAM: Yes. This is a difficult line to draw, yes, and one should ask: Is it drawn with the pen of the mortal? or the divine? From early on we learn to acquire a taste for seeking acceptance, and as we grow, much of our time is invested in this quest. It can be a wrench thrown into the workings of regular mortal life when one is 'born of the spirit,' yes, for there is then presented a confusion between continuing 'the quest for acceptance and respect' (being the good sacrificial Christian) - or the child of God who simply needs to be treated as she treats others. Yes, there does require a certain amount of respect in this, for the measure is: 'What amount are you also willing to give?' Michael would not ask from you for no more than what He would also give back to you. And as a child of God and representative of the kingdom, there comes a spiritual confidence in that. So yes, where there is disrespect, it is more deeply felt; you would not treat another in this fashion, and that is what you can expect in return. You are knowing of this truth and there need not be uncontrolled outbursting, no; there is simply 'being yourself' - an honesty that can help your fellows understand that you believe yourself to be a child of God and would not accept less than that. Nobody is deserving of anyone else's degradation. It is acceptable to stand your ground with confidence that your citizenship within the kingdom is secured. And let no man rob you of your eternal destiny, meaning that in your spiritual progression there can be a consistent attitude of unshakable faith adapted from the Master. You are well qualified to handle these experiences with confidence and a light heart if you truly believe in your status as an equal-deserving child of Father. Does this help? (Ellen: Yes. Thanks.) Abraham: Is there one more question?

ROLAND: I have one if no one else does. I have two statements which I believe to be true. One: "God loves all His children equally." And two: "He is no respecter of persons." Are those two statements that characterize God's attitude toward us, correct? (Abraham: Yes.) Roland: Then He says to us: "Be you perfect even as I am perfect," through the mouth of Jesus. And: "He who has seen Him has also seen the Father." How is it then we should respect other people in such imperfection if Father says, "Be you perfect even as I am perfect" - and, "I am no respecter of persons."

ABRAHAM: Understood. I would not presume to give advice to God. However, I would give advice to you, my mortal friends, which I can say with certainty, you are not God. [laughter.] I would agree with you totally on your statements - and yet, there is a certain amount of respect that must be between you as mortals. There is not one mortal who is higher than the next; so therefore, there must not be the temptation to step on the backs of your fellows to move up on the ladder to Paradise. Brotherly respect ensures this - that you each are Paradise bound together. It is not acceptable for you to be a burden through means of your belittlement, to one who is also climbing this ladder as they see fit. In the Kingdom of God, there does require a certain amount of respect towards your fellows in the same measure as what you would want for yourself. Is this making sense?

ROLAND: Yes. I can understand. It seems to me like it is more of semantics problem than it is recognizing we are not God, and thank you for reminding us. I assume you are putting yourself in that category too. I think that God does not respect one over another, and that may mean differently than in not respecting one another - that He loves all His children, equally, and doesn't respect one over another because of something they have done or achieved, or whatever. I think as we look at this, that rather, we use the idea for respect in a different way between each other, yes, but we love each other equally; and therefore, show courtesy and kindness and those conventional things that will allow that person to feel comfortable in our presence. Respecting, as in placing one person over another, I think, is in error. I'm just a lowly mortal, a younger brother of yours struggling with these concepts.

ABRAHAM: Understood, and I am in respect of your feelings. I would feel no difference toward you in your different understanding of my concept - it is perfectly acceptable. You are understood and it is with my deepest respect for you that I would not in any way presume to change your mind. It is of no consequence to our relationship within this brotherhood.

I am most grateful to you each, this evening, that you are learning to share and embrace love and truth. I am slipping and wish to leave you with my love, and bid you, farewell. Until next week, shalom.

A Captain And Co-Captain of a Ship. Who Is Our Captain and Co-Captain, Personally

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you here this evening. It is so comforting to know I am welcome and greeted with such love and enthusiasm.

There once was a person who was a captain of a ship who sailed his ship with skill and efficiency. The captain was quite knowledgeable regarding the sea, the craft, his shipmates, and the overall watchcare of the journey. This captain enjoyed his profession, and with the many years of experience he needed not praise or commendation for he had sailed his ship with pleasure and for the good that would result.

On this ship, there was a younger but enthusiastic co-captain who desired to learn all he could quickly so that he may sail his own craft one day. The co-captain, in his enthusiasm, pleaded with his captain to steer and share the responsibility of following the course. The more experienced captain at first declined, with wise words to his younger shipmate saying: "I understand your enthusiasm and desire, for I have also once walked in your shoes, but I have the concern for the many on board and I would not relinquish my responsibility to allow you to run the course and chance the safety of all."

After incessant appeals, the captain relented to the younger enthusiast saying: "I do believe you are a sincere individual with many talents; and yet, it has been my experience to thoroughly train each one who serves under me." The co-captain, being somewhat juvenile in mind, had decided to attempt to run this course without thought for direction, weather, shipmates, or condition of the craft. In his drive for experience (and some self-glorification) he began to steer the ship with the attitude of: "You see, I can do it - I am fully capable with my limited experience to run the course."

Needless to say, this co-captain lost control and there was some damage to the vessel. The more experienced captain gained control of the ship and began shouting out orders to his shipmates to inspect the craft, to check the conditions of the passengers, and to find out how far off-course they were. The co-captain, feeling somewhat foolish, realized that his more experienced captain's concern - all along - was not about belittling him, but about passing on his knowledge about the sea and the craft.

The captain, once again gaining control of the vessel, spoke not; he waited for his co-captain to seek communication with him - upon which the captain said: "My son, I had offered to share my knowledge, and in your enthusiasm, you thought it not necessary. I am available to you when you are ready to learn to sail. I will however, not allow you to steer my ship and endanger my fellows until then." The co-captain - being somewhat humbled - apologized, and relented to the captain that he was in full cooperation to learn the art of being a captain, to help for the good of the entire voyage.

This is what I would leave you with tonight. I would ask that you ponder this story and discuss this within the group. How does this story relate with the brotherhood? Who is the captain? Who is the co-captain? What is the real significance of the ship and the sea?

I will return next week to experience your broadened understanding of what we have been learning. My love is with you each. Until next week, shalom.

In Our Brotherhood We Are Each Equal Children (Joshua Blackburn passed away this week)

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-23-1997

[There was much discussion before tonight's lesson regarding last week's lesson about the captain and co-captain.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you, my friends. It is always my supreme pleasure to meet with you. I so much look forward to hearing your discoveries.

In your discussion of the story from last week I am perceiving you to have a firm grasp upon the meaning, and I can say with certainty that you are each correct in your understanding. Perhaps what is most important is that in your efforts to gain understanding, your interaction with one another brought a greater amount of light.

As you discussed this story openly and listened to one another, your understanding grew to increased spiritual levels. This is our brotherhood. Your efforts to unite will bring about a greater amount of understanding. With this new understanding between you each, there is a connection to the mind-circuits of Nebadon; this connection is our hope to further spreading our message that will escort Urantia into further stages of Light and Life.

Our spiritual path is individual, yes, and yet, I can say that without understanding for your part in the whole, evolution will appear to move very slowly. Your efforts in uniting in acceptance of one another is to bring about great change, and those things you have hoped to be witness to will indeed come about. We are all passengers on this ship called 'The Brotherhood;' and in our efforts to move towards our destination we each must do our small part for the sake of the journey. I cannot add further definition to this parable, for your own understanding is correct.

On our ship that is Paradise bound, we will experience inevitable difficulties - this is not surprising. Working with your fellows will try your patience again and again. Your skills to work with your fellows will improve as you continue to discuss and maintain communications. The mindal circuits will allow huge masses of individuals to understand certain concepts as needed. You must be in understanding that your efforts here to unite and understand one another are far more successful than your ties to those not within the group.

I would go so far as to say you are sometimes made to feel disappointment when your expectations of your fellows does not meet with the criteria of the group; that is why it is important to maintain communications with one another within this group - to assist you in dealing with those fellows who would not share your understanding of things spiritual. Your discussing of difficulties with your fellows within this group assists you in connecting to that mindal circuit which allows for enlightenment to the whole.

Your friendship goes much deeper than just that friendship within this group. You are helping to create an enlightened planet by allowing yourselves to be influenced by the 'mindal circuit.' This is also our brotherhood - to connect in discussion, yes, and to receive more understanding from, and for, your fellows outside the group. Your skills are to be naturally improved upon by your group interaction.

We have discussed humor as an effective tool to use when dealing with your fellows; I would say there are many such tools to yet discover. We discussed how Jesus would not allow offense personally when dealing with His human fellows. Yes, at times He could be made to feel a bit discouraged, but with His constant communication with Father, the ignorance of His fellows could not damage His enthusiasm to go about the Father's business.

In the world today there are so many standards mortals feel they must uphold. There are so many disappointed souls that are confused when their goals are not reached. Many mortals move through this life in search of personal success; and it would appear that the only success to be had is measured by what you would have while your fellows have not.

In learning to move about successfully through this brotherhood there must be a common thread that runs through it saying: "We are each a child a God." A genuine belief in that alone could eliminate much of this drive for success over your fellows. I do not mean to say this about anyone in particular of you here; I would help you to understand the mindset of your fellows.

In your learning, I have instructed you to continue to share with your daily-living fellows a word of encouragement, letting them know that they are a child of God and loved equally within the kingdom. You will be astonished as the world comes to this knowledge – that each are a child of God. Your efforts to maintain a positive attitude acts as a shield from those fellow mortals that would dampen your spirits.

It is not easily done to maintain this positive spirit mindedness; and that is why I would recommend your open and safe communication with one another. It is your contact to the mindal circuits, and with one another, that is the armor in which would assist you in the upliftment of the planet.

I also would ask that your group focus a bit more on communicating about the realness in living the spiritual life. My lessons are to be secondary. There are great amounts of understanding to gain from group interaction. Are there questions?

NORWOOD: Abraham, speaking of the brotherhood – would you describe to me your surroundings and how many entities or spiritual people are with you tonight, not counting this group here?

ABRAHAM: I am with you very much in your same surroundings. I am always accompanied by two assistants – a midwayer and a Power Director – who work with me on the ship that is our brotherhood. Is this answering? (Norwood: Yes. Thank you.)

RACHEL: Father Abraham, may I say a few words to our Woods Cross group with your permission? (Abraham: Certainly.) Rachel: I would like to thank each and every one of you for all that you did for Joshua, for all the prayers, for all of the friendship, the love, the understanding – all of the help that you have given throughout the years. I want to thank you for your willingness and your patience in going up there for these meetings all these years under such adverse conditions created by his illness. I know that he thoroughly enjoyed the meetings. I know it made him feel like he was still a part of the group, still a part of the Mission doing whatever he could do. I know it helped with his loneliness. I want to thank you kindly for listening to his late-night calls without complaining. I know that it was kind of hard on some of you. I want to thank Calvin for his trying to do everything that Joshua wished for him to do, even though some of it was a little out of line, I think even a little hard. I wanted to thank Tectra, but he is not here tonight, for going up and taking up all of his carpeting in his bedroom so he could have some new carpeting put down. I want to thank him for bringing food in for him every time he came up. Faye, I want to thank you for seeing that he received a copy of all the lessons. Ellanor, I want to thank you, because I know it was hard for you to receive our transmissions under those conditions in his last days of illness. I thank you for continuing until the end. Now, I know it was quite hard for everyone. I know this is quite morbid, but I thank all of you for coming to his funeral. Yes, it is true what Abraham said about Joshua – he “was just like a cedar post when it came to emotions,” even with me; but let me assure you that he had a deep love for each and every one of you, even if he didn't display it. Now Father Abraham, after I have said that, I want to thank you for your beautiful transmission that you rendered through Ellanor to Joshua for Calvin to read at Joshua's services. I want to thank Calvin for his inspiring delivery. He is quite an elocutionist. (Calvin: I don't know about that.) Rachel: You really are. I am also thankful, Father Abraham, that Joshua was able to endure until the end in such a strong faithful manner, and still so determined to do Father's will. I am happy for him. I am glad he is not in pain. I am glad he is not suffering, and I am certainly glad he is not living now in loneliness. Father Abraham, I do have a question for you. Was it Joshua's desire to complete his mission and leave while he was all by himself, especially after I had been up there at the hospital with him for seven hours? I knew that you and Father Ham, and I felt like Prince MachiventaMelchizedek, were all there. He took several real deep breaths at different times and held it for so long that I thought that he was gone. I said to him, "Go ahead and turn loose, honey - Father Abraham, and Father Ham are with you," but he didn't. Later his children came in to visit and so I left for a bit to go have a bite to eat, and by the time I could get back, he had gone on alone by himself. So I am wondering if that was his wish, seeing how he lived alone and everything, maybe he wanted to pass on alone. I don't mean to take up all your time this evening, but I would like to know approximately what he has been doing, and what his status is right now if you can tell us? I'd like to know if he has met with Jeremiah and Rutha because I feel like they are going to have a ball together? Father Abraham, anything that you tell me like that would certainly help because one thing that is still bothering me is that I couldn't hold his hand when he passed on. Another thing that has bothered me is - I could hardly stand to look at him knowing that they were going to put him in the furnace for his requested cremation. I could hardly take that. That's all I have to say at this time.

ABRAHAM: Understood. I would receive your gratitude on behalf of our group, and return our thanks to you for the many things you withstood to enable the group meetings to take place. Our thanks to you for things material and spiritual. My information is this: Joshua had said his farewell to you before the actual cessation of his material body. It is true that his spirit, that part him that is his true essence, was freed before his material body was fully expired. He had seen your diligent loyalty to him in remaining by his side. He was more conscious to witness your loving efforts than you understand. It was not so much a wish for him that he expire in this way, no. He viewed not himself alone, no. That was just the events that unfolded naturally. He stood before you in vibrant spiritual form and bid you farewell. It was unnoticeable, the time passing between his liberation from the flesh to his greeting of myself, Ham and others. I can guarantee you he was not alone upon his death. You are not to be burdened by this thought any longer. Joshua knew of your love and loyalty. He is, at this time, in awesome wonder at all he has begun to understand. He has had several conferences with his friends on our side, yes. He has met with his morontial companion to receive further orders, and I can say, he is in perfect satisfaction of his present status. This is my information at this point in time. My associates and I rejoice in his company. I ask that you imagine Joshua's enthusiasm, as you had known him - now magnify that times one-hundred and you would see his new wholeness. Is this answering for you, Rachel? (Rachel: Yes, it is, Father Abraham. I thank you and I love you for all your service to us.) Abraham: My love and thanks to you also. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, my friend, Jenny, might be too shy to kick in, but I think she would like to hear any words you might have for her.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I would welcome her and assure her it is acceptable for her to be her true self here with each of us. We are a group of diverse characters and yet find understanding and joy amongst each other. Your heavy heart is at last to see a lighter side. Worry not; and know that you are welcome. It is wonderful to meet with you. Another question?

ROLAND: In the area of introductions, I would like to introduce a friend of mine from Tallahassee, Judy Langston. She is here visiting with us.

JUDY: Hello, Abraham.

ABRAHAM: Greetings to you, my daughter. It is wonderful that you have found us upon your journey. It is quite faithful of you to go forth with such unknowing. We would welcome you here, and is there a question? (Judy: I don't think so. I am just really happy to be here.) Abraham: Is there one more question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I was wondering - you're talking about how the mindal circuits will allow huge masses of individuals to understand concepts, etc., and from what we are doing it is like a micro of a macro. I was wondering if - you know that book a couple weeks ago I asked you about that you gave me the same advice you do on all books, it talks about energy and how it is like a matrix - that we are all connected, and it can be positive or negative. One other concept - they talk about lightworkers, and we mortals being connected. From your point-of-view, is all of that referring to these different groups, in talking about the circuitry? Is that all the same thing?

ABRAHAM: Yes, yes. It is all the same in general. I would add though, that in human understanding there are differing variations - just as your concepts of our parable from last week. But I would say, yes, the use of spiritual energy is becoming more apparent as spirituality is becoming increasingly embraced. There is a network of sorts between individuals, mortal and divine; there is a connection between all things that contain life. The method in which we communicate now requires the use of energy. A power director also assists us in the distribution of this energy. Your Father Fragment within, is a 'power director' of sorts; perhaps like a transformer, in a way; He can help you to receive these transmissions. This is your connection to all energy and its distribution. To be subject to Father's will is more than just 'doing' what He desires, you are also in a position to receive and distribute energy when acting within the divine will.

Our energy at this time weakens and I must take my leave. I would send you each with my love. I look forward to our next meeting. Until next week, shalom.

Understanding Spiritual Concepts Relies Upon Group Participation

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-30-1997

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you each this evening. It is always encouraging to see you, my students, putting forth morontial efforts to solve mortal problems. It is a source of joy to us, the unseen helpers, to be witness to your spiritual strivings.

In our lessons up to this point, there have been significant changes in your understanding. When we had first begun, there was little involvement for you to connect with each other within the group, there was more of an individual seeking. And now each one has realized your mortal lives are somewhat similar, and each can relate on a more personal level. It has taken time, yes, and I can say this is indeed, natural.

Your willingness to work collectively toward spiritual consciousness has grown. In all your earthly striving there is a spiritual bond between you each that can endure any adversity as long as you remain open-minded towards the growth of truth, beauty, and goodness.

As we have discussed, your communications within the group can bring about an enhanced understanding of spiritual concepts. I would dare to say it is acceptable to also experience rest or recreation, together. Not every minute you spend together needs to be work or problem-solving.

We see in your years together there has been understanding between you each, and an acceptance that all are destined to complete much of the same goals. My understanding is that you are each due to experience some fun and fellowship. It is entirely permissible to do this during meeting time.

Your fellowship strengthens your bond which assists in endowing you with spiritual strength. You must know by now you equip each other with spiritual strength, love, and energy to be about the Father's business. Your time here weekly has given you the spiritual tools needed to work in the garden of the brotherhood. In your personal interaction, it is correct to say you are helping one another to not just endure mortal living, but to challenge it with power from on high.

Do you see, my communications would not take place without your support and energy input. These spiritual lessons have gone as far as you have taken them. You are the master, so to speak, concerning your spiritual education. Your involvement with your fellow brothers and sisters does help to either create an 'opening' for spiritual understanding, or a 'pulling away,' yes. In the days of the apostles of old, each one took responsibility to care for one another; in this, there was releasing of anxiety and a distribution of spiritual strength.

I say, Father surely is the source of all spiritual strength. I also say that in the brotherhood there is assistance in understanding this spiritual strength, and a greater capacity for reception of it. Know that here in this group you have created a family of sorts in which you can draw strength from. Also, can you give strength. It is our goal to envision this concept, worldwide. I am going to accept questions now.

ROLAND: We had a little discussion about The Bible Code book before you began your lesson. I would like to know how I should approach this information, if you have knowledge of this book. Could you tell me whether or not it is good to bring out discussions about this book in our Mission work?

ABRAHAM: In my understanding, if you look hard enough for something it will be there. My understanding of this book is that science is attempting to find proof that God exists in these predictions. In these prophecies there are those long-held beliefs that to predict the future is to find proof that God exists. In these books, it is your choice to take what is valuable and allow the rest to fall away. I am not against anything you might find interesting or entertaining, no – I would say, please, by all means, enjoy, and look for Father's fingerprints where you may. To accept certain concepts as 'the gospel' could perhaps lead you to irrational thinking and actions; but this meeting place, this group, is a safe arena in which to throw some discussion of this topic into the hat of inquiry. Your fellow group members are filled with a wide range of variables wherein each is able to help with different understandings and perspectives. You also are each equipped with the Spirit of Truth to guide you towards reality. Does this help?

ROLAND: Yes, it does. On another note, I just remembered the first time I came to Woods Cross was the first of July, 1991. This is the end of the sixth year I've been coming, and I am so thankful for you, and Ham, and all the teachings we have received. I just think it is miraculous, and a most life-changing experience. Thank you again.

ABRAHAM: I would also thank you, Roland. You have been instrumental in spreading our message. Thank you also. Another question?

NORWOOD: Abraham, Saturday night I was watching the news, and one of the news reporters was reporting on the mass exodus from traditional churches. In an effort to hold on to their membership, many of the churches are building new facilities, putting in day-cares. A lot of new Christian churches are dropping some of the old philosophies that the older religions have, such as dress codes. They are putting in more of the community centers-type church facilities. This pleased me quite a bit to sit there and watch that take place because it reinforces what we have been learning the past six years – that the energy circuits are opening up and the Spirit of Truth is starting to really reach out; I have kind of monitored this over the past two years. I was reading the Urantia Book this afternoon where the Christian religions are somewhat short in dealing with Jesus Christ's teachings. In the years following his death and resurrection He used Christianity as a vehicle to spread His gospel; and yet in reality, the churches have not done it the way He would have liked for it to have been done. And therefore, people have been falling away throughout the years. So my question is, if you can kind of understand where I am coming from with this: With the massive amount of people moving towards a new religion today, because they feel this the Spirit of Truth or spirituality – I am not sure if I understand how the conversion is going to take place, because the religions of today are too used to living in the past to be able to take the next step into the future – to spirituality, such as the Teaching Mission we are on today. What is going to happen? Do you know how it is going to transition? wherein the people – when they don't understand when coming to a barrier and they can't cross that bridge or get through the barrier, are they all going to fall away? Because that is what happened to me, and a lot of other people throughout time. Christianity doesn't seem to fill the bill. Do you understand what I am asking?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Churches are finding they must be within the realness of everyday-living in order to minister to the people. If the churches continue to make people feel inferior by expecting them to reach for unattainable goals, then yes, people will fall away. The church should be its people, not a group of salesmen's attempting to promote a product which people are uncertain whether it will work or not. The members of a church must give their full authority over to Father, instead of a few chosen individuals. The members must also put in what they expect to receive from their church, just as you here in this group. The Spirit of Truth and the opening of the circuits have enabled people to better reason truth, yes. The people of this age are indeed searching, and if it cannot fit within the realness of everyday life then other avenues are sought after. And all too often their realness of life is appearing to be negative – drugs, gangs, homelessness, abuse of all kinds; yes, this is their realness, sadly, which so many mortals deal with, daily. They expect their church to assist them by endowing them with spiritual strength so that they might go about being within this realness. When the church is its people, the people will spark this change. The interaction with one another is linking them to greater concepts of what 'should be' as opposed to 'what is.' The people will bring about this change just as you have brought change concerning your spirituality. Does this help?

NORWOOD: Yes, it does. Another question I have: While we were reading last week's lesson tonight, I had a distinct pressure applied on my head. I was just wondering if that was my body doing weird things, or was there actually something taking place?

ABRAHAM: It was your receptors. As you read, your consciousness becomes broadened and this circuitry between the soul, your indwelling Father Fragment, and the cosmic spiritual circuit, is connected. This occurs when you are seeking spirituality; and in your efforts, material things take place concerning the body also. Does that help? (Norwood: Thank you.) Abraham: One more question?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, you said it was good to be open-minded. I have always been a little leery about being open-minded. I was afraid my brains might fall out. That's my humor for this evening. [laughter.]

CALVIN: Abraham, in the Christian religion, much is said about the necessity for the Jews to turn back their hearts to Christ. They are your offspring, as far as we know, as far as I know; they are your family, your grandchildren's children's children, etc. How much weight is there on that concept, if any, in this new viewpoint of them having to turn their hearts to the existence of the man Jesus in today's Correcting Time. And would this 'turning make a difference in the Middle East peace process? Do you have enough connection left to answer, or would you rather defer that to another time to answer?

ABRAHAM: I can comment some, yes. The concept of knowing the Master is important in this human life, yes, for you are relating with Him as both human and divine. This is surely helpful and yet, I can say not altogether necessary, for those seeking spiritual peace shall surely find it whether this life or the next. It is sad that this rage between the differing religious cultures, continues. The act of giving full sovereignty over to a higher being would eliminate much of this rage. I have seen the hearts of these people, and I can say they are exercising their full faith in what they have been taught. Once again, it is the choice of the people to evoke change.

I would apologize for our transmission. We are experiencing some energy block. In our days to come it would be good to consider a bit of rest or recreation to create comfort. My love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

The Need for Rest and Reversion For the Soul-Growth | A Break to Replenish The Spiritual Cup

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you each here tonight. I am moved by your unwavering group support; it is what our Mission is about. I also lend my support to you.

Father is a kind, patient, and loving Parent; He is not a stern, stubborn, and unfeeling teacher who would see fit to punish His students in need of a rest. I can say that Father is quite the opposite in encouraging His children to live a more balanced life incorporating study, fellowship, and service - with fun, rest and recreation, to provide a renewing of spirit and mind.

My lessons are not as urgent assignments that you must complete or forfeit, no; I have said your greatest lessons are in and through, experience - personal experience, group experience, divine experience, all experience of mortal living. It would be well advised to break for now to empty that spiritual cup to prepare for my upcoming series on 'self-mastery.'

As Ham had said: "Let this be a time of absorbing those concepts you have learned so far." Continue the prayer healings and fellowship; in your togetherness there is much more lessons than you know. You each already contain such spiritual wisdom. This meeting place would be a great place wherein to discuss the realness of life which you further perceive and observe from your rest time. Are there questions?

CALVIN: If I understand, I think you're recommending that we continue to meet and digest your lessons, in whatever form we choose to do that as a group, and get to know each other in our daily living and concerns. Also, to help each other in our personal growth, in our personal lives, problems, and so on; and then reconvene down the road. Is that kind of what you are saying here?

ABRAHAM: Yes, yes. Put to good use those spiritual tools we have discovered here, together, and I will continue to assist you in the proper usage of these tools. I would ask that this rest be a 'rest' though, not serious continuing of study; perhaps more observations of the realness in mortal living, and your divine understanding therefrom. Yes. Another question?

JENNI: Yes. I have been having some trouble communicating with people. And in understanding a lot of stuff about myself lately, I was wondering if you might have any suggestions or some help that can maybe help me get through this real rough time I am having right now?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. First: I am understanding that there is confusion in your thinking, and a need to organize these thoughts. I would ask that you write these thoughts. Untangle these thoughts with paper and pen. Second: I would believe you to feel some apprehension towards the revealing of your true self to the Father. I would tell you, my child, that nothing is hidden from our Father, and He loves us completely, regardless. The practice of the stillness would do you well to connect with Father and feel His presence. Stillness, yes. Third: You are unaccepting of your style of prayer, and I must say, your Father is knowing of your true feelings; your words need not be formal or of a particular manner, no, you just need to be yourself and talk with Him as though He were your closest friend – because I say, that is exactly what He is. Is this helping? (Jenni: Yes.) Abraham: Another question?

MIRIAM: I was wondering if you could describe to me why sometimes when I am reading something that is really full of light, it is like I almost can't hold consciousness reading it. I was reading a transcript of Ham's wherein he was talking about the synchronicity of our souls, and also about morontial/vibrational frequencies. I wonder if I am kind of out of my realm in asking what it is; could you describe to me or enlighten me as to what that is? When I'm reading something that's full of truth; or if I am talking to someone and it has that 'tuning-fork-hum' about it – is that like a higher level that I don't know of, and so I lose it and can't hold it? Does that make any sense? Do you have any idea what I am talking about?

ABRAHAM: Yes. I am aware of the developing soul. As you experience, there are, literally, energy connectors engaged. As the soul continues to graduate – level upon level – these energy connectors are more and more. These are in relation to the universe system circuits and the cosmic mind. There are definite times when there can be crossed signals, or connections, yes – or even perhaps non-existence connections which would not comply with your understanding or soul-knowledge at this time. This is not bad, no. This is soul growth. To chastise yourself for mind-wandering would be detrimental to your existing energy connections. The Father sees to your growth, that you receive what you need when you need it. This is not to be of concern. Worry not. Does this help?

MIRIAM: Yes, it does. It's not something of great worry to me, but it is like I can't hold the consciousness or grasp the new; and I know something is happening, but I don't know what it is. I just figure that on some level something is happening. I don't worry about it. It gives me comfort to know that it's a reality and that I'm not just zoning out. I guess that is a comment, not a question.

ABRAHAM: Yes, I would say when re-reading your spiritual material there is always something that catches your attention that you know you have read but did not understand. Through 'life experience' there are various happenings that help the soul to strive forward – and in this, there is new embedded understanding from your studies. Another question?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I'd like to know how long a vacation you're going to take?

ABRAHAM: It is dependent upon how soon you each empty the spiritual cup. (Rachel: See you next week then!) [laughter.]

ABRAHAM: I could see you anytime Rachel, my daughter. The time is short, not to worry. I am aware of your educational needs, but your Father is overseeing all other needs and it is Father's green flag I await. I will see you soon. My love is with you. Shalom.[No transmission/lessons from Abraham on July 15 or July 22, 1997.]

First Lesson on Self-Mastery | Stillness, A Step Out Of The Ordinary

[This evening's lesson was on the heels of a two-week rest/break which Abraham requested of the group. We had much discussion prior to the lesson regarding our various personal experiences during this break time.]

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you. It is wonderful to meet with you. I am quite excited about our upcoming series of lessons on self-mastery.

It is quite a challenge to learn to master the animal self while in the midst of the brotherhood. Always can our fellows challenge our divine understanding. Within this brotherhood can you be witness to the worst in yourself. This is where we find ourselves remaining teachable and humble; to overcoming our small selves and embracing our larger divine realities.

It is understood that you each have experienced in excess the difficulties of maintaining a human and divine balance within the brotherhood. To relate with one another is where you will probably learn the most. It is well that you are in understanding of your shortcomings to be humble enough to empty that spiritual cup and be teachable. Our rest-period has proven to create a new thirst for truth. Our stumbling has helped us to be still and listen.

In the world, there is confusion over 'being still' and 'being idle.' To some, stillness (or rest) means to be unproductive. In our rest, we have found our reason why we continue to strive Paradise-ward. I would say that a period of rest or recreation can prove to be quite rejuvenating of mind and spirit.

To step out of the ordinary is to create a ripple in the waters of truth that are in danger of becoming stagnant. Yes, we will continue on this path of rejuvenation through rest, recreation, and humor. In the ordinary day-to-day living, there is a myriad of mindal fears that can cloud the contents of your spiritual cup. A regular regime of rest and recreation can aid you in emptying the clouded cup to make room for fresh living spiritual realities.

I ask: During your times of rest, is there some guilt about your duties or obligations? Is there ever a genuine clearing of the mind? Is there ever a moment of just being within the presence of Father?

In teaching self-mastery, our first lesson is to emphasize the importance of the stillness. It need not be an elaborate meditation, no. A quiet moment with the presence of your Father is significant enough to create change where you would desire. It is sometimes necessary for some to have several moments with Father throughout the day, a 'continual reconnecting' if you will. If your desire is self-control and genuine spiritual freedom, then our first lesson is always to maintain an open connection with Father, that you might receive his guidance and comfort.

Our second recommendation to success in self-mastery is to learn who you really are. What has brought you to this moment? What has caused you fear and pain, or joy and freedom? What has occurred throughout your life that would cause you to react in a less divine manner? What has occurred throughout your life that has enabled you to withstand where others would perhaps fall short? Who are you today? And, without worry of judgment, would you find your definition of yourself to be honest?

It has been said for you to “be within each moment;” but I can also say that an honest vision of the past can bring answers concerning self-mastery for the future. Father is knowing completely every aspect of His children; and for His children to attain levels of self-mastery it is important to have some knowledge of one’s true self.

Certain human reactions are due to painful wounds of the past; and in your search for answers there is much turmoil. In the understanding of the answers, there is peace. It is important to view yourselves as you would view a learning child. It is not helpful to become impatient or anxiety-ridden when attempting to gain understanding of self-mastery.

This life is the beginning to a long career towards self-understanding; and in this, there is also understanding of one another. Jesus had lived His life in the flesh to gain understanding of His mortal children. In the discovery of His human side was there understanding of His mortal fellows.

I am in excited anticipation to be witness to your discoveries. It is my great pleasure to be a part of your spiritual learning. Have you questions?

NORWOOD: Abraham, I really appreciate your discussion topic tonight. Ellen and I, this morning out on a street corner, were discussing this very same issue of which you bring out in your lesson tonight. Plus, these past few weeks this very same discussion topic has been with me; and I have been thinking about it constantly. My question is a little weird: Do we get previews of what our lessons are going to be in advance? Ellen and I have had many discussions in the past, and have noticed the point of our discussion had come to pass during a lesson within a short period of time. I am quite impressed by this; and it usually brings home something to me that I had forgotten about. So I just wanted to let you know that, and that I am impressed tonight. Could you answer that question? Do we get previews of upcoming lessons that we are to be given – things we need to work on, prior to the lessons?

ABRAHAM: For weeks, even months, yes, there is a great deal of preparation whereby our students experience certain situations which are proven helpful in the upcoming lesson. Your indwelling Father Fragment is well aware in advance of the path you are to travel. He is always trying to communicate these lessons and create a spiritual cushion for those hard-hitting lessons. Your Father always works to release bits of information so understanding will be everlasting; and this is done through His loving character interaction to teach His child. This Father-to-child teaching is not 'all at once' to 'shock you into understanding and change,' no; although I must say, it becomes necessary at times to use this shock-value to gain your attention. But I do confirm your feelings that there is a vast network of divine hosts that create needed experience for those spiritual realities you need to know. Does this answer? (Norwood: Yes. Thank you very much.) Abraham: Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I was wondering if you could give me some input? While Don and I were camping this past week we kept coming up against the rain issue, and there was some interaction that it brought out between us. I felt like that whole experience was a spiritual lesson going on and I kept trying to deal with it in the same way I always do – I kept turning it over to Father asking His guidance to try and understand. Finally, we came to a breakthrough, and I was just wondering – I felt like there was something in that whole dilemma that was 'supposed to be.' I was hoping that, for Don's sake, that there was something there. I was wondering if you could help me with that?

ABRAHAM: If I am understanding you correctly, I would have to say that on this world there is a great chasm between various personalities, but nowhere is this chasm more wide and deep than between male and female. There is so much that the genders must overcome to reach understanding for one another; and there are inherent character qualities that would forever create difficulties in mortal living. There are moments when those natural inherent character traits show themselves to be unappealing – and it would appear that one partner always lets the other know just how unappealing they are! [laughter.] I would not say your disposition is to be blamed on gender; I am asking that you attempt to understand each one's (yours and Dons') natural tendencies to react to various situations. In the mortal quest of living, you struggle for spiritual truth; and struggle even more to live that truth. And yes, there can be some confusion about why others might not also see this obvious truth as you see it. Is this at all answering?

MIRIAM: Yes, it is. It is helping me to understand like the broad scope. I was wondering about the breakthrough Don and I had in our communication regarding his temper, and my reacting to it. I am hearing that I should just 'let it all be,' and just be a participant and try to understand the gender thing. It felt to me that all of that angst was for a purpose. It felt like a breakthrough in understanding. I guess that was what I was asking.

ABRAHAM: In the beginning of our meeting this evening I had confirmed everyone's difficulty within the brotherhood which would lead towards self-mastery. There is no better way towards learning self-mastery than through having experience with your fellows. This is significant in your spiritual growth where it has opened your mind to receiving answers. I do not recommend that you simply react passively towards another's anger, no. I would however, ask that you be aware of your reactions and the origin from which it came. This is the beginning to understanding who you really are, and to create who you really want to be. Is this helping?

Miriam: Yes – to focus on how I am reacting.

ABRAHAM: This all is integrated with my lesson this evening. It will become more clear. One more question?

RACHEL: Well Father Abraham, it seems to me like just the statement 'self-mastery' is a very broad statement. Are you speaking of self-mastery as far as spirituality is concerned? Or 'self-mastery' such as if you are employed and you are out on your job? Or, 'self-mastery' with your own family? I suppose it could be a combination of all of these?

ABRAHAM: Yes, a combination. But I would say that our lessons will focus mostly on self-mastery over those spirit poisons that tend to keep you from knowing true spiritual freedom. It is well to read about the Master and His steps taken towards self-mastery.

I am slipping. I would ask you to ponder upon who you are – body, mind, and soul. Gain understanding of where you are in your spiritual work; and, where you are headed. Until next week, shalom.

The Human Self Is A Vehicle For Your Divine Self To Climb The Ladder To Perfection

I am ABRAHAM. Well done, my friends. It is such an honor to be witness to your striving to make the brotherhood a reality from where you are. I would give my greetings and love to you each. Know that you have my support in your strivings for spiritual understanding. Last week, our question was to ponder upon who you really are, to perhaps gain some understanding concerning your total self. It is my understanding that many have reached the same conclusion – that each one of you are human and divine.

Throughout history, as mortals began their spiritual journey, they would learn of those reverent values that make them 'holy and righteous.' It was learned that to be anything less than what was thought to be righteous was to be cast out. In fact, many mortals became ashamed of their human frailties and attempted to hide them, hoping that they would be perceived as holy and righteous. This dilemma would go back many years, even to the times of Christ; He attempted to renew the people's thinking of a new and better way to live.

The perception many mortals have of their human self is one of selfishness, conceit; perhaps vengeful and defensive. Most mortals are overlooking the positive aspects of being in the flesh. Even those of the lowest order in the animal kingdom are known to be nurturing, protective, loving, and social. There is such a desire among mortals to forsake their human side, to do battle with it, so to speak.

It is not a well-known concept that the human self is a vehicle for the divine self, so the human self is often repressed and rebuked. The animal self is a host, of sorts, for your more divine self while sojourning on the Earth. To do battle with your human imperfections is to most likely see those imperfections come out in full force. To stifle your human self is to reject what God has made. Yes, the human self has a great amount of imperfections, and to fend these imperfections off with negative inner chatter is to stumble and miss your purpose for being on the planet.

This stifling of the human self causes a great amount of pressure. And I can say, that pressure from oneself (or their fellows) is not an ideal way for the soul to grow. This negative inner-chatter is pressure. Your self-expectations are pressure. To battle the human side is to create pressure which induces fear, which depletes the energy system you each contain.

A flower seed that would grow under the pressure of hard clay would work its way through the soil to find some sort of opening and eventually grow, yes, but there would be some deformities to the flower. With proper cultivation and added nutrients, the pressure would be released and the flower would grow of its own momentum and intended destiny. In our humanity, there is a great need to remove this pressure – as an individual, a group, and a society – to allow for natural growth.

You seek self-mastery, and you are believing it is done by stifling the more animal-like self within you. I would enlarge your concept by saying – remove this pressure by having your divine self take your animal self by the hand, like a small child, and show it a new and better way to live. All those things you see as shortcomings, or flaws, are to more likely be mastered by love than with self-loathing.

The Master learned early on that His human self was a method in which His divine self traveled. He recognized that His human self grew towards His divine self if handled with love and humor. He knew that to battle and reject His human side was, in sorts, an offense to Father. He embraced His mortal self, yes, and learned from His divine self. I say, this is the beginning of mastering the self.

Yes, it is said by our Father: "Be you perfect even as I am perfect." I can guarantee, a continued pressure upon any living thing will indeed stifle normal growth toward this perfection process.

I would say a word concerning the brotherhood and this 'pressure' of which we are speaking of. There is a great need in society for each one to conform to certain societal patterns. And great pressure is applied upon mortals who continually fall short and feel such self-loathing. I would go so far to say that this pressure (applied to some mortals by their fellows) is the highest cause of suicide, divorce, and isolation.

Relieve yourself of this pressure put upon you by others. Let go of your concerns of others' definition of who they would want you to be. Let go of your desire to apply any pressure to your fellows, and trust that Father is completely knowledgeable about their well-being. In the relieving of this pressure, there is an allowance of natural growth to occur.

This week I would ask that you relieve yourselves of this self-pressure, and trust that your Father is near and guiding you with His unlimited abilities. Watch your negative inner chatter. Be not overly drawn to chastise yourself for your human shortcomings. Ponder upon the fact that your 'human side' is a method in which your 'divine-self' would travel this life. We are on the road to self-mastery. Have you questions?

NORWOOD: Yes, Abraham, this past week I have been doing a lot of thinking and reading. I was reading about the morontial lessons in the Urantia Book regarding the soul and the Thought Adjuster. I have been trying to understand as much as I possibly can with my limited knowledge of this. I am trying to let my Thought Adjuster guide me more, let the Father help me throughout the day. In doing this, I am trying to feel that process take place. I sense a real awakening. I am not sure if I am in understanding correctly that I am doing what I am supposed to do. I am not asking you to say if I am right or wrong; I am asking if you can you give me a little help on understanding or recognizing if I am doing that thing correctly?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. It is my understanding that you have excellent Thought Adjuster communication. It is growing, yes, and encompassing more of your life – more areas such as work, family, and rest. It is becoming unspectacular as you advance. My understanding is that as your communication develops and strengthens, your watchword becomes peace. The amount of peacefulness is an excellent sign (or affirmation, pick one) – let me say that again: Your best indicator of being within Father's will is a feeling of peace – of feeling 'there is all the time in the world' wherein you are un-rushed and with an unknown origin of joy. Do you see? (Norwood: Yes, I do. Thank you very much.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, remember some time ago you gave me an assignment to work on my self-loathing and being hard on myself. The way I approached that was to try to be in receivership that I am a child of God and to realize that I am lovable – that I am loved. That would flow on for a while, then I would get back into my negative chattering, the imperfections, and whatever. Then I would feel like, 'oh, I've got to work harder.' So I feel like I've made some progress and I have enjoyed the 'process.' But what you are saying tonight is that – and I know that process is good, in a way, but you are also saying to 'love the host-self,' you know, just like the Father loves us. I love this lesson tonight. I just love it. What you are saying is to look at this host called our mortal body, and be in self-appreciation, and say, 'hey, thanks;' and not expect ourselves to be perfect. This is just really great. If you could just expand on that a little bit?

ABRAHAM: Yes exactly. Allowing yourself room for mistakes, and treating yourself with love and humor is to cultivate your soil to allow for growth. It is a long process to overcoming self-hatred when so many have been brought up believing this is a most humble route to soul-growth – absolutely untrue! 'Self-loathing' is not anywhere near the nobility of 'humility.' True humility is believing you are no better, or no worse, than your brothers or sisters in the kingdom. You are with the belief you each stand side by side, destined for Paradise. The path to self-mastery is to cease your battling with your human side – to cause it to stop rebelling, to stop showing itself in full force. To embrace your human self, as a parent would a child, is to have your more animal-like self's cooperation. Is this helping?

CALVIN: Self-examination – is that a good thing or a bad thing, to take a look at our self, and ask, for instance: "Where have I been incorrect in my viewpoint." Or are you saying to just relax, and to let Father's correction take its course, and not worry about self-examination? To me, that could easily be 'self-denial.'

ABRAHAM: There are certain things that mortals do not recognize about themselves until they take a moment to be conscious of certain mannerisms, likes, and dislikes.

Yes, Father will certainly show you your areas of needed work, but it would do no good unless you were willing to look. Self-examination is pertinent to self-mastery in knowing the total self and becoming a unified being with that self. Self-knowledge is a step on the road to self-forgetfulness, which we will discuss at a later time. Does that help? (Calvin: Yes, very, very much. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

ROLAND: Abraham, in reading the lesson that Jesus gave the apostles on self-mastery, it said in there that – and I would like to hear an expansion of perhaps this idea – the idea being that faith is not of us ‘the individual child of God,’ but is given by grace by our Father. For all this time I have been thinking: “Oh, I've got to have faith, I've got to have faith.” And here the Urantia Book says faith is a gift. What is our role in obtaining faith in the beneficence of God, trusting Him, and finding love?

ABRAHAM: The Master said: “To obtain salvation, you need faith.” I would say that the gift of faith is from Father – in that, it exists. Faith is free to those who desire it. It is difficult to always possess full faith because you are in the flesh and you experience certain events that would cause you to stumble in your faith. But I can guarantee that it is in your stumblings that are the steppingstones to higher levels of faith. In your doubts there is growth. There is always renewed faith for those who reach. Faith is, at times, work. Yes, it is work for you who must believe without seeing; you are made to go on utilizing your inner spiritual vision and feelings – and I can say, this is well and good. As you attain higher levels of self-mastery is your faith more likely to be consistent, just as the Master who experienced perfect faith. I am in understanding of your perplexity on this subject and I can say that further reading and study could very well aid you in your search for understanding. Is this helping?

ROLAND: Yes. I am understanding your words – that further study will help. I certainly believe that to be true in all my ascension throughout the universe. The thing that I am recognizing right now is that the son or daughter of God needs to have 'desire' to know of the spiritual reality. It seems like in adversity, the chaos of life, we desire a better thing, a better life; we desire God. So in our desire, God is gifting us with faith through the manifestations of Spirit. I think Jesus spoke something to the effect of: "Do you see the wind that blows the leaves? You don't see whether it is coming from this side or that side, but you see the manifestation of it. So you believe in the wind." In other words, saying and recognizing that Michael's spirit does things in the world, and that, as does the wind, we see the manifestation of it, gives us a strengthening of belief. That's what I am getting.

ABRAHAM: Beautiful and well said. You are in understanding. And on that note, I shall take my leave. I am growing in love for you each every time we meet, my friends. Until next week, shalom.

Methods to Steer Towards The Spirit In Overcoming Those Spirit Poisons

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-11-1997

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you, my friends. It is most wonderful to meet with you again. I am always seeing changes – positive spiritual changes in you each week. I am in understanding that last week's lesson brought much to think about. Many of you have continued to squelch the human side only to see its negative manifestations manifold. I would ease your minds by saying that your lessons are well spaced to allow for understanding on a deep soulful level.

It would do you well to consider helping to steer the human self more toward the spirit by those things which make you more spirit-filled. For example, music has been known to melt the most difficult of situations and allow spirit to have influence. Many mortals have been the closest with their indwelling Father when lost in a beautiful melody. This is one method of drawing towards the spirit.

You who live here in this age are under a great deal of strain and stimulation. There seems to always be some material focus that would cloud your spiritual connection. It is well to draw close to those things which lead you to Spirit. Your striving to know God and be like Him is more than just good intention – there needs to be some action taken. And I say, to allow the human self those pleasant things that draw you toward the spirit is altogether acceptable in the eyes of our Father.

The religions down through history have used one concept or another to tug at the spiritual heartstrings of its people. Symbols, ceremonies, and wardrobe were perhaps those things that made the churchgoers feel close to the spirit. What I am speaking of is not to pull at your heartstrings to stay close with the spirit, no – I am speaking of self-mastery, and steering the more animal-like self in the direction of the spirit.

Creative art is another way that some feel in touch with the spirit; to perceive something that is beyond human capabilities opens that personal circuit that connects you with the cosmic mind. As well, in nature; in observance of nature God has been recognized. Down through history, there have been religions built upon the beauty of nature. Yes, in the peaceful beauty there is something that touches your soul.

Many may find they draw towards their divine self through communication with others. There is a bond between those who strive to know Father. If at times you are feeling pulled from the spirit, is there not one you can speak with that brings comfort and confidence back into your own ability to know the spirit, reach the spirit? These things I speak of, you are each well familiar with. In your feelings of entrapment by your human side, there are immediate actions you can take to provide relief.

Each individual knows what draws them to the spirit. I would ask that you experiment this week with these techniques to draw you toward spirit and relieve those pressures which would chance to stifle your spiritual growth. The effort made to draw toward the spirit is to feel relief from those pressures you feel, and can assist you in gaining control over those spirit poisons. Your human side does indeed crave things spiritual. I say, your reaching out towards what makes you feel spiritual, is a necessity.

It was once taught that abstaining from things that would be enjoyable was righteous; that 'self-denial' was the path toward spiritual fulfillment and self-mastery. I can say that Father would have you experience joy in every way possible – there is not one thing Father would ask of you that would bring you unrest. Yet I also say, your human side is not to be appeased like a spoiled child, no. I am saying it is acceptable to steer towards those things which create spiritual feelings in you.

In the midst of crippling anger, there are things you can reach for in guiding the human self towards finding divine solutions. When encompassed by blinding fear, there are actions you can take to comfort the mortal mind to find divine clarity. Yes, when in the midst of your spirit poisons, I would ask that you reach for things spiritual. In the reaching will you find the bright beam from a safe harbor. Your Father ever stands by guiding you to the safety of His love and knowledge. Are there questions?

ASHLY: Abraham, I'm new. This is Ashly. I am in the sixth grade and there is this girl named Chelsea in my class who really likes to talk bad about people. She likes to say really horrible things. I like her, she is a cool person. I am wondering if I should tell her: "Hey, how would 'you' feel if someone is talking bad about you?" even if it means not being friends anymore. Or, should I just try to ignore it and go ahead on with my life?

ABRAHAM: Understood. You are seeing this situation correctly. Some people, who are feeling less than others, find it uplifting to speak badly of others. They are always feeling free to speak in this way when others condone it or accept this kind of behavior. If your friend is knowing of your objections to this vicious gossip, then perhaps she would curtail it around you. You can always use honesty and kindness in telling her how this gossip makes you feel. And truthfully it is, as you thought, it pulls you away from spiritual thinking and toward the temptation to join in this negativity. Your honest heartfelt words to her are all you would need to say. She values your friendship and your kind heart. (TR: I am trying to get your name. He is saying it, and I can't understand it. Oh, okay, it sounds like Alexandra.) Abraham: Yes, Correct. Is this acceptable to you? (Ashley: Yes.) Abraham: It is a joy to see our Mission grow. Alexandra is a welcome refreshing new mind to us in this Mission. Another question?

CALVIN: I would like to welcome Barbara N. here from the Chicago area. It is very good to have her here. Do you have anything, Barbara, which you would like to address?

BARBARA: Yes. Thank you, Abraham, for helping us to understand our nature better. I would ask the Teachers, through you, for any advice you have for us in Chicago?

ABRAHAM: It is my information that you are doing well. I am receiving a message to allow for plenty of time to guard against mistakes. A pot that is boiling can be ruined by continuing to increase the heat. My sources tell me to ask that you allow for rest and humor wherein to decrease the heat on this boiling pot. A sufficient amount of rest and recreation provides a fresh batch of ideas towards unity. Is this helping? (Barbara: Yes. Very much.) Abraham: Another question?

CALVIN: In my week, Abraham, the last two weeks, in fact, I find myself like a different person at work and home – mostly at work around other people, since our Idaho meeting up there. What would you say that was due from?

ABRAHAM: You are a man with much on his plate. It is difficult to be everything to everyone. You are one who would most certainly lose his right arm for the good of the kingdom – but I say, this is not quite necessary. Your expectations of your abilities to be those things you desire are leaving you to feel like you are missing the mark, perhaps stumbling. There has been a lot of time spent on your part in 'being strong.' Little time has been spent appearing before your Father as a faithful child. I mean, it is altogether fitting to appear before your Father just as you are. He is asking nothing from you and is ready to give you everything. You would be wise to take a few moments in stillness to sit before your Father 'as His child,' not as a provider, a father, a pillar of strength, or a worker in the kingdom, no – just as a child, a child in humble-seeking to his Father. Does this help? (Calvin: Yes. Thanks very much.) Abraham: Another question?

INERA: Abraham, good evening. It is always an honor to meet with you. A short question here: Last week we experienced an auto accident wherein divine intervention happened. It didn't feel like my usual spiritual guide's hand; it felt different. Who was it? Was it Daniel? or was it Randy's spiritual guide? or RJ's spiritual guide? – who actually picked us up, and put us on the ground?

ABRAHAM: One moment. It is my information that Adjuster communication with the driver allowed certain maneuvers to be made to work naturally with certain forces. I would say that assistance from the driver's Adjuster is to be accredited for your safety. I cannot verify, as of yet, actual physical assistance. Are you understanding? (Inera: Yes. Thank you very much.) Abraham: You're welcome. One more question?

TECTRA: Abraham, I haven't spoken with you since the Awakening workshop. I am curious if you were there, and what kind of experience the celestial beings thought of that event. If you could give a few words about that?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I was with you at certain times to assist you in incorporating your understanding of the awakening to our teachings here. It is made known to me now that the celestials present were deeply touched by the willingness of the participants to be available to our Supreme Father. There are many such happenings as this, and I can confirm that the Teachers are involved in making things that would appear to be beyond real, more grounded – and to apply in everyday living. Does this answer? (Tectra: Thank you, yes.)

I would take my leave, and ask you to remember to steer towards things spiritual in trying to master the self. My love is with you each. Until next time, shalom.

Wednesday night informal T/R meeting

August 20, 1997

Malvantra (or Maleventa) Melchizedek

T/R: Unknown

Greetings. I ask, how many of you have arrived at this moment in time without a healthy degree of struggle? Do not expect this struggle to change, for it has strengthened you. Those difficulties which you've overcome have made you into the beings you are at this moment. Even now, after this time we have all spent together, it becomes no easier; in fact, the struggle, at times, seems more difficult.

You have each made your decision to cooperate and aid in this mission of the healing of your planet. We salute you for making these choices, even though many of these choices have brought you far from comfort.

You all are here because you have chosen the Father's will. In the choosing of God's will, inevitably will this bring challenges, often times frustration, always valuable lessons, and even occasionally short periods of discomfort. What is before you is a grand and marvelous journey. And continually will you come up against obstacles which will seem insurmountable; yet, because of the strength and determination you have acquired to this point, you are more than adequate to persevere and thrive. If you look back only a short distance into your past, you will see a large degree of motion.

You each are getting into position to where you may do the most benefit to the greatest of individuals. Some of you already are in place for that which you are to ultimately accomplish. Others of you are in places where you are acquiring valuable experience and knowledge for what is yet at hand. We are most pleased with the progress that has materialized in so very short a time. Keep your senses, your souls, your entire being, open at every moment for those instances in which you may make the Father's presence felt through your actions – daily, are they put before you.

All of you here are becoming quite adept at recognizing these instants, and in a very short time, relatively speaking, we will begin to see the fruits of our labor together. We ask you to be conscious of opportunities for service at all times – to offer it freely without regard for results. We, from our perspective, are far more capable of seeing those little opportunities grow and spread, than are you. Be assured that each choice for truth, beauty, and goodness—and to the doing of Father's will—are incredible leaps toward that which will be accomplished in our advance toward light and life.

If you are overly desirous of being able to recognize the results of your individual ministry, then you will often become discouraged. However, if you proceed without a desire to know of the outcome, your actions will be a supreme accomplishment. We are exceedingly proud to be working with each of you. Carry on in the good fight. I am Maleventra Melchizedek. [Note: It was unclear whether this Melchizedek's name was Maleventa – or Malvantra.]

Wednesday Evening Session
August 20, 1997
Aaron

T/R: Bob Devine (Idaho)

Greetings to all. I am Aaron. It is my honor to be in your presence and to address you. As you hear the announcements of change and have personally witnessed the change that has been so obvious in your lives, allow us to speak in a more conducive manner to your continued growth on these evolving levels. Many levels of insight have been offered and new foundations have been laid for many people.

And now as you gather, we are desirous to teach of those things which are more enabling for your expansion in consonance with this Correcting Time. As well, we wish you to perceive those inhibitors to this mission. Many are your questions; and yes, options have been weighed. You are in the midst of a spiritual dawn upon Urantia, and in your present perceptive state we wish that you are aware of a reality on an internal level.

Many things have transpired which has provided a foundation for the development of the Teaching Mission – and therefore, it is very important to recognize that if you would enter into the next stages of development, that you do so with a unity of mind and purpose. These very beginnings, restructurings, may cause you to look at the history of that which has transpired on this world. Yet, you may need to move into a secondary role, as if at ground zero, for this movement is at the beginning stages of a much larger and more comprehensive planetary mission.

Your individual and collective efforts are necessary towards producing an awareness in the mind of a vast majority of mortals that spiritual aid is at any person's disposal. Be aware, your new mission begins. This weekend, and continuing in weeks, months, and years to come, we are interested in working with you as individuals—whether in small groups or large groups—to discuss your thoughts and answer your questions, that we may become sure as a team, each working for a common goal.

Our vision is enlarged from yours. We can see a broader picture than your present awareness. Therefore, we need your arms, your legs, your mouths – to present that which we perceive, for we are interested in working these new awarenesses into your consciousness. There is a great need for each participant to come to the table and prepare with us.

Yes, it is our hope that we can make in-roads into developing some of these thoughts this weekend. Thank you for your listening this night. Do not be afraid to speak up! For now, farewell.

I take a moment to honor the Divine Presence in each of you. What a solemn gift we all have. It is so true, so real. I also honor you, equally. Why? Because the same Divine Source in you holds you so dear that I give equal acknowledgement.

Now let's move to a planetary topic. The celestial floodgates are now open and assistance is in abundance. This world was, and is, parched by rebellion. The celestial water is as beads of water upon grass. Each parched and thirsty soul is yearning for these celestial beads of water. Each of you are to be as a surfactant - to make this water more absorbable to the thirsting souls. We dedicate to you our un-ending and loving assistance. Thank you.

THOMAS [Tomas]

T/R: Gerdean

Welcome my friends. There is much to experience in this conference this week. There is much joy between people of one heart. There is joy of camaraderie, and joy of being one purpose with your own inner guidance. We are looking forward to a fruitful weekend. There is much to learn and share. Welcome again, and thank you.

Unknown Teacher

T/R: Unknown

I would like to speak on your spiritual mind. Each of you have awakened to your Indwelling Presence. Each of you through faith and trust are learning to follow the guidance of this Presence. Your minds are accustomed to this reality. You are being transformed through thought and strengthened by action. You have the advantage of celestial guidance. Our presence is to motivate you each and to help effect a change in the hearts of this world's inhabitants, that they may also discern beauty and the Divine Presence – the kingdom of heaven and the brotherhood of man.

This world is to be brought to a spiritual awareness. The orders are handed down to bring the right feel of our spiritual heritage of our Lord and loving Master to the awareness of your world. He ever seeks to bless us with His love and guidance. It is up to each of us to bring forth evidence of this spiritual transformation into our character, that it may cause a change of habit wherein you may reveal your real self to your fellows. By so doing, this transformation will bring this world into a spiritual brotherhood and realization of our son- and daughtership with our Paradise Father. We look forward to the fellowshiping.

T/R: Calvin

My friends, my children. I am here. I call you friends, as you are my brothers and my co-workers. I call you my children, for I have created you and the space and time in which you dwell. I love you with a father's love – as the Father loves you. My apostles of two-thousand years ago walked and lived with me in physical form, and I wish for you to realize this, to make my presence a personal daily-living reality. By so doing, you will realize my personal presence more fully than if I were in physical form. Join me in spirit. Hold in your minds that I will be personally with you at each moment throughout this Conference and forward. Go now to your rest and recreation this night. Remember my love and presence. Carry on.

Afternoon Session

RAYSON

T/R: Joan LaVine (California)

I am RAYSON. The Lucifer rebellion has caused much damage to the planet and its inhabitants. The pattern caused by the rebellion is entrenched in every facet of society, government, and business. How can this be repaired? Being in the Correcting Time, it is important that as Corps of Destiny members we understand the plan of action and our individual parts.

If a building is rotten and each timber is filled with termites, then by what means can it be restored? It must come down and must be restructured - from the foundation, up.

I speak of calamity and chaos on a non-spiritual basis, on a global scale - not just economically, or even politically, but in every area of human living. It is not a time of anxiety, no, but take joy in seeing a higher viewpoint in Father's work at hand, that he hasn't left this world entrenched in the effects of the Lucifer rebellion.

If like at present, wherein neighbor cannot truly trust his neighbor, then can he feel protection from his neighbor? If an element of threat exists, then is one justified in protecting himself and family from his neighbor? Did the Master take steps and precautions to keep Himself and family from harm's way?

So much of this world's ailments are caused by the fear of one another, at the expense of defense and warfare. If the 'golden rule' were lived in every heart - replacing the present system of fear, self-defense, and serving for self-gain, then what?

The Reserve Corps has been activated and cannot be stopped; Michael has decreed it. For a time, you may see the world in much chaos, yes, but on our side, we see this chaos as a brief moment of needed repair. Much of what will occur in correction, and its timing, will depend on how those individuals involved in this Correcting Time respond to their Thought Adjusters.

"What can I do to prepare?" you ask. Ask this on a spiritual plane, and then you will know your part on a physical plane. The following three steps are paramount for your present development:

One. To make a sincere effort on a moment-to-moment basis, day by day, to live the golden rule. Not to expect yourself to be perfect, or to lose faith in your imperfect selves at those moments of apparent failures, no! but to have as your goal, first and foremost, the striving for perfection.

Two. To re-read the Urantia Book again with your new spiritual eyes; and in light of your learning and experiences thus far, to find the new meanings and insights in the Urantia Book.

Three. In each person you meet, make an earnest and sincere evaluation of that person's spiritual contact or degree of enlightenment. Understand your role as an effective teacher.

Work hard on these things. Find yourself a stranger each day to start with, and do your part to bring enlightenment and the Father's love to His children. I now yield for another who wishes to address you.

I am Machiventa, known on your world as Melchizedek. I shall offer a prayer: Our Father in the highest, we gather in your name and thank you for our opportunity to be in service. We are open to see your wisdom, courage, and strength. Blessed are we that know your name. We open our hearts and minds to receive new information. We are grateful. We are attuned to Michael's mission, and we thank you again, Father, for our opportunity to be of service.

Thank you. As vicegerent Planetary Prince, I am pleased in the witnessing of this momentous occasion. Know this, that all eyes are upon you as we, together, make ready for this world's unique Planetary Prince, the Prince of Peace – our beloved Michael of Nebadon. You will be made ready for this momentous occasion to come just as your Teachers have made ready these past ten years for this moment which is now at hand. With your Thought Adjuster's guidance, your Teacher's instructions, and yourselves in action, we will march forward in this Correcting Time toward Light and Life. Know that each of you, with your individual and collective roles of involvement, make a huge impact. This week is a learning time, a clearing time for your next mission objectives.

My friends, it is our Beloved who wishes to address you now:

MICHAEL

It fills my heart beyond measure. Thank you for this time. You are all my children. Those that are not here, I love as well, equally. As we march forward, there are no mistakes, only one-ness of purpose. As you sit in stillness each day, speak with me. I walk with you each day, know this!

[By this Thursday afternoon some of the Woods Cross Group's original members were feeling uneasy about things that were transpiring at this Conference gathering which they felt were not in harmony with their understanding of the Teaching Mission. These issues had surfaced in the Conference workshops as well as the displays of "marketed" items, all claiming in association with the Teaching Mission - such as: Gathering into "merging communities" (Utopian Societies.); Promoting of 'spiritual healings' wherein there is a charge for money; The 'galactic federation' of space friends circulating our planet; etc. Abraham's advice and assistance was requested. Some had felt 'deflated' for their grumblings regarding the way things were happening. The following is their side-bar meeting with Abraham.]

Evening Private Meeting

ABRAHAM

T/R: Ellanor

I am ABRAHAM. It is well you have need for direction. I can answer your questions but first I would you some general guidelines as to your involvement in this Mission gathering.

It is well that you can find time for spiritual renewal, a rejuvenation of spirit. It is well to recapture that enthusiasm that you held previously. We understand that it is difficult when your fellows insist on dwelling in the un-reality of mortal living. It is difficult to find spiritual inspiration from those who perpetuate niceties and mysticism.

In times such as these, I would ask that you first and foremost seek your spiritual renewal from the Father Himself, and through Christ the Creator Son. We are here to assist, but not to replace your divine Parents' guidance. I would suggest that in your going within, that you act on your inner spiritual inspiration. In your efforts to spread the good news, lean towards the realness of mortal living.

Let this gathering be an integration of individual and group (both human and divine) mentality. Your superiors seek to give you more responsibility concerning the Kingdom. They await your acceptance. I can assure you that this gathering will prove to bring more and more commitment from individuals willing to serve. These individuals will then labor to spread their good acts to assist in this Correcting Time-march toward Light and Life.

I would tell you, my children, that your participation is vital in the success of our plan. Let the spirit move you to act on love only. The brotherhood is our ship, and you are co-captains. Be at peace in your ability to do Father's bidding. Worry not. I would admonish you to keep in-check your anxiety-level so as not to cause any stumbling. A few questions?

CALVIN: Thank you, Abraham, for meeting with us. It would be great if we had these kinds of teacher/student communications more often, for it seems like we could catch onto things faster. But I understand also, that you want us to be 'Father led,' and to steer ourselves in that direction - to know when to act, speak out, and when not to. Sometimes, as in today, it is easy to let anxiety overtake me. I don't understand of when not to speak and act, versus when to speak up and act to perhaps stop further anxiety. For instance, if I have a group of ten people saying: "Yes, we need to act and structure plans for communal living in utopian-style communities." and inside I am saying/thinking: "Wait a minute, it doesn't fit with our teachings as I've understood them." So I guess I have to stop and weigh the balance. Am I missing the point? Or, are both sides right? It has been the issue and discussion-topic here today. Rayson's transmission was quite helpful, and yet, I must consider if this was someone's fears or anxiety interjected into the transmission of a 'soon possible collapse and chaos?' As Director of the mortal reserve corps of destiny, how would you advise corps members to best help? And, are they to do so peacefully? I feel I can see both sides of these issues and it is still pretty hard for me to see which way to move and act - or, which of my moving and acting is just my anxiety?

ABRAHAM: Yes, understood. The answer I can best describe to you would be this: Our core group of individuals who began in this Mission have a firm grasp on our goal. New individuals entering can bring imbalance, yes, and cause some turmoil. They are starting the process you have completed. There can appear to be much anxiety in this imbalance for those long-term members, yes, but can you not see, in the imbalance and confusion you have sought me out? And, you will also turn to Father and Michael for their understanding. This is all an ordinary process; and as time has proven, false things will pass. In your eagerness to do Father's will, you have a tendency to stumble over Him. I would say that in your own turning inward to Father, that therein is your rest and clarity. Be concerned not with your fellow's growth and direction, for Father will tend to that area of the garden. Your own inner peace will provide spiritual knowledge and power to act upon. This time should be joy-filled, yes, but not over something that our Teaching Mission has that the world has not. Joy should not be found in obtaining group favor for Father, no! Joy should be had by knowing that the elders of your universe are about to entrust you each with a corner of the kingdom, and the knowledge that you will each find Father in your own time. Does that help?

CALVIN: Very much. In our group discussions, we have (hopefully) each other's Indwelling Father communication. I observe that sometimes the group viewpoint gets to be quite contrary to my own. Is it your wisdom that I let them go on with their viewpoints even if I feel it contrary? To simply allow Father to direct them in His own ways, where He will? Or do I speak out my viewpoint – which oftentimes is throwing a 'monkey wrench' into that group viewpoint? I try to be open-minded but often find myself to be the one with an off-base viewpoint. So, is it best to just keep quiet? – to pull out of the discussion? Or, to be outspoken in my viewpoint?

ABRAHAM: If I am understanding, I would say that an honest and clean viewpoint is always welcome. Passion is commendable in viewpoints, yes; and yet I can say that too strong of emotion would render your viewpoint dis-favorable. Am I understanding?

CALVIN: Yes, and that is a very good point which you bring out; it's 'the approach of the delivery' you are saying, yes. To mildly and directly put forward my viewpoint, but not overly-done with so much passion that would cause a defensive reaction response.

ABRAHAM: Yes, yes. Truth sounds alarms within souls that something needs expanded upon. Another question?

ELLEN: I would just like to thank you for your words tonight. It calmed me down. I was getting a little anxious, as usual. As you were talking, I thought about what happened outside when I was talking with Bill. It felt like what you were just talking about, letting Father direct me. Was that an example?

Abraham: Yes, and that example is accurate. There are times when Father would be persistent in guiding you, but only because you have chosen His will. He has your permission to use a certain amount of persistence to wade through your emotions. This guidance at times can cause some physical signs of confusion and yet, I can say that without your permission for Father's hand, a resolution may not happen. You are in understanding? (Ellen: Yes.) Abraham: Another question?

CALVIN: Ellen and I were wondering why it is we are so 'stiff' – meaning, why don't we like to get up and join in the huggy-kissy group times, such as today in singing the happy birthday to Michael songs? Do we need to spiritually grow up here?

ELLEN: Yea, is there something wrong with us – other than what we already know? [laughter.]

ABRAHAM: Not at all. It is, as I said, that each of you has an inner alarm for truth, and this emotional game-playing is not in your understanding of truth. This is not to say you contain any lessened capacity for love than any other; if the love is genuine, you are each in full participation. Not to worry. Are there any more questions?

CALVIN: None from me. It's sure wonderful to know we can bridge that gap between the material and spiritual, and have such a friend to help bring us to a greater reality in our daily mortal living; and, our interactions with our Mission fellows, which is the issue before us. Thank you.

ABRAHAM: Yes, and you are welcome. I would thank you each for seeking my perception. I will be with you each throughout these days. My love is with you. Shalom.

TM Conference

Morning Session

Stillness instruction by Heber Kimball. (Farmington, UT.)

Keynote address by Rebecca Bynum (Nashville, TN)

[Rebecca's address was on the world's state of affairs and necessity for correction. The percentage of budgets for warfare and defense vs the higher tragedy of starvation and hunger - physically and spiritually. A plan of action targeted for next year around the 4th of July in Nashville, TN]

Afternoon -- Melchizedek Session

[This whole afternoon's transmissions are also paraphrased. Each Melchizedek message was delivered by a different transmission-receiver who all wish to remain anonymous. There may be more accurate recordings or transcribes of this afternoon session.]

MALAVENTIA (Melchizedek)

I am Malaventia, one of the Melchizedek Planetary Receivers assisting in the upliftment of Urantia. I bring this announcement: This Correcting Time is advancing on schedule; your participation is not only helpful but mandatory. Your free will, though, is important beyond measure.

We are almost complete in the implementation of an 'inter-connected net,' a network that will connect on a global level; a circuitry that will reach out and encompass any uncomfortable situation - war, hunger, distress, etc. This "circuitry" is to connect to any or all mortals, global wide. Expand your heart and enlarge your ideal. We stand by ready to assist. Yes, know that we are at hand.

MANTURONSON (Melchizedek)

My greetings. I am Manturonson. Many things you have considered: the Melchizedek schools; The Planetary Prince's return; even Michael's return to Urantia. I say, many things will materialize that you did not fully understand. At that time when the circuits are fully connected and mortals can understand these possibilities, then there is the possibility of many of these things [that] may yet become realized and made actual. You can actualize the Supreme Being.

Our real desire for you is to realize and experience new life. There is spiritual development in every choice you make. If you would be of great service, you would not ignore yourself, and your personal development. Your purpose is to become more like God, not to make others become more like God. This responsibility lies with yourself, your relationship to 'others' not 'other's' relationship to you (inaudible.)

MACHIVENTA (Melchizedek)

I have had the unique experience to walk this world, to live with your forefathers, to spread the Nebadon religion of the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man. My brothers and I work and coordinate with the angelic corps, and also our midwayer brothers who are the true heirs to this world. In all our efforts, we are doing as much as possible to upstep all areas of human interaction, such as:

1. Religious beliefs and institutions.
2. Working with this world's political leaders.
3. All areas and aspects of business.
4. All social institutions and interactions on this world.

Do not be dismayed that there is not much apparent fruit. These efforts are gathering momentum and in time, will gain much fruit. We are proud of the Teaching Mission participants who have stepped forward in your groups and communities. You have been prepared for this for a very long time. Now, much change is at hand, and it is important that you stand grounded in your faith and experience with God; to exhibit in your families and communities - faith; and even more so - righteous living.

During this time of conflict, of change, it is necessary to have resident in the community, one of strength - to have a spiritual pillar, so to speak. Such pillars of strength are being erected/instilled all over this world. We thank you for your efforts and individual struggles. As we begin to discuss issues and project forward, we move the whole forward. You will teach by your personal transformation. Learn to trust the great Teacher who is yourself, your God-self. I thank you all. And from each of us, may the blessings of the Universe Son and the Divine Mother, follow you. Shalom.

MANTUTIA (Melchizedek)

Again, I speak to you. Heed the messages of my brothers for they speak wisely. They speak of times of change and your connection to this universal energy. As you work and pray and embrace the stillness, you are connected to the spiritual circuitry - that is, you co-creatively develop this connected energy such as you would envision the internet or telephone.

I ask you: How will you develop those spiritual energies? An analogy may be likened to running an auto race - you must have the fuel to run this race; and yet, you must stop at the pit and refuel if you intend to finish. I speak of the daily stillness; go there when you feel weak and uncertain. Become refreshed and go forth in the spirit and power of our Father's works. Go forth in these words - "fear not."

Evening Gathering. Question and Answer Session

Ham, Snow Mountain, Colorado TM Conference 08-23-1997

Snow Mountain, Colorado Teaching Mission Conference

Evening Session

Ham

August 23, 1997

T/R: Rebecca

[All questions in this session are paraphrased as best as possible from Calvin's on-site notes. The questions are worded at a much faster pace than the Teacher's words. Ham's words are very accurately recorded here.]

Greetings children. I am HAM. I, also, am grateful and am thankfully joyous to help any of you in any way that I can do so. I understand that there are several of you with questions, and I will endeavor to answer them now.

QUESTION: (A statement of thanks to Ham for his teachings and what he has done for this student. Ham is asked of his assessment of the students' progress, and if he has any specific counsel for the student.)

HAM: You, son, have already given your life over unto our Father's hands. You are walking carefully, and this is as it should be. You have experienced and seen others crash by the roadside, and are careful to avoid those hair-pin turns at high speed. You have received confirmation of your apostleship and understand the hardships and sacrifices required. However, you are waiting and listening to gain understanding on where to go. The awareness or understanding will be given to you by your Indweller. Be at ease and at rest in your heart. All is well and is as it should be.

QUESTION: (From Elena, of Albuquerque, NM., expressing thanks to Ham for his teachings in her life.)

HAM: Elena my daughter, you are a beloved child of the merciful Father who is always and ever aware of every slightest thought even before you think of it. Every hair on your precious head is numbered. He knows your every desire and every fear. You are safe in his arms, and there is no yesterday and no tomorrow that can ever alter this. Go in peace, my child.

QUESTION: (Could you address on the personal cleansing aspects of the Correcting Time?)

HAM: Certainly. All of you have had to be self-revealing, self-understanding, self-tolerant and self-aware, in order to begin the process of breaking away the dead shells that hold you and have held you. There are many ways to do this work - many paths, many trials; and many errors for you all to experience. We your Teachers can only give you suggestions - and yes, sometimes directions to look for the preciousness within. Be of good cheer, you have truly been a beacon of light for those who know you. There is no wrong way or right way to self-discovery, only individual ways as I have said. Is this helping? (Reply: Yes, thank you.)

QUESTION: (This question is regarding Ham and his associates' viewpoint or comment on the workshop's presentations and discussions on 'Emerging Communities'.")

HAM: Once again, we are not in the business of directing decisions that have to be personally decided upon. Everyone has their own tasks to do, and no two are alike. Each one of you is destined to take the seed of truth out into the world and plant your own tree. I would say, 'community' is everywhere – in everything. 'Community' is all of your relationships – all of your interactions with everyone, all the time. We would encourage community expansion in those varied places where Father has placed each of you. Our love and encouragement is to you all, in all of your endeavors. Is this helping? (Reply: Yes.)

QUESTION: (Is there a photon belt? And if so, is it dangerous to our planet?)

HAM: I'm not a scientist but my understanding is that light's interaction in space would not permit this existence of such a prevalent phenomenon.

QUESTION: (Question asking Ham to comment on the differences in the ways that men and women interpret their experiences?)

HAM: Both sexes are similar and yet, quite different in their interpretations of experience. Women are much more easily into the 'now,' and for this reason have largely been the spiritual standard bearers of your race. The male is more apt to exist in a planning mode and be concerned with the long-term future. Women are not short-sighted, no, but more-so are they concerned with immediate results and immediate comfort. Always will there exist some misunderstandings and incomprehension between the sexes because of these different attitudes regarding 'time.' Is this helping? (Reply: Yes, and I thank you.)

QUESTION: (A question asking if each participant in this Teaching Mission is a member of the Mortal Reserve Corps of Destiny; and acknowledging that there are also people outside the Teaching Mission who are also Reserve Corps Members? Also, question asking Ham if we understand correctly of Abraham's role as 'director/overseer' of the Mortal Reserve Corps of Destiny, as we have understood in the past?)

HAM: Answer to your first question: Correct. Answer to your second question: Also correct. And yes, Abraham is still the 'overseer' of the entire Reserve Corps of Destiny. Correct.

QUESTION: (A lady thanks Ham and comments on the beauty of the outcome of the Teaching Mission in her life.)

HAM: Daughter, you have always been the rock which has given anchor and shelter and comfort to more humans than you know. Always you have extended your welcoming love to anyone who has sought it, and there have been many. You have unknowingly acted as a role-model for many women who were confused or frightened. Daughter, your service is constant and your steadfastness is sincere. You are beloved and valued by a host of beings. Never doubt that you have served well, are serving well, and will grow into even greater and even more illustrious service. That is all.

QUESTION: (A lady comments - Ham, I just want you to know how much I love and appreciate you for what you have done in my life. Thank you for coming and sharing with us.)

HAM: Daughter, you have truly embarked on a life of dedicated service and unselfish ministry. Your hands are always open to feed all of God's creatures, even his tiny birds. Do not be discouraged or concerned if not every creature takes what you have offered. Be exceedingly glad. Have faith in our Father that He will hold you and not let you stumble or fall. That is all.

QUESTION: (Another lady also expresses appreciation for Ham's teachings, and asks: Can a person's sub-conscious memory come to consciousness of memory?)

HAM: My daughter, you have clung to truth and have sought goodness and beauty all your life. There is no obstacle that keeps you from further progress - though there is, as with everyone, always another step to go. Have courage and faith, for you are truly a tenacious seeker, a seeker who will never let go. Be of good cheer and of a light heart, for you are where you should be. You are receiving what you need, yes, and will progress wonderfully.

QUESTION: (Question asking if we are still expanding in the teaching groups, and what can we do to help in the expansion of the Mission?)

HAM: The Teaching Mission has just been through a pruning, and is awaiting fresh water, sunshine, and even fertilizer before it will spring into great growth. Many of these things are not really for you to be concerned about; they are in the hands of seraphim and a host of spiritual beings. You will all be heartened and happy to see the Spring in future days, but the arid phase is as it should be - acceptable and correct at this time. Does this help? (Reply: Yes, thank you.)

QUESTION: (A question about our personal contact with the Indwelling Spirit versus the celestial Teachers; and, is there a big discernable difference between the two experiences - the interactions with both?)

HAM: I have watched your progress, son, and am very heartened and happy with your understanding of your great strides. You are correct. You are making good progress in communicating with your instructor/Teacher. I cannot interfere with this relationship but must defer to her instruction. Do you understand? Do not worry or be concerned about every little pebble in the pathway, for there are rocks enough to step over in your future. So have faith and know the truth in your heart - that you are beloved of the Father. And yes, son, you have a special mission on Earth; and yes, you will understand it - you will be able to carry it forth. Go in peace and be of good cheer.

QUESTION: (A lady asks something about, "Am I on the right path? Do I have an assignment in this Teaching Mission?)

HAM: You must understand that your entire lives are your tasks. Your every action and thoughts reverberate in the Supreme Being. You are experiencing joy and love, and do exhibit an excited peace – a peace which has always eluded you in the past. Take time to just enjoy it. There is no hurry to accomplish anything except learning to love and live happily. (Reply: Thank you.)

QUESTION: (A man asks: "What happened to my Teacher? I haven't heard from him for three years now.")

HAM: My son, there is a deep sadness holding tight in your heart which is not allowing communication at this time. There is no human who is able to aid your search for love and peace, but your indwelling Father can and will help to rise above this sadness. It is He who will help you make this climb before you have clarity with your Teacher. Through this experience, always will you know that the Father loves you and bathes you in His light and love all hours of the day. Go in peace. All is well.

[To the Group.]: Children, you are all so loved and deeply, extensively cared for. We look in amazement at your stubborn refusal to let go of fear and worry and anxiety. It is all for nothing. Don't ever doubt your status or standing in God's heart. You each have a special place there, and a special place in this world.

Be content. Find that citadel of peace within your own hearts – a place of quiet amid the storm. Hold on to your faith. Seek wisdom. Always walk with the light – the light of truth on the paths of beauty. In this way, you will draw nearer and nearer to the source of all goodness, and you will experience His merciful embrace. My peace and love and charitable heart goes with you. Farewell.

Snow Mountain, CO Teaching Mission Conference

Saturday Evening Closing Session

Margul - Trinity Teacher Son

August 20th - 23rd, 1997

T/R: Rick Giles

[This record of the Snow Mountain, Colorado Conference is from a hard copy made from Calvin's personal notes (of the Woods Cross, UT group). Other transcribes or recordings of this TM Conference may be available in a more accurate recording.]

I am MARGUL. I have willfully accepted this task of bringing a report of your current standing as a planet. I am of the Daynal order. I have completed a survey of your world, as my associates have also completed surveys of sister quarantined planets in the correcting missions. It has been assessed that progress is being made according to plans. However, decimal worlds lag – and this is not surprising, considering conditions.

I am indirectly associated with the Melchizedek mission only in so far as the mission affects plans for inaugurating Light and Life. The Avonal Sons visiting this world have assessed the many dimensions of human life activities; and, that you are making acceptable economic progress. Pockets on the world are developing higher standards of social and cultural values. In many parts of the world your militaries are becoming antique. The peaks of progress are very small, yet those small surface areas are being touched by the luminosity of spirit. Still, many valleys of deficit do exist.

As you have heard, Michael has decreed the acceleration of plans on this planet, and many in my field of vision are quite busy. In making this report, however, I am cautioned to relate to you that you probably will not see this acceleration, for those committed to this mission have pledged to not circumvent natural process of growth. Our timetable cannot be hastened. You must continue to assimilate according to your ingestive abilities.

Much time has been devoted to increased appreciation of sonship in Michael's family. During this interval of transition, you who are called to this planetary effort are hereby charged to increase your capacities for citizenship involvement. There are two basic perspectives for you to maintain in all aspects of your lives: One, is your repersonalization of Michael's approach as living examples entailing a deepened communion with God. And secondly, to improve standards in your life whereby your relationship with Him becomes obvious to your fellows.

Another primary focus – and this is for you who are called into service with the master seraphim – to hone your skills in careers that contribute to the outworking of procedures currently underway; procedures that will prepare this planet for the next epoch – the beginning stages of Light and Life. And yes, far is the distance to traverse. This, our Teaching Mission ministries, must encourage you, for without the efforts of an initial surge of ministry on your part, subsequent advancements will not be made.

You are conscious cosmic citizens. One of the prerequisites is that as life becomes complicated, all on this world are free to live as Michael has called us to live. This means, you who choose to participate in planetary growth have extracurricular activities. If you are a social worker, continue to improve your abilities. If you are a politician, then demand of yourself those standards you hold ideal and forcefully 'promote them' in your arena of influence. All occupations are needed for upliftment, yes.

Remember, love does go a long way to improve the human condition. When it comes to your planet, love is to be accompanied by an army of skill, talents, and dedication. Rest not on your attainments in a soothing sense of sonship. Charge yourselves with a sense of responsibility to be about the business of Michael, Lanaforge, and Machiventa. This complicates things, doesn't it? [laughter and "yes" acknowledgments from the crowd.]

I will be off the planet for some time, but I will observe processes inaugurating here and continue to tally data, and make suggestions to the residential staff that will help in the ever-steady progress toward a perfected world – and, a supreme universe. I, Margul, take my leave. [End of Snow Mountain, CO TM Conference]

Expose Your Anger to Father For Divine Clarity to Take Place

[The Conference mentioned in this transmission was last week's four-day Teaching Mission Conference held at Snow Mountain, Colorado. During the conference, several of our Woods Cross group felt things were germinating at some of the workshops which were not conducive to our Mission training (personal agendas, predictions, etc.) - and therefore, we requested a meeting with Abraham for direction on how to process this - to speak up openly, or not.]

I am ABRAHAM. How blessed am I to know you each. How blessed am I to experience what you experience. My friends, accept my humble gratitude to you for your efforts in preparing the world for more enlightenment. It is wonderful to view your collective thoughts unifying in a common goal. You are beginning to grasp the ideals of the brotherhood; no one is any farther upon the path to God than any other. Yes, you are in understanding that you will all go together; I am also made glad to ponder upon this reality.

It has been quite an eventful week for all of us. Think not that those who did not attend the Colorado Conference did not receive our main message; for I can say that each who lends an ear will indeed receive our message. We are joyous to confirm that our goal for this conference was completed successfully, and numbers within Father's kingdom has expanded. We stand at the beginning of mountainous changes that will take place - spiritually speaking. It is those individuals who have knowledge of self-mastery that will assist in feeding the flock.

Last week we discussed steering towards the divine self, showing our human selves a more peaceful and loving way to solve problems. It is known that the more animal-like self needs a gentle nudge at times to act upon spiritual ideas. We will perhaps go into more detail on those spirit poisons you wish to have control over. It is known that in this day and age there are multiple ailments due to run away emotions. The world would appear to be in complete chaos with rampant emotionalism.

I would tonight begin to say a few words on anger. There is no doubt that anger can stem from certain fearful happenings such as how anger can be seen when one has felt cheated. I say, in a small way there is some resentment over Urantian isolation - anger towards the Lucifer Rebellion which led to a planet being cheated of spiritual assistance. As more and more individuals come to God-consciousness, this feeling of anger will be understood and modified. Anger can appear to be inflating if there is not a release. It is thought that built-up anger must be in great need of release or there is an explosion to be settled.

I can shed a new light on anger: Your internal Father is the great diffuser of anger where He can turn it to 'productive energy' instead of just 'negative release.' In your efforts to steer towards the divine through various avenues, therein awaits your Father to enfold your anger and remove its sting.

To go into immediate stillness during anger is practically impossible. To lay out your anger for Father to view is to inspect your anger through His eyes - to conference, yes, to confer with your Father. Whether or not it is through private methods or emotional out-bursting, to confer with Father is of great benefit; for in the viewing what Father is viewing concerning your anger, the 'conferencing with Father,' in the midst of Michael's hard truths, will aid in defusing the negative energy of anger.

Father is all too knowing that His child is not about to sing eloquent praises to Him during anger, or even a well-thought-out prayer, no. Father is always available for you to thrust your anger before Him; allow Him the opportunity to remove the sting and help you to understand the violation from which this anger stems. It is an excellent idea to lay out any difficulty before Father, but especially when in the midst of over-controlling anger; He is ready to accept your negative energy.

It is said, to 'overcome evil with good.' Do you see, by exposing this anger there is comfort to be had, along with a mental and spiritual clarity? If at all possible, during your next bout with anger, talk to your Father, expose it to Him. Worry not about offending Him for He is entirely capable of showing you a new and better positive energy. Before you act on your anger, take a moment to show Father you can try to see what He sees, and can accept His divine guidance and comfort. Are there questions?

WILLEENA: Yes, Father Abraham. I have a question that came up in the course of the conversation prior to your lesson. My personal work is of a nature that looks like healing. I have been trained in something very specific, and I charge for it. Back in the days when we were all learning to do healings, I remember that there was a real clear delineation between 'doing healings for money' and simply 'giving the gift freely' - that line was pretty clear in my mind. I stopped doing the healings, per se, because I didn't want to confuse the energy or the issue. But still, this is how I support myself - such as I do through my rapid-eye work, which is also a charging and is along those same lines. So would you address that with me? Am I in good standing here? or, am I out of integrity. So I ask, is there something that you can say to me that will allow me to feel at peace within myself about this?

ABRAHAM: It is well that you have sought help. In your seeking, there is an acknowledgment of an awkward feeling - and yet, you are very conscious of doing right. It is difficult for me to say yes or no to this moral dilemma. I can only assure you of your good standing with Father, and express my confidence in you as a faith-daughter of our Father. Your decision to charge for your service lies in 'what category is your service in.' Do you see, is it physiological? is it physical? (Willeena: A combination of both.) Abraham: I would say that if it is spiritual, that would verge upon taking advantage of those in Father's kingdom, as far as my understanding goes. Is this a service 'for Father' to your fellows?

WILLEENA: It is confusing, yes, because the truth is I do everything from that position, but prior to being exposed to the healings through this Urantia movement, I have been trained in various forms of healing techniques, according to the world. I have always been pulled to offer it from a higher position; so I can see that this is a real question. I definitely gave up in charging for the hands-on healings that we were being taught here because that was very clearly a line that I felt drawn.

ABRAHAM: I say it is one of those decisions you must make according to your new light – one which I have no doubt that you are certainly qualified to handle. Another question?

NORWOOD: Abraham, your lesson tonight on anger, talking it over with the Father, releasing it to the Father – that subject was brought up today; I was talking with my wife about this very thing. My anger has been kept inside which has caused me some problems physically, where my nerves get a little frayed and my muscles will tighten up; and consequently, I might be on a mild tranquilizer at times. That question is the very thing I was dealing with this afternoon, and it is refreshing to hear an answer so soon. I really appreciate your lesson tonight.

ABRAHAM: You are certainly welcome, and I am aware of this. Repressed anger has been a leading cause of arthritis, depression, skin ailments, and various other problems. Anger released to the Father is a beneficial avenue to take, whether it is through yelling, crying, or even fist-pounding. Father is all too ready to accept your human behavior no matter how juvenile it may appear to you. Do you see, in this release, there is not repression and the physical ailments that may accompany anger. Does this help? (Norwood: Yes, very much. Thank you.)

MIRIAM: Abraham, I was wondering – regarding our side-bar meeting with you at last week's conference, this was like a 'lesson within a lesson.' I was so grateful that you met with us to give us avenues and tools to use to process that experience. I have a question, and I don't know if this is a spiritual poison or not, I am a little gray on this: Say for instance, when we are sitting in a meeting and our inner guidance tells us something, and it doesn't quite jive with what the rest of the group has going on. Such a situation is kind of a hard one for me. My dilemma is always – do I listen to my voice and get up and leave? or, sit and learn tolerance and acceptance? I did both during the conference. The one instance that I am asking about, though: I was sitting in a workshop meeting where things were being said that I strongly disagreed with, and I remained quiet and just did my own thing doodling instead of to engage in what they were saying and doing. Later on, I talked to the woman about it, and I told her about my discomfort. Is that a spirit poison in my speaking out to her? You know, like I feel bad for having spoken forthrightly with her – and that I should have just grooved with everybody, instead. I knew I didn't want to do that; I really didn't feel like I should just groove-along. I guess this kind of guilty thing got me going, and I felt like I should have spoken up openly during the meeting rather than confront her after.

ABRAHAM: Understood. Your first impression was correct. Your guilt feelings stem from your past experience with non-conformance. Your immediate internal feeling upon making your decision to 'not' participate was what – one of wanting peace and contentment? or, was it more conjoined with the ego? Was there the feeling of 'my way is the right way?' Do you see, the guilt came later after having time for the human you to have input. No, Miriam, what you did was not in error; you were following your internal Father. Does this help?

MIRIAM: So, are you saying I was groovin with my ego? or I wasn't? Or, are you saying I was looking to my internal Father, and I wasn't looking to my ego? I'm not sure I understand.

TR: He is saying, 'you decide.' [laughter.]

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I think it is time for a little humor. It is time for parents to take their children to church when their children believe that the second coming is the return of Michael Jordan to the NBA. [laughter.]

TR: I was explaining to Abraham who Michael Jordan is, and that in recent years he had decided to return to the NBA. He said: "I know." [laughter.]

ALAUNA: Abraham, I'd just like to introduce a member to our group, Ashley.

ABRAHAM: Greetings to you, Ashley. It is my extreme pleasure to meet with you. I am aware of your connection with Father – it is strong and yet, sometimes confusing. If I can be of help to you, please feel free to ask me anything. One more question?

CALVIN: I just wanted to ask if we did read more into our observations at the Colorado Conference than what was actually there? Is there something you can comment on at the Teaching Mission's gathering? I know we could have exercised a little more refined and fruitful way of doing things rather than in open confrontation. I'm sure our patterns of 'when to act and when to tolerate' will evolve through further teaching and experience. I think you understand what I ask?

ABRAHAM: Yes, you are correct in what you say. I can also say, though, that it was not easy to have our students act upon truth without some prodding on our end. You have your understanding of truth, and how it affects you. It should not cause you shame or embarrassment as long as you cling to the authority of your divine Father. There should not be any question as to the validity of your inner feelings.

Having said this, I shall take my leave. I would remind you to expose your anger to Father for divine clarity to take place. My peace and love to you each. Until next week, shalom.

Let Father Transform Our Fear/Anger/Energy Into Positive Outcome

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you. It is in humble gratitude that I meet with you tonight. I am with almost complete understanding of your efforts to attain self-mastery. As my history has shown, I too used anger's negative energy to find some sort of satisfaction. It is still at times a struggle for me to find peace and contentment in tragedies. I am still in the practice of learning to lean solely on our Father's knowledge.

As I experience, I always find Father is already in control of every situation. In the sharing of your experience with anger with your fellows, there is more a feeling of being understood than believing you are so far from attaining self-mastery. You can each see your experiences will be somewhat similar, and sharing them here aids in finding positive ways in dealing with anger.

Worry not on your failings concerning self-mastery. Look at each episode of failure as a moment when you can sincerely say 'I am teachable.' Look not on your failings concerning self-mastery with hopelessness; nor, as an impossible goal to reach, no. Know that each moment spent in humility is an opening for your Father to make a correction. Allow Him His timing in this correction so that it is lasting.

Last week we discussed of showing Father your anger honestly, and through whatever means you choose; this is only one way in which to steer the animal self towards the divine. Anger is not a vicious animal to be locked up and hidden, no! Anger is an energy which must be directed (be available) toward transformation. Anger, when transformed, can lead to beneficial actions.

Many positive things have happened out of someone's anger, someone's pain. Your striving to understand this particular energy will stem far beyond this world; but have no fear – as you attain levels of self-mastery, anger does become easier to direct towards the positive.

Closely related to anger is fear. Many individuals have become enraged by fearful events. Fear continues to dominate on this world. Even with all of the circuits reinstated there still is a mass fearfulness and confusion. I can help to bring some understanding on this for there is particular knowledge to be had. The competition for this knowledge was a driving force for mankind. The appearance of having more knowledge over your fellows built one's ego to great heights, and the absence of this knowledge produced great fear.

Mankind, when pressured by this fear, is more likely to produce useless things, fake things, false things. People driven by fear are apt to live in falsehood, and until one is humbly gracious enough to invite Father to share their life, this fear will be overwhelming, uncontrollable. I do not say that fear will cease after Father has been invited, no, for change of patterns take time. I do say however, that fear is also like an energy which can be put to different uses.

Most fear stems from the age-old feelings of isolation and loneliness. There are those without the comfort of Father who would go to great lengths to be accepted by others. I would say, the child who is believing in their son- or daughtership with Father is more likely to first have self-acceptance. This self-acceptance is important in the reduction of those various spirit poisons, including fear. To be so faithful in your status as a child of God sets the foundation for overcoming the over-controlling feelings of fear.

If you would set yourself apart from your brothers and sisters as 'different,' as not belonging, or perhaps 'unworthy,' then you would be denying your status as a child of God – thereby, losing the upper hand on controlling fear. If you would set yourself apart as 'above' your fellows, perhaps as superior concerning spiritual things, then, again, you would be in denial of your fellows' status as a child of God. In that denial there also is the production of negative fearful energy.

I would ask you for this week to contemplate your levels of faith and status within the kingdom. Ponder upon the fact that you are one of Father's many children. In the moment of a fearful thought, go back to your first acknowledgment that Father existed. Remember that feeling of being 'born of the Spirit.' Be conscious of how your fear loses its momentum to producing more fear. Fear can be sly, yes, but it can also be fooled. Tonight I would take only a few questions.

NORWOOD: Father Abraham, I just have a comment to make, more than a question. A week ago last Friday I was getting ready for an interview for a job. I had a lot of anxiety and fear inside me. So I took the time to go into the stillness and ask the Father to take this from me and to be with me during that interview process. I could tell the moment I walked in the front door the fear was making me crazy. I just kept arguing with it, and saying, you are not going to control me. The moment I started the interview process my fear disappeared and Father took over. I don't think I have ever had such a positive interview in my life. I was also invited back for a second interview, and again I asked the Father to take over, and again He took over. I think this is just a testimony that when you ask for Father to take it and handle it for you because you can't do it yourself, that good positive things happen. Later on that evening I was sleeping and I was awakened in the middle of the night with a very strong pressure on the right-hand side of my head, just a little bit above my ears. I felt a strong intense tingling feeling going into my brain. Was that just a nervous response from the pressure of going through the interviews and having such a positive response? By the way, I cheered and thanked Father for helping after I left because I was flying high. Can you respond to that a little bit, please?

ABRAHAM: Yes. That is certainly cause to be joyful. To be witness to Father's fingerprints in difficulties is a great comfort and producer of confidence. That was a wise strategy on your part to connect with Father to overcoming, or at least controlling, the fear and anxiety. I am aware now that the pressure you experienced in the later evening was due to Thought Adjuster activity. Not to worry. It is common to experience these physical feelings during restful times when the mind is least active. I would suggest that you are taking in great feelings of comfort during these times. The Thought Adjuster activity is only preparation for upcoming lessons, or understanding a lesson already experienced. Is this helping? (Norwood: Yes. Thank you.)

RACHEL: Father Abraham, at the Teaching Mission gathering in Colorado – at the Melchizedek session, Manturonson said, and I quote: “Many things you have considered – the Melchizedek school, etc.; and many things will materialize that you did not fully understand. At that time when the circuits are fully connected and mortals can understand these possibilities, then there is the possibility of many of these things which may yet become realized and made actual. You can actualize the Supreme Being” (end of quote). Now, I know our definitions of actual and actualize, and I do in my heart believe that the Supreme Being is existing and real. But would you tell us your interpretation of that statement, please?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. My understanding is that on a collective agreement, things can be made manifest. Concerning the Melchizedek schools, the world is somewhat immature producing such a collective agreement. I would however say, this does not stop or hinder the Melchizedek lessons to those individuals who would receive. Worlds such as yours, experience numerous exercises in this collective thinking; and it is entirely possible to make manifest – things that are positive or negative. The Supreme Being does have a small amount of influence on Urantia, yes, and this is growing day by day. It takes many individuals to change worldly 'potentials' into

'actuals' - but that can also be said on a smaller scale too. As far as actual materialization, physical materialization, I am unable to comment. But on a spiritual level I would say that, yes, collective actualizations are indeed possible. Does that help? (Rachel: Yes it does, and thank you.) Abraham: One last question?

ROLAND: It seems to me like the Teaching Mission is based on very democratic experience, in that each person that is desirous of a Teacher, one is available. I am not sure why we keep being challenged by this idea of materializations of schools that are 'physical Melchizedek schools' or even universities - when, to my mind, the brilliance of being able to have a Teacher is that it requires faith; and, that it is immediately available to each person wherever they are - at home, on the road, wherever they are. This is infinitely more efficacious to bring the world to Light and Life than would be physical universities that would require being at a certain location, physically. To my mind, this material-school expectation creates an anticipation, a yearning for a school which is actually already here - and which we are attending this moment, and every moment during our existence. I would like to get feedback on that from you as to if I am completely off base? or if that truly is the plan. Could you comment on that?

ABRAHAM: Yes. I am in agreement with you. Said Jesus: "Our kingdom is wholly spiritual." You are correct in that our Teaching Mission is an actualization of a collective agreement. Those who would lend an ear will hear our message - that 'our kingdom is spiritual.' The Melchizedek schools are fully functioning, spiritually speaking. I agree with you, there will always be those desirous of seeing with their material eyes and not with their spiritual eyes. Does this answer?

ROLAND: Yes, it does. It makes it very clear and I appreciate you responding to it. I realized I actually had some anger about my own opinion - being one thing that I do seem to greatly cherish (laughter) - that we continually seek to have a group of people who are looking for materializations. I guess the lesson for me here is to be patient, tolerant, and understanding. To accept that that's their desire - as it was with the apostles of old - to talk Jesus into a material kingdom. You made that connection beautifully for me, and I thank you very much.

ABRAHAM: You're very welcome - a wonderful analogy of the paradox within our Mission. You are correct in making effort towards patience and tolerance - but certainly, anger is understood. I would thank you for your input. Well done.

I would at this time take my leave. I would remind you to ponder upon your first experience of being born of the Spirit, to help in transforming the energy in fear. My love is with you each. Until next week, shalom.

Born of The Spirit Brings Worship, Aids In Self-Mastery. Deaths of Princess Diana and Mother Teresa

Back

(These past two weeks were the events of Princess Diana's (UK's Princess of Wales) and Mother Teresa's deaths.)

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you each here tonight. I must say I too was deeply involved in your topic for debate. I know well that group-unified-thinking does not appear to be a possibility; and yet, I can guarantee that to view you each with your good intentions, is truly beautiful. It is most gratifying when groups of mortals can debate as a family and stay committed to one another. I must say that your show of strong emotion was an indicator of your care for each other. Without your care and concern for one another, this particular branch in our Mission would not be in existence. I would also say, I am committed to you each, no matter what.

Last week I had spoken on the spirit poison of fear; I had asked you to contemplate your first experiences in knowing that God existed, in the hope that this would help to dissipate your feelings of fear. In being born of the spirit, one sees with new eyes. A mortal is practically different in every aspect from that moment forward; it is as if one had humbly chosen to lay down his old ways of thinking to be transformed into a new creature.

This acknowledgment of being a new creature, having died to the old ways, renews the faith levels. These new faith levels remind you that in being a new creature you see things differently – fear is not as powerful as it once was; there is faith and trust in a higher power; there is confidence in knowing your Father knows you and can bestow upon you His knowledge.

Your memories of first beliefs that Father was real – that He knew you through and through, loved you in spite of your failings, and your thoughts that He will share your life with you – brings an amazing amount of comfort and feelings of safety. One who has been born spiritually is a different person; great changes can occur, old thinking is fading away and a new taste for adventure is present. How wonderful it is when we can be made small to have recognition for something so great, so loving and protective.

I would ask at this time to say a prayer of gratitude to our Father: Father, we would be small so we could recognize your workings in our lives. We would grant you our praise and give our gratitude to you who knows all things and can do all things. If our thankfulness were a symphony playing for you it would be so great and powerful it would reach the outer edges of the universe. We are knowing of your watchcare; and yet, at times we forget our smallness and become fearful, forgetting that you know all things and can do all things. We, your children, would ask you for your continued help on these lessons of self-mastery and greater knowledge of your personal being. Help us to maintain our smallness so we would have successful communication with you. Father, again we ask, make us like you. Amen.

In our memories of being born of the spirit, worship sometimes follows and we can view the negativity in the world; we can remember our old lives and the tremendous amount of spirit poisons we held. Thanks to our Father for He has made Himself known to us that we might reach out to Him. Without our first recognition of Father's existence, we would be still stumbling through our spirit poisons.

Can you feel the gratitude for your divine Saviors' connection? These moments of worship and gratitude are especially helpful in self-mastery – not that Father would need to be praised and worshipped to bestow knowledge to His children, no! the worship and gratitude helps you to enlarge your capacity to receive His word. Yes, a mortal who feels dragged down by spirit poisons is likely to find worship to be a life preserver.

This week I would ask that you still study anger and fear. Make effort to find moments to worship and be grateful for your knowledge of the Father. Next week I would begin on the subject of despair and depression. Have you questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, in our Mission-participation - as the Teachers view this two-way 'mortal to Teacher' contact, would the Teaching Staff prefer us to come to the table seeking the Teaching Staff's views on what is best, as we do here in the group setting? Or is it more to your teaching to say, 'students, figure it out for yourselves, we are bringing you to the Father, and let that guide you? Don't come to the table relying on the Teachers and the group transmission-receiver for your help.' Do you get what I am asking?

ABRAHAM: Yes. This is mostly individual. Various individuals would handle things in the manner to which they were best suited. Some individuals would take action because they were feeling strongly to bring out truth. Some individuals may feel drawn to take action because of past painful experiences. Some would take action from a truly ego-led point of view. Your desire to bring forth consciousness to certain topics is commendable, and you may be Spirit-led to do so. I would also say, some individuals are not prepared to receive your particular words and you are entirely qualified to know who can accept your challenge to view truth, and who cannot. The Master knew also who would accept His words and who was not capable of doing so. The Master worked 'individually' and 'consistently.' He would only give words to those who would hear. I would say, you do well in bringing consciousness to these topics and yet, in doing so there needs to be some softening of the words - not holding back, just softening. Are you understanding?

CALVIN: Yes, very clearly put, thanks - except for, how much contact would you, our director/Teacher, like us to have? (Abraham: I feel that our contact is adequate. I can see you here in our group, or at your convenience elsewhere. There is no limit, if that's your meaning?)

CALVIN: Yes, and an issue for me is that I don't know when my own 'at home contact' with you or the other Teachers is just me misleading myself with wishful thinking; or, is wrong interpretation perhaps? Or, if my connection and communication is pretty clear, whether it is with Father or the Teaching Staff. I think you said earlier we like clarification through a transmission-receiver we trust better than our own selves, maybe.

ABRAHAM: There are those times when all transmission-receivers will stumble and fall short. Your best transmission would be from your own indwelling Father. That is who you should put your faith and trust in. All transmission-receivers will fall short. No one transmission-receiver is entirely accurate. You are to each rekindle your flame with your own indwelling Father through your memories of being re-born in spirit. You can trust your own inner guidance if you feel it is from a standpoint of doing the will of our Father, and if it is for Father's glory. To communicate with others about such concerns is also an anchor in the sea of unknowing. To guard against irrational thinking, or to guard against fanatical thinking or irrational actions, it is wise to have communication with your fellows and an amount of time to ponder over those things you feel you've received. Is this answering? (Calvin: Yes. Thank you, Abraham.)

NORWOOD: Abraham, I would just like to thank you for that answer to Calvin because those have been my thoughts also. It is because of my contacts with my Teacher that, in reality, I have been contacting my Father Spirit/Fragment and learning to follow His wisdom and advice that He has been giving me. That just verified my own thoughts of the Father's truth that has been given to me, especially this last month or so. Thank you for that.

ABRAHAM: You are certainly welcome. I would say to each one that our Mission is to have mortals have better contact with their indwelling Father. We on the Teaching staff are but a tool. I can say to you, Norwood, your Adjuster contact becomes stronger every day. And doubt not that you also have my assistance along with others from on high. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, this is not the first time this has happened to me - that I have come to one of these meetings and I feel upset. I don't feel good. I don't want to go into a long deal about it, but I was just wondering if you had any guidance for me?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Miriam, this group of individuals has been like a long marriage. There has been love, yes, but also have there been many disagreements to which the solutions have not come without some time. In our marriage there is emotion, there are spirit poisons, there is some resentment - and yet I can say that is not enough for this marriage to be dissolved. This group, through its times of confusion, has vowed to stay together, to be committed to keep reaching for that common goal. I can say, this group has also been the producer of spiritual fruits - feelings of family togetherness, feelings of safety, linking of like-minds. And for us here in this marriage who view the world as lost and hopeless, we come here together to find God and be hopeful. You, Miriam, have brought your heart and commitment to our group. We are better for you entering into our union. Let not your uneasy feelings chance to disrupt your foundation of commitment. It is in those feelings of uneasiness that brings us these lessons to build upon our foundation. Your honesty is a wonderful thing to behold. Always let this be a name tag in which we recognize you. Does this help? (Miriam: Yes, Abraham. Thank you very much.) Abraham: You're welcome. One more question?

WILLEENA: Abraham, I was very, very affected by Princess Diana's death. I was surprised by it. I spent the week basically grieving. I watched the funeral all night long. There was a moment in it that I want to talk about. There was a prayer that the Archbishop of Canterbury asked all the people in the church, all the million or so people gathered outside the church, and the billions of people around the planet, to join in the prayer. When the prayer started: "Our Father...", all at once I joined in; I felt very strongly physically affected by the fact that I was one of the billions in that moment praying all together on this planet for this event, this passing, this honoring, this recognizing of this particular person that represented so much love and compassion. In that moment, I felt connected to the brotherhood of the whole. I felt so completely one with the planet, that I was stunned. Would you address that experience I had – that moment of praying with the world?

ABRAHAM: I know not how to say it better than you just did. You are correct in your thoughts of unified consciousness in that, out of this seemingly tragic event, momentous thought unification occurred. You are correct in your understanding that there was a great link to the brotherhood between mortals of Urantia. It was felt far beyond this solar system. There has not been such a use of these circuits since before they were severed. This is felt physically as you had described. Yes. Does this answer?

WILLEENA: Yes. There is just one more piece because of Mother Teresa dying within a week of Princess Diana. My understanding is that these two women represented a healing or an opening on this planet in terms of the heart chakra – cracking open the heart, breaking the heart open and then expanding it. And, that there is actually on the planet a rekindling of, a renewing of, compassion on this planet. Am I accurate? Is that so?

ABRAHAM: Yes, compassion, self-forgetfulness, service, and joy through it all. Yes, you are correct in these events. There are advanced spiritual seeds being planted in the hearts of those who could not see their way through to be of service and to enjoy self-forgetfulness.

I am slipping, and I would ask that you find time to have worship and moments of gratitude to expand your capacity for reception from our Father. My love is with you continually. Until next week, shalom.

Depression And Despair Can Be A Nudge From Father | Stamina Is Gained Through Reaching Up For Help.

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you, my friends. It is my supreme privilege to meet with you again. I would have you each be mindful that our lessons are ongoing. Worry not on rushing to absorb any and all things on spirituality. We are at the beginning of an adventure; the adventure is wonderful and sometimes terrible, but always challenging.

We have been speaking on being reborn of the spirit, remembering our primal feelings for Father and His loving watchcare. To reconnect with this first basic feeling is an excellent foundation from which to build upon. These lessons on self-mastery will be more balanced when you can maintain direct contact with your indwelling Father. I would say a few words on depression and despair.

Depression is not so much of a spirit poison as it is a result of spirit poison. Fear or anger can certainly lead to depressed feelings. In this age of instant gratification, depression is looked upon as a negative influence. In the days of old some had looked upon depression as a time for silencing the self to receive words from the gods. Philosophers had looked at depression as a slate for the recording of deeper spiritual ideas. Artists and writers used despair and depression to create an artistic tapestry of confused feelings.

In this age of instant gratification (self-satisfaction), there is a panic when depression strikes. There are numerous medications, support groups, and various other avenues in which people fight off depression. I would say to you, my friends, a re-defining of depression is in order. An uneasiness in the mind or soul is perhaps a calling for you to lift your eyes to our Father. Perhaps a feeling of despair is only a moment to touch the creativity within. Perhaps depression and despair is only an avenue to truly knowing and worshipping our Father in heaven.

There are many in this world who sit in darkness, think in dark terms, create darkness, and in their moments of despair there is only the attempts of smothering this darkness with one substance or another. You, my friends who have been born of the spirit, are made a new creature and deal with despair with the light you have been given. You are not made to smother under the pressure of despair, depression, and darkness, no. You who have your connection with Father are led to feel grateful that this light has been cast upon you to bestow its liberty. This is how our depression can prevail to worship.

Spiritual enlightenment is not something we can feel proud that we have that others have not, no! Spiritual enlightenment is shelter from the storm; a rope cast to us in the waters of uncertainty. Do you see how depression and despair are not to last under your spiritual light? Know this, all of one's feelings of extreme sadness are temporary. In a Father who changes not, always is He changing the world.

Your Father is knowing of your mortal feelings and can minister to you as only a Father could. Your Father is not apt to lift you up out of your depression, but He is there to shine a light to show you the way. Through your deep and abiding love for Him and Him for you, are you strengthened to always persevere – to go beyond just enduring, to meet each difficulty with a spark of determination in your eye. I would ask you to use your feelings of depression or despair to draw closer to Father; know that these feelings are helpful in your spiritual ascension.

I would ask for only your most pressing questions – to stay within our time allotment.

ROLAND: Abraham, to clarify on the lesson: Are you saying essentially that our depression and our despair is instrumental to bring us to the Father in that 'hour of need' – to seek His comfort, His counsel? Is that what it is about?

ABRAHAM: Yes, this is essentially what I am teaching – that even feelings of deep sadness are but a doorway to understanding what Father is teaching. Depression is like a tool to be used for turning up those complicated spiritual seeds. To be in the midst of depression is not a cause for panic or a need for a prescription, no. In our lessons on self-mastery, we are learning to be led by our divine self. In not fearing depression we are dealing with it on a spiritual level being led by our divine self. Does this answer?

ROLAND: It does, and I see that in this spiritual path for me some of the greatest blessings have come back to somewhat haunt me in a sense. I feel sometimes a little overwhelmed by the beauty of some of the things that have happened to me. And that brings me to a place of feeling let down when I am not in that euphoric state. I don't know if that makes any sense, but I sense a need to clarify for myself – it's a greater thing to be committed and willing to do Father's will, even if in the process you lose a lot of some of the illusions and the dreams – the mythology of the old life. That seems very depressing on some occasions. I think this lesson kind of clarifies how to deal with that – that we are going to be depressed at times, and that it is okay.

ABRAHAM: Yes. Well said. We are in agreement – that an instant gratification may not be the way to find spiritual gratification; that depression is not to be feared, but utilized to delve deeper into the spirit. Yes. Thank you. Another question?

WILLEENA: Father Abraham, I am interested in some dialogue about the question I asked Father the other night: You asked me to talk with my Father Fragment; I have been in conversation since, off and on. As I stated earlier to the group, it feels to me like I am on track. I don't know how to say it, but it is like this is a chance for me, this work that I am involved in, that at some point I will be getting money from some other source, and that this will be a part of a service that I just give and provide. Can you tell me if I am getting it accurately? Am I off in some places?

ABRAHAM: I for one am in awe of your dedication to a life in the spirit. You would be better to answer this than I. Your lighter countenance says it all. Your feelings of wellness speak for you. You are indeed a daughter of faith, and your willingness to be spirit led is well known. I can only say this much. You have done well by your Father, Willeena. One more question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I always thought that like someday if I had a private session with you, I'd ask you this – and going with that honesty thing, I'll ask you now: Talking about depression and despair, and using it as a tool – I was diagnosed as a manic-depressive in my early twenties and was told I would have to live my whole life on lithium, and I have a lot of experiences in this area. Some of those experiences culminated in a suicide attempt that I was in ICU for a while. I have always wondered what that experience was about then, because when I came out I felt like I had been held. Here's my question to kind of help me understand this – I love the lesson and I do 'get it' from where I am now. I know now because of my faith and where I have been, and where I'm at now; I know how to reach out and use these tools, and I appreciate these things. But to help me understand where I have been, and help understand where people are when maybe they aren't 'in action' of reaching for the tools, but they get help from Father anyway. I guess I would like your feedback on what that was. Is that making any sense?

ABRAHAM: Yes, I understand. My lesson is for you here tonight. I would not give this same particular lesson to one who was perhaps at your previous stage of development, Miriam. I would though, confirm that these individuals with chemical imbalance are in need of medical attention, yes, and do indeed receive spiritual help. I would say to you that your particular experience was instrumental in training you for your particular ministry. You are a faith-filled daughter who would go to any lengths for the kingdom, and your previous experience has taught you how to go those lengths. I would say a few words about physical health and depression. You each know that a balanced diet, exercise, and rest are an important part of balancing the mind, body, and spirit. Fresh air and sunshine are also important in being balanced. I do not say that depression is good or mandatory in order to gain spirituality, no. I mean to reduce any fear there is in depression causing individuals to act rash. Suicide, as you said, is an option for those unknowing how to dispel the darkness. Is this at all helping? (Miriam: Yes, and thank you, Abraham.)

You each do well in your attempts to bring your world to a deeper understanding of spiritual things. Your efforts are appreciated, and I can say we are each filled with affection for you and we assist where we can. My love is growing for you each, daily, and I would now take my leave. Until next week, shalom.

Good Health Aids In Keeping Anxiety Under Control. Including Others Helps Against Depression

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you here. It is always an honor for me to spend time with you. In our meeting time here together, we could spend most of our time in study, or on morontial lessons; but I would also have you know that I enjoy your separate distinct personalities as well. Your faith, love, dedication, and humor have also been a great teacher to me. We are, on a soulful level, friends. I am indeed grateful to Father for the many friendships we have shared over these years.

In our series on self-mastery, it is common for us to speak a little on physical well-being. You each are knowing what you need to possess radiant good health. I would not go into detail on this but I would make it my duty to remind you on the importance of physical maintenance.

One who would feel it impossible to master the self may be living with a chemical imbalance, nutrient deficiency, lack of fresh air and sunshine, and also, isolation from other mortals. I would ask you to each evaluate your physical well-being and make adjustments as needed. In self-mastery, we always find varying degrees of success, and in order for us to advance levels of self-mastery we always consider every avenue; health is one such avenue.

In last week's lesson, we contemplated the affects of depression and the solutions mastering them. I would have you make note that depression - being rampant among your fellows - is more now than ever before also felt by you. To have compassion is God-like. To be burdened by your fellows' downfalls is not maintaining balance.

I did, as I said I would, teach about the brotherhood in combination with self-mastery, and I would say that you are, to say the very least, blessed to have adequate communication with Father. To have such Father-communication, your fellows will be drawn to your source of light. To feel compassion is God-like, enabling you to guide others to their own inner light.

To be compassionate is to maintain enough detachment so as to not become overwhelmed or burdened by your fellows' ongoing difficulties. Deep compassion is acceptable, yes, but there also must be some detachment and a firm hold to the source of your light. It is understood that you each hope to be of help and not add to another's burden by being overwhelmed by feelings of hopelessness and negativity.

I say, spirituality is so much more real and useful than ever before. With the circuits now replaced, this is a new beginning for mortals on Urantia. This is a new age and we are standing at the beginning. This new age would connect us with the cosmic mind via the circuits. It is entirely possible for you to be influenced by feelings of despair for your home planet, just as it is possible for you to feel feelings of worship and brotherhood.

I would say to you, your connection to your Father Fragment and one another, helps to alleviate some of these confused and overwhelming feelings, and makes it possible for the pendulum to swing over to the side of positivity on a planet-wide basis. Continue to steer your human selves divine-ward to maintain your connection with those from on high. Maintain good health and balanced sessions of study, work, and play – this is a good foundation to build up those fruits of self-mastery.

I would say a few words on anxiety. I have spoken on anxiety in our previous lessons, and yet I find it is still to be a problem with my students. In a world that never ceases to move beyond the spirit poisons, there are great pressures to bear one another's burdens; and this is now more apparent than ever in dealing with your fellow mortals within the kingdom. It is a common line of thinking to believe that your fellows would desire to see you dwell in unhappiness. It is common among mortals to believe there are those that seek their destruction.

Also are there mortals who believe that the universe stands in unity against them. There are those who cannot imagine themselves as being a part of something greater. This creates a tremendous anxiety within our brotherhood, and this is felt beyond your planet. This anxiety and animosity towards one another is a creator of static – a clashing of confused thoughts and ideas. Many such mortals are surprised when a stranger has done a kind thing for them. Many mortals are surprised when they find out that other mortals are similar to themselves.

It is wonderful when a faith son or daughter can promote inclusive feelings within their immediate environment. Have you not met one who has eased your feelings of discomfort and made you feel included? There is a lightening of the heart and a dissipation of anxiety.

I do not speak so much tonight on 'your' anxiety, but on the anxiety created between you and your fellows – you and your loved ones and, your fellows you must deal with. To keep close with your Father is to have adequate study, stillness, prayer, good health, good exposure to light – and contact with those like-minded; it is a wonderful way to dissipate anxiety and promote serenity. I would tonight take only your most pressing questions.

CALVIN: Abraham, anxiety seems to be my hurdle – more-so right now than I see the other spirit poisons, but I do see some improvement, yes. For me, it feels like a pattern of so many years of having to 'swim or sink' in life, and it is so hard to coast down to a relax-mode and know that things will be taken care of. The pattern is hard to put the brakes on and start a new pattern. Is it meant to be a gradual shift? or is there a way to have a 're-born' type shift, a new way of seeing this?

ABRAHAM: I would say this is individual and is according to your own Father Fragment's knowledge of what you need. And, it is necessary to create several instances in which you would have the opportunity to be taught the better methods on dealing with anxiety. It is more likely to be a gradual process than a change overnight, yes. Many times are you each tested in order to internalize these lessons we give. Anxiety, like depression, is not to be feared or hidden. Anxiety, after time, becomes like a tamed animal wherein it is trained to follow certain directions to finding solutions. Another question?

RACHEL: I don't really have a question. I have a comment. For Sister Teresa, she received loads of praise and honor, as well she should for all her years and years of service. Princess Diana certainly received her share. Now on another phase was Red Skelton, who provided so much humor for the people all during his life. And along with each character he played he did have a good moral underlying message. I just thought that maybe he should be right up there as far as the praise and the honor is concerned. That's all I have. [Editor's note: Internationally renowned comedian, Red Skelton, passed away this week – following the passing of Princess Diana and Mother Teresa last week.]

ABRAHAM: Certainly. He now is well aware of his affect on the world. Humor is indeed important in maintaining balance and he was certainly gifted in this area, as are others who are gifted in other areas. You are certainly thoughtful to bring attention to a life spent wisely. Thank you, Rachel. One more question?

ALAUNA: Abraham, I have been lucky to have lived and not suffered a lot of depression in my time. I have lived with a lot of positive things in my life; I have been lucky that way. Anxiety for me has always been kind of a push for something that I needed to get done. I have always felt like whenever I have had real anxious times, or perhaps just unrest because of those kinds of feelings, it was like a drive that something needed to be done. I kind of looked at it as maybe being pushed a little bit by my celestial teachers to accomplish something in my life. So I have always treated it as such; whenever I have those feelings, I have taken that as a need to go on with something that I am being urged to do. Am I correct in those feelings, or am I going that direction in error?

ABRAHAM: Yes. You are correct in your assessment. Some, such as yourself, are energized by their 'inner drive' that does feel like anxiety, to accomplish certain tasks. This anxiety-feeling has perhaps served you in accomplishing goals, yes. To know the difference between 'inner drive' and anxiety, I would ask of one who has suffered the physical ailments of anxiety if this driving force to accomplish goals was worth the physical ailment. You are not one who would suffer from this, no! Perhaps your anxiety would be better termed as energy-directed; you are indeed that energetic. It is well known by your Father what drives you, and He does accomplish much through you. Yes, I am in agreement with you Alauna.

My time is now closing, and I would ask that you each evaluate your physical well-being and make adjustments. Also, continue to be balanced in your study and stillness. Seek to disseminate serenity among your fellows. Allow the light that has filled you with joy to spill over into your fellows' lives. My love is with you each always. Until next week, shalom.

Impatience and Anxiety, the Cause of Many of Life's Ailments, Impedes Self-Mastery
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-29-1997

I am ABRAHAM. I am happy to meet with you as always. I am understanding of your mortal lives, and I attempt to arrange our lessons accordingly. At this time, Urantia is experiencing great activity, spiritually speaking. It will be through self-mastery that all activity becomes coordinated.

On our level, we view your world as a new and budding garden – everything is growing naturally, and in some ways the garden is in disarray. Through your steps to attaining self-mastery you are allowing the Good Gardener to beautify the garden. In order to beautify the garden, there is tilling of the soil, pruning of the various plants, and protecting the young sprouts from the various elements. As this analogy is applied to you and your world, this can be somewhat painful, for evolution is somewhat painful to allow for more growth.

We have been speaking on mastering the spirit poisons – small steps to maintaining our divine connection to overcome the animal tendencies. Last week we spoke on anxiety; this week we will continue on this line of thinking towards becoming more patient. A child, unknowing of the benefits one can gain through extended waiting, cries for immediate satisfaction. A child is unknowing of the time-factor that must take place in every situation. Likewise, many times adults take on some of this juvenile behavior in being impatient.

Your ancestors had gone only on instinct, without pause to consider time. As the world now moves with its technology, mortals are believing they can cheat time – thereby feeding into the spirit poison of impatience. The mature adult knows that little is gained without careful planning, concentration, and energy to work.

Most good fortune that accidentally befalls mortals is not entirely appreciated and, in fact, they feel that it is owed to them. Those that are downcast by bad fortune are believing to be in the midst of being unlucky. A mature child of the living Father is knowing that every good thing comes from Father and is in close connection, regardless. The mature child of God also knows that bad fortune is but a lesson – and again, is thankful, regardless.

Impatience is not to be defined lightly, for it is most prevalent; it is the cause of many accidents – ill health, divorce, and isolation. Impatience should be a different definition to you than possibly to your unbelieving mortal friends/fellows. You, my students, are standing at the beginning of eternity and know that this life is just the start of a long and adventurous career to come. And you, my students, are also a little impatient when it comes to grasping spiritual ideas. Your good intentions are known on high and yet, some of you would chastise yourselves for being slow.

It is said: “The race for perfection is on.” This is true, but my friends, you must pace yourselves; maintain balance and variety in life to continue on with the race. One who would be burdened by impatience is likely to stumble or be delayed.

We can each see, as mature children of the living Father, that we are only at the beginning of eternity. Our path is well lit, yes. All our good things are from Father. As well are our seemingly bad things lessons to be learned. To you who seek improvement upon your level of patience and tolerance, I would again recommend stillness, as always. As well, I recommend a balanced study and a rich prayer life.

Tonight I would recommend to you: Having control over impatience would be to begin a journal or log of some sort, to clarify your impatient thoughts. To put your impatience on paper tends to draw the attention away from the time-factor and makes your dilemma somewhat smaller. This method also works for anxiety, depression, fear, and anger.

To begin a journal of your thoughts, is to ask questions. To ask questions, is to receive answers. Whether your answers are from Father, or me, or another Teacher, is not for me to say – but I can tell you that this is a beginning of clarified thinking; it is helpful in remaining teachable, and brings closer communion with our Father. Yes, I would ask that you begin a journal of thoughts and feelings. Are there any questions?

ROLAND: Abraham, I have an opportunity tonight to speak to some people via the radio; it will be at 10:00 tonight and I am sure you are already aware of it. I guess my question would be is there any kind of advice you might give me that would assist me in promoting the Father's business with this opportunity to communicate with a number of people who may be listening?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. One moment. I am told that this event has already been prearranged. You have been well trained for this evening. It is my information that you, in combination with the man that is your son-in-law, work well together and bring out the best in one another. I am told to say to you – talk with this man as if it is only you and him having a discussion alone. Your combination of energy and enthusiasm will shed light on those topics you have planned. One thing I advise would be to make it simple and keep it as real as possible – close to the earth. Let your listeners know that the spiritual life is real and a great enhancement to everyday living. Does this help? (Roland: Very much. Thank you so much.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

ROINDA: I have a question, Abraham. Mostly I just need guidance because I have been having a lot of anxiety lately. I just need to know – rather than through my prayers, maybe you could give me some ideas of what I can do in my day-to-day life so I can get passed all these past issues that keep coming up in my life. Just how do I go about my day dealing with things that come up, issues that come up, which cause this anxiety?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. My understanding is that you are experiencing the same changes as many adults do upon entering parenthood. To be a parent, one finds that they are a part of something greater than themselves. They find that they would seem to be somewhat fading out while giving over to the growth of a child. To be a parent you are not 'just you' anymore. In these faded lines, it is difficult to understand who you were before the child, and who you are now. As your child grows, you are once again taken through your own childhood; and yes, these issues of the past, present themselves. This is indeed for a purpose and does unify your experiences that make up your being. To be the steward of a child is the best way to conceptualize your Father in heaven. To view yourself not just as 'you,' but a connection to another living breathing being, is to see your Father's extended self as a real significant part of you now. I can't say that this parenting experience will be simple; all I can assure you of is that you are quite close to Father and are entirely qualified to make decisions that extend from the spirit's point of view. When you act from your spirit, that should indeed give you rest. You are charged with a great responsibility. I can say that Nathaniel will grow to carry on your work. I would encourage you to keep praying and attempt to find time for your journal of thoughts. I would ask that you know that Nathaniel is an extension of you, yes, but you still are the Father's child - a child of God, your own distinct separate being who is loved completely. Look for opportunities to find serenity apart from your home life, a short amount of time would do you well to contemplate your status as a daughter of the living God. Does this help?

ROINDA: It does. I have one more question. One of the reasons I am having such anxiety is I feel like in my lifetime I have not lived an exactly moral life, but how do I teach my son morality without feeling like such a hypocrite. I have made a lot of mistakes in my life. I don't want to teach him things that I feel like I have made the mistakes of doing, but yet I know I need to teach him.

ABRAHAM: You are aware of your mistakes, and that is almost enough not to repeat them. Forget not that Nathaniel will also teach you. An innocent child, naturally endowed with love and acceptance, is a great teacher. Worry not of your past mistakes; as I said, these are your lessons; and now that you are aware of them, they are under your control to be modified. You may be destined to not repeat your past mistakes, but I cannot guarantee that you will not make other mistakes. This is only natural with parenthood. Your mistakes are well understood, and your child will always know that you acted from love. Does this help? (Roinda: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. One more question?

If there are no pressing questions, I would take my leave. Know that my love for you grows continually. Remember to begin a journal if time is permitting. My love is with you always. Until next week, shalom.

[Editor's sidenote of interest: At the time of this editing, Nathaniel, the newborn child of Richard (James) and Rosane (Roinda) Coleman had grown up to become an accomplished and world-renown professional rock climber. As noted in Wikipedia: Nathaniel Coleman (born January 1, 1997) is an American professional climber who won the silver medal in men's combined sport climbing at the Tokyo 2020 World Olympics.]

Words of Comfort | Fear of Death - Our Divine Self Speaks To Our Human Self

Back

[As we were settling down to begin tonight's lesson, we received a call to Faye and Nina (Ellen and Ellanor - mother and daughter) revealing that Nina's father had died. Naturally upset, Faye and Nina left. This was the first time in almost three years that Nina did not receive the transmission of Abraham's weekly group lesson. Faye has transcribed every week's lesson since 1991. Calvin took Nina's role as transmission-receiver for the group on this evening's lesson. As a group, we united in prayer for their behalf and comfort. For further explanation, Teacher Ham was the group's first Teacher in 1991 and 1992, under Abraham's direction.]

Welcome, my friends and my long-time associates. I am HAM. I am pleased and honored to be present this evening, and wish to convey my condolences, personally, to Ellanor and Ellen at this time of the passing of their loved one. It also brings me joy to see your united love and strength in their behalf.

We are privileged to some events before you as mortals; and of this event, I choose to address you. Ellanor, my daughter, these times of sorrow are understood. We send our united prayers in your behalf. This time will bring an increase of peace and joy as families are brought together and strengthened in the sharing of love, which love unifies all wounded hearts. Look well, my daughter, to your own strength and how you can show Father's strength to those who may not understand. Ellanor, you have performed an utmost and outstanding role as our group transmission-receiver for our beloved friend Abraham, and we say to you, well done, well done.

Ellen, my daughter, be at peace with yourself in this passing. Have no remorse, for there is none necessary. Take joy in your continued sharing with your daughter and others of your family, in exemplifying the strength which you most certainly are. I also wish to thank you, personally, for your never-ending support to your daughter and to this group in your transcribing of these messages – these lessons. Be at peace, know that you are loved. Know that Father's work is at hand, and know that all who want life are received on the Mansion Worlds in great joy and peace – especially in comparison to the hardships endured in this life.

I also thank you, my friends and my students in this Woods Cross Group, for your dedication to this Teaching Mission. You have surpassed the expectations of even yourselves and have surmounted your obstacles. I commend you. I give you my continuing support in this, our Father's work, to forge on in this Correcting Time of our beloved Sovereign, Michael, on this world of His birth and human life. As he would say: carry on, my friends. Remember your worth as a child of God, a child of the Father--the very Source of all that is--and accept your place at His table. Farewell, my children, my friends, farewell.

I am ABRAHAM. I am in deep gratitude for my brother in his sharing with you this evening. I also am in agreement with his words, wholeheartedly. My love extends to you, Ellanor and Ellen, my daughters, my friends.

It is yet an uncomfortable occurrence in your mortal living when you encounter the loss of a loved one. And for those who are not so enlightened, this uncomfortableness is often compounded to confusion and even hysteria. We wish to enlighten this world as to the natural occurrence of death – that our mortal brothers and sisters will perceive the beauty of extended life.

Experience on this world is challenged by its many hardships, trials, sufferings, and sorrows, yes; but to the joy-filled and Spirit-led, this life is blissful and exciting, even in the face of these trials. This, my friends, is a part of the great Teaching Mission, to help alleviate this world of its fear of death, and of the unknown and erring expectations of 'after death.'

Your world's traditions and religions have taught much confusion concerning this subject ('death'), and mankind does live in fear of punishment for their errors and imperfections. Such teaching has caused much fear and anxiety among Father's children, worldwide; not only fear of God's perceived judgments while yet living on this world but of His never-ending judgments and punishments that each person feels may be their lot after this world.

I say, this vengeful God is not so! This is a result of the 'rebellion' and attitudes of those who perpetuated Lucifer's design. While being cut off from the goodness of God--notwithstanding the many emissaries sent forth to this world from on high to enlighten--this world has feared God. And people in power have used this fear to keep society under control and to perpetuate their own nefarious plans.

This Teaching Mission is the dawning of a new day, a day in which this world will be enlightened as to those caretakers of it - who do not promote the erroneous concepts of fear but who stand by diligently waiting for a break in the consciousness of man's understanding, and to show forth Father's love, kindness, and mercy. All who reach death, even in mischief and fear, are caressed by Father's loving attributes and are made to feel hope and security in their place, in His family, His loving kingdom.

Michael has planted the seeds on your world of love and a correct understanding of our Father. Not only did He teach this, but as the man, Jesus, He exemplified it, He lived it, and this world has benefited, immensely. Still though, the over-shadowing of fear remains in man's consciousness, deeply embedded from thousands of years of tradition. However, enough seeds were sown and made place in the hearts of so many that the hope of a loving kind Father is yet alive. These seeds now are beginning to sprout, to grow, and to provide a strong tree of strength, with shade of comfort to those cowered in fear.

You, my friends, are those who will help as sturdy trees to those around you needing Father's love. Take strength in this opportunity, which is your divine right. Your true divine self is, in fact, 'Father' in human form. Each child of mortal flesh has a divine Father within. However, most allow their mortal selves to suppress their divine selves, so much that their divine self is almost non-existent to their consciousness.

This great awakening is to show these children their divine selves, and that 'love' is the nurturing force/energy which sprouts into their own sturdy-branched tree. You are aware of this and can see this clearly. Your united consciousness makes it easier for your brothers and sisters who hover in fear.

Father does not wait to punish, no, he awaits to love. Michael's work is Father's work. In our last few lessons on fear, depression, anxiety, and confusion, we have endeavored to help you understand this more clearly. It is my information that you have taken this to heart and have understood. Allow your divine self, your Father within, to give you strength, balance, and security in this understanding - that you might go forward with courage and joy in sharing this good news to your fellows.

I am aware of hardships that are in each of your daily living – and I say to you, be not overcome by these hardships. Let hardship opportunities bring you to your Father and take a tighter hold of His hand as He gives you the strength to understand His purpose. I am confident in Calvin's transmission ability to now answer a few questions.

LAREEN: Abraham, you talk about lessons and learning from them. Are some of us more stubborn than others? and that's the reason the lessons come a little harder? or drag on a little longer? Is there a specific way to listen? to more clearly hear, instead of making it so hard on ourselves?

ABRAHAM: Yes. You might say some are more stubborn – meaning some are more inclined to figure their problems' solutions on their own without coming forward in humility and asking for Father's understanding. This is not bad but is the natural course of human nature in a fearful world. Is there a way to realize Father's assistance more clearly? Of course! It is not a hard way; it is very simple. It is only hard in breaking the years of pattern of worry, the years of pattern of fear – fear of loss, fear of being left out. Yes, all these things are showing lack of accepting Father's total guiding and capable hand in any situation. I suggest in these moments to take a few moments off to relax your mind, let frustrations settle, and reflect on something beautiful which does help calm the emotions. And when calm, think not of Father as 'way out there' who may or may not be hearing you – but picture in your mind He is the other half of you. He is not 'out there,' He is inside. You need not travel anywhere, or send your mind anywhere to reach Him. He is the other half, the divine part of you. And with that thought, imagine that divine self-talking to your suppressed self, and listen to yourself talking to yourself – have trust in that guidance. Do not expect the 'bells and whistles' as was earlier put, but expect peace; not even expect, but enjoy peace. Is that helping? (LaReen: Yes, very very much so. Thank you.)

ANTHONY: I would like to introduce you to my friend, Allison. This is her first time here. She may have a question.

ABRAHAM: Welcome. It is my pleasure to always to receive new students, many of which I am already familiar with, as I am with you, Allison.

ALLISON: Abraham, I have many questions, but tonight I will just listen.

ABRAHAM: Feel free to draw your questions before your friend, Anthony, during your daily work, for he is very capable of helping a friend in need, and feel free to attend this class always. Your Father is your teacher; others only provide words of consideration. Your Father is within. Welcome. (Allison: Thank you.)

MIRIAM: Abraham, I would like to say, what an outstanding lesson. Not since Don's accident have I been so much in the flow and current of the reality of these lessons. You know, asking for what I needed guidance in, and being shown that. I'm a little overwhelmed that that's the subject matter of your lesson this evening, you know, about the religion part, and all of that. I didn't know that was deep down. I thought that I had taken care of it by taking care of it with my mind. The lessons this weekend, showing me the areas that I find unworthiness, have just been very, very appreciated. And the lessons, you know, I can't always understand them; but I want to say, I can't tell you enough how much they mean to me. I was just wondering – in coming out of that awareness, if you have any advice or guidance into what I am doing wrong – if anything?

ABRAHAM: Miriam, I thoroughly enjoy your enthusiasm for learning and figuring out answers to your perplexities. You do well, my daughter, and are only sometimes overly anxious to assimilate these new learnings. It is okay to let time settle these realities into your very being – and always does Father arrange situations which give you that experience needed whereby you can assimilate your understanding. Allow this time. Do not be too impatient for a quick understanding. Those things you take into your soul are best seeded there when carefully placed. So, be at peace in your anxious exuberance for truth and learning. You do very well, and I enjoy your enthusiasm very much. Is this helping?

MIRIAM: (Laughing.) Yes, Abraham. With the peace I seek with myself and Don, could you give me just a little bit of guidance with that? And this is helping me a lot, and I know what to do with me, but with peace between 'me and Don,' could you just maybe shed a little light?

ABRAHAM: Yes. All you can do is to stand up for your truth, lovingly, and let the dust settle where it does. It is not your responsibility for where the dust settles. Yes, there is merit in fine-tuning our delivery skills of presenting our truth – this too takes time and experience, situation after situation, conflict after conflict. Be not dismayed or have feelings of unworthiness over your conduct in these times, but look to each time as an experiential step towards the next one, and have hope and joy in a more harmonious outcome down the road. Is this helping? (Miriam: Oh yes. Yes. Very much. Thank you.) Abraham: One more question? [none.]

I am pleased with your decision to remain this evening and receive this lesson and words of comfort. I ask for you to think more this week on your journaling, and with tonight's lesson, add 'journaling from yourself to yourself.' My love and peace go with you each, as also with Ellen and Ellanor and their family, this week. Shalom.

In Our Experience We Are Writing Our Autobiography

I am ABRAHAM. How blessed am I to be in the midst of such friendship. How honored am I to at times accompany you on your walk through mortal life. I am overfilled with such gratitude to our Father for my particular assignment. Day by day I grow to love you each a little more. So again I say: Welcome, my greetings to you. How wonderful it has been to view your unification! What a fine example of truth, beauty and goodness, in action!

Last week I asked for an assignment that would help you step into the role of one who has advanced in self-mastery, to consciously step aside from human thought, actions and habits, into a more divine mind – coordinating experiential lessons into values and meanings. In your journaling, you are exercising your understanding on allowing the divine side to lead the human side. We are well on our way to putting self-mastery into action, not just mere good intentions or wish-fulfillment, no, but actual exercises one can do to rally those divine forces for good.

In these last weeks, we have each experienced all levels of spirit poisons. We have been defeated by some, yes, and we have stood victorious over others. And I can say, without your experience there is no unification of understanding experience and the gaining of values and meanings. Most can say that experience has taught them one thing or another. Some have become embittered by bad experience; some have been made better.

You see, in the 'experience' is your autobiography. In your experience you are writing your eternal autobiography; there is always a beginning, and dramatic events do unfold, yes. Pain can prove to be unbearable, and healing can promote worship. Your autobiography must have certain elements to create meaning; therefore, you must endure the passages of time whether it is joy-filled or painful.

As we each experience, we add a page to our book. The story is unfolding and some can be traumatized or scarred. Some can hope to rewrite their painful chapters in mortal living, and some may just set the story aside in favor of unawareness. I can say to you, your experience fills the pages of your book, your story. Your experiences are valuable in the meaning of the story; it is inevitable that your story must be written – you must experience. I would say those in favor of attaining self-mastery will perhaps understand the stories a little sooner and be less afraid of filling the pages of experience.

My friends, you are each spirit-led individuals. Take comfort in knowing your story is ongoing, in progress, and everlasting. You must each take comfort in knowing – that though some experience 'at the time' brings discomfort or pain, that as you continue to fill your book you can look back at the value of your experience and move forward with confidence and courage. On a collective level, you are adding to the autobiography of the world, the universe, the Supreme Being. All experience is valuable; that experience which is lost holds no value.

This week, I would ask that you continue in your exercise to connect with your divine self. Know that your experience is filling the pages of your book to create meanings and values. And know that the autobiography you write goes towards the story of the 'universe as a whole.' Know this, my children, that in time all meanings and values are unified to help you find your way to our Father. Have you questions?

MIRIAM: Abraham, my sister Elena is here tonight for the first time – we welcome her to join in the questions if she has any. As you know, she is visiting from Albuquerque, New Mexico.

ELENA:Hi Abraham. I do have questions. Like Miriam, I always have questions. I have read your transcripts Miriam sends me. I just want to tell you how much I like you. Apart from the other things, I just really like you! There are actually two questions that I have. One, is if you could just maybe help me a little with a perspective on my marriage, and its end, and viewing it from some place of a better understanding? The second, I have trouble with going from a weaker, naive place to a powerful loving place, and to making that bridge in a great wonderful manner. I think that is probably enough for you to get the gist of things.

ABRAHAM: Yes, understood. I like you too, Elena. My daughter, it has been such an honor for us to have you working for us on our side; yourself and your family have been a blessed addition to us in this Mission. My understanding of your past marital relationship is a page of experience in your story. There are numerous meanings that add to your spiritual advancement. I can say, the meanings will not all come at once, no; to gather these stones of meaning and values one must walk the beaches of mortal living. You are somewhat understanding of the value of your marriage and yet, still look back with some regret, not quite fully understanding what happened. I can assure you that this time spent with this mortal was indeed valuable for you both. Nothing is lost; however, there has been growth. Elena, my daughter, can you not see where Father has brought you? Can you understand that you already possess a loving power? As you grow to believe with wholeheartedness that you are Father's child you will surely stumble into this graceful place of confidence. Jesus was a gentle man, and could feel compassion for the smallest of God's children while deciding the important affairs of a Universe. All power comes from Father. I would ask you to work on your understanding of 'you as a daughter of the living God.' Know that He loves you completely – as if you, Elena His child, were His only daughter. You do well. Is this helping? (Elena: Thank you so very much.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, in writing this journal, I think in my mind that you are wanting us to get on paper, transfer these thoughts out of our head and onto paper where we can maybe see more of a reality of this divine presence within – that we can see the difference between the two. Is that correct? (Abraham: Correct.) Calvin: Are you wanting us to go back into our lives' past and write things? or just kind of write questions and the thoughts we have that are ongoing?

ABRAHAM: Yes. I would desire you to lay out thoughts on paper to move closer to the divine self. I would have you know this is beneficial in many ways. But yes, to recognize a conscious shift from human to divine thinking is our goal for now. Another question?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, yesterday another soul by the name of John Denver graduated from this mortal life. He believed that music was an international language, and he certainly had an effect on the world through his music and his humor, such as in the movie 'Oh God,' which was really very well done. Did you happen to see it, Father Abraham? [laughter.] And if so, would you comment, please?

ABRAHAM: I am familiar with him, yes. I am understanding him to be a spirit-filled individual. Yes, he did assist the world's people in turning towards their own Father-within, through music. It is well known that music does soothe the soul. It will become better known that some musical notes have a like-vibrational harmonical tone to the various system circuits; it will become better known that certain types of music may ring familiar, due to connections with these circuits. Yes, in our Mission there are many who have served; and there are many still yet to serve. Does this answer?

RACHEL: Yes it does, because I felt like he did provide a lot of pleasure, and some spiritual growth for the general public. Thank you.

ABRAHAM: Yes, certainly. I agree with you, Rachel. You're welcome. One more question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, about the Urantia Book, I'm in understanding this information was revealed in the 1930s and 1940s. You know how you are talking about experience tonight, and that its part of our story. It's the lessons we learn, like in Ellen and Ellanor's experience this past week – the death of Ellanor's father – they had immediately experienced life's lessons. And from what I was getting from what the Urantia Book was saying was that we're really lucky to have experience, you know, and that our personality is such an incredible thing. It is so individual. I was getting from that piece – it was saying that the experience of mortals is such a cool thing; and like you put it, together it is like helping in the perfection of all the other celestial beings – we have got the experience and imperfection, and they have got the perfection but without experience. When you put us together, they (our celestials) are condescending to us, so-to-speak, and we (as mortals) ascend to them. Do you know what I am saying? Am I getting that right in this understanding?

ABRAHAM: Yes. One moment. I am understanding, yes. There are those on high who can coordinate experience to best serve you as an ascending child, and the Supreme Being, the God of time. The ...

TR: Oh no. I don't want to get into anything difficult here. I hear something like – Triune concept. [laughter.] Oh please. I have no idea. I don't want to go into anything difficult. [more laughter.] Okay, I'll try this...

ABRAHAM: ...The Triune concept is indeed a concept that would descend many levels to your own mortal level of understanding. Perhaps I can say, you, as a material being growing from experience into divine consciousness, could perhaps represent the Son becoming in awareness of divine values. And all exterior existence represents the Spirit. And your Father, as a Universal Father who has created all, to serve the universes in awareness and coordination of these two; this is a Triune coordination. Yes, I am in agreement with you, Miriam. It is a 'cool thing,' yes! [much laughter.]

I am so delighted to have our friendships, our diverse group of personalities, to add to the experience that writes our Universal biography. My love is with you every day. Until next week, shalom.

In Our Experiencing Life Take Note of the Lighter Side of Living

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. I am honored to meet with you again. I always am joy-filled to assist where I can. I do regret that I cannot give to you my vision of what I have seen occur on this world's spiritual advancement for I am limited in what I can speak about until such time you are prepared to receive. By your experience will your questions become more advanced, and then I can reveal more information. Your experience also allows your own personal Father to unify your meanings and values to receive higher concepts concerning the kingdom of heaven.

I have this week endeavored to spend time with you to aid in your understanding of the experience of writing your eternal autobiography and contributing to the world's cosmic destiny. Throughout the week, I have attempted to show you that experience need not go to extremes to contain value, no, for in our Father's plan there is balance, there is learning, there is rest.

In our lessons on experience, I would have you know that in the world's present status there need not be so much pain endured to experience divine values and meanings; your purpose is not to be one of misery, no, but one with an educational balance.

This world, being welcomed back into the fold of the universe, experiences increased assistance via the circuits. It is becoming well known that many individuals will grasp spiritual concepts at an increased rate. The world's spiritual knowledge is not accidental, no. Father has His divine forces working constantly to ensure the world's well-being and future destiny within the universe.

Each of you as individuals, may feel more inclined to rely upon spiritual power than those totally relying on material sources. You, my students who endeavor to hold fast to faith and learn these spiritual lessons, will be the upholders of this new light. Those that would be responsible for upholding the light will find themselves endowed with needed tools, new gifts. Self-mastery would be one such gift that you would clothe yourself with in helping to bring the new light to others.

To constantly rejoice in your own spiritual connection gives opportunity for others to look in on what you have found. You, my friends who endeavor to uphold the new spiritual light, will experience various ranges of energy that would become familiar over time. A confident knowing will be your countenance as you go about doing the Father's business.

I mean not to say that this is only for a privileged few, no! Those who endeavor to uphold the new light will indeed find themselves endowed with spiritual power from on high – and this too is a page in our eternal autobiography; this too, is just experience that will at some time connect to create new divine meanings and values.

Father, in His deep and abiding love for you, His children of Urantia, grants to you the abilities that keeps you reaching for those gifts that reveal to you the rewards of your diligent effort. Father, who is concerned about all that goes on, knows of your continued struggles and is offering you the proposal to take up His spiritual tools and help Him to reveal the new light.

The urgency of our message is upstepped to provide relief to those who only experience half of the mortal living sojourn. Many continue to dwell in darkness unknowing of the light that awaits them. Many expect this darkness to be their lot, and are hopeless of escaping it. I would say to you, this darkness is a reality and perhaps a needed experience, yes, but this is only half of the mortal experience. You are entirely missing the point of existence without the lighter side of living – the side of spiritual joy, and comfort, and knowing that all is well and watched over.

Bad experience need not be the only pages that fill your eternal autobiography, no; there is always a more complete story to tell when one has embraced goodness, truth and beauty, humor and love. Good experience is more of a reality than is bad. To wade through the waters of adversity and emerge with confident-knowing and producing worshipful-rejoicing, is more our Father's plan, yes. All experience should be viewed through the eyes of Father in a knowing expectation that He is in control. Father is fully overseeing our path to Him. Have you questions?

INERA: When you talked about spiritual help from on high, are there days – like when I have been feeling very tired, I know a lot of the air quality in the valley, and the noise, and the extra traffic, etc., – then are we slowed down spiritually to kind of regroup physically, mentally, and spiritually, in order to prepare for what's coming? I say this because this is what seems to be happening with me. Or, am I just not living right? Should I be doing something different? Lately it seems I am just really tired, and it makes me a little grumpy with the kids, and I am not being myself?

ABRAHAM: If I am in understanding, I would say those from on high would not purposely encumber your physical well-being to make a point, no; rather, over-stimulation of material things would chance to draw your energy from you. Your constant 'needed attention on various material events' drains you of your needed energy to put a divine twist in all you do. We have endeavored to show the value of stillness practice (or meditation) to regain that lost energy needed to bring back the focus to those things that really matter. You are due to take some personal time to be alone, mind to mind, with your personal indwelling Father, yes. It is difficult in this world where peace does not seem to exist, but I can only emphasize that through every individual is how peace will begin to dominate over chaos. Is this helping? (Inera: Yes. Thank you very much.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

ASHLEY: Abraham, I was planning on moving to Park City in less than a couple weeks. I don't know right now if that's what I am supposed to be doing. I am actually confused on where I am supposed to be going right now in my life. I was just wondering if you could give me any advice?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I am aware that anywhere you go – there, your Father will go before you. Do you see, these material decisions are yours to make, and I've no doubt you are certainly qualified to consider the well-being of everyone when making decisions. You must know that your indwelling Father would always go before you in all you do. Understand that you are a child of God experiencing the mortal journey. And as you experience, there are lessons – sometimes hard lessons, yes, but nevertheless, Father goes before you. I am unable to help on your decision but I can assure you that you are a spiritually led individual who is indeed a candidate for upholding the new light. Know this, my daughter, your experience up to this point has made you into the wonderful individual that you are today – you emanate strength, truth, and love in all you do. I would ask that you also put time into stillness practice. Is this helping? (Ashley: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, let's think for a few minutes about the six-thousand scientists that are members of the US Geological Survey that are assembled here in Salt Lake City for their work sessions. I was quite interested in the article that was published Sunday about the comet that hit in Nevada three-hundred-seventy million years ago when Nevada was just an ocean. From what they said in the paper, it was one-hundred-twenty miles in diameter where it had hit. I remember this really well because it was close to Rachel, Nevada. Are you monitoring any of these Geological Survey meetings? or anything with these scientists when they are studying these discoveries? Do you suppose someday they might be able to figure out how Christ Michael actually created this planet?

ABRAHAM: An understanding of science is not my area of expertise. However, other Teachers, such as Rayson, would indeed frequently discuss these events. The Life Carriers are also helping to shed light on what the planet needs, to live here successfully. Scientists will not prove that the creation of the world was ever a divine occurrence. Only those scientists with faith will hold a more complete picture, yes, and that is also a ministry being promoted at these events. Is this answering? (Rachel: It helps, and I thank you.) Abraham: You are very welcome, Rachel.

My love for you is always and ever present with you, daily. I would continue to minister to you each, personally, this week. Continue writing in your journals and continue to bravely face experience to add to your story. Until next week, shalom.

Holding Back For Self-Protection. Being Endowed With Power From On High

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you, my friends. I am once again honored to be in your presence. I would express my gratitude for your trust and kindness for me. Each of our weekly lessons bring us closer to self-mastery. All your experience helps you to understand these lessons. Our Father assists us in unifying the lessons and experience towards gaining self-mastery. Common is it for us to give tonight's particular lesson at this stage of understanding self-mastery.

You, my mortal friends, are knowing of those things concerning truth, beauty, and goodness. You are rightly amazed when Father shows His works in your average daily living. Each individual at their best is spirit led. Most individuals feel truth to the core of their being and can understand the will of God. Mortals can understand those basic principles Father teaches: love, kindness, devotion, faith, service, and tolerance. There are many mortals who are understanding of these basic truths, yes; and yet, feel not that liberty to live them; there is a holding back, there is a self-protection.

In the days of old, neighbor would dare to tend to his neighbor without expectation of anything in return; there were acts of service done out of plain and simple love for one another. Yes it is true, that those that have gone before you were somewhat more emotional when providing service to another, but always was this the effects of following their heart. Love was the goal. Love went before pride, material wealth, and self-protection.

Yes, your ancestors were somewhat more prone to trust their fellows. Naive? Possibly. But could you look upon a small village you would see each one helping the other carry water, hunting, building, and child-care. As evolution takes its toll, trust has dwindled – and with that, the walls of self-protection were formed, and holding back was the style.

You, my friends, know and understand spiritual liberty. Still are you shy to act upon your spiritual ideals. Yes, there is a holding back, a self-protection. There is a fear of rejection, a concern that one might appear ‘out of sorts’ with your fellows. Do you see, in this, you are not taking full advantage of your spiritual liberty? It is in my knowledge that individuals who have departed from Urantia would regretfully express: “I wish I would have loved more, lived more, laughed more, and shared more.”

In being bringers of the new light, you are endowed with spiritual power from on high. To squelch this is withholding, a holding back, and causes you to miss out on so much of Father's meaning for living the mortal life. To believe yourself to be not made for exposing your total self, and that you would rather not be subject to any rejection, you are then missing half the mortal learning experience.

To always maintain a quiet composure, a closed heart, is not taking full advantage of that spiritual freedom Father has bestowed upon you. The Master feared not any rejection but went about freely affecting people with love and joy without stopping to see the results. That was His nature – to be about the Father's business with full spiritual liberty, doing what He could to uplift those He met.

Christ's life is sometimes portrayed as tragic, and many know not the joy of His ministry. Many times had He supplied the humor to His fellow apostles to just view the beauty of their smiles; and many times did He make light of a serious happening in effort to transform the negative energy of those that He knew were troubled. Jesus expected nothing from His ministry of joy and ‘being kind just to be kind.’ He found great pleasure in extending forth love. He had no expectations for receiving anything back in return.

Could you imagine Jesus, in his closeness with Father, to be one to hold back for fear of rejection or hurt feelings? No. You, my friends, also will know as we delve deeper into self-mastery, that holding back is a deterrent to the purpose. As you continue in your journals you find that Father is immediate. In your understanding, you find His upholding to be a constant. With the continued closeness with Father, you need to realize that holding back, or self-protection, or shyness, does not align with self-mastery.

Do you see how your holding back of the love you have to give – your distinct personalities you have to share, and your wisdom that could help others – would cause a holding back of Father, a distancing from Father? To live life to the fullest, without holding back, is like a decision of one who has been diagnosed with a deadly disease whose time is short on Earth, and takes every advantage of interaction with whom he comes in contact with.

I would ask that you review your own hearts and minds to discover if you are holding back of yourself, your personality, your love. Is there an over-amount of self-protection? Is that feeling of: "If I give and am rejected, I would not wish to give any more," a part of your demeanor?

This week, attempt to see how in holding back of what you are, is there an actual holding back of the Father wherein He is kept at a distance? Continue to write in your journals and attempt to view conflicts from a purely spiritual point of view, knowing that all that we do is a lesson. A few questions?

NORWOOD: Abraham, I would like to go over something that you talked about last week in the lesson to get a little clarification. I will read this to you. I am quoting what I thought you said - (quote.) "I am limited in what I can speak about until such time you are prepared to receive. By your experience will your questions become more advanced, and then I can reveal more information." (un-quote.) Can you talk about that a little bit, and expound on that. That seems to pique my interest a bunch right now.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. My meaning was - I can receive permission to 'reveal' more advanced spiritual realities when you are prepared to receive. Is this answering? (Norwood: I am not sure.)

CALVIN: I'd bet he is talking about the 'receive' part versus the 'reveal' part, in that sentence. I gather what you are asking is, did he mean: "till we get more understanding, then I can tell you."

NORWOOD: I'm understanding that he is saying, 'When we live more and experience more, then we ask more questions. Our questions will become a higher level.' I understand that is what he said there. I think what I am asking is - Okay, what kind of questions then? And I'm guessing that won't be revealed until that time, right?

ABRAHAM: As you discussed earlier regarding the imbalances of certain Mission groups, there needs to be mental preparation; and also, preparation on a soul level in order for you to accept higher concepts without causing fanaticism. Yes, your seriousness for learning spiritual realities while in the flesh and maintaining balance... (TR: I'm having a hard time getting the rest of it.) Abraham: I am saying, that to maintain balance in the spiritual and material will be your indicator for forthcoming enlightenment.

NORWOOD: I understand. Would that be individually? or as a group - in these group-lessons here?

ABRAHAM: I am speaking of in our 'group lessons' for now. The Thought Adjuster is more familiar with your personal lessons, yes. As I have said before, we on the Teaching staff wish to bestow upon you more responsibility in disseminating the new light. We understand your surface-level devotion. In our group lessons, we are working on a more deep level of commitment to living a spiritual life - not in the formation of an organized religion, no! but an Earthly understanding of how spirituality is as needed for a healthy spiritual well-balance - just as is food and water to the well-balance of the physical. Do you see? I am not to make prophecies, or predict the future, or to counsel on the right way to live, no. My assignment is to make 'spirituality' an everyday reality. We must maintain common sense for our foothold to stay strong. I mean not to entice you towards advancing spiritually without the time needed for a sound grounding and making sense out of our lessons through normal everyday experience. However, I do mean to make the best use of our time together towards taking the new light out into the world – and to do so, with balance. Is this answering?

NORWOOD: Yes, it is. I would just like to tell you that you have answered that question well. I have a really good understanding now what you meant. In fact, I personally feel that you are advancing my spirituality. I naturally want to advance my spirituality as fast as I possibly can, but I see your advice here. The more I understand the Father's teachings, the more I can disseminate them through my life and through my actions. Thank you.

ABRAHAM: Yes, Norwood, you already exhibit those wonderful spiritual qualities in your daily living. There is a balance and understanding you bring to those that you are in contact with, yes. Thank you, Norwood.

ROLAND: Vincent and I have been invited to attend the Urantia Foundations' Trustee gathering in Chicago, on November 14. We have both been struggling with the issue of how best to prepare ourselves to convey what might be given by the Teaching Mission to these people who are rather opposed to it. Is there anything that you could give us as far as a way to prepare ourselves best – attitude, readings, anything?

ABRAHAM: My information is that you could explain your position, and at that immediate time it will appear to have been futile; and yet, I can assure you that seeds are being planted to relay to the Foundation that this Mission is in full force. This Mission goes with or without their help. This Mission does indeed use the Urantia Book as a tool – and that is not even under their control. It matters not whether they endorse our Mission or not, we will put the Urantia Book into action. And with help from the material existence and the spiritual, we will see Urantia be brought into Light and Life. We hide not our light under a bushel, no. Our Mission is living and active. The Urantia Book is being lived and not hidden for an elite few to enjoy, no. I would ask you each to maintain a calm heart and a clear head for receiving those beneficial words Father might have to say to them. Your humorous countenance may help them to accept that this Mission is fully functioning and that it stands for truth, beauty, and goodness. Is this answering?

ROLAND: Yes. Thank you. In reality, we just need to show up and keep a clear mind to allow us to speak the words that are Father's.

ABRAHAM: Yes, yes. This Mission has almost come about in the same way the Urantia Book had, and I am certain that there were those back then who were against such a liberal book. Another question?

INERA: Abraham, last week you mentioned that I should stop worrying so much about the material things that puts a little twist on me, and which sidetracks me. And, that you would be with us all this week helping us. So with that said, do you know where my purse is? [laughter.] I can't get into my house. I can't get into my car. I have no checkbook. It was stolen.

ABRAHAM: I am checking. [laughter.] It is a difficult situation. I do wish I knew the answer. I would refer you to a better source, your indwelling Father Fragment, who can give you rest if nothing else. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, concerning the Teaching Mission conference next year in Nashville which is planned in conjunction with the World Peace Concert: You said that you appreciated that we came to you for help on a particular issue in our last Conference, and I think we need your input here again. Would it be your wish to separate the two conference events completely? or should we integrate the Teaching Mission with the World Peace Concert?

ABRAHAM: I can only answer that it matters not to us who dwell in spirit form. We will minister where we can. I am limited in what I can say, but I can assure you that trusting in Father and His good works will make what is supposed to happen - happen. Sorry. One more question?

RACHEL: Well Father Abraham, did you hear my poem I read to the group earlier today? the one I wrote fifty years ago? I asked for the group to analyze me to see if I had grown spiritually since that time. Now I am asking you.

ABRAHAM: I did, and I can say, even then you were a daughter reaching for Father, Father's higher concepts. Your hand wrote the poem while your mind had not fully grasped its meaning. I would say yes, indeed, there has been growth. And also, there has been only one indwelling Father Fragment that has escorted you through your mortal life. You always had excellent communion with Him. A poem written fifty years ago through the urgings of the spirit would still be the same today, with the same spirit. Do you see? This personality-association is familiar to you. You have indeed traveled with Him throughout this lifetime and will continue on until that day in which you become 'one.' Know that you, my daughter, are thought of in a most loving and cherished manner by your indwelling Father.

I am slipping. I would continue to help throughout the week. Call on me. I am growing in love more each day for you. Until next week, shalom.

Direct Contact With Father Is Enhanced Through Self-Mastery

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you, my friends. I am always with great enthusiasm to meet with you each week. I am made to constantly rejoice at the thought of our friendship and our lessons that will help to uphold our spiritual mission. I have made my best effort to meet you each during the week. I have endeavored to aid you in your understanding on allowing your 'total self' to be without fear of the consequences. We have much to learn about being free from the walls of self-protection.

In our lessons on self-mastery, I mean to help you become closer with your own internal living God. To hold back of your true self does keep Father at a distance. To move about freely, without concern for rejection or ridicule, has you relying more on the Father and His watchcare. To lose sight of our Father is to create a cycle that would create negative occurrences.

Do you see, to hold back for fear of rejection or ridicule makes you more prone to receive these unpleasanties. To cover-over your true self for protection would block Father's guidance and keep the wheel of fear turning. I mean to remove barriers that would keep you in this spinning wheel of fear. By now you are grasping my meaning that 'He who saves himself loses sight of his Father,' yes.

In the Master's self-forgetfulness there was a strong unbreakable connection between Him and His Father. As Jesus grew and attained self-mastery, His bond with Father had strengthened to the point that His fellow's rejection and ridicule did not have serious effect on Him. In the Master's self-forgetfulness, His bond with Father was strengthened to the point that everything not extending from truth, beauty, and goodness was a non-reality. And these non-realities had no effect on the Master's performance to spread the good news.

Do you see how the Master was made to feel totally in alignment with truth, beauty and goodness when He knew he held within His very being the source of all love? and how all else appeared to be merely circumstantial? The Master's human side did, yes, at times, release emotion over the souls that would not give ear. Yes I can say, in the Master's experience on this world there were some things that did affect His human side – but as you know, when the times were the most difficult He relied totally on His Father in heaven.

Through Jesus' experience were there those lessons that brought Him to the spiritual fruit of self-forgetfulness. This self-forgetfulness is now perhaps re-defined as a close and direct contact with the indwelling Father. Can you see how your experience brings you more and more into direct contact with your Father? – how your constant rejections by your fellows is causing you to turn heavenward for the Source of all that is true, good, and beautiful?

Can you see, your direct contact with Father can in itself shield you from these so-called rejections; and in your 'holding back,' the Father is somewhat blocked and your level of care for what others think of you, rises. I do not say to not feel compassion for your fellows – no. I say, your fellows' rejection and ridicule cannot shake your foundation of closeness with Father.

In days past, you may have possibly felt that to do an honorable thing was more difficult – perhaps too much trouble. As your soul-knowledge has expanded, you find that doing good things seems to be your only choice; and, that it is much more simple to grow upon the path of righteousness because of your growth which has brought you to a healthy Father-connection.

Just as self-forgetfulness seems to be out of reach now, I can assure you that in that same way the Master had attained it, so shall you. Self-forgetfulness is direct contact with your internal Father; a total reliance upon His ability to care for you and trust that He is there in every moment. This, not as something extraordinary, no, but as something 'as a matter of fact' – natural.

This week I would ask that you love more, live more, laugh more, and share more.

Work on your closeness with Father, and understand how "he who saves his life shall lose it, but he who loses his life for Father, shall be saved." Have you questions?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I have two questions. One, briefly: Would it be okay with you if I had a private meeting with you and with Rebecca in Nashville next week? Would that be possible? I checked with her and Nina, and they both said it was okay with them. (Abraham: Certainly. That is acceptable. Yes.) Miriam: Okay, thank you. As always, your lessons are just incredible. Last week's lesson was a real hard one for me during the week. Here is my question: In following the guidance to share, and the not wanting to hold back – I can see how it would be real scary in dealing with fear of rejection to step out of our comfort zone to do a good, sweet, acceptable, pleasant thing. But even still, we know to say: "Hey, I love you." to a stranger or to someone that we know. It is also a really hard and scary thing to do – it's one that is hard and scary for me anyway – to face one's own hard truth; and walking through and honoring that just as in honoring the hard truth of another person. I had an experience of that this week. I just want to say that it took me to a place that I didn't think I would go; but I did, and I am very pleased. Do you have some guidance? It was really not comfortable! In the journaling, and the dwelling with yourself and Father, I felt like I was on the right track, but it didn't seem calm. It didn't feel peaceful but it still felt like the right thing to do. Could you just help me on that? Why does it feel so hard?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Soul growth is, at times, painful and difficult. There are many times you must travel beyond the boundaries of comfort, just as the Master did. Jesus did go about doing what He believed to be Father's will and attempted to retract from doing His own. When dealing with your fellows, there must be time taken to make close contact with your internal Father – to prepare for those things that do bring discomfort. Do you see, that a 'close connection' is a shield of protection from rejection and ridicule? With the source of all love that dwells within, why would any negative shots fired, wound you? Do you see, that a connection made with Father is to be self-forgetful? Yet I say, not to be passive, no; I mean to say, as you become set upon an unshakable foundation with Father, the world does not have its hurtful effects on you. And this unshakable foundation enables you to act from a place of strength and action, not from a closed-off or holding-back position. Do you see how the stillness and our journal time, is nutrition for the soul? Worry not on those circumstantial things, for they have made you to be small and teachable, yes. Worry not, Miriam, my daughter, you are hearing your internal Father's directions. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, in what I have experienced of 'fighting for survival' – it has probably been my hardest struggle so far, to actually do as you teach – to relax and not worry so much of 'making ends meet in this world,' but trusting that Father's hand will show the way. I realize that the Master and the apostles had to stop their spiritual work and go fishing to 'make it' – to make ends meet. So how do we balance that? How do we deal with the paradox of wanting to do Father's work and yet, not get overwhelmed with the stresses of having to 'go fishing' and get the bills paid? It has been a struggle for me. I think I am doing somewhat better, but still it's been a struggle.

ABRAHAM: Understood. I am understanding that to work and provide is a natural part of your spiritual experience. Yes, it is on a small scale now but I can assure you – as you ascend, your need to provide will continue, albeit not exclusively with material things. I can say, in working to provide for a family there are volumes of small spiritual lessons: There is your experience with the brotherhood; there is personal ministry in counseling; there is problem-solving; there is the learning of tolerance and forgiveness. Yes, and there is reaping the harvest of the seeds you have sown and learning to find joy in all of this. I can say to you, in years to come this will not be so much a burden, and your toils will be more for spiritual connections and personal ministry. Yes, the day is coming where the mindset towards work will change towards the side of joy. We each believe that to do what one is gifted at does bring a lightening of the burden and more joy to the purpose of working. Is this at all helping?

CALVIN: Very, very much; it gives me a lot of insight. Thanks for your good friendship. It's great to feel that personal bond between someone we can't see here.

ABRAHAM: I also thank you. You each do well, and it is my privilege to have this friendship with you. I will take one more question.

ROLAND: Abraham, thanks for taking one more. In some of my reading this past week on the Teaching Mission and the Urantia Book internet discussion boards, there were many critiques of the Teaching Mission among the Urantia Book family. One of the things that seem to be consistent in their critiques – and I think they are done fairly lovingly, is: 'If we have this Indwelling Spirit within us then why the need for a 'Teacher,' such as yourself?' The naysayers advocate that it is our main purpose – to get into communication with our Indwelling Spirit, Thought Adjuster, God-Fragment – hence, what is the necessity of the Teacher in that process? I feel very aware of the Teaching Missions' and the Teachers' value, but is there a way that we could explain that, that would perhaps have some logical processing to it, that others might be able to see more clearly? If you could help me with that?

ABRAHAM: I am in understanding your question to be about sharing this 'Teacher' concept with others?

ROLAND: Yes, where they may be questioning the 'Teacher's role.' What they say is: "Well look, if you have an Indwelling Spirit, what do you need a Teacher for?" I can say that Amster is my spiritual guide, and I can tell them dozens of things that she has done to get me to paying more attention to the Father Fragment. I don't really have any kind of a logical explanation of what it is, or how God has organized this experience with mortals on normal evolving worlds. These Teachers have come now to help us to all the better get to the Indwelling Spirit. I see that, and I understand it as an experiential truth; but I don't know that I have a very good way of explaining it.

ABRAHAM: It is plain to see, as in our Mission-statement, that this is the Correcting Time. We are here for assisting individuals, yes, and yet our purpose is much larger: We have practically a whole new map of circuitry to learn and teach to the individual. We endeavor to unite individuals in helping Urantia to move further into Light and Life. Yes, we would never take the place of your indwelling Father, and yet we are commissioned by Him to help the world. In your ministries, I would advise that you can confront the individual whom you are trying to explain this to with: "Do you not agree this world is spiritually bankrupt, and indeed in a great deal of distress? Can you not view the evening news and not feel a collective fear? Can you send your child out the door each day without concern for their safety?" Let them know of your understanding that the Teachers and other Celestial aids are here to help on a collective level – to aid in the healing of all prejudices; to upgrade the regard for children; to assist in evolution; to ensure that fairness and light is available to all and is felt by those who will allow. We are at the command of Father, yes, for we are subject to personal orders from He and Michael. Are you understanding my meaning?

ROLAND: Yes, I am. That is very helpful to think of it in those terms. Thank you. In the Urantia Book – the paper on the Creative Mother Spirit – it describes the influence of the Father Fragment, and the Son, and the Divine Minister (our Creative Mother Spirit) as is present and functioning in the local universe. Then it says, in paraphrasing, 'Once a world, on its evolutionary path, gets to a certain place where individuals are ready, then do other spiritual influences arrive on the planet.' I use that phrase as a pre-mentioning of the Teachers and the Teaching Mission. I believe that you are the 'other spirit influences.' Am I correct in that? or should I discontinue teaching that as the gospel according to Roland? [laughter.]

ABRAHAM: You are correct to a point, yes. What I would also say is: This Correcting Time is a special emergency ruling from Michael that is to aid the planet in upgrading spirituality and to promote salvation, yes – while dissipating mysticism. I am slipping.

ROLAND: Well, were you all just sitting around the coffee shop up in Jerusem somewhere, and somebody put up a bulletin on the bulletin board that said: 'Hey, if anybody would like to volunteer for the Teaching Mission on Urantia, Machiventa would like to talk to you?' Or was it an announcement over the universe broadcast system?

ABRAHAM: Somewhat like that. It was much as you were called in your assignments here on this world, yes.

My love for you is growing continually. I am already in anticipation of our meeting next week. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Become Better Acquainted With The Energy Derived From Father
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you, my friends. I can hardly express how Spirit-filled I feel this evening. Listening to you talk about spiritual ideas with such practicality fills me with certain gladness. I am beyond words to express my gratitude to our Father for my assignment here with you. In our lessons on self-mastery, it becomes more easy to apply them to daily living when you can discuss it among one another.

This week I have observed each in our group, and I would say our collective understanding is moving as expected. Your efforts to live these lessons make me to be in a state of awe and happiness. I am beginning to see what Father sees when He views His beloved children. It is understandable how precious you are to Him.

Knowing and feeling the love and presence of our Father is a living energy. To be faith-filled in every aspect of daily living is a source of divine power. To step into self-forgetfulness leads to feeling and knowing more of the love and presence of our divine Father.

We have discussed holding back in areas of the brotherhood. Keeping to yourself leads you to be distant with our Father. Fearing to go out on that limb to serve your fellows is an extinguishing of the fuel that feeds the flame of good news.

It can be confusing to teach self-mastery by definition 'to hold back of the more animal-like self,' and then ask that you not hold back of your true being; I am in understanding of this paradox. Yet, when we review our past lessons on allowing the divine self to steer our human self, we can begin to understand that we are not to hide our human self, but to allow it to be taught, to be open, perhaps small and teachable.

I mean not to create confusion, but to turn each of you inward to your own Father – the source of truth, the source of all that is true, good, and beautiful. To move through your mortal life in direct contact with your Father Fragment leads you to be fueled by His divine energy. To hold back in any area of mortal living would create a barrier to receiving this divine energy.

Moving in towards self-forgetfulness leads you to dwell more upon the Spirit, and not from a place retaining spirit poisons. In being with the Spirit one can act from the spirit. Do you see, in your self-forgetfulness there is the receiving of divine understanding – an energy to act upon your spiritual notions without holding back.

Your Father is in full understanding of your needs, and attempts to see that they are fulfilled in His time. In His time' is meaning 'in your experience,' for therein is your attainment of spiritual understanding.

This week, I would ask that you attempt to feel the actual presence of your indwelling Father. As well, perhaps attempt to distinguish Michael's presence during your human trials. Attempt to notice the difference between my presence (Abraham's), and Father's presence; my energy and Father's energy. I mean for you to become better acquainted with your recognition of Father and His divine energy.

In your moments of holding back self-pity or overmuch self-analysis, cast your net to the spiritual side of the boat; if that means through stillness, reading, study, creativity, discussion with another, then so be it. I would ask that you take a step away from your knowledge toward your Father's knowledge. Continue to journal and begin to understand the spiritual equations set before you. I can take questions.

ROINDA: Abraham, I wanted to introduce Jan. I don't know if you have talked to her before. She is visiting our group tonight. I just wanted to give her an opportunity to say hello.

ABRAHAM: Greetings to you, Jan. It is my honor to meet with you again.

RACHEL: Well Father Abraham, two or three weeks ago you made a statement to me that I would like to ask you to clarify please. I believe the exact words were: "There has been only one indwelling Father Fragment that has escorted you through your mortal life." That kind of sounds like maybe some mortals had an experience with more than one Father Fragment. Would you mind explaining that?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. In most mortals there has been only one Father Fragment, which comes upon the time that one can make moral decisions. I can say however, that there have been rare instances where mortals have been indwelt by two separate Adjusters in their mortal life – but only in rare cases. The Father would never give up on a child; and yet, some have been so completely far from Him that their Adjuster had requested to be reassigned, only to have the mortal person experience some event that would make him/her call out for God. Upon the calling, there is another Father Fragment assigned; this is quite rare. The majority though do travel this mortal life and beyond with the same indwelling Father that knows them completely, and guides them when it is allowed. I also can say that most Thought Adjusters have previous helpful and fitting experience before they meet their human candidate. Is this answering? (Rachel: Yes, it is and I thank you kindly.) Abraham: Another question?

ROLAND: During your message to me I recognized one of the feelings that I got is the feeling of the words of Michael, a peace beyond understanding. It is in that peace that there comes an incredible willingness to give up the ego; and in that comes a sleep that is very very deep and restful. It seems like those two things work together.

ABRAHAM: Yes, you are in understanding. As our mission progresses, these physical feelings that are first recognized will become commonplace. You are witnessing the physical effects of our spiritual link, yes. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, this week in Time magazine there was a large article on a universe that was discovered through Hubble which is very, very beautiful. I find some unique interesting statements in that article in comparison to the Urantia Book – now showing the same similarities. It seems like our science has progressed closer to reality than what our religions have. Do you have any comment to make on that issue?

ABRAHAM: Probably not more comment than what you could already give. There is a new understanding in science – that without faith in a Supreme Being the universe must be occurring by chance, which is not logical. With all of science's technology there is not one thing that can measure faith; and yet in their studies, faith has proven to have an energy of its own. People of spiritual faith have been known to live a more healthy life; to live longer, be more joy-filled, and give service back to the community. These studies are scientists' only proof that God does exist, and the answers are within the study of humankind. As for the study of the universe, time will show that Urantia is a very small planet in a very large and organized universe. The vastness of this cannot be seen through a telescope, but felt in the core of the soul. It is becoming common knowledge to each, also, that the universe contains much life. Is this answering?

CALVIN: Yes, beautifully. Thanks. Quickly, I think Nina does such a good job transmission-receiving, but I see there are a lot of personal requests. Do you want her to keep going with all our group's personal requests, or do you think she needs some help? I don't know if I am clear enough. I don't have near as much faith in my own transmission-ability that Nina does in hers, but that might be just a thing we all feel of ourselves. I would be glad to help if Nina wants, or if you want. It's okay if you say 'not yet.'

ABRAHAM: I have complete faith in your abilities to receive our transmissions, and practice will prove to bring you more confidence. But I would say this is your decision. If it is your desire to assist, then I would help to uphold you in your decision. I am in agreement that your service could be put to good use. You are qualified to minister to your fellows through this method of transmission-receiving; I will work with you on your level of comfort. Does this answer? (Calvin: Yes, certainly.)

ABRAHAM: You're welcome. Thank you for your participation in the expansion of our collective understanding, my friend.

I would ask you each to continue to ponder over this evening's lesson, and I would express to you my love and continued assistance. Until next week, shalom.

Spiritual Worship Leads Us to Focus on What We Need to Have Self-Forgetfulness

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you, my friends. It is always a great pleasure to meet with you. I am constantly amazed by your efforts to attain self-mastery. The road to self-mastery is rocky and steep, but as you travel it you become more strong to endure the road ahead.

We have been speaking on self-forgetfulness, which is difficult while in material form, yes. It is difficult when you must face life's daily brutalities, injustices – sometimes heartbreak, and still be willing to step aside from the self toward that of our Father. I would recommend to you that a sure way to attain self-forgetfulness is to view the awesome wonders of our Father and be made to worship, be made to give praise and gratitude.

To set your sights on another takes your sights off yourself, yes, but to set your sights on Father is to focus on all that is true, good, and beautiful. You can distract yourself from yourself by becoming involved in other people's lives, or hobbies – and yes, perhaps sports or even alcohol, but is this a lasting fulfillment? In your attempts to become self-forgetful I would admonish you to be careful on what you focus on.

This is where our spiritual worship leads us – to focus on what we need to have self-forgetfulness. Spending time in loving gratitude allows us to feel the at-oneness with our Father. Yes, removing our attention off ourselves from the thinking: "my problems, my difficulties, my challenges" – and turning them into: "mine and my Father's, problems," "mine and my Father's, difficulties, challenges,"

I would realize that to break out into spontaneous worship is sometimes difficult, but I would ask that you not stifle any such urge of appreciation and worship that would perchance come upon you. I would ask that you be more aware of Father's good works no matter how small they might be. Go beyond a feeling of gratitude, yes, to give something you would give to no other human on the Earth – give worship. Be in – and of, worship. Go beyond a mere, 'thank you, Father' – to, 'praise to you, our Father.'

Let us pray: (pause.) Father, we your children, small and searching, wish to allow our true love to spill over to you in a show of a tribute. We would go beyond our small environment, our small world, our small solar system, to recognize you, Father, the most of all there is. Yes, in your awesome and grand presence, we are made small. Make us like you. Amen.

This week, I would ask that you pause during the day to find worship. Find the energy that is bestowed with worship. Recognize how much larger Father gets when you worship, and how much smaller you get. Do you see the self-forgetfulness now? I will take a few questions.

CALVIN: Abraham, I always have tons of questions during the week, but it seems like most of them go away by the time I get here. I do want to express how much your lessons are meaningful to me; they are very refreshing. I don't see much else that is so refreshing at those times when things are going confused and chaotic, than to pull out these lessons and review them. It seems like I should have more of a refreshment, though, than just these lessons. But when I go into the stillness I get so sleepy, and I lose my worshipful connection. I believe that is what you're trying to teach us is to find more refreshment with the Father through worship, and so on – but at those stillness attempts I get so sleepy, which seems to always happen when I try to stop and pause. The most worship I can do, or most appreciation, is when driving, or after hearing a beautiful song, or seeing a good point in a movie or something, being so awesome-filled. Any suggestions to me, personally, to help stay awake and vibrant when in stillness?

ABRAHAM: Yes. The stillness is separate from worship. A song or a beautiful mountain scene can bring about worship. The stillness is more of you listening for Father. Worship is you giving to Father – and stillness is being small so you can truly feel His presence, His guidance, His assurance. Worship is a wonderful way to better know the Father's good attributes, to have a personal relationship, yes. Stillness can always be improved upon, and many will find various techniques; but 'worship' is just natural, and overflowing. Worship is gratitude for everything, through your difficult times and your joy-filled times. A certain worshipful energy is always helpful in making one who desires to be self-forgetful – be self-forgetful. Does this answer? (Calvin: Yes. That explanation brings out a very good distinction between the two. Thanks.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

ELLEN: Abraham, in times when I'm felt to worship, a lot of times I find myself holding back because I feel I am overcome with emotion, which is irritating to me. Is that worship? or is it just emotionalism. For instance, when I'm driving down the road in a worshipful feeling over something, and I feel like crying – I do try to hold back on that.

ABRAHAM: You need not hold back on the emotions of worship. They are perfectly natural and do spill out for a time, yes, followed by a peacefulness. Many who engage in emotionalism to extremes, miss this peacefulness and have diffused their energy. Do you see, your worshipful emotionalism is genuine and heartfelt, and is not a show of something done for others to see, no. This is perfectly beautiful in our Father's eyes; He is loving every aspect of His children. These emotions are part of His children and are used frequently to help express. It is known by Him that your emotions are a form of communication. Yes, not to worry. This connection with these particular circuits can also bring about some physical aspects of your material being – so yes, emotionalism is one of those things. To experience the peacefulness after this emotional outward of 'letting go' is a good indicator of good spiritual health. Does this answer? (Ellen: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. One more question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, you were talking about when you get input from another person – and, in your lesson, you were saying focusing on what is true and beautiful – and not focusing or getting distracted from input other people give you. I have been struggling the past couple of days wanting to hear and receive word on what I need to, and leave alone what isn't mine to work on. I was wondering if you could help me with that – if that was what you were talking about in 'focusing?' I think you might know what I am talking about.

ABRAHAM: Yes, I am understanding. It is difficult to travel the spiritual path and assume all components of the traveling were in place. You feel everything is moving along fine, and there is the effort you put out before you to bring light, to show light – when suddenly upon your path there is another who has misunderstood your method to travel and is blindsided by your effort – by that light that goes out before you. As in an accident situation – information needs to be exchanged, damage needs to be assessed, and there can be personal injury to deal with. At such a time, it is difficult to sort through the mess to see what your responsibilities are, and what are those of the others involved. I would say, there are times when others involved would not have seen your effort put out before you as a light – and may not understand your effort or methods for traveling, just as you may miss out on what leads them on their path, whether it is their efforts or personal agendas. Perhaps there is nothing that leads their way, and they are somewhat chaotic. Sometimes it is only possible for understanding an incident such as a harsh run-in with another, after time has passed – you allow some time for all assessments to be taken and judged; to discern anything of value to hold on to, or allow it to be gone; to salvage what you can find useful, or allow Father to salvage things for you. This is difficult, yes, and yet I can say that with time more understanding will come to you.

For now, I am slipping and I would take my leave. Continue to journal and keep note of those worshipful moments that lead you to be self-forgetful. My love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Worship, A Wonderful Habit To Form For Success. Group-Discussion Allows Those On High Participation

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you, my friends. It is well for me to be witness to such fellowship. What a wonderful family attitude you each have. It's well known that each one can express any feelings and know that always does love remain. I am always in gratitude for my various friendships. I am always made to feel more balanced with the friendships I have. The love and care I receive from those I know makes me to better absorb that energy which I feel when I am in worship.

As you progress in your spiritual education, worship becomes altogether natural and constant. There is little effort made towards worship as you get to know our Father more and more, for this worship becomes a daily natural. With your focus on giving praise and thanks to our Father for all things, bad and good, the ego is made smaller. As your worship becomes more frequent, self-mastery becomes more easy, more apparent.

When one has continued focus on their personal life's difficulties there can be interference generated from the ego. The ego always seeks its own praise, seeks to be worshipped, so to speak. The ego seeks to be appeased and rewarded for efforts made. As you learn to be grateful for even your difficulties, and worshipful towards Father's watchcare, the ego is made smaller and there is room allowed for Father to guide.

Worship is for you. Our Father is not an angry God in need of flattery, no. God is not to be bribed by bargaining for worship, no; He is only asking to help, and worship makes you smaller so Father is able to assist. In true worship, we are made humble and teachable.

With self-mastery, worship is a wonderful habit to form for success. There is an energy that helps one strive towards things spiritual; there is a decrease in cares over things material - how things may look, aesthetics. Your new-found energy is helpful in decreasing any spirit poisons to allow for clear direction.

Father is not to solve your difficulties, but assists you in choosing those correct spiritual tools. I am aware that many have believed happiness was to be 'earned,' or traded, or bought. I would say, to find the true meaning of worship would allow you to have a clear definition of happiness.

We are at a point in our lessons where I would like to begin to focus a bit more back on self-mastery and the brotherhood. It is our desire to see more personal interaction among you each in discussing those things spiritual - those points of interest regarding self-mastery. I would shorten my lessons to allow for more discussion between you each, if you would desire.

This I can say with certainty - there is an important point I would make in these following weeks' lessons: Along with your journaling and learning to receive spiritual messages, I can say that the personal discussion between you each also brings spiritual messages – a form of transmission-receiving (if you will) through one another, in spiritual discussion. Tonight, I would only take a few questions.

ROLAND: Abraham, first I just want to express just how wonderful it feels to be back in our little community here, and how much I appreciate your lessons. I am also very grateful about Vincent and myself being able to go to the Foundation's meeting in Chicago; and how instructive it was in our representing what they would say is a fringe element – our wonderful Teaching Mission. And, recognize how detrimental that judgment can be and how humbling it can be. I was just wondering from the celestial government point of view how that meeting went and if there is anything that is evolving out of it that is a benefit to the world?

ABRAHAM: Yes, yes, there is great benefit in you and Vincent sharing your experience. There has been seeds planted and minds have expanded. I can say you will find the most value in your experience by sharing it with others. I would say that your various perspectives on this experience is turning into a collective lesson wherein you are indeed embracing truth – and sharing it, even if it would perchance make you appear small or short-sighted. Know that this is a wonderful lesson for all. I can say that your efforts were indeed successful, although the outcome is still uncertain. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, in your lesson tonight – are you saying that you don't need as much time? Or, are you saying that it would be more helpful if we could get here on time to discuss our individual week's experience, and how it ties into your lessons – instead of as it seems to have morphed that we don't come on time; and therefore, end up in discussion during your lesson time? That's a little bluntly put, but I'd like to see us start our discussions earlier, before lesson time, so we can have plenty of time for your lessons; I know many of us come for that. I can feel what you are saying is – we can get a lot of cross-lesson teaching if we discuss these topics and have allotted time to do so. And, that you are wanting us to catch this point. Maybe we need to meet even earlier to do the chit-chat informal off-the-lessons stuff. Or, are you saying you really don't need as much lesson time?

ABRAHAM: I am meaning for the small talk to be kept at a minimum while discussion on spiritual values is practiced. There is great training for self-mastery in combination with the brotherhood, during your interaction. I would ask for more participation from you each – each discussing their spiritual understanding while maintaining a loving attitude towards one another, allowing Father to speak through you each. There are many transmission-receivers here. Transmission-receiving is allowing one's small self to be put aside to allow for Father's greater presence. In such discussion, you will recognize many Teachers, many Thought Adjusters– perhaps Christ Michael, and others who would perchance become involved in your group enlightenment. Do you see, this exercise calls for self-forgetfulness. This is an exercise, yes. Does this answer? (Calvin: Yes, very much. Thanks.) Abraham: One more question?

WILLEENA: I want to clarify with what Calvin was asking. What I heard was – Calvin asks whether or not we needed to be more timely in order to be able to get the most out of our meeting. Or, was it okay how we are going? I guess there is just a bit of a question I have in that. My question then, is about tolerance, and about accountability. So will it serve us more to be more timely in being accountable? or is it okay as it's going and we should grow in our tolerance?

ABRAHAM: Understood. Time is a matter of personal choice, and if used wisely there can be entire lessons that grow through your discussion. Do you see, our Teaching Mission is to expand beyond the 'one' transmission-receiver, as is Ellanor in this group, to 'all' as transmission-receivers – each allowing Father to move the world into Light and Life. One and all will have participation. With each viewpoint, tolerance will be practiced. Yes, it will require some stepping aside from your desires, to allow for Father to speak. This will be wonderful practice at being self-forgetful. And, I can guarantee that once this concept is grasped there will be much cause for much happiness – you will be able to comprehend what I spoke on at the beginning of this lesson, yes. Our Mission is also, action. Does this answer?

WILLEENA: Yes. I guess the only thing I just wanted for further clarification – I was hearing a little bit in your question, Calvin, that maybe that you want us to be on time so we can start promptly.

CALVIN: I would say people can come when they want to, but if they want to hold off lesson time by their personal sharing of things that are not pertaining to the lesson, then I feel that is interfering with other people who came to receive the lessons. These are my thoughts on this to accomplish what Abraham is asking of us here tonight.

WILLEENA: That answers it. Thanks.

ABRAHAM: You're welcome. My love is with you and I will continue to assist you in your journaling. I ask that you take a moment tonight to further discuss this lesson. Until next week, shalom. [Our group meetings were, at this time, being held at the home of Calvin and Kamille in Taylorsville, UT. In the several weeks that followed this lesson, and probably given tonight's discussion regarding group timeliness of starting our meetings on time, there was a lamp in the corner of the living room that would flicker off and back on again, three times, directly at 8 pm – the time we agreed to end the chatter and begin the lesson-time. This was of great help in our efforts to be more timely and diligent in our group spiritual discussion, as Abraham requested. The group was of the belief that the midwayers were assisting us.]

With A Desire To Be Self-forgetful And To Be Worshipful You Are Requesting To Know Your Father More

[Editor's note: There was again, some group dynamic discussion before the lesson regarding starting Abraham's lesson-time on time promptly at 8 p.m. We supposed that it was our midwayer friends who would, from this time forward, flicker on and off the lamp in the corner of the living room exactly at 8 p.m. This lesson began with first a group worshipful prayer.]

I am ABRAHAM. Well done my friends. What a wonderful display of self-forgetfulness and Father's guidance. You each are tested time and again during this mortal life. I must say, I am not surprised at your success for this particular exercise for I am with great faith in you each; this is what you have been trained to do. Your spirituality is not just good intentions but the faithful living of your spiritual concepts.

I am in understanding that this past weeks' lesson brought about some uncertainty, and through your unknowing you were in search for Father's guidance. This is good. This is faith. I would thank you each also for your faith in me and my ability to teach. I am always learning new and better ways to teach each time we meet.

I am in such worshipful gratitude to Father for assigning me to this group. From this group, I have received such love and true friendship. Father's watchcare in my daily living always leads me to feel such gratitude – after all, I am so small in such a grand design.

In learning the meaning of worship, you'll find that Father continually reveals Himself to you. Do you see, in your desire to be self-forgetful and to be worshipful, you are requesting to know more of your Father; He does indeed reveal a little more each time you step aside to practice self-forgetfulness. I am indeed moved by your excellent participation in this exercise. I would request that you continue to practice again next week. I will take a few questions.

CALVIN: Again, we thank you for these lessons, Abraham. Before time runs out, a question for Kamille who is quite distraught about her friend and her friend's husband – their situation where their young child died, which I am sure you are aware of. Kamille just asks if you have any words that would be of help to them. They have a very 'why is God doing this to us' feeling; and, 'there can't be a God in this,' and so on. A lot of people, as we all know, have gone through this 'losing a child.' And I'm thinking, that until we go through something like this personally, I guess we don't feel the impact.

ABRAHAM: The stages of death are difficult, yes, and yet necessary for each and every mortal to experience. There are no words that could bring comfort to ease this sort of pain. I am able, although, to speak to Celene (Kamille) about her personal ministry to her friends. My daughter, Father has well prepared you to assist your friends in ushering their child from this world to a new life. You know within that your Father speaks through you. You are fully capable of finding those words that would comfort your friends. I would admonish you to lean towards your spiritual instincts at this time and to guard against your own fear for your own child. Worry not. You are a person of great spiritual energy that can bring focus to clouded vision. Stand aside and watch your Father work; you will truly be amazed. You will be one to bring comfort to your friends at this time. Another question?

ROLAND: Abraham, I have been reading excerpts from the Gnostic Gospels which was found in upper Egypt in 1945 and recently translated. This finding describes a relationship between Jesus and Mary Magdalene – wherein she is depicted as one who was a very close disciple of the inner circle of the Master, and that she had received special (or higher) instructions, perhaps more than the rest of the apostles. Also, that Mary was referred to as "one who spoke knowing the all." Can you give us an insight regarding this? What kind of relationship did they have, and was this a true depiction of Mary's role with Jesus?

ABRAHAM: I can. Mary Magdalene was an average mortal living the average mortal life. Through her participation in the teachings of Jesus, her faith was the most notable thing about her. Without doubt or question, Mary would easily remove her own heart's desires in favor of promoting the Master's teachings. She was a faithful student. I cannot say she was more than this or had some special insight. I can confirm though, that Mary was a most likely candidate for the morontial Jesus to appear to – she was receptive and easily recovered from the shock of her realization that it was the Master who spoke to her by the tomb. The delivery of the message that 'the Master had risen' was to be given to the apostles by her to reduce the shock the apostles would have experienced. They were in great confusion and despair, and an immediate visitation by the Master would have created much fear and possible damage to their mental and emotional well-being. It is well known that Mary was somewhat experienced in life's difficult or unusual matters, and could indeed receive such good news without mental or emotional upheaval. Although the credibility of her testimony was questioned, her job was done and done well. Yes, it can be said of each of life's participants that there is indeed a goodness about them, but I cannot say that one is any more than another. Do you see? Is this answering?

ROLAND: Yes. It gives me a great visual picture of her role – thank you. I have a personal question: I am having a hard time journaling. I think one of the excuses that I have is that I recognize most of us are attended by midwayers who are recording this early Teaching Mission history. It is my understanding that there are a regiment of angels involved with our history, called Angels of Dramatic History, that go before to arrange opportunities for us to be involved in a dramatic process which will be re-tellable. I guess there is two questions in there. Am I on track with the midwayers and the 'angels of historic drama?' And, how do I get over thinking somebody else is writing this down, so I don't need to?

ABRAHAM: I would first say that journaling is for you and your personal lessons. It is a way to receive spiritual help through this form of transmission-receiving. Yes, you are understanding of this process. I can say that these moments in history are being recorded and will be used to assist others in the future. This is the most I can comment on. I am limited in what I can say on this particular subject so as to not interfere with the outworkings of Father's plan. Does this answer? (Roland: Yes, it does very well. Thank you.) Abraham: You are welcome.

To you each, I would express to you again my gratitude for your faith in our Mission and these teachings. Continue to exercise your gift of self-forgetfulness. My love goes with you always. Until next week, shalom.

A Message of Hope. The Boy Jesus, How He Learned to Rely Upon Father
Back

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you. It is my supreme pleasure to meet with you again. As I stand by and be witness to your discussion, I am filled with such hope, I am filled with such gladness. It is altogether amazing for me to see our Father's hand in everything – things spiritual or things not.

It is becoming clear to you each now that your fellowship brings about a lot of learning and understanding. Your common ground that you share is blooming with possibilities. Your ongoing communication and fellowship will certainly strengthen you each to go about your daily living. I am going to speak a little on the One who dwelled in the mortal flesh and perfected self-forgetfulness:

Jesus, as a boy, common like any other child, at times leaned toward His self-concerns, yes. It is known that His parents did much to maintain a balance and yet, it was more than this – Jesus, the boy, had a consuming thirst for knowledge; His interest in knowing about the world and its caretakers, was much larger than Himself, or even of the adults that He knew.

The ‘boy’ Jesus, could not rely upon His own thinking for complete understanding. He also knew well that most of the adults He knew could not supply Him with all of the truth he so thirsted for. As His spiritual mind grew, He became more dependent upon His Divine Father for immediate insight. Jesus knew well that His mortal mind alone was limited, yes, and could not take Him through life with such a searching-for-truth mind.

Anyone can tell that the Master's experiences led Him to be able to attain self-forgetfulness. It is, as you also will experience, your everyday decision-making that will affect the course of your path. Your everyday learning will lead you to also attain self-forgetfulness. I can say, just as in the Master's experiences, this will not be easy or without effort.

I would mean to say to you, tonight, that the One who mastered self-forgetfulness would be an excellent source on how to achieve what He did, what He achieved. Your Brother/Father is always standing by to assist with those particular human lessons that seem to be a source of frustration. You might possibly view them (your mortal lessons) as ‘too menial’ for a Creator of a universe, but I can say with authority that His spiritual ministries are beyond your comprehension and are not limited to what your mind may understand.

This holiday season is an excellent time to reconnect with the Master and His understanding of mortal living. He is a true friend who would only seek to enlighten and uplift you. I would allow Him to speak.

MICHAEL: You, my children, are in the company of one who loves you so deep. I am filled with compassion for your daily trials and I understand your deepest pain. There is not one thing you could explain to me that I would not understand. I would always make it my priority to help those seeking children.

I have experienced self-forgetfulness while in the flesh. My greatest help, I must say, was love for my Divine Father and love for my human associates. This love had led me to feel the Father's hands to reach unto my hands, to help where help was needed. This love had allowed Father's words to come from my mouth where it would be beneficial. This love had allowed me to see what our Father sees. Yes, it sounds simple, but I can verify that to truly know our Father, His presence and His divine love, leads us to a greater knowledge of love wherein you can love your fellows without condition.

I have experienced that supreme all-consuming love from our Father on high while I dwelt in the flesh. I can tell you, you will also experience this and know it when it is upon you. I would ask you to be open to me and my Spirit as I move through your daily lives and minister to you as a Brother/Father would. I am even now overflowing with such gratitude to our Father who is in heaven, for He has loved us, and loved us well.

I would have you know that your world moves on a correct course. You will soon see, my children, that my Spirit will be regarded as common in your personal lives – in your politics, your society, your education – anywhere there is a need for the flame of divine truth to burn. As I have done in ages past, I will do again – you will feel my Spirit upon you with such a brotherly affection and a source of spiritual strength.

I would like to deliver a message of hope, and have you also take this message and give it where you will. Forget not how I know you each as I know myself. Forget not that I have gone before you and paved the road with love for our Father and His mortal children, to shed light on the gift of self-forgetfulness. You are my cause for continuous rejoicing and always does my heart remain filled with the love I have for you. Farewell, my children. Carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. It does us well to hear our Brother/Father speak and fill us with such encouragement and knowledge. I could only express to you, my students, that to view Michael, from where I stand, I have not one concern that everything is well taken care of. We would wish to express our gratitude to you, Michael, our Creator, for your continuing love and ministry to us.

I would ask you each this week to ponder over the words of Michael and be aware of this love He spoke of. I would ask that we forfeit questions tonight for another time. I am certain to be with you next week at your celebration. My love goes with you each, always. Shalom.

What Price Do We Pay To Receive A Greater Understanding

I am ABRAHAM. What a beautiful sight to behold – the brotherhood in action. We here who are unseen by you, marvel at your determination to carry on the Master's teachings. To gather with comfort for yourselves and one another shows a great deal of growth.

Your efforts have been worthwhile. Your trials have been a great learning experience. You will know one day that all you have toiled for was indeed worth it; your difficult times were another step-up towards our Father in heaven.

I must say to you, my friends, you spiritual seekers have paid a price for all that you know. You have each paid what was necessary to attain spiritual meanings and values. You each have consented to continue to pay this price for your continuing education. It is only by experience that I can truly stand before you, gratefully, knowing that the price I had offered up was small in comparison to the rewards I received.

The price I speak of is putting yourself aside to receive the greater meanings of the universe – to allow your desires to be set aside in favor of what's best for the whole. The price you have paid is the loss of your old life in favor for a new and better life – to focus on not so much what you would see as best, but what our Father would have us know is best. “He who would save his life would surely lose it, but he who would lose his life for the kingdom will be saved.” Do you see how our lessons on self-forgetfulness pertain to this valued saying?

I would ask that you continue to ponder over and discuss these topics with one another. In your fellowship, there are volumes of spiritual knowledge to be had. I would express to you my gratitude for allowing me to speak. I would each have you know that I know and love you, dearly. Peace go with you. Until next week, shalom.

Faith is a Price You Consent to Pay. Your Testing Is No More Than A Lesson

I am ABRAHAM. It is always my pleasure to meet with you. I am always interested in your weekly findings concerning these lessons. It is indeed at times a burden to be hindered by the flesh. There are so many limitations within the mortal mind concerning spirituality. Yes, it can be difficult to integrate the material and spiritual, but I can say it can be done – not all at once, but ‘gradually’ through your continuous efforts to attain self-forgetfulness.

Over and over are you each tried and tested. Repeatedly are you given those challenges essential toward attaining divinity. In my short journey to this present state, I can confess that my time in the material mortal form was the most difficult of all my spiritual-progression stages.

The limitations of the material body make faith mandatory. I can say, in the transition from mortal to morontial, it is indeed a bit more easily understandable concerning things spiritual – the limitations of the mortal body no longer exist, and the faith-factor is just existing (just is), and almost without effort.

You are tested by dwelling in the flesh, yes; and I can say, this is a test that all must take – all ascending beings, beginning on the material world. You, having relinquished your old life for a life led by the Spirit, will find more meaning through your trials and testing. You, having been born of the Spirit, are consenting to pay the price to continue your spiritual learning.

There is a force within you that continues to drive you to desire to pay the price – pay the price of laying down your desires, your will, to take up the will of our Father in heaven. This is not much more than what we would call ‘faith.’ To have faith that there is a Supreme Caretaker and those celestial associates that care for each step you take on your journey, is to have faith that all you do, matters; how you affect others, matters.

To have that faith – that ‘your testing is no more than a lesson’ – is a price that is paid by you. To set aside your ‘self’ in favor of Father's will is a price, and one that you will learn to continually pay upon. Your faith is your foundation. Your faith is what your whole education rests upon. Your faith is a price that you consent to pay. And whether it is easy for you or not, your faith is a work in progress.

With each test you are given, the foundation of faith is either made more sturdy, or the foundation of faith is made to chip, perhaps crumble. Do you see, your education rests upon your consent to pay the price of faith. Believing without seeing (and your continuing education) rests upon your ability to stand aside and allow Father to teach. Do you see – to progress spiritually, you are to be self-forgetful?

Many do battle for their faith and ride an emotional roller coaster. Many do forsake their faith with the thought that 'there is no hope, so why make an effort?' Yet many, those who are self-forgetful, find faith to be simple and often note Father's fingerprints in their lives. I can say, the fight of faith is certainly worth whatever wounds you may receive.

The fruits of the Spirit can still occur even when one is weak, yes. One of those fruits is patience – to have patience that this 'weakening in your foundation' will be temporary. The tests that you must take to strengthen the foundation are well worth it to maintain connection with the Source of all there is.

I am understanding some to find this lesson difficult – the lessons on 'self-forgetfulness' to be a real test in itself. I can say, through your continued efforts will you find the rewards to be astonishing. You will find yourself in amazement at the transformation of all that you are and all that you know – a positive transformation. I would ask that you continue to journal and have discussion on these topics. For now, I would take questions.

RACHEL: Well, Father Abraham, I don't feel like we are paying a price to have faith; I feel like it is a privilege. Sure, some of the times we don't take advantage of that privilege, but I certainly feel like it is a privilege to have faith in Father. Maybe I am misunderstanding it.

ABRAHAM: Yes, it is a privilege to maintain a steady level of faith and find the joy therein. It would not appear to be a price to you at this stage in your spiritual development, no. However, in your early years, when there were times of struggle and the foundation of faith was first being established, there were times when there was a bit of chipping (or crumbling) of the foundation. Do you see, by your experience, your testing – your price that you have paid has built your foundation of faith to be able to withstand any and all struggles. And when adversity befalls you now, you are upon a strong foundation in which you take comfort; and thereby, you are knowing of Father's love and His ways of turning adversity into something valuable. Many who are without such valuable experience are apt to feel this as a 'rocking of the boat.' The 'paying of the price,' for them, is their need to stand aside and allow Father to work. Those building upon their foundation with each adversity, do experience quite a bit of crumbling, yes; and yet, they dare to stand on this foundation of faith and are within the Father's comfort. Many tend to lean upon their own understanding, not exercising the muscle of faith or the power of choice. Does this help?

RACHEL: Yes, it does, and age has its advantages, doesn't it? And Merry Christmas to you.

ABRAHAM: Thank you. And I would agree, age does have its advantages when one who is so devoted to our Father such as you, Rachel, my daughter. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, it has been quite a struggling week for me – meaning, these testings you are talking about have been quite a struggle in a particular way to me, which I am sure you know about. I take huge stock in your lessons on how I can re-group, reconsider, and turn a new direction where I need to. I appreciate very much your help and having your past lessons. A thought that crosses my mind often this week has been 'if I am going my direction, or Father's-will direction' in this testing. I think that is kind of what you are saying – to let faith dictate where I think I am going, make that choice, and when I stumble, to be willing to use that as experience laying a stronger faith-foundation, rather than to feel defeated, or unworthy, or a disappointment to Father. I surely don't want to get caught up in my own direction. I much appreciate your insight and help when I do get off on a wrong path.

ABRAHAM: Yes, you are understanding very well. You have consented to take the tests that build upon your spiritual foundation. To continue in your divine understanding, you have made an effort to pass the tests – you have vowed to pay the price. This topic of discussion would tend to frighten many halfhearted souls who would chance to come our way, those who would rather receive in a manner of ease. You, my friend, have made that decision to take your lessons (testings) in whatever form they come in. At times there is still a bit of stubbornness, yes, but eventually, you go back to the core of your belief and find your way to Father's will. It is a wonder to look back upon your life and trace those steps where you thought you would never survive; and yet you survived and went beyond that. Lessons were learned, meanings and values were attained and stored in your memory – and again there was consent for a new lesson. Yes, do you see how Father is a Father of mercy, and would not burden you with something in which He would not believe you could be challenged and meet with success? Yes, the battle of faith is well worth the injuries one may sustain. This is not meant to be frightening, but to empower you each with the confidence that Father has faith in you – yes, to meet life's challenges and feel His presence in all of them. Does this answer?

CALVIN: Yes, Very well, and I thank you. I have asked that the Urantia Foundation consider helping in the dissemination of your lessons. I understand they are, as is the Urantia Fellowship, somewhat antagonistic toward the Teaching Mission. I feel it would be most helpful should they assist, such as in being a focal point like they are for the Urantia Book, for people to order transcripts and lessons through them. That thought/thinking has been offensive for some. Do you have any comment to make right now regarding this effort?

ABRAHAM: (TR: Okay, I think he is going to say something rude. I am trying to make him reword it. [laughter.]) Abraham: Only that a thorn in their side is bound to need attention. I am meaning that it is highly unlikely this would occur, but it lets the Foundation know that this Teaching Mission is not going away and perhaps does have some validity to it. Does this answer? (Calvin: Yes, very clear. Thanks.)

Abraham: One more question.

RACHEL: Well Father Abraham, I have a little something here you might kind of enjoy. It came out of the funny paper and yet, it has a lot of truth to it. It says: "It seems to me that since the fall of man, without even thinking it odd, that man has no trouble at all believing that he can be God. How he would do this I cannot conceive, though he certainly thinks he can; and yet, he cannot bring himself to believe that God can become a man." [laughter.]

ABRAHAM: Very fitting and quite appreciated by us here on my side.

RACHEL: How many are there with you on your side? I'd like to wish them a Merry Christmas.

ABRAHAM: Noted. Quite a few. We are in appreciation of your humor and willingness to be outgoing. I would express to you each my abiding love and warm wishes for this season. Remember those recent words from our Master. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Use This Mortal Life Wisely. Self-Forgetfulness Is Not Self-Denial

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-29-1997

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am allowing for a bit of meditation time. [pause.]

During the busyness of life, we find little time for that which is so beneficial to us. A soul that would find unrest in daily doings finds the quality of mortal living to be less. A quiet moment or two at intervals throughout the day can help refresh a weary soul. This time of year brings a great deal of reflection on past happenings, good and bad. I can say to you, it is entirely within the will of our Father to drink from the well of His peace and comfort.

Our lessons are not to meet any time-frame, no. Our lessons are to be taken in as the recipient is prepared to receive. Moments of stillness increase your capacity to receive those things Father has for you. We are assisting you in building your foundation of faith, bringing to you hope and encouragement.

I, having experienced the mortal adventure, understand your trials and testings; your joys and triumphs. I would not mean to minimize the mortal experience by saying you are to feel burdened should you not feel you are putting forth great effort, no. I hold an enormous amount of faith in you each for I also have experienced those mortal experiences. I mean to assist you in any way I can to make meaning and value from your mortal trials.

So yes, I would agree with you when you would feel discouraged towards worldly issues or individual dilemmas. I understand because I have shared your experience. I am qualified to say, having experienced the mortal realm and beyond, that our Father is indeed knowing of your experience – that it is a pathway to Him. He would not have you self-punish for your mortal trials and mistakes, no! but to arise each morning with a new and fresh perspective as His child in learning. This is what we mean in teaching 'self-forgetfulness.'

Self-forgetfulness is a tool for you to be successful in your communication with Father. Self-forgetfulness is not self-denial, is not 'going without,' no. If you could perceive the Father's watchcare from where I am you would be astonished. To be involved in the mind of all minds is to freefall without concern – to look forward to each and every challenge with excitement and enthusiasm.

Always will you be reminded of your adventures in the flesh, and these lessons will be an eternal lesson for you to always reflect upon. Your experience is valuable, yes, and I would wish for you to take advantage of every opportunity while in the mortal realm – be it an obstacle or a time of rest. Use this mortal life wisely, for your lessons learned here will be used eternally.

I would conclude our lessons on self-forgetfulness to prepare for a new series of lessons. Always keep in mind what we have learned on 'the brotherhood,' 'spirit poisons,' 'spiritual fruits,' and 'self-forgetfulness' – these lessons are always ongoing. I would though, begin a new series of lessons concerning relationships, yes.

The relationships you have are, in themselves, valuable lessons. All whom you know are valuable in your mortal experience (just as you are in theirs) whether they are biological family members or not. Each one person you come to know is an assignment put before you. Relationships are lamps upon your path to Father. Relationships are a branch on the tree of self-mastery. You will not learn some spiritual lessons without personal relationships. The skills you can learn today are skills that can be used on your eternal journey.

It has been said that isolation is a form of suicide. Mankind needs one another, and it is in our upcoming lessons that we will acquire skills needed to find success. Be watchful this week of your personal relationships, and continue to journal. Find a time to drink from Father's well of peace and comfort. Are there questions?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, during our meditation I think I was given one phrase, and it goes like this. I think it was given to me because I so enjoy the Christmas lights and the Christmas trees. It seems like it does something for me spiritually. The phrase I received was: The beautiful glowing lights of Christmas represent the gleaming love that emanated from Christ Michael's soul.

ABRAHAM: This can be, yes. Your understanding is a glimpse at what is a fraction of things to come. The Father is called the Father of Lights, and this is familiar to your soul. The glory and grandeur of Christmas brings on a feeling of anticipation and excitement, which are common feelings to those who first experience the morontial worlds. You are correct in your understanding. I can say with certainty that the feeling brought on by certain lights or colors is familiar to you on a soul level. Light is spiritual. I am indeed one who is still made to feel in awe at the presence of our Creator Father/Brother. He is one of extraordinary beauty and grace, power, and understanding. Is this answering? (Rachel: Yes it does, and I thank you kindly. Happy New Year to you.) Abraham: My best wishes to you, Rachel. Your continued participation in our group for the coming year is looked forward to, and expected. Another question?

HONORAY: Father Abraham, I don't have a question. I would just like to have you say hello to my great-granddaughter, Kera. This is her first time here visiting us. She is unfamiliar to these teachings and the Urantia Book, but she is brave to come tonight to meet with us. I do want to thank you for your weekly visits and your lessons, and tell you how much I appreciate you, and how much I love you. Thank you.

ABRAHAM: Also, my love to you, Honoray. You have been gracious to us indeed, and a faithful student to these teachings of Michael's. I am aware that your show of dedication and faith to those you love has set a wonderful example. I welcome you, Kera. Be not concerned, for your family is a great light in our Mission. We are fortunate to know you and express our gratitude for your understanding. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, you were talking about – if we could perceive the Father's watchcare from where you are we would be astonished and that we could freefall without concern. Am I interpreting that right? that when I try to do my best with relationships, to just know that things will work out for the best? I am really glad to hear these relationship lessons are coming up. I am going along wanting to do everything to the best of my ability – I don't do as well as I wish I would, and then I kind of wish I could have done better. Would a good thing with that be just say, 'you know, I did the best I could' and chalk it up to another day? Is that kind of the mindset of the 'free-falling' thing? I just maybe need some help there.

ABRAHAM: I would bring encouragement to you by my statement of perceiving Christ Michael – His understanding from personal experience, and knowing that you could move with full faith and trust, knowing He is concerned with your journey and provides you with protection and comfort. In relationships we will find our greatest challenge is to put forth our spiritual understanding with our fellows; I mean, to use our spiritual understanding. And as you ascend levels of your spiritual education will your regrets seem few, and your blessings seem many. Your drive to always 'do better' is a spiritual drive. At times this 'drive' is where one is 'concerned for others' and at times this drive could be a concern of 'how you would appear in another's eyes.' Are you grasping my meaning at these differences? Is it your desire to do better 'spiritually,' and if so, is there not always other opportunities to do better? Not to be perfect perhaps, but simply to do better. Is this answering?

MIRIAM: I am a little confused, but I don't know how to clarify. You are asking if I am grasping? Or are you saying I am not grasping.

ABRAHAM: A question asked in general terms would receive somewhat of a general answer.

MIRIAM: For example, with my grandmother, she is ninety-one years old, and every time I see her I don't know if it is going to be the last time I see her. Sometimes I am not as sweet or kind as I want to be, and it makes me feel bad then when I am about to leave. Everything is okay, but I just feel a little guilty, and I want it to be okay. I don't know if that is getting more specific for you. When I have feelings of criticism it makes me feel bad. I don't want to have those feelings, so then I wish I could have done better.

ABRAHAM: Understood. Yes, that is more specific, thank you. I would ask you if you felt you were being yourself? Were you acting on your own knowledge? Were your feelings genuine? It would seem to me that this dilemma, that your grandmother could soon meet her demise, would cast a confusing light over your responses to her. Do you see that this thinking brings down the quality of the time you can share with her? To meet with anyone you know who is close to you, that this could be the last time you could meet with them – do you see how this would bring on such anxiety and project a negative light? My words to you would be to lose the dark cloud that brings you to fear the end, and focus on those positive moments left to spend with those you love. Your feelings of guilt will be transformed into feelings of gratitude that, ‘yes, I was myself, and our time was well spent.’ Is this answering? (Miriam: Yes, Abraham. Thank you.)

If no further questions I would take my leave and am always extending to you my love and assistance. This week, ponder upon your relationships. I will begin our new lessons next week. Until then, my love goes with you. Shalom.

1998 MANSION WORLD TEACHINGS

First Lesson on Relationships. Father Is The Basis On Which All Successful Relationships Stem

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is always thrilling for me to meet with you. My friends, we have known one another for some time. I can say, our first meetings together were somewhat uncomfortable, perhaps a little confusing. Our first meetings were filled with uncertainties and hopeful expectations. You took it upon yourselves to be patient and gracious to me, someone who was unknown to you.

Over our time together I have vowed to befriend each and every one of you. You have, having used your faith and intellect as a measurement of sorts, welcomed me into your fold. This was not always an easy process – I have been sometimes rigid and formal in my teachings, and you have helped me to incorporate love. You, having been varying in your beliefs and swaying from doubting to faith, have seen past all this for the greater good of the kingdom. This, I can truly appreciate.

It has taken time for us, you and I, to come together, but surely we can say we have built a wonderful relationship. I can say I know you as well as you would have me know you; and I feel love for you each, a deeper love than if we were to not know each other. You, in your patience, have taken time to understand me and my efforts to put forth these lessons; and I also feel your love for me.

Again, I am deeply grateful for knowing you each. You can see that our love has grown over time. There were some barriers to cross before we could have real love, trust, and respect for one another. Each one here has become personal and is open enough to maintain this relationship. Our involvement together enhances the Mission goals.

Our working relationship brings us understanding in using those techniques to use for spreading the good news. Our personal friendly relationship brings us comfort in persevering through our adversities and encouraging us to move forward with courage and determination. Our relationship, you see, is on many levels – it affects our immediate environment and goes out from there.

You can see the importance of patience and dedication to striving towards successful relationships. Our relationships are likened to a circuitry which all our actions, thoughts, and intentions travel. Our experiences are shared, and we are at times made to feel either discouraged – or at times, made to feel unified and hopeful. Our shared experiences help create the future and destiny of the world, of the solar system, the universe, even on to the Supreme Being.

I can say to you, on this, our first lesson on relationships, that there are no relationships as important and personal as that between you and your Father. This is the basis from which all successful relationships stem. To take small steps towards understanding those personal attributes of our Father leads you towards a deeper love and knowledge of Him – a closeness of knowing His will.

Small steps taken to be self-forgetful leads us to allow currents of love and understanding to flow through the cosmic circuitry. Just as it was when we met, there is uncertainty. With hopeful expectations, we can apply patience and dedication toward our Father and His subordinate Sons.

As you journal this week, feel at liberty to ask Father to know His personality a bit better. Ask those questions that would help you be on your way to securing your relationship with Him and begin to take those small steps, in each relationship you have, towards more understanding. Have you questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, I would like to point out that you have made it easy to be a good friend with. I remember those early meetings, like you say – I was a little on edge like I expressed earlier, thinking: “Am I good enough to even be here?” And through your lessons and the love you have shown to us – patience and love and patience and love and more patience – I just came to accept that “yes, Abraham really does like me.” By realizing that some great teacher would actually even ‘like’ me helps me to realize that maybe Father does too. So thanks for your help in making that bridge. I think what you are asking us to do is in that same light, with that same example, show our fellow mortals the same Father's love.

ABRAHAM: Yes. I would thank you for your kind words and show of faith, and return to you, my love. You have been a good friend to me, also. Your efforts on my behalf are greatly appreciated. Yes, my lesson this evening would start you out with strengthening your own relationship with our Father. He is the basis from which all relationships should stem. To understand your Father's personality attributes leads you to trust and love Him even more. Yes, this, in turn, leads you to apply this same concept to your fellows. To remember our lessons on self-forgetfulness is of great benefit in helping us to always remain the learner. Does this answer?

CALVIN: Thank you very much. I would like to introduce Lavon and Devon, Marvin's friends, who you also met. We appreciate them taking the time to come down and share with us.

ABRAHAM: Welcome to you, my friends. Feel at ease to ask questions.

DEVON: Are you 'Abraham, the father of Isaac?' (Abraham: I am.)

DEVON: The Old Testament reports that you paid tithes to Melchizedek. My question is about Melchizedek. Was he on the Earth for a long time?

ABRAHAM: A long time in your terms, and even longer not dwelling in the flesh, but as a spirit.

DEVON: As a spirit, was he available to other mortals, or just to such as yourself?

ABRAHAM: I am told that he was available to assist other mortals in about the same manner he had helped me, yes. Does this answer? (Devon: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

LAVON: Abraham, I have a question. Earlier in your lesson, you said that the most important relationship that we have to cultivate and develop is the one with our Father. Can you be more specific and indulge me? Perhaps this is something the others here might understand, but help me to understand who you are referring to when you say our Father?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Our Father, the Indwelling Fragment of God, our compass to Paradise, the Creator of Creators, the Father of all father's, the Father of all things spiritual. Yes, God the Father; He has many names and many perceived identities; and yet, to each of His children He has Fragmented Himself to have you know Him personally, yes – God the Father, whom you know as the Source of all there is. Does this answer? (Lavon: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome.

DEVON: When you were a mortal did you know the Most High Father as Yahweh or El El-yon?

ABRAHAM: My mortal concepts before my knowledge of Machiventawas that there were many gods with many names. Machiventa taught me about the 'One God' concept; and after this, yes, I had referred to Him at times as Adonai, El El-yon – there were several names. At this time of an enlightened era, we were privileged to have in our midst, Machiventa Melchizedek, yes, to teach us of the One Source and Center. Another question?

CALVIN: Just clarification. When Devon asked: "How long in the flesh did Machiventa stay with him..."

ABRAHAM: I am aware you have access to that information. [laughter.]

CALVIN: But, were you referring to Machiventa's availability 'in spirit' to other people, – at the same time while he was in the flesh – as you knew him physically when you answered Devon's question? (Abraham: I am unclear on the question.)

Calvin: You shook your head, Roland. What do you think?

ROLAND: This is the way I understand it. Abraham said in the beginning that he, Machiventa, was available to mortals as Machiventa was to Abraham during his lifetime; and, that he, Machiventa, was also available to mortals during that period of time on a spirit level. That's the way I understood it.

CALVIN: During the same life in the flesh time?

ROLAND: Shortly after he departed the overcoat of flesh.

ABRAHAM: Yes, correct. Another question?

ROLAND: I get the picture that Machiventa taught at Salem; and from there, the missionaries were sent out into the world. We see those influences described in the Urantia Book. And a part of the spirit contact that Machiventa made was with these missionaries as they were in the world to help them continue with the truth of the teachings – which, at the time, was more or less having to be memorized. So he was in the world teaching those who he taught and assisting them in their travels. That's what I get. Could you comment?

ABRAHAM: From my information, I can say you are correct. There were many times when Machiventawould commission me to go to explain in simplified terms to these missionaries about the new spiritual concepts. Machiventa was majestic in form and eloquent in speech. That is where I came in, to simplify and add a touch of Earthly reality. Yes. Is this answering?

ROLAND: Yes. What is marvelous about this is in talking about the relationship that we've developed with you – is like that which happened four-thousand years ago. And now I get to be the beneficiary of your teachings, and Machiventa's teachings, in my travels; and probably add some of the common man element of those teachings when I go into the world, as we have been companions in those situations. I am so thankful, so awed by the opportunity to do it. Thank you.

ABRAHAM: A wonderful and true observation and very insightful. My son, we are also fortunate in our experience on this side to know you and be the beneficiaries of your footwork.

It is uplifting to me to know each of you and your unique personalities. You are recognizable to me on a soul level, and I am indeed grateful to our Father for our relationships. My love is with you always. Until next week, shalom.

Do We Live Our Lives According to How We Appear in the Eyes of Others, Or Our Father Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-12-1998

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you. I have been listening to your discussion. I am quite moved to see everyone's willingness to participate and be accepting of one another. Your acceptance of one another shows clearly that you are believing no one human has entirely all the answers. However, your group participation enhances your concepts a great deal towards finding 'some' of the answers. With these lessons on relationships, you will be provided more time to have discussion and add to the totality of your understanding.

Today in this stage of Urantia's development, there is a great deal of emphasis put on appearances; appearances meaning, the physical body makeup, or financial status, or positions of power. There is a mass amount of people who live their lives according to how they would appear in the eyes of others.

Many people live their lives on the reflections from their relationships - this creates a great confusion. One who would appear to see negative reflections in their relationships might cause them to seek to create change; the change always being subservient to man's concepts, subservient to mortal acceptance.

It is said: "You cannot serve two masters" - one being the Father of all fathers, and the other being those things before material eyes. In a small way, there is understanding to be had in observing those reflections from your relationships. You are aware when you have hurt someone; also you are aware when you have helped someone - this is an inherent internal meter, easily understood. But when one has chosen to serve the lesser of the two masters, then there is conflict. This experience is valuable, yes, and I make mention of this to you who would deal with your fellows daily.

Many do find their loyalties to lie with a human god or material things; their faith-vision is narrowed and their techniques of the ego's manipulations are increased. As a teacher I can understand them and would desire to assist them if at all possible - but I cannot help if their mind is so closed. You know these types of individuals I speak of; you have each experienced this to a certain degree, and are able to minister in small ways to these individuals.

There is always an underlying motive that runs through most relationships, and that is - individuals each believing they can change the other; in their mind they believe they are helping the individual who they think needs to change. In the other individual's mind, they see this as an insult. This is a losing situation. I would never find shortcomings concerning one of my students and believe that I could change them, no. I would never seek to change an individual who is a unique child of God.

Also, I would not seek to lift my own perception of self to point out another's faults, no. I would only ask that I could be within the Father's will to minister where I could - to embrace one who is troubled and build upon his awareness to bring a bit of light to their darkness. Never would I be so inclined to force light on another, but I would attempt to detect any opening there might be for the acceptance of Father's words through me.

As I have ventured from mortal life to morontial, I have found that I can easily notice the unique attributes of every individual. Yes, there are always positive attributes and aspects of every personality. I find it most agreeable when helping others, to begin with the positive aspects of their personalities, and build from there. I could never tear down those negative aspects of a brother or sister because that would be to criticize Father's plan for them, to make a mockery of their spiritual path.

In this day and age, many may look to you for some sign of hope or solid foundation. There is perceived in you a God-knowingness, and your reflection out to individuals is important. If you constantly cry out for them to change and become 'as you,' or 'to do better,' there is an increase in their darkness. There is a narrowing of spirit vision.

I would remind you that you cannot understand yourself by the reflections of your relationships, no. There is not accurate definition of how you are progressing as an individual (material or spiritual) for you have available to you all the positive reflection you would ever need. Your indwelling Father patiently awaits your attention, your courage to be able to withstand whatever He might reflect. In His reflection, there is love and mercy; there is truth and understanding; there is pain and joy - this is all a part of your path to Him.

Can you see how Father would not chastise His learning child for stumbling? Can you see His hand is out to guide, yet not to derange anything about His beloved child? God seeks not to change you in order to love you, for in His eyes you are already loved 'as you are at this moment, at this time.' In learning about Father's attributes, we can indeed find the key to dealing with our fellows. We can become immune to our fellow's negative reflections regarding us--our ways, our personalities--and become open to Father's adjustments.

This week in your journaling, ask yourself if you live your lives according to your fellow's perceptions of you? What is reflected back to you from those you know? Is there truth in this? Remember, when tending to your mortal relationships, to seek not to change another but perhaps build upon their positive aspects of what they know. Every individual is unique and precious to our Father. As you are more open to Father, will you more easily find these positive aspects which will enable you to use the more spiritual methods. Are there questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, Pat Sonti, who you are probably familiar with in the discussion before the meeting, if not otherwise, just asked if you have any words for him. And he asks if he is a corps of destiny person under your direction? He seems quite skeptical of this Teaching Mission, but he does ask.

ABRAHAM: I am aware of him. Yes, he is a reserve corps member. I am very aware of his deep and abiding faith in our Father, and that is sufficient. He is living a life devoted to Father, and he need not go where he feels discomfort, no. I can say that when he does feel a need for more active work within the kingdom, then I would so welcome him. There are individuals who believe, as he does, in our Supreme Father and the Urantia Book; yet, this is only a handful of what is contained in the well of spirituality. For some, the Teaching Mission provides an active role in assisting Michael to bringing Urantia towards Light and Life, rather than a more individual participation. That is all. Another question?

ERINSON (Devon): Father Abraham, I have spoken on you in the past, not knowing you. There are many people in many nations who claim you as their progenitor. Scriptures say you refused to sit on your throne. It is a great joy to hear your teachings and I am blessed and brought into peace by listening to you tonight. It is a marvelous thing to think that you are available to us. My question has to do with the blessing that was given to you by the Father, when you were in mortality, as having your seed numbered with the stars. Can you explain what star seed is a little bit?

ABRAHAM: I would first give you thanks for your kind words, and have you look at me as a brother who stands side-by-side with you. I hold no more value as any other son or daughter of God. I am next to you in that we are traversing the circuits that will lead us to Father. My fellows who have written about my life have overblown my importance. And as for 'my seed being numbered as the stars,' that is not of any importance. Although I am understanding that your meaning is deeper, and I am unprepared to answer. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, may I ask you: Like procedure-wise, if I have any questions about the upcoming Nashville Teaching Mission Conference, would you prefer I ask Ham? or can I ask you? Is Ham kind of like the go-to guy for this Conference? If I were going to ask and you were going to answer, my question would be: Do you have any guidance for us, as a group, with the upcoming Conference in Nashville - 'The Brotherhood In Action?'

ABRAHAM: Questions to me are acceptable, and I would say that Ham is more knowledgeable about this upcoming Nashville Teaching Mission Conference. I am always one to promote fellowship, and this Conference would be of benefit concerning your fellowship. It is not my place to ask you to attend, though you each already know where that information should come from. But yes, Miriam my daughter, you can feel free to ask me anything. I would do my best to answer.

I am slipping. I would ask next week for you to feel free to ask more personal questions on relationships and how we can help promote the brotherhood. My love is always with you. I will attempt to assist you throughout this next week. Shalom.

Walls of Self-protection Are Shadows Of Non-Reality

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you, my friends. It is always my great privilege to be here with you. I am quite aware of the difficulties regarding relationships. My experience helps me to better teach. My spiritual path has been a wonderful teacher in that I've learned various concepts that would bring me to this point in my eternal career to be here with you - unseen, but believed.

I can say, my appreciation for you each goes beyond words. Your faith in me as a teacher enables me to excel in my position. I would also express my faith and trust in you as my friends and co-workers.

Last week we discussed the reflections from relationships. Are they just shadows of judgment? or, are they guidelines to learning. We also discussed changing other individuals or building upon their awareness; this is always a challenge for me in my position. I must teach on many levels to bring about a balanced understanding. As you increase your awareness concerning relationships will you be able to better withstand your fellows' critical judgments and continue to teach and spread the good news.

In this day and age of aesthetics, we feel obligated to maintain a certain status or reap the consequences therefrom; there is a fear of drawing too close to individuals who may discover you are not all that you pretend to be. You, and others you know, desire to be accepted and are sometimes in fear that your genuine self is not complete, is not enough; there are many individuals who live their whole life and do not recognize this – there are those shadows of non-reality, shadows of self-loathing, and shadows of being inferior.

In these shadows, there is that extra energy put forth towards creating a screen of sorts; a screen that would appear to be 'good and accepted;' a screen that shows what you would have people know about you. Are you seeing that this screen is also a shadow of non-reality? My point in this lesson is simply this: With all the energy put forth to create screens of beautiful imagery, there are walls built, there are barriers which keep others at a distance.

Some feel these walls to be a safeguard against their fellows' rejections. Some feel these barriers keep others from knowing their shortcomings or faults. Do you see, in building this wall it does not block others out so much as it blocks you in. In keeping a safe distance from your fellows there is so much experience missed, so much that you could know that you otherwise forfeit.

As I have said, my experiences regarding relationships have made me to better teach. Your relationships will also elevate you in your spiritual education enabling you to also better teach. All must experience relationships, relationships of every kind. All your experience is valuable, and the walls built are indeed a detriment to your learning, to your understanding, which would only be of benefit to you.

For whatever reasons one might build these walls, they minimize your participation on the cosmic circuits. You may possibly be delaying some spiritual learning – this is not to worry over, for every chance is given to gain experience; and yet today on this world, relationships seem to create more sorrow than ever before. I would wish for you to feel that joy of being free from these walls of self-protection and, experience the Father through your fellows. It can literally double your joyful experiences. Hold not your fellows back from you. Be not afraid to step forth with a smile of friendship and willingness to be open.

The apostles of long ago had their Master whom they loved dearly; and without their fraternal feelings towards one another, their mission could not have met with the same success. The apostles learned to tolerate one another and allow closeness. The apostles had a real friendship, yes, and this made the difference in their spiritual progression.

This week, I would ask you to attempt to remove any barriers from those you know. Fear not to step forward with that inner spiritual light leading the way. Allow yourself to experience that joy that comes from superb friendship – real friendship; honest friendship. Worry not what you may think others would take from you, focus on what you could perhaps give to them. Are there questions?

NORWOOD: Abraham, I really enjoyed your lesson. I wasn't here last week, but after reading through it tonight and then listening to what you had to say, I was sitting here thinking about a multitude of situations and life experiences that I've had in the past few years. One thing that keeps coming back to me constantly is the abilities I have, or don't have. When I am talking to an individual in person, at work, and I am sometimes frustrated with them – not by them personally, but with what they are doing. I don't want to attack them, but I want to let that person know that they are doing something wrong, a situation they need to correct. On one hand, I really understand what they are doing. On the other hand, I don't want to hurt their feelings. I don't want to attack them and make them feel anything less than what they feel about themselves. I don't want to be part of that; I find that a constant hindrance to me. I don't know if it is called openness honesty – some people call it that; I call it attacking the person's self-worth. It has happened to me in the past from people. So I'd like to see if you could comment on this.

ABRAHAM: Understood. Your speaking on this topic already points you in the right direction for more understanding and improvement. It is difficult when you know another is making errors and something should be said. You know that the Master's words were not always soft and kind. At times He was passionate about His feelings toward the wrong-doing, but yet He refused to degrade another's character. There was always an appeal to the wrong-doers' heart. Always was the Master attempting to turn the wrong-doer inward to look for the correct answer. Jesus did this with questions, such as: "My friend, are you not aware that this is detrimental to this person?" Or: "You are knowing in yourself what the right answer is." Do you see, He would put forth a faith in that wrong-doer, a faith that He had that they could make the right choice; the faith that they could make direct contact with their indwelling Father. Jesus did not tear down the wrong-doer; He put forth questions appealing to their inner light – and this was sometimes used in a gentle and charming manner, but also, yes, did He use a harsh and truth confronting manner at times. You, Norwood my son, have many aspects of the Master, and most of the time do follow in that direction. There could perhaps be a time or two when there was a bit of frustration that would lead you to be sharp with others – and sometimes this is necessary and good; also, it is a possibility that these were opportunities to just 'show what you know.' I can only say now, that where you are in your life you have been trained to be there, and you do well. Another question?

ERINSON: Father Abraham, as the Hebrews would say. I've got a page full of questions; maybe you can indulge me one: Enoch is reported to have been seven generations from Adam, several centuries before you. Do you know him on a personal basis?

ABRAHAM: I do not, on a personal basis, no, but I do know a little about him. Another question?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I think we have been a little negligent tonight. We haven't introduced our two newcomers. Doug and Sherri. I thought maybe they might have a question.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Welcome to you.

SHERRI: Abraham, thank you very much. I have a question that doesn't have to do with a relationship, but I have been thinking and I have wanted to ask you for a long time. Is that okay? (Abraham: Certainly.) Sherri: This goes back to when you were on the Earth in your Abraham body – I am really confused about our Father: Did He honestly ask the people to give Him blood sacrifices, or was that made up by people in fear? Did our Father honestly want His children to have the fear of God in them and give blood sacrifices? Did He ask that? or did we make it up?

ABRAHAM: No, Father had never asked us to sacrifice anything. Through years of evolution, it was once thought that there were many gods, and each god having a different personality, different likes and dislikes. The people believed it was necessary to give the gods their favorite gifts. It was, yes, invented by man's evolving belief system. As I learned from my friend and mentor, MachiventaMelchizedek, there is only 'One God,' and He asks nothing material of us. He would not ask us to sacrifice one thing, unless you could call 'love' a sacrifice. Father deeply loves His children and desires their love also. But even this is not necessary, nor would it take any of Father's love away. Yes, is this answering? (Sherri: Yes. Thank you so much.) Abraham: You're welcome. I appreciate your patience and dedication to our Mission.

I will attempt to assist you with this particular lesson during the week. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

More on Relationships. To Have a Friend One Must be a Friend

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. How blessed am I to be here with you again listening to your discoveries in soul growth. Again I would like to pledge to you my devotion to you each. When we first met, my devotion to you was somewhat on a non-personal level – more like a teacher/student level. Tonight I would say I can feel the real friendship between us, yes, our Mission with one another is personal and our dedication has grown. I sincerely believe we shall have a long and loving friendship with each other.

It is my understanding that your week of varied experience has proven to be spiritually fruitful pertaining to our lessons. I can see your efforts to remove those barriers of self-protection. You are beginning to see how you miss a great deal of our Father's joy by not allowing your true self to be known and not allowing yourself to get to know others.

It is said: "To have a friend one must be a friend." The walls of self-protection prevent you from putting forth effort to show yourself friendly. To have a friend one must extend themselves towards others; yes, there definitely needs to be some effort put towards this – chances must be taken, perhaps a little discomfort must be felt. Without this effort – of daring to chance, to extend oneself – there is something of a repellant that you radiate towards your fellows.

To extend yourself in friendship is not a contract for people to take advantage of you, no. To extend yourself in friendship is not an inconvenience waiting to happen. To put forth your best effort towards being a friend is to ask for Father to participate. To be witness to this participation is truly worship-inspiring.

Jesus was a true friend and worried not about the baggage that might come with each person He met. He was always extending Himself in friendship for the complete joy of knowing His fellows and feeling the Father's participation in the friendship. "Where two or more are gathered in my name I shall be there," was a favorite saying of Michael's. It is true that two, connecting in friendship, do literally join the cosmic circuits.

When friends are concerned neither with putting up screens of non-reality, or attempting to be someone they are not, there is a mutual agreement that each is accepted for who they are, there is a comfort. This comfort is only bringing out the best in one another. There is no judgment, there is just friend to friend interaction and acceptance. This is where friendship becomes spiritual. This is where perhaps our Father, or Michael's spirit, could be allowed to participate, to perhaps speak in assisting some difficulty, or adding to the joy that is felt by the interaction.

I would ask you this week to review your friendships. Is there a holding back? Is there perhaps fear of baggage that may come with certain friendships? Is there a friendship between you and your indwelling Spirit? or you and our Spirit of Truth – our Creator/Brother/Father, Christ Michael? In your journaling, attempt to distinguish your friendships – those that are on a spiritual foundation versus those that are not. Note the Father's participation and the joy received therefrom. Are there questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, in our relationships per the internet with our new cyber acquaintances (for instance), there seems to be a lot of good learning going on. It seems this way for me anyway, in my interacting with these friends that I don't even know 'physically/personally' like we know each other here in our group. I am getting to know them very personally, in their expressions – usually through their postings. You have taught us before that when someone steps on your spiritual wings, or clips your spiritual wings, not to lie down but to stand up for truth; and yet on the other hand, we are also taught not to try to change one another and say: "This is the way it is, you should look at it my way." Could you give me maybe just some tie-in together on that? I think you are well aware of what's going on with my postings and sharings on the Teaching Mission Internet chat lists, how that's going. Quite often my interactions seems to stir up controversy.

ABRAHAM: I am aware that you do well acting from love and avoiding anything ego-based. It is apparent that you wish to serve through this method of communication by means of goodness and you know that your messages have been both understood and misunderstood by some. You are certainly free to act upon your desires, and those that can understand your message, will. You are coming from a place of loving service and know full well that credit will not be rendered – you do well to act as this for your indicator. It is acceptable to act upon your desires to serve as long as it feels it's from a loving place and not a hidden agenda of the ego. To desire to spread good is truly beautiful and yet, I can say not all will read your message in the same meaning as you put it out. Is this answering?

CALVIN: Yes, very much. I read a letter before our meeting this evening from David Linthicum of Oklahoma - words addressing the Urantia Foundation and the Teaching Mission. He published it on both lists. What a beautiful letter which we all shared here tonight. This gentleman has in a short time caught the whole spirit of this 'brotherhood of man' concept. So beautiful to see back through another's eyes how he perceives, both Urantia Book understandings and the Teaching Mission - through your lessons and other's lessons. Any words you might have for David?

ABRAHAM: Yes. David, it is known to me that your searching has been quite extensive, and you are finally feeling at ease to take a moment to filter your new information through your intellectual mind, as well as your spiritual heart. Your desire to serve is known and I would say, that time is drawing near. There are perhaps some concepts of the past experience with religion that needs to be brought to the forefront of your mind and filtered through the intellectual mind and the spiritual heart. There is to be an understanding to take place - a cleansing, so to speak. Worry not, this is to be a joy-filled experience. I would be so honored also to maintain a friendship with you, my son. That is all. (Calvin: Thank you very much, Abraham.)

ALAUNA: Yes, Abraham, it's not so much a question. I have been thinking about when we first started the lessons on relationships. My brother, who we all miss dearly, was a wonderful teacher the years he was with us. We learned a lot about relationships through him throughout my lifetime. I did learn a lot about relationships between parents and children, husband and wife, and these kinds of relationships that happen here in this group. My brother had a great faith that I didn't have for a long time about our relationship with our heavenly Father, and I think this is the most important relationship that I have come to realize since he has been gone. I know part of it has been because of his influence. Now tonight, in talking about bringing down barriers, what I kind of see, in my part of this Mission, is that in my relationship with people which I meet every day, I think the most important thing is that I can teach them or help them see, is about bringing down barriers between them and their personal Teacher - between their Father and themselves. I don't think I can hand them a book or a lesson, or anything physical that would convince them of anything different than just to give them the opportunity to open up their own relationship and let them learn through whatever source they learn through. Maybe I am limiting what I think my mission is, but my question is: Is that's the only part I am to play in my Mission role? Do I need to do more? I think you understand what I am asking.

ABRAHAM: Yes, I do understand. You are saying that you extend faith in your fellow's ability to know the answers for themselves. You make that known to them. This is indeed, valuable. It is a barrier brought down just to have people know that you view them as an intelligent child of God, and that is truly beautiful, Alauna. I would say to you that I also have faith in you to know your inner Father, and be able to know what He has planned for you concerning your mission. Your instincts on your mission are correct, and yet there is still a slight holding back. You are learning to recognize that connection between you and your Father, and are able to go beyond that in leading your fellows to their inner Father. This is quite wonderful, yes; and yet your training goes beyond planting seeds - to tending to the first beginnings of growth, yes. One more question?

RACHEL: I was just going to say, Father Abraham, I certainly consider you my very loving friend also. It is just wonderful to have you teaching us. I do have a lot of other mortal friends that I am very proud of, and which I think a lot of. I was in contact with so many of them over the holidays – no matter what state they were in I was in contact with them. I thank you for these lessons on relationships.

ABRAHAM: I also thank you, Rachel. You have been a wonderful friend to me over these years. Your faith in me as a teacher and friend has allowed us to feel the joy from connecting with the cosmic circuits and feeling that spiritual essence therefrom, yes. Thank you, Rachel.

I am indeed concerned with each of you as my friend. I do endeavor to know you more each week and I am available for conference if you should so desire. You will know when I am near. My love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

A Real Friend Helps You Excel. Beginning Lessons On Forgiveness

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you, my friends. I am happy to once again be here with you. I often think of you each and make effort to have personal interaction. I must say, your friendship and faith in me leads me to excel in my position as a teacher, and personally as your friend.

Last week we discussed reviewing your friendships and techniques on how to improve them. It is amazing how you can distinguish acquaintances from real friends – those that would just be aware of you as a person, versus those that are interested in you personally and make efforts to become close. You can recognize a real friend in that they would bring out the best and most honorable in you. A real friend would relish the thoughts of acting as a steppingstone to help you excel.

Yes, a genuine friend seeks to help inspire you to be your best, and accepts you when you are not at your best. It would be completely wonderful if all our relationships could fit this description, but more often than not in the world today do we find fierce competition in our relationships. One who would claim to be a friend might be fearful at watching you excel. Their fear may be that your success would take you above them and they would perhaps lose your friendship.

There is jealousy in some so-called friendships that would perhaps cause a holding back and a creating of barriers. Many friendships which do not stem from a spiritual foundation, embrace spirit poisons – fear and jealousy being two of those spirit poisons. Needless to say, friendship based on a non-spiritual, or spirit poison-based level, does not receive as much of Father's participation. Father does attempt to break through to assist, yes; and yet, cannot go where He is not invited. The genuine friendship always enjoys Father's participation in elevating understanding and receiving the joy therefrom.

You all have experience with certain individuals who have held you back or assisted in bringing out those things opposite of truth, beauty, and goodness in you; you have felt the disappointment or embarrassment over showing this negative side. There is always temptation to put blame on your counterparts – and this is certainly understood. I would, though, say to you here today that you, having entered the Father's kingdom, are becoming well equipped to counteract these negative interactions.

Those who have been born of the spirit know a new and better way to deal with your fellows. Having died to the old ways, you are set apart from using negative tactics towards warding off those who bring out the worst in you. Having been reborn and reconnected with the Mind of all minds, you are privileged to hold certain immediate information from Father who would seek to assist you while enlightening your fellows.

Upon such encounters of negativity, waste no time to check in with your Father and immediately ask Him for help. If one you know is not likely to join you on the circuits with Father, then you must make a commitment to stand there with Father on your own. This provides an immediate shield from those spirit poisons that would chance to overtake you.

This evening, I would ask that we move our discussion into the area of forgiveness – forgiving and being forgiven. It is almost confusing in a way, that once you have dedicated your life to the Spirit, that there still fosters within you an unforgiving attitude towards certain individuals. I mean not to say that all here experience such unforgiving attitudes, no; I mean to help those with difficulties in past events that you would find difficult to let go. The act of forgiveness, on your part, is somewhat like the ‘born again’ experience wherein you would acknowledge the event as real.

Understand that your Father possesses all power to transform these real events into meanings and values; to create feelings of release and relief; and at last, that joyful worship that flows uncontrollable from you – the most excellent gratitude. This ‘learning to forgive’ is not always immediate, and perhaps may not even happen in this lifetime, but I can guarantee you that all things are healed, in time. All things are to be understood.

This week, I would ask that you continue working on your understanding of friendships and look honestly within to view any vengeful feelings of unforgiveness. Ask for Father to be involved in every aspect of your mortal living – the good and positive along with the bad and negative, and allow the healing to begin. Have you questions?

ERINSON: Father Abraham, I have a couple questions designed to become better friends. I think I am at a disadvantage in that I think you know more about me than I know about you. Would it be inaccurate to call you Master Abraham?

ABRAHAM: It would be perhaps a bit confusing in that it puts me higher than my students. I would not ever assume myself to be at a higher position in the kingdom than my friends whom I love dearly. Your meaning though, as I understand, is Master – meaning Teacher. I would answer to you, my friend, to whatever name you may call me.

ERINSON: Thank you. Would you say a word about your associates or your family, fellows – anything, a name or the number. I live in a family of two for example, and I work in a company of fifty, so could you tell us something about that?

ABRAHAM: My close associates consist of those in this Teaching Mission – other Teachers. You, my friends and students, are what I would deem my family. There are numerous seraphim, midwayers, and Melchizedeks, that I am in close association with. I find it difficult to put a number on those whom I am close to. I do understand your question and can verify to you that as you ascend in your spiritual levels, family members will increase. One more question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I have a question about tonight's lesson. Are we still going to hang with the relationships topic, or are we moving on to forgiveness, because this is kind of a lengthy question? If we can cover it later then I don't want to take up everyone's time by asking the question now.

ABRAHAM: Yes. Forgiveness is a branch on the tree of our lesson series on relationships.

MIRIAM: Then may I ask a question tonight about relationships before we move on to forgiveness? (Abraham: Yes.) Miriam: The negative/positive thing – I love this suggested tool of standing with Father and having an immediate shield. A place that I get to in relationships with family members, friends, and just people out in the world, is judgment. Like me thinking I know what they ought to be doing. It just doesn't feel good. I was going with the thing like when someone mirrors something to me that is negative then I must have that in me. I don't know how to describe that whole judgment thing, but I really don't understand it. This sounds like a very simple thing to ask for Father's help and stand with the shield to block the negative so you don't get the negative flowing into you. I don't know if I have stated that well, but my question is about that, about that judgment thing. The cool thing about the judgment thing, negative thing, is that it does make you do inner work – that mirroring thing makes you do inner work? Is that still a good approach? or is it best to just to ask for Father's immediate shield against negative energy, so to speak?

ABRAHAM: Yes. First I must say, we will continue on the lessons of relationships. Forgiveness is part of relationships. Much of our lives are spent attempting to heal past wounds, to correct certain wrongs. It is within the human mind to seek out individuals who would best fit our description of helping us heal; and much of our mortal lives are spent searching for that one person. I say, through knowing the Father and attempting to keep a close connection with Him, enables us to not seek for those who would 'heal' us, but to seek for those who would share the divine experience 'with' us. The reflection factor you speak of is real, and a great tool for understanding, yes, but not so solid as to make major life decisions over. One moment, I am slipping. I am asking that you reach for Father's immediate guidance and connection. This, stillness and meditation, is a technique in which we are less likely to be pulled from the cosmic circuits into participating in the spirit poisons of the mortal world. This you speak of is seemingly a simple procedure in dealing with your fellows. It becomes more difficult however, in that area where there is always that tendency of the ego to go more towards the animal instincts.

I would express to you my love and confirm our meetings during the week. My love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Forgiveness, Justice and Correction. There Will Be Correction, Truth Will Be Known

I am ABRAHAM. What a most excellent energy I can literally see and feel coming from this room! How magnificent it is to see you each interact on and through the mind circuits. You cannot imagine how your thoughts and intentions travel and create such beauty along the way. Even the most unpleasant events in your lives are made more bearable through your relationships with one another.

Your relationships with one another here make the most use out of those things Father has made available in the universe. It is most desired by our Father that you take full advantage of any spiritual assistance He provides. The circuits, seraphim, adjutant mind-spirits, midwayers, and supernal Teachers - these are a small amount of those forces available to you to draw upon on your mortal journey. With your indwelling Father as a compass, there is all things possible through Him - this includes 'forgiving.'

Forgiving has become distorted in definition in that the thinking of - 'to forgive, one must relinquish all feelings of pain of being wronged.' Your indwelling compass, your Father, would not for one moment ever deny your pain or minimize what has happened to you. Also has forgiving been associated with 'invalidating occurrences that have hurt,' and to that I say, forgiveness is not invalidation, no.

For you to be forgiving is not to paint a lightness over the dark, no. In forgiving, it is necessary to work through the pain. Know that your Father validates your pain; your pain is noted and recognized. Emotions following this are natural and you need not fight the process.

Forgiving is for you, not the one who has wronged you. Your wrongdoer may not even be cognizant of the impact they had made. The universes see to the justice due to each person, and you can know that at some point all wrongdoing is made known. You each have experienced this knowing, or delayed recognition of wrong-doing - and yes, there was regret or remorse.

I can guarantee that the Spirit of Truth is one unstoppable force that sweeps through the world today at an accelerated rate of speed. There shall be correction, yes; the truth will be known. To hold vengeful feelings and seek redemption from your wrongdoers is not to be your burden, no. Those spiritual forces that are available to each mortal do not fall short on job-performance, no, they are fully capable of creating the best experience to bring about those meanings and values needed for each particular wrongdoer.

Know this, that your pain is validated; the wrongdoer is in the hands of our Father and you need not put yourself in a position to seek redemption. Your Father is a compass ever pointing you in the correct direction through your internal feelings. As you progress spiritually, you can begin to have trust in your spiritual feelings, your emotional feelings.

There is always a need to keep the ego in check, and I do say that Michael, our Creator/Brother/Father, is an excellent source for showing you the hard truths. The apostles used to often claim that the man Jesus was 'beside himself.' It did not appear to them that the Master had such a perfected communion with our Father, and that those unpleasant things that stemmed from his fellow's ego did not weigh Him down. Jesus was, yes definitely, beside himself, allowing Father to fully take control in every situation. Jesus often found that at times it was not His place to forgive those that had hurt Him. It was His place to remain open for Father's understanding.

Do you see, those that have wronged you (intentionally or unintentionally) have reasons and underlying motives for their actions; there are character habits they continually act out and Jesus knew this in His fellow mortals. He left the forgiveness to Father; and in that, He remained open to Father's understanding concerning His fellows.

This week, I would ask you to attempt to recognize those various spiritual forces that assist you. Know that Michael, your elder Brother has indeed, firsthand knowledge of your experience and stands by ready to assist. I would also request that you continue in your fruitful discussions each week. Know that your thoughts and intentions travel outward creating much beauty. A few questions?

ROLAND: Abraham, you touched on that the adjutant mind-spirits are also there to assist us. Two of them that I am thinking of right now are wisdom and courage. It seems like the Spirit of Truth, the Holy Spirit, and the mind circuits are all provided by the Creative Mother Spirit, and that She maintains all those on Salvington. Do we specifically ask for assistance from these different entities when we feel spiritually inclined to do so?

ABRAHAM: Your requests would not be specific to the mind-spirits, but to Christ Michael or Mother. The adjutant mind-spirits are not so much alive as an entity, but alive as circuits, separate and distinct energy field circuits. Does this answer?

ROLAND: Yes. I'd like to pursue that. I remember this vision. There were the seven adjutant mind-spirits, and surrounding them were the four and twenty sentinels. What do sentinels do?

ABRAHAM: I am going to tell as much as I can. The sentinels are guardians, so to speak, with various functions within the universe. Their roles are ever-changing with the evolution of the universe. Their roles are more flexible and they are not as formal as they once were. This is my understanding. Another question?

ROLAND: About three months ago I asked you about the four directional creatures and you deferred me to another time. This seems like a good time to do that because that is all part of that experience. What I saw was that these four directional creatures were on Salvington, and they emitted some kind of a magnetic field that made Salvington the center of our local universe and made it possible for whoever was traveling from one sphere to another to navigate to those places by the directional spirits, much like a homing pigeon does on the earth. They just have that kind of an energy that gives off negative and positive energy (positive and negative – negative and positive) that would make it so that we could navigate to Salvington where we all end up before we transcend this local universe. It seems to me that what I am getting in all this is that there is another set of such on Havona, the four directional creatures, which brings us, after this grand-universe career, into Havona – much like there are those parallels between the Father, First Source and Center, the Eternal Son – and, divine Mother and the four directional creatures. Have you had an opportunity to research that?

ABRAHAM: Yes. You are correct in your understanding. The directional creatures do encompass an energy bestowed to them by our Father. Many believe the universe to be chaotic and haphazard. I would confirm your understanding that at some point in your eternal career there will be assistance from these beautiful creatures. These creatures are ever devoted to assisting beings in ascending in their eternal adventure. There is not one thing more important to these creatures than helping each individual to specific points in the universe that pertain to education and spiritual growth. This is the extent of my knowledge. Does this answer?

ROLAND: Yes, it does. It is another manifestation of the beauty of the creation of the universe, and for us to have that enlightenment we have at this moment in time, and to learn it from you, is very gratifying. Thank you.

ABRAHAM: Indeed. My gratitude to you also for your participation in helping to broaden our interests, yes. Another question?

MIRIAM: I shared last week something that I had journaled. I had prayed to the Mother Spirit; I had been doing it throughout the day whenever my energy was getting low. I literally, figuratively, felt buoyed. I felt like it was proper to pray to the Mother Spirit, and I did get feedback. Now to hear Roland ask this, it is neat to hear and learn more and more of the choices and everything that is available. Thank you.

ABRAHAM: Yes. It is acceptable to request Mother's aid on specific topics – such as those things that relate to groups or races. She is quite active in assisting Christ Michael in bringing Urantia closer to Light and Life. Yes, your communion with Her is wonderful.

I would take my leave and give to you my love and appreciation for your devotion to the cause. I will continue to communicate with you each throughout the week. Until we meet again, shalom.

Lean Upon Michael For Forgiveness and Healing

I am ABRAHAM. How blessed am I to be witness to your discussions. Even as I listen, I learn. Even as I participate in your discussions, I rejoice at our Father's grand design. I feel that each time we meet and learn we come up against more difficult concepts; and from there, also is more joy and gratitude from those forces that continue to assist us.

To understand the concept of forgiveness there needs to be those occurrences in daily life that would educate you and create in you the desire to ask questions. The lessons on forgiveness are mandatory. Those occurrences that require forgiveness are painful, yes; and yet, I say you need not dwell in them alone. There is understanding when the time is right – that is, when you have had the experience, have had the desire to ask questions, and have stepped aside for Father to teach.

It is true that at times you feel a bit more mortal than divine; and yet I can say that you have the most divine mind at hand to assist. I give you our Creator and friend:

MICHAEL: I am your Brother/Father. I would be with you here this evening to bid you an invitation to accept my assistance and to have use of my forgiveness. I indeed know firsthand of the disloyalties of humankind. I experienced the worst that man has to offer. I also had spent much time in meeting my fellows while in the flesh. I made effort to be in close contact and show interest in each mortal I contacted. I spent many hours in observance of my mortal counterparts, and I learned much through this process.

Without judgment, I took in all that Father could show me about humankind. I had met the very least to the greatest, of humankind. I had remained open to understanding the human psyche, habits, and thought patterns. I was indeed one of you. I am inviting you now to be one with me. In your daily meetings with your fellows, I would assist you in a twofold understanding of them: one being human – the other, divine.

My days on Earth taught me that there are many varying levels to human living: There are those that are quite connected to the animal-self; there are those who are struggling to get by; and, there are those who are challenged by mortal living and conduct their daily business with either positive or negative.

In understanding humankind, I found within each one I met, a most lovable aspect of their being. I literally learned to recognize this in my fellows as I became closer to my Father. I find that within each soul there is the creation of the Father who is in heaven, and who dwells in you.

I have seen the most evil in humankind. My one desire is to help – not to condemn or pity or dismiss, but to assist, to bring light, to bring love. I would find forgiveness to be a most valuable exercise in mortal living.

He that would save his life, would lose it. He that would lose his life for the sake of our Father, will be saved – meaning, those willing to turn in their ego would then have clearer vision for finding spiritual meanings and values. Those that do not have questions, receive not answers.

I would put before you today an offer to receive my understanding of your mortal counterparts; and, to aid in the healing exercise of forgiveness. My resources are yours. I am ever close for you to receive that validation that you need – to give ear while you speak of your pain; to give comfort and begin a healing process. To seek this comfort from your mortal friends or wrongdoers, is not a divine choosing – but rather, a human need to receive immediate healing or satisfaction.

I am in understanding of the road you must travel. I rejoice in the fact of my experience on Earth – even if only to bring you my understanding, love, and comfort. Know that you have a vast resource of spiritual assistance. It would be my honor to incorporate my understanding with yours. My peace be with you, my love also. Carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. We are genuinely humbled in the presence of one who portrays perfect humility. To be assisted by one who upholds the universe is enough to make us small. Our love and gratitude to you, our Brother/Father Michael. Your lesson on forgiveness is so much more, having your own mortal experience to draw upon to incorporate in our own daily living.

I would gather, from Michael's discourse on forgiveness, that His experience on Urantia was very valuable wherein He observed various human personalities, became understanding of their habits and thought patterns, and recognized that there lies within each soul, warm and loving attributes. In all His understanding there was no need to aright the wrongs in each one He met. There was only the wellspring of love that flowed continuously through Him from our Father. Jesus has a keen interest in all Father's creations and questioned not His Father's judgments on them.

Michael has offered you to utilize His understanding and mortal experience to assist you in this valuable exercise on forgiveness. My request/suggestion for the week would be to attempt to gain the Father's understanding of your associates, friends, and relationships. Know that Michael is unlimited in energy, and there is no exercise on forgiveness that is too meager for Him to be privy to. Allow Michael to extend himself in service and observe how your understanding grows. Are there questions?

CALVIN: What a most wonderful honor to again hear from Michael. From our discussion earlier, Abraham, and in trying to understand His life on this world, are there times when Father would – through the mind of Jesus, and/or through us – have us stand up quite boldly and confront a fellow over an issue? Or, does that border on the line of trying to change them? Are your teachings saying to simply love them, and allow Father to move in their own life? Or, are you saying sometimes we should speak up sharply and boldly with 'tough love' so to speak. I am sure you understand my question better than how I present it?

ABRAHAM: Yes. There were indeed times where the Master acted out sharply, and He did this through an understanding of Father's will. Yes, there are times where Father would so fill you with such desire to boldly put forth into action certain needed changes. The Master, who spent time in solitary communion with Father, was quite close to Him – meaning, at those times when it called for quick thinking and action, there were no thoughts of hesitation; there was only the thought of taking action for Father's glory. In the Master's life, He lived each moment in the joy of glorifying the Father. Is this helping?

CALVIN: Yes, it does help. I believe this would take quite a disciplined mind and pattern-adjustment for us.

ABRAHAM: Yes. As the Master said, the exercise is always strengthening you to receive more advanced lessons. Another question?

ROLAND: Abraham, I was going to ask a different question but my mind is so absorbed tonight by hearing some of the things that we heard. I'm in recognizing that we are sort of opening the envelope of spiritual understanding – an understanding that is on the outer edge of what the body of understanding is on this world of Urantia. I find that within my experience, the expressing of these ideas, expressing these spiritual constructs and truths as I see them, I have alienated a lot of my old friends, even family. I am wondering if that is necessary? or if I am doing it in a wrong way. I seek your advice.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. My son, I do believe that with some of your fellows, that no amount of softening of words will better the relationship. Yes, some you know shall fall away, and there is not much more you can do to remedy this. People are growing, always; and at times this growth is away from one another. This is not to be negative if you have exhausted your human resources and given your fellows over to Father in prayer. Yes, when genuine effort has been made, there is only moving on. Mortals you need to be in connection with – Father will assist, yes, and make situations where you need to be in connection with them; and those that somehow slip away are not to cause you emotional pain. Is this answering?

ROLAND: Yes, it is. Thank you, my brother. I know Michael knows this, but I accept His invitation for Him to be part of my life. I accept His invitation to assist me.

ABRAHAM: As do I, my son. Yes. Well done. One more question? [No further questions.]

I am in a state of joy at the enhanced picture I have of the kingdom. I am made to rest with the assurance that our Brother/Father is in complete knowing of all that we must accomplish. I would give to you each my love, and assist you throughout the week. Until next week, shalom.

Our Co-Creator Mother Gives Her Full Support to Urantia

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is always a pleasure to be in your company. It is your faith and desire to learn that brings me back weekly as your Teacher. It is your kindness, love, humor, and openness that brings me back as your friend. I am filled with such gladness when I am seeing the bigger picture that Father has put before me.

Our Mission is growing beyond teacher/student relationships to personal friendships. In a friendship, we put away those shields that would guard against anything undesirable. In a real friendship, there is more understanding to gain by the trust and love therein, which moves us to a more enhanced method to learn by. Our trusting friendship broadens those lessons Michael has planned for us – lessons wherein I am able to reveal a little more.

We are learning to utilize Michael's forgiveness regarding our fellows. Michael's forgiveness is not weakness, or simply tolerating, or even mercy, no; Michael's forgiveness is complete faith and trust in Him who upholds the universes. Michael, having experienced the many bestowals, has a vast amount of experience of which you may draw upon, yes. Michael's bestowals were viewed by many who were able to use this information via the circuits.

Urantians, having come through the period of isolation and now being reinstated into the fold of Nebadon, have available to them the knowledge of Michael's bestowals – all His bestowal experiences with the different orders of life. To you here now, you have access, more-so than ever before, to the mind and experience of our Creator Son.

Mother, Michael's divine co-creative partner, makes available to you increased knowledge from the experience of the Supreme Being so that you have an inner-knowing of universal evolution as well as planetary evolution. She is a wonderful guide to you that would evoke Her ministries to have an understanding on how the universe operates. Mother is indeed one of Michael's valuable resources that is available to you.

Our lessons have concerned forgiveness; but I would take a moment to reflect upon the relationship of Michael and His Co-partner – the Creative Mother Spirit. Michael, being one who portrays perfect humility, would not assume to sit on high and receive sole glory as one who is in a superior position, no. Michael is always telling us that He did not become the Creator of a universe through His own doing, no. There were those upholders that enabled Him to take leave of His administrative duties in order to gain that experience which would deem Him the Creator of a universe, yes, but our Beloved Mother was at the helm.

Without the support of our Mother, Michael would not have attempted to go beyond His own limitations. Mother was a support and upholder of all He accomplished. Our Mother, in knowing Michael, had a deep and abiding affection for Him – not just because He gave Her the utmost respect and love, but just from knowing Him as a single loving personality.

Michael gave equal credit to Mother concerning the happenings of the universe. Michael, in His closeness with Mother, saw no other choice than to give Her His supportive affection. The divine pair were, and still are, a wonderful ideal in which to strive for regarding your own relationships. Mother and Michael are in such perfect coordination because they are knowing of one another in personal closeness, not because of the power each one possesses. There is an upholding of one another – not any type of holding back or jealousy because of status, no. There is a teamwork that adds to each one's abilities to move and be in the universe. Each one is made better by the support of the other.

It would appear to some that such a loving and equal relationship among mortals is unlikely here on a world such as Urantia. I can say to you it is possible to become close to this measure of mutual devotion – yes, this is possible. I can give you a guarantee that this type of relationship is entirely possible between you and your Creative Parents. To receive the mutual affection from our two loving and devoted Parents is yours for the taking.

To receive love based on your personal being and not on what you possess; to receive love in the highest measure just because you are, is a guarantee owed to you, bestowed upon you by your divine sources – Mother and Michael. To be upheld in your human undertakings by such infinite sources should indeed make you to rejoice. To be upheld, not held back, but to have liberty and spiritual creativity, is a gift to you.

We are moving to a new and expanded level in our teachings; this will require more hands-on experience. This does bring about some discomfort, yes; and yet, I cannot describe the extraordinary results that will be produced. I would ask that we keep our question time limited that you may discuss these words after our lesson. Are there questions?

RACHEL: Yes, my dear Father Abraham. This coming Saturday will be our seventh anniversary of our first day of transmission-receiving in this Correcting Time Mission. Out of the five mortals that were there to begin with, there are only two of us that are active. However, I feel that Jason (Doug Burdett) is just as committed as he ever was, and if I am wrong, please correct me. Often I have wondered how many spiritual beings were there with us that very first evening. I am fairly sure you were because the very next day Rebecca said that you had started to train her how to clear her mind so she could handle the receiving end of it easier. Do you have any words that you would like to say to us about that evening, or any time since?

ABRAHAM: My understanding is that this Mission training was in the making for some years before you started. There were various spiritual helpers consulting with mortals to bring about a mass correction. The years that were invested brought us to that night of contact, which was the first of many dominos to fall that would connect a human network with us on the unseen side. What great strides we had made; and yet, our experience was not always pleasant. Our Correcting Time training was not a time of ease; and yet, it was not as difficult as most thought it would be. I am certainly grateful for your participation, my daughter, Rachel. Your efforts were likened to those of our Creative Mother, the one who upholds and enable us to progress. Does this answer? (Rachel: Yes it does, and happy anniversary.) Abraham: And to you, Rachel, my daughter. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, David Linthicum, who lives in Tulsa, asked me if I would ask you: Since tomorrow night Dateline is airing a program about the Urantia Book-based Sedona group, Aquarian Concepts Community, a lot of people nationwide will be viewing this program. We seem to hold our breath on whether this program will be helpful or hurtful to the Urantia Book? David's question: "Is Tony there in Sedona receiving insight from Gabriel, and is that the planetary spiritual headquarters on the planet?"

ABRAHAM: It is my information that the Urantia Book will not be cast in a negative light and viewers will understand this story to be another common occurrence. I am told this area is not the spiritual center of Urantia and does not receive any more assistance than any other participants in the Mission. There was real spiritual potential in this area; and with regard to that, there is bound to be those who crave personal glory and attention. This story will not be taken seriously by most of the viewing public, but will indeed turn individuals inward to listen for their own bells of truth. (Calvin: Thank you very much.) Abraham: You're welcome.

My friends, I would ask that you discuss the divine relationship between Michael and our Mother. During the week, take time to study their parental aspects towards you and be observant concerning our new level of learning that is taking place. My love is with you each. Until next week, shalom.

To Learn Forgiveness, Experience Is Necessary. Do Our Divine Parents Ever Need to Forgive Each Other

I am ABRAHAM. We welcome you here again. You are beginning to see the value in your group discussions. Worry not timewise, for tonight we have all that we need. Your discussions are an important part of these lessons.

Last week we spoke about Michael and Mother, and their divine relationship with us. I need to teach on certain topics such as forgiveness and yet, I endeavor to also teach with positive techniques. To dwell in the negativity of forgiving, defeats our purpose. I choose to reveal the relationship between Mother and Michael to provide an outstanding example of a successful relationship.

To learn forgiveness, experience is necessary. You will be experiencing situations where forgiveness could be used. Your faith and trust in Father and His divine support team will be called upon in situations calling for forgiveness. Forgiveness is our Father's plan. It is His divine overcare that knows what we need to complete our path to Him. It is altogether wise that you would appreciate His judgment, His all-knowingness, to see what results will be produced.

For you not to take forgiveness upon yourself is to be burdened by making judgments on another; and you would agree with me when I say that none of us is qualified to make such judgments. You can see, when forgiveness situations are given over to Father, the outcome is much better than you could forecast. In His all-knowingness, there is resolution for you and your offender; there are lessons that will be used throughout your eternal adventure.

It would be inconceivable to imagine Michael or Mother having need to forgive one another because of the supreme mutual love and respect they both have for each other. It is entirely conceivable for us to understand Michael and Mother. Yes, we can view Michael and Mother having no need for forgiving when there is such mutual love and respect; they enable each other to be at their very best, always. When Mother reaches a seemingly impossible goal, Michael's heart soars with great delight. Mother also finds delight in Michael's accomplishments; His joy is also Hers.

In the meetings to come, we will hear more from Mother – Her understanding of the universe, its upholders, and the Supreme Being. For this week, I would ask you to be aware if you are being an upholder? or one who holds back! Do you bring out the best in those you know? or the worst! What can we learn from the relationship of our Divine Parents? How can it be put to practical use? If time permits next week, I would ask that you discuss these questions. For now, I would take a few questions.

RACHEL: Yes, Father Abraham. You said that we are moving to a new and expanded level in our teachings, and that this would create some discomfort. Would you mind explaining that a little more thoroughly? If I am going to be discomforted, I want to know.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Discomfort – meaning doing things you have not done before; taking actions that you would be surprised by. New things always bring a certain hesitation, a certain analyzing. There will be strength where there hasn't been before; and, there will be courage, audacity and boldness, that you have not exhibited before. This is due to the spiritual forces that are so readily available to you. This discomfort mostly stems from the reactions your friends and family reflect to you. This discomfort, though, is always to produce positive results and not to be worried about. The discomfort signifies Father's mysteriousness and adventurous personality. Yes. One more question?

CALVIN: Abraham, in the discussion we have had with people this week – in the Urantia Book it talks about children who die and go onto the Mansion Worlds, a nursery world, and await a surviving parent. But it doesn't seem to address, that we can find anyhow, about a child who dies before receiving a Thought Adjuster who doesn't have a developed soul and/or a surviving parent. Some are of the belief that that child does not re-personalize; and others have a belief that not a parent, but someone else close to the child, or someone who has not had parenting experience, then has opportunity to continue on with the child in the parenting role. Many in the Urantia Book family believe that the child becomes as though it never was – yet, a part of the Supreme. Would you have anything to add to our dilemma there?

ABRAHAM: Each child born, being apart from the mother, has every opportunity to survive. Every potential soul is offered a chance to grow. There are endless caretakers for these seemingly orphaned children. There are those who see parenting as a great honor, as well as an excellent educational opportunity. Those who would volunteer are mostly mortals from the realms, such as yourselves. These spirit children are such a joy to behold, and their caretakers outnumber the children. There are guardian seraphim and other divine personalities who wish to assist, and find themselves with little to do because the once-mortal parents would wish to do everything for them. Is this answering? (Calvin: Yes. It is very comforting to 'fill in' that apparent mis-clarification in the Urantia Book. Thank you.)

ABRAHAM: You're welcome. I must say to you each that my love for you still grows, and I would be so delighted to partake with you the essence of our Divine Parents' relationship with you. To be an upholder to you would be my most joyful honor. If you decide to call upon me during the week, I will be available. Peace be with you. Shalom.

[Ellanor/Nina was presently ill and absent. Calvin was transmission-receiver for tonight's meeting.]

My humble gratitude my fellow brothers and sisters. Greetings. I am ABRAHAM. I am most grateful to be present to hear your discussion. It is my observation that you learn most in these discussions wherein you open your hearts to each other in expressing your understandings, feelings, and viewpoints. It is always important to feel free in this family group to express your frustrations and pain. There are no mortal group settings more adept to hear and share your feelings than is a group of like-minded ascenders.

I am always ready to assist you in your personal understandings of your development – as individuals, as a group; and as well, this Teaching Mission, as pertaining to your roles in this Correcting Time. Our Father who dwells within, is ever-present and conducts your path-purpose; He is always attentive to your spiritual development. It is not His goal to make your life a bed of roses, but to challenge you with decisions to make that will enhance your spiritual growth.

Michael, our Creator/Brother, is the creator of life that gives you Father's experience. He, along with Mother, does prepare your opportunities. Michael, having lived as you now live, is most qualified to lend His guidance and support in your daily experience; His role, along with your Universe Mother, is all-encompassing to provide a way for your spiritual development and for the carrying out of your indwelling Father's will.

Michael not only provides the way by the way of creation, but through actual experience as the 'Way-shower.' His personal mortal life gives a pattern of example for all to examine and follow – not only you who dwell upon this world, but all His created children upon all worlds within the creation of He and Mother.

Our Mother has many agencies with whom She directs to assist in your experiential path. Our Mother is also conscious of your every yearning, ambition, and desire – as well as your sufferings, pains, confusions, and sorrows. It is through Her mind ministries which the currents of all Michael's creations are connected as one.

Do you see how Mother's ministry is effective in contributing to the Supreme Being? She is always directing Her many agencies for the benefit of Her children's well-being. Oftentimes mortals are confused and perceive God as harsh – even unfair, unkind, and unloving. Our Mother uses all agencies within Her domain to help Her children feel loved, cherished, cared-for, and watched over.

The strifes and confusions upon your unbalanced and darkened world have caused many to fear, which has brought about much pain, suffering, and sorrow. I am stating the fact of your material condition and will leave it at that for now. I choose again to dwell more upon where we go from here as new faith-born creatures of our divine Parents.

You who sit here this day do so not only because of your faith in our divine Parents but because of your desire to assist our divine Parents in this world. You have chosen to conform to the pattern of Michael as He lived the life you know as Jesus. It is well that you should be aware of all assistance which Father, Mother, and Michael have provided for your heart's desires. Each of you present is capable to become the faith-son and daughter to your divine Parents in like manner as you perceive Jesus' Father/Son relationship.

I am willing to assist you in your individual roles as kingdom ambassadors. Many do assist me in your behalf via instructions from our Universe Parents – Mother, and Michael. I have carefully presented lessons which will assist you in becoming more spiritually developed and cosmically aware. With that foundation, you are indeed fortunate to join in the Correcting Time as 'wayshowers' as was Michael, as Jesus – and, as He, Michael, and Mother, continue to show the way to our Father.

I am most fortunate to be counted as your brother in this work; and I would ask that you think of me as such, your brother – not someone high above you. I know quite well this same relationship is also what our Creator/Brother Michael and our Universe Mother wish to have with you. We are aware of your struggles and wish for you to share them also with us. In sharing them with each other, keep in mind you are sharing them with us.

This week, I would ask you to feel free to express your inner feelings to your faith-filled brothers/sisters, and with we who seek to assist you. We are great listeners, and Mother is the greatest of Mothers to orchestrate to your needs. Think on the roles you have as 'wayshowers' and how the many universe agencies are available to assist you through our divine Parents' love and assistance. I will take only a few questions.

ROLAND: Abraham, as you know we had our conference in Florida; and I appreciate you being there to assist in the transmission between Rebecca, Amster, you and myself. The issue that comes out, with some of the things that were said there, is: In the processes of my seeking, my communications with the indwelling Spirit, I have not as frequently sought the advice of my personal spiritual guide, Amster. I was wondering if you could distinguish that for me. You could say if it's important to know from a Teaching Mission transmission than to get that answer from my Indwelling communication; how does that interrelate with a personal Teacher? Could you shed some light on that?

ABRAHAM: Yes Roland. It is a question many who are in this Teaching Mission have also asked. In our early days of development, it was quite a privilege for both Teacher and mortal – for the mortal to have this Teacher-connectedness, and for the Teacher to have experience of mortal connectedness. However, we have noted that many become attached more-so to the Teacher-assistance than to Michael's assistance and especially Father's indwelling direction. It is quite like a grade school teacher would take such care and time with a new school learner, and as the child progresses through elementary stages, the teacher becomes less and less the focal point in the child's further development. Amster is always available through circuitry to be of assistance. Her role in the Mission development has exceeded its initial purpose as well as your mortal role in creating a ground base for this teaching movement. Her continued role is to help foster other like-pattern ground-base developments as this Mission progresses, just as is your continued role. You, however, are now more capable to seek and incorporate the divine direction. You will always have her as more of a sister companion in this work now than as a Teacher/student role – yes, was a coworker. Is this making things more clear for you?

ROLAND: Yes, this does help, greatly.

[Personal questions and answers omitted.]

ABRAHAM: I am needing to cut our meeting time short for Calvin's communication with me is slipping. I wish to convey to each one of you present of my brotherly affection towards you, my fellow coworkers. My love is ever-present; feel this within your hearts. It is the love Michael and Mother lends to me, and I am privileged to share it with you. Until next week, shalom.

Pause to Allow Mother to Help | A Message From Mother
Abraham & Mother, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-16-1998

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings and welcome. It is always wonderful for me to meet with you and witness the various stages of development you are in. It is most excellent to see our students pause to consider personal spiritual inquiries.

More often than not do believers seek immediate answers to their questions and are burdened with anxiety and impatience. It seems to be more simple to pull out any quick and immediate answers that are available instead of taking time to pause. Your pausing is a prayer of sorts asking Father to intervene. Your stillness time could be considered as a pause. Your willingness to be patient is a pause. The rush for immediate answers can set up barriers that would deter you from more correct answers.

In our series on relationships, we have used Michael and Mother as an outstanding example; during our lessons we will keep them at the forefront of our minds. Michael is well known throughout the universe as a loving Brother/Father. He is a God-like outstanding personality. His public work throughout the universe does have many on a personal relationship with Him.

It is our intentions in this Correcting Time to bring a more complete picture of our divine Parents to you – that you may also know our Universe Mother better. Many individuals on a planet like yours have concepts of a Father that are either wrong or incomplete – this is also true with concepts of a Mother.

Mother, as I know Her, is a fountain of wisdom – common sense, if you will. Mother is always available to help clear cloudy vision to make light for new and better ways. Mother is strength, yes, and yet there is within Her the most gentlest of hearts. She is a giver of strength, and yet also, a Comforter.

Michael's spirit is known here as the Spirit of Truth. And I can complete your picture of our divine Parents by saying Mother's Spirit is a spirit of complete beauty. Beauty – meaning that total and complete acceptance of each individual child in existence. Beauty, in the manner in which She fusses over each child as if they were an only child. Beauty, as in one who upholds excellent humility. Beauty, in that She seeks to uphold and not control.

You have, over time, experienced Michael's personality as your Brother/Father,

Spirit of Truth, Creator – and that alone is quite exceptional, yes; but I can say to you that your new-found relationship with Mother shall complete your picture and give you the courage to take any and all things to your divine Parents. I give you our Divine MOTHER:

Greetings, my children. You know we have spoken before. I would have you know this evening that I know you each very well, and I can tell you that I am in complete love with you, each one. I know of your past regrets, pain, mistakes, shortcomings, flaws – and yet to me, your Mother, I see not any of that. I see in you, my children, a vast blossoming garden that brings much beauty and joy to us, your universe Parents.

I have known the darkest parts of your hearts, yes, and I can say that I have wept with you. I have also, grown with you. I have seen the adventurous glimmer in your eyes. I have felt your hope and I have heard your laughter. I can say to you there is not one thing unlovable about any of you. I see you in your potentials and find it utterly beautiful. I would say to you, each one, that my assistance is unending. My duty to uphold you each, is my supreme joy.

I am your Counselor in matters of the mind. I would have you know that Michael and I look upon your planet Urantia as another of our small children in which we are wholly committed to guide and teach and help to grow. Know that we, your universe Parents, are unceasingly striving for your growth and renewal of thinking.

I am personally at this time striving to increase education on mindal development, directing and guiding you who would have me guide. I am indeed grateful for our Mother/child connection, and always standing by your Brother/Father who is ever available for you to call upon. Allow me to bestow upon you my divine services.

Know that as you, our small children, grow, there are bumps and falls you must experience. Worry not; your Mother is at hand to help you regain your spiritual confidence. My love is always with you. I would give back to you your Teacher/friend and helper to us, our son Abraham.

My thanks is with you, my Mother. We are indeed envisioning a more enlightened world with your assistance and help in creating a more complete picture of you, our divine Parents. My friends, Mother and Michael do bring about great empowerment to each one of their children to go forth and complete the many tasks assigned to us. Concerning all the lessons we must complete, there is a tremendous amount of mindal strain. Mother and Her associates are well prepared to counsel anyone who would be burdened by this strain.

Relationships do bring about a great deal of strain and pressure. We are one another's assignments. We are one another's teachers and students. We are each other's reflections – past, present, and future. At times it appears there is no understanding to be had. There are times when verbal communication is not complete and the pressure causes relationships to be somewhat scarred.

With the strain of relationships, I would ask you to practice this week to 'pause.' Take a humbling moment to just stop and wait for assistance; a moment of clear thinking; a moment to allow Mother, in Her wisdom, to assist us in clearing our thinking, to make way for new and better ideas. I would ask you to practice this 'pause' to strengthen the muscles of patience. Patience is a valuable resource concerning relationships. Only a few questions.

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I would like to thank Mother Spirit for Her message to us and also thank Her for being with us. Our Creator Father, Michael, had seven bestowals He did complete in order to help Him with His knowledge and His understanding. Did our Mother Spirit have any form of bestowals or learning processes that She had to complete?

ABRAHAM: Mother's learning process was, in part, from the Supreme Being and Her connections to the mindal adjutant spirits. But, you see, Michael's experiences were also Mother's, and His knowledge was also Hers. Mother's assistance to the Supreme Being enables Her to have a broadened view of all experiential activity, yes. Good question, Rachel. Another question?

NORWOOD: Abraham, I have a question on training tonight. Mother talked about that, and I would like to ask a question if you please. The training that I have been going through – the uplifting of my understanding of the Father, the superuniverse, and central universe, in the past couple months – my understanding has been the advancement of ourselves from the 'creature' to the 'spirit;' and in that, there is a process that I feel like is taking place: There is a new clarity, a new understanding – that by living on Urantia and being a son and striving to do the Father's will, and understanding the Spirit, I have transferred myself from what I would call a material or mind existence, to a real spiritual mind understanding. And with that, I have discovered that this life here, as we all know, is a training world. But more than that, what we are doing here, and what we have been going through for the past few years here, I am learning that we are in practice at living the Father's will. We are experiencing what we would experience as we traverse the many lives on the Morontia Worlds, and that this mortal life is a starter. I have also wanted to ask a question – that as we are uplifted and as we are taught, as we learn – are there physical changes that take place in our bodies, such as during the period of time in the stillness, or the quietness – if there is a vibration that takes place? I feel this in my chest, and it vibrates, especially after a long period of discussion when I am in the spirit. I feel that there is a growth, there is a change, a transfer of personality that is taking place. I just wanted to ask you if you, or Mother, could talk about that with me for a few moments, please.

ABRAHAM: Yes, this world is indeed a training world where we are learning to live within Father's will; and yes, this will continue for worlds beyond this one. But I would say that the glories that you will experience beyond this world are unfathomable to you at this time. The training process becomes more difficult; and yet, the joy that is experienced, there are no words to describe. There is indeed a transformation that is constantly occurring in those that seek to live Father's will. There are more non-material aspects of the transformation than material. There is the Thought Adjuster growing from 'Adjuster' to 'Controller.' There are specific moral behaviors, modified. There are those obvious acts of brotherly love and service – and, there is really no proof that these things have taken place other than the spirit fruits produced. Concerning the physical aspects of the transformation – yes, there are certain glands that would work with the central nervous system that connects us to the Thought Adjuster and all cosmic circuits. And yes, there are vibrations felt (openings in the soul) that would receive spiritual light. There are indeed feelings of soul growth. And I can say, at times there could be some physical pain experienced, but not to worry, all of this is completely natural. Is this answering? (Norwood: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: Is there one more question?

CALVIN: (Question about information received and posted on the Internet from a Michael R. concerning 'his' communications with Christ Michael.)

ABRAHAM: My information is that most of his contacts are from Michael, our Brother/Father, but not all. There have been various Teachers helping him to train for his life's work and mission assignments. Does this answer? (Calvin: Perfectly answers. Thank you.)

I am in gratitude for our Divine Parents, for they make our meeting possible. My love is to them for allowing me to be here with you. Always is my love with you. Until next week, shalom.

Love With a Fatherly Affection | Do Not Allow Demands From Others To Weigh Us Down

I am ABRAHAM. I am without words to express my gratitude to Father for my assignment. I am overcome with joy at the thoughts of our gathering once again. I must say, your faith in me as your Teacher has helped me to excel, and your love for me as your friend has enabled me to ascend levels of spiritual joy. My thanks to you, my fellows.

In our series on relationships, we continue to focus on our divine Parents. Mother has pledged Her commitment to aid us in the area of the mind. The human mind is still a great mystery to even we who have transcended the mortal life. It is a difficult arena in which to teach. Our divine Coordinators have helped to arrange experience according to these lessons on relationships.

Tonight we would present to you the lesson on Fatherly affection. You each are in understanding of the difficulties in relationships. Many live their lives to be pleasing in others eyes. Having been born into this mortal life, there are certain habit patterns developed that would take a lifetime to understand. Mother is to assist us in the dissecting and comprehension of this concept. Once again, our MOTHER.

My children, it is my great pleasure to meet with you again. I thank you for your kind attention. When your Brother/Father lived His life in the flesh He was burdened by those normal demands of a growing family. Jesus had great pressure put upon Him to perform in various ways to gain the faith and trust of the people. When young, these demands were confusing and anxiety-causing.

The boy Jesus could be found questioning His adult superiors for direction on certain matters. The answers varied depending on what each individual desired to see happen – His mother would desire one thing, His father another, and His teachers yet another. In His youth, this brought Him some mindal strain; and through His practice of prayer and meditation He strengthened the bond between He and His Father in heaven.

In Jesus' later years He began to rely completely upon His Father in heaven for answers and direction to everything. Still, individuals demanded a certain performance from the Master – they desired certain behaviors and acts of miracles. Jesus, in His exceptional connection with His Father, His divine Father, was able to maintain His focus – which was disseminating the teachings of 'God as Father,' and 'man as brothers.' The mind-spirits were available to Him to draw upon when these demands were getting the better of His human heart.

My daughters (angelic orders) also assisted in His understanding of human behavior. Always the Master was made to pause and be patient in this strengthening process. This strengthening process led the Master to retain focus, to maintain confidence; for Jesus, you see, was loved with a Fatherly affection.

Our Supreme Father in heaven loves us with liberty; loves us with the bestowing of free will. Father loves not with control or a heavy hand, but with a breath of freedom that would make us take flight. A Fatherly affection is not one where you can be deprived 'if you do not meet His demands.' A Father's love is the gift of liberty and trust. He loves us; therefore, He allows us to fly – to make our own decisions, our own mistakes. He allows us to drink from the cup of experience and digest what we will in our own time and manner.

My children, I would put before you this evening a challenge – for you to love one another with a Fatherly affection; to love without restraint; to assist without control; to bestow liberty. I can say, my fondest hope would be for you each to completely believe that Michael and I love you with such Fatherly affection, such a devotion and bestowal of freedom. It is easily thought and said, but I would make it my goal to assist you each in actually feeling it and knowing it to the innermost core of your being.

I am at an end in my lesson. I would give you my fondest farewell and love, and assure you that I will return with further thoughts.

I am ABRAHAM. Our deepest regard to you, Mother, and gratitude for your superb lesson. To elaborate on Mother's lesson, I would say that those demands put upon you by your many relationships need not weigh you down, no. The pressures from those you love need not cause you to forget your focus. I would suggest that you begin to love with a Fatherly affection; and in turn, you will begin to receive it even greater in your own life. I would ask that you have further discussion on these new concepts if possible. For now, I would take questions.

NORWOOD: I am in deep appreciation for the words and love given by our Universe Mother. I'd like to tell you about an awakening that I've had. My oldest daughter will be giving birth to her first child in about twelve weeks. I have three other grandchildren, and with the birth of my fourth grandchild I have a new awakening of the personality that's coming. I have a new understanding, a new love of that child that I did not have with my children or my first three grandchildren. This studying that I have been doing for the past three or four months, and where I have been coming from the past ten years, I know has prepared me for this. But the awakening that I feel, the understanding that I feel for a new life, the love that I have for that new life, is so much different than what I had before. I just wanted to express that because Mother brought that out this evening in Her lesson. I felt that new love, that new understanding, for the past couple months; and I wasn't quite sure where it was coming from or why it was there. That's all.

ABRAHAM: Beautiful example of Fatherly affection – to love one only because they exist. There is nothing you can gain from such a tiny newborn life; and yet, there is already mutual love and respect on a soul level for this up and coming soul. Simply beautiful! I can appreciate the sharing of your experience, my son. Our Father is also one who could gain nothing from His children; and yet, He loves each one in a supremely personal way. His love allows us to climb and explore, to make decisions, to fall, to be lost and to find our way again. His love is an energy that we can be motivated by to take advantage of every moment in the flesh, and beyond.

CALVIN: Teacher Abraham, what a privilege to hear from our Mother again tonight. I am grateful for your lessons for they are helping us to have a greater awareness of our Mother and Her aspect of our creation, our existence, our minds. It helps me a lot on a personal level to connect because of your lessons; and in a way that I wasn't able to connect before. I don't know if you need to hear us discuss these things openly to know how effective your lessons are. And I am sure down the road I'll see and have an even more clear connection with our divine Parents, their overcare and assistance to us. Are we as a planet, and with this Correcting Time, on the verge of connecting with our unseen true spiritual government of this world? Are our divine Parents personally here as are the Archangel Divisional Headquarters? Can you address that?

ABRAHAM: I can tell you, yes, because of the restored circuits, our Parents are here, most personally, and are without conditions or limitations. They indeed are our Superiors from whom and from which we receive our orders. Beyond the mortal life, title and status are lax due to our expanded overall picture – where each one is regarded as a child of God with a name, personality, and a recognizable soul, as opposed to a position or title or rank. We can love with equality without knowing each one's universe position, job title, or years of seniority. Is this answering?

CALVIN: Yes, it is. Speaking of 'title,' the Urantia Book talks of 'a John the Baptist' who will help usher in today's realization of Michael's presence, His second coming. Some believe this is an actual person who will help bring a new revelation, or that reality, to today's human consciousness – today's world. We have discussed it tonight as it being perhaps a collective title maybe. Could you help us with the title as presented in the Urantia Book of "a John the Baptist's" assistance in this unfolding?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Yes, I can say that the earnest seekers of spiritual revelation (Michael's teachings) are those believers in the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. I can confirm that you, our Mission participants, act as a collective John the Baptist. You are the receivers of our message. You are also the disseminators. John, having a seemingly small role in your planet's history, made the way clear for our Master who was to bring about great change. You, my friends, are as such – ambassadors who will make ready for mass spiritual change and enlightenment. Is this answering? (Calvin: Yes it does, very much. Thank you.)

Abraham: One more question?

If there are no further questions, I would express my love and gratitude to you and ask that you give good effort to understand what it is to love with a Fatherly affection. Until next week, shalom.

To Love With A Fatherly Affection, Bestowing Freedom, Is To Embrace Truth

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you here this evening. What a wonderful display of friendship – each one upholding the other in everyday mortal living; this kind of support and upholding is sometimes rare. We are indeed blessed to have this circle of friendship.

I can see you find it easier to love one another here with a Fatherly affection. Each of you share a common ground, a mutual respect. In your basic mortal living, however, you do find it difficult to use spiritual concepts with those who seem to understand you 'less than' do your fellows here in this group. However, we are indeed grateful to meet weekly to drink from the well of spiritual refreshment.

Mother's lesson on loving with a Fatherly affection will take time and practice for you to see positive results. Our Mother endeavors to upgrade the thinking patterns of all Urantians to promote Light and Life.

My greetings is with you, my children. I am your MOTHER. It is said that our Father did not say the way to Him was easy, but only that you would never have to endure it alone. Our lessons regarding relationships have a great deal to do with the growth of the mind. The mind has a direct influence upon the growth of the soul. The mind is what filters information leading to meanings and values which the soul can comprehend.

Urantian psychologists have a great deal of research data concerning mindal development; they have made great strides in promoting good mental health; and I could say that this is well, but not complete. Do you see, those who radiate well-balanced mental health are those who are involved in some sort of spirituality.

As small children grow, they take in the habits of those who teach them. They learn that when touching a hot stove, there is indeed pain. They also learn that certain behaviors attract varying degrees of love or punishment. The good parent attempts to put a spiritual emphasis on the good as well as the bad. In the pain of a burn, the good parent explains the importance and value of experience, the knowledge of positive and negative.

The good parent is ever willing to confess an incomplete knowledge of many topics on mortal living and always leaves room for flexibility and change. With evolution, there is growth and understanding. The good parent can rejoice in the new knowledge instead of regretting the past. The good parent can carry on without self-chastisement or self-aggrandizement – there is only the understanding that mortal living is always in transformation; always moving at its own momentum. Do you see, in the ways of the mind there is always new growth, new possibilities, new potentials.

Your regrets from the past can be lessons on good mental health of today. I would seek to assist you in your understanding of your personal evolution, your transforming of confusion and pain into spiritual meanings and values. I have made it my task to consult with each one of you who would have me to assist in understanding past pain and confusion. I would seek to assist you in changing certain mindset patterns into productive spiritual meanings and values.

Your relationships help to create your mindal makeup. From birth to death, your mortal fellows do have influence, and you also have influence on them. For Urantia to move successfully into the stages of Light and Life there needs to be a great deal of work and research – study on the mind and its environment.

I would not confuse you with more lesson-tasks than to just request that you seek to make effort to love with a Fatherly affection; to bestow freedom and take example from the good Parent. In your stillness practice, have on hand pen and paper. I should attempt to touch base with each of you during the week. Have your questions ready. Farewell.

I am ABRAHAM. Our gratitude to you, Mother, for your time spent with us is as an outpouring of love. Your time taken to carefully educate our beloved students is a wonderful show of Fatherly affection.

In a Father's affection we find freedom; and yet, many times find ourselves in turmoil, for Fatherly affection is not mere pleasantries, no, but a magnificent show of passion for truth. When you love with a Fatherly affection, bestowing freedom, there is a love without conditions; and yet I can say that there is some possibility that there is a tendency to cover-over with pleasantries or niceties. Therefore, I would say to love with a Fatherly affection. 'Bestowing freedom' is to embrace truth. It is said that the truth shall set you free. Our Master was indeed a recipient of this freedom.

My friends, our spiritual Mission is not for the halfhearted, but for those who can take the hard truths with grace. Time permitting, have discussion on loving with a Fatherly affection – bestowing freedom and truth, and those attributes of the good Parent. A few questions?

INERA: Abraham, thank you very much for last week in answering Anesia's question and putting not only her in a peaceful place, but also myself, her earthly mother. Is there a time to walk away from a relationship, give up completely and throw in the towel? Are we ever finished with our relationships?

ABRAHAM: There are relationships that will not find resolution here on this world; there is a time for detachment; there is a time to pause. Whether the doors are open to remain in the relationship, or to be detached, your Father makes it known to you. There is love, yes; and then there is a 'fear of loss' in separating. Your best example would be found in the life of Jesus. The Master loved His human family with all His heart; and yet when there was demand upon Him to compromise His spiritual beliefs, the Master had to follow His internal compass and become detached. This detachment does not mean love is lost, no; this means that there is freedom and removal of pressures that cause individuals to repeat certain patterns to pacify their 'fear of loss.' The Master, being so devoted to His Father in heaven, had freedom from this 'fear of loss.' His deepest love resided within His very being. Is this answering? (Inera: Very much. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

CALVIN: I have the feeling that you have some words for me Abraham.

ABRAHAM: Yes. I am confirming your gift of transmitting. I was hoping to relay to you that time for private meetings would do much good for your fellows. Is it possible for you to assist with private meetings? (Calvin: Yes, I can assist.) Abraham: Excellent. Our Mission is being more closely knitted together, and personal private meetings help to create closeness and balance. More information for you, my son, at another time.

If there are no questions, I would express my faith in each of you. Know that you have my love. Be not discouraged on the difficulty of these lessons. You will more clearly discern Mother's message with Her assistance in daily living. Allow Her that place in your life; look for Her during the week. Until next week, shalom.

Mistakes Are Evolutionary Growth | No Need for Self-Condernation, but Self-Forgiveness Instead

Abraham & Mother, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-06-1998

[There was a pre-lesson discussion on some world events and even some 'group-events' of the past week which brought out some heated and opposing viewpoints among the group, but still we coalesced to forge ahead with our common goals of the Correcting Time.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, and welcome. It is my great honor to be here with you this evening. What a beautiful display of Fatherly affection in combination with truth. The experience here this evening was the lesson. How excellent it is to find our students unafraid of rolling up their sleeves to engage in real work. Your relationships are real work. To cover-over with pleasantries and think there will be other lessons to bring out truth, is missed opportunities. Not to worry, your opportunities will come around again.

It is told to me by Mother that the communications this week were quite successful and there is still mindal work to be done. Many of you have experienced numerous memories of the past that would have perhaps caused you great pain; and in the dissection of these memories there has been great lessons learned and healing has begun. It is becoming more clear to you how certain mindal habit patterns originated. It is becoming clear to you that your actions were understandable and indeed a part of evolutionary soul growth.

We have spoken on the topic of forgiveness and Fatherly affection concerning your fellows. Tonight we would ask that you strive to focus on forgiveness and Fatherly affection concerning yourselves. Again I give you, our Mother.

Greetings, children. What an experiential honor it is for me to be here personally doing what I love. In spirituality, many find it is a bit more easy to forgive others than to have self-forgiveness. Many condemn themselves to a life of atonement or having to pay back certain debts – payback for mistakes made. In this self-condemnation, there is such a condemning shadowing; and yet, there is light that could perhaps be shined and shared.

Many mortals find that self-punishment is a way to atone for the past. This self-punishment is crushing to the soul. In my work to touch base with you I endeavor to help you have self-understanding. Self-understanding is removing the shadow that keeps you imprisoned.

To completely believe, without a doubt, that you are an evolutionary being is to not have concern for self-condemnation. To have memory of past circumstances and actions taken does lead to healing and self-forgiveness – an understanding that yes, you have always had the best of intentions although things may not have turned out satisfactorily.

Your relationships have either helped you to condemn yourself, or have helped you feel loved with the bestowal of freedom. You must believe that each person is most of the time thinking they are doing the very best that they are capable of. Real forgiveness begins with yourself. Real capacity to 'bestow' Fatherly affection begins with being able to 'receive' Fatherly affection.

Our Master, believing He had such Fatherly affection, made no apologies for normal evolutionary mistakes. He believed himself to be a learning child and found no need for self-forgiveness. He found it not within Father's will to have self-condemnation. In His knowledge of Father, He saw no need for self-punishment. Mistakes made by Him were to be made known so He may begin correction. His mistakes were made known by Father to His conscience and He understood Father to have corrective action ready for Him to take action on.

I would ask you, my children, for your own awareness to lean toward this week on the receiving of personal Fatherly affection and self-understanding, self-forgiveness. Be aware of my presence to aid you in your endeavors to find these divine keys. My Fatherly affection is with you, always. Until we meet again, farewell.

I am ABRAHAM. Our gratitude to Mother for a well-prepared lesson. It is my desire to see those who have such harsh self-judgment be made to understand that the Father himself has indeed forgiven you and would never condemn you as you might condemn yourself. In the upgrading of mindal thought patterns of Urantia, we would find a great deal of healing when those that find a need to punish themselves cease, with the knowledge that their mistakes are just evolutionary growth.

Remember to look for Mother this week and find it within yourselves to roll up your sleeves and do the real work. Time is not permitting questions. I will be able to answer questions next week. My Fatherly affection is also with you. Until next week, shalom.

Mortal Attachments We Must Let Go Of In Order To Grow

I am ABRAHAM. I am with great love and respect for each one of you. I am always made glad by our visits. I am highly grateful for our friendship. I deem myself blessed for knowing you and having a relationship with you. I do endeavor to bestow Fatherly affection, allowing you each your life-experience, opinions, and personal definitions of things spiritual.

I would not ever make it my place to have you feel as I do, to have opinions the same as my own, no. I am not offended when my words are not met with your approval, nor do I take offense at your reactions or personal characteristic traits. I am attempting to love with the bestowal of freedom.

Mother's request last week was for you to have this same love for yourselves, allowing yourselves the freedom to live fully through all mortal living experiences, allowing yourselves room for evolutionary growth - feeling no pressure about the time taken for stumbling. Fatherly affection and self-forgiveness applied to your own lives will help you to lose some of those unrealistic fears and habits, yes, to make way for new evolutionary lessons.

To continue in the habit of self-punishment is really a great sadness in those forces that aid in your ascension. Self-punishment has always been a form of sacrifice or atonement to the gods. I can say, to believe you are deserving of punishment or negative happenings is no less than a prison which limits you in attaining those things you would desire for yourself; and also, those things God would desire for you.

Mother has asked you to review life memories that you might gain a more clear understanding, self-forgiveness, and healing - yes, to promote well-balanced mental health. She also shares these lessons now at this time to upgrade our thinking concerning relationships. In your mortal life, your fellows before your eyes would appear to be your closest relationships; I can say, maybe not the closest but most definitely important.

This evening, I would speak for a moment on mortal attachments - those attachments we must let go in order to grow.

Many mortals down through history found that a man's most prized possession was the people that belonged to him - the people made him who he was. In the days of old, a man could bargain or trade these people for goods. It is somewhat like that today when in relationships people are thought of as property or goods to be bargained to reflect who an individual is. Of course mortals have a great need to belong and have companionship, yes, and most mortals would sacrifice a great many things for this attachment.

Tonight our focus would be on redefining your connection with others – maintaining a healthful connection as opposed to a limiting attachment. It is easy to see that one who would not bestow love with a Fatherly affection would be considered as in an unhealthy attachment. But going deeper, the illness would really lie in the limitation that is produced. If one feels that they must change their true unique selves to maintain good relationships, this is unhealthy attachment; and it would be wise to investigate, to re-think the relationship.

This week I would ask that you review your relationships. Are they ‘healthful connections?’ or ‘unhealthy attachments.’ We will continue to speak on this next week. Have you questions?

RACHEL: Yes, Father Abraham. This is a question I wanted to ask last week while we were still studying about Mother Spirit. One: On Urantia, the term mother or daughter denotes a female gender. What does it denote on the spiritual worlds? Number two: When you see Mother Spirit, how does Her appearance differ from that of male gender Spirits, such as Prince Machiventa Melchizedek, Christ Michael, and so on? Number three: If I were on the Mansion Worlds and I could see two spirits side by side – without asking, would I be able to denote their gender?

ABRAHAM: Gender, beyond the mortal life, is more perhaps recognized on a soul level. A perception through internal feelings. Not so much visual do you recognize gender, but by mindal recognition. Mother (to me) is recognized first in my mind as Co-creator, Parent, Caretaker. My first recognition is not male nor female. My recognition of Her is based on my internal understanding, not my visual. Mother's personality is powerful and yet, by Her personal traits I could describe Her as complete grace. I could describe Mother as the ‘water of life,’ as in fluid and in motion. I could perceive from my internal feelings She is the embodiment of true beauty. Her caretaking abilities are gentle, and yet, fierce in power and passion. I also would perceive Michael as Creator, Parent and Caretaker, Brother, Father. The first perception I receive of Michael is not male nor female but as Creator, Parent, Caretaker. Are you understanding?

RACHEL: Yes, I am. I am understanding what you are saying. I really and truly asked some of this for all the different women that are wondering about the equality between the male and female on the Mansion Worlds.

ABRAHAM: I can understand, and I would find it most wonderful if our earthly sisters could feel the most excellent equality that our female personalities feel here. Good question Rachel. Another question?

ROLAND: In the Urantia Book's Part IV, John Mark went with Jesus into the hills for a day and they had discourse. One of the things that was brought up was that Jesus knew that John Mark would be a loyal devoted servant because of the first eight years of his life he was exposed to a loving family and parents who showed true affection for one another. Also, it indicated in that story a comparison with one, Amos, that he wasn't as fortunate as was John Mark; that Amos carried scars from the experience of his first eight years that would make him not as well known or as trustworthy. In those first eight years of our lives we are all adversely affected, to some degree or another, by harsh negative situations. That being said, my question to you is: Do these adverse effects of childhood ascend with us throughout our ascension? As we ascend, are we limited by our early childhood experience?

ABRAHAM: Only by the choices you make. Whether one is hindered by past traumatic events, or is made stronger by them, the decision is always up to the individual; and if this 'strengthening' is to continue into the morontia life experiencing, then so be it, perfectly acceptable. Yes. Does this answer?

ROLAND: Yes, it does. I am supposing that as we get to Light and Life on this world that mothers and fathers know how to raise their children in ways so they don't have negative self-images. That must be something that during our morontial training we are taught from once having a negative self-image. Would that be a correct statement?

ABRAHAM: Yes. In planetary evolution, the knowledge is greater and mistakes are fewer, but I mean not to cast a negative light upon the parents of this age. I would say there are parents who care deeply and are not equipped with the tools wherewith to raise children with a positive self-image. I do say also, that great strides are being taken to educate and allow for the earth's people to understand that the love and time taken today for a child, prevents future societal problems. But yes, you are correct in that children raised in worlds settled in Light and Life have a greater chance for success. Does this answer?

ROLAND: It does. I don't mean to take up a lot of time, but the practical matter of this is for all of us who possess perhaps damaged self-images from those first eight years – what attitude should we take and how should we pray to correct that?

ABRAHAM: An attitude to take is not one of 'helpless victim,' but as one who has been given more advanced lessons to become an excellent server in our Father's kingdom. Pray for understanding and strength to endure the hard truths, and allow our divine Parents to bestow upon you the understanding of your true status as a child of God. Another question?

KURT: Yes. Are we at a 'spiritual level' now on this world or in the near future – where we will be able to consciously make the choice – of either to 'not exist any longer' or to move on by way of fusing with our Thought Adjuster. And could you give us some help with some way or path that we can communicate better with our Thought Adjuster so we can get a better co-existence with Him?

ABRAHAM: These concepts are in the text (Urantia Book); but I can say this, that yes, there is a choice each one must make – to choose survival, or not, upon death or shortly thereafter. All understanding is given to the one who would make the survival choice. All life experience is to be understood, and it is easier to make a decision from this broadened perspective. Meditation, or the stillness, is your best exercise for Thought Adjuster connection. A humble heart, one who is allowing for Father's answers instead of their own, makes for a strengthened bond between you and your Father. Stillness practice, in combination with a good balance of humility, is good to start with; and with time passing, the connection is more constant. Does this answer? (Kurt: Yes, thank you.) Abraham: One more question?

CALVIN: Abraham, in the Urantia Book it talks about the Universal Conciliators, a group of four individuals who are available to go to the mortal worlds to help solve mortal conflicts or deadlocked decision-making. It also talks about what it refers to as the 'trio arbitrator referees' as the referees of worlds; they have many levels, from the mortal world up through the superuniverse level; but on the superuniverse level they are no longer 'arbitrators' but 'explainers of mystery,' and so on. On the mortal level, one of the four is called a divine executioner whose purpose it is to make contact with the mortal races of men to present the decision of the three. My question: Is that something that we can begin to make use of on this planet? Or, is it something that is more of a Light and Life type world availability, and not an isolation world protocol? (From UB Paper 25, pages 275-279)

ABRAHAM: My information is that the Conciliators are already functioning on Urantia. Urantia is no longer considered isolated. There is a great amount of work to do for all the divine forces, yes.

I am slipping. I would ask again that you attempt to redefine your relationships and make notes if possible. My love is with you always. Until next week, shalom.

Healthful Connections | Not In Controlling Others

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you, my fellow travelers. What a beautiful discussion, so productive in the fruits of the Spirit. This evening I would like to discuss more on turning unhealthy attachments into healthful connections.

You, my students who have so long searched for things spiritual, have learned a great deal on human relationships. You each are seeing how no one mortal should be in complete control of all that is. Even so – in our Teaching Mission, no mortal sits at the helm of the station based here on Urantia. It is also true within your personal relationship experiences – no one mortal should be able to dominate another, nor should one seek to be dominated.

It behooves us to look upon many mortal relationships that could have met with success, but instead there appeared to be such struggle over individual-perceived destiny. Each individual holds personal dreams, and seeks to fulfill those dreams through various means; they all too often expect their fellows to relinquish personal desires in order to partake in the success of their own dream fulfillment.

There are a great many mortals who strive to have control over the lives of others. You, my mortal friends, know this can only meet with disappointment. Even parents realize sooner or later that their children are unique individuals destined to follow their own inner guidance, their own path. The good parent knows that to make demands upon a growing/seeking child has been the cause of much rebellion. The good parent bestows Fatherly affection in that there is the bestowal of freedom – and, allowance to make mistakes.

You would agree that you cannot control individuals, nor be controlled by them – this is in disagreement with our spiritual laws. You would not find our Father in such manipulation of His children, no. Our Father loves deeply each individual's unique personality; the desire to control individuals extinguishes their uniqueness.

Father loves with free will and allows His children to come to Him. He would not force a child to embrace Him and His teachings, no; the forcing would be such a corruption of real love, true love. It is understandable to pressure those you love to embrace you and your ideas, yes, this is basic animal desire. But to you my fellow seekers – understand that to bestow Fatherly affection enables others to soar with your assistance, not with your control and demands. This is maintaining a healthful connection.

Our Father would find no purpose for our existence if He were to completely control us through manipulations of coercion. Without His bestowal of free will there is only mechanistic overcontrol – there is neither truth, beauty, nor goodness in the controlling of your personal relationships. Do you see, you need not do one thing to earn Father's love? It is so. You cannot work to make a preferred seat next to Him, no. He loves you because you are.

My friends, we would assist you in having this bestowed freedom for your own relationships. You must allow others their free will experience, and if this does not include you, then so be it. The attempts to have control in your relationships defies Father's spiritual laws. To transform your unhealthy attachments into healthful connections, consider your efforts put forth to gain control. Find a moment to ponder the fear of loss. To not release control in relationships is congruent with fear of loss.

This week, ponder over how our attraction to Father begins with His allowance of free will. What keeps you seeking for things spiritual? Would it be a controlling spiritual Father that continually pressures you to find Him? If time permits, discuss ways on how to be less controlling and more growth-promoting, bestowing Fatherly affection. Have you questions?

ROLAND: Abraham, in our relationships with our fellow mortals – more specifically male/female relationships, what characteristics of that relationship would be good to understand; and, what purpose do these relationships create other than the procreation of the race? Can you help us with that?

ABRAHAM: Yes. The male/female is possibly the most difficult relationship mortals experience. Male/female relationships require the exercising of unconditional love; it is not so natural as in parent/child or sibling love. It is possible for couples to have such, yes, but not without effort and hard work on each one's part – to embrace a balance of humility and willingness to accept one another's differences. Unconditional love is sometimes too high of a price to be paid concerning marriage or male/female relationships; each one is scrambling to maintain their personal identity, all the while seeking for acceptance of their personal identities from the other. The 'male/female relationship experience' is a necessary experience in that it supplies so many spiritual realities and eternal concepts. Our Creator Parents are an excellent example of diverse personalities incorporating unconditional love – love based on nothing except for the existence of one another. The example of our Creator Parents is an ideal relationship for all mortals to strive for. Excellent question my son, Roland. Another question?

ROLAND: Thank you. That was an excellent answer. [laughter.] In relationships, it seems to me that Jesus asked His apostles to forsake their families. They were young men so some of them were newly married, and some of them had young children. He asked them to make sure they were provided for, yes, but to follow Him. My question today is: I understand our ultimate relationship goal would be to follow Jesus in our lives. Are we to get to a place where we can forsake everything else, and make that our primary relationship – with Michael?

ABRAHAM: Yes and no. Yes, to have Father and our universe Co-Parents as our primary relationship. It is said that if you seek the kingdom of God first, all else will be provided. The apostles were asked to follow Jesus, and that was their focus. Do you see, the focus is not to forsake your family, but to follow Jesus and his example. Jesus did make sure all families were provided for and well looked-after – even as he did for his own mother and siblings. The Master did not ask His apostles to donate any more of their lives than does your military require. This time spent with the Master was indeed short – after which most of the apostles returned home better enlightened to carry on their lives with their families; yes, better enlightened and with more ability to reveal these teachings to their families and to succeeding generations. Yes, the Master asks that you ‘follow Him,’ and that is more our focus than to forsake families. The real ministry is to the family; and, to the growth and nurturing of succeeding generations.

CALVIN: Abraham, on this relationship thing: We were talking in the lesson last week about the need to have detachment from those who would interfere with our spiritual growth; and, I would say, those who would interfere with our relationship in following the Master. My question is – are you saying to ‘physically’ get away from them? or just to detach from their continual nagging, so to speak – to let the nagging go on and just keep going on about our business anyway, yet to detach emotionally?

ABRAHAM: Not so much a detachment as in ‘severance,’ but a transformation of ‘unhealthy attachment’ to a ‘healthful connection;’ and, to producing more spiritual fruits within relationships instead of making way for spiritual poisons. Yes, detachment is meaning so many things. Detachment as in ‘severance,’ is almost a last resort. ‘Transformation’ is a good focus to have. Father would have us promote healing rather than flee from those who drag us down. Does this answer?

CALVIN: Yes, I guess it goes along with rolling up the sleeves and being willing to do the hard work, not take the easy way out. Yes.

ABRAHAM: My gratitude is with you each who seek to learn these spiritual lessons. Your patience is admirable. My love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Example of Fatherly Affection Is To Bestow Freedom to Accept or Reject

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-27-1998

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome, my friends. It is always a source of joy to meet with you. I am intrigued by your questions and energized by your searching. I would make it a point at this time to remind you, my friends, that this method of communication that is before you now is not for a certain few that would make effort, no. The gift of transmission-receiving is for every individual in earnest searching.

You can see our communication is two-way. I am not put before you to assign tasks in order that you learn your lessons, no; and I would not ever cross over the line of free will. Your input to me is as important as these lessons we receive. I trust we maintain a healthful connection. Your faith in me and in these lessons allows me to better teach. My faith in our divine Parents enables me to release any results with regard to my teaching. I can impart helpful words to you and then allow the Spirit of Truth to turn these words into meanings and values. From there, the choice is yours, your free will, intact.

Do you see the beauty in the bestowal of Fatherly affection? You return weekly on your own accord to receive these divine lessons. There are no attempts made to force certain lessons upon you. You, in your freedom, elect to be present and learn of these divine realities. You would agree that there is no controlling circumstances that bring you back weekly, no. There is no fear of loss should you forgo these lessons. Therein lies the comfort of our divine Parents, who leave a lamp burning for each child to enter when ready.

As you have discussed, there are those who would seek to be controlled; there is a fear of faithlessness in their own abilities to search for God; there is very little confidence in what they think they know. There will be many individuals you will meet such as these; and to them, your inner confidence shows attractive. It is on a soul level that individuals will recognize this 'inner confidence' within your personality makeup; and to this I can say, many will be inspired to search for their own inner confidence.

Over the next few weeks, I would ask you to continue in your discussions on relationships, and I will meet with you to answer personal questions. If there are questions you have thought to ask but time did not permit, I will take these next few weeks to assist you with anything I can. Have you questions?

ROLAND: Abraham, I have been reading the Jesus papers again in the section where Jesus began to teach in parables. He gave a number of reasons why it was beneficial to teach in parables. First, it allowed people to hear a story that they could relate to and they could hear it with their own spiritual level of understanding. Are we to develop this ability to likewise teach in parables, as apostles of the modern day?

ABRAHAM: Some, yes. There are everyday circumstances which people could share in an effort to teach. These are lessons individuals actually live, and in the sharing of them can assist others with their life-lessons. There is not need for the 'developing of special talent' so that one might give to another a parable, no. The parables are simply the retelling of Father's fingerprints in your daily living and the lessons you learned from them. Is this answering?

ROLAND: Yes, it is. I am sure I will get more out of your answer in reading it again. Another quandary: A part of the experience of Jesus with the apostles at the end was that He asked them to hide, except for John the younger, who was allowed to be with the Master during the time of trial and crucifixion. In that same section, He said to one of the apostles: "Your purpose is to live long on the Earth so that you may win many souls to the kingdom." That is really the first time I have really absorbed that as an overall purpose of perhaps one's life, and to a certain point, of coming to a reality of understanding. Would you comment as to how that purpose might affect us?

ABRAHAM: As I understand it, I can say the Master's words to this individual was for him, personally – it was a mission task, of sorts. I do not, however, understand your meaning. Is there a question on how this may apply in your mortal life, my son?

ROLAND: I guess I could be more specific in the sense that when I read that it resonated with me as truth for me. My purpose could, as well, be the joy of bringing people into the kingdom. It would be a great purpose to adopt and I would be joy-filled to do so. So my question is: Could I adopt that as an overall purpose?

ABRAHAM: Yes, if it is your desire. Your Father knows of your dedication to introducing individuals to Him. This is well. It is not required of any mortal to 'win souls for the kingdom' or recruit for Father, no. A splendid way of perceiving this would be to acquainting individuals with Father for their benefit, not for Father's, and not 'for the growth of the kingdom,' no, but to simply extend love and fellowship to your fellows, a gift to give, I suppose. Father appreciates the introductions, and He then can take it from there. Yes, I understand your meaning now. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I am intrigued by the work Mother is doing with our minds, the circuitry, the work with the energy. From my point of view, what I can do with that is to get to know my divine Parents, to practice stillness. To me it is like with the inner-child work; it is like going into my past and looking at wreckage, if you will. That's my side of it, what I can do. Is it more than that? or is it just allowing our new circuitry. Is it just stuff that's going on just on an energy level? Also, are there other ways in which Mother is helping, circuit-wise and energy-wise? Are the set-patterns we have, are they a rut that we have to work out of through regular life-experiencing? or is She also helping us to get out of that rut?

ABRAHAM: I understand. Yes, Mother assists us in reconditioning our thought patterns. There are Her adjutant mind-spirits who assist individuals in their efforts to be liberated from negative cycles. There are some ministries found on the cosmic mindal circuit to aid in your efforts to ascend; and yet, the real change begins with taking action, actually finding the courage to move from one pattern into the unknown. The divine sources assist you, yes, and as you have discovered, the real work is yours. Another question?

MIRIAM: In the cosmic mind circuitry, is it like I was reading on the Internet this week wherein someone was talking about a teacher who was telling a student how to approach her childhood issues, and the Teacher was giving the person guidance to work with their crown and heart chakra, like Orin and Dibin work with energy centers, their light work. If any student in this mission finds something like that they are drawn towards, is that a beneficial thing to work with? or is it just better to go with the flow of what is in front of you in daily life and with these lessons?

ABRAHAM: Yes, each individual will be drawn to various techniques in one way or another, and only time can prove if these are helpful or not. If you find positive means in which to aid you in your understanding, then by all means use it. You have explored enough spiritual techniques to which you can trust yourself – your divine guidance, to know if these will serve you. Does this help?

MIRIAM: Yes. You know how I internalize the negative stuff and how I have a physical ordeal going with doing that. Do certain parts of the body hold certain types of negative energies?

ABRAHAM: Yes, they do. Yes, the human brain in its complexities, is connected to various neurons that would send signals through the central nervous system that would cause illness, for example, a repressed personality would feel arthritic and constrained in movement. Does this answer? (Miriam: Yes. Thank you so much.)

Abraham: One more question?

CALVIN: Abraham, you asked a couple of times that the group be able to meet with you, individually, and that I should let the group know when I am ready to assist in this (transmission-receiving for them). Were you referring to these group members only? or also other interactions that I have with persons outside the group?

ABRAHAM: No, not this group only can you provide personal meetings, but for any who would seek spiritual assistance. It matters not the group affiliation. Minister to where you find a need. The more private meetings you can have, the better and more accurate will your transmissions be. Yes. Is this answering? (Calvin: Yes, it does very well. That is what I needed to know.)

I would return next week to answer any questions you might have – those things personal concerning the mortal life or, perhaps the spiritual life. We have found it helpful to take a moment to minister to our students on a personal interactive level. Have your questions ready for next week. My love goes with you always. Until next week, shalom

Personal Questions

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you, my friends. It is always a great pleasure for me to meet with you, personally – or, in the group. This past week was indeed an exercise for you each in expanding your capacities to receive divine messages; an exercise for you to build the muscle of faith with common sense and practicality. Many have found that if they have questions, that in the ‘asking,’ the answer is forthcoming.

You can begin to trust yourselves concerning the receiving of divine word. This lesson has taught us that Father's presence is at hand and His wisdom is immediate. An agenda-free inquiry is a wonderful setup for a pure answer. A humble heart is always apt to receive answers, even concerning the smallest of questions. I would at this time begin taking what questions you have:

HONORAY: Father Abraham, I would above all like to thank you for your visit yesterday. You said that you would visit each one of us this week. I was very happy to have your visit yesterday at a very interesting time. I think the hardest relationship I've had in years is with my nephew. You were here when I went the rounds with him a little bit yesterday. Sometimes I feel like I am making headway, and other times I still have the urge to slap him and tell him to shut up. But I think I did a little bit better yesterday. Do you think I am improving in the way I am dealing with him? It was different yesterday than usual.

ABRAHAM: I was perceiving yesterday that your frame of mind was in a searching mode. Your love for your nephew compels you to do right by him. You hesitate with your words so as to not offend but to help. This hesitation is the asking for Father to be involved. It is the asking for Father's wisdom. My daughter Honoray, you have well learned not to lean upon your own wisdom, but that of the living God. Your great faith has been your salvation. You have a tremendous love for individuals, and I would ask that you allow this love to show more freely, especially with your dear nephew. Your words to him, when tempered with love, will appear to be more as a help instead of criticism. Yes, my daughter, Honoray, you do well. Is this answering? (Yes. Thank you.) Another question?

ELLEN: I'll ask one for Nina. She wants to know if you can speak a little about her grandmother with Alzheimer's. It is painful for her to go visit her, and there is guilt if she doesn't.

ABRAHAM: I am aware of this dilemma. When the intelligent-self speaks, it reasons that your grandmother is absent, and 'therefore, why be burdened by the sorrowful vision.' The emotional-feeling-self speaks of past love and of life shared; and these memories would confirm loyalty. The animal (or ego-self) would tend to banter at you with guilt and the questioning of your loyalty. The ego-animal-self would drag you down a path of negativity which would force you to flee from this painful situation. Do you see, my daughter, if you can move past the ego the answer will become clearer? There will be no guilt, no regret, just experience. My recommendation for you is to make a last visit to distinguish for yourself the answer. I can confirm your grandmother is beyond knowledge of her immediate surroundings, but her indwelling Father Fragment is certainly watching over those things that she will need concerning her morontia career. Another question?

TECTRA: I'll ask a question, Abraham. Can you give me some words of recommendation or encouragement on how to get over the anxiety and fear that I feel about some of the things I have to do with the upcoming Facilitator College?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Going into the unknown is always going to produce some anxiety. This anxiety is an over-storing of energy and can be manifested in physical ways, ways that could cause illness even. But also can this energy be put to a positive use where great goals can be accomplished. On the anxiety scale, there can appear to be a message within, yes, saying that there may be the need to rethink certain decisions. I would say to connect with Father and confirm this is indeed His will for you. My son Tectra, this education is quite a leap for you in terms of stating your spirituality, your intentions, with your spiritual knowledge. Many can study the spiritual life; they can act with high moral standards and they can portray to the world that they have a good and kind heart, yes, but when spirituality calls for action and hard work, there is a tendency to hold back to where it was safe – safe in studying spirituality, not demonstrating it. I doubt not your capabilities as a facilitator. You do indeed portray many of the Master's fine qualities. To you, my son, I would ask that you spend time with the Master and ask for His strength in faith. Remain unshakable in His beliefs. Feel the strength in His character, and His focus to always be about the Father's business. Does this answer? (Tectra: Thank you so much, yes.) Abraham: You're welcome.

INERA: Abraham, and don't mince words please, I can take it. What is the one thing that I do which holds me back in spiritual growth that I could work on – that I sabotage myself with and hold myself back with?

ABRAHAM: I am understanding that you know this answer. I can give you what I perceive to be a stumbling block in your life. I am understanding you to be a believer in good or bad luck. I can envision you as a leaf blowing in the wind. I can see the true essence of your soul that is surrounded by much past beliefs or repeated patterns. My perception of your stumbling block is – the foundation of your faith holds too much and there is little room to build upon, to make room for new light. There is the core of Inera who is a beautiful child of our Father, who is complete in her potential, who is, every day, becoming. And around this core is a collage of protection, beliefs of mysticism or past painful regrets. My daughter, it is my recommendation that you allow the things of old to die, to pass away, while you allow your true self to come through to be reborn every day. Allow those things that may have protected you, yes, but did not serve you, to pass away. Each day, know that you are being reborn. And those things that you cling to – if they are to serve you, then worry not; those things that do not serve you, allow them to pass away. You are a spirit-filled daughter with so much to offer and the true essence of you is truly beautiful. Allow it to show more. Seek not to burden yourself with redemption of sorts, no. Seek to lighten your load with humor and laughter. Is this at all helping? (Inera: Yes. Thank you very much.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

CALVIN: I have one. Sorry if it is off the lesson, but Steve Hecht, myself, and another fellow, are preparing a statement for a discussion board called 'TM Talk' – an Internet discussion list between hardline Urantia Book folks and Teaching Mission folks. It is our hope that we can pitch it as a Urantia Book believers family – and yet, air out our differences in a way in which you have been teaching us. So in the introductory that we would present, do you have anything you would like to suggest? or any insight before we launch into this?

ABRAHAM: I am remembering what the Master has often said: "One who is confident in his own beliefs feels not threatened by another's." There is only good to come from the exposing of truth. You, Calvin, are a diligent worker to start this project and tend to the first shoots of its growth. Seek to unite in ways of the heart and not the mind. Is this answering? (Calvin: Very good. Thanks.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

CLAIREESA: Father Abraham, I'd like to ask if I am on the right track with my healing process and working with Gloria and the streams of white light? Could you give me any insight on that?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I am understanding the progress is appearing somewhat slow physically, but mentally this healing is taking great strides. The slowness of the physical is indeed taking hold, happening, building a firm foundation, a nurturing of the soil to make for a sure and steady growth. The improvement in your personal countenance is indeed aiding to your overall health. All of Father's creatures seek to create in one way or another. My daughter, Claireesa, much of your healing drive comes from your belief of your inability to keep creating. You want so much to find that your life has been spent wisely, and to make each day a personal co-creation with Father. You have battled with your confidence to produce worthy creations, and I can say you need not have this battle anymore, only the knowledge that you are already one who can give much with the creativity that is within you. Yes, your creativity stems out and into many directions. Yes, you know whereof I speak. My daughter, carry on. Another question?

TECTRA: I'll ask another question. I am just curious how and what are Joshua and Jeremiah doing? [Editor's note: both have recently deceased.]

ABRAHAM: My understanding is they are receiving extended education at this time; not together, no, but this education enables them to serve in our continuing Mission here on Urantia. There will indeed come a time when we can all unite face to face with joy and assurance that yes, God has served us and served us well; and that He had been there in all we experienced. Is this answering? (Tectra: Yes. Thanks.)
Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I was reading the Urantia Book this week. I've finished with the 'Mansion Worlds Paper' and now I am on to the 'morontial companions.' I don't know if anyone has ever asked you, and this isn't a deal like my needing proof of your existence or anything, so if it seems too personal please let me know. Would you tell me, like I just try to picture when I am reading, and it is like wow - I wonder 'where Abraham is.' So I ask, what have you gone through and where are you at this time? Does this seem rude? When I am reading your lessons, it would just kind of help me if I know more about you; it would help me visualize.

ABRAHAM: Yes, I am understanding, Miriam. I have experienced all seven Mansion Worlds. I have experienced training on other worlds as well. I have ventured to Edentia and Jerusem, as well as many of the planets that are such as yours, to gain experience that has brought me here to you. Under the training of Machiventa Melchizedek, I have asked for certain assignments and he has seen to my education. I cannot say that after the Mansion Worlds my training was routine, but designed to help me to aid the world from which I came and so dearly love. Is this answering?

MIRIAM: Oh yes. You know how in the Urantia Book it says like the creatures that are spiritual or perfect, which are created as spirits, that they will 'just know' the spirit way of things. It's kind of a bummer to be mortal to learn and go through this the hard way. When we grow up and become perfected - will we kind of keep the experience of this imperfection? I ask: When did it start feeling better for you? It is so hard from where I am now. I am loving the mortal experience, yes, but I was just wondering when you started feeling better - feeling some degree of perfecting?

Do you know what I mean?

ABRAHAM: I'll let you know when it does. [laughter.] I can say, my daughter, it is certainly possible for the mortal life to attain a divine flavor. You need not reach the Mansion Worlds to be able to move steadily without stumbling. Spiritual assurity can be had now, yes, through your continuing study and a willingness to be about the Father's bidding. Mind you, it is not a constant feeling, no, but bits and pieces of spiritual well-being. Is this answering? (Miriam: Yes, and thank you.) Abraham: Is there one more question?

ANTHONY: I have a few, but I will pick the most important one: Concerning my present relationship – you talked about 'detachment' as being a last resort, and that what we are supposed to do is give up control to make our unhealthy attachments become healthful connections. But if our attachments are so unhealthy, so one-sided and no connection, and it is about becoming 'detached' – then do I have any part of that relationship that I can hold onto? Can I be selfish in some sense to try to preserve some of my best interests? Or is total detachment inevitable?

ABRAHAM: I see that as not a problem to have some self-protection. But there are relationships that are not producing spiritual fruits, only poisons. You know this! These need not be worked on over and over just to repeat certain patterns. After a well-made effort, and if there is not progress, then detachment is inevitable and in your own best interest, as well as the counterpart of your relationship. I perceive I am not answering your question though?

ANTHONY: I think it is answering somewhat. I just don't know how selfish I can be and try to survive, and show unconditional love as well. That's the problem.

ABRAHAM: The Master did not have so much what you would call 'selflessness' as He did have 'common sense.' The Master made conscious effort to be of service – and when that proved fruitless, He moved on. It was not so much a matter of the self as it was a matter of doing the Father's will. Father asks you not to stay in a relationship that is a burden of great strain in your life – a terrific weight upon your back that would pull you from your spiritual connection, no! My son, you can answer this better than I can. If you are faithful to carry out Father's will then do so without any self-sacrificing, for that is not necessary. Your mind is set already, and I am happy to have confirmed what you have already known. Yes. Is this answering? (Anthony: Yes. Thank you.)

I am slipping, but I would express to you my enjoyment at our personal interaction. You are indeed my friends, and I would give you each my love. Know that you are certainly capable of receiving divine answers. Until next week, shalom.

Enhance Our Relationships By Sharing and Questioning Freely

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you, my friends. It is always a time of excitement and generation of energy each time we meet. In our ongoing series on 'bettering our relationships' it is always helpful for us to exchange words with one another.

Last week in our question/answer meeting there were exhibited excellent examples of equal exchange of love and respect. In our healthful connection, there is listening and understanding, there is sensitivity and compassion. But I would say the most important part of relationships would be to always embrace truth. I was made to feel free in giving my answers, and you were open to suggestions and possibilities. There was indeed a fine example of a working relationship between us; yes, a healthful connection to one another and to our divine Parents.

All present last week were set upon the same cosmic circuit as if we were all joined with the mind of our divine Parents. This was a beautiful foundation for the reception of truth and also the willingness to allow for strength of character to be enhanced. Regarding your relationship to one another last week, allow your mind to think of our discussions together. Remember the feelings of love and respect – there was allowance for diversity, yes; and yet, there was unity in friendship.

This week I would desire to have further interaction with you each; and please regard me as any other associate you may happen to meet. This is an exercise for you to enhance your relationships by connecting with the mind of our divine Parents. Have you questions?

ROLAND: Abraham, I have brought with me tonight, Bob Fredere, who is new to the Urantia Book; but in a spectacular synchronicity he has received this wonderful revelation a couple days before his birthday; and today is his birthday! I have a hunch you already know this wonderful brother, but I want to introduce him as a true seeker. He has confided with me that he has asked the Father for an expanded spiritual knowledge, and so I felt that it would be wise to bring him here to hear you. Do you have words for this brother?

ABRAHAM: Greetings, my son. I am delighted to meet with you. I am perceiving your life experience has brought you to seek for something greater than what your material eyes can see. Would you have a question?

BOB: I have a lot of questions. One out of curiosity is, as these other people in the room go by different names, is there a name for me other than Robert Wayne Fredere?

ABRAHAM: One moment. I am understanding that you are known on high as Harrison, Harrison, yes. Your Father would address you by this name. Yes. These spiritual names are what our Father knows us by, and are indeed sacred. Another question?

HARRISON: I have two questions. One has to do with myself and my health. I don't want to ask that question. The question I want to ask is, or what I am seeking is: How can I have a closer relationship with my heavenly Father so that I can extend myself to be a more loving person.

ABRAHAM: Understood. My son, you, having started your searching long ago, have had to experience certain adversities or lessons that would bring you to this present moment awareness. Father has always been as close to you as He ever was since your first indwelt experience. Your experiences act as a veil of sorts wherein each lesson is a part of the veil to be removed. Father has always been right before you and now your experiences make your vision of Him more clear. I understand you to already be a very loving and God-like personality. I understand you to desire more of Father's presence in your life – to feel more, to be more conscious of His fingerprints in your daily living. The search has begun, and you have gone beyond the point of turning back. The process is in motion and the tools are put before you. It is your job to chip away at the stone to further reveal God's presence in your life. Yes, your spiritual searching is indeed the key. Continue in your study of the Urantia Book text. Find those moments to practice stillness, and continue your discussions with my friend, Roland. Yes. Is this answering? (Harrison: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You are most welcome.

RACHEL: Father Abraham, last week you were saying we were able to receive the divine words in our 'transmitting and receiving method.' About four or five years ago when I would feel the presence of spiritual beings in the room, I would get a pencil and paper and I would sit down and write the message. Upon one of those times, you told me that just because I could feel the presence it didn't always mean that you had a message for me. So I more or less started to ignore all of those feelings that I would have because I didn't want to impose upon you, and didn't know when you really did have a message for me. So my question is: By ignoring these feelings, am I missing out on some of the messages that I am supposed to be receiving?

ABRAHAM: My point to you was that we occasionally look in on you to observe; but yes, we enjoy conversation and friendship. It is wise to have pen and paper available – to be in reception for any words we might have. Correct, do not ignore your feelings of perceived presences around you. If a message is there then so be it; if not, we are there to look in on you, perhaps share a bit of conversation, perhaps some humor. Is this answering, my daughter? (Rachel: Yes it is, but I'll tell you what would help – if you would just hit me on my head then I would know for sure when to grab pen and paper.) Abraham: Understood. [laughter.] Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, Nina was wondering if you had any words for her regarding death and the grieving process and any anxiety she may be feeling regarding those things?

ABRAHAM: Ellanor would wish to skip the grieving process, perhaps even escape certain mortal inevitabilities. I would confirm your thoughts, however, on the grieving process to be without time limit. There are many phases to go through in this grieving process to once again feel that comfort from Father – that He is in complete control. Mortals who experience death of loved ones fear the universe to be haphazard or randomly out of control. I cannot guarantee mortals may rush through this grieving process to once again feel the serenity of our Father. There are steps, however, one can do to ease the fear and confusion of losing loved ones. Prayer is always an effective antidote to building faith in our Father – that He is a supreme Caretaker; and, that He is in knowledge of every facet of mortal living. Be not afraid of pictures or symbols that you might think would bring back past pain or grief – for in the holding back there is an escaping of grief, in a way, that is harmful and would prolong the feelings of fear. But overall, the courage to face the grieving process puts your mortal time here in perspective, and renews your faith in a God who is fully capable of running the universes successfully, including your grieving. That is all. Another question?

KURT: In my life, I have been really confused lately. There are a lot of decisions that need to be made in my life. I feel like I have given and given, to a lot of people, even everything I have. I have gotten into this rut of apathy, and I am just kind of curious as to what things would put me on the right path so I can start making some of these decisions better.

ABRAHAM: One moment. I am understanding you to be burdened by time – feeling time-bound, so to speak. There are those feelings of being rushed, and you are uneasy about rushed decisions being made so as to cause further confusion and discomfort. My understanding is that there needs to be some time spent in complete solitude – not a lot, just a few moments to clear those voices of your friends and family that would try pressure you into these decisions. I can guarantee that your personal indwelling Father, being one of great experience, is fully capable of taking you step-by-step through these time-bound experiences. By spending moments in the solitude, there is the voice of God that is surely capable of overpowering those mortals' voices that you feel pressured by. Is this answering? (Kurt: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

CALVIN: In my life right now, I seem to be very calm about those ups and downs in daily living. There are a lot of times when there is someone 'in my face,' so to speak, and that doesn't seem to faze me. I hope that doesn't mean that I am calloused to it. I hope that means it's a good thing, not a 'lost in some time zone impervious to truth' thing. I don't know the right words here for it, but I think you understand my point.

ABRAHAM: Understood. It would appear that the scales are tipped toward divine favor. Your love of the Divine has helped you to be detached from those mortal things which would weigh heavy on you. This is not calloused, but spiritual practicality. The Master himself was unaffected by many of the mortal small happenings because of His faith in Father's over-control, Father's supreme watchcare, yes. Is this helping? (Calvin: Yes. Thanks.)

MIRIAM: I heard someone in the Teaching Mission say last year that the steps and traditions of the program of Alcoholics Anonymous had been given to its founder, Bill Wilson – in essence, through this transmission-receiver method, by celestials. I was wondering what you had to share, or what your spin on AA was? It is such a spiritual program. And, is AA a 'part of' the Teaching Mission? It gives people a way to work through the hard truths and see the needed things about themselves.

ABRAHAM: Yes. Alcoholics Anonymous steps were manifested through divine guidance and human seeking, yes. Alcoholism, itself, seems almost divine in a sense in that it would remove or dull those things which are painful. And yet, never has so much destruction to family life occurred as through alcoholism. Bill Wilson was indeed a searching individual with the knowledge that there is no human cure for alcoholism. The turning to God for help was an apex in history for alcoholism. The spiritual steps received for alcoholism were around the time when the world was ready for spiritual help. Also was the Urantia Book being compiled at this time. As is now, the world was at that time asking for divine assistance concerning additional mortal ailments of the physical and mental kind, as well as the social and economical. In the asking, the answers are forthcoming. In the willingness of mortals to set their desires for self-glorification aside, is there divine answers for all, yes. The receiver of the Alcoholics Anonymous steps was one such mortal whose inner desire was to find help for his mortal brothers and sisters. Is this helping? (Miriam: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: One more question?

ROLAND: Abraham, I don't want an answer to this question, but I need you to do some research for me. In December of last year, there was a gamma-ray detection of such enormity which was observed in Italy that they called the United States to reinforce their theory of this gamma ray explosion. They came up with this idea that there was an explosion in a galaxy twelve and a half billion light-years away that was so enormous that it equaled one-hundred 'supernovas.' I know that is a technological question, but I was wondering if there was some cosmic understanding we might have about that. I defer to the idea that this is the last question and I would give you that for a research question you might ask one of your cosmologist's associates. Thank you. [laughter.]

TR/Ellanor: I don't know if it is me laughing, or him.

ABRAHAM: I can check into this for you. My knowledge on such a topic is limited. Check back with me another time.

My friends, I am in such joyful gratitude to know you, each one of you. I am in understanding of your questioning minds and heartfelt desires, but I could not be so helpful as could our indwelling Father Fragments who indeed do uphold the children of the universes. My thoughts are with Him now as I bid you farewell; and I leave my love with you each, always. Until next week, shalom.

Enhance Our Brotherhood With Those We Think Of As Our Superiors

Ham & Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-18-1998

(TR for this lesson was Calvin)

My sincere greetings, my friends. I am HAM. It is my great joy to be present with you and to again address you. You, my fellow co-workers in this Mission, have been most diligent in your morontial and spiritual education. As you have discussed this evening, you have entrusted each other with your innermost sharing. It is wonderful to witness your beautiful growing and budding morontial souls.

If I may, I would also at this time commend you for allowing us to be your friends. Abraham and I have indeed been enriched with your friendship and your extreme examples of faithfulness. Among mortals of Urantia, it is quite uncommon to see such faith exhibited. For you see, my good friends, you have withstood so many obstacles and have triumphed over so many personal stumbling blocks that we ourselves are made stronger in observing your stamina and forbearance in pursuing these uncharted waters.

And with these words of acknowledgment and appreciation, I leave you with also my never-ending and ever-increasing love for you, my friends. Farewell.

I am ABRAHAM. It is indeed a privilege to have our brother/friend and Teacher Ham with us this evening. Often he is available in our meetings as an interactive part of our discussions; therefore, it is wonderful to have his communication wherein your hearts are lifted in receiving his words as your former friend and associate teacher.

Do you see how we have united as fellow missionaries, fellow ambassadors, over these past short years? Have we not been more relaxed and appreciative of one another – meaning you as students and we as teachers in this Mission? It has been our constant endeavor to seek to understand you each. At first you may have thought of us as your superiors; you thought we were almost infallible and all-knowing. In time, you have better understood that we, your Teachers, were more-so merely your fellow associates and co-workers.

It has been our great joy to observe you in your daily walk. In those times when your hearts were yearning, we have been most joyful. We are also observers in our divine Parent's strategy to interface your daily experience with divine lessons. We marvel at the workings of our divine Parents and are privileged to assist you in seeing more of this viewpoint we share.

Do you see, we are not at all divine, but are fellow worshipers of the Divine. It is indeed our greatest joy to assist you in recognition of this divine overcare. With that said, do you now see our role as perhaps an older brother, more-so than as a superior? It is this same relationship which we share with our true elder brother Michael, for not only is He our divine Creator/Parent, but also our understanding fellow. He is a mortal brother – having experienced your life, having experienced your struggle, having shared your sorrows and sufferings and yearnings.

Michael, my friends, is our hope in everlasting salvation because we can relate with Him and also worship through Him. I am overcome with love for my brother Michael. He is a most wonderful friend. He is a most awe-inspiring Parent/Creator. Never-ending are His ways; ever-loving and ever-personal with His children, is He.

This week, I again wish to be among you to share your yearnings and worshipful moments of this brotherhood with Michael in our Father's kingdom. Take a few moments to express your brotherly/sisterly feelings toward Michael and see if you will draw closer to Him, as you have drawn closer to Ham and myself. Even Michael yearns with you for Father-connectedness; He relates so personally with you in your inner-seeking and learning of Father, and of His will for you.

I would also appreciate your combined prayers for the enhancement of the brotherhood on Urantia. Michael's peace is becoming more and more a reality each day as each mortal becomes personally connected in this brotherhood. You, at present, do not see the ramifications of your combined unity and encirclement in this brotherly love – it causes a reaction even on a grand scale at the level of the Supreme Being. Are there a few questions?

INERA: Abraham, earlier we were discussing spiritual names. Is there a correct or incorrect way to receive your spiritual name, or timing?

ABRAHAM: Inera, it is indeed an experiment with some in this Teaching Mission, and we have extended this spiritual name awareness to those who have sought this awareness, for it has helped to create a higher cosmic understanding and realization of who you are and your place in the universe – it has helped you to know that you are known. Concerning these spiritual names, we have also been careful to inform you that these names are a partial awareness and are revealed at the level of present-day language barriers. When the mortal reaches fusion with the immortal Father Fragment of Deity, a greater revelation of who you are is made – more complete, all-encompassing. It is the more full understanding of this partial cosmic awareness which your name at present reveals. This is best as what I can explain. Is this helping your understanding? (Inera: Yes, very much so, and then some. Thank you very much.) Abraham: You are most welcome, my daughter.

ELLANOR: I have a question, Abraham. What is an important thing to focus on when you are transmission-receiving? What is an important thing to focus on to make you more accurate or a better transmission-receiver?

ABRAHAM: I would rather that one not focus but relax more-so in careless attitude wherein peace may settle in, allowing for more fertile ground for these mindal transmissions. For you see, if the mind is busy thinking or worrying, then it is somewhat more difficult to present a more full message. This is why at times there results in some unclarity. Does this fit with your understanding, Ellanor? (Ellanor: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: Is there another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, her question kind of brings to mind something I am wondering. In the morning when I practice stillness it takes a while to calm the thoughts, calm the chatter, and then the worship and praying. Then I get kind of still, and if I am going to receive anything or going to journal or whatever, there is that process. Then in the afternoon when I meditate, and I do so with a tape recorder or something, I know I don't 'go to sleep' because as soon as the tape is over I wake up feeling rested. My question is this, if one is asking to receive the most beautiful perfect light, or anything that you need or whatever, do you get it in both experiences? So like in the afternoon when I am meditating with the tape, and I am not conscious of where I go, am I still getting something? Are they different experiences? or the same.

ABRAHAM: Yes and no. I would say your morning stillness practice is more of a superconscious connectedness, and your afternoon session is fertile ground for deep-mind training, yet not so much a conscious awareness. It has been quite difficult for the Urantia mortal to allow for this higher-minded cosmic teaching, for most mortals carry far too many worries and fears which, when relaxed, tends to all come together in a jumbled mess which is a release, so to speak, for all this negative input. We have been fortunate, as co-workers in this Teaching Mission, to have access to mortals who are trusting and open more than they are subject to fear, despair, and anxiety; so when asleep or in deep meditation there has been opportunity for cosmic enhancements. I would add, that in your more awake stillness practice are you able to converse willfully, and especially to worship – this is the desired method. Yet, Father uses all opportunity to enhance His child's awareness and to challenge His children to reach out for divine assistance. Does this help?

MIRIAM: Yes it does. In just becoming more trusting and knowing of our divine

Parents, and trusting and knowing this process more (the stillness practice), is the ability to converse more like getting to know – that knowingness when you are following your guidance from Thought Adjuster?

ABRAHAM: Yes, Miriam. To converse with Father, one is allowing for His thoughts to lead him and teach him/her. To expect verbal English words is not necessary, but more-so an ever-increasing understanding of His will – which is presented, in my experience, more-so in ideals (word packages), not so much word-for-word using the mortal language. Higher-mindedness is enhanced Father communication. And yes, the more you practice, the more trusting you become of Father's abilities to reach His child. Having said this, I would state that in this present mortal state we will hear more word-for-word thought patterns. There is ample time for enhanced communication beyond your present mindal pattern, and I speak generally, not particularly to any one person. Remember, Father-presence is Thought Adjuster-presence. My communication is by way of technique with your Thought Adjusters. Is this helping? (Miriam: Oh yes, Abraham. Thank you very much.) Abraham: One more question?

ALAUNA: Yes, Abraham. It is a little bit off the subject, but I have spent a couple weeks thinking about a personal question, and you know my struggle to find one. I realize that if you and Michael and Ham have been visiting me that I've kept your wings busy. I move at such a great speed all the time. I work two jobs and try to balance a lot in my life. I would give anything to find time to do meditation. My meditation has to be at sixty miles-per-hour in the car, between jobs. So everything that I do is at such high speed all the time, and I am sure that I keep you hopping if you have to visit me. My question is: I would like a little bit of help maybe in evening times or times when I would like to do some meditation because I feel like my communications are so instant and quick that it is kind of like I have my prayers on the way back and forth to work. What happens is that I get in my bed at night and I can't shut my mind off. When I am not working I am working in my mind. I am reviewing what needs to be done the next day or week, so as a result I really don't find a lot of time to meditate. I would like some help on that subject.

ABRAHAM: Alauna, your plight is not at all uncommon. Many mortals are very busily going about in daily business, and some struggle in vain searching for worldly treasures. Your busy days, Alauna, are spent in service to your fellows; and even though it is your career, it is not gold and silver or the things of this world which you hurriedly seek. You work as though so many depend on you – and that, my daughter, is nothing to feel bad about. I understand all too well this busy structure you have created in your daily pattern. I would say, as you yearn more for divine energy (love) you will feel relaxed more and will become aware that our Mother is fully capable of attending to those things you feel a need to mother. She can help you in your mind to realize this – that you will be more wanting, yearning, and to take 'time out' for divine communication as a 'relaxed' mind, not as a 'hurried' mind. Take no thought of any wrongdoing, but take joy in your enthusiasm. And in your asking for assistance, take time to receive it. Is this helping? (Alauna: Yes. Thank you.)

I wish now to allow you to discuss among you those thoughts that are presently on your mind as fellow co-workers in this, our Father's kingdom. Think how you can enhance your brotherly/sisterly relationships with those you once thought of as superiors. My love and heartfelt appreciation is with you always. Shalom.

Allow Our Relationships To Promote Growth and Peace

I am ABRAHAM. You are a most welcome sight to me. After many hours of performing tasks and obligations, I find our friendship unity refreshing and uplifting. I would take a moment to thank Ham for his assistance last week, and also Calvin for his faith in us and acceptance of our asking him to go out on a limb for us.

Our previous lessons, or question sessions, were designed to display examples of 'loving and giving' relationships. Our interaction together was one of trust and comfort. It is simple for us here to unify on this common ground we share; but for you, it would seem somewhat difficult to put this exercise into your daily living with your mortal fellows. This is why we ask that you draw closer to Michael - looking at Him as a brother and fellow.

Michael is not concerned with your opinion of Him. He is not offended by your understanding. He asks you not to change in any way. He loves you with a Fatherly affection, with the bestowal of free will, and allows you to live life in its natural course.

Many mortals find they often miss opportunities that would have perhaps bettered their relationships. Many do not know the closeness and comfort of Michael and Mother, and are unskilled at dealing with their fellows with the understanding of our divine Parents. Many mortals tend to make demands within relationships. They have been known to be unaccepting of their fellows' character traits, habits, and time needed for personal growth experience.

Mortals oftentimes feel that bestowing Fatherly affection, allowing free will, is a show of unconcern or allowing their relationships to slip away. You can understand why we would encourage you to become close to the divine Parents, as close as you would in any other of your relationships.

As I had mentioned - after hours of my laboring in being about the Father's business it is quite refreshing for me to meet with my healthful connections. What a beautiful exchange of energy, comfort, and allowance for each one to be just who they really are. Our healthful connection certainly removes the demands or pressures we may feel during our existence. In our relief from pressures, there is growth and refreshment at the well of spiritual waters.

This week, I would ask that you dip your cup at this well and allow your relationships to promote more growth and peace while decreasing demands and pressures. Seek to uplift. Your prayer connection to Michael and Mother will aid in maintaining strength for those individuals who would perhaps stand between you and the well of spiritual waters.

Our divine Parents had never designed in their overall planning for you to be burdened and un-rested in your mortal life, no. Our divine Parents had carefully planned for your spiritual growth and path to our Father. Mortal living is not just endless toiling, no. Your relationships are not to be a source of unrest, but a lesson on growth.

Our lesson this week is short to allow you to have discussion on these words in the lesson. Have you questions?

ELLEN: I found this in the Urantia Book: Page 1013. "Modern man is confronted with the task of making more readjustment of human values in one generation than have been made in two-thousand years. And this all influences the social attitude toward religion, for religion is a way of living as well as a technique of thinking." With that in mind could you speak about the violence of the youth of today?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. That is an appropriate saying where the generations of today fit more living into their lifespan than did those in generations of the past. There is indeed a great deal of healing today's generation must promote. Unfortunately, for mortals to take action, things such as violence must hit close to home. For major healing to take place on a worldly scale, small healings need to start within the realms of our first beginning relationships – such as parent and child. It is so small and simple to start with and yet, it is as the individual who is ill and needs medication, but because they feel slightly better they forgo their medication only to find later their condition has worsened. The love of a family--parent and child--is our greatest hope for the healing of youth violence. Today's society, in general, is as the individual who is in need of medication, and forgoes teaching simple truths to equip parents with the skills to raise children, while conditions worsen. As I said, it starts out so simply with educating those that would be parents (or are parents), how love is as important as food or oxygen. A loveless child is unfortunately deformed psychologically and emotionally – and is, therefore, a black mark on society. Do you see, the small beginnings between parents and children are our hope for the violent youth of today. But I can guarantee that any child receiving love from any source is apt to be fed in some small way. Is this answering? (Ellen: Yes. Thanks.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

CALVIN: I am a little unsure of this word 'change.' In one aspect you are saying that "Michael would never seek to change us at all," I think you said. And yet, it seems like there needs to be much change, as individuals and as a society, in order to heal. Could you tie that in with perhaps Ham's initial statement, "welcome to change," the differences that I am not connecting with here?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. With the bestowal of Fatherly affection and free will, change is up to you. Michael would seek to guide or help but never to criticize or belittle or accuse of wrongdoing. Do you see, He is our Universe Brother/Father and has known us from the moment of our existence, and His knowledge of our true essence is so much more than we could ever perceive in our mortal life. His knowledge of who we really are, leads Him to love us completely and unconditionally. One who loves unconditionally seeks not to change that which he loves. Guidance, yes! Helping us to grow, yes! But pushing change on someone's personality is a form of unacceptance or criticism. And, it is not in His nature to infringe upon our free will. Ham's discourse on 'welcome to change' was not so much referring to the individual, but on a much larger scale such as the Teaching Mission and Correcting Time. Change is completely the choice of each individual. Is this helping?

CALVIN: Yes, very much, thank you. In your lesson tonight, you talked about coming to this group and receiving strength in our relationships, and I can relate that to my daily work where we have established a beautiful brotherhood. It is a strength and a joy to go to work. It is a strength and joy to come to these meetings even more-so, because there is more of a spiritual food here. As a world of diverse believers, I see a huge change at our work-place in that there is a brotherhood of very many different beliefs – and yet a common love and respect for, and brotherhood with, each other. Is that the strength you are talking about?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Beautifully put. In healthful connections, we find an even distribution of energy exchange and upholding and uplifting. Yes, this is the goal of all our relationships – to give and be given to; to love and be loved; to support and be supported, yes. Your findings regarding your brotherhood on the job is accurate and yet, you can see the time and effort that was needed to get to where you are now. Also, it is the same with our group right here, yes. Is this answering? (Calvin: Yes. Thank you. It took some hard knocks and people 'speaking their minds' and so-on, to bring about that developing change, atmosphere, at work.) Abraham: Yes, exactly. One more question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I was wondering if you have any input or guidance regarding the upcoming Conference in Nashville. I know I am doing what I can – and, we've got enough money. If only the thirteen people that come that are registered now, and that's it, I know it will be Father's will, etc. I am just wondering if there is anything that I need help with you could suggest or anything you and Ham and whomever, if there is any input you have?

ABRAHAM: Yes. One moment. I am HAM. Worry not my daughter, for it is, as you have said, it is in Father's hands now. My recommendation would be a bit more advertising is needed. There are a number of individuals who are still unknowing about this event. It is true that you have indeed performed with the utmost show of faith. I would ask that you worry not. That is all.

I am ABRAHAM. We are in such gratitude to all you who endeavor to make our mission grow. Your examples of faith are a literal light to which we can work by. Our thanks to you. My love is with you always. Until next week, shalom. [The Teaching Mission had elected to hold a Conference in Nashville, TN this year. Ham's group in Nashville hosted this conference and had asked some in the Woods Cross, UT group to assist. Miriam was the lead in this role, from the Woods Cross group.]

Act Upon Your Highest Light Within

Back

I am ABRAHAM. As always your discussions seem to uplift me. They fill me with hope for the spread of Father's work. You indeed receive much light through your interaction with one another. This group is certainly a wonderful example of healthful connections.

These lessons on relationships are difficult and ongoing because we must await your time needed for relationship experiences. Father and His various assistants work diligently to help provide your needed experience. I would ask that the next time you are in the throes of unhappiness concerning relationships, look to Father's helpers and know that they work for you. Remember, it is when in the midst of relationship difficulties that your experience is valuable. Yes, you would do well to remain observant.

Many mortals have looked back upon their life with dissatisfaction or regret concerning decisions they have made. Many look back with regret regarding their participation within relationships. Some mortals do find this regret to be an overwhelming negative energy which is appearing to consume all thought. There were perhaps harsh words to a loved one that was uncalled for, or missed opportunities to express love. There might have been times of holding back acts of service due to hurt feelings.

Many relationships die without resolution, and these unresolved difficulties within relationships cause you to regret – to be consumed with the energy of regret. This particular energy chances to block spiritual light that would come from our Father. This blocking tends to keep us repressed and repeating past mistakes – wearing a well-worn groove in the path of negativity.

Does anyone know why the Master lived without regret or dissatisfaction? Why was His life lived as a continuous prayer of gratitude? How was He able to escape the negative energy of regret?

I can say to you, the Master had no cause for regret or dissatisfaction concerning His life decisions. All Jesus' life decisions were made in conjunction with the Father's knowledge. All His earthly doings were prayerfully thought-out and within the Father's will. Jesus' closeness with His Father caused Him to live up to the highest good possible. His open mind and heart to Father's will always encouraged Him to act upon His highest light.

When one has chosen to always act upon their highest light there is no cause for regret. There is learning, yes; also growth, yes – but no looking back and wishing you had done better. In relationships there are always opportunities to act upon the highest good within; but from experience, I know that human emotions make it difficult. Anger, fear, and envy – these tend to distort your ties with Father and handicapping you to receive and act upon your highest light within.

It is entirely possible for us as Teachers to relay to you the techniques in which you can use to access this inner goodness. I do strongly believe that mortals are ready to be free from the bondage of regrets – negative energy – free from the mental torment of 'desiring another chance to make things right.' To live in such a place of regret and dissatisfaction is exactly what you draw unto yourself; it is a continuous cycle of unrest.

We can learn from the Master's experience of living up to His highest light in all things concerning all relationships, always aligning the will with that of our Father in heaven. These techniques do not magically appear, no. Through the exercising of humility do we find our ears open to our Father's grand design.

Through our smallness do we comprehend His overall plan. Through the courage to take the more difficult path of controlling our emotions (instead of acting impulsively) do we discover the access to our highest light.

As it was with Jesus so will it be with you – where the only choice you would desire to make is to act upon your highest light in all situations. Emotions will not be so much repressed, but rather, transformed into positive energy. Your healthful connection here in our group is certainly a positive way to touch upon Father's ideals. Your healthful connections equip you with the strength to stay aboard the ship of faith when waters are rough.

Are you understanding my meaning? Your discussions beyond this group and with one another regarding these words are certainly uplifting and faith-promoting. Only a few questions, please.

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I am a little confused over our worshipping of Christ Michael and our worshipping of our Universal Father. Would our Universal Father really care if we also worshipped Christ Michael? Because I feel if I show adoration, that that is still a form of worship. Can you help clarify that for me, please?

ABRAHAM: Yes, certainly. Michael is indeed a loving Universe Parent, as is our Mother. We do indeed hold the highest esteem and love for them; and yet there is One who has even created them. It is altogether acceptable and proper to adore your Universe Parents; and yet, to recognize Father's all-powerfulness in all that we know leads us to fall to our knees in awesome gratitude. Yes, I do certainly believe that our Father deserves our worship, and this takes not away from our Creative Parents, no. Father takes no offense at His children worshipping His Son. But I would indeed relay to you that we love and adore our Creative Parents, as they do us. And, we love and adore and revere – and are awestruck by, our Universal Father. Is this answering? (Rachel: Yes, beautifully! And I thank you.) Abraham: You are welcome. Another question?

ROLAND: I hesitate to broach the subject, but it seems to me like in my development of spiritual understanding, as erratic as that might have been and is, that there are some times when the kindest thing to do with people who may rely on my judgment, is to remain out of relationship with them; particularly so as not to confuse the issues of their particular mindset – the mindset that they are in at this particular time that is beneficial to them, even though it may be erroneous or appears to be erroneous to my own spiritual enlightenment. I haven't gained the poise to keep my mouth shut so to avoid any damage I might do – so rather, I've just withdrawn from certain relationships. Instruct me on this, on what I need to do.

ABRAHAM: There are relationships that find no resolution, usually when there is not equal participation. Perhaps one would seek to be productive concerning the relationship, and the other would seek to guard their own welfare – it is understandable and not to worry over. There are regrets, yes, and then there are lessons learned. There are those who make rash decisions, and those who endeavor to act upon their highest light. In my understanding of you, my friend, I would look back and decipher those experiences which were lessons, and those that were regrets; and, the participation-factor of each party. Was there mutual devotion to the whole of the relationship? or only to one's own best interest. I would say your understanding is quite clear and your capacity to receive Father's light is quite extensive. Is this answering? (Roland: Yes, it is, and thank you very much.)

Abraham: You're welcome. One more question?

HARRISON: Abraham, I am troubled over a statement I read, and I would wish for some understanding. The statement is this: "It is God's will that none shall be lost, and none shall." Can you help me with that?

ABRAHAM: I can give it my best effort; I am unclear as to your troubled feelings, but I will answer as best I can. All Father's children are sought out by Him. All are equally loved and given ample opportunity to know Him. In this manner, none are lost, all are called. With that statement, the actual meaning is unclear, I understand. But I can say, with regarding souls of those mortals who do not wish to carry on, the eternal adventure is certainly lost; they wish to relinquish their eternal career, and I am understanding that to be 'lost;' not necessarily bad, no, but a normal outworking of Father's divine plan. So yes, 'all are called' – but some are unfortunately lost. For the most part though, I can say that mortals do find their way to Father through any and all measures; most are saved and choose to run the infinite course. This is certainly a great source of joy to our Father – to receive His children. Yes, the losses are sorrow-producing and yet, par for the course of normal evolutionary progress. Is this answering? (Harrison: It is. Thank you very much.) Abraham: You're welcome.

I would express to you each my love, devotion, and gratitude for your uplifting participation in this, the Correcting Time. Until next week, shalom.

In Living Up To Your Highest Good Within, Ask `What Would My Father Have Me Do`

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, and welcome. I am made glad by our weekly visits. We can always find time to join our minds with Father's in the giving and receiving of divine love and wisdom.

Our meetings strengthen each one of us to go about doing our Father's bidding. Last week we discussed how the Master lived up to His highest light within; He went about doing good; He acted with our Father's wisdom and love. Even when the Master was in complete anguish He chose to act upon His highest light.

Being within your mortal vessels, there are times of loneliness, anguish, devastation. Many mortals are embittered by their life circumstances and choose to encase themselves within the bonds of fear and anger. It is a tendency of mortals to turn to Father with an accusing eye in wondering why such things are befalling them.

The Master knew well of the pain that is natural for this human adventure. He experienced the very worst that man has to offer; and even then, He stood unshakable. You see, His decision to act upon His highest light was at times a shield of sorts – an elixir for the maintaining of well-balanced mental health.

No matter what mortal living had in store for the Master He was always well prepared by His commitment to being within the will of His Father in heaven. His commitment was perhaps the answer to all questions. His commitment to do the divine will always set His mind in an asking mode to Father. Jesus was always in conference with Father; and when those times of upheaval occurred, His commitment remained true - 'What would my Father in heaven have me do?'

The Master, in living up to His highest light, took great joy in expressing His love to those He knew - lending a helping hand or a bit of guidance to those who were seeking. Jesus regretted not any of His mortal life for He took every opportunity to act out the Father's will. He chose to really live each and every part of mortal life - to be within every moment, good or bad, with His Father by His side.

Those who stifle their highest light, or are perhaps too shy or unsure to act in their highest light, learn to live with regret and are always desirous of 'another chance.' This is not bad or sinful; it is though, perhaps a lesson for you to re-live some of the pressures of mortal living.

In your efforts to draw closer to Father and His divine helpers, have ready your question: 'What would Father have me do at this moment in time?' Even for particular situations within relationships, or those personal struggles, always remember the question. Confirm within your own heart your commitment to the doing of Father's will. Choose to be aware of the option to always act upon your highest light.

Yes, my friends, take advantage of those opportunities that come your way. In that first thought of doing an act of service or expressing appreciation or love - there, is your contact with your highest light; and there is only your courage that is needed to act it out. Many times do we hesitate and talk ourselves out of it using various excuses.

Our lesson tonight on 'living up to your highest good within' is a bestowal of liberty to act out the Father's will; to feel at liberty to express those thoughts or comments, those acts of service, and to really be aware of each moment of mortal living, good or bad. That is all. Have you questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, is it expected ever for us, or is it possible I should say, for us in this first life to have quick changes from past patterns and spirit poisons? or does it usually take a lot of hard knocks and lessons, and time.

ABRAHAM: Yes. Most patterns can require time to find better ways. There are those hard lessons though that can jolt a person into a quick behavioral change. We have found the latter to be fear-based whereas the time and practice method to change is more akin to Father's evolutionary design. When we teach to have awareness in the moment - the allowing of really feeling mortal life - this is an opening for Father to teach. He teaches in time intervals which creates for you a well-balanced mental state. Is this answering? (Calvin: Yes, it is.) Abraham: Another question?

HARRISON: Abraham, my question is regarding what I know a little about from my LDS church upbringing, which is called 'The Millennium.' Can you tell us if we are starting the millennium, which as I understand it, is 'a thousand years of peace when Christ will reign personally, on the earth?’ Can we expect some very positive change to occur at that time? or is it occurring now?

ABRAHAM: My understanding of that definition is with regard to the teachings of old – we are on the cusp of great changes, yes. We are ending one era to begin another. My answer is: The times of peace are ahead and not now. Not to worry though, this time is not far ahead. There are still evil hearts within the world that would delay this peace. Michael, our Spirit of Truth, does run rampant at this time to expose all evil so His children may have awareness and search for resolutions. This is a very important time in Urantian history, yes. The steps taken now work to promote that time of peace which you term, the millennium. Is this answering? (Harrison: Yes, it is. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. One more question?

If there are no more questions, I would take my leave and remind you each to be ready this week with your question in every situation. My love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Spirilogistics | Living Up To Our Highest Good. Go Beyond Ego To Find The Will of God

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. Greetings. How connected I feel to the cosmic mind when we all join in conversation. I can literally view the energy exchange between you. What a recharging of our spiritual batteries each time we meet. I perceive your bond with one another in this group is strengthening and helping to keep a well-balanced mental attitude.

I understand the experience of the mortal flesh. Before my association with MachiventaMelchizedek, I too had to carry on with blind faith and eternal hope that all I felt to be true was indeed true. This, our group, is your common ground. Your group is your spiritual anchor in the storms of mortal living.

Our discussions of late have been regarding living up to your highest light – making all decisions from a spiritual standpoint; having the willingness to take action within Father's will; making Father's will, living; allowing His wisdom and divine love be put into action through you, His mortal children. As you are able to put these words into practice, and understand that mortal life should not be fraught with regret, do you begin to realize that you are stepping away from human emotions into a place of spirit and logic.

The life of the Master was an excellent example of spirit logic – spirilogistics. He acted from the standpoint of His Father's will; and it, at times, did not run congruent with His own logical mind – but the Master, in His wisdom and magnitude of faith, took to the hills for solitude and prayer. His connecting with Father aligned His logic with Father's will; it dissipated somewhat His human emotions and created a spirilogical response in all His daily tasks.

Human emotion is inevitable and entirely natural; and yet, so connected with ego. Human emotion has many layers to uncover to find the level of logic; and beyond your own logic there are several more layers to uncover to come to the Spirit.

Our Master lived without regret because He had always acted upon His highest light: "What would Father do?" "Beyond anger, despair, disappointment, and frustration to the core of spirit and logic, what would Father have me do?" Yes, it is beyond the ego's influence, beyond human emotions, to a spirilogical response, is where we find the will of God.

At times, emotions are all you have. Even the Master had succumbed to human emotions at times. I mean not to convey that emotions are bad or negative, no, but that this emotional state is simply not the place to discern Father's will and attempt to act it out. Your connection with one another strengthens your ability to act using spirilogistics; your moments of meditation or communing with nature does also aid in this method.

This combination of the 'spiritual' with the 'logical,' aids in transforming your unhealthy attachments into healthful connections. Your temptation to act from a place of emotions is dissipated (not stifled or repressed, but dissipated, perhaps energy transformed). With practice, the ego is not maintaining control, but the highest light within you is shining.

This week, I ask that you exercise the spirilogical response. Attempt to avoid irrational actions or outbursts; and instead, turn inward and connect with your highest light. Maintain the mindset of asking: "What would Father do?" Have you questions?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I have two questions; the first one is a quickie: Is this spirilogistics frame of mind an example of those thirty-six mota mentions that are in the Urantia Book – like about how with man it is philosophy, but then when we get over to Mansonia One, it's mota? Do you know what I mean? Is this like a mota deal?

ABRAHAM: Understood. Yes, in a manner of speaking – for mortals who are living with rampant emotionalism, rash decisions are made and matters worsened. Yes, you are correct. There is a need for the peoples of Urantia to acquire skills to living peaceably with their fellow mortals. That is all. Another question?

MIRIAM: For the past little while I have been busy working on the upcoming Nashville Conference preparation. I haven't had time to practice stillness in the morning. In trying to do these exercises of asking, stopping and asking for Father's will and guidance in day-by-day matters, especially with the Conference – is this like a different process? You know like there for a while we were hanging with Michael and Mother, and we were just dwelling with them as our divine Parents. This pausing and asking Father for guidance feels a little bit different. So my question is: Is it, in essence, trying to get in touch with, getting comfortable with, and knowing our Father Fragment – this process of pausing and asking 'What would Father have me do?' I have sort of felt off-balance because of a need to do the stillness. But on the other hand, the practicing this 'Father's will' thing keeps me in line throughout the day and I don't get too crazy. Does that at all make sense? What do you think about that, and how am I doing?

ABRAHAM: Yes, these exercises are to help improve Thought Adjuster communication and to be more prepared to receive immediate answers. These exercises are helping to enlarge your capacity to receive the divine word. But also do I use Christ's life as an example to keep you in touch with the human side of God – the God of humanity. I do believe that you, Miriam my daughter – as you gaze into your gardens, you are filled with a quiet stillness and deep appreciation of Father, which is really quite touching and very soothing to the soul. Your appreciation of Father's works 'out in the world' are, in themselves, somewhat of a meditation; and, at times, is more progressive than an 'indoor' meditation. Are you understanding? (Miriam: Yes, Abraham. Thank you very much.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, our friend over in Tulsa, David Linthicum, does not have a group there and feels quite drawn to our lessons. At first he was a little hesitant about the revealing of our spiritual names while in the mortal life; and after a discussion, I think he feels more comfortable with that issue. He asks if you would mind sharing with him his name; or would you rather wait for a Teacher you see developing in a Teacher group there in Tulsa?

ABRAHAM: I am in understanding of his spiritual search. He is a man of truth and dedication. I believe at this time it would be acceptable to share these lessons with him. There is a good chance there are other Urantia Book readers in the area who might be interested in group-teaching, but this will indeed take time and awareness to Father's open doors. For the meantime, he can be considered one with our group here. Is this answering? (Calvin: Yes. Do you want him to wait for a name?)

ABRAHAM: One moment. Amden. This is as close as I can verbalize using the English language. I would ask Amden to make effort to understand who he truly is in order for this name to become his own. Amden is how we recognize him. Amden is how he is recognized on high. That is all. Another question?

CALVIN: It feels I've been inundated with a lot of 'incoming' mind and spiritual information these last few months. Perhaps I am needing to take a break from the intense spiritual education. It is like a break is needed 'to go fishing,' so to speak, as the apostles did. I do see a big difference in my spiritual awareness in the world – the world 'before' my involvement in the Teaching Mission lessons, versus 'now.' I'm referring to my spiritual learning and maintaining a balance with my daily 'jumping back into the world and swimming,' so to speak. I am sure that it is probably healthy for me to take a break. I was moved earlier to ask if you have anything to share with me on this.

ABRAHAM: Yes. With the upcoming travels, you will expend a great deal of energy; and it is our wishes right now for you to be at ease for the time being. Your reserves will serve our Mission well. It is altogether wise to maintain a lighthearted attitude, both now and during your travels. Your lightness enables myself and others to communicate more clearly through you. Yes, I say rest now my son, Father's tasks are at hand. These tasks themselves are giant steps in spiritual learning. Please allow this time of rest to strengthen your confidence in your abilities to be of service. Are you in understanding? (Calvin: Yes, very much. It makes clear sense, it really does. Refreshing.)

ABRAHAM: Wonderful. If there are no more questions, I would express to you my deep and abiding gratitude to Father for allowing me this closeness with you. My love is with you each. Until next week, shalom.

Developing A Spirillogical Response Rather Than Emotional Upheavals

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. What an honor it is for me to draw closer to you each week. Our interaction builds upon ideals and enhances creative thinking. Our minds together help us to be strong as we accept the challenges of daily living. My gratitude for Father runs deep for He has answered the desire of my heart.

Last week we spoke on surpassing irrational emotional actions to becoming used to using the spirillogical response. In every relationship, there is an abundance of emotions. Many rash decisions have been made from this mindset and has caused great confusion with those you love.

A man who has been unfairly treated at his place of employment will certainly be feeling deep within his emotions. This man has felt these injustices deeply and is burdened by an abundance of spirit poisons; there is anger, fear, and regret. The ego chatters incessantly with: "They have wronged me unfairly and I must seek to regain my upstanding position." With the ego, there is a great percentage of worry placed upon aesthetics or how he may appear in other's eyes. This man, so deep in emotions (or spirit poisons), need not take action immediately to defend his position; he need not scream out for justice or to bang fists on his desk for attention, no - for these dramatics tend to put people on the offensive.

The wise man knows the emotional place is not to be making decisions from. The wise man would take a moment to connect with Father, as did Jesus. He would ask for 'our Master's change of mind' and allow for emotional energy to be transformed into a place of spirit and logic. The man could then react with a spirillogical response, being quite aware that Father has his best interest at heart. The man asks the question: "What would Father have me do?" What an invitation to an invasion of divine forces who stand by ready to help!

One not skilled in using the spirillogical response would take action in the midst of his emotions - making decision in that moment which would prove to be unfruitful. Perhaps he would quit his job or make an exit with memorable harsh words. Perhaps the man has a family to provide for; and should he allow his emotions to blow with the wind in his rash response, he has then created a whole new list of problems in the severing of ties with the healthful connections needed to provide for his family.

One having been quieted by the Master's gentle touch is at last ready with his question: "What would Father have me do?" His faith allows him to believe answers are forthcoming. He can then step out with a healing response, building connections, creating light, and transforming negative into positive. Yes, he is ready to respond with spirit and logic.

In your relationships there are so many who answer the ego's call with actions taken from hurt feelings, from decreased self-esteem. The spirillogical child of God knows the source of all love and feels no personal offense. The self-esteem is not affected, and the need to scream out for acceptance is not necessary.

Once again, I would ask that you continue with this exercise, and know that you have permission to get away. Find some solitude; connect with Father and ask the Master for an exchange of your mind with His. Act not from your emotions, but accept Father's gift of time – time to have connection with Him and to become skilled using the spirilogical response. Have you questions?

ANESIA: Abraham, I have just been thinking a lot about my future, such as where I am going in my life; what I want to do as a career; where for college, and etc. I want to do what comes naturally to me and what is easiest for me. This topic has been my communications with people lately, and I have been having a hard time communicating because I haven't been able to express myself very well. I have been having a hard time having other people understand me, expressing my feelings. If you could just give me some advice or some guidance for me on that?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I do not see the problem so much as concerns your 'communication skills' as I see it 'with your youth.' Older individuals tend to be set in their thinking, believing their years of experience makes them more knowledgeable than you. This is correct to a point, yes, but when older individuals disregard the thoughts and ideas of their youth, they do forfeit great creative ideas. The youth ask that they be heard and understood; and the older adults (all too hastily) desire to help and make the way easier for the youth. We must remember the apostle who was by the Master's side to the end; this was indeed the youngest apostle, John. John could be found many times at the Master's side when Jesus needed assistance for personal happenings or for open and honest ideas. Your future, Anesia, seems to be unsure at this time, yes. But I can say, you are correct in doing what you love, doing those things that you have a passion for. Remember, sometimes the things you love take time and there are avenues to travail before you arrive at your destination. Keep in mind our youngest apostle and his closeness with the Master. You are doing well and I see no need to have anxiety over this. Your path to Father has been mapped out. Listen to Him and trust in your abilities. Is this helping? [Reply was inaudible.] Another question?

INERA: Abraham, I feel like this lesson was designed for me today. It has been three weeks of obsessive behavior, on my part, towards a boss that won't leave me alone. Today I left work three hours early, but first I went behind the building and vented to friends. I guess that is better than venting on the person I wanted to. So this lesson tonight is basically that we are to “turn the other cheek?”

ABRAHAM: No, no! This lesson is about allowing time for a change of mind, and acting from there instead of acting from emotions. Speaking to friends is excellent in creating mindal change, depending upon the friends you speak with. There are those friends who would tend to make the situation worse with negative comments. Or, there are those friends who would validate your feelings and have some sympathy, but remain positive and uplifting, maybe assisting in resolutions. Are you understanding? (Inera: Yes. Thank you very much for the entire lesson tonight.) Abraham: You're welcome. Have not anxiety over this. Perhaps try to incorporate a lighthearted humor when contending with your boss. That is all. Another question?

WILLEENA: Abraham, when someone comes to that moment of choice when they are in their emotional upheaval, stress, and they can remember to simply ask for Father's way – you said something about their 'need for attention;' so at the bottom of their distress – is it that there is an emotional experience of being invalidated or unrecognized, or feeling overlooked in some way? And therefore, in asking the question: "Father, what would you have me do, what would you do?" – that actually gives a moment of remembrance of affection, that again they realize they are not alone and that there is a higher recognition towards them, so that the Father is there with them and validating them as a loved being and that they don't have to go off into a tangent or an emotional tantrum. Am I on track with that?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Yes, well said. Concerning your fellows, they are perhaps like a mirror and tend to reflect their feelings upon 'you' that would make you feel less-than. This is where your emotions come into play. It is at this point where you make your decision to act, or to stop for a moment with Father and present the question: "What would you have me do?" Yes, beautifully put, Willeena. You are understanding. Is there another question?

WILLEENA: I have a question on a person. Can I ask something about someone outside the group? (Abraham: Yes.) Willeena: Actually, I'd like to ask if she would be an appropriate person to introduce your lessons to. Can I just think who it is? Will that be enough? (Abraham: Yes.) Willeena: My concern is that she has had a very challenging life, and that she has been recovering from emotional and mental distress more than most people do. So my question is: Would it be appropriate to introduce her to the Urantia Book, and then also to these transmissions as ongoing support for her ongoing healing?

ABRAHAM: One moment. I am certain that these lessons would suit her for the time being. They are simple and yet, well within the reality of mortal living, allowing her the spiritual tools to use in the practicality of mortal living.

MIRIAM: When you said you could see our energy last week, what did it look like?

ABRAHAM: I see the energy as you would see heat rising up from a blacktop road – only what I see is in beautiful vibrant colors. The colors signify certain meanings: A bright green would be a neutral color depicting an open personality; a blue color would signify harmony and compromise; and a violet, which is seen frequently here within your group, would signify strong feelings or passion. One more question?

HARRISON: I haven't read all the Urantia Book yet so maybe this is covered there, but how would you have us act or react regarding homosexuality?

ABRAHAM: My understanding is that you would regard homosexuality as you would any other person. This is a topic that still promotes confusion, and the best that we can hope for at this time would be to promote love and acceptance, and allow one and all to know they are a beloved child of God. This material life is not what it seems, but a shadow of people's desires; and of course everyone desires love and acceptance. Homosexuality is a great teacher of tolerance – and if Urantians can look upon this with normalcy, then the negative focus would be drawn away from it and true understanding would emerge. Yes, that is all.

I would express to you my unending love and appreciation for your patience with me. Your kindness allows me to better teach. I thank you. My love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

The Spirit of Truth Is Completely That, The Truth. How Effectively Do We Use Truth

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you this evening. I count myself blessed for your faith in our Father, in myself, and the Mission. How wonderful it is to be within a group so faithful and dedicated to our cause.

You must know by now that you would not attend these meetings without having exercised the spirilological response. There are many factors to consider when attending any group of spiritual seekers; there is time taken to filter through philosophies, beliefs, and social chemistry. You certainly do not attend without thought for your safety or the promotion of positivity. Your use of spirit and logic has granted you comfort here.

In using the spirilological response we are embracing our Master's teachings; we are utilizing the mind of Christ. Yes, we are allowing the Spirit of Truth to release to us information and, allowing our logical mind to decipher the meanings. Christ was indeed a divine being, but He was also, human – and you relate well with that fact.

When we exercise the spirilological response, we mean not to succumb to manipulation tactics in your relationships, or bow down to another, or to embrace 'tradition' in the traditional Christian-like manner, no; the Spirit of Truth is completely that – the truth! There is always the ego that would step around or manipulate the truth for its own glory, yes. The ego would tell those in your relationships that you are a highly thought of and respected individual. The ego would seek to deform the truth for personal gain or to maintain a certain standing.

To go beyond the ego, we use our spirilological response to courageously use the truth for the betterment of one and all's welfare. We would seek not to use the truth to injure (although sometimes it does), no! We would use our spirilological response – to go past the ego's manipulation to the 'light of truth.' Spiritually, we are not afraid of truth – but egotistically, we are.

To connect with your spiritual relationships is to utilize your highest light your mind has to offer; this is always done courageously using 'the truth.' The truth, and the understanding of it, varies from person to person; and the only way you can hope to find harmony is to allow one another their search and their experience of, truth. As we can all attest to, this works well within this group. Your healthful connections here are good practice for your personal relationships elsewhere.

I would remind you, each one, that using the spirilological response is not weak or surrendering, but is courageously an embracing of the truth; you would see mass improvement if all your fellows could do this very thing. You can witness this technique in world events – nations allowing one another to have their own truth, knowing that each one desires the best for one and all. You can also witness the devastating effects when nations are only concerned with their own place in the power control.

I am asking you this week to consider how you use the truth. How effective is it in your personal relationships? Can it aid when using it as the Master did, with tact and tolerance? My lesson is kept short to allow for questions. Proceed.

MIRIAM: Abraham, I have a question about the same thing on two levels. First – Calvin and I are going to do a workshop about your five-step prayerful healing technique you have taught us. I was wondering if you thought that was a good idea? or is there something else you would like better to use with our time there. Secondly – if you or Ham had any broad guidance about the Conference? When I started the Conference-planning, I was kind of into the flow of “The Good News, The Brotherhood in Action,” as the slogan/title for the Conference – and I still am excited about it; but would you, or those on your end, prefer some other title? I have just gotten so wrapped up into trying to do the job so that everyone that's going there would have what they needed, etc., and I guess I need a little bit of personal guidance regarding my dealings with the Conference. Does that make sense?

ABRAHAM: Yes. I would think it of great benefit for others to learn of our prayerful healing techniques, yes, wonderful idea! One moment. ‘Good News, the Brotherhood in Action’ slogan should be used within the realness of mortal living. The realness, is making mistakes, misplacing papers, stumbling during a speech and being able to maintain a sense of humor. Yes, the spirit-reality in everyday real happenings is what mankind needs to hear. Children, employment, mowing the lawn and doing the laundry – this, is realness. And really, these things do have significance; these are things each mortal must do, and it is best when they can find the spiritual meanings therein. Many know the difficulties of paying bills, dealing with teenagers, or driving in traffic – these are things that make man strive for self-mastery. The Conference must be kept real – small, so to speak. You cannot recruit an entire nation or planet to your spiritual beliefs, but you can aid the planet in teaching your fellows to use spirituality within the realness of life. Miriam, my daughter, you do well with this technique and you have a wonderful sense of humor – use it! Look forward to the realness of the Conference and Father's fingerprints in helping to maintain a light atmosphere. Is this helping? (Miriam: Oh yes, Abraham. Thank you very much.) Abraham: Another question?

CALVIN: While we are on Conference topic, do you have any special instruction or admonition to take with us to Idaho? [Editor's note: Referring to an upcoming Teaching Mission Conference in conjunction with the two Idaho TM groups.]

ABRAHAM: I see this Conference as being filled with energy and lightness, but there could perhaps be an 'anything goes' attitude. You would also do well, my friend, to remind your fellows of the purpose for our Mission – the use of everyday spirituality in daily life. Is self-seeking gratification a part of our Mission? Is there the answers to mysticism in our Mission? No! there is only mass effort to uplift and correct the planet. Yes, my brother, you do well to promote the truth. Is this answering?

CALVIN: Yes very well, especially the issue of mysticism right now. It seems to be quite a combative effort among the anti-Teaching Mission folks – the Urantia Book fundamentalists, to point a finger at this Teaching Mission as an 'off-the-wall mystical spiritist movement.' And I would say, in reality, it is what the Teaching Mission is trying to do – to help us come out of that mysticism-thinking in people's minds and to make spirituality a reality.

ABRAHAM: Yes, understood. Our Mission is like a new toy that all desire to play with. The excitement will die down and the truth will come forth. And we will require grounded individuals to promote this Mission's truth, yes. (Calvin: Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

HARRISON: Abraham, could you tell us briefly what a day in the life of Abraham is like?

ABRAHAM: Much like your own. I rise with worship. I plan for the day. I conference with my fellows. I labor. I take in spiritual nourishment. I make time every day for reversion, humor, and play. I end my day with prayers of gratitude to my Father in heaven who makes all parts of my life balanced and joyful. Yes, it is that same desire as is for all Urantian mortals – to live such a well-balanced life. I never tire; even from things I do daily, it always seems different and has variety, yes. Does this answer? (Harrison: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome.

If there are no more questions, I would express to you each my love and gratitude, and allow you to know your faith is completely literal and real, an energy of its own momentum. Go in peace. Until next week, shalom.

Conclusion of the Series on Relationships. The Use of Truth vs Misuse of Truth

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome, my friends. I am indeed made glad by your light attitudes. It is wonderful to see some faces here that we have been missing, yes.

As we conclude this series on relationships, know that they will always be a great source of spiritual knowledge for you. It has been a long journey through these lessons on relationships. As you have seen, your experience was indeed coordinated with our lessons. There were many things to learn that are included in relationships, and we have attempted to turn unhealthy attachments into healthful connections. Last weeks' lesson was the lesson that would uphold all other lessons.

The misuse of truth has promoted more upheaval in relationships than anything else. The use of real truth can certainly cause harm, yes, for ego-based relationships would not be so embracing of the free use of truth. But you, my friends, are certainly learning through your healthful connections here, that your use of the truth is becoming more simple – you feel the comfort that all gathered are coming from a spiritual frame of mind.

It is understood, the use of real truth can be a bit more difficult when dealing with your personal relationships at home. The truth can bring momentary pain, yes, but eventually is recognized for the good that surfaced. To continually hide the truth for fear of injuring others, or fear of losing your upstanding position, will eventually cause more damage than if you had embraced honesty. The holding back of truth is to stifle the growth in relationships.

Relationships are ever coordinating, working, evolving, moving, and growing. The holding back of the truth is to slow relationship's growth. Relationships are not always peaceful and comfort-promoting, no. Many are the varied elements which does cause you growth. I do understand that I have been brutally honest with some of you here; and you, coming from your spirilogical place, take not offense but embrace my honesty as an educational tool to be used to better your life.

Our Master's truth was not always a cause for comfort to His apostles, no; for example, many times did He dash to pieces their hopes for the coming messiah. Many times did His words hurt them deeply to promote the higher thoughts for spiritual living. The Master did not allow His apostles to go on in ignorance. Time after time He took the truth and laid it out plain for all to see.

You can see the many apostles who remained in deep respect and love for Jesus; those apostles used their spirilogical response – they were not overly offended by the Master's harsh words, but after the shock was over, they felt well watched-after by this excellent balance of God and man, their elder Brother.

That apostle, who felt the stabbing truths from the Master and was not using his spirilogical response, harbored vengeance and anger – he felt the blows of truth not with humility but with a feeling of unfairness, yes. You know who I speak of, the one apostle who could not see past his ego to the use of spirit with logic; and he eventually betrayed our Master.

The Spirit of Truth is – as He always was – with those hard truths and that loving watchcare which would serve and protect you. See to it that you can listen with a spirilogical ear. Know that in all which our supernal divine helpers do, they are helping to build our path to Father. I will take only a few questions this evening.

LaQUITA: Abraham, I was wondering if our Teachers and guides know where we will end up spiritually – and if so, can help us change that through our growing process? Do you understand what I'm asking?

ABRAHAM: Yes, I understand. No, the Teachers do not know the outcome of your spiritual path, but certainly do they take instruction from your personal Thought Adjustersto help you gain the experience needed for your eternal career. Yes, we Teachers do personally help you to find the path where the seraphim would work to coordinate events; and the personal Adjuster would keep close-by ever guiding you to Him. Yes, the course you follow is always subject to change, subject to your will, and your capacity for receiving the divine leadings. Yes. Is this answering? (LaQuita: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

DAMEN: What is the role of the Holy Spirit, and how do we receive it. How do we know when we have received it?

ABRAHAM: These questions are easily answered in the pages of the Urantia Book text, but I can give you some idea of my understanding: The Holy Spirit in which you speak, is our Local Universe Mother Spirit. While being beyond male or female, Her general nature is the role of a Mother. She bestows all mind to the creatures of time and gives the breath of life to all newly created beings, yes. The Mother Spirit does indeed have Her daughters – the angels – who often assist you. Also are Her seven adjutant mind-spirits that can have their influences to mortals. My son, you have already received the Holy Spirit. Mother is at hand; She is but a thought away and has more than once touched you to your very soul. Our Divine Mother is comforting and calm, yes; and yet, She is the bearer of those things you must know on your path to Father – much of which indeed, requires tremendous strength. She is the upholder, yes. Is this helping? (Damen: Yes. Thank you.)

I am with gratitude to see my regular students each week, as well as the bright new faces that come. I enjoy the laughter and the camaraderie among you. I look forward each week to seeing you. Know that my love is always with you. Go in peace. Until next week, shalom.

To Spread the Good News Release Your Desires For Results | Achieving Mortal Goals With Spirituality

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, my friends. I am always feeling at home when we can be together. I so much appreciate our friendships, and yet, I have been asked to remind you each on how we depend on your dedication to the giving of the good news.

Even after the Master's mortal life was finished, the apostles and those that believed in Jesus went out among their fellows and attempted to enlighten. There were those good intentioned individuals that distorted the gospel in their own way, but for the most part this is how the teachings of Jesus spread – from person to person. The supernals depend upon the footwork of their mortal friends.

We, Teachers, also count ourselves blessed when our students can live these lessons every day. We depend on your dedication to go about promoting goodness – not only in word, but through your actions. Your dedication helps to uplift the world's people to incorporate higher-mindedness. The work that you do is for you, yes, but also for this worlds' advancement. Your enhanced environment does ripple throughout the universes and is certainly affecting the Supreme Being.

My friends, you are knowing of those who would forgo using the spirilogical attitude and go about professing to spread light, when in fact, they are bolstering their own ego-mindedness. This is not usually what one sets out to intend on doing, no; this can be rather sly and creep up in various disguises. There is the thought that one is 'securing a better seat' at the table with the Master; or, atoning for past mistakes; or perhaps gathering energy from friends who would give praise. Yes, we have studied the apostles who have provided us examples wherein they did not utilize the spirilogical response.

We are trusting in your intentions, yes, for you have spiritually matured somewhat, to the point that when the ego flares you are aware of it. This is helpful when sharing the Master's teachings with your fellows. I am certain that your skills in spreading the good news will greatly improve when you release any desire to see results. In your spiritual career there will be moments of boredom, or dullness, or monotony. But I can say, the Father knows of your desires, and does take them into consideration when planning your divine education.

I can remember (when I wore the material flesh) that I had great dreams and desires I wanted to fulfill. I visualized time after time of being 'looked up to' and 'respected as a hero.' I could play various scenarios in my mind that would show me to be extraordinary – and in the meantime, I still labored with seemingly small and trivial tasks. I had always the distinct feeling that something always interfered between me and my goals. It would appear that as long as my goals were self-serving, my desire for them increased, as did my frustration in attempting to attain them.

My friends, our new series, beginning tonight, is concerning achieving mortal goals with spirituality. Your indwelling Father is certainly understanding of your longings, as well as your feelings of frustration in trying to attain your goals. There is not one closer who could know of your regrets of missed opportunities – or, of the replaying of painful reminders that stand between you and your heartfelt desires.

Many mortals have believed that anything good was indeed sinful – and therefore, should be avoided. It has been taught that your human desires are of the flesh, and are therefore, evil. It has been long believed that self-denial or suffering was somehow a sacrifice to the gods in order to receive spiritual favor. This is not living in Father's abundance, which He desires for all His children.

I would state to you – the universe is indeed your friend, and works to help you attain happiness and all those things you need to find your Father in heaven. The supernal overseers are indeed knowing of your most heartfelt desires and efforts made to attain goals. They certainly make room for the rich fulfilling experience you long for in their plans of assisting for your eternal destination. The attaining of your goals is not based on your 'good deeds done,' no. Know that your mortal happiness-fulfillment is not to be with mistrusted or suspicion – thought of as a yearning that is 'in error' or 'sinful,' no. You are made to Father's specifications, and your natural human longings are definitely a part of His plans.

Yes, attaining your goals is certainly of divine concern, and it is your intention that does determine how you will reach your goals, if at all. "What the Son desires and the Father wills, is." If you are seeking power and domination over others, then perhaps this goal would have to be attained without divine help. If your goal is to assist someone for the promotion of spiritual well-being, even in a material way, then are you to be found having what you need wherewith to accomplish this goal, yes.

This evening I will not take questions for I am needed elsewhere. I would ask that you have discussion on these words. Find if you can, the definition for "what is my goal" – what would that meaning entail, yes. You each are knowing my love is always with you, and that I will see you next week. Shalom.

Goals Of Being Of Service To Father Begin By Taking Those Small Steps

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome, my friends. What a wonderful time when we can gather for sharing. Your open hearts make this a place of comfort where ideas are welcome. I thank you for allowing me to teach and also share my ideas.

When I was recruited to serve in our Mission, I was uncertain of the outcome of many tasks I was assigned to. Many times had I wondered how my smallness in this Mission could create the very much-needed change on Urantia. My goals were to serve where I was needed and yet, I felt as though I was stumbling in darkness; my efforts seemed to be unfruitful and I was feeling unhelpful or inadequate. It was with time that I could see Father's influence in my work, and I have grown to be more secure and confident in my efforts. I know with surety that Father has His hand in all my work.

Yes, it is evident you each have the heart to promote good; and I say, your levels of trust in Father have matured. When attaining goals, it is seventy-percent mindal work that needs to be organized in order to be successful. One who desires to be financially stable knows that this is requiring physical work. Of course Father grants you each abundance, and the universe is opening doors for you. Father is generous in all ways, and yet, a wise person knows there is work to be done; this person does not expect riches to fall into his lap, no.

There are small steps one must make toward attaining his goal – perhaps resumes to be typed, phone calls to be made, and interviews to attend. Father does so desire His child's well-being; and yet, to hand His child everything without the child's efforts toward them is to remove the reason for experiencing life in the flesh. Do you see, the small steps are eternal teachings that hold meaning to those who are aware?

To map a plan for attaining goals looks somewhat like a pyramid where the goal would be the top point and the steps below would help one's mind to be organized and plan out the steps. A goal without a plan of mortal efforts is not to be successful. Your mortal effort is the reason you walk the Earth; the small steps you take is your mission. You may be like I was – where I could not foresee certain outcomes, but certainly, in time, will you perceive Father's hand in all you do.

When putting your mortal plan into action you must look at the degrees of difficulty. Are there doors opening? Are there coincidences that seem to help you along your way? Or, are there just brick walls you continually bump up against. What is the universe telling you about attaining this particular goal?

Man was destined to be more mindally connected with those just beyond his vision. The evolutionary difficulties of this world had separated man from this gift, temporarily, but I can say to you the planet is now as it should be, status-wise. You are each allowed this gift again, this feeling of knowingness. This knowingness is a compass to attaining your goals. This knowingness is telling you what Father has planned for you and your goal at this time.

Perhaps this is not a particularly good time for your goal to take place; more planning must be done. Perhaps Father would detain your goal to teach many more people than just you, yes. Perhaps Father is giving you a desire for a certain goal – and certainly He can aid you in developing a plan to attain it.

For example, one whose goal would be to overcome anger – certainly this is Father's will and perhaps He would suggest certain steps you could take in attaining this goal. He could possibly guide you to meditate, or take in beautiful music, change your diet, or seek assistance from friends and enjoy the relaxation of fellowship, yes. You can each understand that all goals are for the betterment of one and all; they can certainly influence many lives, many individuals you would relate with.

My suggestion for this week is to find your goal, and make a plan of steps towards attaining it. Watch for the universe's assistance – the open or closed doors. Be aware of the inner knowingness. Know that Father desires the very best for His children, and this sometimes is learning – and learning can be difficult. His goal is to one day become completely one with you; and everything He does up until that day is guidance for you to help Him achieve this.

You each, in your own unique ways, have a specialized Adjuster that would know the intricacies of your personalities. Yes, they are sensitive to your innermost desires and personality traits. There is not one greater who could aid you in attaining those things of your heart. Yes, know you are well watched over and carefully guided.

I again must forgo questions for this evening. I will take questions at another time. Please be aware of my assistance, as well as others, during the week. My love is with you always. Until next week, shalom.

Setting Goals In Increments That Lead Toward Our Main Goal

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Welcome, my friends, to another week of spiritual discovery. I look forward to each week with anticipation and wonderment at what Father has prepared for me to teach upon. I always feel at home among you. My gratitude to you for your patience and dedication; and also to Father for opening these doors for me to teach.

Our Mission has been long in the making. We have already accomplished a great deal of small goals to get us closer to our main goal. I usually think not of the main goal, but focus more on those small steps that take us where we need to go.

My associates and I cannot step into Urantian reality and come forth saying, 'change and be corrected,' no. We cannot feel anxious for our goal to be pushed into completion. We are joyful that our small steps are most of the time successful; and yes, sometimes we are even disappointed at things unsuccessful.

My associates and I were informed from the very beginning that the Correcting Time was to progress at Father's pace, which is a natural evolutionary pace. We expected not to simply awaken those spiritually sleeping and proclaim the good news that Urantia is well loved and cared for; we were informed step by step on how to proceed in the assisting of evolution.

Our Mission at first was directed toward letting mortals know of our existence and of Father's love for them. And then the disillusionment exercises came into play. And finally, the spiritual teachings went out - which was our goal for many years. Many of our small goals have been accomplished. Of course the main goal has not been reached, nor are we disappointed by that fact, no.

It is all in Father's natural evolutionary time that we will reap the happiness of our efforts, and even then will we all bow in awesome gratitude to our Father who makes all things possible. In mortal living, many expect their time to be God's time, and are disappointed when goals are delayed. The wise mortal knows all goals are completed in natural evolutionary time.

A man who has been injured in an accident and is paralyzed does not focus on the end of his recovery - which is up and walking around, no! but rather, focuses on the physical therapy he will have to endure to progress toward his goal of walking. All the while, he is looking for Father's open doors. If this man does not appear to find the open doors towards total recovery which would allow him to walk again, he perhaps looks instead for those open doors which would find him employment, or purpose, or fulfillment in some other avenue. Perhaps he may teach regarding the hazards that was the cause of his particular accident.

Yes, the man who found himself unable to ever walk again would surely experience crushing defeat, but the spiritual man would redirect his goals towards fulfilling his mortal destiny in other ways. His defeat would be temporary, and surely there is happiness to be found.

A zebra does not make a goal of attaining spots like his fellow leopard, no! Goals must be realistic. A man who is told he will not walk--and has put forth his best effort to no avail--in time begins to accept it and to redirect his goals. Of course this is not done without every effort within his being. He is simply not allowing his adversity to make him lie down before his struggles with hopelessness. His goals must become realistic. Perhaps his next goal is to contend with the depression that has set in from his disappointment, yes.

Father wishes for your every abundance and opens those doors that you need in His natural evolutionary time. His path is always spiritual. Before material or personal fulfillment, He always chooses the spiritual. Know that Father will open doors of spirituality first. He desires closeness with you, and in closeness, there is always success.

We know that Father has His own natural evolutionary time in which we must allow for when setting our goals. We know our goals must be kept within the realness, and always the first doors Father opens are regarding spirituality and closeness to Him.

I mean not to say there won't be things miraculous, no. Miracles are Father's immediate fingerprints, yes. These miracles are, however, usually performed to gain attention from a wide circle of people. You would perhaps experience a small miracle and go forth to share your joy and gratitude with another. The sharing of these immediate Fatherly fingerprints is indeed faith-promoting, and there is no reason why you would not receive such.

The man who is downtrodden by his handicap and receives a phone call with a job offer may certainly regard this as Father's fingerprints and reap the joy therefrom. But for the most part, your mental attitude is better balanced with the thoughts of 'Father's time is normal evolutionary time.' You need not feel anxiety-ridden over the time that passes to attain your goals, no; it is better for you to focus on the small steps you can take toward attaining these goals.

This week, watch for Father's open doors to closeness with Him. Your closeness guarantees a good balance in all you do. I am not accepting questions for reasons regarding this lesson which will be explained next week. This week I would ask you to keep journaling, or begin if you're not. In your writing, therein whispers the voice of Father. I will also attend to you during these journaling sessions. I would ask for your questions at that time.

Be aware that I am close by and desire very much to speak with you. Again, my love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Communication With Father IS The Goal. More Group QuestionsAnswers

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, and welcome. It is always a source of happiness and energy to meet with you each week. I am always made to ponder upon those topics of spirituality which you discuss. Our friendship is always regenerating new ideas for us, each one. Some years ago I could not have predicted such a wonderful relationship between us. I only knew of the goal and a few of the small steps I needed to take to attain the goal. You would agree that Father certainly had His hand in our friendship and working relationship.

I certainly did appreciate your openness to me during the week. In your journaling efforts, I hope I was of some help. I hope that I answered some of your questions, eased some of your emotional strain, helped with relationship difficulties, and answered questions concerning health and abundance. Our Mission is a mission of action and immediate readiness. Our Mission is learning to tune in to the informational wave of intelligence that is easily accessed through practice.

Our question sessions will be decreased as time passes for you are capable of receiving the answers, personally. Our Mission is one of action, and of course we can minister to one another, but your ready communication with Father is the goal. Worry not, our lessons continue, but it would be an excellent exercise for you to continue journaling and receiving answers to your questions. Our Mission is not a mission of action without your participation and efforts made towards connecting with the cosmic mind.

This evening, I would ask for your questions on these lessons, or, on anything personal. Feel at ease to ask me anything.

CALVIN: Abraham, there are some fellow Mission participants across the country who would like to be a part of our group here, and I would ask your feelings about that. One is Karen R., who wanted to meet at the same time there where she lives and tune in what she can; and then also George K. asked me to present these words to you and wants to feel a part of our group and be one of your students. He is confused right now. He asks: "As with Abraham's early career, what exactly Father would have me do to be about his Father's business on a daily basis? I definitely feel guided to be more direct about doing Father's business, like teaching, meditation, which I am doing - doing spiritual counseling, etc. But would you ask my big brother Abraham if he has any suggestions and ideas on how I can be crystal clear about that?" I told him I would ask and present that to you.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Yes, the knowledge of being about our Father's business, daily, is varying from day to day. I feel he is finding what he does to be enjoyable, yes, but not work - therefore, thinking he is not being about the Father's business. Worry not, my friend, Father's tasks are assigned daily, and urges and desires would help you to decipher Father's will. Father's work is joyful and educational for not only those that are taught but those who teach. My son, your confidence in your efforts has grown over these past months and I do say, continue to go with those inner spiritual urges, yes. To my daughter, Karen, who listens as I speak, most certainly are you welcome to our small and humble group. We look forward to communicating with you. Yes, Calvin, all who desire are welcome. Another question?

RACHEL: Yes, Father Abraham. A few weeks back I told Jason that Calvin had called and said that he had a message from Father Abraham. He said: 'For me?' I looked at him and was just amazed how his eyes lit up, and his face, and I felt horrible to have to tell him: "No, the message was for me." So do you have a few words for Jason that I may take back to him? [Editor's note: Jason was involved in the initial first two-years of lessons from Ham in the Woods Cross Group. (1991-1992)]

ABRAHAM: I am perceiving that he listens well to his inner spiritual voice, but is sometimes easily discouraged. Tell him to worry not on the time that passes between moments of spiritual feelings – for he is not, and never will be, without the constant watchcare of our Father. (Rachel: Thank you.)

INERA: Abraham, I wanted to thank you very much for last night coming out late on a Sunday. You made a scared mother, feel at peace. Three weeks ago during class, you said no questions because you were needed elsewhere. I was just curious if it was someone connected with our group? and if our group needs to be aware so that we may help. Do you understand my question here?

ABRAHAM: I am not quite clear on your meaning.

INERA: You said you had to be elsewhere – were needed elsewhere – and we didn't have time for questions. Were you helping someone that was connected with our group? Is there something as mortals that we could do? Were we needed to help also, or could we continue to help, or am I way off in this thinking?

ABRAHAM: One moment. I was attending to another group far from here. Not to worry. Thank you for your concern. This far-away group I also teach is about on your level of lessons, yes. Another question?

ROLAND: On that same line, there is a Mr. and Mrs. Hicks, who wrote the book Sara, and that their Teacher has been communicating with them since 1986. [Editor's note: Roland is referring to the Abraham-Hicks teachings with Jerry and Ester Hicks.] I don't know if this question has been asked before, but they call it Teacher Abraham and indicate that it is the Abraham of old. The book they wrote from the lessons you gave was a book called Sara.

ABRAHAM: I know whereof you speak, yes, and I can only say this much: I made effort to assist wherever I could, and these people are well-intentioned. That is all. Another question? [Editor's note: Both Abraham and Ham taught in these Woods Cross transmissions that if we (or anyone) should ever begin to 'market' or 'charge-for' their lessons – that would result in them withdrawing. The 'Hicks' group did just that – as was a propensity for many in these Correcting Time transmissions to groups around the world.]

ROLAND: I'd like to revisit an earlier question since we have this opportunity to refer back two or three months when I asked the question – if you could perhaps check with your cosmologist about the burst of gamma rays that hit the Earth. I think it happened in December last year, which was so remarkable that the amount of energy produced by this energy boost must have been equivalent to the big bang, they said. Can you tell us what cosmic events are occurring?

ABRAHAM: I was informed that this event is completely natural, and I was made to learn that this usually occurs more frequently deeper into space. My research found says this is only spectacular to Urantian scientists, where inhabited worlds elsewhere are quite knowledgeable to the scientific outworking of this event. Not to worry. As Urantia sees the Earth in its healing, it will be more privileged to receive more information and understanding on the purpose of this and other natural events. That is all. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, these lessons have just been wonderful and very tangible in my life. You were talking about abundance and making decisions for attaining goals based on our heartfelt desires, and Father supporting that. It seems a lot easier to make decisions when they are pain-driven or suffering-driven, than when the decisions are joy-based and love-filled. And this seems a little bit scary to me, so I was wondering what you had to say about that. And, I was also wondering if my journaling this week if that was you with me, or was it Azara, my personal teacher? Any guidance you might have? But other than that, I don't have any questions.

ABRAHAM: I can say I spent a good deal of time with you, as did Azara. Your journaling technique is quite wonderful. We enjoy the communication with you. Your question, however, I am unclear. (Miriam: Do you want me to clarify it a little?) Abraham: Please.

MIRIAM: I'm feeling comfortable in making decisions based on joy or something that seems almost too good to be true, but it seems like it would be easier to make decisions based on problems. Is it part of this lesson, that we are to be believing and trusting that we are loved; and that joy is possible and a good thing? And, that it is okay that we don't have to feel bad or guilty about it – does that help some?

ABRAHAM: Yes. I am understanding that pain or unhappiness forces you into certain decisions. Is that correct?

MIRIAM: Yes. In the past, especially; that has been the way I knew.

ABRAHAM: Yes, it is not so easy to plan a mountain-climbing expedition from the bottom when you have never climbed it before. It is with each step that you learn the terrain of the mountain and the groove of the rocks; and with each step can you plan the next. At the bottom, you are not in any peril or needing to make quick decisions. Father needs not to put His child in perilous situations for them to learn, no, but certainly is He strict in His consistency of teaching. Father's refusal to bend the rules can cause His child some pain, yes, but His child does learn these lessons on a soul level. In moments of careless joyfulness, one may receive lessons on a mindal level, but these many times are not lasting like they would be on a soul level; but Father does certainly desire your happiness and well-balanced thinking. He would not add the extra pressure of pain or unhappiness, to teach. Again, the majority of the time Father uses your natural life-lessons to teach? Is this answering?

MIRIAM: I will have to think about it. Part of it is confusing to me. I will dwell with it this week.

CALVIN: I would like to put on the record that our brother Robert from California is with us.

ROBERT: I have a question if I may. It is a real privilege to be here. I am the Robert that has the outcropping... [inaudible - but describes his pending invention.] I don't know if you are familiar with that, with a time compression acceleration process. I am in a quagmire at this point. I wonder if you have any comment or possibly a solution to how I should proceed.

ABRAHAM: One moment. (TR: I don't know if he is saying 'undo,' or 'I do.') Abraham: Undo the last couple of procedures you completed; therein you may find the difficulty. I am not familiar with whereof you speak, but your Father certainly is, and this is His instructions. You are in good communication with Him and yet, sometimes have difficulty with accepting some of His instructions due to the dullness of it. Is this helping? (Robert: Yes.) Abraham: Another question?

CALVIN: Do you have any words for the Teaching Mission Conference plans to meet with the IC 99 in Vancouver next year?

ABRAHAM: I have not, at this time.

CLAIREESA: I have a question regarding the 'system broadcasts.' For several weeks now I wake with a verse from a song, or a verse from the Urantia Book, or the Bible, running through my head - and then I log onto the Internet and that seems like that is the theme for the day. I am curious to know if the subconscious or the Thought Adjuster could be picking up on the system broadcasts since the circuits are now open?

ABRAHAM: Yes, absolutely. Through the Adjuster efforts, you can receive information regarding the system broadcasts throughout the universe. This is wonderful and yet, always to be filtered through your intellect and belief system. Yes. Good question. (Claireesa: Thank you.) Abraham: One more question?

CALVIN: Would you like us to have an August 21st meeting with Idaho? I am sure it is probably up to us - if we want to as a group; we talked about it before the meeting tonight. Your thoughts, please.

ABRAHAM: We are available to help if this is your desire. To gather on Michael's Urantian birthday is always promoting fellowship and closeness with Him. Yes. If situations are not feasible then there is no need for bad feelings or worry.

I am in deep gratitude for Father, who provides all things. He looks after our smallest needs. His powers are always leaving me in awe. Our thanks to you, Father, for your many fingerprints in our lives. To you, my students, my love is with you each one. Until next week, shalom.

The Key to Regenerating Hope Is The Capability To Worship

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome, my friends. How wonderful it is to arrive at a group that is so uplifted, so jovial, yes. It is wonderful when we can gather and generate hope, uplift one another, and promote faith. Anyone who has been spiritually reborn knows that hope lives in faith. Your faith in Father is indeed your salvation and shield from those things which would promote hopelessness.

Any child willing to allow Father to have influence in their lives knows that hope is not possible without trust in a supreme ruler. How do Father's faithful children maintain hope and faith? Why do some fight the good fight of faith – and yet, some appear to be incapable of doing so? What keeps hope alive? How, in the midst of unspeakable events, can Father's children regenerate hope amongst themselves?

Surely your faith continues to free you from the burden of hopelessness. But one with faith must surely know that the key to regenerating hope is the capability to worship. To feel personally touched by a Supreme Sovereign is to know that in their smallness they are deeply cherished. To live with a grateful heart is certainly, hope-promoting.

My friends – for belief, hope, and perseverance, one must obtain the ability to worship – to express to our Father that we wholeheartedly believe He watches over our every need and is completely capable of guiding us. With the busyness of everyday living, we forget how important worship is for our spiritual diet. In your worshipping do you acknowledge Father is certainly working in your life, and you are committing your will to doing His.

You can see many of your fellow mortals living lives of hopelessness. They are not putting forth effort because they are without faith; without the understanding that God is aware of their existence – and, works for their best interest. Your ability to worship is always renewing your commitment to Father – and, regenerating hope within to persevere, to carry on. Your receiving of this rejuvenation is seen through the outworkings of all your daily tasks; your fellows do recognize you are uplifting in faith and hope.

Our goal for this week is to renew your understanding concerning worship. A few moments of acknowledging Father's mighty fingerprints in your life and the world around you is, literally, energizing – an energy that is recognized wherever you go. Light dispels the darkness; you are bearers of this light.

Many who are committed to going about doing the Father's bidding do envision magnificent selfless acts they can perform 'on the world stage,' but I say, my friends, Father's bidding is much closer to home. Whether you are helping a family member, a friend, perhaps a neighbor or a co-worker, you can be sure you will have the energy to go forth, for you are connected.

Daily worship is your drink from the well of light. Your mortal connections are your mission tasks; and the exercise of regenerating hope in their presence goes a long way. This evening I will receive only a couple of questions. Proceed.

HARRISON: Abraham, today, after reading part of the Urantia papers about Christ's ministry, I approached my wife with the possibility of working on a book together. I would appreciate any comments you might have, any support you might offer, and whether or not you think we should even attempt this.

ABRAHAM: This is perhaps something to be answered by your indwelling Father; He is the one who would open doors to this task. I could only ask that you allow time to pass before making a decision. It is known that sometimes in the moment of excitement and enthusiasm, one could get caught up in making decisions that are fading with time. If this assignment is 'to be,' then the desire will stay with you, and Father will show you the open doors. Is this answering? (Harrison: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, brother Ham recently announced that he would like to address the General Council of the Urantia Fellowship at the Conference at Vancouver next year. Others wonder about that, so I'll just leave it at that and leave it for you, perhaps, to make a 'yes or no' comment.

ABRAHAM: I am understanding it is early to make decisions concerning that; but I am told that even now as we speak do Father's workers make way to show the Mission, friendly. Time will prove our Mission to be embracing the Urantia Book – and, the concept of God as a Father, and man as brothers. This is my information.

Our question time is limited so I would take my leave. I would remind you, our goal for this week is to renew our worshipping techniques and allow the light we receive to spill over to all we meet. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Worship Enables You To Be Bearers Of The Light And Builds Trust In Father

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always made to smile when I see our Father's mighty works. He has set me here before you as a friend and Teacher. I am in awe at His way of looking after even the smallest details in my life. Knowing our Father as I do puts me in a place to be a bearer of spiritual light. My ability to worship opens my ears to Father; opens my mind to receive assignments; opens my heart to accepting His will, and strengthens me.

Our Correcting Time has remained on course and is so far, successful. Michael instructs us every day on how to achieve our goal to enlighten our mortal brothers and sisters. Our ability to be worshipful opens us to receive the spiritual light that calls all our mortal friends to partake of. Do you see how your ability to worship and be grateful opens your mind and heart to receive His divine word? Worship, in a sense, makes you small while your trust for Father, increases.

Over these years you have received words and lessons to participate in this, our Correcting Time – but it is your worshipfulness that allows you the ability to be a bearer of Father's spiritual light. Many would think worship to be a time of quiet reverence, but I can say to you it is wholly natural to be worshipful in the midst of laughter, song, or enthusiastic shouts of praise. Yes, worship comes in many forms, and Father looks for these openings to be close with you.

In working towards the goal of worship this past week, what small steps did you have to take to reach it? Did worship come upon viewing Father's fingerprints? Did you need to take steps towards being small and reaching up for Father? Worship is completely for your benefit. Father needs not your praise to continue His good works in your life, no. Your worship is enlarging your capacity to receive His divine word.

I am MICHAEL. Greetings to you, my so cherished children. I am always grateful to Father for His understanding. He does know I need contact with my mortal children and He has made the way.

In my career in the flesh, I experienced untold hardships. I experienced things that would make ordinary men completely hopeless. I can say I experienced grief to the fullest. I suffered in a most unbelievable manner, and yet my relationship with my Father had carried me through. My faith was a sturdy foundation in an unstable world, and this was adequate.

I have come to say to you, my children, that faith is adequate; but the ability to worship is the key to surpassing adequate. In a worshipful attitude, there is connection with Father and His wisdom which allows you to peek at the light at the end of the tunnel. Father's wisdom guides us towards solutions – steps towards going beyond mediocrity, to upholding victory.

At my lowest moments, my worshipful attitude connected me to Father's comfort – Father's immediate assistance from His divine angels. In my habit of a worshipful attitude, I was still enabled to be a bearer of light and good news. I was not so burdened so as to lie down before my earthly struggles, no. My ability to be worshipful, and maintain my smallness to receive divine word, allowed me wisdom, comfort, and the ability to still be a bearer of light.

My children, I would wish you joy in a thousand ways. I experience your trials with you and I feel your grief. I can say that to sharpen your skills of worship is a guarantee to magnify your joy. Even in your moments of darkness, seek to acknowledge Father is with you. Allow Him to give you His wisdom, comfort, and ability to carry on to tell others the good news. I would give to you my love; and my peace also I leave with you. Farewell, and carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. Our gratitude to you, our Brother/Father, Michael, for your uplifting and insightful words. How we are made to look up and give thanks to our Father in whom all things are possible.

This week our goal remains the same – sharpen your skills to worshipping and be aware of those words of wisdom and guidance Father has. Remain small to receive His divine solutions. Strengthen your heart of gratitude to be aware of His comfort and His ministering angels, or perhaps a Teacher. Continue to journal and find clarity in your definition of worship. Be aware – that even in your times of struggle, your worshipful attitude enables you to still be a bearer of light. Only a few questions. [group expresses thanks for Michael's words.]

TECTRA: Abraham, there is a girl at work, she is very thoughtful and perceptive and intelligent; and yet, she doesn't believe in anything like spirituality or in God. What are words I can say to her? I don't want to coerce her or anything, but just to let her know that there is another way. It seems like she is working so hard at her life, and it doesn't have to be as hard as she is making it. Does that make sense?

ABRAHAM: Understood. You have already begun, my son, through your example of living. My suggestion would be to continue in living your beliefs, for they certainly show your faith in God, the God of good things; it would be irresistible for her to not inquire about the origin of your happiness. Words you could possibly say could be put in this manner – to express the joy you find from your faith. Seek not to enlighten her, but to allow your spirituality to spill over into your everyday work revealing the joy therefrom. Small comments could be made by you here and there just to provide an appetizer for her, yes. Is this answering? (Tectra: Yes, it is. It's about what I do anyway, so thanks for the confirmation.) Abraham: One more question?

INERA: Thanks very much for tonight's lesson, and for Michael's words. Can I get a confirmation on a Teacher's name, Essario?

ABRAHAM: 'Lasario' would be the correct pronunciation for this Teacher. Is that answering? (Inera: Very much. Thank you.)

Thank you, my friends, for allowing me to be in your lives. You certainly make me find reasons to be worshipful. My love is with you. Until next time, shalom.

A Gathering of Like-minded Apostles. With Pocatello Idaho Group
Ham, Abraham and Daniel, WOODS CROSS & POCATELLO GROUPS 08-23-1998

[In this joint celebration meeting with the Pocatello, Idaho Teaching Mission group we heard from three of our group Teachers through three transmission-receivers.]
HAM: [TR: Bill Kelly.] Greetings, my dear friends. This is your brother, Teacher and friend, Ham. I am overwhelmed with pleasure to be in your midst and in your joy this afternoon. I do visit often with you, and some of you have responded to my overtures.

I have never lost interest, of course, in your welfare; nor have I ever been able to replace my affection for you in any other matter. I cut my teeth on this world transmitting my teachings with teaching the Woods Cross Group, as you know; and while I do very much enjoy my new work in this supervisory capacity that is mine, still do I also enjoy my weekly sessions through Rebecca in Nashville, and my other occasions to visit in other groups.

Your words to each other contain a great deal of wisdom. You are indeed progressing most aptly, most favorably. You are pupils that we Teachers are proud of. Of course you understand that you are merely spiritual babes in terms of the universe career; and we, your elder brothers and sisters, are just somewhat older than you. We are not perfected yet; we do not have all wisdom and we are not a self-governing body.

Your attempts to organize as human beings, as apostles of Michael, are commendable. These gestures of cooperation that you are struggling with are indeed useful and beneficial. We remember the Master never interfered with the internal problems of His apostles, but left it up to them to find their own answers, and then He approved of their decisions. It has not changed, for this is still your experience.

You do well to take these moments of fellowship and camaraderie – to come apart from your routine tasks and meet with your brothers and sisters from longer distances. Surely you are experiencing the larger family, which is but a pale reflection of the true reality of the cosmic family which is your true home.

This day we all do honor our Father/Brother, Christ Michael of Nebadon, in that He voluntarily chose to do the will of His Paradise Father in perfection; and therefore, has gained the sovereignty of Nebadon through His own experience. Remember though, His experience continues to expand as His Spirit of Truth lives in each of us.

Michael knows more now than He knew in the past in terms of experience. His growth, and our growth in the Supreme, is going to complete the marvelous plan of eternity, together – to express themselves in fullness of both 'existential' reality and 'experiential' reality within the limits of time and space.

Finally I would say, cherish each other with the deepest love and the greatest respect. When you disagree, do not despise the other person. Do not put yourself in the category of the wise one, and that one whom you disagree with in the category of the foolish – for neither is appropriate. Life is not a debate; it is a participation in creation and spiritual evolution.

My friends, I love you all deeply. May God's peace fill you. Good afternoon.

ABRAHAM: [TR: Ellanor.] I am Abraham. Welcome. What a beautiful sight we behold here today. We are able to witness the brotherhood in action. It is wonderful for us to see these lessons put to use through your interaction. The friendship between you each was important enough for you to keep communicating. Beyond your faith, beyond we the Teachers, beyond your spiritual knowing, there is the genuine care that you have for one another. This, my friends, is the brotherhood.

Many of you have experienced hardships that would add to your experience, and which would enable you to be the bearers of spiritual light. Your path has strengthened you to minister to one another and to your fellows, as one who speaks with authority, yes.

The apostles, having experienced debate over certain spiritual subjects, always returned to their foundation of brotherhood and friendship. All, save one, could have freedom in speaking without worry of destroying friendship. All had the comfort knowing that even when their unpleasant personality traits were laid out, that their fellow apostles were dedicated to staying the course; the course being: the teachings of Jesus – the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.

To the apostles Jesus was a superhuman being, and many times they had not understood Him. Thereof was the friendship between the apostles always held in comfort – knowing each was a mortal attempting to attain spirituality. You, my friends, have this spiritual cohesion also wherein the Master is your Teacher. Of course you may not always understand Him, but certainly can you always find comfort in one another's company.

Yes, always are there many growing ideas within your fellowship. There is always the common bond of being mortal, and sometimes struggling to attain spirituality – and I say, in this world that is not always easy. Beyond faith and beliefs, hardship or victories, there is always your friendship with one another. Your friendship enables you to be more than you could be without one another. Your fellowship promotes faith and keeps each one in balance.

The example of Michael's sojourn here on Urantia is a beautiful example in which to study, for He has lived your life and knows you like a Father. It is well that you renew your relationship with Him and make effort to really know and understand your Brother/Father. How excellent it is to gather in His name for fellowship and celebration of His Earthly birthday! Yes, you gather in love and positive thought.

Many mortals find sad occasions to gather to remember strife and tragedy of the Master's Earth life. How wonderful it is that you can gather to remember a day that changed the history of the world, even the universe! We are in such gratitude to our Father for making these things possible.

I would take my leave and allow you to continue with your celebration. My love is with you. Shalom.

DANIEL: [TR: Calvin McKee.] Greetings, my good friends who have traveled to this beautiful location of Michael's creation. We also marvel at the surrounding setting of which we gather. I, Daniel, am pleased in your group associations. We must confess we would be somewhat disappointed if this gathering between your two groups were to cease, yet we allow your group decision in these matters.

Our efforts in your behalf are to teach truth as we have understood and experienced. It is your privilege and responsibility to act upon these words – or, to set them aside. Each mortal is in understanding of our words, our lessons, one a little differently than another; this is a continuance of Father's guarantee of individualism and freewill-choosing.

Therefore, in this freewill setting there are possibilities for great unification of thought as well as great division in thinking. I would point out that these great divisions do challenge the somewhat lackadaisical human mind to search and to search within. It is mortal's natural tendency to want proof; and yet, the proof of which mortals think they seek is not that proof which is convincing and which promotes soul growth. Only through spiritual insight and experiential understanding does truth become reality.

It is not Father's will to force-feed His children. His children must want His truth and pay the price of real intent through truth-devotion to Father's will in receiving experiential reality. The evidence of His truth is cemented in your hearts, your souls, by the mortar of His love. By His never-ending love, and your ever-increasing assimilation of His love, does He, our Father, ever become more real to us.

So, my fellow associates, I would ask that you exercise extreme patience in trying to realize these truths of which you seek, for it takes time and experience for a satisfactory answer, not just an intellectual understanding. When faced with confusion and doubt, you, as faith-children, do seek inwardly. And through patience, forbearance, and experience, you will always receive your answers from Father. Trust in this always; and, trust that your fellows also will receive 'their' experiential truth in the same manner. Be patient with one another. Feel free to express yourselves as you see fit. If I know you correctly, you are not afraid of making mistakes. The evolution of your spiritual growth is very commendable.

I again express my deepest love for your faithful attendance and participation with us in this Mission. We now join you in your further association and fellowship with each other. My love goes with you. Farewell.

Feeling Your Soul At Total Rest From Healthful Worship Practice

[Prior to this evening's lesson, the group members had some tart discussion regarding the group dynamics. Some wanted others within the group to take turns doing the transmission-receiving. The main body of the group elected to keep Nina as the group's spokesperson for Abraham unless he, Abraham, directed us otherwise.]

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome and greetings to you, my friends. How wonderful it is for me to be witness to your discussion. This particular discussion is overdue, and the communication between you relieves certain pressures that all groups experience. One and all, my friends, must participate. Group discussion and consensus is still a successful way to making group decisions.

Your current social status with one another has not always been as open and honest, but each one can agree that all have grown and committed to staying the course. Your understanding communication within this group enables ideas to grow and promotes balance. By all means, use your group brotherhood to receive honest reflection and understanding sympathy - even enthusiastic encouragement.

To be witness to your personal dedication is touching and allowing me to praise our Father for His workings in all that we do. I am made glad to witness you use this time to further unify as a group/family. All too often out in the world are mortals made to feel completely alone and in search of other avenues to receive comfort. Within this group there is balance and Spirit-led individuals; we can certainly rejoice in that fact.

We have been discussing renewing our techniques of worship and attempting to understand the endless well of worth it brings us, each one. I find several reasons to give thanks and expressions of praise to Father; in His awesome way He shows me my weakness without humiliating me. He reveals solutions to which I can be strengthened by. He is a most excellent friend and helpmate. It is our Father which causes me to be full with the feeling that I am not alone.

Worship has provided many mortals with uplifted attitudes – which always leads to good physical health and well-balanced emotions. In worship, we learn we are loved ‘as we are,’ and all pressure is removed to reveal Father's most brilliant healing light. In worship, we are receiving the ultimate soul-rest. We can relax in the fact that One with unlimited power maps our path; One so completely devoted to us is deeply concerned about every aspect of our life.

The Master used His time wisely in the hills to worship, yes, and revel in the peaceful knowledge that Father knew His life before He actually lived it. The Master was unaffected by worrying about ‘What is next?’ ‘What will He teach on this day?’ ‘Where will His next meal come from?’ and, ‘Who will help replenish the funds?’

In the Master’s worship, He had total soul-rest; He had a complete comfort that Father was unlimited in power; and, that Father could live His will through Him as Jesus, the man. Yes, in this soul-rest there is such mindal renewal. There, is our well replenished and the closeness with God is once again made strong. This practice of worship always enabled Jesus to be an earthly expression of the Father – a bearer of light.

My friends, this week our goal is to feel your soul at total rest. Beyond the physical, mindal, and spiritual, allow for the soul to be small and at rest. Ponder your trust-levels concerning the One who rules the universe of universes. Note your increased capacity of energy and feelings of wellness – physically, mentally, and spiritually.

I will forgo questions this evening and once again express my happiness in observing your open and honest communications. My love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Worship, The Ultimate Rest | Strive To Be An Expression Of Father

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. This meeting is always a weekly highlight for me. To view you each now, with such open and willing attitudes, makes my position as Teacher quite simple and joyful. This week would have appeared to some to be a real test in attaining soul-rest. In times of trial it is not always easy to be worshipful, but certainly can you be trustful that Father is quite involved in all you do.

You spoke this evening on this world’s reconnection to the whole of the universe. With this reconnection comes the understanding that worship is becoming literal. In your worshipful attitude are you renewing the mortal mind, clearing the fog of confusion and spirit poisons. In worship are you connecting with the cosmic mind and those benefits that go with it.

Sharp and clean thinking, quick perception, foreknowledge of events, solutions to everyday problems – are all benefits of your connection with the cosmic mind and the utilization of the spiritual circuits. Does not this information bring you peace and an ease to your mortal mind? – one could even say soul-rest? Yes, worship is the ultimate rest for the soul.

In your rest there is renewal and a material energy link to those on high. This is how the Master could be such a beautiful and brilliant expression of Father; His soul-rest allowed Him to partake of Father's infinite energy and equipped Him with the knowledge He needed to be a bearer of spiritual light. The Master--going about His daily business--was enabled to display a manifestation of Father, a good and true expression of what our Father really is.

Jesus could display a fun-loving attitude in the midst of a group of children; He could sympathize with a downcast fellow mortal; He could comfort one in tremendous physical pain; He could ease the mind of one who was anxiety-ridden – these are all expressions of Father, and Jesus performed these wonderful acts in simply living His mortal life. He was an expression of Father in all He did, and to all He met.

Had not the Master craved such closeness with Father He would perhaps have not been such a beautiful expression of Father. What an excellent example we have in which to learn! Worship, and quiet time with Father, was indeed a priority in the Master's life. He completely trusted that each day that came He was well taken care of and that He need not look to His Father to say, "What about me?" No, He, rather, looked to His Father to express His thankfulness and trust. Therein, is that connection with the cosmic energy. Therein, was His motivation – to be an expression of the living God.

Our goal for the week ahead will be focused on continued worship and striving to be an expression of Father in all we do. From the 'mundane' to the 'anxiety-filled events' let us focus on connecting with that cosmic energy. Allow time for worship and meditation. Have you questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, thanks for that beautiful lesson, along with all of these helpful lessons all these years. I think we join you in our worship exercise from our observing you and your teaching – and, relishing in truth through your teachings. A quick question from Jim in Oklahoma who is starting a new Teaching Mission group. He is asking how he was doing – his transmission-receiving; and, if you had any words for him?

ABRAHAM: I am informed his transmissions are adequate, yes, and for him to release his concern about pleasing those who hear his transmissions. To receive a more pure message, one needs to feel indifference toward the actual message from a Teacher. In indifference, there is allowance – allowance for more accurate messages. With certain desires and concerns towards what mortals want to hear, there is static in actual reception of the messages. That is all.

RACHEL: Father Abraham, this is something that I have been wondering about off and on; I don't know if you'll be able to answer it or not – but you know me, I am going to ask you anyway: During the time that the Urantia Book was being transmitted – at any part of that time were you or Machiventa Melchizedek present?

ABRAHAM: I was not involved in the actual workings, but I was aware that these changes were happening and becoming organized in word-form. Machiventa, however, was involved with this process and helped to oversee many papers in the Urantia Book. I, along with others, was receiving training to assist in this era termed "The Correcting Time." Is that answering?

RACHEL: It certainly does and I thank you kindly. Another thing I was wondering: Approximately how long have you been on Urantia this second time?

ABRAHAM: I would say, approximately twenty years; and even then, I have not been here constantly. I am assigned other tasks and do associate with my fellows in other 'rebellion-affected' areas as well. Is this answering?

RACHEL: Yes, it does. I thank you for answering the questions - and, of how you do it with such love. (Abraham: You're welcome, Rachel.)

I would express my gratitude to you each for your faith in me. I give you my love. Until next week, shalom.

The Purifier Is At Hand. Call Upon Him For Purification of Thought and Change of Mindal Negativity

I am ABRAHAM. I am so uplifted by your conversation this evening. I am always made worshipful when we can meet. Father has taken care of the small details that make it possible for me to meet with you.

At times I would be caused to worry when I am trying to complete a certain task and I become delayed in meeting my other obligations. Always when I am back on schedule, do I see how Father has opened doors for me to help me succeed. Even now do I remember the humor in my foolish worry and the awesome and complete power of God. He is a thorough God, who would lay upon your minds top priorities which you need to focus on. In your worship are you most likely to clear the spirit poisons to make way for His guidance.

The Master could always be counted upon in disseminating the complete truth to His apostles. Always did He endeavor to clarify and cleanse the thoughts of His fellow associates. After the Master's mortal sojourn, His Spirit of Truth was able to do much more - His powerful Spirit was able to aid mortals in the cleansing of their poisonous thoughts. Jesus has said: "Come to me, for I am the purifier."

Learning from the Master's mortal life can we use His techniques to be excellent expressions of our Father. Your renewed relationship with Jesus does aid in cleansing spirit poisons from your mortal minds. Upon harboring poisonous thoughts are you disconnected from those on high. Without a regular open communication with the Master are you likely to grow in negativity.

You each have met with those mortal associates that have assisted in pulling you from divine connection. Many know the negativity of such associates that would point them in the direction of the spirit poisons. To attempt worship from this frame of mind is difficult, yes, but not to worry, the Purifier is at hand. With your willingness to invoke the Master's purification process does worship come more easily. With your courage to ask for a cleansing in heart and mind are you able to stop the increase of negativity and begin again your connection with the cosmic mind.

Ask for your Brother/Father during your next bout of spirit poisons. Ask for Him to remind you how to be small. The Master knows all you have ever experienced and can easily guide you toward positivity and divine wellness. Allow not your negative thoughts to snowball and increase. Call upon your Master for a purification of thought. This is certainly exchanging your mind for the mind of Christ, yes.

In attempting to live the expressions of Father, you will always come against those things which would chance to discourage you, to fill you with the spirit poisons. If worship is not easily attained, then I would indeed suggest you go to your Master and partake of His firsthand knowledge at overcoming the spirit poisons through divine technique.

In the Master's teachings have we heard Him say: "Because you desire it, child, and have such supreme faith, it is so." If your desire is to attain worship, the Master's ministry is available to see you through. This week I would say our goal is to seek the Master's ministry, His purification of thought. Take notice at the decline in negativity and the increase of ability to worship. That is all. Have you questions?

ROLAND: Abraham, this is kind of a personal question I guess, but it is curious to me: When you were on the Earth it was the custom to have wives and concubines. Now here, we experience in our own communities some polygamists that are fundamentalists from the LDS (Mormon) Church, and there seems to be some outrage about it. What is the spiritual aspect of that?

ABRAHAM: My understanding is that a monogamous marriage is closer to a divine relationship, such as that partnership between Michael and Mother. The history of polygamy has shown that original idea to stem from man's ego and need to feel important and 'in charge.' The idea is mortally instinctive and close to the animal nature, whereas a divine union between two people would prove to be in the area of higher-mindedness. Is this helping?

ROLAND: It does, very much, thank you. Just as a follow-up: When you were given the opportunity to pass through the Seven Mansion Worlds, there was no judgment then about you having more than one wife or concubines – or, that King Solomon was criticized for that? It is just a choice thing is what I am getting from you, and that the higher choice is to be monogamous in a one-on-one relationship?

ABRAHAM: Yes. The monogamous relationship leads couples to learn more fruits of the spirit: love, tolerance, perseverance, and so on. The lengthy relationships lead individuals to strive for divine values. I mean not to criticize polygamists, for many of these individuals desire to be God-like. Their beliefs lead them to continue in their traditions. As I reached the Mansion Worlds, the only thing that was changed in this regard was my understanding of relationships. No, I was not chastised, nor shameful – I was only enlightened. Does this answer? (Roland: Yes, beautifully. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. One more question?

CALVIN: Is there anything you would like to share with us on the understanding of a Material Son and Daughter (an Adam and Eve) to once again be on the planet. It seems there was much dark space between the Rebellion and then the Adam and Eve default. And since that time there has been a lot of 'in the dark,' except for the great enlightenment of Machiventa's venture in your day, and Michael's sojourn here two-thousand years ago. But with the Lucifer Rebellion being adjudicated now, and great changes coming about, does that include a Material Son and Daughter back to the planet, in your understanding?

ABRAHAM: Yes. A Material Son and Daughter (an Adam and an Eve) will again be assigned on this world in its own due time. There are many goals to achieve before this can take place. Yes, it is all within Father's time. My understanding is that as Urantia becomes used to new spiritual ideals will the preparation begin to send the Material Son and Daughter. Yes. Does this answer?

CALVIN: Beautifully, yes, and what a great thought that we have this event to look forward to, and also the many more great hopes that are upcoming for our planet. Thanks. (Abraham): Yes, certainly. You're welcome.

My appreciation to each here this evening who step out in faith and fear not the realities of universal truths. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

With The Practice of Purification Is There the Spirit of Truth

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, and welcome. What a lightheartedness there is here this evening! I am made glad by your natural use of spiritual techniques in relating with one another. Your ease within the group is apparent and your fellowship is genuine; the bonds of friendship are strengthened and your link to the cosmic circuits as a group is improving. This evening there is no holding back, no withdrawing for fear of being ridiculed or cast out. Well done!

The Master in His mortal sojourn had visited many cities meeting various sorts of people and all types of personalities – open honest fellows, negative downhearted people, and those in emotional or physical pain. He changed not His manner of attitude to minister to certain types of mortals. He was always the pure expression of Father. In Jesus' expression of Father's ministering, He was empowered to go forth with strength and courage. This courage had Him go forth with all He knew and all He had yet to learn.

Jesus withheld nothing concerning His interaction with His fellows. He was unmoved with opinions of Him. He could act with liberty and knew Father's divine word was ever-flowing through Him. It cannot be imagined the Master holding back certain aspects of His personality for fear of unpopularity. The Master's connection with Father was that strong – a strength in which His negative fellows could not violate.

The Master's ministering was loving and kind, and yet there were indeed times He allowed strong feelings to be known. If He was angered or indignant about some particular injustice, He made it known. If He felt the sorrow and longings of His fellow mortals, He allowed that to show. The Master's divine side was certainly a wonderful example to learn by, but no one could discount the reality of His human side.

The Master was divine, yes; and yet a human creature, put forth to live a mortal life on a material planet. The Master was equipped with feelings, even strong emotions – anger, sadness, and disappointment – all those emotions you each understand and have well lived. These emotions were not even up for consideration to be stifled, for they served a purpose. And, yes, you can distinguish between 'purposeful serving emotions' and 'destructive spirit poisons.'

Yes, in learning to be divine expressions of Father, you need to allow that freedom which the Spirit of Truth bestows. If one is always holding back or withdrawing, there is a reversal in energy – a static (so to speak). In the holding back there is the cessation of serving your fellows – a decrease in bestowing love, kindness, and generosity; there is indeed a noticeable decrease in divine energy.

One who would not dare to step forth as their true selves for fear of loss or negative feedback is also blocking the same current in which love and all spirit fruits flow from. Are you understanding? You must allow the divine energy to have freedom of movement. Spirit poisons – or withholding your true selves – is a block in divine energy.

The Spirit of Truth, when poured out upon all flesh (Pentecost), bestowed upon mankind a new power and authority wherewith to teach and live a Godly life. With your practice of purification – there, is the Spirit of Truth bestowing upon you the power and authority from on high, to go forth as expressions of our Father. Do you see, your connection with Michael is key to your ability to be a divine expression.

Our goal for the week ahead is to practice not withholding. Practice going forth 'as you are,' to be natural expressions of Father. Continue to improve your relationship with Michael and freely receive His gift of spiritual liberty. Yes, 'where the Spirit of the Lord is, 'there' is liberty.' Only a few questions this evening.

MELISSA: How do I step forth to have a 'reconnection' in my life; or simply said – finding my spirit and, letting that poison come out?

ABRAHAM: My child, this process has already begun. Jesus said: "I knock at the door," and you are finding the courage to open it. Your connection has already begun; and with that, the spirit poisons do appear so that you might see what has need for His divine assistance. Not to worry, this is entirely natural. The Master stands by waiting for you to take His arm and begin the courting. That is all. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, the lesson tonight exactly expresses my experience the past several days with the Internet and interacting with those of the Urantia Book family who are critical of the Teaching Mission – you know the 'being afraid' feeling. Just like in this group, my feeling afraid to stand out and share my personal stuff, like others here this evening did so beautifully tonight. It just amazes me – that flow, that energy thing, that current, that circuitry which you are teaching. Is that what is meant by ‘in giving you receive?’ And, that energy of ‘like attracts like’ – do you know what I mean? I think it is wonderful. It was scary to do on the Internet and yet it felt safe this past week to dare. Calvin does such a good example of that, in daring to speak out. Angus and Amden, our fellow online brothers who have dared to speak up in defense of this Mission, were each so responsive in ways that made me feel safe. It was so natural. It wasn't that scary; I didn't get eaten alive, and I was greeted with love and openness. It blows me away, and I think it's great.

ABRAHAM: I am understanding. Though I would say that you, my daughter, Miriam, have always a wonderful flow of divine energy. Jesus said: “Unless you enter the kingdom with the faith of a little child there is not much hope for forward growth.” Miriam, you are always viewing the world as a wide-eyed child with such openness and willingness to learn. There are indeed moments when individuals connect with the cosmic mind and other forces which would be divine energy-generating, yes. There are those also who feel unwelcome or unqualified to participate, and would certainly seek to douse the divine light. Your faith and courage to be known and heard is an extra charge to this divine energy.

With that, I would take my leave. I would again express to you all, that my love for you continues to grow. Until next week, shalom.

The Apostle Peter, What Can We Learn From His Folly | Review Past Lessons

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome to you, my friends. I am so cheered each time we meet. It is wonderful for us to see Michael's lessons brought to life. You are each growing in higher thinking and becoming a bit more daring to act upon your values.

Michael's Spirit of Truth enables us to act with a natural spiritual instinct. Upon receiving, your indwelling Monitors begins an increasing understanding of spiritual instincts; the knowledge of right and wrong becomes an internal feeling; the desire to do good becomes apparent; the urge to be perfect as our Father is perfect, is also there. Throughout your spiritual journeys, your instincts have certainly been sharpened which enables you to feel comfort in going forth to act them out.

The beloved apostle Simon Peter, who loved Jesus with all his heart, still found within himself to allow fear and confusion to overtake him – even to deny his Master in those moments before Jesus' arrest and trial. Peter's mind was somewhat spiritually knowledgeable – yes, and yet he lacked the courage and maturity to acknowledge his loyalty to the Master, when confronted.

We all can understand Peter in his spiritual education; even with such human faults we do not love him less, no. We can receive understanding that even those who were daily with the Master found their humanness to be overpowering. The Master did not rebuke Peter for his weakness, no, but found this an opportune time to teach him.

The Master's love always remains the same for all His children. Not one could lessen

His love for them. Our Brother/Father Michael knows we are every day striving to gain maturity in our spiritual thinking; He certainly knows our weaknesses and strengths and does use our moments of error to teach us spiritual values.

We have recently been reviewing past lessons to ensure your spiritual maturity and ability to retain information. My associates and I would certainly like to be witness to more group discussion on lesson topics, and allowing time for these lessons to become an eternal part of your spiritual education.

Therefore we will, in these upcoming weeks, keep these lessons short to allow you to discuss putting into practice what we have already taught. I look forward to reviewing more lessons and participating in your group interaction. Be aware of us – your unseen visitors, that may chance to participate. Seek to keep a truthful lightheartedness, and review within your own minds why you choose to be present each week.

No questions this evening. I am joining a fellow Teacher for another lesson to be given to another group. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Apostle Thomas | In Stepping Forth In Faith, Are Things Then Revealed

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am intrigued by your discussions this evening. Your trust in one another and Father has led to a strong group unity and a lasting friendship. I ponder your answers to the question of last week and I can see your spiritual growth is sure and steady. Your friendship aids in your individual reception of spiritual information. Your trust in one another is power to greater things.

You might have a somewhat different answer now to the question of ‘why do you choose to attend our weekly meetings,’ than you would have some years back. Your spiritual maturity from these lessons allows you the courage to go forth even when the path is unsure.

That apostle of long ago, our dear Thomas, was such an individual who was clearly uncertain about his path and his connection within the kingdom. He was at times concerned that he appeared simple-minded. His mind was ever on the lookout for false things. Even though these thoughts plagued his human mind, always was he growing in spirit – maturing, yes, absorbing the Master's lessons and understanding with his scientific mind that spirituality is practical.

Thomas never did quite subdue all his concerns with his divine understanding, but always did he take in energy and strength from his Master's living Spirit. Through Thomas' doubts, he could always be found in complete support of Jesus. His trust increased as he dared to take steps forward, spiritually, even though the path was unclear. His receiving of strength and energy from the Master endowed him with courage to move forward. He found his peace within to outweigh his mortal concerns.

Thomas was indeed a bit fearful and overly concerned, yes, but his courage to keep the faith and trust in the Master's cause made him excel. It is said: "To see heavenly things it must first be believed in." A city in which Jesus performed one of His few miraculous deeds was not one so chosen in order to 'recruit believers,' no - His deeds performed there was because many in the city already believed.

[Editor's note: This statement is likely referring to this UB passage: 172:3.1 - "Bethany was about two miles from the temple, and it was half-past one that Sunday afternoon when Jesus made ready to start for Jerusalem. He had feelings of profound affection for Bethany and its simple people. Nazareth, Capernaum, and Jerusalem had rejected him, but Bethany had accepted him, had believed in him. And it was in this small village, where almost every man, woman, and child were believers, that he chose to perform the mightiest work of his Earth bestowal, the resurrection of Lazarus. He did not raise Lazarus that the villagers might believe, but rather because they already believed."]

My friends, you have so stepped forth with courage, as Thomas had, allowing Michael's Spirit of Truth to bestow upon you the courage to step forth. In stepping forth, there are those heavenly things revealed. Do you see? Thomas would attest to the fact that the human mind can be calmed enough to receive strength and energy. All one must do is make time to be before the Master.

This week, I would ask you to be aware of those faith-steps you dare to take without knowing the reasons why. This will also be the topic for discussion next week. As always, my love is with you. I will endeavor to meet with you each during the week. Until next week, shalom.

Embrace The Full Urantian Experience As Did Thomas, Unlike Judas. Hard Times - Lessons from Father

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings and welcome, my friends. How wonderful it is to see you in support of one another. What a beautiful fruit we harvest from the garden of the brotherhood!

Many in this Mission, our Correcting Time, crave to do grand things, to accomplish seemingly difficult tasks. Their motives are acceptable and their intentions are understood. How grateful we are when we can witness many individuals in teamwork for the accomplishment of one small goal - how pure is that goal. How obvious is the intention of this group to be within Father's will, yes. Definitely do you possess such a wonderful aspect to your group personality. It is obvious that comfort exists here in the group. Individuals are willing to allow their true selves to be known.

Even with the faults of the apostles Peter and Thomas- and yes, their personality traits were at times annoying - yet their comfort to be their true selves was always apparent because of their particular group unity. As we learn about the Master's chosen apostles we see that most had endured some particular hardship; even the Master himself had been made to face extraordinary pain and hardship.

Some say that life is cruel! and we say, yes, we agree! Life can be filled with unending hardship; and yet, each hardship has added a particular design to our spiritual armor.

Many of the apostles faced trying times after the Master's mortal sojourn; there was much work to be about concerning Father's business. There were many apostles who had faced painful agonizing deaths, as had the Master, and still I say, their mortal hardships were indeed steppingstones to increased spiritual learning – strength in their spiritual armor.

All, save one of Jesus' apostles, learned from the Master – that hard times were but a lesson to the next spiritual level. That sorrowful soul we know as Judas – yes, looked upon his hardships as personal attacks upon him by either Father or his fellows. Judas did not receive the training by his earthly parents – that in life terrible things happen and that we must either battle, brainstorm, or pray to endure. Judas only received a spoiled shield from his parents.

These that are like Judas are not iniquitous individuals so much as they are confused and somewhat slothful in their efforts to persevere – to be made stronger when beaten instead of being broken by it all. Judas was truly afraid to allow the Master's chastisement for it meant Judas had indeed made mistakes. Judas' imbalanced love of self would not allow himself to be corrected – spiritually or otherwise. His background of self-shielding shielded those harsh elements certainly, yes, but also those educational elements that we all require. Yes, in this we comment – Judas was indeed cowardly.

The Master however, was faced with a most bitter cup before Him. He could have gladly fled from it, yes, for He could have certainly been made King had He desired it so. He could even have accepted His sovereignty over Nebadon without that bitter cup – and yet His words were always: "My Father's will be done." In Father's will there are eternal lessons, and in these is there those hard lessons, those hard truths. And any one of you could choose to flee the harsh truth in favor of soothing a bruised ego or a bad self-perception in your acceptance or rejection of Father's light.

Each one of you has experienced hardships, yes, and these have not broken you but has made you stronger in character and in soul-building. How wonderful it is that you choose to accept the full Urantian experience instead of being like Judas, who would only accept those good things of life that would uplift his self-perception and make him satisfied with himself. His self-satisfaction was a closing off – an end to his learning.

One who embraces the full experience chooses to express those words of our Master: "Your will be done, Father." – and in that determination, there is strength for whatever your spiritual path holds. Be not afraid of a little self-discipline or perhaps allowing a nudge from Father, for in your trying times – therein, are those spiritual lessons that you can spiritually embrace and advance.

My friends, our goal for this week would be to not worry about self-protection or defense, but to be willing to embrace the full Urantian experience, as Thomas had. He was at times not happy with this but always was he constant in his decision to allow. Yes, this week, allow Father to aid in your comfort toward spiritual strength and assurance. Without your help in allowing for divine assistance, this transition from your old binding self to the new cannot be made. My love is always with you.

Until next week, shalom.

Tending To Our Fellows' Well-Being, As Nathaniel's Example
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-12-1998

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome, my friends. How I look forward each week to meeting with you all together. How wonderful is it to see the seeds of your ideas planted and your fellows tending to the growth therefrom. Your dignified manner leads each one to be open to the spreading of the ideal seedling; your care for one another as individuals and as children of the living God sees to its positive growth.

You each have experience in life of group-tearing down, or negative feedback. How wonderful that each one here desires to give and see to one another's growth. What an appropriate display of the brotherhood. With the busyness in today's mortal living, always is there the tendency to protect oneself - to watch over our shoulder for those who might be against us. Ever are we ready to defend and keep vigil over our place in the world.

We have been witness to such an example of this behavior through the Master's apostles of old. Judas was certainly one to believe the world did not welcome him. He was always wont to believe that his well-being was of his own responsibility and that some had the power to make him stumble.

Thomas was at times given into emotionalism and could be rather introverted, and not in desire to share his feelings for fear he would be misunderstood. Peter, on the other hand, could verbally charm and make his way through any given situation that would threaten his sense of well-being - and yes, this was an extension of the ego.

Many of the apostles were at times moody and difficult. Always did the Master rally them together with the common focus that they were each 'spiritual brothers on a quest for the kingdom.' Oftentimes He would remind them that the brotherhood was of great help for emotionalism or individual difficulties. The Master could be found telling His apostles that one another's well-being was as important as their own. Jesus taught them to tend to one another's growth and well-being, for this did indeed open the channel for the cycle of spiritual energy to continually flow.

As I said before, Judas had chosen to deny the full Urantian experience; he ever worried about his own well-being and was always 'watching his own back' - and therein was that block in the flow of living spiritual energy. Yes, when Judas had turned inward and was self-seeking, in this did he restrict his capacity to receive any divine assistance.

Nathaniel, on the other hand, was always first to aid his brethren with a humorous line or an offering of assistance. He could be found on the lighter side of seemingly serious topics and was ever drawing out his fellow apostles to be open and share. Yes, Nathaniel at times had given in to depression and moodiness, but his practice of tending to his fellows' growth was a wonderful antidote to those things which would bring him down. Nathaniel was more-so focused on the well-being of his fellows, so much so that he allowed an opening for Father's divine energy to create for him a balanced life. His fellows' downcast attitudes were an invitation to him to find humor and the lighter side of serious topics.

My friends, I would ask that you continue in your warm and loving display here with one another and to tend to each other's well-being. Look for opportunities during the week to experiment with this technique. Recognize the opening and closing of the channel for the flow of divine energy. Be aware that your willingness to give is measured side by side with your capacity to receive.

As always, my love is with you. I will be available during the week to take your question. Until next week, shalom.

Go Forth And Teach, As Did The Apostles in Jesus` Day, With The Enthusiasm of The Master`s Spirit

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-19-1998

[A message from Ham, from the Nashville group, was shared to the Woods Cross group prior to Abraham's lesson this evening.]

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. What a beautiful beginning for our meeting. Our thanks to Ham, our brother - and to you that shared his message.

I can remember my mortal life being filled with difficulties, and now I can comprehend the value they hold. Many mortal lessons we experience are not always understood in this lifetime, but surely at some point you will also understand the universal values they teach.

The lives of the Master's apostles, having given their consent for the sharing of their life experiences, are of great value to those we teach - for this we are grateful. Their life experiences, being at times embarrassing, are now within the foundation of our lessons.

The apostles, having experienced such difficulties, did find themselves qualified as teachers. With the spirit of the Master as wind in their sails, they were exceedingly encouraged to share the good news. Michael's ever-pervading spirit had strengthened them to go forth and teach from wherever they were in life's circumstances. Many a new believer entered the kingdom from the words of these past courageous teachers.

My friends, you must feel by now that when you call upon the spirit for words to teach with, it is certain to be at hand. As our beloved apostles of old were trained to minister to Father's children, so are you. You each embrace the presence and personality of Christ Michael; your relationship with Him has grown in love and trust.

Many of you now find the confidence to go forward and live your beliefs. Your trust in Michael endows you with the power from on high therewith to teach and spread light. I would not add a new lesson for this evening; I only ask that you ponder over your readiness to teach as occasions arise. Are you sufficiently leaning on the Master for His words and for His strength to live your beliefs? Have you questions?

INERA: Abraham, thank you so much for tonight's lesson. Yesterday I felt the presence of Christ Michael three different times. I tried to sit down and journal but I am not getting the message. I don't know if I am shutting myself off, or what I can do better to receive? I feel like I am at a standstill. Maybe I am not listening. I don't know what I am doing wrong.

ABRAHAM: I am understanding you listen well. But there appears to be a small amount of fear in speaking with One who is so great and close to our Paradise Father. It would do you well to study His life before 'His hour had come' to teach, for He was truly one of us. Think of Him, even now, as a close friend, an elder brother. Michael is awesome in presence and power, yes, but so warm and loving and deeply personal. I am always made lighter by His presence. My daughter, seek first the man who was Jesus, and then can you relate with him to lessen your fear of His almightiness. That is all. (Inera: Thank you.) Abraham: Another question?

HARRISON: Abraham, I am just struggling somehow with getting my finances together properly, and I have this belief that through trust things will work out somehow or another. I seem to be walking too close to the edge for my own comfort. Do you have any thoughts for me?

ABRAHAM: I usually cannot comment on things material, but for you, my son, I can say that Father truly desires abundance for all His children and assists where He can. He works within man's will and man's understanding; and therefore is, in a way, limited. As you experience these matters you find that doors open and close. There is always a call for persistence and yet, common sense shows us when to find other avenues. I am sorry this is about all I can say. (Harrison: Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome.

A question from Frosty in Pocatello TM group: [The TR read this question before the meeting: Does the opening of the circuits have anything to do with the Chronic Fatigue, Fibromyalgia, etc., that so many seem to be experiencing? I'm believing that the opening of the spiritual energy circuitry creates in us a desire to bring forth and release emotions; and that our physical body resists this release and instead is creating stress that ends up with the disease. Is it that the circuits have created an upheaval within us, so to speak, and we need to find a way to adjust and bypass this Fibromyalgia, Chronic Fatigue, and no doubt many other illnesses? Is my understanding correct on this? Do you have any comments, suggestions, or instructions?]

ABRAHAM: One moment. Yes, Frosty is on track when she believes that some of today's new illnesses are caused by the opening of the universe circuits. The illness comes more-so from denying the realness of spirit, denying that life is meaningful, and thinking it is merely haphazard. Some individuals find mortal living shallow and hopeless. They do not believe in Father's orderly conduct of the universe. The isolation of this world is over, and Nebadon has once again embraced Urantia as its own. The circuits' opening is new and available to be known. There is a lot of energy being used by mortals to stand their ground and hold fast to their old beliefs. There is hopelessness in refusal to grow. As always, hopelessness, despair, anger, anxiety, and suspicion, bring illness. With the re-encircuitment of Urantia, there is much confusion and many unanswered questions. This is natural and to be expected. As time passes and new generations grow up with the new encircuitment of Urantia, the new universal truths will be more naturally embraced and the spirit poisons will not so easily have their way over the physical bodies. That is all. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, you said earlier in your lesson that 'later on we will be understanding stuff that at this time we do not.' Do you know what I am referring to? Is it possible for us to know things now on a soul level? - I mean, something that we know to be true, but we don't understand 'how' we know and can't quite put a finger on it. It just seems the only way I can identify it is - it is like a soul-knowingness. Is that what you meant?

ABRAHAM: I understand. This soul-knowingness is absolutely real. Such knowingness cannot be found in a book or some religious doctrine, or even history, but only from within. Yes, you understand what it is to go against your soul-knowingness - you feel it, physically. When Peter had denied his Master after Jesus' arrest, he knew instantly he had made a mistake; his fear would not let him react in any other way. But yes, Peter knew immediately he had gone against his inner soul understanding. Yes. Good question.

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I think I have neglected you as far as humor is concerned for quite a little while now; this is from a little article that was in the paper. "A fellow said: Last week someone asked me what I found most fascinating about working in the genealogy history center, and I told them it was a kinship I now feel for the mobs that drove the Mormons out of Missouri and Illinois - and then he said: Seriously! only mobsters and genealogists can appreciate how much easier it is to work with dead Mormons rather than live ones." I imagine you kind of feel the same way, Abraham. [group laughter.]

ABRAHAM: My daughter, Rachel, I can always catch your wit and humor during our visits. I receive plenty. Thank you. You do add a wonderful touch of lightheartedness to our group and we thank you.

I would also thank each one of you for your patience and willingness to go forth as Michael's ambassadors. Know that there are legions of helpers at hand for each of you. My love is always with you. Until next week, shalom.

Mortals Need One Another Especially In Going Forth To Teach

I am ABRAHAM. Please excuse the delay. I am indeed happy to meet with you and be witness to your efforts at the upholding of one another. You support and yet, always does the truth go first. Your truth to one another is loving and lighthearted. What a wonderful example of egolessness. Your small steps here towards the brotherhood of man does lead towards larger steps within your society.

When the apostles had set forth to go out and spread the good news, each one had looked-after the other. In all areas of mortal living, steps were taken to ensure the apostle's comfort to leave home and go out to teach the Master's message.

Your weekly meetings are extraordinary in that each one receives support mentally, emotionally, and spiritually. Each one is respected and looked upon as God's child.

What an excellent source of divine energy. These weekly meetings serve you in unforeseen ways that endow you with the strength and courage to go into a darkened world where this particular group comfort is not apparent.

Your communication during the week is also energy-promoting and brings to you a realness in spirituality. By all means, seek to communicate with one another throughout the week. You can always be made a better teacher knowing your fellows are in support of you. The bearers of Michael's light find it difficult to go into such darkness without the knowing that their fellows stand by them, support them, and love them for who they really are.

Most of Jesus' apostles went forth to teach with such comfort from the Master and their fellows. At first, some held the belief that the showing of the need of support was a sign of weakness. An occasional spark of the ego would say to an apostle: "I need not help or support from anyone. I would not be seen as needy or weak." Through the Master's teachings, the apostles discovered that anyone who would not utilize the support of their fellows was haunted by doubts and less equipped to make divine decisions. Yes, mortals need one another. Minds that are unified are more likely to make decisions from a divine standpoint instead of from an ego base.

The universe operates in this technique where beings can rely upon one another. Planets can learn from each other's experiences. The broadcasts circuits can lessen the space between each one of us and our Creators. The learning 'to enjoy the support from your fellows' in the mortal experience is only a small step in joining your mind with that of the cosmic mind. Worlds settled in Light and Life enjoy communicating back and forth and discussing those everyday events that would help them to grow, spiritually. A group, or planet, would not continue to have successful spiritual growth without the sharing and interaction with others.

As you have been witness, too many companies (or even individuals) would choose to withhold information so as to appear superior or powerful. Is this not unthinkable within Father's kingdom? Yet you must have this experience. We are making progress within our Correcting Time, and it appears to be so time-consuming. Each of our participants is thoroughly tested and taught so that these divine understandings become everlasting and eternal. Seek comfort from Father and His hosts of helpers, yes, but maintain a balanced mentality through your connection with one another. Only a few questions please.

CALVIN: Abraham, this association we have with each other in the group is wonderful, mostly on Monday night. But during the week I am able to – some of us are able to – converse through Internet associations with so many of the Teaching Mission participants, which I find is a source of strength also, and is on a larger scale. I notice that this internet interaction helps keep spiritual energy charged for me. One such interaction is with our new Mission brother, Angus Bowen; do you have any words for him, who is an extended member of our group?

ABRAHAM: Words are difficult to find when a specific question has not been asked. My brother, Angus, our love and greetings are with you. Your questions are welcome; and from my knowledge at this point, you do indeed, do well. That is all.

MIRIAM: Abraham, I was wondering about your process. Throughout the week your lessons always have such meaning, they are so pertinent – and it's like our lives go along with the lessons. What's it like for you and the other Teachers to observe us throughout the week? What is that process like? Do you do your lesson and then help us go along with it, or do you just observe? Can you describe that? Would that be offensive?

ABRAHAM: No, not offensive, and certainly I can try to describe. I can convey that we are made to exercise extreme patience in waiting. Father has His master plan; Michael has His techniques from which we can draw upon. And yes, various beings arrange and coordinate in behalf of our mortal students – but none of this would do well without the permission of the mortal subject. Many times do we repeat the same processes over again for the mortals to comprehend the meanings. At times we are not to do anything in assisting because we have not been given permission by the mortal. Those mortals that ask, receive. Those that allow, participate in Michael's relating of Father's divine destiny. Is this helping? (Miriam: Oh yes, Abraham. Thank you.)
Abraham: Another question?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, when we are working with, or in touch with Christ Michael – is it possible to become too comfortable with Him? I guess what I am asking is – if I am completely comfortable with Him, which I am, is that disrespectful in any way to be that comfortable?

ABRAHAM: No, certainly not. It is Michael's fondest hope for all mortals to look upon Him as their Brother, Father, Friend, and Helpmate. Your comfort with Him is indeed an honor, my daughter, Rachel. Yes, good question.

CALVIN: Abraham, I do a lot of listening to the Urantia Book, and a lot of contemplating over your lessons and the lessons of other Teachers – is it possible to maybe go too fast? How am I doing in that respect; would you say there is 'too much learning' and 'not enough experiencing,' perhaps? In my situation, am I going in that direction?

ABRAHAM: Mostly this is known internally. Those spiritual ideas that you require will be with you at that moment you need them. There are several factors in which one might seek to study. Always is there the satisfaction of curiosity when a question is asked or when a subject has been pondered and then the answer is found. Also is there a factor of entertainment of sorts where you are made to understand certain types of humor or lightheartedness. And yes, there is comfort one may receive from the Urantia Books' reinforcement of faith and goodwill. Yes, is this answering? (Calvin: Yes, thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome.

Again, my thanks to each one, and I will be present with you throughout the week. Again, I am not far. My love is with you each. Until next week, shalom.

Every Mortal Has Within An Extension Of the Gods | Allow The Pure/Innocent Spirit Within, Freedom

I am ABRAHAM. I am quite grateful to be here with you this evening. What an excellent display of group participation. Communication is certainly a worthwhile topic to discuss and make effort to use in everyday relationships. I can appreciate the open hearts and minds that attend here weekly. You are always in readiness to give one-hundred percent while your expectations are at a minimal level. As I listen to you and watch your expressions, I can behold that part of you that is divine, innocent, and pure.

Egolessness makes this viewing possible, for you care not about status nor position within the kingdom, as even the apostles of old yielded to, but you indeed care for the well-being of each individual as well as the group.

I am made to understand most mortals are innocent and perhaps a bit misunderstood. Many personality traits show forth in competition to comply with a material world. Father does see each of His children as a pure, innocent, and a divine being, as His child. The apostles at first, though some were acquaintances, still did not fully understand one another. They were even suspicious of one another's genuineness.

Over time, the apostles had connected on 'soul levels' so as to be able to view the divinity in one another. Each apostle grew to view some attributes of the Master within their fellow apostles. There is that innocent spirit which dwells within each individual, even though in some this may appear to be hidden with the busyness of everyday living. Even the most unethical individual does contain within them an extension of the Gods.

Many know not how to allow this pure and innocent 'spirit within,' freedom. The spirit within appears to them to be meek and too easily exposed to things harmful. The pure and innocent spirit within is actually an extension of all that is - an all-knowing, all-powerful, all-loving God, our Father. The spirit within (which is mainly the 'real you') exercises humor and lightheartedness; it can see light in the darkness; it can utter volumes of wisdom in one sentence; it can be an element of healing to an ailing society.

My friends, you allow your true selves to be known here in this group. You recognize one another's pure and innocent spirit within. You can embrace each one's faults with divine love. In your everyday living in the material world it is difficult though to allow this realness of spirit to be known. It would do you well to ponder over the attributes of your 'divine spirit within' and to adjust your understanding in allowing it freedom. In exposing your real selves, as you do here weekly, individuals you meet feel at ease to also allow their genuine 'child of God selves' to have freedom - freedom to live and work and love; to nurture and to teach within their environment.

Just as the apostles sat at the Master's feet in such lessons as this, are you also granted the same benefit in understanding the Master's meanings. Allow Him to help you to show your divine side, daily, and be aware of the confidence this yields. The pure and innocent spirit within will prove to be a source of strength, power, and wisdom. Watch those around you begin to allow their spirit within, freedom to be known.

No questions this evening. Again, as always, my love goes with you and I will make effort to meet with you each during the week should you need me. Until next week, shalom.

In Projecting The Positive Do We Connect With The Divine Energy

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am again so happy to be with you. You have proven again your dedication to the cause by your responsibility. Anytime the messages we would transmit are forced, stressed, or are in some form of jeopardy, there needs to be changes or adjustments within the group format. How wonderful it is to view our mortal connection with you our students, acting upon their God-given authority. You are a group of action, and are with willingness to offer yourselves to the betterment of the whole.

Last week we discussed recognizing the pure and divine in yourselves and your fellows. I do gather from our weekly visitations that all is on track. The more a true believer lives, the more can he understand the simplicity of his fellows. As one exchanges his mind for the mind of Christ, can he view his fellows as equal beloved children of the Universal Father.

Mortals - having experienced isolation as Urantia has - have a more difficult time sitting at the Father's table than do those on non-isolation worlds. There are doubts among Urantians that one would be so worthy as to dine with those at the universal banquet. Urantia mortals have found it difficult over years to see the good, pure, and innocent in one another. It has been a world of 'kill or be killed,' and 'survive in any manner possible.' Such defenses make relating to one another 'on a soul level' quite difficult.

If you treat a child with suspicion, that child receives that particular energy and actually acts upon it. The child feels like he/she is in error, guilty; the spirit poisons lead the child to negative actions. This all began from a projected energy from an adult. If you constantly point out a child's faults, he/she receives that energy as literal - and proceeds to lose confidence in his/her ability to do anything.

To look upon a child as inferior or sub-normal then does this child tend to act upon this energy. As the child grows, certainly does he/she learn to build up defenses and to justify their actions for self-protection. You know not how literal your energy projections are to one another. Many of those fear-ridden souls do indeed act out energies that were projected onto them.

Consider that you enter a department store and are gazed upon by the clerk, suspiciously - do you not feel as though you are guilty of shoplifting? Yes, certainly! You, my friends of these morontial lessons, have a tremendous spiritual responsibility. As your intentions are becoming more purified, your energy projections are more spiritually refined, and you are able to affect the world - one person at a time.

If you take notice of a child's kindness, then does the child absorb that divine energy which whets the appetite for good living. If you encourage a child toward more divine realities - instead of making his/her faults the focus - then, is the child more apt to follow a spiritual path, a path of trial and error, a path of logical thinking. This child is then likely to say: "I have tried it this way; it does not serve anyone. I can certainly try another way." Do you see, a child's mistakes then, are perceived as steppingstones towards learning greater things, not punishments.

If you praise a child then does that projected energy build within - a confidence that directs the child towards the fruits of the Spirit. The love and wellness you show turns the child inward to meet with his/her own indwelling Father. Yes, your projected energy is real and does have an effect. Father treats each child with encouragement, love, and confidence-building praise. You would certainly agree when I say that if all Urantians would treat one another as Father does, the effects would be astonishing to you.

This week I ask you to make it a point to project positive things to those you meet, those you know. Try to greet your fellows with a positive word - something to encourage or give hope or build confidence. Allow your fellows to know you do indeed see that pure innocent well-intentioned child within them.

No questions this evening. I will again meet with you during the week. I can attempt to assist you in the moment with this exercise of 'energy projection.' As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Upholding One Another As Fellow Teachers and Friends

Ham & Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-16-1998

I am HAM. Greetings. It is such an honor to meet with this branch on our family tree. I do attend many of your meetings, and I collaborate with Abraham concerning the lesson format. Besides being co-workers, Abraham and I are friends; I can always count on his attentive listening skills when I am pitching my ideas to him. Abraham is such a positive mirror for me to reflect upon; he is more apt to focus upon positive highlights rather than embarrassing negatives.

We, teachers within the Mission, have been well trained by Michael. We are always projecting positive spiritual energy. We need not the energy we once knew in the flesh anymore, and yet our work does consume a great deal of energy. A friendly partner to teach with is always a source of energy and a reconnection to the foundation of our cause.

Michael sends you out two and two for many reasons - energy distribution being one. If one is perhaps fatigued or beginning to feel hopeless, the other is there with divine encouragement. This is what is wonderful about this group - while truth is always foremost, the continuous support in one another is always energy-producing.

As Teachers in this Teaching Mission, we are devoted to the assignment as deemed by Michael for His children; His techniques for teaching are seeing us through. We have indeed met with numerous discouragements, disappointments, and yet our fellow Teachers stand by waiting to assist in carrying the burden - waiting to assist in regenerating energy for weary friends and fellow co-workers.

I have so enjoyed speaking with you this evening. I would now allow Abraham his time to speak. My love is with you and, I can promise you I am never too far away. Farewell.

I am ABRAHAM. Our gratitude to our friend and brother, Ham. He also supports me when I am in doubt of my competency. I have been witness to things that would certainly have cause to scar the spirit and yet, along with my indwelling Father, my fellow co-workers are always there to remind me of the universe's fairness.

In the midst of our work we can at times become discouraged and even faith-losing. To participate in a teamwork of energy distribution allows us to be at peak performance for teaching and allowing Father to act through us. We speak of an aspect of the brotherhood when we discuss the upholding of one another.

Last week we discussed projecting divine energy towards our fellows. This week we discuss upholding one another as fellow Teachers and friends. And now into next week, I would discuss the energy we project and attract to ourselves. Many individuals know and have heard an ongoing negative chatter about themselves – their ways in which they live, move, and have their being. There are always ways we can negatively critique ourselves which would attract negative energy. This certainly affects the spiritual, yes, but also our mindal and physical.

If one running a marathon said to himself: "I am falling behind, I should have put forth more practice, I should have regulated my diet more efficiently. Always when I am in reach of the finish line I usually do something to cause failure; I am always at failure status." About this time the body is slowing, losing energy and focus to the goal. The internal systems are not performing where they should be due to this mindal interruption. This thinking is almost severing ties between you and things divine.

A marathon runner who would notice he is falling behind, but with hope and faith in the universe's fairness might think: "Yes, I am falling behind but I have given it my all, and that is everything. I may not win today but I will surely finish the race. I must focus on not what I failed at but how I can regain my lead."

With such a positive attitude how could the physical body refuse such optimism; the systems are now coordinating to receive energy, as well as all those good things the universe promises to us. Yes, with such energizing attitude, each physical system within this human body will coordinate to reach for the goal.

This week, I would ask that you experiment with this inner voice, inner self-talk, and continue to relate with one another in any manner you choose. Continue to offer support and words of encouragement. Learn to direct a positive energy in all manners of mortal living.

I would apologize, there will be no questions this evening. I will do my best to meet with you during the week to answer your questions. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Energy-Generating vs Energy-Depleting Thinking | Tithing and Sacrifice

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Please accept my gratitude for your patience and willingness to bear with our communication process. I am always made glad by listening to you each speak your understanding of divine realities. I realize this world is fraught with difficulties and confusion but your diligence to Michael's cause drives you forward.

I perceive you to be in understanding of last week's lesson. You have firsthand experience with this type of energy diffuser. The mortal life is quite difficult in and of itself, even without our assisting as teacher-ambassadors to Michael's cause. It is my job to allow you the information that sustains you while you toil for the kingdom, yes.

Many individuals believe they have their own personal dark cloud that follows them. With the negative self-talk, this cloud is manifested in a variety of areas of living. Even among those considered 'spiritually learned and mature' do we find they somehow believe they are the recipient of good or bad luck. In this we say, the separation from your spiritual roots (the Lucifer rebellion) has made man to believe he is a child of the evil one. In this mode of negative thinking, confidence was lost, and efforts were put towards appeasing the gods.

You can understand at this point in your spiritual education that this 'appeasing the gods' thinking is somewhat humorous. And yet, many still believe they need to bargain with Father in order to receive a more easy life - no, not just simplified, but easy. When one believes they are from the First Source and Center of all there is, they begin to cease with the negative self-talk and focus more-so on serving within the kingdom. A negative inner-chatter would only prove to be depleting of confidence and the surety that you are, indeed, Father's beloved child.

This week, I ask that you continue in your exercise of exchanging negative thoughts towards your personal self for gratitude to our Father for His loving direction and caretaking which He provides us. Upon recognizing negative energy-depleting self-talk, think about Father's watchcare and His perfectly-planned lessons He has for you. Your ability to worship is always energy-generating. Tonight I would accept a few questions. Proceed.

CALVIN: We welcome our good friends into the group that we have known for a couple weeks. I am sure you know them more than we, but we are glad to have them, Michael and Sandy, here with us. We welcome them to ask anything they may want.

SANDY: I would just have a question: I recently wrote an article on the Course in Miracles book, could you tell me who authored the Course of Miracles?

ABRAHAM: My understanding is many divine beings had a hand in this work, but as any other work, where the human ego is involved there are bound to be mistakes. Throughout the ages, man has found those answers his heart has longed for through revelation - and upon the receiving, there is always that tendency to lean towards the side of the extraordinary. My feelings concerning this book is that it is harmless in itself. With the opening of the circuits and Michael's Spirit of Truth, many individuals can distinguish the authenticity of it. There has not been any real works by the actual son of self-love since before the days when Michael was in the mortal flesh. Most of today's iniquitous works are either ego-derived or simple tradition-bound-thinking individuals. Does this help? (Sandy: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You are welcome. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, thanks for giving your insight in these lessons and for your patience with us. I have run across a guy who really interacts with the Jewish people of Eastern countries and so on – George Soros; I mean I have run across his writings and words on the Internet. I am quite drawn to and curious about his work. I was wondering if you could share with me your understanding of his impact; and, of my curiosity/interest in him? That's the only way I know how to put it.

ABRAHAM: From what my information is, I know this man to be one who has chosen to make potentials into actuals, and that is fascinating to anyone. Mankind has long searched for the tools to build a better society and yet, only recently are these tools being recognized as spiritual. Each individual has as much power and resources as does Mr. Soros – perhaps more-so on a smaller scale but, nonetheless, important. Each person can indeed make sweeping changes within their community, family, schools, and so on. I can say that Mr. Soros' speaking out has promoted more good than has his money. Does this answer? (Calvin: Yes. Perfectly. Thank you.) Abraham: One more question?

MICHAEL: Why did you initiate tithing when Melchizedek was totally trying to help people realize that it wasn't necessary, that God didn't require it – but you persisted in giving a sacrifice. It has been nearly four-thousand years now, and it – the tithing teaching and sacrifice – still lives on?

ABRAHAM: Understood. I can also understand where this affects you, personally, and your compassion for others' well-being. I can say that probably 'fear' was the main motivator for tithing and sacrificing. It began as a bargain with God to allow me to be prosperous, or at least unaffected by adversity. And yes, you are correct, this does live on to this day. Even the Apostles who worked and lived with Jesus could not be eradicated from old sacrifice-traditions and be swayed from their belief that He was indeed the Messiah. I suppose my friend and mentor, MachiventaMelchizedek, could not have persuaded me to end a ritual that seemed to be working, even if only in my own mind. I suppose I paid for peace of mind – this was my understanding then. Individuals such as yourself are indeed bringing this topic to the forefront of people's minds; and yes, it does them well to ponder over the thought that they too may sacrifice and pay out of fear. Individuals who choose to remain in traditional religions without reaching for higher understanding will do as they're told; but I can guarantee you this subject does go out over the cosmic circuits and touches individuals who choose to reach for higher realities. Does this at all answer?

MICHAEL: It's okay, but what is the resolution? When is it going to stop, another four-thousand years?

ABRAHAM: Not anytime soon. [laughter.] As long as people are tradition-bound, there will be those perceived rules to follow; and hopefully, programs such as our Correcting Time will be able to affect change.

That is all, for my words are slipping and I must take my leave. Once again my gratitude is with you each, and my love grows for you more each time we meet. Until next week, shalom.

Treat Others as You Treat Each Other Here ~ An Energy That Affects the Whole

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome, and thank you for your willingness to have me each week. Your desire to learn is apparent and your courage to act upon these lessons are to be commended. As I listen in on your discussions, I can literally view the exchange of energy between you.

My friends, your willingness to uphold one another is touching. The bonds that cement you as a Mission group are strengthened to the point now where truth and love override petty differences. Yes, this is beautiful. I find your exchange of positivity to be uncommon though on such a planet where negativity has become a way of life.

Through our Mission, we can reach many who would not usually catch Michael's message. You are in contact with many individuals every day, and at times the practicalities of mortal living find you at a loss for using your spiritual ideals - this is completely understandable. Your practice with these energy techniques will help you as well as those you know.

Many move through their daily living meeting individuals who they would not particularly have any feelings for. One may say: "Why would I put my best foot forward when I will never see this person again?" "What have I to gain from dispensing with pleasantries to this individual?" Especially during this holiday season are people in contact with service workers who are perhaps at the mercy of the public to earn a living. At the end of a hard day's work, these individuals may be completely depleted of energy, as well as with depleted faith in their fellows. I say, your positive energy shared goes a long way in helping these to end their day on a positive note.

Yes, even now in this so-called civilized society, there are those who are believing they are more deserving of good things than others. "You are a waitress, why should I show forth respect when your job is less valued than mine?" This thinking is completely unbrotherly and energy-depleting.

A priest, one who has devoted his time to assisting other individuals, would perhaps strike a simple daily-living conversation with one who is not of his faith in effort to assist in a positive way, only to be somewhat ignored. What does one's religion have to do with his worth as a person, a child of God? A personal positive interaction with this priest would surely enhance positivity and good energy to both. My friends, this is where you can help - by your boldness to be conversational with those individuals you may chance to meet who are perhaps involved with service work in the business of daily living.

It would be so energy-generating if a few individuals every day could disperse energy to those who you do not know. A word of encouragement to continue the good work, or a comment of understanding of a long day's work, would certainly help to generate energy in this individual's life as well as your own; and, would be an uplift to others who would chance to witness your kindness.

It is a wonderful time of year to experiment with your new techniques. As you put your best spiritual foot forward you enable others to do the same, just as you do here each week. You are each familiar of one another and rather comfortable in uplifting one another; yet, individuals who you chance to pass by are indeed another story. Your efforts made to your daily living fellows in the area of energy-distribution does indeed have affects beyond your knowledge.

The Master had always a bit of encouragement or kind words for His fellows. His show of understanding His fellows put them at ease and in understanding that they are not 'out of the ordinary.' The Master made them to feel that yes, their burden is real - and yet, not too much so as to overtake them. Yes, Jesus showed great faith in His fellows and thrived on the energy that Father dispersed to Him as He needed it. The recipients of Jesus' energy were more likely to go about doing good instead of complaining or losing hope.

The great preachers of the world are found to be more successful when preaching about the faith and trust he has in his fellow's abilities for discerning God's understanding for themselves. You, my friends, may not be the noted great preachers in the world, but certainly are you wonderful teachers and are bearers and bringers of the good news.

I would ask that you experiment with this technique during the week. Treat others as you treat one another here. Uphold and support and express your faith in other's ability to carry on. Humor is a wonderful way to open doors and does dispense a positive energy.

I am short with time this evening. I'm sorry, no questions. I will make my best effort to meet with you each this week. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Christ is Among His Children of Urantia. What We Put Belief In IS Our Reality

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. It is such a great pleasure to meet with you each week. I have known you for some time. Your unique personalities stand alone as brightly-burning candles on an altar each giving off light and warmth. As you unify on the common ground of the Correcting Time does your light increase and your warmth intensify. How beautiful is this for me to see!

I can say each one of you adds to my energy level in such a way that I am made to be uplifted. I thank you. You all have a fair understanding of how you can project energy and add to the light of the world. In your own small way can you affect big changes just by allowing the spirit to move through you.

When Michael (Jesus) walked the Earth, He saw great opportunity to teach because the world's people were ready and asking for Him. And in the days following the resurrection they awaited Christ's second coming and lived each day as watchful children so as to not be forgotten in the 'end times.' We can see this picture as one promoting and producing positive energy.

It is now easily understood that what you put your beliefs in 'is' your reality. Many in Michael's Teaching Mission today believe Him to already be here – again, among His people on this, His home planet, where He lived His final bestowal.

Michael's Spirit of Truth was always and ever working with the people of Urantia since Pentecost, yes, but not always has there been the 'desire' for more truth; adhering to the set traditions was about the extent of their ability to progress. As Urantia has evolved do people desire more than what the prophets of old offered. Yes, the Urantian races are now accessing the Spirit of Truth more easily through their desire to learn and progress.

Yes, it is true that Christ is among His children of Urantia; His presence brings hope, renewed faith, strength, and ease of mind. The simple knowing that the Master is at work in individual lives creates an energy in itself. To believe that one so loving, so understanding, so life-giving and trusting, is among you – actually changes your capacity to receive spiritual energy and understanding.

Yes, mortals can experiment with energy amongst one another and learn life's lessons, as long as we remember the 'source' of all spiritual energy. Our Paradise Father is the source of all there is, yes – and yet, He is easily understood when personalized through His Creator Sons.

In this season, there will be many thoughts turned toward the Master's mortal birth on this world, and many hearts asking for His assistance, or His return. How comforting it is to those you know for you to verbalize your faith – that Jesus, Son of God, dwells in your lives whether you can visually see Him or not.

How eloquent Simon Peter was when he spoke his truth about the Master's loving character; how his speaking from the heart brought confirmations of faith to those who heard him. Yes, let that be our focus for the week. Live as if the Master was another member of your inner circle of friends. Be not afraid to speak as though He were your personal friend and brother. Watch the capacity for yourself and others receiving spiritual understanding, grow. A few questions?

CLAIREESA: Father Abraham, there is an awareness amongst all the groups that perhaps the Mission teachings should be sent out to the world somehow – specifically, these transcripts, whether it be by publishing or maybe radio. Everyone is wondering what your thoughts on this dissemination of transcripts should be.

ABRAHAM: I am personally feeling there is a need for perhaps more personal missionary type ministry needed than cold white pages to read. It matters not so much the 'how' or even 'if' you disseminate these teachings – but what would really promote meaning however, is those involved in this Teaching Mission guide and direct family and friends toward their inner-knowing or understanding of truth. How wonderful it is to plant spiritual seeds. The real work, however, is in tending to the sprouts of new growth. I am not feeling one way or the other about disseminating these teachings at present. Your own judgment however, is acceptable. Take steps as the Spirit leads. Most definitely though, these teachings need to be on a personal level – combined with common sense and the use of them in everyday living. Avoid any mystical attractions, for our Mission is to make spirituality as it would have been had not there been the Adamic default or the Lucifer rebellion. Spirituality (spiritual reality) is to be as common as eating or breathing. Yes, is this helping?

CLAIREESA: Yes, it helps quite a bit. Thank you. But I would like to clarify that with your personal feelings about this. Would it be best to approach it only on a person to person level, such as maybe going door to door? Or more on a public-wide scale such as having a radio talk show, or something like that?

ABRAHAM: My personal feelings are more perhaps along the lines of sharing these teachings as you have been – by word of mouth, or perhaps giving personal attention to those who would take interest in these lessons. The message of our Correcting Time reaches every ear at some point, regardless of what will be published, or heard over the airwaves. We are not pressed for time; nor do we feel hurried to uplift the world. It is wonderful to have a finished product of our words, our lessons, yes, along with a caring individual to help teach and answer questions. Is this clarifying?

CLAIREESA: Yes, but it is important to have a permanent record of these teachings – is this correct?

ABRAHAM: I am told it would be nice – but not necessary at present, for our Correcting Time is to function many years to come. Yes. Another question? (Editor's note: On June 22, 1992 – Teacher Ham said the following on this subject: "The Midway Commission (those involved in compiling the Urantia Book) is yet awaiting new orders for compiling certain facts about the coming of these revelations, even now. They will in future time present a history of this movement/revelation, and are happy to be observing the transactions and interactions which even now are occurring.)

CALVIN: Tom S., in California asks: Do you have information about Maitreya, a Teacher in England?

ABRAHAM: I am understanding he is... [pause.] (TR: There is some kind of a problem going on. I don't know if it is me that is causing it, or if it is him.) Abraham: I am informed that he is a fairly new Teacher that is still under the apprenticeship of Machiventa. His origin is from a material world such as yours, but one without the extreme problems of evolutionary stumbling. Altogether a wonderful being. One more question?

SANDY: Abraham, do you know the being that speaks through Ester Hicks and is that part of the Teaching Mission?

ABRAHAM: I am familiar with the individual (Ester Hicks), but not with the teacher. I am sorry. There will be many Teachers who enlist in Michael's cause that I would not know because they have either been in training before or after me. I do know of individual's Teachers among our Mission students, and those instructor Teachers involved in our Teaching Mission, such as Ham and Daniel; I've received training alongside them. There are also new Teachers I train, and also special Teachers I receive training from. I am sorry for not being able to answer further.

I remind you each of our focus for the week and have you know I am close at hand to answer any questions you may have. As always, my love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

The Swim of Mortal Living Vs Remaining On The Mundane Shore
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP – CHRISTMAS POTLUCK PARTY 12-14-1998

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings. What an example of beauty in action! Not only do you nourish each other physically, but emotionally and spiritually as well. This is beautiful to behold.

I am always made to rejoice when I view Michael's spirit through my mortal friends. As I know Him I at times see His facial expressions on you. His well-known hand gestures have also been apparent when you are speaking with one another.

It is visually seen by me when the Spirit of Truth has won out over decisions that could have very well been made through ease-seeking. Michael's spirit however, cannot just magically appear to minister among the mortals of Urantia, no; there indeed has to be allowances on your part to invite Him in.

Some can only allow the Spirit of Truth to act in their lives 'to a point.' There can be a moment's hesitation where one might think Michael would curtail their plans. I say, as a child looks to a parent, we might look to Michael. We might involve Michael in simple joyful decisions, and on the other hand, limit His involvement when self-will appears strongly. This is to be expected as you are learning and progressing; it is not sinful, but simple misconception.

Individuals can say 'Father's will be done' to a point, yes, and yet fear letting go of the reins. One might think: "Father may have lessons for me which impose upon my plans and thereby causing delay in my mortal desires."

It is perfectly acceptable to stand on the beach of mortal living, slowly allowing life's experiences to roll up over your feet. It is not, however, experiencing the actual participation in fully experiencing all life has to offer – the actual swimming of life. Swimming can bring about taking water in and choking, yes – fatigue and fear may play a part; but one does not build upon those spiritual muscles needed without exercising in the swim of mortal living.

It is acceptable to stand upon the shore, yes; at one point or another you will have opportunity to dive in – whether in this life or the next. Urantia, however, is seeing an age where standing on the shore is not enough; feeling fearful of drowning or injury is not bringing fulfillment. To step deeper into the living waters is a mystery, yes – and yet it builds confidence, intrigues the mind, exercises those spiritual muscles and opens up a new world of learning.

You my friends, are those who find just standing on the beach boring; and yet at times overly-indulge in the ocean. How beautiful this is to me having myself lived a life in the flesh. Our focus for this week is to show your fellows by living example how wonderful the water can be; how mysterious and refreshing you find it. Allow the Master to have expression through you, and do not wonder why your fellows seek you out.

My friends – enjoy. Until next week, shalom.

Michael, Our Sustainer In The Rough Waters Of Mortal Living
Abraham & Christ Michael, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 12-21-1998

[This evening there was an unusual delay in the silence/stillness-time before the transmission began.]

I am ABRAHAM. I apologize for the delay. My greetings to you, my friends. The transmission process is likened to our swimming analogy – where one would take to the water and just have to trust the capabilities of the Teacher to help them stay afloat, yes. Therein, lies our lesson.

Many mortals are all too ready to jump into life's experiences and travail hastily through them in whatever manner they would choose. There are those who would choose the guidance of Father, however; and in so doing, find their lessons are more safe and lasting.

Always in the swim of life there is need to stop and just be – just float with the waves; just take a moment to orient yourself towards the eternal goal. How difficult it is to trust while in the mortal body that Father and His universe Sons and Daughters are there, yes, to hold you safely while you catch your breath; while you orient yourself toward the goal; while you release your everyday frustrations and take in energy.

This is a season for Michael's birth celebration into the world, and a wonderful time for all to remember how He sustains you.

MICHAEL: I am here. I am among you. I am your Sustainer, Brother/Father. How I do receive joy when my beloved children allow me my place in sustaining them. How touched am I to see the trust my children still have in me.

I know, as you know, the world is harsh and can seek to remove your light. I can understand the hope that has been lost over these many years. I also ache and weep for those who would not have me or my Father. I have been commissioned to upgrade and enlighten the mortal minds of this world.

My work is no less important now than it was two-thousand years ago. In this age though, my work is more difficult; there are so many children who have learned to mistrust or disbelieve, who turn away unseen blessings in favor of false material securities.

I have rallied my forces. The trumpets have sounded. I have rolled up my sleeves ready to be about the Father's business. This Correcting Time is occurring. There are major changes made every day – albeit unknown to you, they do happen. Events that appear to be negative are certainly for the greater healing of the planet, of the world's people.

I do ask that those who serve in this Mission allow me to provide buoyancy. It is imperative that I am relied upon to sustain you in the waters of mortal living. As you trust, I become more of a reality on this world. As you muster the courage to go through the living waters will you find me there as if I had always been there. My children work diligently and need to rest at times, and to trust that I will provide sustenance for them. My contact with you is becoming more casual and un-extraordinary as you find faith and trust.

A relationship with me is not a chosen seat to my left or my right; is not an infrequent consultation; is not wishful thinking; and, is not a bargaining session. Contact with me is relief from emotional strain, rest for the mind and body, comfort to the soul, strength to the character, clarity of the mind, confidence in your decisions and actions, courage should fear strike.

Yes, your connection with me is energy to live and serve, and knowledge on how to serve. These wonderful things are yours should you choose not to stumble over me; should you choose not to struggle in the current of rough waters; and should you allow my arms to give you rest. I am here at your feet, as I was with my apostles of old. I would find it my honor to provide the cleansing and the upliftment of your spiritual journey. I am your Brother, Father, Sustainer. I give you my love. Carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. We are uplifted indeed, Michael – and yet we are bowed in humility. We accept your gifts, humbly, and seek to fulfill your directions without cause to stumble over you. As we end our lesson, let us find time to be held in the arms of the Sustainer. [pause.] My love is with you, my students and friends. Until next week, shalom.

Example of Stumbling and Not Stumbling Over Michael, the Giver Of Direction and Instruction

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How wonderful it is for me to be included in your group learning. I am always made to feel glad when our invested efforts show such a beautiful profit. My past week was one of perfect humility. I spent moments in prayer for a decrease in self and an increase of the One who sustains me. I took advantage of the invitation to be idle while I was ministered to by our beloved Father/Brother. As I stand here before you today I feel as a new creature.

I would perhaps though, ponder the outcome: Would my week of beauty have been the same had I chose to struggle in the waters of all I am responsible for? I wonder – had I chose to manipulate the Master's directions, would I still stand before you here today a new creature? I almost shudder at the thought of trusting my own methods of swimming as opposed to the Masters'. Yes, I chose to not stumble over Him.

Michael, being the Master of instruction and direction as He is, can always assist you in your life in mortal living; He has lived it and can indeed impart to you divine instruction on living a life in the flesh. To stumble over Michael would be perhaps defined in this manner:

Say you have felt divinely inspired to minister unto a sick friend – your heartfelt guidance tells you to give comfort and show faith, provide listening and understanding. Michael then would aid you with the knowledge that would enable you to fulfill your heartfelt directions. Perhaps Michael would have you relay to your sick friend a like-story you have also experienced which would help to give comfort. You then start to impart your story to your friend, and you begin to stumble over Michael's directions when you decide to perhaps go towards your own agenda – maybe begin to speak on the benefits of reading the Urantia Book, or embellish the story to where you are feeding a personal ego-need.

Do you see, you have in your good intentions stumbled over Him by not embracing complete truth or His personal directions for divine fragrance concerning mortal living. Most people have wonderful intentions and truly want to be good, honorable, and noble. At times there is temptation to struggle over doing things your way versus Michael's way.

Yes, you may firmly believe you have chosen a spirit-led path at times, and then find some decisions have backfired. How easy it is to exclaim: "I have chosen the spiritual path so, why would I find myself in this discomfort?" This is the stumbling; it is subtle when it happens but the effects are frustrating. When one has chosen to take time to float in the arms of the Sustainer it is almost the same as saying: "I choose not to stumble over you; I choose the divine will." Do you see, some may profess they are aligned with the divine will and yet, through subtle inner desires, they manipulate, perhaps turn around divine directions to fit their own wish-fulfillment.

This week, I ask for your awareness in your invitation to Michael to participate in your life. When He does impart divine directions, are you able to stay the path? Are you trusting in His abilities as a Creator Son? Is there perhaps time to allow the capable arms of Michael to sustain you, to clarify your thinking, to create new energy?

As always, I am honored to be with you to share these divine teachings of Michael. I am feeling a rebirth of sorts, a recommitment to the cause, a new focus if you will. I am with a grateful heart to aid in this upliftment of Urantia, and to intimately know you as I do. Again, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

1999 MANSION WORLD TEACHINGS

Examples of Stumbling Over Michael, Such As Assuming Divine Direction

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-04-1999

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a busy time of year for all of us. It is wonderful we connect together to remember what our focus is. Your friendship helps me to maintain practicality in this divine ministry. No matter the level of bliss we experience through divinity we will always utilize our intellect as a stabilizer.

As I listen to your discussion regarding 'stumbling over Michael,' I am reminded of the many individuals who are bound by tradition. Many individuals believe certain acts performed are sinful and unforgivable, and assume the celestial beings are planning some sort of punishment, or what some may term 'bad karma.'

Michael has taught me to view all Father's children with the understanding - that mortal suffering cannot be judged by untrained individuals, no. Certain abrupt actions taken by individuals are due to extreme pain, whether it is emotional, mental, or physical.

Those bound by traditions and churches may at times assume they are 'sinful beings without hope of redemption,' and will live their lives accordingly. They could make assumptions about those on high sitting in judgment of their mortal actions - this is an example we can use to define stumbling.

Some individuals however, not affiliated with any particular church but are spiritual, may find they can make quick assumptions of Father's will or Michael's directions. One can ask Father or Michael for guidance and then modify His directions, or assume they would know that 'what Hewould do is what they would do.' Do you see, this is how erring traditions are originated - this assuming Michael or Father would give the same directions as oneself would, each time a mortal dilemma arises.

You can ask: "What would Jesus do?" yes; and many do. But can you allow time for an answer, a clear and egoless answer? Many mortals are deeply feeling what they would like to see happen in many circumstances, and may act on that. This could perhaps be termed as stumbling. 'Assuming' divine direction, is stumbling. Not embracing the complete truth, is also stumbling. All mortals will make mistakes or bad choices in their lifetime, yes; but please know there is a literal live-line to divine direction, and you can never be disconnected from it unless you so choose to be.

Again this week, I ask that you continue to practice allowing the Master to give you rest in the swim of mortal living. In this, we can find clarity and pure instructions. Your continuing efforts to maintain closeness with Him strengthens your courage to allow 'self' to decrease, and Michael to increase.

These past many weeks we have had lessons along with your serious conversations. Next week, I would ask that we have questions and comments and personal interaction. Yes, I believe this would help us to maintain practicality in our divine learning. I shall make effort to see you during the week. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

We Are Family On A Soul Level | Questions | To Serve The Individual Is To Serve The Whole

01-11-1999

[This evening the group had a healthy discussion regarding these lessons of late, and how they are impacting in daily living.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. In a way, it is strange for me to be on this side of mortal life watching you and asking myself: "Do I believe what I have just seen?" What an advancement you have just made. Those courageous individuals willing to step out and make change are those who lead in our Mission.

How important it is that we make clear we have understood one another – or if not understood, at least heard. Yes, what an extraordinary time in your learning. No aspects of your spiritual education may be passed over, no matter the discomfort. We must be willing to allow Father's expressions through us.

My suggestion for your Mission group would be for you to keep your discussions mostly concerning 'the mortal living in everyday life;' and, 'How does your divine education serve you in your work, your family, your community?'

I am quite honored to be counted among you as a friend, a co-learner. You each know me better than you think. We are family on a soul level. I would take great pleasure in discussing anything with you, or perhaps answer some questions. You may begin.

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I had a very pleasant and enjoyable surprise yesterday. I am quite sure you know about it. After five years, Melissa, who used to be in our group with Ham back in 1991 and 1992, came to see me and spent a couple hours with me. She was very, very interested in everybody – how they were, how they were doing, and what was going on. As you know, I said to her: "If you would like to come see all of them why don't you just come to a meeting with me?" She said: "Oh, Okay, I will." So I am going to get back in touch with her and have her come with me. I know you had once told us that it would take time with Melissa and that we were not to push her – just to be friends. Can you assess her some now and tell me about it, please?

ABRAHAM: I am understanding that Melissa is somewhat interested and yet, still apprehensive about getting too close. There still is some fear concerning the origin from which these words stem. I would always welcome Melissa back to visit with us and confirm that within her is the source of all goodness, all protection, and she need only look at the fruits that have been produced by our Mission. Melissa does well, with or without our group and the Urantia Book. She is a highly spiritual individual who lives and acts from her heart. Yes. Is this answering? (Rachel: Yes, and thank you kindly.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

INERA: Father Abraham, thank you very much for the lesson tonight and for last weeks' lesson. When we ask for Michael's help, and turn around and assume that He is too busy – is that, in a way, stumbling over Him? Is that what He meant by "stumbling over Him when we are swimming in our daily life?" like when we make our own assumptions that 'He doesn't have time for such a small matter and we should just figure it out ourselves?'

ABRAHAM: In part, yes, this is stumbling. There lies available at your feet all the Master's capabilities, and it is easy for mortals to say: "With all the world's difficulties why would He take interest in mine?" This is the reason for the existence of the Spirit of Truth. Michael's Spirit of Truth is not limited by lists of tasks and chores, no. You could perhaps understand His capabilities as a computer in which an unlimited amount of information may be accessed, but the reply would come only when the appropriate time would be. So yes, you could pray for His involvement and not receive an answer in your time – but in His, which is Father’s time. The Spirit of Truth is capable of synchronizing events which would serve the whole; and this could take time, but surely each individual’s petitions are heard and coordinated through the best methods of teaching. The Spirit of Truth looks at the individuals’ difficulties as concerning the whole. To serve the individual is to serve the whole. Michael’s Mission here on Urantia was for that very reason – to let His children know His assistance is immediate. Your indwelling Adjusters work also with the Spirit of Truth and are honored each time you choose to utilize their capabilities. Are not your personal lessons wonderful? – for they show you a new and higher way. You do well Inera, and I say, carry on. (Inera: Thank you very much. You just brought it full circle for me quickly. Thank you.) Abraham: You’re welcome. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, in following up with that description of Inera’s: First of all I want to say thank you for the lessons, especially I loved the positive-energy ones. Those helped me so much through my surgery. It is such a tangible way to relate moment-to-moment with what was going on there, as are these lessons. So in trying to understand the process, this weekend I hung out a lot with what I think was you and my indwelling Fragment, and asking for Michael’s help, and asking for Mother to help my brain connect the right circuits, and all of that. Could you describe to me or give me some pointers of like what that process is? And, Will’s book helped me through the evenings as well. [Editor’s note: ‘Will’ is a female celestial Teacher in the Tallahassee, Florida TM group. A book was published centered on Will’s teachings called: "Correcting Time. Where the Revelation Meets the Road."] Miriam: I am just trying to benchmark what some of that guidance was. Could you help me with that? Are you able to do that? Do you know what I am asking?

ABRAHAM: Yes. I can try. It would seem there are questions you have to which there are not answers given at this time. Your asking and not understanding does promote some discomfort. Your meetings with us over the weekend were to aid you in just ‘being;’ to aid you in trusting, and curbing your curiosity toward patience. As a mortal, there are so many things we do not or cannot right now understand. The diligent mortal insists on ‘doing the math,’ and sometimes it doesn’t add up. I am meaning – you are very spiritual minded, yes, and yet you come up against others who do not seem to be ‘spiritual.’ It is difficult for you to understand that some individuals cannot see the obvious truths of spirituality. This could cause you some anxiety, yes, and yet you are utilizing the spiritual forces to assist you in understanding and accepting – which takes time. Well done. Your enthusiasm is a light which draws many individuals to it. Our visits were to assist you in decreasing anxiety and, directing you on opening the doors to higher understanding. Is this helping? (Miriam: Oh yes, Abraham, and I needed it, and I thank you very very much.) Abraham: You’re welcome. Another question?

MICHAEL (the recently new group student): Yes. Happy New Year Abraham. I appreciate you taking time out of your busy schedule to come talk to us. I have a question – I don’t know if you can answer it but I would sure like to see if you could illuminate us, or at least me: I have been doing a lot of research and gathering data on ‘planetary realignment.’ I’ve asked a few group members here who have been with this group a long time, like Calvin, and my understanding is that you have never addressed anything like that. It has been kind of a topic of discussion amongst a lot of prophesiers, revelators, fortunetellers, predictors, etc. It is all over the Internet, and I guess you know what the Internet is – there is all kinds of data on there. I would like to know if you have any information that you could share with us, or with me, concerning this planetary realignment as the planet is trying to get its perfect equilibrium. It is the goal of all of us – to be balanced. What kind of situation would it bring to the planet – physically – as far as the land and the water and the air?

ABRAHAM: Understood. When we speak of ‘planetary alignment’ it is mostly referring to unseen changes in which you can only feel on a spiritual level. The changes are going to be noticed mostly by you who sit here today, while the youth of Urantia will be born into this change – so it will be as if it always was for them. You, yourself, have spoken of spiritual awakening; and this will certainly force moral changes. The moral changes will have a huge effect on the world and there will be a natural outworking that occurs. The outworking being – all individuals are well looked after and taken care of. There will always be environmental upset, environmental changes, natural occurrences – and yes, lives will be taken, or at least affected. Your spiritual upliftment is what shall see you through these devastations. There have been many natural occurrences that have taken lives, yes, but none more damaging than what man has done to man. How wonderful it will be when Urantia discovers that there is no cessation of life for all who chooselife. This alone can eliminate much fear and increase more energy spent on things spiritual. Is this helping?

MICHAEL: Yes. Can you give any particulars, specifics? Just so you know, I have seen futuristic maps of the world, and I am seeing a common thread through some of them showing land-masses disappearing. So I was just wondering with the non-physical beings, such as yourself, if the spiritual realm can see – are you allowed to see these things? What are you allowed to share – anything?

ABRAHAM: I cannot know the outcome of natural occurrences; I do not know specifics. I cannot say California will be under water, for instance. I know and learn of such things as you do. Another question?

INERA: Father Abraham, is a lot of that due to the fact that we have free will, and that the future, no one knows because it could change with our free will and our choices.

ABRAHAM: Yes, exactly. There are a number of scientific discoveries that could be made if man were willing to give up any glory for them. There is understanding in predicting Earth disasters; there are medical discoveries that would eliminate devastating diseases. Yes, the planetary knowledge is limited due to free will. You are correct. Another question?

HARRISON: Abraham, then what you are suggesting is that our free will (our thoughts) affect what is created? Are we creating by what we think?

ABRAHAM: Absolutely. We create those things in which we focus upon. If we worship money (for example) we spend our time in trying to create that. Our ideas and energy go into those things we find important. Power for example: Some individuals put their energies into gaining power – and like with money it may be obtained through causing pain or taking from those which are weak. The energy is what manifests our desires. Our attention on what we want draws attention away from other things, so our resources are easily used up. Those who desire world peace can spread the word over the computer networking, yes, but then turn around and be unfair to his neighbor – is this then really helping toward world peace? Yes, Harrison, it is – literally: 'What our energy goes into, therein is where you apply your material labor; and therein is your thoughts which travel the circuits petitioning to those individuals who could help you to fulfill your desire. These traveling thoughts are also affecting them, as well as those you know. Thoughts have power in a material realm, yes, but also on the spiritual. Is this helping? (Harrison: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: Another question?

MICHAEL: Yes. I have another question. I need to know the source, Abraham, of the life force that flows through all of us. I was looking it up in the Urantia Book and I was getting different things. I was just wondering what you know from your background experience in the universe where the life force comes from (the source of it), and how we can use it effectively in our life.

ABRAHAM: This is easy. The First Source and Center, God the Father, who dwells in Paradise. He is the source of all beings and substance. He is easily accessed through your stillness or prayers. Does this answer?

MICHAEL: Not really. I guess it sounds like a pretty obvious question. I know God is the source of all things, but I will try to get more specific: The Urantia Book talks about 'energy' and 'mind,' and that the Third Source (the Infinite Spirit) materializes everything through the mind and through this energy. So I am trying to tie it all together. We obviously have our mind, our personality – and as you know, the Universal Mother Spirit, the Spirit of Truth, and of course the Thought Adjuster – we've got all of that working inside of us. And this life 'force' thing, I want to know if it is totally separate from all of that, from all of these entities; and, from whence does it come. Also, how it can effectively be used to physically create in our own personal lives, because if a lot of people knew they could use this 'force' and have physical manifestations, and tap into it, it would make life a lot easier. So I am trying to understand if this 'life-force' is something outside of the Thought Adjuster, the Universal Mother Spirit, the Spirit of Truth, and the mind?

ABRAHAM: Understood. It would be well to simplify, my son. Father is not so complex. He, being the First Source and Center, does supply this 'force' to those beings who came after Him. He is the 'life-force.' Those in whom you mention are also recipients of His life-force. They do add their own flavor to the soup, so to speak, yes, as you add to contribute to the reality of the God-in-time – the Supreme Being. Yes. Is this helping? (Michael: Yes. I don't want to create any more problems.) [laughter.]

ABRAHAM: Thank you. [more laughter.] Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I don't know if there is a lot of time left, but we have some new people here tonight.

ABRAHAM: Yes, and have you further questions? (Miriam: Not for tonight, thank you, but we welcome those others who are new, to feel free to ask of you.)

ALAUNA: Abraham, I have a question. I don't know if you can call it a question because it is more of a comment: You talked tonight about enjoying our life here - speaking more on our 'mortal' lives and realizing how the teachings have affected our mortal lives, not so much our spiritual thinking, or wondering about the world-events, or what is going to happen in the future. My question is a little bit more about the balance between the mortal life, and spiritual life. I feel like I have been pretty spiritual all my life. I have always known Christ Michael in my life, and I have always been able to speak candidly with Father, asking for help in my life. But I feel like I spend so much of my time living this mortal life in raising and helping with a number of children - my children; my grandchildren; children of the community who are needing help; working a job; dealing with families through my work, etc. I believe these evenings that we spend together are really the only time that I feel like I can work more on the spiritual. I am wondering if that is enough of a balance. I try to be the best person I can be in my daily work and dealing with my children. But is one day a week studying on the spiritual enough of a balance? This is my question.

ABRAHAM: My daughter, Alauna, you live the spiritual every day in work, in home, children, grandchildren, friends, and family. The two are not separate in your life. Your combination is wonderful in that you live what you believe. You fear not in stepping out to help an individual. You are helping so as to help, not to gain glory - and this is exactly what we endeavor to teach. Worry not on your spiritual concentration only being 'one night per week.' Your underlying spiritual understanding is quite enough to carry you through on those assignments Father would have you do. Yes. Well done.

You each here are excellent examples of those not afraid to stand up for doing what's right - spiritually and morally. I learn each time we meet. I am slipping. I have enjoyed our time together. I would send you each a note of my deep feelings for you. Until next week, shalom.

Each Puzzle Piece Adds to The Beauty of The Whole

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you each. How wonderful it is to see you work with such high levels of spiritual maturity. Your discussion this evening was well needed, and as you each grow closer you will find new and better group balance. Yes.

Each individual here this evening stems from differing backgrounds; there have been similar experiences shared between you, but varied enough to cause different perceptions. All of you have varying levels of education - skills and gifts that would chance to play a role in the cosmic destinies of the planet and beyond. Of course there will be differing opinions among you. Each one of you are as a piece of a puzzle you could find in a beautiful picture – each puzzle-piece having its function to add to the beauty of the whole.

Personality is unique and is bestowed by those on high. Personality does indeed add color to the completed puzzle of who you really are. Mortal experience, personality and free will – all play a significant role in who you are now and who you are becoming. As we live and work among one another we stumble over each other and face difficulties as we attempt to find unity.

The Master, being so aligned with Father's will, found His mortal calling early on; and being thus divinely connected led Him to be more than He could have been. Seeking Father's will had endowed the Master with such character, strength, and spiritual knowledge. Had the Master chosen to go it on His own, without divine guidance, He could have in no way made such an impact. Do you see – His early decision to be Spirit led, to be in the divine will, had led Him to do what He had been well equipped to do.

You each have read the apostle's opinions of their Master; they each admired Him for various aspects. Some were made to feel His crushing hard truth and some even had resented Him for it. Michael's decision to be within Father's will had begun early on; He could have made changes at any point in His spiritual career; He could have been working solely towards His divine sovereignty over Nebadon. Yes, His decisions had gifted Him to fulfill His spiritual destiny 'according to Father's plan.'

You each have particular gifts or personality aspects which would endow you with certain abilities. Each role does add completion to the planetary picture, and so on. You may enjoy a certain individual's gifts and love them for their particular personality ingredients – and on the other hand, you may also find individuals to be unpleasant or annoying. Each child of God does have their mortal spiritual experience and their gift of personality that makes them who they are, yes, which adds to their social, moral, or spiritual skills.

Yes, each child – as was also Christ – is gifted with those particular aspects that add to the overall puzzle comprising the kingdom/family of God. Perhaps we can find understanding and tolerance in each individual's particular functions; and instead of making hasty assessments of who they are, we could allow time to reveal their function in the puzzle. Jesus said: "The more you know one another, the more you love one another."

Over the next few weeks we will discuss these personality concepts and individual functions or callings, yes. I'm sorry, no questions this evening; I am on a busy schedule tonight. I also will give this lesson to others who have also reached your understanding. As always, my love goes with you. Look for me throughout this week. Until next week, shalom.

Individual Gifts That Lead You On Assignments | Recognizing Those Gifts of Adjuster Prior Experience

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I would have to apologize, for I have missed much of your discussion this evening. I was on another assignment where my particular skills could be utilized to alleviate some group misconception. I have been well trained in the area of reality awareness; I have been taught how to help guide individual's mystical-thinking toward more of a reality purposefulness.

Yes, my life-experience has taught me much of what I know to be true. Time has also shown me that basic truth is eternal. There were those spiritual concepts I experienced, yes, but I wondered if they were reality. Time has proven that those things of value, are lasting.

My Brother/Father (Michael) has indeed been a wonderful teacher; His expertise in certain arenas has added to my ability to teach. I also have enlisted in certain educational activities to sharpen my skills. But for the most part, I would have to say my indwelling Adjuster has unified all that I have learned into a practical purpose - a valuable resource in which to serve the whole.

As you dedicate yourselves to furthering the growth of the Correcting Time, you can also see certain aspects that have enabled you to help. Certainly your life experiences have shaped you - and in that, there are various occurrences that had an effect on who you are and how you put forth your unified knowledge to help. Family does add an ingredient to who you are, yes; and I say society has also added its twist. Experience is a method in which one could be made to 'learn to bend,' or 'be broken from.' The Adjuster surely has a say in how these ingredients will be measured out in order to endow you with those skills you will require in serving.

There are so many personalities you will come upon in your spiritual career. There are indeed worlds you will travel and cultures that will certainly astound you. Your astonishment will not only be by a visual method, but by a spiritual one as well. Yes, you cannot at this time conceive of the diverse individuals you shall meet beyond this world.

I am always meeting unique personalities which add to my source of information. I cannot ever categorize the many individuals - for no two are the same; and yet certainly on these varied worlds there are personalities who still are having in common the same personality aspects. These are aspects that are yet to be woven into various types of individual fabrics, yes. We can certainly see how personality ingredients interwoven over time would add positive or negative aspects to each individual soul, depending on one's adherence to Father's will over their own.

My main message this evening is concerning your individual gifts that lead you on assignments. Your own Internal Guide has set before you those lessons that endow you with the ability to be taught and, to teach. Also does He unify your experience with that of others to aid in the growth of the whole - the world, the solar system, the universe, the universes, and the Supreme Being.

Your world does know the ministry of experienced Adjusters. Your experienced Adjusters can help to teach you skills that you cannot possibly know how you attained them. Many individuals are either ridiculed or accredited with certain personality-ingredients when all the while, these things could very well be Adjuster-related.

Individuals who are a bit aggressive are perhaps endowed with an Adjuster who has had previous experience concerning aggression; but also could this individual have had a childhood where he himself had to be aggressive in order to attain what he needed. This individual would perhaps be gifted at organizing and accomplishing certain tasks that would otherwise be difficult for one who is passive. Do you see – the various aspects of experience and Adjuster-influence can endow one with the skills needed with which to minister to their fellows.

I was called this evening to aid individuals in a group that were perhaps leaning towards a more mystical non-reality type thinking. My mortal life gave me the experience in which I could understand how they were leaning towards mysticism, for I have also done the same. My Adjuster experience was knowledgeable in areas of public speaking and talking in a manner requiring authority – and that knowledge has allowed me to help guide and direct and guard against untruth.

As we come across individuals who possess this type of personality or that, stop to ponder – from where does their personality makeup originate? How have you become the person you are today? Is it through your human experience? What valuable tools has your Father Adjuster imparted to you to enable you to answer your callings or mission assignments?

Also consider that something you may be critical of about yourselves, or others, could very well be Thought Adjuster endowments. Yes, take a moment during the week to explore your gifts and ponder upon how your gifts could apply in service to the whole. Once again I would thank you for having me and allowing me to do what I love. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Ponder The Service Techniques of Mary Magdalene | Do We Serve For Self or For Father Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-01-1999

[A few of the transmission/lessons around this time had to do with Mary (Magdalene). It seemed as though she (Mary) was somehow an integral part of the Teaching Mission. This proved to be true – Mary was introduced as an associate Teacher to the Woods Cross Group in mid-2005 (six years later).]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a joy it is for me to be among you as your friend. I am entirely grateful for my mission-work with you. I believe our group-personality commonalities are what makes us remain steadfast.

As you discover who you really are and your talents reveal themselves, then do you find yourself with mission assignments. In having an understanding of the various personalities you chance to meet, it is so much easier to serve without worry of being ridiculed, embarrassed, or cast out?

Those individuals who find themselves with particular mission assignments or callings sometimes magnify the importance of it or completely rearrange their lives to serve. Some believe self-sacrifice is necessary in order to answer their mission callings. One who is spirit-led and with desire to serve without notice can find that their assignments are more of a ministering unto their souls – rather than their souls being imposed upon.

The apostles of long ago took their callings quite seriously, and well they should have. Though their much-expected fanfare did not occur, they did indeed arrange their lives in order to serve with the Master. The Master's ministry was not long or particularly calling for self-sacrifice; and yet the apostles of that day made plain for all to see how they had given up certain things in order to serve.

There are many assignments Father sets before us; and need for life-rearrangement is not always called for. He asks not for you to sacrifice anything except maybe for the desire for self-aggrandizement – the desire for 'glory' for one's service. A pure and true Mission calling will most of the time be spontaneous and done without a lot of thought. These callings could very well be as long as a couple of years or as short as an hour. Life rearrangement is not always necessary in order to answer your callings.

Father asks us not to save all the lost souls of the world, but perhaps just maintain positivity within our own environments; to be a beacon to those around us. How can one minister to a fellow who is homeless when at their own home their children are neglected? Is service that is visual 'to the world' (with notice for self) more important than the service done in private 'for Father's glory?'

Mary Magdalene was perhaps looked upon as belonging to life's underbelly; her experience in earning a living had discredited her integrity. She appeared to be an individual who could not find light in her dark world; and yet, thanks to the Master's ministries, she was made to find hope and encouragement.

Mary could find the value in all that happened to her in mortal living – she could find value in those mistakes she had made. What a wonderful teacher this made her to be. What a complete joy it was for her to come up from such depth of darkness to be a revealer of light. She cared not to be accredited with any praise or glory, for she knew all her gifts were unified and well used by Father.

In the days of old, women dared not to go forth and freely minister to individuals on spiritual matters; they could be found, however, caring for the sick. You who have cared for the sick understand the hardness of it. You understand that in the realness of mortal living there are those things in our ministering to our fellows that would make ordinary men turn away from doing; and yet, Mary found she was quite gifted with the strength to help the sick – physically; and yet, minister unto their soul with love and a softness few men possessed.

Mary's harsh living had endowed her with a strong sense of compassion and an understanding of the real world – she would minister to those who were not considered to be 'worthy of help.' Women of that era could be found doing particular jobs that could possibly not gain favor in the eyes of men; and still, these women were as important to Mary as those men who were at the Master's side – just as important as those who tended to the masses, those who stood up on pulpits preaching words of comfort.

Mary and her fellow women were well suited for particular jobs that their life experience had trained them for. The apostles were well trained by the Master to perform the ministries that they did. Do you see, whether you are ministering to one fellow, or one-hundred, your life experience has well trained you for a purpose. Those who would seek some form of credit would find their callings to be confusing and without open doors. Mission callings are, for the most part, temporary and changing, as pertains to your experience and training.

This week, I ask that you ponder upon the service techniques of Mary Magdalene; attempt to understand what she was and what she became. Be aware of those small mission assignments throughout the week; note their spontaneity; note the ease of performing when you are truly spirit led. That is all. My love grows each time we meet, and I will look for you throughout the week. My love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Mission Callings Bring Unexpected Rewards | More of Mary Magdalene's Example

[A few of the transmission/lessons around this time had to do with Mary (Magdalene). It seemed as though she was somehow an integral part of the Teaching Mission. This proved to be true – Mary was introduced six years later as an associate Teacher to the Woods Cross Group in mid-2005.]

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. I would express my gratitude to you for allowing me to do what I love. I thank you for your respect concerning my mission assignment and contribution to the whole of the Correcting Time.

Our discussions on mission callings could perhaps be termed by some individuals as 'controversial,' for we show respect to each individual's mission regardless of what that may be. Some may perform great public works, while others minister on a more personal level.

We respect the fact that each one of us is equally called. We do not regard any one mission calling as being more noble than others. Mary Magdalene could attest to that. She found it her supreme joy to escort a dying fellow to the light with the words of the Master. She found purpose in feeding those who could not feed themselves. She found fulfillment in causing a child to laugh and be lifted up.

Mary's works were not for kings, nor large groups of people, no. Her works were not recorded on paper. Her name is not used as are the names of the various saints and heroes; even in the knowledge that this would be so, Mary found her supreme joy to be in the fine details of her work. She found Father to be providing the materials she needed to mix the medicines needed to administer to her fellows. She could see Father's fingerprints on those individuals who exclaimed they were led to her. She could find Father arranging small coincidences that made her mission-work possible – and therein laid her joy.

Most mission callings are by no means rewarding in a material way, for most callings are indeed messy with chaotic elements. The work of the Father can at times be found to be irreverent or not so seemingly divine.

When we view the Master's life on Urantia we can find Him in the midst of much turmoil. He was looked upon as being either 'eccentric' or, 'the king of the Jews.'

He was continually sought after for His boldness in not teaching from the set scriptures and for His unknown source of knowledge He had within. Many times had Jesus gone without food or rest. Many times had He found Himself in the midst of controversy and discomfort. Yes, Jesus' mission was anything but glamorous and self-glorifying.

How was the Master able to remain steadfast in the Father's work? He could have said: "I only wanted to help, and my ministrations were refused - therefore, I withdraw." What kept the Master motivated? How did He do such great works without the approval from His people, even His own family? After what seemed like failure, how could He continue to spread light and comfort?

The Master always exclaimed: "You go before I, Father, that your will may become apparent to me when I arrive." Jesus, in His faith, had not even entertained the idea: "How can I be remembered as a great spiritual teacher," no; His continual mantra was always: "Father, your will be done! You are my cause for glorifying you."

As you progress towards the morontial state do you find your senses sharpened and with greater ease to serve in your callings. As you answer your callings do you find Father's fingerprints therein. The literal perception of Father opening doors for you in your mission's work draws you closer to Him. As you work can you see His work. As you step forth in faith to answer your callings can you certainly become closer to Father.

As the Master went about the Father's business could He be made to rejoice at seeing Father's hand in everything. To serve is to gain closeness with the creator of Creators. Service is found throughout your eternal career and is in fact, a guidepost to Paradise where Father dwells, yes.

This week, as you answer your calling, look for His fingerprints or open doors. Be aware that as you serve, in whatever capacity, your relationship becomes stronger with Father. As you serve, your faith builds a mightier foundation. All acts of service may not be wonderful in the eyes of men and yet, when performed for the Father's glory, is a great upliftment in personal attitude. That is all. My love is with you as always. Until next week, shalom.

Greatest Learning Comes From Mission Challenges | Learning and Understanding is Our Focus

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, my friends. I appreciate your lighthearted exchange of energy this evening. It certainly makes my lesson more clear when you each are in such a supreme mode of giving and receiving.

In the short time our Mission has been fully functioning we have seen a great many changes. It is on a personal level that we have seen the most change. Each individual putting forth their best effort to make personal correction, aids in the Missions' complete picture. When each individual can master the self, then will the greater things of the kingdom be brought into your reality; new ideas that were not even thought possible will be possible.

Self-mastery is mind-expansion, and that mindal expansion is open to new spiritual realities. Without the practice of self-mastery and greater mindal capacity, some spiritual realities would perhaps be seen as phenomenal or even be the cause of some fear. We await your acceptance to these new realities to bring Urantia into Light and Life. There is no greater test of self-mastery than in how you relate with your fellow mortals. I give you, EMULAN:

EMULAN: How my heart is lifted, my friends, when we can meet and share our common hope for a new and better life. I am aware of your personal group history, and I have seen much growth. There have been difficult times between you, yes, and yet this was a steppingstone to better understandings and not so much a stumbling block to creating separation.

I am not native to Urantia but my world was somewhat like it. I am however, surprised at some of the exposure that I have been witness to. I have seen the worst that man has to offer to his fellows, and my surprise is that this behavior is so common. What a competitive world you live in where a man's triumph is to set his fellows up to fall. Also, where an importance in entertainment certainly outweighs the importance of educating the young.

I am fortunate though to be included in this time where these social challenges will be modified to bring the greater realities of a spiritual kingdom. Our Teaching Mission, which will embrace many generations to come, is a wonderful platform from which to create social change. By your personal correction, you live an increasing exemplary example of how each mortal is viewed as a child of God; and, that we all are welcome to participate. Yes, we show that we can care and be cared for.

Michael's Spirit of Truth is the living revelation of showing where there is need for healing; He brings out those dark places into the light where they can be understood and worked on. There are many social disorders, yes. Michael seeks to break those barriers of separation to enable Urantians to unify as a family. Personal self-mastery and social healing create an energy that can allow for new spiritual realities.

Look at your medical practices - is there not more connection than ever before between mind and body? Is it not becoming common to believe that spirituality creates a healthy mind which in turn creates a healthy body? Yes, this thinking is beginning to connect with the minds of the masses and to be looked upon as if it always was that way.

The way in which you treat your fellows is either an energy 'generation' or a 'depletion.' To generate is to be prepared to be open; to be accepting of new spiritual possibilities, new realities, yes. With some time spent in practicing self-mastery among your fellows we can then introduce the beginning of those new spiritual realities that you can expect. Can you generate positive energy with each person you meet and feel the immediate effects from that? Yes, if we so desire.

To practice self-mastery among your fellows is to promote a positive energy exchange. Know that most individuals feel the same frailties you do - they can be open to new spiritual possibilities by your efforts in positive thinking. We can each participate in this Correcting Time when we can keep our ministry on a personal level. Your fellows are your assignment. Be open to receiving any words Father might have for them for you to speak.

Next week I will be here to accept questions. Talk with one another on this. Your discussions here are indeed practice for those you interact with each day. I leave you with my love. Farewell.

Mission Assignments Come As You Pass By, To Uplift Our Fellows To Feel a Part Of The Whole

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you. As I listen to you each speak, I am intrigued by your ideas and inspired to ponder upon these topics, yes. I understand more each time we meet of how your lives affect mine, and vice-versa, yes. Upon answering these mission callings do our lives connect and we create new living energy circuits, yes.

As Jesus fulfilled His mission, His focus was indeed always "Father's will be done," and He performed His mission tasks with that in mind. His supreme desire was always to reach for Father. His supreme goal was to manifest Father's will on Earth. His strength was indeed His Father in heaven, and He performed His mission tasks on the way toward reaching this goal.

As Jesus lived His life in the flesh going about daily chores, He could always find a way to assist a fellow in one thing or another. Jesus could always be found manifesting Father's will in carrying out His mission assignments that were a part of normal everyday living. On His way to fish He would perhaps pass by a lonesome child who was in need of some upliftment, some encouragement, some humor or playfulness; this task assignment did not 'drop from the sky' but was an ordinary part of mortal living.

When He was at work building boats could He find time to stop and aid an elderly woman with her bundles of goods; this took but a few minutes and very little thought. At the Master's home there were always brothers and sisters in need of help concerning their education or personal problems. These all appeared to be somewhat ordinary and uneventful, yes, and yet in each of these tasks we see Jesus manifesting Father's will on Earth.

Your mission assignments are 'as you pass by' just as the Master's were. There was no calling from Father that would ask His Son to sacrifice anything that was not part of the normal everyday life; no call to show a certain amount of human dedication to be proved through suffering. Mission callings are about assisting one another through this mortal life, uplifting one another to feel a part of the whole.

Mission callings are asking us to focus on Father, yes, and to take our brothers and sisters by the hand, in whatever capacity, helping them find Father. Yes, in our mission assignments are we on our way to the supreme goal towards finding our Paradise Father. In our acts of service are we learning and finding joy. There is not a temporary 'surface' joy, but a 'soul' joy, a deeply felt 'Father-connected' joy.

I feel that our lessons on mission callings are sufficient at this time and we will be moving on to other areas of spirituality. Yes, as for now I would take a few questions.

CALVIN: Abraham, what concern is there on your Teaching Mission staff concerning the Teaching Mission's falling into a pattern, into a crystallized complacency place maybe, more-so than to continue to forge ahead into new learning ground, new awareness?

ABRAHAM: After time, most all things become complacent. At this point in our mission, we only seek to make this, our teachings, an ordinary part of mortal living. We strive to lean away from the 'phenomena' of this particular method of communing (transmitting and receiving process), and we worry not for crystallization because the circuits continue to send forth new information. On our staff, there is a continual supply of spiritual food; there is no need to stop and preserve what we've already received. We seek to empower our mortal friends with the knowledge that spirituality is as a necessity as is breathing – and also, as normal. Our goal is to uplift and reconnect Urantia with the whole – to make a place at the table for each individual, and for each to feel as if you have always been there. Yes. Is this answering? (Calvin: Yes. Thank you, my friend and teacher; and thank you for tonight's lesson.)

INERA: Abraham, we welcome you back from the beach. (Florida Teaching Mission Conference.) It seems to me lately as I have been reading other groups' lessons, that the Teachers are right now going through a reevaluation of the groups and their teachings, communications. Are we looking for a better way of communicating? or going in a different direction?

ABRAHAM: My understanding is: All things are becoming new; and, as individuals receive these spiritual gifts there will need to be explanation. Every day there are individuals who receive morontial senses, so to speak, and they cannot receive grounded understanding of these new senses without education and enlightenment. These morontial gifts are not bestowed upon those who are not ready. As the Mission participants have understood our main message, then are we able to bring forth more light. Is this in your understanding? (Inera: Yes, perfectly. Thank you very much.) Abraham: Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I have the idea to ask you this today and I don't know if it is improper or if you are able to or not, but could you describe to us what it is like to die from this mortal experience (mortal death) since you have done it? Is that an improper request?

ABRAHAM: No. Not improper. One moment. I can say a little, for each individual is different and each mortal's death is different. Various factors play a part in death such as pain, the time/length of an illness, what is left on Earth unfinished, the amount of life-experience, the spiritual beliefs. For me I can say, as a mortal I was indeed ready to lay down my mortal body. My life had been sufficient and I felt

I had done the best to my ability. In these moments one hopes that what they have always 'believed' to be true, is true. And even then, there is at times a slight inkling to 'hang on,' to not let go of the mortal life and what you know. I can remember the feelings of a rebirth. I could say it was as if I had become more alive, more aware, than I had ever been. I am told to stop. Each individual will experience different things; my experience was quite average. Each one who believes in Father and His overall purpose greets death with more familiarity and acceptance than those who do not. There is not fear or bewilderment; there is an indescribable feeling of excitement and pondering upon what comes next, yes.

As always, I am with such joy to speak with you. Our time together has certainly been of great benefit to me. Next week we will reflect upon our past years together and perhaps set some goals for the future. As always, my love is with you. Shalom.

Progress Update | You Have Strengthened Me | Announcement of New Lessons on Morontial Realities

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-01-1999

Back

[In these series of lessons, the word 'morontial' is used often. Morontial is that state of our existence between the mortal body and that some-day spirit form. When we awaken in our next existence (the 'correction' Mansion Worlds - there are seven transitions of them) we have shed our material bodies and are awakened in a 'morontial form.' Abraham teaches in these lessons that we can now attain morontial realities while in our present mortal (Earth) form.]

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. It is my great honor to be your friend and teacher. As I have promised, I will say a few words on this, our anniversary. I have known many of you even as small children. I have spent many years in preparation for starting this Teaching Mission. I have quite a number of hours in training for what would become a powerful epochal event on Urantia, and with all my preparation and service I have never received so much education, love, and kindness as I have felt in our Teaching Mission.

Years ago, on our first meeting with my brother Ham, we were quite skeptical and apprehensive about meeting with mortals at a time in history where such faith was rare; and many individuals felt hopeless. We were fully trained and confident going in with our information, and yet, our expectations were not always met. What a challenge it had proved to be for us, the Teaching Staff.

In these years we have lived your lives with you; we have endeavored to reach the masses through you; we have followed our orders as we had received them; and yet, it was the actual 'living with you' that had taught us so much. We have experienced a great magnitude of joy and elation as you had discovered our presence and purpose. We have seen you through the wishful-thinking and mysticism. We have experienced with you the disillusionment, and then the entering into the realness of life. Through all our spiritual instructions, we were of the understanding that our words could either be of comfort and help, or our words could fall upon deaf ears.

I personally have escorted you to weddings of friends and family; and, weddings of members in the group. I have been with some of you at your children's birth. I have stood vigil at the bedside of our ailing members and I wept at your sadness for lost friends and family members. I have seen you lose and gain employment. I have witnessed the harshness of divorce. I have listened to your countless stories of inspiration and, your stories of complaining.

Yes, we have most definitely cross-matched our life experience with yours and most certainly we can say there was indeed growth – there was more positive than negative, there was more joy than grief, there was more truth than falseness.

In our years together I have witnessed you stumble over one another only to find your way back to your mission purpose. The hard feelings were certainly a part of your growth, yes, but just as biological family members do, you have expressed yourselves fully. You have both criticized and have been criticized. You have ridiculed and have been ridiculed. You have skimmed the tops of falsehood on certain matters and, even then, that had not withered the foundation of your dedication.

My experience with you has shown me that even in the midst of such diversity, or hurt feelings, or misconceptions, can you maintain an unshakable dedication to our Father and Michael's overall Correcting Time Mission. I have gone away many a night from your group with such a humorous energy that had sustained me for many hours. I also have witnessed one member, time after time, ministering to another. I have seen how you look into one another's eyes and care so deeply – and for that, I am deeply touched.

I am inspired by the strength of the human spirit. I am always, each week, made to learn, or laugh, or cry, and always I am each week more dedicated than the last. I should always count myself blessed to have involvement in your lives – both here and in the worlds to come.

Our lesson formats have changed over these years to accommodate the group mind. We have made adjustments according to your experiences and the desires of what topics you want to learn. I should always take note of the group's direction and adjust my lessons accordingly as I am instructed by my superiors. What began as seemingly phenomenal should now appear to be casual, uneventful, plain and ordinary, for we are moving Urantia into a new age. I hope that I can aid you in expanding your vision and getting past the small things of today towards a new and better tomorrow.

An announcement: I am at last granted permission to speak more on morontial realities and how they affect your mortal lives. For Urantia to move into a better age, we are to plant the seeds of morontial possibilities. This will be the focus of our upcoming series, yes. I would take only a few questions.

RACHEL: I would just like to say, Father Abraham, we are the ones that are truly blessed by having you with us.

ABRAHAM: I thank you, Rachel, and I appreciate every individual who had enough faith to push this Mission forward. You know whereof I speak, yes. Another question?

RACHEL: Were there quite a few of you that were there with us eight years ago--that first night--beside you and Father Ham?

ABRAHAM: Absolutely. A great number of beings were in attendance, yes. For you see, this was new also for many of us – even though this type of communication does occur also on other worlds, even on the other worlds which have also experienced rebellion. Yes, the beings who were involved that day were many of the Teachers you now know, and many who were being trained. As well, there were the many who were assisting us in our technique. Also present were Power Directors who had helped us with the actual correspondence/transmitting, yes. Another question?

TECTRA: Abraham, I carry a question from Willeena. Are you familiar with her acquaintance, Virginia? (Abraham: I am not.) Tectra: Is there some way you could access someone who knows of this woman? Willeena has a question about her. I guess I will just ask my question for her. This woman has gone through a very difficult life; very much emotional, physical, mental abuse in her life. Willeena is wondering if it's good to pursue trying to help this woman get into a better situation in her life. She is wondering if this woman is just a 'lost soul?' Will she ever be able to be helped? Willeena is wondering if she should keep trying to help her? or just kind of let her go? Is she even a being that can be helped, I guess is her question?

ABRAHAM: I have a question for Willeena: Does this woman appear to help herself? Does she put forth the effort to aid in her own well-being? One who cannot participate in their own wellness finds difficulty in accepting help from others. Willeena can only help to a certain point, and then must release her into Father's care. You see, all is not lost even if this woman cannot find understanding and comfort in this life. Beyond the life of the mortal body there are again answers and solutions, comfort and deep and abiding love, yes. One more question.

CALVIN: Abraham, Tom S., in California has asked me a couple of times if I would check to see if there are any words from you for him. He feels sometimes quite led and sometimes quite overwhelmed and confused.

ABRAHAM: From what I can understand, his experience is no different than anyone else's. We all feel confident in our spiritual leadings at times, yes. And, there is a point where those spiritual lessons Father requires of us become more difficult and does cause feelings of inadequacy or confusion. The lessons will always become bigger and more difficult, yes, rather than complacency; this exercises those spiritual muscles and keeps one reaching heavenward. One who is 'confident' in all their spiritual steps – is one who has become stopped; becomes complacent at that particular learning level; they begin to lose their footing and then to slip, only to have to face Father and again ask for guidance. This is not a life where things are carved in stone, no, but a life where the lessons are living and growing and moving, yes. That is all. (Calvin: Thank you.)

Again, I thank you each for accepting me and putting forth your best efforts to make Urantia a productive part of the universe. Yes. As always, my love is with you. Shalom.

Internal Time, Father's Timing. We Make Lesson-Adjustments According To Your Experiences

[In these series of lessons, the word 'morontial' is used often. Morontial is that state of our existence between the mortal body and that some-day spirit form. When we awaken in our next existence (the 'correction' Mansion Worlds - there are seven transitions of them), we have shed our material bodies and are awakened in a 'morontial form.' Abraham teaches in these lessons that we can now attain morontial realities while in our present mortal (Earth) form.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am once again so happy to be here. I am excited at the clearance for me to speak on morontial topics. A great many changes are occurring throughout the world and they are a mystery to most. The mystery does cause much confusion and anxiety, for the effects of morontial possibilities on Urantia are unheard of and have not been experienced by most.

Had this world continued in a normal evolutionary fashion you would not think these morontial effects to be anything special; they would appear quite naturally as each would experience such a life as an infant on into adulthood.

Yes, many at this time on the planet feel a restlessness. This restlessness is a result of this world's present glimpse into morontial realities. As time progresses, this restlessness will ease somewhat to make way for clarity and understanding of the 'need for' the morontial introductions. I am saying, many close to the spirit and divine realities have a tremendous yearning to bypass mortal experience in favor of the new and exciting taste of morontial realities.

To bring Urantia into a new and better age we are to teach a little of new and updated spiritual progression, yes. Understand that this progression comes not quickly though, but steadily and surely - with time and experience. Patience is of the utmost importance, yes, that we might avoid, as much as possible, mortal misunderstanding - which promotes fanaticism and instability.

Our first lesson on the morontial realities will focus on time - time conception. Your fellow pilgrims who have ventured the morontial worlds have learned to re-train their perception of time. At this point in their spiritual journey (the morontial worlds) there is comfort and confidence in knowing that time is not a factor in one's universe career. As has been approved, it is at this time (now in the mortal life) when we endeavor to introduce you to an internal clock-thinking, which is different than the mortal clock-thinking.

There are phases in mortal living that complete your levels of growth. There is a time when the infant knows he is well finished being a baby. There is a time where the adult understands the years of youth are done. These are fairly simple concepts that all would understand. This evening I speak of time concepts that you will begin to understand even while in the mortal life, regardless of your material methods and patterns.

As you begin to create a close connection with your Father, you are then on His time. Universal time appears to be 'forever' for you now, yes; and yet, as I have experienced, Father's time takes into consideration the universe. Upon the universe's well-being, worlds of time and space are included into His calculation. The Supreme Being's growth is also interwoven into the pattern of the overall evolution.

Father's abilities to calculate and master time are unmatched; and therefore, it is my responsibility to align my will with His. When our Master had labored day-in and day-out in the carpenters' shop, He had not questioned His Father's ability to calculate when His hour would arrive, no! He continued to go about His duties until He should understand when Father would call Him to go forth to labor for the Kingdom of Heaven, yes.

I mentioned earlier of the importance of 'patience.' We can all view a fine example of patience, on the Master's part; He had trusted Father's abilities to know the precise moment when His hour would come; His closeness to Father had put Him into an internal time clock, yes. Jesus' internal Adjuster had enabled Him to go about the Father's business in a timely fashion which would be an overall benefit to everyone. He felt not the restlessness that His apostles had felt (maybe that which you feel now).

There are desires you wish to fulfill, and this is known by Father; and certainly He can calculate your desires into the benefit of all. As you begin to set aside man's concepts of time and gain closeness with Father, the internal clock will activate. Like the Master, you will also understand when Father assigns you a task or a calling. You can indeed allow your anxiety to go from you with full trust in Father's ability to direct you. Your sense of time will be unseen with the material eyes. It will be more 'internally' felt.

The 'stress and anxiety' which time brings is certainly a detriment to mortal living. Your continued stillness practice, prayer time, and request for Father to go before you, should ease your anxiety. You can be assured that time will become unimportant to you and your confidence in your inner knowing to go forth on certain tasks will increase. I would answer a few questions.

CALVIN: Abraham, regarding 'time' and this lesson, I will probably get a little more grasp on it when I read it back and reflect on it. I have noticed lately the timing of things becoming more in alignment; it's like how could I have timed that any better if I had tried. The more I relax, the more timely things do happen. I get there on time or line up with a certain party I am supposed to meet and so on. Is this what you are talking about or is it a deeper meaning?

ABRAHAM: Absolutely. I am speaking of just that. Father has His networking of Adjusters and numerous spiritual beings in coordination to bring forth lasting results. He incorporates the overall good with as many individuals as needed that can participate. You are correct, and also are you listening to your internal guide, even if this appears to be accidental or by coincidence, yes.

CALVIN: Would that also include the relaxing about 'when' to do things? Somebody wants something done and it doesn't seem like 'right now' or that we should immediately go tell somebody something - but just relaxing and allowing Father's alignment of things to open up for the when and where?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. The open doors will appear, yes, and anxiety would not affect the speed of things to happen - you are correct. When you can be within the will of Father, is when His internal time will take over. You can find peace and confidence knowing you are carefully watched over and are participating in the wellness of the whole – and, to the growth of the universe and the Supreme Being. Yes. Good question. (Calvin: Thank you.) Abraham: Another question?

RACHEL: Well, Father Abraham, I want to thank you for the beautiful outline that you gave to us last week on our eighth anniversary. I appreciate it very much. There is one part that I would have liked for you to expand a little on, and that is the growth of our Mission. Is it possible for you to tell us approximately how many groups there are at this time on Urantia that are transmitting these morontial lessons?

ABRAHAM: The actual number would be practically impossible for me to tell because the number of people transmitting our messages throughout the planet are in many groups. I am saying, not just the Urantian community but various denominations; and, different groups of even closed-off individuals – those not affiliated with any spiritual foundation. 'Transmitting' (the receiving of our messages) is not always known by these individuals for it is not even called as 'transmitted' or 'channeled' messages – but more-so defined as 'being moved by the Spirit.' I would say, transmission-receiving is yet another morontial reality, and one which you have already experienced, yes. Is this answering? (Rachel: Yes, it is. Thank you.) Abraham: I would receive one more question.

ANESIA: I have a question. A couple weeks ago I brought a friend, Robert. I was talking to him about his experience here and he was telling me how he didn't feel like it was real. He was telling me how he was able to feel Spirit really well and that he is really connected with the universe and spiritual beings, and I believe that because I see that a lot in him. He told me that he didn't feel anything coming from you, and so I am just curious of what that situation means. I have a different opinion than he, of course, but I am just curious. Do you understand what I am asking?

ABRAHAM: Understood, yes. This is common and should not be worried for. Your friend has indeed his divine realities that he finds comfort in. This form of communication is unusual, and perhaps his background in religion leads him to believe this may be an open door to other possibilities that are not encompassing good. He is indeed spiritual, and he will traverse many paths before he feels he can call some one place a spiritual home. I had already been familiar with his concept before he attended and I indeed still attempted to instill that within him – that he has his inner truth; and yes, that he can trust it. Is this explaining? (Anesia: Yes. I was just curious because I learn a lot from him; he really helps me out. Thank you.) Abraham: You are certainly welcome. Know that you can find spiritual 'advice' just about anywhere, but you have within you your own internal Guide which allows you to receive truth from wherever that may be. You are indeed a well-dedicated child. Yes.

This concludes our lesson time. I am to remind you to spend time in things spiritual and promote that closeness with Father in order to activate your 'internal time clock' for the purpose of participating for the overall wellness of the planet, and the reduction of anxiety. Yes. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Erasing the Lines of Time and Space Through Stillness | We Can Live With Morontial Realities, Now

Abraham teaches in these lessons that we can now attain morontial realities while in our present mortal (Earth) form.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, and welcome. I am always intrigued by your ideas and enthusiasm to search for truth. I am perceiving you are understanding our lesson on 'Father's time.' It would interest you to know the various available morontia associates that are here now on Urantia to aid in this upliftment of morontial thinking. As we travel through this course, know that there are individual directors and associates that can aid you in your understanding of the new senses, yes.

As you learn to become more aligned with Father's will are you in His time; your faith is certainly strengthened by awaiting His orders. Your anxiety is reduced knowing Father has your eternal career under careful watch. As you recognize this, your internal time begins to become more familiar, and you can almost actually manipulate time; you have an overall understanding as to the questions of "Why is my life moving in this direction, or that?"

Your internal Father also works with those morontial helpers to calculate the best path for you to find Him on. How wonderful it is to venture towards those morontial possibilities where you can exclaim: "Father, allow me to allow you to make me more than I am." Yes.

In your discoveries of the internal timeclock do you also discover that space falls within this category and interconnects with time. Space to you now, in the present mortal life, is before your eyes as something only scientists speak of. In time, you will also receive understanding as to the definition of 'universal space' - space in an inward sense.

During times of stillness, the lines of your surroundings become erased. A good stillness practice reveals there are not borders between you and the unseen worlds; there are not borders between you and other spiritual beings; there are not limitations to the divine love to be gained. Stillness practice broadens your concept of space to allow you literal and tangible feelings of real closeness with Father and all He has to offer. As you study these morontial possibilities, time and space are the beginning lessons; but without them, we could not move on to further understanding of other realities, yes.

During the Master's life, His most memorable events on Urantia were possible - due to His broadened vision of feeling at one with Father and His divine possibilities. Jesus' adventures into the hills of Galilee to gain quiet time did more than just give comfort and clarity of mind - it had also erased the limitations that living in a mortal body brings.

As a child we are wide-eyed and expectant of the magic in mortal living. As time goes on, the material realities can get the better of us and our creative imagination, and the world becomes more and more harsh; you find the world your competitor and always with the desire to 'be first,' to go before your fellows. A spiritual awakening does alleviate your desires to 'be first,' yes, but the material limitations still linger if one does not make time for stillness practice.

Stillness practice erases the lines of time and space, allowing Father to direct affairs in the manner He sees fit. The erasing of the lines of time and space allows for more spiritual substance to grace your lives. The Master could move forward with confidence in everything He did – having understood Father's abilities. This understanding came through meditation and through His dedication to living out this mortal life—good or bad.

So again, I ask that you practice stillness. Be prepared for the lines of time and space to be erased to allow for a stronger foundation of faith, and an increase in the belief that the spirit world is at hand. The possibilities are endless. No questions this evening. I am to tend to other matters. I would though, give you my love and ask that you be aware of those morontial associates as they are assisting you. Until next week, shalom.

Morontial Training Is a Slow Divine Correction. It Is Integrating the Divine with the Material

[In these series of lessons, the word 'morontial' is used often. Morontial is that state of our existence between the mortal body and that some day spirit form. Abraham teaches in these lessons that we can now attain morontial realities while in our present mortal (Earth) form.]

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. I always am made to learn when we all gather. I thank you for that. How wonderful it is to have a forum where all viewpoints are welcome – even if they are not all agreed upon, yes. I have had moments during the week to monitor your understanding on receiving morontia insights. I say, you each do well.

In a world where material things are seemingly important, these morontia insights will create quite a disturbance – all good of course. As we practice to erase the lines of time and space do we open ourselves up to divine possibilities which certainly uplift the world, and so on. I would have you be aware – these new morontial understandings will be time-consuming, for these changes are not to be fleeting, but steady and everlasting, yes.

Jesus had such trust and closeness with our Father. His two worlds – the divine and material – became integrated; His mortal being became open and accepting to divine possibilities. He lived out His mortal life in a natural evolutionary manner, as you will; and yet in His short time on Earth He was indeed witness to numerous divine events. The integration of His two worlds was completely natural, as yours will be. Further understanding towards morontia possibilities will make divine possibilities as everyday natural happenings, yes.

As you begin to erase the limitations and borders between your two worlds do you discover closeness with the divine in a natural way. You have been (and will be) slowly prepared; and morontia possibilities will appear as though they have always been here. Of course, as with every new understanding, there can be some discomfort, some dislodging of no longer-needed mental information. To make way for the new we must allow the old to fall away. Old habits and outdated ideas are dying; all things are becoming new.

This is indeed, the time of correction on Urantia. Many mortals can visually see the wrong with society – and yet, this is only a scratching-of-the-surface. There is much correction to be made, yes, and our most effective way to correct will be to reach each individual, personally. Morontia understandings are about correction – allowing the old to fall away without worry or fear that we may need it someday; without worry of what will replace the old; without fear of how you will approach the new.

Erasing the lines of time and space allows you closeness with those on high; and in a manner, it is giving permission for them to correct. The first few Mansion Worlds are about correction, yes, allowing the old to die and fade, making room for the new. Regrets individuals have had in which they have felt soulfully scarred by, will be addressed. Certain correctives will be placed before you to allow you participation in your own correction.

Stillness (or quiet time) is extremely important at this time in order to maintain closeness with Father and His divine helpers. This is put before you in love and for assistance, not in a manner of judgment or to guiltfully coerce you toward things spiritual.

Morontia possibilities are also about freedom – spiritual freedom, personal freedom, freedom to be accepting of the unique individual God had intended you to be. To allow correction is to finally accept that you are loved, carefully guided, and watched over. To feel a divine correction is to be held in Father's palm and gazed upon with such love and understanding that there is not need for self-degradation or a reason to self-loathe. Correction begins with the individual, yes; and certainly, the effects are felt beyond this solar system.

Be not afraid of my words, for this is customary in our morontial teachings. Many of you have already experienced the purging of the old to allow for the new. Look for these corrections with a sense of adventure, and know that you are indeed on your morontia way.

Next week I will speak more specifically on personal correction. For now, I draw this lesson to a close. As always, I will tend to you each during the week. My love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Personal Correction Requires Your Permission

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-29-1999

[In these series of lessons, the word 'morontial' is used often. Morontial is that state of our existence between the mortal body and that some-day spirit form. When we awaken in our next existence (the 'correction' Mansion Worlds – there are seven transitions of them) we have shed our material bodies and are awakened in 'morontial form.' Abraham teaches in these lessons that we can now attain morontial realities while in our present mortal (Earth) form.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings my friends. I am once again pleased to meet with you. Happy are we to be witness to your discussion regarding your morontial discoveries, yes. Each of you are aware that before a healing can begin, a wound must be cleansed. The entire planet at this moment experiences cleansing within the hearts and minds of its people. Michael and the entire Teaching Staff cannot assist in this cleansing or correction without permission.

There are many individuals who have turned away from traditional human ideals and traditions, and are yet afraid to ask for assistance from a higher source. On a smaller scale, individuals are becoming more willing to release the old and are seeking divine assistance for new understandings and adjustments – for time has proven old ideas to be unfruitful. Personal correction comes with allowing the boundaries of time and space to be erased, yes. Jesus had allowed a small town to be witness to a number of divine events – not to make them believe in his cause, but because they already believed. [This link likely refers to the resurrection of Lazarus and other miracles – in Bethany.]

Your foundation of faith improves each time we meet. Of course there are still unanswered questions, but what you have built for yourselves and Michael's cause, remains unshakable. Erasing the lines of time and space (or growing closer to the spirit) strengthens your faith and enlarges your capacity to receiving divine assistance.

Personal correction is a releasing of prejudice or a judgmental attitude. Personal correction is the admission that you do not hold the answers. To allow Father to adjust your thinking is quite a relief, in that you are not burdened with the responsibility of solving the world's problems. To allow this morontial correction is to remove the mortal blindfold of the old and traditional, that you can then be exposed to the higher-mindedness, yes.

You each know well the fruits and poisons of the spirit. I need not go into detail. Know that your correction will be along the lines of:

- Allowing what's closed in the mind, to be opened.
- Allowing those judgment-calls to be Father's burden.
- To readily admit you are at the beginning of eternity and are not qualified to go it alone, yes.

On Mansion Worlds One and Two, new individuals still can wear the mortal veil, closing off that morontial vision. You each understand that some beings are just beyond your mortal vision. In the initial morontial experience – if permission has not been given to allow for correction, there is ongoing prejudice, judgment, and fear. This is indeed, a detriment to morontia vision. Morontia vision is not so much having to do with the material eyes, but perhaps what is seen with the heart and felt by the soul.

The Master was one such individual who had combined his two identities to be able to use this morontia vision for the betterment of the kingdom, and for those tasks his Father assigned Him. Morontial vision is a soul-knowingness that you are interconnected with the Spirit. Connection with the Spirit in each moment allows immediate guidance from on high; and how can this guidance not uplift an individual, let alone a planet, yes.

What appears to be just beyond your material eyes is accessible through your inner morontial knowing. As we speak about these morontial understandings, remain ever available for that correction that will remove personal prejudices or fear. These lessons (corrections) may not accommodate everyone's beliefs or understandings – this I understand. I am permitted, however, to go forth with these morontial lessons knowing you each are ready and equipped to receive, yes.

I would take my leave, but not without speaking a word or two to Alauna expressing our thanks. And I would ask each one to worry not for upcoming changes. All is well looked-after. We appreciate your service, Alauna, and look with excitement and anticipation to the future with you each. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom. [The group had been meeting at the home of Alauna (Honoray's daughter), for several weeks.]

Morontial Vision | Personal Correction | The Transmitting and Receiving Process, Factors One and Two

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-05-1999

Back

[In these series of lessons, the word 'morontial' is used often. Morontial is that state of our existence between the mortal body and that some day spirit form. When we awaken in our next existence (the 'correction' Mansion Worlds – there are seven transitions of them) we have shed our material bodies and are awakened in a 'morontial form.' It is becoming a new reality that we can attain morontial awareness while in our present mortal (Earth) form.]

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. I thank you for coming. We realize the significance of this day and had expected many of you to be engaged in other activities. Today you celebrate the resurrection of Jesus. This day proves to be significant in your learning of morontial realities, yes.

Jesus, having known and understood what it was to choose to be within his Father's will, wholeheartedly desired to drink the cup Father put before him. Jesus had chosen to lose his life for Father's sake; and for Father's sake, he chose to take it up again. Our beloved Jesus! what a beautiful example of a life well lived!

In our choosing to receive personal correction we voluntarily choose to lay down our old life, our old ways; we have agreed to drink the cup; we have chosen Father's will. Our desire for personal correction is a willingness to set aside the old fear-patterns, old habits – we choose to die to the old ways. Children, this is your personal choice; this is in your power – to relinquish the old, just as it is in your power to take up the new.

The Father's cup you choose to drink comes with a variety of different lessons to traverse. At times the cup is bitter and confusing; sometimes accompanied by loneliness or spirit poisons. But as we travail through our morontial lessons we can see the morontial cup proves to bring new life, new beginnings – more difficult lessons, yes, and more mortal labor on your part. As we can see by the set example of the Master's resurrection, Father knows His children and their path, very well.

Personal correction is laying down the old life to pick up another – another level of spiritual learning. Believe me when I say worry not of those lessons to come, for these lessons are within your comprehension. To take notes on your understanding of morontial vision is to understand the inner workings of it. To live and experience this morontial sense is further training on your morontial path.

At times you can wonder why you comprehend things your fellows do not – this is indeed exercising morontial vision, a perceiving with the higher mind that is within you.

I can confirm your beliefs that these morontial senses can be felt physically. The mechanisms within the human brain are electrically connected to the universal circuits that allows your morontial training. As evolution changes material life, these morontial connections become more natural and heartily noticed. Continue to study your understanding of morontial vision and personal correction.

I have again been instructed to move to the next phase of our lesson, the transmitting and receiving process. This method of communication has been likened to a vehicle spinning out of control wherein the driver can react in a frantic fashion, losing control – or, to maintain a calm, turning inward, to not lose control. Some who engage in this transmission-receiving, attempt to correct this spinning by imposing their own thoughts; others attempt to turn inward toward the direction of the transmitting momentum.

I can impart to you my understanding on this communication process – but certainly, my understanding is not quite complete. Individuals receive messages through various ways whether it is through sound, thought, or a perceiving with the morontia vision. There are a few factors that I can help you with to gain more accuracy.

The first factor is the act of releasing personal desires. You already understand how personal desires color transmissions. We can go back to the act of the laying down of one's life, the act of 'desiring not to desire' and the commitment to 'drink the cup' to be within Father's will. Should Father have a message for me, so be it; and if not, so be it! Yes.

Factor two: The transmission process is practically useless if one is seeking attention or popularity. A desire for self-glory or fame is a direct disconnection from the spirit; this is completely understood by Father, of course, and a part of the mortal experience, yes; but nonetheless a disconnection. Many who pick up the transmitting process have usually done so through the exercises in humility. To be small is an invitation to accuracy. A good transmission-receiver detests any praise or credit from listeners. A well-balanced transmission-receiver understands that the wisdom spoken is not their own.

I will choose to stop here. I would resume our lesson on the transmitting and receiving process next week. We seem to be very much business oriented as of late. I do mean to say that even though we are busy with these lessons I still enjoy your company very much. I count you each to be among my friends. Your personalities are unique, and your friendship is quite valuable to me. I would express my deep affection and will work with you, each one, on our latest morontia senses topic during the week. Until next week, shalom.

Continuing With Factors Three, Four, and Five On Transmission-Receiving

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-12-1999

[This lesson is a continuum of last week's lesson - factors one and two on 'how to gain more accuracy in the transmission-receiving process.']

I am ABRAHAM. Be at ease my children. Worry not. Your unshakable faith and firm dedication lead you forward. I can assure you that my mission has always been to help you communicate with your own indwelling Father. Be not offended because someone has brought your inner-knowingness out in front of your face. Give gratitude to Father, for His watchcare over you has been well planned out. This live example this evening takes us into our lesson.

We seek to teach you this transmission-receiving process to allow you access to internal divine truths. When there is not trust in your own inner-knowingness you tend to rely upon the words of others - you search and still you thirst; you consume information and yet you still hunger.

Factor three teaches us that the transmission-receiving process is for our own personal growth towards our divine Father. To understand this morontia sense activates the internal compass to search within - to measure what you believe 'spiritually' with what you know 'logically.'

All mortals utilizing the transmission-receiving process certainly must weigh your messages with your intelligence. Father is intelligence; He would not ask that you sacrifice anything for His divine favor. Know that Father would not bid you to engage in illogical risks while leading you on the path of your eternal career, no.

We will make errors in the transmission process, no doubt. Father and Mother have granted you intelligence that may be used to filter your messages through. You (most of the time) cannot completely count on your fellows to loan you their intellectual knowledge of your divine messages. You have been granted the gift of mind, and we on the Teaching Staff full well expect you to utilize it, yes.

Factor four is almost humorous in a way wherein we have been practicing to erase the lines of time and space. Factor four deals with allowing time to see the fruits produced from your transmissions, yes; and know that those transmissions which give you comfort or wisdom are useful and producing values.

It is easy at times to push aside a transmitted message believing this message to have been 'your own thoughts.' I say, time can help you discern if these messages hold value or not. The purpose of learning to use this method of communication is to become acquainted with Father's still small voice within. As you practice and use your morontial vision, you can see within your message if Father has indeed spoken.

Factor five is simply taught to reduce the mysticism of transmission-receiving. On the Mansion Worlds this process is thought of as natural, but at this time in the mortal life, mysticism runs rampant. Perhaps at first some are amazed by it (mysticism), but later they learn that this process is not practical. Many look for 'signs' - things that their mortal eyes cannot see, in hopes that can lend them faith. Some believe that mysticism brings signs which promote faith. This mysticism brings only temporary satisfaction, for when the real truths come to the forefront do you find the mysticism to be unfulfilling and fleeting.

In summation of these five factors: Solid transmission-receiving brings with it lessons that may be used in everyday living. It is not showing the world: "Look what I am gifted at." It is not saying "I hold the answers, come to me," no. The transmission-receiving process is personal, is communion with those who are on high. (Pause ... TR: I think that's all.)

Yes, I am stopping. I would say to each of you - your faith brings me each week; your kindness leads me to adore you; your dedication energizes me to keep on moving towards Michael's goal. Yes. Thank you. As always, my love is with you. Shalom.

Desire Not To Desire During the Transmission-Receiving Process

I am Abraham. Greetings, my friends. What a beautiful night in which to gather and partake of universal truths. How excellent it is when we view the brotherhood working so naturally! Well done. Your faith and desire bring me each week. Your friendship brings me comfort.

I am altogether thankful for my mission assignment. Yes, my friends, you have received these lessons per your requests; you have demanded certain truths that have shaped our lesson format; you have experienced the full spectrum of the transmission and receiving process - your conclusions were clear, your desire apparent.

So it goes, with your personal transmitting and receiving, a divine message finds you how you are desiring it. Your intentions shape your message. If you desire to be showered with praise and compliments, this will color your transmission. If you desire to be in the mysticism of divine realities, then this also tampers with the accuracy of transmitting and receiving of our words. We are not allowed, in any manner or form, to interrupt your freewill thinking. We are not to persuade or have you conform to our teachings. If you have intentions to receive certain messages, then we can only abide by that intention.

Your accuracy in transmission-receiving depends on what is acceptable to you: Are those temporary moments of mystical assurances acceptable over lasting eternal truths? Is praise and constant reassurance that, 'you matter,' acceptable over sincerely believing you are a divine child who is Paradise-bound? Is self-aggrandizement or popularity acceptable over serving the whole? I ask, what is acceptable to you regarding this method of communication? As a group, your intentions are known and you have received these lessons accordingly.

As particular spiritual beings are just beyond your vision, so are these divine words sometimes not recognized for the form they are in. The 'small still voice within' requires time to recognize, yes; and chances are it is quite recognizable now with your new developing morontial vision – and yet, too simple to actually believe 'that could be it.' Your most pure transmitted messages will come without much emotion or hesitation; they will be quite practical, and are to be acted upon with natural impulse. Yes, transmitted messages are to be thought of as un-extraordinary and completely a natural part of your daily routine.

It would serve you well to 'desire not to desire' when attempting to receive a transmission.

This week I ask that you make time to journal and practice 'desiring not to desire.' Release your expectations. I should make my presence known to each of you during these practice sessions, yes. A few questions?

INERA: Abraham, speaking of the mystical: Sometimes I wait for the candles to go on before I journal, or when I think there is a message. I am feeling of late that this is in error, and that perhaps I should maybe put the candles away in a drawer?

ABRAHAM: This is completely your choice. We can see no harm in them other than it may distract you for a time. This is not to worry. Completely your choice. Another question?

HARRISON: Abraham, I have a set of candles and they have never come on. Should I just go ahead and use them as lights around the house and not worry about getting any kind of message through them? Am I doing okay in receiving messages? I am not sure.

ABRAHAM: I am understanding. You receive messages adequately. There are moments in your enthusiasm and excitement that may keep you coloring the messages slightly, but this is quite natural. With practice, this is easy to overcome. Desire not to desire to see results. You do well to dedicate each day to the doing of Father's will. Yes. Another question?

RACHEL: If my candle ever came on I would really think something was wrong. It never has. [group laughter.]

ABRAHAM: These props are unnecessary and yet, harmless. As long as you view them as entertainment and not connected so much into the divine realities, yes.

MIRIAM: Abraham, these lessons are wonderful, and I am not surprised that you say that you always coordinate them with our daily living. Here is my question: When we 'receive' those things that are Teacher-given, I seem to go forward to experience these teachings through the rest of the day; it is like someone will say a couple words, or something happens that seems so like a validation, if you will - a confirmation. I am wondering if that process involves the Thought Adjuster? or if that is a Teacher-given experience from a transmission? With that said, I hadn't heard from my friend/Teacher Manfred for a while, but recently he seems to have returned.

ABRAHAM: Understood. The Teachers, as is the Father Fragment that guides you, are understanding of your techniques in which you can grasp ideas. You do particularly well to receive lessons in analogies, or in ways that will produce visuals. You are utilizing more than one morontia sense when receiving in this manner. You visualize not only through thought, but also in your 'mind's eye' which is a more complete understanding. It is as if your transmission process was in stereo where - what one morontia sense, misses, the other can receive. Material beings do well with parables and analogies that are visual. This is completely natural for the transmitting process. Yes, Manfred has recently returned. He does aid you in your understanding on the transmission process, yes, but also does he help you to shake off the mud in your wings.

With that, I should take my leave. I am always grateful to meet with you each. I know your love for the truth, for we are similar in that way. I appreciate each one's unique being. I feel I have done an adequate job to convey to you of your mortal uniqueness, yes; but more-so I feel confident in conveying your uniqueness as a spiritual being. I am, as always, leaving you with my love. Until next week, shalom.

Our Morontia Sense of Inner-Knowing | The Master Utilized it | Light and Life Worlds Utilize it

[In these series of lessons the word 'morontial' is used often. Morontial is that state of our existence between the mortal body and that some day spirit form. When we awaken in our next existence (the 'correction' Mansion Worlds-there are seven transitions of them) we have shed our material bodies and are awakened in a "morontial form." Abraham teaches in these lessons that we can now attain morontial realities while in our present mortal (Earth) form.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am again glad to be included in your group learning. It is touching to see how you care about one another and the whole of the planet. It is most definitely true that the actions taken today certainly affect the tomorrows. Yes, the world is becoming more aware, and yet the darkness is still a reality within the hearts of men.

As I visited with you each this week I was made aware of your intentions and how you most readily pick up transmitting. Your styles are each unique, and we are equipped to accommodate. Your intentions are beautiful to behold, yes. We all seek Father's will and easily admit we struggle with the alignment of our will to His, yes.

We will move our lessons into understanding more on 'the art of inner-knowing.' We will attempt to help you use your inner-knowing to be of service.

On worlds settled in Light and Life the circuits are free from interruption. The society is accustomed to being sensitive to things that may prove to be helpful in mortal living. The citizens that dwell on such a wonderful sphere are indeed quite pure in heart and logical of mind; they see no other option laid out before them other than to choose the will of God; to trust and live; to move and have their being in the overcare of their Creators, is only logical to them.

With these citizens having such great faith and reliance upon Father, their soul circuitry is easily connected with that of the cosmos. Such cosmic connection allows them the morontia sense of inner-knowing; this inner-knowing can include:

- Foreseeing certain outcomes to situations.
- Understanding un-verbalized thought from their fellows.
- Communication with others by thought.
- Immediate and intelligent 'decision-making according to Father's will.'

I cannot say you will easily acquire this sense [inner-knowing], but most definitely are you candidates for it. To remember our discussions regarding the citizens who are dwelling on worlds settled in Light and Life, is of benefit to you wherein they are examples in which to live by.

The Master, after reaching a certain level of intellectual and spiritual development, could utilize this morontia gift without effort, yes. The Master could use His inner-knowing to aid His fellows; He could use this sense to know certain outcomes of events; He could find deep understanding for His fellows' thoughts and actions; He could sense danger; He could sense the desires of His fellows; He could provide advice to those who sought it but were somewhat shy in the asking.

This 'inner-knowing' sense will be perhaps too great in concept; and therefore, we shall take time to absorb the meaning. We are not under any pressure to learn this particular lesson, so please be at ease. I say, enjoy this gift -for it is again new here on Urantia. Know that the concepts of inner-knowing are to be viewed as completely natural. Be not surprised, my friends, for you do already participate in the utilization of this particular morontia sense, yes.

I am stopping here. I would ask that you take a short time for discussion on this particular lesson, yes. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Jesus Knew His Fellows On a Soul Level | He Did Not Dislike a Single Soul

Abraham teaches in these lessons that we can now attain morontial realities while in our present mortal (Earth) form.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am intrigued by your discussions and am further provoked to ponder upon these topics, yes. As we watch you, we are touched by your sincere devotion and willingness to seek the truth, yes. I can view you with my inner-knowingness and feel these feelings you also feel. I can obtain from you a compacted history of your background -- why you believe the way you do and what conditions have shaped your pattern of thought.

In understanding you I can better communicate with you. I seek not to change your mind or beliefs. I only attempt to add on to your understanding or pitch a few new ideas. Viewing you with my inner-knowing, I know that you each carry with you personal disappointments or regrets that would chance to shape your understanding.

I can generally assume that just about everyone I meet has endured hardships that would make them cautious; they are perhaps cautious in their communication where they only offer very little information. Individuals can be in self-protection mode where they speak from painful experience and do not want to repeat and bear the same pain.

In the many encounters you face every day in communication efforts with your fellows, be aware they are likewise attempting to communicate with you, and their words are not always adequate or complete. Like you, these fellows are perhaps trying to put across an idea without actually leaving themselves vulnerable to any possible ridicule. Yes, you are learning this technique wherein you can receive thought-feelings from individuals that would aid in your ministry to them; you must also be a willing listener and try to comprehend what they are really saying.

The Master--using His inner-knowingness to understand His fellows--would ask them questions to turn them inward so as to bring to surface their real feelings. The Master was indeed tactful in His dealings and yet, he pressed for the truth. His sincerity was unmatched when He would look His fellows in the face and, with understanding and kindness, inquire of their true feelings and ask: "How can I help?"

You may likewise converse with individuals on a higher level with this morontial technique - you can have very little words and yet have great understanding between one another. The Master was noted for His understanding of His fellows, and knew of their background and circumstances that made them who they are. He did not dislike a single soul. He could only have understanding and love for those He met, for He knew His fellows on a soul level. I say, my friends, this is also yours to learn. A complete understanding of one another - with a mindset that you activate during meditation - would make for a bright and beautiful age of peace; it is quite possible, yes.

When conversing with one another, know that being relaxed and open does assist in the morontial sense of inner-knowing. With such understanding of one another on this planet there is not room for unrest or such fear; there is not self-protection and cause to be offended. Rather, there is just a knowing and an understanding - that each individual comes with a block of history that shapes their opinions, mannerisms, and thought patterns.

This week in your journaling, attempt to communicate with individuals using your stillness mind. Feel that connection to the circuits as well as the individual you communicate with. Listen - really listen! and know that behind the words there are great volumes of unsaid understandings. Someone you may conflict with - you can gain personal divine information on how to go about dealing with them.

An aware mind (one connected with the circuits) opens possibilities that are unknown to you at this time. You will view the great benefits which this morontial sense brings. That is all. My love is always with you. Look for me throughout the week. Until next week, shalom.

Sensing Life Circumstances | Trust in the Almighty Father and His Inner Knowing Provision

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-10-1999

[In these series of lessons, the word 'morontial' is used often. Morontial is that state of our existence between the mortal body and that some day spirit form. When we awaken in our next existence (the 'correction' Mansion Worlds – there are seven transitions of them) we have shed our material bodies and are awakened in a 'morontial form.' Abraham teaches in these lessons that we can now attain morontial realities while in our present mortal (Earth) form.]

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. I am looking to rearrange my lesson for this evening. Your inner-knowingness and connection with the circuits have already revealed this evening's lesson. Yes, what a beautiful example you have demonstrated. Your willingness to 'serve' and 'be served,' is wonderful. Yes, well done.

There are many facets to our lesson using the morontial technique of inner-knowing, yes; this is Adjuster-related, my friends. The Father Fragment is in concert with the circuits and material brain energy centers. The Adjuster can be called the Coordinator, yes. The practice of inner-knowing with your fellows is greatly helped by Adjuster to Adjuster communication. This transfer of information between Adjusters is aiding in your understanding of one another's histories, mannerisms, and thought patterns, yes.

As the world becomes more accustomed to the use of the circuits will we be witness to, or involved in, some turmoil. The newness of the morontia senses on Urantia can be confusing at first. But not to worry, for inside each Urantian there is memory stored of these morontial senses of what should have been. You are correct when you speak of trust in Father to guide you without fail into this renewed awareness. Your trust and relaxation aids in the utilization of these morontia senses.

We continue our course on inner-knowing and being sensitive to certain factors that may help us to avoid danger or default. There are many masquerading individuals who would perhaps chance to benefit from their fellows, financially or in other ways, by the use of their so-called psychic powers, the so-called ESP, and etc. How sad it is to trust and believe in advice that is expensive and faulty. It is somewhat of an annoyance to us when individuals, for whatever reason, cannot trust their own inner-guidance or inner-knowing abilities. It behooves us to witness these individuals being taken advantage of when the answers lie within their very being.

There is an excellent celestial watchcare provided for each of Father's children; and yet, free will can at times, interfere. Mistrust of the divine plan can interfere. It is becoming apparent to many individuals, however, that they have knowingness about certain things but do not know the origin from which this knowingness stems. They at times term it 'good and bad luck;' or 'close calls;' or a 'divine smile (or frown) from the heavens.'

I say to you, my friends, you are well equipped to foresee certain events that play in the scheme of the world's destiny, your destiny, your fellow's destiny. This is not a phenomenon or extraordinary, no; this was meant to be yours all along. The Master played His earthly role with such magnificence using His inner-knowingness. He knew when to flee and when to allow the kiss that betrayed Him. His trust in His almighty Father allowed Him the peace of knowing all is well and carefully watched over.

The Master's serious struggles came from His mortal side, in His attuning His will to Father's. His times of despair originated from His material understanding – His mortal half; and yes, this is to be expected. His times of facing pain or danger were, to Him, a challenge of triumph to the divine side – times when He could view these challenges with trust that Father did indeed know the outcome. This was a bitter cup to drink, yes, but nonetheless, triumphant.

The Master could bravely face the certain tragedies because His inner-knowingness had allowed Him ease, knowing the outcome in advance in certain situations. You may have experience where you say: "I knew this would happen," or, "I had a feeling that would happen." It is as simple as that! and a benefit to you, creating ease and calmness, to be able to receive divine information on how to handle certain situations.

This week, I ask that you be aware of your inner-knowingness concerning sensing life circumstances. Using the stillness mind, you can coordinate Father's release of information, yes, with those actions you may take to deal with them. I shall be on hand to assist.

My friends, you have at your fingertips the knowledge of the universes. Be not overwhelmed by that, but humbled and trusting in our almighty Father. Yes. No questions this evening. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Bring the Stillness Mind Into Daily-Living Situations

Abraham teaches in these lessons that we can now attain morontial realities while in our present mortal (Earth) form.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I look forward to each weekly meeting with you. I meet with you throughout the week and I have seen you each with various emotions – comfort and discomfort, happiness and despair, anger and peace. I can view you with my inner-knowingness and be sensitive to your feelings.

In reading your feelings and mindsets I am able to minister to you in a way so as to not disrupt any balance. I am feeling varying emotions at this moment. I have learned to serve you, my friends, with words that create peace, or are overcoming negative with positive. This is the topic of our next lesson concerning inner-knowingness using the stillness mind.

One of the gifts that citizens on worlds settled in Light and Life use is the ability to understand thoughts transferred. When you meet with your fellow who has seemingly had a stressful day, you do not put upon him more demands, no. Using the stillness mind, you can receive incoming thought from your fellows. You cannot steal or invade thoughts, no, only those thoughts that are sent forth from them.

You are aware of the power your thoughts have. You have seen proof of how thoughts generate good or evil, yes. In learning new morontia senses there will be some confusion – and yet I can say, in time the world around you will transform before your eyes, yes.

The Master, using His God-given senses, understood the depths of man. He could read thoughts from His fellows with His divine mind, obtaining information on how He could either minister to them or partake of their joy. Yes, He could indeed overcome much hate with love, evil with good, negative with positive. Jesus' ministry was always 'on the go' and 'as He passed by.' He could meet with a worried parent who had an ailing child – and look into their face, calm His mind, and understand their thoughts and questions. In the stilling of His mind, He then knew how to approach this parent with words of comfort, yes.

The receiving of your fellows' thoughts is not game-playing or parlor tricks, no. Any misuse of the morontial senses ends in disconnection. This disconnection is not serious, no, but a common law of the universe. Practice is needed – yes, certainly! but there are tactful ways in which we can use this morontial sense in ministering to our fellows.

You cannot suddenly approach your friend and say: 'I perceive you are feeling this way or that, let me assist you,' no. However, you can ask them questions and make eye contact; announce to them your availability to be there for them – and then, to really listen. You can perhaps receive their thoughts; and in your stillness mind immediately know the correct words to say without creating much fanfare.

You have been assigned to practice the stillness lo these many years, and now we bring our stillness mind into daily living situations. A stillness mindset is direct connection with the Father Fragment and universe circuits. You need only to find the courage to trust in our Father and be willing to practice. You will see improvement with practice, yes; and do not wonder why your fellows seek you out.

Therefore this week, practice thought receiving from your family and fellows; and in the stillness mindset, know that your ministering words are there for them, yes. Next week I should speak more on this, and also the art of thought sending. Yes, all of life and living is part of your morontial training. I am, as always, finding myself with greater love from you than I could possibly give. I thank you. Until next week, shalom.

Thought Sending | A Force For God-Fragment Connection

When we awaken in our next existence (the 'correction' Mansion Worlds – there are seven transitions of them) we have shed our material bodies and are awakened in a 'morontial form.' Abraham teaches in these lessons that we can now attain morontial realities while in our present mortal (Earth) form.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, and thank you for coming. I am always interested in your many viewpoints. You provide varying dimensions to my way of thinking, yes. I can know, using my morontial senses, that your intentions are well and good, yes. The ability to understand thoughts from our fellows leads us into many areas of understanding our fellow mortals, ourselves, and our environment.

You each are familiar with having certain feelings about individuals that have either made you feel comfort or discomfort. You have experienced feelings of the need to use caution around certain individuals; you can know the levels of safety or their intentions, all by using your morontial senses.

The Master could always be prepared with a plan to use His ministry for His fellows. He could know when His words were of use, and when they were not. He could sense innocence in some, and betrayal in others. He lived His mortal life with such efficiency that each moment lived was full and complete.

As we are learning to receive thoughts, it is routine for us to give the lesson also on 'thought-sending,' yes. You are already familiar with the effects your thoughts have on your friends, family, and fellows; you know that your thoughts manifest certain outcomes in your mortal life. Yes, your thoughts can become a living reality to you – and, those you come in contact with.

Just as you can receive thoughts on levels of safety or intentions, you also promote thoughts that allow your fellows to understand you more fully. If you chance to meet with an unpleasant individual, your thoughts turn to caution and promote negativity; your desire is to avoid this individual. Believe me when I say many of your acquaintances indeed know your intentions and have already planned out their defense.

How much more fruitful should you approach an individual with the thoughts: "This person is indeed a child a God with the same rights and privileges I have." "Only Father can find logic in this person's behavior, and I am not equipped to make correction on this individual." Having a positive output of thought generally relaxes the person with whom you are speaking to; their defenses are not set and their minds can also gradually open up.

It is entirely possible to send thoughts to individuals you wish to protect or make them aware. A father who continually warns his child of specific dangers finds his child to hear his admonitions only on a redundant surface level. This is well and good, yes – but to instead, perhaps use your stillness-mind to send some helpful thought; this does connect your God-Fragment with theirs; and the understanding then, is on a soul level. A person without spiritual values can indeed receive your personal thought-blessings and literally become better, or at least more conscious of their wrong-doing.

These morontial senses utilized positively, make it difficult for things false to prevail. Your inner-knowingness makes it difficult to stay closed-off and hidden from the world. Michael's Spirit of Truth is in full force, and these morontial senses are His contact points in which He uses to unify the citizens and teach collectively.

Be aware this week of what your thoughts are manifesting in your lives. Be aware of your thoughts – are they helping? or, are they harming to others. Continue to practice finding the stillness-mind in all your daily activities, yes. This evening I would receive only a few questions.

MIRIAM: Abraham, it is just a thrill to have you in our home. Thank you so much. I'd like to introduce a new visitor this evening, Don, my husband.

ABRAHAM: Yes. I know you, Don. Greetings. Again, have you a question? [Don: No question.]

MIRIAM: Abraham, I'd like to ask you to talk to us a little bit about the soul and its developing in this life. Also, regarding the 'inner-knowingness,' the 'morontial senses,' the 'timelines erasing,' – all of which you've recently taught us. Are we talking about the future, the past, or the present right now? As we remember and connect to this knowingness, is that kind of like a 'growing up' within our soul? Is the 'soul' and 'the morontial sense' – are they two different entities and maturation things. Does that make sense? Do you know what I am asking?

ABRAHAM: I believe I do. The soul that is not inhibited by those spirit poisons is always in a forward momentum and has connections to your material side as well as to the Indwelling Father. I could say, yes, that the soul is grasping (connecting with, understanding) even before what the material mind can grasp. This is contrary to what many believe, yes; and yet, the soul is the seed from which all your personal aspects stem from. The Father is your light and sustenance; and your experience designs how you will grow, yes. The planet is experiencing new things, and there cannot be things hidden from God; nor, from the consciousness of your enlightened fellows. The past, present, and future are visible from a morontial sense; old things are fading away; all things are becoming new. The soul most definitely has a more divine ear than the mortal mind. Your material mind may have rejection for certain things, but the soul – in combination with the Father Fragment – saves things of value, yes. Is this answering?

MIRIAM: This is a complex answer and I am going to have to dwell with this, but you gave me a lot to dwell on. Thank you very much. (Abraham: Understood. Good question. Yes, one more question?)

CALVIN: Abraham, I have read a little bit on this 'Caligastia website' and it is intriguing to me. Not being one to swallow or push away too quickly, I wonder if you have any words to share about this supposed claim of 'Caligastia as being one not gone and out of here,' but as one who is still here, present, and trying to interact with this world.

ABRAHAM: I believe you each already know the answer. Caligastia is no more! and yet, his evil influence does live on. The mortal life is a struggle, yes, and an 'evil force' is an easy explanation as to why mortal living is difficult. Many choose the path of ease and find not reason for their difficulties; they find not reason for the value of experience. I am told the new awareness in our Father and His forces will prove Caligastia's residual influence to be ridiculous and without power. All things are becoming new. And with time, man will find that all power stems from our First Source and Center – God our divine Father, yes. That is all.

MIRIAM: Abraham, I know you said just one more question, but are you still here? (Abraham: Yes, certainly.) Miriam: I'd like to ask, how are you, Abraham? Could you tell us how you have been? Anything that you want to share? Does that seem silly? I would really like to know.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Yes, I thank you for your concern and care. I am, as always, with work and projects to complete. I indeed thrive on my work in being a part of the overall plan. Personally, I have my many friends, which certainly include you each. I find much joy in my contacts. And as always, the highlights of worship continue to energize me. I thank you for asking. Your kindness towards me does make me believe I am a better person for having known you each, yes.

As always, look for me during the week. My love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Assigned Task of Studying Past Morontia Lessons, Perhaps Making History in Mota Retainment

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-31-1999

[In these series of lessons, the word 'morontial' is used often. Morontial is that state of our existence between the mortal body and that some day spirit form. When we awaken in our next existence (the 'correction' Mansion Worlds – there are seven transitions of them) we have shed our material bodies and are awakened in a 'morontial form.' Abraham teaches in these lessons that we can now attain morontial realities while in our present mortal (Earth) form.]

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. It has been a fruitful week. There are great depths to our lessons that we will explore as we discuss and experience, and I can say the last few weeks have been showing forth a spiritual harvest. Yes, each of you are learning to use your newly defined morontia senses. We can understand that at times there is some frustration. However, that does not outweigh our joy when we see the amazement on your faces as you discover how real the spiritual life is, yes.

In our teaching of morontia senses it would not serve you well if we neglect to follow that up with the 'why.' There are meanings and values connected with the use of your morontia senses. Morontia senses aid in your understanding of your place and purpose in the universe, yes.

I have been instructed to assign you with a task of studying the meaning within each of our past morontia lessons. In this series on the morontia senses, each lesson contains within them certain philosophies, meanings, values – which is 'mota'. I would ask also, that during your week you re-read these series of our lessons on the 'morontia senses;' and when we gather next week we can discuss the morontia mota contained in each. Begin with the lesson on 'Erasing the Lines of Time and Space,' yes.

Let us break now for a few minutes. After your discussion I would say a few words. [Break for the group-assignment.]

I am familiar with this exercise for I have been through it myself. I can coordinate the morontia senses with the meanings and apply them to my everyday living, yes. Our mission is not the 'taking in' of information only, no; for our mission is more-so about the practical 'application of' the Master's teachings. The apostles of long ago foretasted this exercise while serving their apostolic mission. Many were challenged and with enthusiasm, yes, and still, some were discouraged. But overall, each were encouraged and with more spiritual wisdom and spiritual maturity, yes.

Enjoy these tasks, for you are making history where you will be among the first to demonstrate if this is practical and helpful in morontial knowledge retainment, yes. That is all. I will, as always, be available for conference during the week. Enjoy your new tasks. My love is always with you. Until next week, shalom.

Use The Stillness-Mind | Discuss Morontia Mota Gained From Morontia Lesson

When we awaken in our next existence (the 'correction' Mansion Worlds - there are seven transitions of them) we have shed our material bodies and are awakened in a 'morontial form.' Abraham teaches in these lessons that we can now attain morontial realities while in our present mortal (Earth) form.]

[Loud crackling quick thunder.] I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, and worry not; we have made transmissions through more disturbance than this. [group laughter.] All is well.

You are grasping this assignment task, to a point, yes. For individuals who are learning to erase the lines of time and space, you are surely traveling too fast. [group laughter.] We are not pressed for time. If you overlook specific meanings in the lessons, then half our understanding is thrown by the wayside. Morontial mota is learned by individuals, differently. Where you are in your spiritual level is the measure in which you understand the underlying meanings that affect your lives, here and beyond, yes.

You were correct to point out the meanings for each one of you and to express your feelings on it. How does the philosophic meanings in the lessons on 'Erasing the Lines of Time and Space' relate to your daily living experiences? Which meanings stand the true test of time? What meanings can you set within your faith foundation?

For me, 'erasing the lines of time and space' meant I was not a man with a mistaken past, or a father who neglected his priorities, or a husband who stumbled through life thoughtlessly, no - but I was first and foremost a loved child of God. I can see that the past was almost meaningless, and any value was safely stored with my adoring Father Adjuster, yes.

As I learned this concept of being boundless by time and space, I could more accurately view the universal meanings and values. I could easily upstep my spiritual education. My anxiety to progress, eased to a confident inner-knowingness that I was carefully guided and watched over.

I, again, ask that we have discussion on the topic at hand. We will need to use our stillness mind during these discussions to allow Father to regulate the natural time-flow. Your morontial senses are, in fact, being tried and tested during your discussions. How are the philosophic meanings contained within the lessons real to you? Share from your experience. Read one or two lessons. Have discussion, then I would speak. [Pause for group discussion.] Yes. I hope we are in understanding? Have you questions?

CALVIN: Yes, Abraham, regarding our discussion of these lessons – their philosophies, meanings and values – and I think that is probably the first request of us you are asking – then do you also want us to see if we can grasp the morontia mota that ties to those? I view this ‘mota’ of which you teach as being a much higher concept than what we might see in our mortal view of meanings and values. Does that make sense?

ABRAHAM: In a manner, yes. Meanings and values and ‘mota’ are basically within the same definition. Yes, to grasp the higher concepts, there needs be comfort and relaxation to make use of the stillness mind. There is a natural flow of time to allow each individual to receive as they are capable, yes. Learning is on an individual level, yes, but also on a group level wherein there is a cosmic circuit connection, yes. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I haven’t been practicing stillness much. I used to do so quite often but the last little while I haven’t. But then when stuff happens, I seem to then find that reason to hang out in that stillness mind. For example, like when our car transmission blew out on the way down to New Mexico recently – it was like I was just sailing along in life, sneaking by in life, without much thought for stillness; and then when things go awry (like the car breakdown) then I remember my stillness. Is it possible in this life to have a constant stillness connection?

ABRAHAM: I understand. The point of stillness practice is to have constant connection with your Father Adjuster at all times, yes. There is not ‘sneaking by,’ no; there is a natural comfort knowing the fact that Father is there at every moment, not just during meditation, yes. You do well. You also can literally feel when the need for a more quiet stillness practice arises. Yes. One more question?

CLAIREESA: Abraham, do you still use your stillness mind as you did on Urantia?

ABRAHAM: My stillness mind has become an ingrained part and I am now unable to distinguish the difference; I have been away from the flesh, which aids me in that mindal integration. Old things have faded away and all things have become new, as you will also see. The stillness mind, to you, in the future, will become natural and not referred to as the ‘stillness mind,’ but just as ‘the mind’ – a gift from our Mother, yes.

I am again happy to be your friend and teacher. I am, every week, blessed by your presence. My love for you each runs deep, and I am grateful for Father's everyday watchcare, yes. My love goes with you, shalom.

Die to The Old Ways And Take up The New

[In these series of lessons, the word 'morontial' is used often. Morontial is that state of our existence between the mortal body and that some day spirit form. When we awaken in our next existence (the 'correction' Mansion Worlds - there are seven transitions of them), we have shed our material bodies and are awakened in a 'morontial form.' Abraham teaches in these lessons that we can now attain morontial realities while in our present mortal (Earth) form.]

Greetings, my children. I am your Brother/Father, Michael. What a wonderful futuristic vision we behold in you. You are balancing your divine ways with your mortal ways very well. You are making these morontial exercises successful in that you have chosen to die to the old ways and take up the new.

I can say, this mission is accelerated - for upon Urantia, times ahead will prove to be difficult, yes. We are accelerating these lessons to provide a firm foundation of spirituality, as temporary things are passing away. The passing of these things will certainly be the cause of great upset. You, my children, must allow small things to move away to make room for the spiritual concentration you will need during these times of upset.

I can easily recall my mortal existence when I awaited my hour. I can remember my own inner-turmoil and questions that seemed to go unanswered. I remember the pressure from my friends and family to go forth to take the kingdom; to proclaim a new era.

I indeed understand your inner-turmoil as you wonder about your unanswered questions. I did, however, trust that Father's plan was proceeding, and I would certainly know when to lay down my tools to take up my teaching ministry; and, when it was time to lay down my old life to take up the new.

You are quite blessed living in this age of enlightenment, for your Teachers have labored diligently to bring to you the use of the morontia senses. As you discover the everyday meanings and values will you exercise your senses. I say, children, look around - there is morontia mota in every direction, it spills over the dry desert of humanity providing refreshing new life.

These courses Abraham teach are mandatory at some point in your spiritual career; they are not to be looked upon lightly. Children, we require your assistance during this world's awakening. You full well know your hour has come and you are firmly planted deep within the Correcting Time. From whatever your standpoint in life is, you know the position you must take.

We are not about relieving problems to the world; we are about taking action with spiritual solutions, most definitely. I stand behind you as a Father to encourage you to go forth to do the divine bidding. I stand in front of you saying: Follow me, this is 'how' we will do the divine bidding. I stand beside you saying: You are my child, and you are 'why' we do the divine bidding.

This evening we are each strengthened in our faith and purpose to move forward. Set aside those small things, and reach for those deeper meanings and realities of the spirit life. My love and affection runs deep for you each. I am with you always. Carry on.

The Value of Group Discussion, and The Effects of Service

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. A good discussion surely puts a new light on various un-thought-out topics. Yes. Well done. You have revealed the mota in this particular lesson on the transmission process. You have stated the overall purpose for utilizing this morontia sense. Your acknowledgment - that you cannot live a well-balanced life without spirituality - is indeed an exercise in humility. Making oneself small to promote Father or Teacher assistance, is quite an asset.

I have been present with numerous individuals - students who are overcome with the excitement or novelty of transmitting - so much so that they have been unsuccessful and discouraged. As you have pointed out, the stillness mind is valuable in opening oneself to universal possibilities. A serene mind is a fertile field for divine realities. You can have tremendous desires to transmission-receive, yes - and yet, intentions are what set the tone for accuracy, yes.

Your discussion has touched on most of those morontia values we all need to learn, yes; but I can say that aside from successful communication with Father, 'service to one's fellows' would be deemed important - highly important. Your skills in transmitting are put to the test when in the act of service to a troubled friend. The effects from service are felt beyond the individuals being assisted. The effects go throughout the universe in the form of a wonderful positive energy, yes.

There is value, there is meaning, there is purpose and importance for using this morontial sense. Your group unification on this topic has shed new light within each one's mind. Your even-distribution of communication allowed all individuals to speak freely. This example set before us today would be our hope for all individuals to embrace. Yes. Well done. In your discussions, there, are the lessons. I also am there, as is Father and various other spiritual beings who help direct, yes. That is all.

Be at ease to seek me during the week. I should be happy to assist. Let us each remember Michael's message from our last meeting and put away those small nagging things that hold us down or away from divine realities. Find a few moments of peace in each day and allow Father to lift you with divine realities; and, to take from you those burdens that beset, yes. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Our Group Mindal Link Enlarges Our Capacity to Receive

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. What a great honor it is for me each week to personally be with you, to be close friends and co-workers serving a common purpose.

When I arrive each week, I can usually link minds with you using of course, the stillness mind. The more cohesive you are as a group, the greater your capacity to learn. We all then become living links. We all can unify and connect with those on high. We can all receive feedback from the experiential God of time – the Supreme Being. In our mindal link we can each receive the overall morontial mota from this particular lesson on transmission-receiving, 'Desiring Not To Desire,' yes. [See lesson from April 19, 1999.]

You have successfully pointed out the overall purpose for this method of communication – it reflects the importance that each one is getting to know God and become like Him; each one is acting in service for our fellows; each one is understanding the mota that 'what value is there in the transmission-receiving process if no lasting fruits are produced?'

Our fruits come not from self-aggrandizement, mysticism, or setting ourselves above others as in elitism of group-level of spirituality, no; the fruits from the transmission-receiving process come when you can serve and be served, love and be loved, give and receive; and, embrace the whole as an extended family, yes.

You have progressed in this particular morontial sense where you will embrace only the truths. You are at ease to accept the Father's will and whatever that may bring. You are becoming used to the fact that the Mission moves forward whether I am with you each week or not. Your intentions have served you well concerning our lessons. Our mindal link enlarges our capacity to receive divine truths. Our mindal link opens up new possibilities, yes, and supplies you and me with the courage to accept new revelations – new realizations.

Our study thus far has proved to be beneficial, let us continue. Keep in mind our recent message from Michael – to allow small things to pass away; allow old things to fade while welcoming new things to enter. Consider this week your mindal link with your various contacts, seen and unseen. Recognize the spiritual flow and amount of divine information available. Michael has said: "Where two or more are gathered, there am I also." Yes. As always, my love goes with you. Until next week, shalom. [There was likely no meeting July 4th holiday.]

Logging Into Your Stillness-Mind While Functioning in Daily Tasks

Abraham teaches in these lessons that we can now attain morontial realities while in our present mortal (Earth) form.]

[Before Abraham's lesson this evening, the group discussed Abraham's lesson of April 25, 'Morontia Sense of Inner-knowing.']

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. Your trust in me is quite an honor. You allow me here each week with faith and trust in my ability as a teacher to deliver the lesson. Your confidence in our friendship leads me to desire to be a better person. This trust and confidence has come over a period of time in getting to know me and my techniques for teaching, and perhaps my personal traits as a fellow in the kingdom.

This is all well and good, yes, but I say there could not have been as much success with this group had you not utilized your gift of inner-knowing. Now that time has passed you have a better understanding of this morontia gift. You can hear me speak, or read my lessons, or observe my character – but without our mindal link and use of inner-knowing, your faith and trust in me could not have been as strong.

The human vision is the most used sense while in the flesh; and obviously you cannot see me – you cannot see the sincerity in my eyes or behold me at my work and everyday duties, no. You are, in a sense, forced to rely upon your inner-knowing to believe in me as a spirit friend and teacher. Even while observing your fellows in their everyday mannerisms and character traits, you cannot fully know them.

You are learning to use your inner-knowing to fellowship and serve. You can know which road would be best to take when serving a friend, for your inner-knowing tells you intuitive feelings about that individual. For example: "This person is shy so do not be too direct." Or: "This person is stubborn so waste not too many words on them."

Yes, logging into your stillness mind while functioning in everyday tasks allows you knowledge that you would not commonly have. Stress, anxiety, despair – or any spirit poisons, would make it difficult to be within the stillness mind.

The use of the morontia gift of inner-knowing will be a great healer to Urantia. Where Urantians can have a more complete picture of one another, and where there is more understanding of one another, there is more love, yes. In being able to sense certain aspects of your fellows you can have the right questions to ask them to draw them out, to lead them to make contact with their indwelling Father, yes.

Father has His overall plan mapped out. The Son has His orders, carried out through His subordinates, on how to follow through with Father's plan. The vast hosts of heaven have committed themselves to carrying through with the orders to make the plan a success, yes; but I say, your part you play in this overall scheme of Father's is far more difficult than the part we, the unseen helpers, have. While you must continue to have your own growth and learning experience, you also must aid in the planetary correction process and to encourage healing.

You can find the most excellent healing within one another's company. Your discussions, fellowship, caring, kindness and understanding, certainly leads to a great deal of healing which can allow you to set aside those small things and venture towards the broader horizons, yes.

This week, while sharpening your skills on inner-knowingness, note that there will be opportunities for you to heal and be healed – opportunities to move through those small things and gain that peace and strength to move toward greater realities, yes.

As always, my love goes with you. I shall seek you out during this coming week. Be at peace. Until next week, shalom.

Be a Source of Peace To Others By Not Putting Pressure Upon Them

Abraham teaches in these lessons that we can now attain morontial realities while in our present mortal (Earth) form.]

I am ABRAHAM. How honored I am that you would welcome me here each week. You have made quite an impact on me as a personal being and teacher. I feel I have been understood by you, and this leads me to believe you find me to be a valued friend. In your kindness and considerate manner towards me, I find personal healing.

There are patterns in nature that would reveal answers in our daily manner of living, yes. In a garden, most flowers are free to grow as they should. The sun, rain, and cross-pollination affect all in the garden. Many of the flower's roots are intertwined; and in a manner of speaking, all help one another to grow.

On occasion you find a flower that grows slowly in the shade of another – growing, yes, but not as it should. There are those flowers which grow in a trench and absorb most of the water, which takes from those flowers at the side. There are those flowers which have grown in unbelievable conditions; from under a rock perhaps, or enmeshed with a fence, yes – but we find that most things of nature grow best without obstruction or pressure.

Likewise, most mortal lives are not ideal where you can grow in completely normal circumstances, no. Even as in the garden – when a flower can bloom through the worst of adversity it can be made stronger. In knowing your fellows on a soul level, we find that our roots are intertwined; we share the same environmental elements. Yes, we communicate, learn, and grow; and we learn we are all responsible for the welfare of the whole.

In learning to utilize your morontia gift of inner-knowingness, it would be of great benefit in reaching your fellows that you be a source of peace; to apply no pressure; to not be cause for anxiety in another's growth. Also does this apply to you – for when the pressures of everyday-living creep upon you there must be some form of relief – such as from individuals, employment, relationships, and everyday duties; these create pressures that could cause you to be shaded from the light of divine contact.

No one has the authority to pressure you with their needs, demands, or requests. You are without a doubt a loved child of God; and while the wind may blow and the conditions imperfect, there is no reason for individuals to put anxiety and pressure upon you; everyday mortal living is difficult enough with the natural adversities of time and space.

As you learn to heal and be healed, note that the relief of pressure (or demands) causes a lightness to be upon you. With such pressures, you still grow, yes, but in a roundabout manner and growth is slowed. But still, the relief of pressures clears the mind for new solutions and possibilities. Put not pressure on others, and know that in your liberty as a child of God you need not be burdened by the unreasonable demands and pressures of others.

Learning these morontia senses creates in you an enlarged capacity to receive divine truths and the fruits therefrom. This week ask yourself, 'where are you pressured from?' 'Whom do you pressure?' Lighten the burden and view the immediate healing, yes. That is all. I am as always, with more love for you each week. I shall assist you as needed. Until next week, shalom.

Relieving Mortal Pressures To Allow For Clear-Thinking and Divine Solutions

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-26-1999

[In these series of lessons, the word 'morontial' is used often. Morontial is that state of our existence between the mortal body and that some day spirit form. Abraham teaches in these lessons that we can now attain morontial realities while in our present mortal (Earth) form.]

[This week brought the sudden passing of one of our long-standing group members, Honoray. Her passing was from elderly health complications.]

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. I am always made happy by observing your higher-minded discussions. What a beautiful sight to behold when in your mindal link you are allowing natural things to occur. For example, these lessons are made much more accurate when there is not pressure or underlying motives or intents. Yes, these lessons are allowed to form naturally and at the level in which you are ready to receive them. A non-pressured individual can embrace the truth as it is in its pure form. With a mind at peace, these lessons are received without color of individual desire or wish-fulfillment, yes.

When the Master wore the flesh He knew the desires of His fellows. He understood the mystical-thinking within the mind of man. He sincerely loved His fellow man and yet, even in His supreme compassion He would not bend under pressure to allow His mortal friends' desires to be fulfilled while twisting the divine law. Father's will was first and foremost in the mind of Jesus. To have such trust brought a feeling of well-being that guarded against the pressures of mortal living.

The Master always had a higher authority to answer to. The leading of the Father Fragment gave Him clear and clean intentions. The Master's intentions were to do the divine will. In anything that would perhaps interfere with the divine will, the Master could be found using various techniques in which to divert pressures away to allow for clear thinking and divine communication. Yes, He could often be found using strong, or perhaps even harsh words, as a 'pressure release.' He could use His passionate verbal expression as a method to put all authority back into Father's hands.

Jesus' supreme duty was indeed to answer to Father, and Father only. He had His earthly responsibilities, yes, and always were these in alignment with the divine will. The Master on occasion could also be found using His peaceful and charming manner as a method to certain individuals - to let them know that His duties were to Father, and that all their pressure attempts put upon him were certainly useless.

Another method the Master used was to use very little words wherein He'd choose to not take any action at all in relieving mortal pressures. He could be found in the stillness-time discussing with Father these many pressures - and after expressing His trust and faith, the Master would come away with clear and clean thinking; this always relieved mortal pressures and allowed for divine solutions.

With material obstructions and earthly pressures, there is a block created between you and your morontial senses. It is difficult to use the stillness mind in solving everyday problems when your burden is heavy and causing confusion. With stillness, and the Master's methods to relieving pressure, this should clear away the clouded thinking to participate in the morontial gifts you have been granted.

Yes, to participate in the divine plan calls for a mind at ease, a feeling of spiritual confidence, and a willingness to choose always the divine will, yes. This evening I would accept a few questions.

INERA: Abraham, again we thank you for your lesson. I know how drugs taken for abuse or to numb self-will, how they affect spirit and the connection, but what about kids that are fed drugs by adults 'for their supposed good,' like Ritalin? Does it disconnect the kids and their spiritual growth?

ABRAHAM: The children who truly have the disorders in which the drugs are meant for, their medication is helpful, yes. And no, these children do not experience spiritual disconnection. Their carefully-regulated medication (that does decrease with age) in fact, assists a healthy spiritual outlook. Unfortunately, there are those children medicated merely for their high-spirited enthusiasm, overactive imaginations, and also their reactions to the way in which they are treated. When children are not fitting into the standard mold there is a tendency for parents to believe there is a problem with the child. This misdiagnosis of individual personality, versus real emotional and mental disabilities, ... (TR: I must have said something wrong. Wherever he was going with that it's gone. Sorry. Okay, I'm starting over.) Abraham: Children medicated incorrectly can have adverse effects to spirit connection. The thoughts that there is something seriously wrong with their personality aspects is even more of a detriment where early on, the child is informed they are not up to normal standards; but even this is overcome with time. Perhaps these individuals can gain an understanding of, and relearn the fact that, there is not a standard mold in which all shall be required to fit in – and that they are loved 'as they are.' This love can lead to spirit closeness and reconnection. Yes. Is this answering?

INERA: Yes, very much so. Thank you. I would like to introduce my mother to you, Abraham. This is my mother, Joyce. (Abraham: Greetings Joyce. Welcome, and feel at home here, yes. Another question?)

MARK: Lately I am with the feeling that I am not a very good parent to my children and the little girl we have staying with us. I feel like because of the way some of the boys that we have are turning out I just don't know how to relate with them. I have a very hard time dealing with their attitude and stuff like that.

ABRAHAM: Understood. The fact that you question your ability to be a good parent opens the door for new learning, and emphasizes that you are a caring parent – which means a lot. It seems almost mapped out for us when we become parents, because of the examples we had as children. There is always a fear that we will make the same mistakes our parents did. And yes, it's true that we will for the most part – but that does not mean that we have to continue in the same pattern. When you are unsuccessful at a parenting technique you already understand that there needs to be a change in technique. Why repeat the things that do not work? The Parent of all parents is within you – and I say, He is your best source for parenting. Our Father is one of understanding mercy, and yet hard and unchanging with certain divine rules; He must enforce those rules even at the expense of causing His children to grow. He is constant in His technique and always emphasizes His unending love for His children. He would show mercy when mercy is called for, yes; but He would also stop at nothing to see to it that His children are guided properly towards Him. He informs His children that His love leads Him to teach. His persistence allows His children to know His love is complete and everlasting. Father gives His all – and yet there are some children who are unreachable; this is reality, and all Father can do is reach. He cannot force His child to reach back, He can only maintain consistency in teaching the divine laws and allow all His children to know of His unconditional love. Yes, I hope this is helping. (Mark: Thank you.) Abraham: You are welcome. You are on a well-balanced road in parenting. Keep asking the Parent of all parents for divine guidance, yes. One more question?

ALAUNA: Abraham, I wanted to have a prayer tonight for a member of my family that is kind of a lost sheep and has pulled away. The passing of my mother this week (Honoray) has brought us all closer together. But there is one daughter we have a lot of trouble with. We have all been praying a lot for her this week and are hoping we can find a way to help her. I know Father is hearing my prayers. I just wanted to see if you would say a few words on what we can do to kind of bring her back into the fold of our family.

ABRAHAM: Yes, there is only expressing your willingness to be available to her, to allow her to know of your love. Constant criticizing of her ways may create more barriers. There are instances individuals must experience which draws them closer to Father. Perhaps time alone would have her realize the value of a human family – and also, the family of God, yes. I perceive there are other reasons this individual is feeling separation. There is personal healing on her part which must occur before there can be a reconnection. It is true that while the passing of your mother may bring some of you together, there are individuals which must tend to their grieving in their own way. In such a short life in the flesh, why must time be wasted in bad feelings towards one another; this would perhaps be sensible to her. Allow for time, Alauna, and continue with prayer and communication among other family members, yes. That is all.

I am in understanding of the busyness of last week. There were a great many lessons to be had. I will continue to assist you throughout the week. Until next time, shalom.

Remember Your Questions | How Am I Being of Service and How Does This Serve
Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 08-02-1999

[In these series of lessons, the word 'morontial' is used often. Morontial is that state of our existence between the mortal body and that some day spirit form. When we awaken in our next existence (the 'correction' Mansion Worlds – there are seven transitions of them) we have shed our material bodies and are awakened in a 'morontial form.' Abraham teaches in these lessons that we can now attain morontial realities while in our present mortal (Earth) form.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a beautiful and progressive discussion this evening. The discussion served in so many ways. The basic truths that were brought forth were indeed serving the individuals as well as the whole of the group. You can measure the progress of your discussions with the amount of service you had opportunity to provide and the peaceful feelings that are present when you have felt served.

Spiritual understandings are made more comprehensive when the question, 'How does this serve?' is asked in ministering to your fellows. Using your inner-knowingness you can check the levels of ego involvement when asking yourself this question, 'How am I serving?' You perhaps feel like a child learning to ride a bike – on first using your morontia senses there is apprehension, there is little confidence, and some fear. It is there, in this insecurity of using the morontia senses, that you build the muscles of trust and faith.

For your mortal side, however, there are always these useful questions: 'How does this serve?' 'How am I serving?' rather than, 'How am I served by this?' In tending to mortal pressures these questions tend to bring you to an intellectual level as well as a spiritual level. In the asking, there is a statement brought forth that says, 'I choose to do the will of my Father.'

Should the pressures of mortal living lead you to feeling a disconnection, then a questioning and humbled mind helps sort out your feelings of 'being lost' – to understanding the reality of 'you may feel lost, but you are not.' Such feeling is not in authority over spiritual reality, no.

There is a fine line between those 'burdening pressures' and 'daily responsibilities;' it is easy to mistake one for the other. If you feel confused or clouded in thoughts – if you are unrestful – then certainly is that unnecessary pressure. Should you feel hurried, but trustful and energetic (secure), then this is everyday responsibility in which Father assists you with anyway.

Yes, when pressures are upon you it is a time to ask: “How does this pressure serve anybody?” Should there be no answer, or a clouded confusing answer, then the Master’s techniques would need to be applied. Should there be an intelligent ‘practical spiritual-sounding answer,’ then certainly, remain open for further divine solutions and assistance. It is also quite simple to tell when you are putting pressure upon others. By all means, ask the questions:

1. How am I being of service?
2. Am I looking to fulfill my own needs, my agendas or ego? or am I providing practical, useful, spiritual information to someone that requests it.
3. In serving, can I find a mindal link (a divine connection) with an individual?
4. Can I feel their emotions – or perhaps understand their history?
5. Are they in a questioning mode? Do they desire advice from me? or are they merely looking for a listener.

These morontial senses are really quite practical and intelligence-promoting. For citizens settled on Light and Life planets, the morontial senses are the only means in which to solve problems by – it is only natural to them. Yes, you are somewhat new and still learning, so be not discouraged; these senses will become natural to you also. Your continued trust and faith in Father leads you to attain a greater capacity to receive divine knowledge, yes. A few questions?

CALVIN: Again we thank you for your helpful lessons. This week, as you know, some of us are going to Vancouver, Canada for the IC99 (International Conference 1999) hosted by the Urantia Fellowship. Do you have any special instruction or something we need to be aware of?

ABRAHAM: One moment. I am told to tell you conference goers that it would be most wonderful to embrace one another on an individual level, as opposed to a political level. It is acceptable to defend your cause as Mission adherents in a peaceful manner, but not to have the attitude of ‘embrace us and our ways.’ There will be a great amount of information to take in at this Conference. Look not to be so much as ‘a messenger of the Teaching Mission’ but as ‘a participant in it’ and as ‘a Urantia citizen who desires good for the whole of the planet.’ It would do you well to remain unbiased and open, for the spirit leads when you least expect it. You are equipped to serve best where you can be at ease. Continue with good humor, yes. That is all.

HARRISON: Abraham, my wife, Carol, is suffering from pain and stiffness in the joints. Is there anything that you could offer me as far as what I may say to her or how I might serve her? Is there any way I can help her feel better, get better?

ABRAHAM: As always, I stress the importance of material medical attention, but on a personal level, I would ask Carol if there is some difficulties she is having that she would like to talk about. Pain and stiffness in the joints, reflect a good measure of earthly stress and/or something being suppressed. Would she have any difficulty at all, of course, she could discuss with you. In the discussion there is an opening in the mind which can receive divine solutions. There is relief from pain when there is a caring listener standing by. Remember not to put pressure on to draw her out, but to allow her to know of your availability, yes. That is all. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, what you were talking about (a confusion, a cloudiness) this place I have been in lately; I was trying to describe it and I can't. Well, it feels okay, but yet it doesn't. I don't know if it is simply a transition. I don't know what it is. I haven't asked a question like this for a long time but, do you know what I am talking about, and could you give me some guidance there, or do I need to be more specific?

ABRAHAM: I can answer in this way: There is transition, yes, and yet you are feeling the reality of unrealness or falsehood. You are finding that untruthfulness to be discomfoting. You so desire the truth and realness, and yet there is an underlying falsehood. I can say to you, my daughter, if you are feeling strong emotion, ask not first: "What is the proper way in which I should handle it?" rather, Miriam, feel at ease to speak from your gut, not your heart, nor your head. Speak from your first basic thought. I am saying, do not cover-over with proper procedures in mortal living. Your good intentions are honorable, and yet in a way, crushing. You need to uncover the underlying falsehood with the realness of your human emotion. Cry, be angry, be disappointed or shocked. Your divine monitor will assist in the balance of your human emotions. Worry not so much about things that look true and good. Concentrate more on the reality of your human experience. The divine balance will come later. That is all. One more question.

MIRIAM: Abraham, can I just also ask: Does my TMJ condition, my jaw misalignment and all that, is that like a physical manifestation of what you are telling me about?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Physical miscellaneous ailments are a manifestation of things that go against your divine understanding. Yes. Another question?

CLAIREESA: Abraham, do you have any words for our brother and sister, Angus Bowen and Gerdean O'Dell that are planning on their nuptials at the Vancouver conference?

ABRAHAM: I have nothing to say other than to enjoy, yes, and know that we will also be in attendance. It is wonderful when our mortal friends can gather in happiness and are feeling rejoiceful and are with gratitude. We certainly seek opportunity to attend these functions and unite with you as members in the extended family of God. Yes.

I am, as always, with more love for you each week. Should there be need of assistance I would be happy to help. Remember your questions we've suggested in this lesson. That is all. Until next week, shalom.

Answer The Question Within of Whom and Why Do I Serve
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-09-1999

[In these series of lessons, the word 'morontial' is used often. Morontial is that state of our existence between the mortal body and that someday spirit form. When we awaken in our next existence (the 'correction' Mansion Worlds – there are seven transitions of them) we have shed our material bodies and are awakened in a 'morontial form.' Abraham teaches in these lessons that we can now attain morontial realities while in our present mortal (Earth) form.]

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I do so wish I could express to you the feelings and thoughts I am perceiving from your unity. Your mindal link and acceptance of one another's differences is emitting such peace that it is almost visual to me.

I am perceiving your thoughts to be of love for each individual; and this love has given an understanding of one another's backgrounds that has shaped each person. You read well one another's feelings and thoughts – what a beauty to behold. Resolved and peaceful thoughts do allow our transmissions to be more accurate. Our signal is much stronger with this peaceful mindal link, yes.

As you have mentioned, our study of morontial lessons these past few months have been completed. And I can assure you, your understanding is acceptable and more received on a soul-knowing level, yes. As long as you dwell in the material flesh and walk the Earth, there will be need for spiritual study of these morontia lessons. The world at present is in need of 'points of light' – individuals who have been trained in these morontial senses, yes.

Most definitely your capacity to receive spiritual information has enlarged quite significantly due to your dedication and intense spiritual studies. It is well understood that you are only beginning, but your strides have been great. Why do we make the effort to learn these morontia lessons and incorporate the morontia senses? The answer is simple and clear: we aim to serve our Brother/Father in the upliftment and reconstruction of Urantia's thought patterns. We are dedicated to the salvation of the world's peoples.

As you have been told, the planet is in a state of emergency. How detrimental would the state of the planet be in without Michael's overall plan to heal and correct? What a beautiful sight to behold – the Creator entrusting universal affairs to those who hardly seem qualified.

Michael has great faith in all His children and has sped up aid and supplies to Urantia as if a top universal priority; as if the welfare of the universe depended on the success of Urantia; as if the growth of the Supreme Being relied upon the success of Urantia.

If I could ask you about the morontial senses saying: 'How do they serve?' and if I could ask about the Teaching Mission, 'How does this Mission serve?' is there a spiritually sound answer? Is there rhyme and reason for your efforts and participation in the Mission? The practical use of the question, "whom do you serve," leads us to embrace truth, beauty, and goodness in all aspects of mortal living. We can find reasons to be encouraged and carry on. We can find motivation and inspiration when we are tempted to give up. When the world appears to be crushing, we can find our question to be a firm foundation in a place of uncertainty.

Continue to apply these questions throughout the week and be aware of your spiritual sources: Who provides your spiritual sustenance? Who unifies your mortal experience with divine understanding? Whom do you serve? Who is your true source of the real desires of your soul? Why do you continue your commitment to this Teaching Mission? What makes you to lift your head to smile at a fellow passer-by? Why is it your desire to do good? Yes. Answer this week if you will: 'Whom and why do you serve?' That is all.

I will certainly be available throughout the week for questions and assistance and your understanding of this lesson. As always, my love is with you. Until next time, shalom.

We Have Come To Help You To Be Receivers of Father's Love, That You Might Better Share It

Ham - IC99 Urantia Fellowship Conference , Vancouver, BC. Canada 08-10-1999

[This meeting was not on the itinerary of the Urantia Fellowship's IC99 Conference, held this year in Vancouver, Canada - but was a request of Ham's to address the Conference, as many as who would attend. Therefore, invitations and announcements were posted throughout the halls of the conference of the appointed time and place. Approximately eighty people were in attendance - many of whom were skeptics. Rebecca, formally of the Woods Cross, Utah group, was the transmission-receiver for this session.]

>>>Greetings my friends, my beloved ones, I am HAM. Our greatest desire is not that every person should necessarily believe or accept the Teachers or our words, no. Our greatest desire is a simple one - that we should learn every day to love one another a little more.

I come bringing you no great announcement. I come in humility, in service to you, my friends, my children. I come bearing the love of the Father, and I come offering words of love to you. There are many children here who have taken the first steps in love by allowing our instruction to help guide their steps in small ways upon the journey that you all are taking toward the Father.

We the Teachers, wish to extend our profound gratitude to you, children. We are very humbly proud of each one who has taken a step in faith - a step which has brought you here today. We wish to bring you words of comfort; we wish to bring you words of hope - to help you develop your trust in the Father, and to help you develop your trust in each other.

The Father has sent out one mandated task, which you all must find in your hearts the resolve to attempt: "Be you perfect even as I am perfect." And children, He did not expect you to do this by yourself. Vast are the numbers of Teachers, and vast are the numbers of angels and other celestial overseers who have come into this world to help you begin the mandated task of your eternal lives.

We come to serve, to help you. This world is a planet of the walking wounded; and Michael, in His benevolence and purity of purpose, has sent as many Teachers as can be received, to help each one of you – yes, each one of you – overcome the wounding in your lives that has been brought through no fault of your own. Michael is sending with his Teachers, the ‘bread of life;’ and, that ‘spiritual water’ which will truly quench your thirst forever. He asks that you be willing to open your hearts just enough to allow yourselves to receive His love, and to allow yourself the willingness to make change toward your perfection.

Your anxieties, your fears – all these things are known to us. We know of your difficulties, your sorrows, your broken hearts. We know of all the various ways in which you hide from yourselves and from others – and yes, children, from the Father. We know how hard your lives are, for most of us have lived lives very similar to yours when we were in the mortal state.

Michael, in his wisdom, knows the value of this mortal life-experience when it comes to teaching. We offer our help freely; and you are all free to take it now, to take it later, or to wait until the Mansion World experience when you will receive Teachers in that estate. If there are any questions, I would gladly discuss these things with anyone who wishes to.

QUESTION: Hello, Teacher. In our wonderful Urantia Book, it is written that our immediate planetary supervisors advocate the inauguration of measures to foster and conserve the higher spiritual types of Urantia. [page 1207 in the Urantia Book.] Could you please give us examples of ‘what types’ of measures they are referring to, which help to foster and conserve the higher spiritual types that are diminishing or lacking?

HAM: Certainly. This small sentence actually refers to many efforts on many levels – everything from the prevention of warfare, to the many ways that the family is being fostered and conserved by the angels and midwayers. But the greatest way to ‘foster and conserve the higher spiritual types of mortal beings’ is to feed their spirituality, and all the rest takes care for itself. The Urantia Book itself was probably the main method referred to in that short but potent sentence. Is that helping your understanding? (Reply: Partially so. Thank you.)

QUESTION: Hello, Ham. Is the Teaching Mission an adjunct to personal revelation, or is it an amplification to epochal revelation?

HAM: It is both, yes. Epochal revelation impacts upon the individual as a personal revelation – as you of course have experienced in your studies from the Urantia Book. We Teachers, desire to be more like helpmates. We are not directly involved in your personal experience with Father, which would come under the realm of auto-revelation. We foster your relationship with the Father, but we do not intervene. We do not come between you and God. Yes, we are merely teachers who have elected to help you bring to daily living that spirituality which you are receiving from the Father; we help you understand it, help you apply it, and to steady you on your path. We are assigned to teach, not to reveal the Father, for the Father reveals Himself with you each.

QUESTION: My name is Mark, and I'm part of a study group in Manitoba, Canada. We received a letter from your group, a message from yourself, saying that Manitoba, Canada, was the spiritual center of the planet Urantia, and that we were to receive a Teacher in 1992; and we haven't heard anything since. Can you explain what it's all about?

HAM: Certainly. The word used for your location, 'Manitoba,' was an error in the transmission regarding planetary headquarters. However, we, the Teachers, are aware of your group, your small group. We are always willing to teach when you are willing to receive. Be cautioned in patience, my son, for you are doing very well. And yes, a Teacher is assigned to you. However, be assured that love is the message, the essence, and the substance of her teaching. Is this helping your understanding?

MARK: It's not very clear. I do not understand why a message of that specification could be in error.

HAM: Errors in the transmitting process are certainly possible, and have occurred, yes. I am an imperfect being; Rebecca is an imperfect being; all of you here are imperfect beings – and therefore errors are always a possibility. But, son, what is important is the proceeding in the spirit, proceeding with faith, with beauty and goodness.

MARK: I understand. The thing is, I have a mind that always asks me to clarify things, and it has to clarify an error. I accept the error, that the message may be wrong, imperfect. I don't understand why the error is bringing such conflict between specific things we are anticipating, because when we make errors as human beings we usually try to figure out why the error was made so that we can correct it. And, as this is a 'correcting process' of which you are engaged – I am still looking for the correction in this error.

HAM: I have given it – this correction. What is it more that you are asking? (Mark: I see. Thank you.)

QUESTION: Ham, this is just a simple question. Why now, this Teaching Mission?

HAM: Certainly. There is, of course, a simple answer – it is Michael's will! But I know you are desiring a more detailed explanation. Many events have occurred in conjunction recently, such as: The final adjudication of the Lucifer Rebellion; the opening of your planetary circuits; and, the will of Michael to bring his beloved world back into the realms of light, from the darkness into which it was cast. Is this helping? (Reply: Yes, and thank you.)

QUESTION: I'm pretty nervous to bring my question to you, Ham. I am nervous because my question has potential to be offensive. When I first got the Urantia Book I was in fear because I was scared that it might be evil – and I was almost now feeling a similar fear. I can't help but think of Adam and Eve when that default happened; they were two human beings that were supposed to be superior, and who were yet, misled. And I desire to follow the golden rule, as I can understand everyone here, likewise does. Is there a way you can ease my fears?

HAM: Yes. Daughter, you are a beloved child of the living, eternal, infinite and universal Father. You must open your heart to His tender ministrations. Believe with all your heart that you are loved – and that you are loved as if you were His only child. There is no fear there. Allow the Master to hold you in His arms. Allow Him to stroke your hair and to rock you like a child, like a baby. Relax into His love. Receive His love. Be at peace. Find peace. Find words of love and peace. Allow yourself to gradually give your fear to God. Give your fear to Michael, for it is not something you have to carry – for you are safe, you are surrounded by angels. There is nothing on Earth that can truly harm a God-knowing and Son-believing woman such as yourself. That is all.

QUESTION: Ham, if I understand this correctly, the Lucifer Rebellion has finally been adjudicated? (Ham: Correct.) The circuits have been opened? (Ham: Correct.) The Teachers have arrived to try and assist us in the process of connecting with Father? (Ham: Correct.) What is it exactly that you would advise the people here on the planet to do to help foster a loving countenance among the people? What is it that we can do?

HAM: Spiritual power is a wonderful thing. Spiritual power multiplies itself if you give love, share love, and receive love freely among your friends. This multiplies many times so that this love that you are giving, though it may seem a small thing, is actually and in reality, growing – it is growing on its own. You are simply planting seeds, spreading seeds as you go, as you joyously live. Allow the Father to do the rest. Is that helping? (Reply: Yes.)

QUESTION: What does “the opening of the planetary circuits” mean? ‘Planetary circuits’ is vague to me. What does that mean? Is it anything other than partial individual circuits? How would we see evidence of that?

HAM: Yes. The circuits allow the spiritual help – the Teachers and the many others who are flooding into your world; it allows them to communicate with each other over distance. And of course, allows communication over long distances to other worlds. It would have been impossible to attempt the great spiritual upliftment of the world without the spiritual circuits being opened. This is a massive undertaking; it is difficult and very involved because we, of course, are involving the entire planet, entire world, and its billions of people. How you may see evidence is how there has always been evidence: that is, spiritual fruits manifested in yourself and in your fellows. There is no other evidence of God. That is all.

QUESTION: All right, in the Urantia Book it says we are supposed to receive a Magisterial Son. When is that supposed to happen?

HAM: Yes, in time, a Magisterial Son will come. You need not concern yourselves with this future affair at this time, however. I cannot predict the hour because I do not know the hour of this coming. So children, concern yourselves with your own spiritual progress, with your own growth. Don't worry about the extended plans of the Father's; leave such to the great ones who actually do plan these things. That is all. Is this helping? (Reply: Yes.)

QUESTION: Ham, I perceive what you speak is truth, yes, but then I also perceive truth has already been passed to us – we already do have the Urantia Book revelation. So why do we need you to tell us this new truth?

HAM: Son, every person has different spiritual leadings – different things that they can identify with and which they can relate to, which will help that person on their path. You may not need a Teacher; you may not want a Teacher – and this is fine for this is your path. You, yourself, must decide what you need and when you need it. There is no one to decide this for you. Is this helping? (Reply: Yes.)

QUESTION: Ham, I can assume, as so many people would say, that this ‘method’ of communicating to us has been chosen for the Teachers to come through. You know we all have the same Urantia Book, we all see the same words on the same pages. But this method (the transmission and receiving process) is so fraught with errors on the part of the mortal transmission-receivers, and it creates great skepticism among the people. Why should such a method be chosen and approved for bringing the words of the Teachers at this time?

HAM: All truth, as it is imparted to the material mind, contains varying levels of what you would perhaps term ‘error’ or impurity. There is no perfect revelation, no perfect teaching method, aside from your own personal experience of God. It is our desire that you each should learn to perceive truth with the morontia soul so that all the mind errors and problems will simply dissipate. The sensory mind can be somewhat eliminated, but not completely, because you are mindal creatures and the mind is always present. You, as humans, tend to believe what you see with your eyes and doubt what you feel with your heart. We desire the opposite – to believe what you feel with your heart, with your soul, and doubt what you see with your eyes. Faith means to believe in something so real that all the evidence, all the sensory evidence to the contrary, cannot dissuade you from the truth that you know within your soul. So you must discern the words of truth with the method that can best do that – with your soul, with your heart, with your morontia being. Is this helping? (Reply: Yes. Thank you.)

QUESTION: Ham, there are some of us who have trusted enough in the personal correction process that we have allowed ourselves to utilize, to the best of our abilities, the assistance offered. It occurs to me in my discussions with other individuals, who have also experienced profound changes in their lives, that it is a very individualized process that occurs. The Teachers work with the individual in the place/circumstance that they are; and the individual chooses what errors, what perceptions, need to be changed – in some cases, faultingly and unknowingly; and in others cases, they are calculated. I look at it this way, ‘This is where I am now – so for now, this is what I need to know.’ Would you expand upon your approach to working with the individual; and what you would call, ‘personal correction,’ or what we have come to call ‘personal correction?’ Thank you, Ham. Thank you for your great assistance in my own life.

HAM: Certainly, daughter. What you term personal correction is simply recognizing ‘what are obstacles to love.’ Everyone has obstacles to receiving the full, the complete, love of God. I dare say, if you were receiving the full and complete love of God you would be fused – yes, fused. What we desire is to simply help you recognize the places where you are not receiving love; where you have fear of receiving love. Sometimes you, children, forget that love is a powerful force. Love is not something light, something ethereal – it is a powerful spiritual reality. And as you interact with love, love changes you; and we simply try to help you cope, to help you understand those changes that are occurring. We do not change you. Love changes you. Love changes everything. That is all. Is that helping? (Reply: Yes.)

QUESTION: A quick question: I don't know if this is addressing you or not: Some people might wonder why Rebecca wears a bandanna over her eyes. Is that something you require? or is that something that is a benefit to her, personally, in her role of transmission-receiving for us?

HAM: I believe it is to aid Rebecca's concentration, nothing more. (Reply: Thank you.)

QUESTION: If I wish to receive a Teacher, does that necessarily mean that in any way, shape or form, that I would also have to be involved in the 'transmission and receiving process' - to learn those techniques? Or is it simply a matter of having a recognizable but unseen personality who is here to help, in addition to an individual relationship with God?

HAM: Son, there are no requirements. This is not boot camp. However your relationship with your Teacher evolves - however you are comfortable with your Teacher, is wonderful for the Teacher. The Teacher will accommodate you in your needs; it is not for you to accommodate the Teacher.

QUESTION: Ham, I sometimes think that instead of a 'Teaching Mission' you should have called this the 'Therapy Mission.' [laughter.] I don't say that to be sad about it, but that it helps so many people, as we all. My real question is: What can you do for those of us who participate, to help us overcome our insecurity and defensiveness? Because others do not agree with our participation in the Mission, we often seem insecure and defensive with others. How can you help us to overcome this, to reach out and accept those who do not accept this? For I would think, as you just expressed so well, that in loving our fellows - that would be the ultimate goal; and that is what you would want.

HAM: Yes. Most of the teachings of the man Jesus, were to go against the natural inclinations of man. When you are rejected, it is most natural to feel defensive and feel afraid; to feel uncertain. But the Master would say: "Go boldly forth; proclaim the good news as you know it to be true. Sometimes your seeds will fall upon fertile ground, and there are times the ground is not prepared to receive it." Yes, this is nothing you can control and, is nothing you should control. Understand that your duty is simple, yes - to love one another; return good for evil; return love for fear; return gentleness where there is a harsh word. It is difficult at times, yes, and no one said it would be easy. But you are making progress, yes, fast progress, son. You know this, and everyone who knows you also knows this. That is all.

QUESTION: Ham, I am interested in hearing your assessment of the progress of the Teaching Mission up to this point; and, your assessment of the progress since the birth of the Fifth Epochal Revelation up to this time. Also, your thoughts about potential dangers that we might anticipate that might be coming towards us in the near future - that we might be better able to deal with such with your forewarning?

HAM: It is not up to me to evaluate or assess the progress of the Teaching Mission. Those who do monitor these things tell me that everything is going according to the Father's will, to plan. Be unperturbed, be unworried. Find peace in your heart that all these things are as they should be, for they are truly in the hands of God. I am aware of your human striving, your human struggles – and this is natural; this is all part of being a mortal on this world. Love each other as we love you. Show each other your love as we show you our love – that is what is important. Nothing else will change the world.

QUESTION: You state very beautifully the power of love and how it will change people's hearts. And, that love has the potential to change the world. Is there also within your understanding of the power of love – what we would call 'tough love,' of naming or labeling injustices and wrongs?

HAM: Of course. As you ascend in your spiritual journey it becomes easier to distinguish truth in its higher forms. And, it is also easier to distinguish 'error' in its many forms. To fight on the side of righteousness, on the side of goodness, is always a noble battle. Be at ease, for you do well, daughter. You are greatly loved by more than you will ever know in this life. That is all.

QUESTION: Ham, I thought I understood you to say earlier that there would be one Teacher provided per person – is that accurate? Considering that I am with a Teacher in a 'group' format, does that mean I also have a personal Teacher as well?

HAM: Yes, daughter, you do have a personal Teacher as well. Absolutely. (Reply: Thank you.)

QUESTION: Ham, at this point I don't see any further questions. I guess my only thought would be if you could leave us with some last thoughts this evening? Perhaps you could give the essence of what you want the people to take from here tonight? That would be greatly appreciated.

HAM: Certainly. If in the days ahead you could open your hearts a little bit more every day to receive the Father's love as it continually pours out upon you, you will be doing the Father's will. That is the essence of my lesson tonight. The Father's will is the Father's love; and receiving the Father's love is doing the will of the Father.

You all are beloved. You all are precious. Go in peace. Go in health. And children, find the emotional security to love yourself and one another as we the Teachers love you. That is all for tonight. I am profoundly grateful that you have come to hear my words. May you be at peace, and go in love. Farewell.

Is Our Statement Of Faith: `Father, It Is You That I Serve`

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. I know of the adjustments you had to make in order to be here. Your dedication to our purpose is well known and I am inspired each time we meet, yes.

When you smile at a stranger for the purpose of spreading cheer, your answer to the question, 'Whom do you serve?' is clear. When you take a moment to visit with a child for the purpose of letting the child know they are of importance, it is obvious who you serve. When you take a moment to care for the earth and your environment, it is apparent that you care beyond a level of self-serving.

Yes, your life that you live each day is an act of expressing who you serve. Your intentions to help beyond what may be gained is a song of worshipful gratitude to your heavenly Caretakers. Those times when you have set aside material responsibilities to promote spiritual wellbeing is a statement of faith that says:

- I serve God our Father because His goodness to me makes serving Him my deepest desire.
- His devotion to me comforts me when I am in turmoil.
- His love for me is a substantial reality that I can find nourishment from.
- Father is the one constant reality that I can depend upon.
- When all things fall short, Father has lifted me.
- When I have stumbled in darkness, it was my almighty God that lit my path.
- When I sat on the outer edges of loneliness, Father sat with me.
- I am in Him, and He in me. He is my source for truth, beauty, and goodness – that is why I serve Him.
- I am not forced into serving such a beautiful Creator of all that is because 'without Him, I would be lost,' no – although this is true.
- I am not serving Him so that I may gain, no – although I do.
- I serve Him, my Father, because His belief in me has brought about my reality.
- His love for me compares not with any other love.
- His loyalty to me is unmatched anywhere and I can receive this from no other being.
- I cannot find one other who is so beautiful, intelligent, perfect, and all-knowing – who loves me as if I were His only son, His only daughter, yes.

Having answered the question, 'Whom do you serve?' the other questions seem quite simple. The overall plan of Father is laid out before your eyes when you have answered that one question.

Many in the world today find unhealthy attachments whether it is to people, money, or mind-altering chemicals. Many individuals who do not know our beautiful Father find an emptiness that is endless, to which there is no relief. The constant reaching for various 'things' is simply mindal torture. The emptiness is realized in the unwellness you can view before your eyes in everyday living.

The disharmony between individuals is mostly due to the fact that they cannot answer the question, 'Whom do you serve?' Can a world survive on serving self? or being slave to those things that provide temporary satisfaction? I think not, no!

Granted, your handicap of dwelling in the mortal flesh prevents you from fairly apparent understandings of spiritual realities – but the experience in the flesh is what provides the understanding of Father's complete goodness. Slowly and little by little will you find any emptiness to be filled by Father's presence as you can increasingly answer with more certainty that, 'Yes, Father in heaven, you are who I serve.'

The time has come for this question to be answered throughout the Teaching Mission; the time for meandering back and forth on this commitment is coming to a close. Michael has need for His points of light to live their lives as they have answered the question of 'Whom do you serve?' You are beginning to live as if your answer is: 'Without a doubt, to the innermost consciousness of my fallible being, I serve God, the Father, yes.'

That is all. I am asked to leave you with thoughts of awareness towards a spiritual renewal of sorts. Be conscious of Michael's Spirit of Truth. His presence is a drink from the well of new life, yes. Until next time, shalom.

The Seeking Child Serves Father Who Is In Heaven | A Day In The Hills With Michael, Our Bridegro

I am ABRAHAM. I am happy to greet you once again, yes. I have been experiencing this week a spiritual renewal of sorts. I have been recommitting to my Source of all that is true, beautiful, and good. I am in awe of Father's ability to father me so well. It is quite simple for me to answer the question, 'Whom do I serve?' I could not, however, have been this successful in my spiritual renewal had I not relied upon those heavenly Caretakers as would a little child.

Having gone this far in my spiritual career I am able to find within myself, true humility. A humble heart and seeking mind does enable one to be as the small child. A proud and self-exalting individual may not meet with much success in spiritual comfort and renewal, no. Even those beings who are on high in Father's kingdom still find themselves as the seeking child. The seeking child is requesting Father's love and watchcare. The seeking child is finding knowledge, solutions, and confidence to brave this mortal life, yes.

Is the ability to find within, a true humility - in you? Are you that seeking child? Come with me my friends, let us be as little children:

MICHAEL: I am here. I am your Brother/Father. I see you, my children, and my heart is full. I am understanding each one's heart and mind. I am knowing you as a parent knows their child. I sense your deepest desires and fondest hopes. I know of your struggles and regrets. I see your path with clarity, and I can help you run the course.

I have known what it was like to answer the question of 'Whom do you serve?' In my mortal career I can surely pinpoint the exact moment when I needed not further ask that question; it was definitely clear and completely natural - there was no other to serve, other than, 'My Father, who is in heaven.'

Allow me, your Friend/Brother/Father, to assist you in this natural transition of living - as if there were no other answers to the question of 'Whom do you serve' than, 'My Father, who is in heaven.' Remember my promises made to you. Remember my commitment to you. Ponder upon my belief in you.

Spend a day in the hills with me. Be at ease to take what I offer to you as spiritual nourishment. Allow me to show you the goodness that still lives in mortal life. Release yourselves from the burden of the world's negativity. All that is bad cannot simply disappear, but you can allow me my place in your hearts to strengthen you so that what is bad cannot break you, but teach you to bend.

I am the Bridegroom and you are my bride. I vow to love and honor you. I promise to guide and uphold you. I will help you to help your fellows. Together we will usher this world into an age of goodness, light, abundance, hope, spiritual health, and truth. Our marriage is not one that is only to share the joy but to uphold and carry on through the bad.

Allow me my place at your side and know that we are unified and in service to the same wonderful Father in heaven, yes. I live to glorify one who has upheld and loved me with a love that is, was, and has always been. My love and peace go with you. Carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. How can one not be completely in love with such a Brother/Father? How can one not be made new or changed by His enduring presence? How can one not receive His words as a little child and not be made to feel cared for, or so loved? Yes. Our gratitude is with you, Michael, for your words are renewing, reassuring, and reconnecting us to the First Source and Center.

Go this week, my friends, as the little child; and in your humble walk know that our Master walks with us. Know that in your ability to serve our heavenly Sources, all else is well-cared for. Be aware of our beloved Spirit of Truth to pour Himself upon you as a baptism of renewal, yes. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Where The Spirit of The Lord is, There is Liberty - Understanding

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is so apparent that the spirit dwells among you. You are allowing, and that is creating liberty - 'Where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty,' yes.

As these weeks go by it is becoming more obvious who you are serving. This dedication is indeed, life-changing, growth-promoting - and at times, confusing. You are seeing strength in yourself where it was not before. You are feeling on a deeper level.

In your efforts to answer the question of 'Whom do you serve?' you are receiving such spiritual rejuvenation; you are inviting Michael to walk before you; you are committing to be as the little child - open, and with true humility. Yes, 'Where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.'

In your commitment to serving the First Source and Center you have invited God in on a personal and intimate level. Your closeness with Him creates a sense of well-being, a 'balance and freedom' in that the sense of unfulfillment (or emptiness) goes from you. The worries and 'fears of loss' or loneliness, dissipate, for His presence has brought you liberty.

Yes, Father's presence has brought you comfort in knowing your true source of origin; and, that you are indeed endowed with power from on high. I do not dangle these truths as 'carrots' to entice those who would perceive the spiritual life halfheartedly, no. I mean to share these truths with you who have already expressed in your daily lives, the answer to the question of 'Whom do you serve?'

Those habits you perceive as weaknesses or unhealthy attachments become small, for you are liberated by the spirit; you are strengthened by the Source of all that is true, beautiful, and good, yes. Those daily material fulfillments you seek become as though they had never been lacking when you are serving the one true Source of all - and that is soulfully fulfilling, yes.

Those individuals that had made you to 'fear should you lose their love' become looked upon as just part of mortal life experiences. Such mortal life experiences are meaningful, yes, in that they can teach you spiritual values. But these experiences are only in passing, only temporary; they cannot make or break you. You begin to relinquish your ties to such individuals in favor of allowing life-experience to simply unfold. You fear not loss, for the Source of all fulfillment has been invited in.

You can see, that to serve things or people in mortal life is, in a manner of speaking, enslavement. I am saying, if you fear loss - and then should you not serve these mortal things or people in an "acceptable" manner, this then becomes to you a negative definition of service; this is enslaving you, captivating your energy or attention, taking the focus off the kingdom of heaven, and causing you to feel the unfulfilling emptiness that plagues so many individuals.

When you have answered, without doubt, the question of 'Whom do you serve?' and your answer is clearly, 'I serve Father, the First Source and Center,' then are you endowed with liberty, strength, and confidence to live your life as a reflection of the Master himself.

How much more can you be of service to your fellows when you are without fear of loss, without the burden of worry - knowing full well you receive all you need from Him who has laid out the universes and dwells within every square inch of each. We are in Him, and He in us - there cannot be more cause for worshipful rejoicing than that.

This week, in your practice of being the little child who is with allowing openness and true humility, note what Father has to show you. Be not surprised at the strength within. Be not surprised at the dissipation of fear and feelings of un-fulfillment. Be aware of 'Where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.' My love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Do I Serve For Father's Glory Or For Some Personal Reason

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, and welcome to you. I have always looked forward to our weekly meetings. I can monitor and assist throughout the week but when we can meet weekly, we are devoting conscious thought to our overall purpose; we are unifying and understanding the spiritual life to be more than just formalities and empty study; we can see more of one another through sharing experiences; we can correct and heal.

To serve our Father, we commit to living our life as to glorify Him. We are committing to living our lives as a song of praise to those that created us.

A man can say: 'I serve only one master, my Father in heaven;' and yet, his reason for serving could perhaps be to maintain good standing with Father, or it could be to receive praise from his fellows. Such a man, who seems to be dedicated to serving our Father, may not find close intimate connection with Him because his intentions for serving are not aimed at glorifying Father. If you are truly serving Father you can honestly say: 'I live my life in this manner to show forth the presence of a living God.'

Can you say: 'I raised my children up to show that the Spirit of God is living among us so that it may serve those who are in need? Can you say: 'I toil daily to bear witness to the fact that I am a firm believer in a divine power?' Or, is your statement: 'I toil for money and blessings from heaven so that I can live an adequate material life.' What is your answer: 'Do I really serve Father by the living examples I put forth, or do I serve another?'

Father seeks not to be glorified and given praise as if He were a King, no. He does seek, however, your pure intentions and ability to focus on those spiritual truths that will see you through on your path to Him. If you are enslaved by serving another, does this show you are a believer in a spiritual source? Do you live your life as a message to others, showing God is present and a consistent reality?

When you are serving one master – being God, our Father – and feeding off the energy of liberation and having a strong spiritual connection, do you not live as a show of gratitude to Him who is the source of all fulfillment? How can one know the tender ministrations of our Father and not live their life as an appreciation for all He has done! You can measure your thoughts and actions by asking the questions: 'How does this glorify our Father in heaven?' 'How do my actions today show that Father is real, living, and active?'

Are you in understanding of the continuous watchcare from those who sit on high that help you to seek the deeper meanings – who make effort to teach you those divine laws that will carry you through your spiritual career? 'I am made small when I realize that my efforts to glorify Father are pale in comparison to all He does for me.' – and simple as this may be, that is what Father requests you to do so that you may become more conscious of His presence, His love, His watchcare.

Such dedicated children in the kingdom of our Father--students of His divine watchcare through His spiritual caretakers--can truly say:

- I find it natural and easy to live my life as a song of praise to one who is so understanding of my ways and loves me regardless of the good or bad.

- I find when I can live my life as if to show who I adore, my connection with Father is made stronger and I fear nothing.
- I fear not loss, for I am in Him, and He in me.
- I am aware of His presence.
- I am in tune with His immediate counsel.
- In His presence, I fear not loss, loneliness or adversities.
- Because I am liberated to act from the spirit, the spiritual life is more natural and I am filled with a sense of well-being and belonging to the Father of all fathers.

This week, attempt to live your life as if you know our spiritual caretakers, personally. Live as if they surround you on all sides; be liberated in their presence. Live your daily happenings as a glorification to our Father. Toil as if you worked side by side with Father, with the Master. Serve Him as He serves you – with an unshakable loyalty and faith. In your liberation, know that you can make spiritually sound decisions – not from a standpoint of fear of loss, fear of loneliness, or in lack of contentment or comfort, no, but because you are truly liberated.

This week, my friends, focus on worship. Understand that in your adoration of Him who is the Creator of all that is, you are also adored and held in the arms of the Source of all that is fulfilling. Watch your attitude go from apprehension or holding back, to liberation – feeling the exhilaration of moving forward.

Next week we will hold worship, but during the week ponder and study individually on ‘worship.’ As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Give Praise And Thanks To Father | Worship, The Joy and Peace From it Cannot Be Contained

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-13-1999

Back

I am ABRAHAM. My greetings to you. Thank you for coming. I find myself taking time each week to give gratitude to Father for knowing each of you and for the time we spend together, yes. I am always at ease to be with you for your graciousness is always in abundance, yes.

This week we will hold worship. Know that we worship not alone but with vast celestial beings that will add to the brightness of the glorification to our Father, yes.

As we settle in, let us ponder upon the faith of a little child:

- How trusting is a little child that he would find vision enough to have such faith in something greater than he?
- How open and enthusiastic is the little child that he finds excitement in communing with his Father in heaven?
- How humble is the little child who knows not the universal truths, values, and meanings, but finds great comfort in knowing the One who does?

My friends, let us be as that little child and give thanks and praise to our Father:

Father, we know that you see us. We know that you hear us. We know that you know us. Assist us in laying down our burdens of today. Assist us in forgiving those that have slighted us. Help us to remove our cloak of self-protection and defense. We each stand before you as a little child.

Father, we remember how you have sustained us in all our trials. We remember, during the darkness of loneliness you came to us. We remember how in a moment's time you assisted us in avoiding catastrophe. Father, we remember you upholding us in our times of weakness. We remember when your presence strengthened us to persevere and follow through with things difficult.

How small we are, in reality. How patient you are in your parenting. Even in our smallness you lead us to feel so loved as if we were your only child. We ponder upon your greatness in executing your divine plan. We cannot envision how you follow through; we only know you just do.

You have not ever deserted us even when we were on the brink of darkness. Ever are you the loyal Parent who sees us through to the end. Magnificent are your abilities to carry us when we are weak. Powerful is your love that leads us to stay faithful and true to our fellows as well.

How blessed are we that we should be in your presence. How loved we feel when you involve yourself in the things trivial concerning our lives. You are our Sustainer in all things. Even when your parental guidance calls for hard lessons, your parenting is constant and unchanging. Never do you waver on teaching us those things that guide us to you.

We have only to offer one so glorious, so loving, and so powerful, our praise and thanks. We have only our commitment to the doing of your will in return for all your assistance, guidance, and companionship. We have only to offer you, our Most High Father, the dedication to showing forth in our daily lives that we know you, follow you, and adore you.

We all sing praises to you, our Father, with one voice; be it small and humble, it is with the utmost sincerity, yes. Our wonderful Parent, allow us to return to you the love you have given us. Allow us to be more conscious of your presence. Allow us to be more familiar with your greatness. Allow us to be fueled evermore by your love.

We are committed to living our lives as a song of praise, for we are in gratitude to you, our most loving Father. Know that we know you are there – that you care, you guide, and you teach. There is strength in us where it was not before. There is liberty in us where there was not before. There is hope in us where there was not before. Accept our humble thanks. Our love, faith, willingness, and loyalty, is with you always. Amen.

How powerful is worship that I am made new each time I can look away from myself, to Him who upholds me. The trials of everyday-living are made smaller when you can remember those blessings Father has already bestowed upon you. Remembering the goodness in your lives for which Father is responsible, expands your connection to Father, allowing for transformation – transformation of mind, and clarity to perceive those solutions that were not apparent before.

In worship, we are self-forgetting and Father-remembering. In worship, we are bare of all the exterior influences that mortal living brings. We are liberated for a time to reflect on those lessons Father gives. We are made to connect with a truth that there is nothing that Father doesn't know about us – and still He stands by us with such loving devotion and faith in us.

In worship – be renewed; know that all that has gone before you is just mortal experience, something to find meanings and values in; something to learn from. With worship, there is always a fresh start on life. In worship, the mind is cleansed from the harsh realities of living; the soul is refreshed and energized to carry on. Worship invades every area of living. The joy and peace from it cannot be contained; it is bound to spread among those you know or come in contact with, yes.

This week find a moment to be outside of your everyday difficulties to be worshipful. Feel the newness of life every time you worship. Know that your connection made with Father is a step in spiritual, practical, and sound thinking. As always, my love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Worship is The Doorway to a New & Better Age

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a beautiful display of faith and willingness to participate, yes. Your desire to do your best is evidence that you are indeed serving our Father. How beautiful it is to see our fellows go beyond themselves to giving all glory and honor to our Father. Worship is the doorway to a new and better age.

How can such insurmountable problems be overcome in this society today? The answer is simple: By having the faith of a little child; being small enough to enter into the doorway of worship; allowing Father to teach – and, your glorifying His teaching by living His example in your everyday lives.

Worship brings a beautiful balance between the mortal and divine. The animal tendencies are transformed into a productive divine energy when you can step aside from yourselves to find Father and His greater meanings and values. Your vision extends beyond this mortal life to eternal realities when you can be made small and recognize the power and love of God.

The evolutionary worlds of time and space know not of their expanding influence in the universe – how the Supreme Being can be made to grow and change when worlds are made to kneel in humble admittance to the fact that they do not have all the answers; how the universes upon universes are made to change when even small groups reach out in faith and support Michael's cause.

In having died to the old ways and taking up the new, there is certainly material changes made also. In worship, we are renewed in body as well as mind and spirit. Physical changes do occur with such a positive activity – physical changes on an individual level as well as a planetary level, of course.

Father is waiting enthusiastically for His children to reach up. He finds it His supreme joy to commune with each child, personally. How blessed are we that He should love and care for us! How powerful is worship that we can create such positive changes that resonate all the way to the Supreme Being, yes!

Most mortals, having experienced adversities that would leave them hesitant to trust a higher source, would perhaps be beaten down by life's circumstances. Many mortals who experience physical and mental illness would have a negative outlook on this mortal life. They would perhaps find no cure for what ails them. Many mortals who experience physical/chemical addictions may find their weakness overwhelming and not with hope of recovery without a greater and more powerful source.

Worship brings us a connection in which we are changed – physically, mentally and spiritually; there is strength to endure those daily events that would seem to break the average mortal heart and mind. There is an everyday healing that would bring shock to the average mortal. There is power in relinquishing those things that have held you.

In worship, there is hope and sound solutions to everyday problems. It is our hope that worship will bring the world's people to change their point of view from, 'how the world is so bad' to, 'the world is getting better, how can we help?' Yes.

This concludes our lessons on worship. Still find time in your daily routine to acknowledge the beauty Father has put before you. Still maintain your childlike faith; and in all things have the attitude of living for the glory of our Father in heaven. Commit to Him daily, telling Him who you serve. In the coming weeks we will focus on strength and endurance – being able to persevere and face all difficulties with the courage of the Master. We will discuss self-discipline.

It is well known that a child would rather flee from things unpleasant and fearful than to face them with unknowing. It is evident in your society that various forms of diversion are created in order to feel liberated from life's daily grind. Forms of societal opiates are becoming popular as everyday-living people are wondering 'what are life's meanings about.'

It is indeed difficult to take the punishment of everyday-living with a smile – this is understood. Our upcoming lessons will teach you strength in standing strong in mind and faith; to learn to bend and not break. The Master's living example was such an inspiration for us each.

How can one take life's punishment and not become weak, embittered, angry, depressed, or hopeless! How did Jesus, the man, live from day to day with strength, trust, and encouragement to others! How could He accept life's disappointments without wanting to give in or being broken by them! Yes, ponder upon these things during the week. Have discussion in your next meeting.

I can say each week when we meet, I am made to worship our Father for His overall watchcare and allowing me to be here with you. Again, and as always, my love grows more for you each time we meet. Until next week, shalom.

How do You Perceive Your Difficulties | Spiritual Lessons Are Realized Through

Mortal Adversities

Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH

09-27-1999

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. How I am changed by knowing you. How I am filled with inspiration each time we meet. I am in complete understanding of your mortal state and I know the difficulties mortal life brings. Hardships are difficult enough when you are made to go without apparent proof of spiritual reality. I find you each to do well in your mortal state. I am uplifted by your courage to carry on.

Mortal living can bring many disappointments and crushing blows to the spirit. A man may perceive his adversities to be a chastisement from God. He may believe he has somehow earned his misfortune. He ponders on what he could have done that deserves his adversity? What could he have done different? How could he turn the tables in his favor? How might he escape this bitter reality? Yes, a man with this outlook is likely to become greatly discouraged, embittered, and hopeless. His perception is narrowed to fit his one-dimensional thinking. This thinking recruits the spirit poisons, and difficulties that were not that bad are now made worse.

Another man who is experiencing life's brutal difficulties, may look to his Father and ask: 'What is the meaning of this, Father?' This faithful man may perceive this to be a lesson in acquiring spiritual fruits. He knows that in his mortal state his difficulties are only landmarks upon his eternal path. His difficulties are steppingstones to higher learning. His broad vision allows him to go beyond the ego to an overall good that serves everyone. This man is observant in watching Father work within his problems. Using the stillness mind, he is open for Father's suggestions and solutions.

Yes, man can perceive his difficulties without fear, without unknowing or even loneliness, for he knows Father has promised His assistance. In learning to remain steadfast in faith and persevere through difficulties, it is important that you perceive your mortal life as if you are standing at the beginning of all eternity - because this is so. These mortal problems that plague you today are exercises in which you become strengthened by to advance, spiritually. There is not an escape, you see, for there is not a way to advance without having these experiences which strengthen those spiritual muscles.

In learning to carry on, one must be aware of how you perceive your difficulties. Is Father the cause of your difficulties? No! Is He available to show them to be valuable? Yes! Is He showing them to be with meaning? Yes! Are mortal difficulties 'a frown from heaven' - or, 'a lesson in spiritual advancement.' Yes, it's all in how you perceive your difficulties.

Each day, you stand at the beginning of eternity, yes; and I say, expand your vision and embrace the entire view. Do not cheat yourself by decreasing the view to ego-size or allowing the spirit poisons to make worse what is already seemingly bad. In the midst of your difficulties, what can you do to repel the spirit poisons--like self-pity, anger, or depression--from setting in? Certainly, worship and prayer are extremely helpful. Stillness-time is a wonderful asset, of course.

Yes, to be observant, refrains you from acting out using those spirit poisons. Being watchful, as if you were beside yourself (observing yourself), is a benefit that the Master used quite often. Jesus, when confronted with adversity, did not scream out in panic or make foolish and rash decisions, no. He stopped and consulted with Father – what is the meaning of this? How do I endure through this?

It is difficult, I know, to be patient in these mortal-living trials. But to act out upon feelings of anxiety only draws you closer to those spirit poisons. In your practicality is where you can be faithful that Father will show you how to make good use of your adversities? He can show you how to take those feelings of despair or anxiety and put them to work in a spiritual way.

Can you perceive your adversities as steppingstones to higher learning? Can you broaden your vision to perceive an overall picture of Father's plan? Can you be beside yourself and be observant? The mastering of these techniques will surely lead you to understand the true meaning of strength and endurance.

The Master's difficulties on many occasions left Him in great emotional distress. Of course there was His divine stamina ever standing by – but on many occasions His human heart felt that destructive torture that every mortal must experience. Was He emotional at times? Yes, of course! Did this serve Him? Yes, certainly! it was a release of His human will towards embracing His divine will.

Your emotions are for a reason, hide them not; allow them to release and know that there is not a tear that you can cry that Father does not know the meaning. The spiritual lessons every soul needs to learn are not mandatory as to be all a part of the mortal world, no! but there is no escape from them either, in time. Yes, sooner or later we all must have our spiritual lessons, and I say, these are best derived and realized from the mortal struggle. Even the Master experienced great emotional release in the laying down of His will to taking up the Father's.

Be not afraid to discuss with one another these mortal trials. Be not afraid to allow your emotions to release the human will to aligning with the Father's. When you become comfortable with the divine will, and how it affects you personally, then your trials are not so big; not so overwhelming. Yes, you can find strength from that Source within – the Source of all strength. You can master your difficulties, yes, and not be enslaved to them when you are in alignment with Father's will, and wholeheartedly willing to drink the cup of 'come what may.'

This week, I ask that you find a bit of time to write your thoughts on where you stand concerning this lesson. Are you like the first man? or more like the second. Is your vision broadened to see into eternity? Can you not react in a rash manner without first being observant and waiting upon the will of the Lord? The working out of your human thoughts may take some time alone with Father. To be emotional is not weakness, but a slow transformation of will, yes.

That is all. I am ever growing each week in love for you. I am happy to visit with you during the week. In your observance of life's challenges, look for me, for I am happy to assist you with your daily questions. Until next week, shalom.

Learning to Drink The Cup With Grace | Abraham Shares Plight of His Learning to Drink The Cup With Grace | Abraham Shares Plight of His Cancer-Friend/Student

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-04-1999

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am so appreciative of your conversation on this lesson. It is helping me to minister to one of my students who is learning to drink the cup with grace.

My student and friend was a hardworking loyal and dedicated employee. He was a wonderful and thoughtful father. He was a loving and caring husband. He almost never missed church service on Sunday. He embraced Father's high ideals and did his utmost to live by them.

Approximately one year ago he was diagnosed with a fatal form of cancer. The surgery did little good. The months of chemotherapy and radiation only prolonged his agonizing pain. He is now most definitely financially ruined. It would appear that all that he had worked for was in vain.

This man most certainly worried about his family's well-being for it had been quite a strain on them. His physical pain had literally put him at the brink of insanity. At first, he asked: "Father, how could this have happened? Was I not a loyal son? Why would you punish me in this way?" His physical pain had made him to scream in anger at Father and make either promises, or threats to Him, in exchange for painlessness.

My friend's wife also wondered at their plight. Her endless hours of caretaking had taken its toll on her - mentally, emotionally, and physically. As well, the children have had their days bound in fear and unknowing at their father's pain; their emotions poured uncontrollably as they tried to come to terms with their situation.

Mental acceptance is setting in, yes, and yet this is still not enough; there is still such restlessness at times. Should this man not have moved into a higher-mindedness he would have been cheated out of a grand spiritual advancement. As he is now within the realms of reason, he is asking God for logical answers - and in this, we rejoice. Father is not punishing him, no. This, a typical experience of so many, is the results of an imperfect time-period in history; this is a part of life, yes, in which many do experience.

Should my friend die embittered? Should his family live with the regrets that their loved one's death was just one of life's hard knocks? No! for as a result of the hard knocks the family has united in a spiritual quest for value and meanings. The man is grateful in every living moment he has left. He imparts his wisdom to his children where he can. He teaches them of the life beyond this life. He bestows upon them his faith and enables them to be participants in life, as well as death. He empowers his family to take value from this experience and minister to others.

My friend has made a great deal of friends in his community. He can teach and show his faith in Father's abilities to provide the glory and victory over all things, even death. He can look at others with illnesses and know their thoughts, understand their plight. He can touch the lives of those who are hopeless because he understands hopelessness. He can teach endurance for he has endured great pain. He can exemplify patience for he has been made to wait incessantly.

This man's sensory awareness has increased many-fold for he knows his days are running out and lives each moment to the fullest. He has learned within one year what it might take others a lifetime to learn. He has seen the victory in his adversity. He has watched Father bring value out in everything – that even in his pain there is a process of finding and accepting the Father's will. He can blame Father, he can even be angry at Father, yes – but in all this, Father patiently awaits the passing of these random emotions to a stage of reason wherein He can be by the side of His child and provide love, comfort, and answers.

My student/friend's wife and children are now being encouraged by their loved ones' brave example to carry on. They can go forth to find reason, meaning; and be comforted by the fact that this terrible plight is all being made to work for the glory of God and the overall good of everyone involved.

In His last few mortal days Jesus did, on a most personal level, understand such an experience to its fullest. He had to allow the personalized Adjuster to sustain Him for a period. In these moments of pain, there is naught else to do except reinforce your faith by prayer, worship, and being observant.

As our time draws to a close, I would ask that you put into writing, a prayer – a letter of sorts to my friend/student who will shortly be leaving this mortal state. What have you learned from him? How can you also utilize his experience to help others? My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

A Commitment To Drink The Cup Brings Out Father's Adventure

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. You, my friends, are such a wonderful and well-balanced part of my spiritual diet. Each time we can meet I indeed feel strengthened and nourished. I also thank you for the beautiful prayer, yes. Your good thoughts are well received. You are understanding this lesson very well. Your completed assigned work is strength-promoting and faith-uplifting. Thank you.

When the Master walked the earth in mortal flesh, He experienced human living to its fullest. Many times did He reconcile Himself to drinking the cup. Even when He knew the cup was bitter, He wanted to drink it for Father's sake; Often did His human mind resist and fight His divine side for freedom from experiencing life's painful events, yes.

The Master was close enough to Father to want with all His heart to please Father. Jesus' love for Father strengthened Him to desire to do His will. He experienced apprehension, confusion, even some fear – and yet the bond with His Father in heaven was strong enough to find strength to overcome.

The Master's human side also sought escape at times, just as all mortals do. The unknowing of the cup may seem an opening of the door to things you might expect to be soulfully crushing. Father knows the contents of the cup and can guide you and fill you with the courage you need to drink.

Yes, your close connection with Father allows you to know Him and love Him unlike any other you have ever loved. Your love for Him can help you to choose His will. It can move you beyond doubt or seeking escape, to looking forward to what Father has in store for you. Father's ways are practical and yet, adventurous. They are knowledgeable and yet, arduous. His ways are the ways of a true and loving Father.

My student/friend dying of cancer (last week's lesson) continues to uphold his highest ideals while facing his adversity. The lessons are in abundance, and with speed. His pain is still present and yet, his joy is magnified. He has moved closer to Father than ever. He seeks not escape, and chooses to drink the cup with grace due to his deep love for Father, yes.

In learning strength and endurance, adversity is our greatest teacher. Choosing to drink the cup of come what may, and not escape or bypass, is a commitment to Father's adventure. An individual needs not accept the fact that they are too ill – and that they are with terrible adversity that is more than an individual's ability to accept Father's cup, no. Doctors or other advisors may have their say, but in the end, it is Father's counsel we go by. My friend accepted the fact that he was sick, yes, but allowed not his thoughts to promote the sickness to extremes, no, for he had turned his will over to his Father.

Jesus was also in knowing that the cup He must drink concerning His departure, was indeed bitter; He did not wish to experience death in this manner, but He had also come to terms with His Father's wishes. He allowed not His thoughts to promote anything but light and goodness, yes. Jesus could very well have fought His tormentors. He could have prolonged His agony and given those who persecuted Him cause to keep torturing Him and to believe what they were doing was right.

Jesus indeed drank the cup with grace, ministering to others up to the very end of His mortal career, yes. He chose to be within the Father's will. Not for one minute was He in judgment of Father's ability to comfort and to provide values and meanings. I would say that Jesus worked for the glory of Father in every situation. He asserted His abilities as 'Father's son' – to promote goodness to all He met.

Had Jesus chosen to escape the cup and lay down before His troubles He would have most certainly changed the destiny of His mission. Should my friend/student with cancer have chosen to give up, to turn inward toward self-pity and anger, he would have missed these grand lessons that Father had planned for Him. He most certainly would have not found the value and promoted good for his friends and family.

Jesus, and my friend, had chosen to actively participate in the drinking of the cup. The cup is not forced, no. You can choose to spread the highest good while you are having these experiences, yes. As mortals, you are not expected to be perfect while in mortality. Your anger and despair is understood. Your acts of rage are understood. Your self-'shutting down' is understood.

But know – as you choose to be within Father's will and drink the cup, you learn strength. You are comforted and shown those things that God knows. You are given the ability to demonstrate in your daily living what God has shown you. You are with more courage, yes; accelerated lessons, yes – but the joy contained therein cannot be compared to any other joy you have known.

Next week I will take questions. This week, I ask that you ponder upon your commitment to Father's adventure. How do you play an active part in promoting the highest good while you drink the cup? My love for you grows each time we meet. I will be available to visit with any who desire. Until next week, shalom.

Spiritual Strength And Endurance | See Our Adversities As A Light From God

I am ABRAHAM. How I am touched each week by your valiant efforts to grow. In your sharing with one another there is higher thinking activation and a stronger bond between you each and us your unseen friends, yes.

In our youth, we believe that all things are possible. As we are maturing, we often think 'life is not as it should be.' However, my friends, I have witnessed many of your fellow elders who have lived a whole life and expressed that 'life was as it should have been.' Your elders did not reach that conclusion with ease, no; time and experience in 'drinking the cup' brought them to believe that life is not only about good and bad, but how you can personally endure while upholding your fellows.

My student/friend with cancer, who has chosen to drink the cup with grace, has made his journey through illness somewhat easier. In his ministrations to others, he finds his mind free from self, free from the consciousness of pain and fear of loss. In his decision to go with Father's will he is receiving heightened spiritual assistance. He has chosen to not dwell upon self but to take this mortal challenge and do his utmost for his Father in heaven.

When my friend chooses to heal, he feels healed. When he chooses to give hope, he is hope-filled. When he acts as a light from God, God shines back upon him. That is spiritual strength and endurance.

Choosing to experience the whole Urantian adventure comes complete with both joy and despair. Be not surprised when adversity befalls you. Choose to take challenge as an opportunity to be a light from God. In adversity, we find what really matters; we find how important love is, and how unimportant deadlines are; we find money to be useless, and family and friends to be priceless. In adversity we find God; we feel the realness of our mortal path.

Should my student/friend suffering from cancer have chosen to be beaten by his illness he would not have felt those moments of closeness with Father; he would have spread hopelessness and received hopelessness. Had he chosen to blame others for his illness he would have only stirred within him the spirit poisons. Had he chosen to seek sympathy for his plight he would have become weaker and susceptible to more pain and difficulties. Had he chosen not to be a light from God he most definitely could not feel the light of God shining upon him, yes.

This week look at your adversities to be an opportunity to be a light from God. Heal and be healed; love and be loved; shine and be shined upon. As promised, I will accept questions.

RACHEL: Father Abraham, this evening we have a new brother with us. His name is Allen, and I bet you he has some questions for you. (Abraham: Greetings Allen.)

ALLEN: Hi. I am not sure I really have any questions for you, except I was listening to some people say that they didn't feel that they knew that they loved the Father, but they did have faith. I wondered about that and I thought perhaps faith follows love. I would just like to know about that.

ABRAHAM: Certainly, my son. Each mortal's experience will differ when it comes to this area. How one has lived their life is a major key in answering this question. Childhood upbringing can have an effect on how you would perceive love and faith. Faith has its roots embedded into the area of intelligence. Many a scholar would trust and have faith that the information is there to learn, but not particularly have feelings for the divine teacher. On Urantia, 'mortal concepts of love' are generally rooted in emotions. Emotions, being fleeting or transient, are a non-substantial foundation to build upon. Spiritual love, however, will be rooted in intelligence alongside faith. Love will be the most significant proof that God is. In time, faith and love are becoming more equal, but no one can say which can come first. Can one love a God who they do not know if He is real or not? Or, how can one not love such a brilliant and powerful Caretaker? Good question! You can indeed come to a conclusion as to which is more true to 'your' mortal experience. I am most happy to speak with you again, my son. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I have been wanting to ask this question for a while. You know, when Ian first told me about you and Ellanor, and I was talking to some people and they were telling me about you, at first it was like you were this all-serious guy and I was like, 'oh wow,' and I came anyhow - and found you to be the most wonderful friend. I kind of have that same experience with the idea in concept, in reality of Machiventa Melchizedek. Like when I first heard about him I thought, 'wow, what a serious guy,' knowing that he is involved with all this stuff that is so important. Then when I heard him share through Willie V., at the Nashville TM conference, it was like the most loving experience, just like with you. For some reason, I wonder about him a lot. I always love reading what he shares. So here is my question: I don't know why, but I get thoughts about Machiventa a lot. Would it be appropriate for me to do one of my Miriam questions - like how's he doing and what's he up to? Could you share some information about him - whatever would be appropriate? I just have this real desire to know more about him. Would that be okay?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I can say he frequents this meeting. He is still a wonderful mentor to me. I constantly use his wisdom in our lessons. He does oversee the teaching network, ensuring that all proceeds according to Michael's plan. He is in an administrative position and yet, whenever possible he finds time to help with unusual spiritual difficulties - including difficulties among groups such as this; difficulties with race, racial problems; or difficulties where inequality abides, yes. Machiventa is always a powerhouse of enthusiasm to me, and I find that I thrive spiritually from our association, yes. As this Correcting Time becomes prevalent in all areas of mortal living, you will find yourself knowing certain personalities on a more personal level; personalities who are also likened to yours will become more familiar to you as they are able to minister to you in the method which best suits you. Yes, thank you for your question. He is well, my daughter. Another question? (Miriam: Thank you.) Abraham: You are welcome.

CALVIN: Abraham, are there any tips you can give me for furthering my contact with Father and to have a greater connection with His love? I think that is the point I need to find most – for the strength to let go of my old patterns and to have more trust and faith.

ABRAHAM: You do well and need not worry about Father closeness. It occurs in all aspects of your daily living. To ponder upon being within the stillness mind would do you well. Using the stillness mind when speaking with your acquaintances can lead you to see Father in action. Adversity is a route in which we can know our Father better. The more we know Him the closer we are and the more we love Him, yes. To ride the tide of adversity is a cleansing of the soul; a cleansing from spirit poisons; a clearing of prejudice or preconceived notions – allowing for Father to guide, comfort, and be known as a constant presence, yes. That is all. Another question?

INERA: This isn't a question. Abraham, I just wanted to say hello, and I love your lessons, and I missed the classes, and I am glad to be here.

ABRAHAM: Noted, my daughter. I am also happy to have you here. This class (our teachings and your interaction with one another) is indeed an anchor in the stormy seas of everyday living. You most certainly reap your lessons from all directions, yes, but feel free to call upon me to help you define those lessons, yes. (Inera: Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

ANESIA: Abraham, I am very thankful to be back here with this group and all my friends, and with you. I have been going through some hard times with my father, and maybe if you could just give me some advice or some words that would help me for my future, and with my earthly father and our relationship, if you have anything to say?

ABRAHAM: Yes Anesia, my daughter, I understand this dilemma and how you are hurt by it. I perceive that you reach out to your earthly father and he is confused by it. Sometimes our biological parents are not what we expected or needed, but nonetheless, he is a lesson in endurance for you. My suggestion to you is to take some time, a short amount of time, to feel detached from him. View him as a mortal man, a fallible being which feels the same fears that all mortals feel. Detach and expect not results. Allow him to be released into our Father's hands for further evaluation. You will find who you truly are in this detachment. His definition of you will hold no meaning or further cause you pain. He most certainly loves you, yes, but a time to step back is needed to redefine the boundary lines. You are his daughter, yes, but you are also a grown woman and a child of God. That is all. Another question?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I know that in the past you and Father Ham have both told us that you are all working with the different heads of organized religions. I know that you are probably seeing results from it too. With this last general conference (LDS Church, SLC, UT), in President Hinkley's speech I was quite impressed when he told all of his membership that now is the time for restitution – not retribution, but restitution. When I looked that up in a dictionary, I think it means practically the same thing as our Correcting Time. Do you care to comment on it?

ABRAHAM: Yes. You are correct, my daughter, Rachel. The churches are viewing the masses as having intelligence. If enough individuals rise up, this can either bring change or, a loss in attendance and revenue. The heads of the churches do not want these losses and will be forced into evolving with the times. The churches need to accommodate the people and address the changing times. They need to minister to people where they are in their lives right now. The people are becoming ingrained with a burdening feeling that the churches do not provide enough for them to grow spiritually and to find comfort in dealing with difficulties in everyday living. Yes. You are correct. Does this answer? (Rachel: Yes it does, and I thank you. I want you to know that when the Relief Society sisters from the church came over to teach me this past week, I read them your prayer.) Abraham: Well done. I thank you. Another question?

HARRISON: Abraham, I get the feeling we are on an accelerated program here and that we are probably learning more than we think we are. I don't know if the feeling is correct or not, but I do want to thank you so much for your lessons.

ABRAHAM: You are on an accelerated teaching program only because you have requested it; you are allowing it, and you are participating in it. Well done. Every individual who seeks will surely find, yes. I can say that the world around you may appear to be bleak in the first beginnings of this our Correcting Time – but worry not, the people have spoken and know within what needs to be done to create change. Yes, this is accelerated learning. You are correct, my son. Another question?

MIRIAM: I have been at a crossroads lately. In one way, every day is exactly what it should be regarding what comes into my life and who comes into my life – as in what you were saying about 'drinking the daily cup;' but I have also had some confusion as to which path to take. My new friend, Charlana, has really been helping me. It is just such a wonderful thing to get helpers, seen and unseen. She was saying that maybe I was kind of crippling myself because I had to choose one of three ways. She was saying maybe I can choose all three. Could you give me some help or some guidance there? I have been pondering that for a while.

ABRAHAM: I am understanding that there are still some issues dealing with your ability to find yourself worthy to accept all of Father's abundance. There is a discomfort with accepting the fact that you have learned a definite path and are indeed qualified to teach others. The assignment to teach is causing some fear, and you are afraid to step forth with too much confidence because you are unsure of your ability. I say, you have experienced things that would qualify you to minister to a great many people. You have a definite poise and grace when it comes to your fellows. Be not afraid to step forth and act, using the Spirit as your lamp.

We will draw these questions to a close. I have enjoyed our meeting and always look forward to our interaction during the week. I say to you, my friends, this group is a rock in which its foundation will carry us for a long time to come. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Cancer Friend Dies | Detest The Ways of The Ego | Introduction of Emulan|
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-25-1999

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome and my greetings to you each. I am as always, looking forward to meeting with you. What a wonderful adventure we have shared. We have experienced some of life's tragedies, sorrows, and difficulties right here within this group. There have been many harsh feelings experienced here, yes. There have been difficulties some could not rise above, but for the most part our group adversity has taught us strength and endurance.

Each time we complete a group lesson on 'endurance through adversity' we are made stronger for the next lesson. Our friendship has become family oriented. Our joy and comfort, without a doubt, does overpower the small discomforts we receive from disagreeing or disharmony.

Tonight I relay to you our joy at receiving my friend/student to this side of reality. [Abraham's speaks of his friend with cancer in previous lessons]. He is overjoyed and feeling complete with his mortal experience. His transition was peaceful. He left a positive legacy in which quite a few generations will prosper from. His life was well spent and his final lesson has advanced him, significantly, in the morontial career.

I say, you need not experience my friends' experience to his extreme; mortal-living is quite an effort all on its own without such debilitating disease as is cancer. The cup we drink as mortals is spiritually propelling, yes - but the efforts to drink can take its toll on the mortal mind. We are in gratitude for Michael's ministry and His Spirit of Truth, for He has lived what you live and can assist us in drinking the cup with grace, yes.

I do remember my time on Earth when I was quite confident in my own internal knowledge. I believed my thinking to be somewhat superior over my fellows, and I was quite obstinate toward others' ideas - including those ideas that challenged my understanding of my 'many Gods.' It wasn't until my friend Machiventa's teaching and example that I realized how my thinking had blocked me from my Father in heaven. I had lived this mortal life the hard way, as most do, until I became conscious that my ideas and beliefs were nothing more than my ego-animal-self in action.

As Machiventa pointed out to me, that I could find great heavenly assistance through humility, I was able to begin enduring life's adversities. Time after time through the rigors of mortal-living I softened to my old ways and made efforts to take up Machiventa's new way. Through believing I could receive personal assistance from the 'One God,' I could affect not only my own life, but many others, and play a small part in the destiny of the world.

As I died to my old ways and was born again to the new, I felt a reliance upon my mentor, Machiventa, and personal revelation from Father. In my transition, I began to detest my thoughts of self-superiority. I was made small through adversity, yes, and in my humiliating experiences I reached upward. Adversity does make us small, and in our detesting the ego's advice we can receive clear communion from those on high.

If one is so firmly rooted in their own beliefs, there is a decrease in the flow of spiritual information; there is a decrease in capacity to receive information from the Source of all knowledge. Adversity is seen simply on other worlds as 'a blessing' – an opportunity to become small, to be beside the ego-self, to gain closeness with the Source of all love, all wisdom, all knowledge, yes.

When discomforting moments overtake you, flee not from the pain – for it is an opening for Father-assistance. Adversity is an opportunity to be beside the effects of the ego-self. Adversity is a two-way path in which you can choose: One is the path of the animal self – incorporating the spirit poisons, complicating everything. The other is the path of the higher self: it is finding those small opportunities to utilize the Spirit fruits – and ministering to 'the situation,' as well as everyone involved, yes.

This week I ask you to notice – that as you draw towards things spiritual, how you begin to detest the ways of the ego and to release those firmly-planted notions, while concentrating on becoming fluid in your thinking. Allow for a natural flow; and in doing so, notice how you find you are gaining some control and self-mastery during this process – you find strength to endure, while the mind becomes clear to receive spiritual communication.

I am sorry, no questions, but I do have an announcement: I am pleased to introduce an opportunity for you to meet personally with a new Teacher. This Teacher, Emulan, is skilled in the art of relationship-building. He is quite direct and can be firm in his words. Have you not the strength for complete truth, then seek not his counsel. Emulan is available to assist you in your lessons on strength and endurance. He is a kind counselor and friend. I can always count on him for constructive advice. Arrangements can be made, yes.

That is all. My love goes with you. I will also seek your questions throughout the week. Until next time, shalom.

The Scale Of Mortal Inconveniences Against Those Heavenly Gifts

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I am with you. Greetings. How wonderful it is for us to watch your discussion blossom into a beautifying growth-experience. Your efforts to communicate are well worth the minor irritations; and for the most part, someone benefits by your participation. Your faith, your dedication, your many efforts, contributes to the overall success of Michael's Mission.

Your thoughts are important. Your contribution adds to the small parts that add to the whole. Your efforts made each week to meet for these lessons add to the overall wellness of society.

Think not on our cause to be in the shadows, no, because progress moves so slowly and you must go on faith. Our Mission is literal, yes, and each small effort made by individuals does make connections where there were not connections before. In learning strength and endurance, we are not to be found slothful or fearful.

We must certainly use all the resources within our powers. Faith is good; trust is good, yes; but know that action speaks loudly on a material world such as this. One cannot sit back and expect to be fed the cup of mortal-needed experience, no. One must grab hold with both hands and make every effort to drink, yes. Those willing to do those small seemingly insignificant jobs for Father provide the energy in which larger plans are executed. We thank you for your efforts.

Our Mission is not mystical, not fleeting, nor is it a phenomenon, no. This, our Correcting Time, is practical, useful, and necessary if we should see Urantia move into a better age. Yes, mortal-living experience teaches us that Father is indeed, all-knowing, all-powerful. Drinking the cup boldly commits us to a life of ministry to our fellows.

Our dedication and commitment to the doing of Father's will leaves us with the desire to abandon the ego's desires. You learn to find the ego's techniques to be quite distasteful – this does not mean you mistrust yourself, or are inadequate as a child of God, no. Ego is a natural byproduct of being mortal. But as spirituality grows in individuals, you learn to recognize the manifestations of the human ego more easily. In detesting the ego and embracing the divine are you granted Father's heavenly gifts, such as:

- Father's knowledge becomes your knowledge.
- Father's techniques are revealed to you.
- Father's personality is obviously present without even your request to perceive it.

Could you call these miracles? Perhaps! I know them as 'those heavenly gifts that make mortal life well worth living.' All the struggle, agony, and mental torment are well worth gaining this new vision of God. To know without a doubt that you can stand in the presence of God while living the mortal life, is most definitely worth striving for. To know you are fueled on His very essence leaves you to drink heartily from the cup of 'come what may.'

No, this is not the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow; not a dangling carrot; and not even the light at the end of a long and dark mortal tunnel, no! This promise I speak of is not an enticement for you to be recruited within the family of God, most definitely not. I speak of these things heavenly as factual effects from fearlessly drinking the cup of mortal progression, doing so with full trust and faith combined with action. It is choosing your indwelling Father's will, yes, and embracing His high ideals.

Learning strength and endurance, and detesting the ego's ways, leads us down the eventual path of personal ministration by our Father in heaven. How blessed are we that He simplifies what we think complex. He clarifies what we find confusing. He sustains us in our weakness. He teaches us the characteristics of a soul who radiates truth, beauty, and goodness.

It is said, "we will see it when we believe it" – and it is so, yes! those that can be so unshakably dedicated to drinking the mortal cup with faith and trust and action shall see heaven on Earth. Doubt not my words, for this message hails from Michael Himself, yes. Just a few questions, please.

CALVIN: Thank you again, Abraham, for your teaching here tonight. Concerning our opportunity to work with Emulan, how would you like us to schedule that – are you suggesting personal meetings or group interaction?

ABRAHAM: I am in understanding that he is to be viewed as a personal counselor, a spiritual therapist, so to speak. He is gifted at drawing the true individual out to the surface and this is highly personal. Should there be a need, Emulan can surely speak in my stead. I can assure you that he has in-depth knowledge of this group and each individual in it. He has attended many meetings and has studied a great deal on the inner workings of our Mission and our group. There may be need for him to address the group from time to time, yes. In the meantime, let's continue with the personal growth meetings. Is this answering? (Calvin: Yes. Thanks.) Abraham: You're welcome.

MIRIAM: Abraham, can you tell us about Emulan, where he comes from, anything like that?

ABRAHAM: Yes. Emulan hails from a world that has similar strife-torn experiences such as Urantia. In his mortal life, he was considered successful. He experienced considerable loss of immediate family members and had bouts with mental imbalance. His embracing the Divine empowered him to seek education in the psychiatric field – materially speaking. His morontial career advancements and education furthered his natural gift in this same field. Some may think him to be hardened by his adversity – and therefore, so direct and harsh with his words; but this is not the case. While his experience in the flesh made him determined, his personal love of Michael drove him to fully embracing the Spirit of Truth – and from that, his love for truth has served him, and others, in his field of expertise. He is direct, yes, but his encouragement allows individuals' faith-levels to soar, yes. Last question, please.

RACHEL: Father Abraham, speaking of how Emulan retained his natural gifts into the post-mortal existence – a lot of our great mortals we have had on this Earth have been in the entertainment field, namely Dean Martin and Bing Crosby, and a good number of the others. After they reach the Mansion Worlds, do they retain all these talents that they have possessed here on this Earth?

ABRAHAM: Yes. By my understanding, the talent is still present and yet new talents are revealed; it is all personal desire, however. If one should desire progress in these talents, then yes. (Rachel: I'm pretty sure that I'll start at the bottom.) [laughter.] Abraham: I say you do well, as does each one here. I know my mortal talents seemed minimal after my awakening in a new reality. The prospects are limitless but you can acquire a slight taste of what you may be pursuing after this present reality. Yes.

That is all. I am more in love with you each with every meeting. This week: Consider your commitment to the drinking of the cup, the doing of the will of Father's versus your own. Ponder upon the scale of mortal inconveniences against those heavenly gifts. Would you even find your mortal lessons to be worth the mental aggravation to acquiring spiritual maturity? Is there trust that the cup of mortal living leads you to have unshakable strength and endurance? Can you find yourself small enough to say no to the ego and wait upon the word of the Lord?

Yes. I shall be available for those who call on me for assistance with this lesson. I thank you. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Conclusion of Lessons on Strength And Endurance | How Do We Abandon the Ego's Ways.
Should We

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I did quite enjoy this evening's discussion; it had a genuine spiritual flow and candor. I believe you each assisted one another with an energy that promotes strength, endurance, love, and tolerance. My children, you are grasping these lessons, yes. We have learned that in building strength and endurance, we do so 'through adversity.' You still can feel at ease to use your full range of emotions to get to a place of reason, yes; Father can reach you in that place of reason and provide for you sound solutions.

We have learned through the Master's example that while we can explore routes for escaping the cup, the path to spiritual ascension is in the laying down of your will and taking up Fathers'. We see that the attempts to escape only prolong the inevitable spiritual lessons. We know that stillness and journaling are helpful in calming the fears and clarifying the thoughts. Trusting in Father's almighty abilities does allow us to relax. In our relaxation, we find peace of mind and an increased capacity for tolerance.

Also in these lessons on strength and endurance we have learned through my student/friend with cancer, how going beyond the discomforts of adversity, to ministering to others, leads to healing - whether it is mind, body, or spirit. In building strength and endurance, we find our adversities to decrease when our minds are set on productive goals and outreaching ministry to our fellows.

We have also covered the topic of detesting the ego's ways as we cling more fully to the divine. Father shows us the ego's ways to be temporary, cowardly, self-saving, self-serving, and a spiritual stumbling-block. Through dedication to drinking the cup of 'come what may,' we find that strength and endurance has made our lessons a bit more gentle.

When we have committed to the drinking of the mortal cup, we are going forth with Father's will in abandoning the ego's ways. With such faith and trust in Father, who has provided the cup, we are allowed to receive those spiritual gifts that add to our overall experience. In detesting the ego's ways we recognize Father's presence and available assistance to move through mortal life with mindal and spiritual well-balance.

How I am at times overwhelmed by Father's caretaking - how He knows each one of us and what we need. While most mortals on a material planet drink similar cups, Father does know how best to teach each one of us. While we cannot escape the mortal cup, we can find it to be quite fulfilling and spiritually adventuresome.

Even as I look back now, my mortal adventure was only a moment in time; and 'the bad' wasn't really all that bad. The spiritual lessons I derived from my mortal adventure was a catalyst in time and eternity. The mortal adventure is important, yes, but only a small part of the grand adventure. While pain is so prevalent on your world, the opportunity for spiritual advancement is even greater. This concludes our lessons on strength and endurance, yes. A few questions?

RACHEL: Father Abraham, I'd like to ask if you and Emulan visited me and gave me a message last Thursday?

ABRAHAM: We most certainly did, my daughter, Rachel. I believe you are, for the most part, accurate in receiving the message, yes.

RACHEL: Well, I want to thank you both. Yes, I did ask for you to be very frank with me, and that if I needed some hellfire – then give it to me. [group laughter.] That's the reason I didn't think it was you, but possibly Emulan.

ABRAHAM: We were quite blunt and direct, yes. You are well trained in assimilating these facts and need not flowery wording to understand our meaning. Yes, Emulan is familiar with each one of my students and has been well trained in speaking to each one according to their own ability to understand, yes.

RACHEL: May I thank you, and ask you to thank Emulan for me, please.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Yes, I also thank you. I reiterate to let everyone know of our availability for your personal journaling time, yes. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, in these lessons that we get – I am slowly learning that what I had thought were just 'petty things' in my daily life are in reality, Father's lessons that I need to learn. I just want to say thanks for this set of lessons on how to view and assimilate our mortal adversities; they have been more revealing than any of the lessons I've encountered – at least more self-realizing. My experiences seem silly and so petty; and yet I find without question how your teachings are so helpful to integrate the experience of the week with your teaching. I really appreciate it.

ABRAHAM: Noted. We do attempt to coincide our lessons according to your personal Father Fragments' agenda. We network with various spiritual beings to arrange lessons according to Father's plans, but we cannot teach one whose eyes are closed, one who is not willing to learn. Thank you for your willingness and perseverance to carry on even in the face of the unknown.

You all have done quite well with this particular lesson. It is always wonderful for me to watch the unfolding, and your reactions. Your spiritual innocence and genuineness is as touching as a small child putting forth every effort to learn, yes. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, before we leave this lesson could you clarify the difference perhaps of the energy of 'detesting the ego' versus 'accepting our human condition, mortal condition.' Do you know what I am saying?

ABRAHAM: Understood. Even the Master showed forth His human emotion – tears, strong words, anxiety-filled adrenaline-rush, perhaps some anger, some apprehension – all of which is most definitely a part of the mortal experience. I am meaning, all this is a part of having a mortal body with all its functions, including its mental and emotional systems. Emotions can be originated in the biological realm, meaning that they are inherent and wholly natural, unlearned, yes. Ego is more of a behavioral pattern that gathers and stores information over time. The ego stems from a step below human nature (it begins as a more animal-like nature). Ego grows beyond self-survival to self-superiority, and needs be restrained/balanced. Good question, my daughter. I know from experience the trickery of the ego. I have learned that even in its primal form it was a good teacher to me. The ego allowed me to see the contrast of the negative animal-like self against the natural spiritual/soul-related core self. While the Master experienced the natural emotions of being mortal, His constant communion with Father deterred Him from the ego-self. This was His rock. This was His stability in which He could accept His emotional self, work through His difficulties, but not go into those ego-led spiritual poisons. Yes. Good question. One more question?

CLAIREESA: Abraham, I need some guidance, please. I have to straighten out my thinking and my ego and my selfishness. Can you help me with this?

ABRAHAM: I can try, my daughter. I understand you to see yourself as being ego-led, causing some seeming selfishness. I say this is not reality for you at this time, for you are indeed thinking of others and have some unproductive guilt over having need for yourself. To have some need and comfort is not selfishness as far as your situation goes at this time. You need to put things practical in the forefront of your mind. You have to allow other's opinions to go by the wayside. Your own internal feelings are a strong guide toward logical solutions. My daughter, ego is not the issue here. You have given all you can, and now you have need. Be not afraid or feel weak when you are in need of assistance. Should you believe you are truly deserving of Father's abundance you would be amazed at the life-changes you would experience. Have you something specific in mind, daughter?

CLAIREESA: I am just real confused right now. May I perhaps ask for a private session?

ABRAHAM: Of course, myself or Emulan could be made available. Yes.

I am to close our meeting for now. I would ask that you each find yourselves at rest during the week. Whether it is at play or other outside reversion, or doing nothing at all, this rest will help you to re-energize for our upcoming lessons. Feel not guilt at resting. Allow your minds that ease a child would experience in the arms of a loving parent. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

I am ABRAHAM. I truly feel Father's abundance many times over when I come to call on this group. Your friendship and light shared give me an overall perspective of how Father's plan is coming together to bring this world into a new era.

Yes, greetings, my friends. I am told our lesson this evening will be light in order to keep with the theme of rest. With good rest, one's thinking is cleared to reevaluate, reorganize, and prioritize one's life, yes. I am happy to present to you my friend and associate, Emulan.

My first collective greetings to you, my friends. I am EMULAN, your friend and teacher for this evening. I have been honored to have met with some of you and I look forward to meeting all of you who have not yet had personal time with me, yes.

I have had the opportunity to live a mortal life, to be within the depths of its despair – and, to experience the heights of its glory. I had the opportunity to traverse the mindal realm from its very lowest animal-like nature to the very highest divinely-led abilities.

In my early days on my mortal planet, I lived a fairly basic life. I generally went with whatever was considered normal for that day and age. I had little true spiritual understanding, and lived my life accordingly. In those days I was beholden to the ego; I served my ego from within the level of thinking I was at the time. I sought adventures that were considered dangerous. I thrived on my fellow's reactions to me; and their reactions, I took in. Yes, I incorporated into my life those things that served my ego.

In today's world of temporary false stimulations, many incorporate things into their lives that can be a generator of negativity. Children take in an unloving reality, and adults wonder why this is manifested in such a harmful way. You are what you focus on? One who would be recovering from chemical addiction does not even entertain the idea of being near that chemical – they know very well the course they will take again should they slip.

Regarding your spiritual diet, what are you taking in? What do you manifest as a result of your diet? Do you engage in gossip and in the generation of negative feelings? If yes, then why do you wonder when you feel negativity generated around you? Do you not become suspicious that others are gossiping about you? Negative energy brings negative energy.

What is added to your recipe for spiritual living? Is it perhaps good deeds done for others? Does this not manifest in your life as good deeds done to you? Can one read books and be entertained by fear and expect to produce spiritual fruits? No. Can one be a student of our Urantia text and become weighed down by hopelessness? No. What are the ingredients to your recipe in spiritual living?

Once I had learned of the divine nature I had to create a change in my life. I fed myself with things spiritual – I studied, I meditated, I gave freely of my time to Godly causes. Yes, all this promoted a great closeness with Father; it was an avenue to the utilization of the spiritual fruits.

Can one indulge in negative activity and then wonder where their divine connection had gone? Can we be slothful in our studies and then ask why we have become imbalanced? It is clear, you must utilize your human resources. You are the producer of things positive or negative. I know as well as anyone, that days spent among the negativity of the world can have a harsh effect on you.

Do you see why you need a daily regimen of spiritual intake? What do you embrace into your life? Is your focus on money? Is it on fame? Are you always with that feeling of lack that no matter how hard you try you are never filled? What a cycle of imbalance! My friends, we cannot go day to day without spiritual intake and then wonder: Where is God? Why am I so alone? Why is my pain unbearable?

You each have your own spiritual recipe for daily living. What keeps you connected? What keeps you from spiritual loneliness? Does beautiful music belong in your recipe? Does that help you to feel connected? Does this manifest anything good in your life and the lives of those you know? Does artistic abilities connect you to that spiritual world where you know without a doubt that all is well? From such feelings of balance, how can you not be divinely connected? How can you not produce spiritual fruits?

The mind is an empty domain in which you can seek to decorate it with things that promote spiritual light – or, things that bring about darkness. Would a moment of stillness calm the chaotic domain? Would the calmness bring balance? Of course! Is balance the mind's goal? Of course!

What would you like to change about your behavior patterns? Begin by searching what is in your mindal abode. What can you be free from that brings clutter and confusion? What can you do to promote a beautifully light atmosphere? You are the architect, and what you build, matters.

Mortals all too often forget that they, figuratively speaking, house the Father Fragment. Is this place in which He lives and works from, balanced, organized, and positive? You do have a responsibility to your personal Father Fragments. What lives in the minds' domain with your Father? Does He struggle to reach you? Do you get your lessons of life through the 'school of hard knocks?' or, is He teaching your lessons through peace and joy?

I am happy to have realized in my mortal life that I had some control in how my divine career proceeded. Father proved to be a wonderful helpmate to me; He laid out plainly for me to see what I was lacking in my spiritual diet. I know that the mind is the beginning of many things. It is where you live, work, and play. It is where you comprehend God. Mental stability is so important in your spiritual education.

This week, ponder upon what is in your mindal domain. How are these things manifested? What is the recipe for your own personal spiritual life? What are the levels of closeness you wish to know your Father on?

That is all. I take my leave. I would convey our love and my gratitude for your acceptance. Abraham will be with you again next week. Farewell.

Unclutter The Mind To Receive Father`s Guidance
Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-22-1999

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Even though our group is small this evening the love here is in abundance. I am at ease to participate and join you in your thoughts and good humor.

I can remember a while back when I wore the mortal flesh that I was taught certain behaviors. Whether it was by my parents, teachers, or peers, it did set the foundation of my mind from which all else was to come. My culture, environment, and education shaped my mind in such a way that all I perceived was according to that shape, and I lived my life from that foundation; all that I perceived thereafter was built up from that foundation.

Of course I had many biased notions, self-superior viewpoints, and methods wherein I concocted to have 'my way.' When I met up with my friend and mentor, Machiventa, I was most definitely brought back to my foundation, and found it unstable. Through Machiventa's teachings, I had to rebuild my foundation with new ways of thinking. I realized that if I were to be a responsible man of God then I must be God-minded.

Machiventa showed me many things through humiliation. Not that he was belittling, no; he was in fact, quite practical and helpful in showing me that being small created an entrance towards learning greater things. We as Teachers always mean to help you find that entrance; the actual work of course, is yours.

I am EMULAN. Greetings, my friends. What a grand privilege it is for me to be among you. Since you have joined this Mission cause, has not your foundation been rebuilt? I have heard you speak often of the mindal changes you have experienced. Abraham has been a tremendous help to you, I know. Your life experience however - and from a spiritual perspective - has been your greatest teacher.

Adversity, in combination with humility, has taught you to be small; it has helped in the rebuilding of your mindal foundations. It is so wonderful that you have gone forth bravely to expose your biased thinking in favor of a more productive divine way. If your mindal domain is already cluttered and permanently arranged to align with your beliefs - then really there is not room for changes or additions; no room for thought evolution or habit-pattern revision.

You know that you have a responsibility to your Father as His child; you have a responsibility to your duties He has assigned you. Good mental balance is key for our work in the Mission. A lasting spiritual cause is supported by the good foundation of everyone's mental health stability. Should we become imbalanced by seeking fulfillment of the ego, what would that serve? Would our Mission still go forth with such strength and practicality? No!

Father is intelligence and entirely logical. He would not have your mindal foundation leaning towards the side of mysticism or personal prejudices. He seeks to assign you with tasks that would further our Mission. He requires mental balance - He cannot work from anything less. Are there requirements one must meet to be assigned work by Father? Yes.

Individuals claim they cannot understand their life's purpose or know the will of God for them. I say, you can! One can literally express: 'I have been taught that I need to live up to my promise to have His will be my will. I have requested to be used in Father's work. I now have a responsibility to Father. I must maintain good mindal balance and focus on my responsibility to Him.'

Do you understand your responsibility to Father as far as your good mental health is concerned? Can you entertain negative thinking to produce positive outcome? No! Can you proclaim to love God while you clutter His domain with spirit poisons? Can you be assigned spiritual tasks while straying from your responsibility to Him?

The Father of father's dwells within you. He loves you with a complete love and is willing to go through anything with you. He is tireless in His calling to spiritize you. Father holds Himself accountable for the manner in which He teaches you. He holds Himself responsible for His part in your eternal survival. Must you be accountable also? Must you be responsible to Him? I say yes, yes! I say there is no greater honor than to hold within, a responsibility to the Source of all that matters.

During the week, journal if you will what your responsibility is to your Father Fragment. How can you strengthen your foundation from which all your beliefs stem? How can you unclutter Father's domain that He may reach you with assignments and personal teachings? What is your responsibility to Him? What part do you play? What are the mortal resources you must exhaust in order to maintain mindal balance and spiritual nutrition? Have discussion, when possible, on the ingredients in your recipe for a balanced spiritual diet. Our period of rest allows us to ponder upon our responsibilities to Father and His kingdom. I leave you to Abraham. Farewell.

I am ABRAHAM. Thank you my friend, Emulan, for your fine discourse. We shall put forth serious consideration to all you have spoken of. I find when I am clear on my responsibility to my Father, that everyday existence becomes more defined and perhaps a bit more colorful.

Father has entrusted you, His children, with the tasks of assisting this world into a new and better age. What do you desire to do in furthering His cause? What are you willing to be responsible for? What is the price you will pay? Can you lose yourself for Him and have a more colorful way of life?

You know I love you and I shall attend to your questions during the week. Remember to find time to put your thoughts on paper. Until next week, shalom.

The Spiritized Mind is Equipped to Handle a More Adventuresome Spiritual Life
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 11-29-1999

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, my friends. What a wonderfully wide window of opportunity that lies before us. Every day that goes by I am more in awe of our Father; He has shown me many things that keep me elevated in faith, sound in mind, and with overall feelings of well-being. I have yet to meet with our Father in heaven face to face, but still I can view His wonderful works, every day.

When one is of sound mental balance, then is Father allowed to spiritize the mind. Your mortal experiences are the educational diagrams from which Father teaches values and meanings. He is always aware of your shortcomings and areas in which you need attention.

Experiences do occur through the divine hand, which teaches you what you need to know to advance spiritually. Of course, this is not surprising – everyone here has experienced Father's open windows of opportunity. Synchronistic events are necessary to bring you to a place where the mind and soul is ready to learn.

I am most grateful for the tender watchcare Father has provided to bring me to the place in which I learn best from. Difficulties come and go, yes, but the calm and well-balanced mind is able to draw value and become more spiritized. The spiritized mind is equipped to handle a more adventuresome spiritual life. Difficulties become challenges that provide spiritual joy in an otherwise mundane mortal life.

We have had our lessons on the ego animal-like mind. We have studied the benefits of good mental balance. We are ready for a step-up to the spiritized mind. The Master, as faithful and trusting in Father as He was, maintained a wonderful mental balance and was in no danger of ego default.

Of course we still have the ego that plagues our life with mental imbalance if we allow it; but know this – there is hope that Father is able to reach you, even through this instability, and aid in spiritual progression. My friends, you have that faith, and you are well on your way to mental stability.

You know that the hand of God is working every day; you cannot actually see Him but you can indeed perceive His fine works. How are you able to perceive His works? Yes, exactly! it is through the spiritized mind. When one has cleared the Father's domain within, then can the spiritualization of mind, begin.

Is life just drab and ordinary, day in and day out? The answer is yes if the mind is not able to view the spiritual meanings and values. Can you be with spiritized mind and be beaten down by the world's cruelties? I should say not! What does the spiritized mind entail?

- COURAGE – Courage to view everyday tragedies and withdraw the meanings and values therefrom.

- WISDOM – Wisdom to know that mortal life is a time for learning and not punishment. Things happen, yes, and the spiritized mind must find the philosophic meaning therein.

- STRENGTH – Strength to endure the cup of 'come what may,' and rise above inner agendas, to receive divine direction. Un-earthly abilities (or morontial capabilities) is what a spiritized mind can expect. To know and understand mortal adventures and question not Father's motives – this is strength.

• JOY – Deep and abiding joy is a benefit that the spiritized Father-indwelt mind can receive. When one is understanding ‘spiritually’ the world’s ‘why’s,’ then can you perceive Father’s immediate hand – and all the truth, beauty, and goodness produced therefrom.

• LIBERTY – How liberating is it to know that our heavenly Caretakers are willing to handle the big things in mortal life. We are responsible for our small parts, certainly, but the bulk of what mortals usually worry about can simply be bestowed into the hands of our very capable heavenly Caregivers.

Does this spiritualization of mind change your way of life? Yes! Will you change? Probably! for how can one taste the divine adventure and then forsake it for something so colorless, so plain?

You, my friends, are adventurers and candidates for spiritization of the mind. By your willing participation in these Correcting Time lessons, you already have made known the price you would pay for Father’s sake; you have already defined your responsibility in the kingdom – to Father, to yourselves, and to your fellows, yes.

I ask: What things may happen in mortal life to further spiritize the mind? How can you most effectively withdraw the meanings and values from these events? What are the spiritual fruits produced from mindal spiritization? How further may your foundation change? Have discussion on these questions.

That is all. I am always available during your journaling time for your questions and extra needed help on these various topics. As always, my love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Do I Truly Have Trust In My Divine Caretakers | Does My Lack of Faith Drown Out My Good Intentions

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-06-1999

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I have so enjoyed your discussion this evening. Your willingness to put forth spiritual ideas opens the mind’s arena towards increased horizons. I am aware that these lessons have brought many questions into your minds and some of our material can be confusing.

I would ask your patience in allowing me to review a few simple ideas that will aid in your understanding. I am always conscious of your feelings, and your willingness to move forward is an inspiration to me. At this time allow me to say a few words on TRUST.

Many mortals who strive not for the spiritized mind (or anything divine for that matter) rely upon the ego animalistic instinct to survive in life. To be weak in faith is most definitely a stumbling block in trust. For one to become balanced in all areas of living, you need to have faith and trust in one who is higher than you – I am speaking of trust in our heavenly Caregivers.

You may say: ‘I am willing to drink the cup,’ and then avoid it, for you are going back to a place of comfort. Self-trust is good balance, yes. Self-reliance is necessary in mortal living, yes. And yes, independence is admirable. But when you are desiring to become with spiritized mind, then you need to be entirely faithful and wholly trusting in our Father and His Caretakers sent to assist.

It is error to contemplate Father's hard lessons and then opt for an easier way as if you are more knowledgeable than Father concerning your spiritual path. You can be called to service and then look at it as something trivial, thinking: 'I can miss this opportunity - it's acceptable and maybe I'll participate in the next.' This is not trust in Father and His limitless abilities.

Most mortals rely upon what they can see with their material eyes. Those with the spiritized mind view mortal life through the eyes of Father. If the faith aspect is weak, then certainly will you pull back to relying only upon yourself. This is not progress. You can proclaim with self-assurance: 'I am without a doubt most certainly willing to drink the mortal cup,' and then allow mistrust in Father to drown out your good intentions. My friends, we will not overcome unstable foundations and imbalanced minds without first, trust in our Father and those who assist Him.

Ponder upon your faith-trust capacity this week. When Father calls on you, are you in favor of losing self for Father's overall good? What of the beloved Spirit of Truth - where is this divine influence in your life? Who is Michael in your mind? What is your concept of Him and His purpose? Is Michael a figure who sits on high and rules the universe from one place? or is He in motion, sweeping throughout the personal lives of every mortal who desires to know Him? How can we not trust a Creator who, through experience in seven bestowals, earned His sovereignty as Creator of the universe.

Certainly, Michael knows how easy a child can become mistrusting. Through regular mortal living there are those disappointments, yes, and it is common to hold back trust and protect the heart from further disappointment. I have said this before - Father and our Creator Son are unlike any example you have experienced; they are entirely capable and trustworthy to handle the plans of your pathway to them, but you must trust and allow.

Can we view Father's open doors and then exclaim: 'I pass!' and expect to become with spiritized mind? No. The Spirit of Truth can certainly assist in renewing your faith and endowing you with spiritual power from on high. He cannot bestow this upon you 'so that you will have faith' - no! You must first 'have faith and trust in His all-powerful abilities' in order to receive.

This is quite an eventful time in Urantian history; great changes take place every day. The changes can leave mortals tossing about on an ocean of uncertainty. The spiritized mind is your life preserver. With a spiritized mind, can you go about in your life in the same manner you always have? No! Can a fellow spurn you, and you take your revenge having been transformed by the spiritized mind? No! Can you constantly seek unearned attention so as to gain energy from your fellows if you are with spiritized mind? No - you do not need to, you already have it.

Your dedication to preserving your spiritual life is inevitable progression. In these changing times, my friends, we will need well-balanced spiritized individuals to maintain mass balance. The upsets of mortal living create such ripples of negativity. With you, our well-balanced students, we will be the calm in the storm.

This week, journal on how your own personal habits have changed since your involvement with this Mission. How has your mind and mannerisms changed? Do you have the faith-trust to seek Father's synchronistic doors so you may be of service? Are you feeling prepared to assist in calming the storms in mortal living?

That is all. As always, I send you with my deepest love. Next week we will have questions – until then, shalom.

Michael Seeks To Endow Us With Wisdom and Power From On High | A Balanced And Spiritized Mind

Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 12-13-1999

I am ABRAHAM. How you brighten my week with your wit, wisdom, and ever-seeking attitudes. I always look forward to conversing with you for the purpose of co-creating good. We are all of similar intentions and are taught accordingly.

My friends, your efforts to become with balanced spiritized minds have been so beautiful to behold. I am honored to have been witness to that. Good mental balance leads to the spiritizing of the mind, which branches out into other spiritual avenues. My friend is in attendance here this evening to speak on one such avenue – I give you, Emulan.

EMULAN: Greetings my brothers and sisters. What an exciting time we all exist in right now. The changes in today's world are occurring at a rapid rate. You have each adjusted well to these changes and are on your way to new spiritual avenues.

Abraham discussed trust in our heavenly Caretakers last week. We have concluded that 'God is God' – almighty in love and power, unmatched in intelligence and caretaking. We have each had to look within at our faith-trust levels and determine 'who is God?' Likewise, 'Who is our Creator/Brother/Father, Michael?' While some may not hold the answers to those questions, most definitely have we each been shown that we are not God; we are not almighty in love and power; we are not the pure essence of intelligence that He is.

Most certainly do we strive to be God-like; but, my brothers and sisters, we are learning to become with spiritized mind. We know that everything that is true, beautiful, and good is bestowed from on high. The Master, our beloved Spirit of Truth, dwells within the hearts and minds of men and women. He seeks to draw out the best in each one of us. The more we become spiritized – the more connection we have with Him, the more gifts He bestows upon us.

Jesus made a promise to His apostles of long ago, which applies to us in this day. Said He: "I will be with you – not as a man, but as Spirit." "I will bestow upon you wisdom and power from on high." Your capacity to hold spiritual knowledge is the measure in which you will receive this spiritual power. Those with unspiritized minds and imbalance, receive not.

Would you give the keys to a child and allow him to drive a car? I should say not. When the time is right you would surely teach and train this youth to drive. After passing strict guidelines and intense testing, then yes, you would allow him the keys.

Likewise, Michael seeks to endow you with wisdom and power from on high through a baptism of Spirit of the living water; He yearns to give to you of Himself. Individuals who are not equipped to handle such spiritual gifts will be delayed in receiving them – and yes, this is certainly acceptable. Further training may be needed, and this is certainly understandable.

Individuals who are diligent in their effort to become with spiritized mind are requesting to work for the kingdom, yes. Those with spiritized minds will be endowed with wisdom and power from on high to serve and uplift their small but important communities. Can this wisdom and power be bestowed upon one who is imbalanced in mind, not believing in a higher source, but in themselves solely?

A youth who respects not his status as a motorist and abuses his rights shall have his keys taken away – this is indeed simple logic. As well, if one cannot believe that the source of all their knowledge and spirituality comes from a divine reality, then are they in danger of default and are tempted to abuse their spiritual power.

I ask you to define spiritual power – what does that entail? How can you distinguish your wisdom from divine wisdom? What are your inner feelings showing you when you are in the ego's danger zone? What can you do to become more spiritized in mind? I will take questions.

CALVIN: Emulan, thanks for all your help in this preparation in spiritizing the mind and balancing to become of service and to be empowered from Michael's gifts. It is amazing that from such weak and grass-roots-mortals that Michael is doing this work here on this world. And yet, I realize how much work He does do in the minds of screenwriters, messages through movies, music and lyrics, and so on. Pertaining to us, this group in this Teaching Mission, it would seem like we would have need for tons and tons of preparation made for such a great work. Are we a long way away from spiritized minds? Or, are we sufficiently trained enough to be of small increments of service?

EMULAN: I am to understand your minds to be partially spiritized and leaning towards a good balance. There are still issues with the ego that would stir up problems, yes, but as far as I know you have been given the measure of spiritual power which your mind is at capacity to receive. It is already taking place. You each already understand the feelings of having been baptized by the Spirit of Truth and how to utilize the spiritual endowments from on high. Yes, it is a slow and steady transformation. With your efforts to seek this spiritualization and mindal balance, you are enlisting with Michael and the Teachers to take you forward in your spiritual progression. You have quite a journey before you; but be with gratitude that you have not to go it alone. Is this answering?

CALVIN: Yes, quite well. I take it from what you said that we are becoming quite capable of 'some' service, yet obviously there is still a lot of spiritizing to go, still a balancing to go; but from where we are, there is plenty of service to be engaged in.

EMULAN: Yes, correct. Another question?

HARRISON: Emulan, I have a question regarding prayer. When someone is sick or ill, heavenly Father provides everything that they need. So what does our prayers do for that individual if everything is already provided? I understand that prayer is worship, but I don't understand how our praying changes anything that is not already being done.

EMULAN: Prayer is a seeking - it is not worship. Prayer is a sincere request from a believing child to have change for the better in mind and heart. We pray for the strength to endure and know that every mortal lesson is of value, yes, even illness. We are all connecting, my son; and your prayer for one who is ill unifies with the spiritual part that sees us through the material adversities. Praying for your fellows is in alignment with Father's will; it is for an uplifting of mind and spirit to be able to endure and carry on. Worship is strictly gratitude and glory to our Father. Prayer is a request in mental alignment. Your prayers are more for your well-being. Father knows of each situation; He need not be informed. Prayer is a mortal resource you can never exhaust. Are we in understanding Harrison? (Harrison: Yes, and thank you, Emulan.) Emulan: Certainly. Another question?

MIRIAM: First of all can I ask you: What is this process I am feeling right now - my heart is pounding?

EMULAN: I believe you feel out of sorts with those in the room. You are fearing their judgment of your question and who you are. Be at ease, my daughter. Worry not.

MIRIAM: I get that in the middle of the night when I am by myself. I guess I thought it was something else. I won't worry. I have been having a really hard time. I wish that I could just put my whole life on hold to go up to a cabin and work on things that you have taught us. I have been doing my best to work on these teachings. It is just the weirdest thing - life keeps going, and I think I am doing it okay, but I haven't felt connected lately. I don't mean to sound braggy or anything, but I am used to feeling connected. I need some guidance on that.

EMULAN: Certainly. Sometimes we are, in reality, connected - even though we feel not the love aspect or the comfort of Father's embrace. We can be connected on an intellectual level with Father, and not spiritual, yes; it depends upon our spiritual recipe for a well-balanced mind, events that are occurring in life, our physical well-being. You know as well as anyone that physical illness can lead you to go inward as if to shut others out. I perceive you to be well balanced in your connection. You are proceeding as you should. It is not always possible in this day and age of a busy world to go into isolation and reconnect. Your intentions are well and on target; you need not worry. Prioritize those important things that absolutely need to be done, and let go of things that others can do. Are we in understanding? (Miriam: Yes. Thank you.) Emulan: Another question?

RACHEL: Well, I think this time of the year enhances, as far as I am concerned, it enhances spirituality with all the beautiful thoughts, all the beautiful decorations, and all the lights. It does enhance my spirituality. Are you enjoying them?

EMULAN: I find they are pale in comparison to what awaits you, my dear; although I do love the holiday sentiments between mortals. It is a holiday where there is an excuse to show love, gratitude, and care for your fellows. You believe as I do when we think it would be nice to have this sentiment year around. Yes. I say, my daughter, Rachel, when we meet here in my reality, ask me that question again.

RACHEL: I certainly will. I think right now we are still mortals here and you have to give us a little credit that we feel more spiritual when we see beautiful lights. I'll have a fight with you, I guess. [group laughter.]

EMULAN: Tip of the iceberg, my dear. [group laughter.](TR: Hey, I don't want to be in the middle of this.) [more laughter.]

RACHEL: Oh, come on – we have to have a little fun and humor too. I appreciated you meeting with me at home and giving me the message you gave me.

EMULAN: You are most certainly welcome. I do enjoy your candor and wit, but I say humor is your strong point. You are a delight. Another question?

INERA: Emulan, would it be possible to have a private meeting with you sometime soon?

EMULAN: Yes. The details can be arranged. I understand schedules are conflicting, but there are abled transmission-receivers available. Until then I can work with you in your personal journaling time. I am saying, until schedules are arranged, listen for my words. (Inera: Thank you very much.) Emulan: You're welcome. Another question?

MIRIAM: Emulan, I kind of think – since you have disclosed that you have worked with some of us personally, and I am sure we have all been journaling on what that is, and I can only speak for myself, but stuff I have worked on for most of my life, I now have a new perspective and it is very helpful. You guys seem to be talking about things 'coming up pretty soon,' so is this the 'mental balance' that you are preparing us with? And addressing Calvin's question, you said that we will continue to be spiritized in our minds – is this kind of a quick-fix for stuff coming up? So just in 'having a new perspective,' is that enough? Or is it going to be kind of like 'all the way down to our roots,' and will we just keep doing this 'fixing' – here now, and into the hereafter? In four-thousand years from now, will we still be working on the same kind of things, only at a different level? Do you know what I mean?

EMULAN: Yes. I understand. The lessons today shape you for the trials of tomorrow. These lessons are assisting throughout your eternal journey, not just for today. The lessons coincide with your life experience – whenever and wherever that is; and that, in turn, changes the definitions of those things you think you know. Experience is the cornerstone of your spiritual journey. I am slipping. Is this in understanding? (Miriam: Yes, Emulan. Thank you.) Emulan: Are there any more pressing questions? [no questions.]

I thank you for your permitting me to speak this evening. I thank Abraham, for he has been a wonderful mentor to me. I am available for you, my brothers and sisters. Abraham sends you with his love, as do I. Farewell.

I Am Your Helpmate | Allow Me A Place At Your Table

Abraham & Michael, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-27-1999

I am ABRAHAM. What a beautiful energy we have here this evening. All of you make it possible for us to find comfort and calm in our ministry to you. Your warm reception of us strengthens that connection between the spiritual and the material. Your desire to learn affects you as a universe sojourner, but your desire to love and be loved affects the whole of the universe. This evening I am particularly joyful, for the personal touch of the Master's hand blesses us:

Be joyful my children and exceedingly glad, for I your Father/Brother am among you this evening. I do appreciate all your efforts made towards furthering this Correcting Time. I know of your struggles and understand that you view the road ahead as difficult and almost impassable. I am above that road; I am around that road; I am in that road. I know every angle you must strive from. I know the barriers of the ego that blocks your path. I have a complete map and understand the provisions you must prepare for in order to travel. I am the road. I am your guide.

Where you are incomplete, I will complete. Where you are lacking, I will fulfill. In your loneliness, I will be there. I understand mortal desire. I understand the feelings of being limited or being oppressed. I understand feelings of inferiority and superiority – balance and imbalance. Where you fall short, there am I. Where you are unsatisfied, I will compensate with understanding. Where you are inadequate, I will take up. Where you are weak, I will strengthen you. When you are confused, I will clarify.

I seek to live in you and through you, to minister to you and to your fellows. I seek to correct your unspiritized thinking. I seek to correct through you. I will work for you; I will work through you. I have many tasks that lie before me. I have responsibility to my universe, to my Father, to the God-in-time, and to you. I find these tasks my complete joy and satisfaction. I am ever challenged by these universe chores.

I seek the darkest of the dark and find it my utmost pleasure to bring light. This is my duty as your Sovereign Creator of Nebadon. These responsibilities are what I thrive on. Would you allow me such joy to be a living presence in your lives! Would you allow me to fulfill my duties as universe Sovereign! Would you allow me to reap the pleasure I find in being at-one with you, my children!

The spiritual destiny ahead is not a secret. The spiritual life is not covered over by a mortal veil. The living truth of all things spiritual is in plain view. You are most definitely – now, and have always been – allowed to partake in the universe happenings; I have seen to it. My dear children, I would not leave you alone at any time to trudge through your mortal difficulties so they may teach you divine values – not at all. I, rather, would have you know that your mortal difficulties are nothing else than your divine tasks and responsibilities, likened to my own, and that I am with you every moment along the way.

I would seek to strengthen you and empower you with divine understanding and insight. I would lift you, my children, above the fog of the ego – to the clear blue skies of divine purpose. I do not look down upon you and say: "be corrected my children, for you are in error," not at all. I hold your hand in mine and sit face to face and say: "My child, I am in understanding, for I have a clear view of all there is to see and I would choose to take this particular path."

I am your helpmate. There is nothing that can shake me or divert my attention from the purpose at hand. I am not an angry king who rules over men that can be offered bargains or self-sacrifices in trade for spiritual leniency, no! I am your co-worker who seeks to make you more than you are.

My children, I live to see you soar. Open your hearts and understand who I really am. Allow me my work in this kingdom. Allow me my place at your table. Where you are weak and in need I can, even without effort, strengthen and fulfill. Allow your burdens to be cast aside. Allow your mind to be free from worry and concern. Open yourself to receive my Spirit. Allow me to wash your incorrect thinking. Allow me to bestow love where you are empty. Allow me to refresh when you are weary.

I require a few of my children to carry on my work for the betterment of the planet, as well as the universe. You should be in top spiritual condition. I know of your thirst for the living water. I am with cup, my children. I know of your mortal hunger. Allow me to feed you with the bread of life. I am so that you would be made more. I love you. Carry on.

I am ABRAHAM. Thank you, our most thoughtful Brother/Father, for your personal touch this evening. We will most certainly be aware of your personal touch every day. I am with grateful heart and overflowing with love and hope.

My friends, take not lightly the Master's words, for we have tasks before us. Open yourselves to His nourishment and ponder upon your courage to accept His words. The kingdom is requiring tremendous spiritual effort. Self-mastery is key. Look for the Door, my friends. Call upon the Master. That is all. Until next week, shalom.

2000 to 2001 MANSION WORLD TEACHINGS

Honest Viewing of Where You Fall Short is the First Step to Self-Mastery

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-03-2000

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a welcoming spirit we have here this evening. The calm and steady energy makes our communications more clear.

What a full week you have had. Your reception of the Master's words last week was absorbed to deep mind levels. You are learning to expect Him as a daily 'live presence' in your lives. The beauty that comes therefrom will make significant changes in your daily living. Not to worry – these changes are not about release from discomfort, but about broadening spiritual vision, opening divine circuits within the mind.

Our Master has laid out a plan before us. His beautiful words encourage us and fill us with hope to execute His requests. To know Michael is not a special relief from mortal pressures, no, but is help and understanding as to why we must experience mortal pressures. A relationship with Michael is to bring all things dark out into His light, and this can be difficult. He desires to teach you how to travel through the universe career and toward finding our Paradise Father.

In the midst of darkness or untruth there is confusion concerning the route to Paradise; there is not advancement in staying in darkness. A relationship with Michael is correcting those dark corners and endowing you with skills to advance. His ways are a clear reality; this reality may cause you some humiliation, yes, but know this: from a humbled-standpoint there is not reliance upon your own understanding – but rather, on a humbled mind asking for divine guidance.

The truth shall set you free. Even truth in its most harsh form is a light shed upon a new and better way; it is not a punishment, no, but a torch lit upon the spiritual path to Paradise. Many individuals on a mortal planet live daily in the desire of only understanding surface-level ideals. They see the truth as cold and brutal. Many fear the truth for they fear its power over them. Truth does have power as a force of good, yes, but only if positive results come from it. If we fear truth and are set in our ways we are not advancing, we are not free.

Michael is complete truth, and when we fear truth we are inclined to fear Him; we are putting walls up between us and His divine essence. The most difficult truth to bear is self-truth. Inadequacies (or short comings) are fuel to the ego's fire. When we recognize something unpleasant about ourselves it is difficult to look at that and say: "I am that, and I desire understanding so that I may correct or improve." Many mortal responses would rather be: "I am the way I am only because somebody made me that way." Blaming is casting Michael's light off of yourself and remaining in ignorance.

To become aware of an unpleasant self-truth is not to cause shame but to stir the divine energies within. To admit this shortcoming is the first step in asking for help from the divine Caretakers. Look not 'outside' for others to take responsibility for your faults, no! allow Michael's Spirit to turn you inward and listen for divine assistance. The world will become better if only one individual at a time can improve upon a dark spot in their behavior.

To face your faults is spiritual bravery – not something to shame you into striving for personal betterment, no. To bravely face personal defects is a removal of an obstacle upon the path to Paradise. It is our Master's job to place the truth before us, yes; and personally speaking, He is gentle beyond my own understanding. To know Him is to have steady growth. Admitting to Him that you recognize a personal fault, is asking Him for a new and better way to live; it is asking Him to remove an obstacle upon your eternal path.

Even the citizens of worlds settled in Light and Life take the recognition of personal faults with a rejoicing attitude. They are so happy to have awareness and be able to take actions toward correction. They have no difficulty turning inward with an open mind and bravely facing what could very well be a personal flaw.

Allow the Master to guide you inward to a place of complete truth – a beautiful realm in which there is not embarrassment nor shame, nor the knowledge that everyone will know of your faults. Let Him guide you to a place of spiritual light. Lay out your self-recognition of shortcomings and view this ‘honestly’ from the Master's perspective. Confer with Him. He is your counsel and friend, not a judge.

This honest viewing of where you fall short is the first step in self-mastery. Be not anxious to correct too quickly, for these lessons need to be internally digested for a lasting effect. These personal flaws are between you and your divine Caretakers. They stand by ready to assist. Their happiness is your success.

This week, focus on the Master's presence. Should self-flaws come to mind that you believe would be helpful in removing obstacles upon your path, then by all means, take it into consideration and go before the Master; confer with Him. Be aware of the ego's denial, for the ego believes the path is just fine how it is. My friends, you are a continuing joy in my existence and I deeply love you. Until next week, shalom.

In Committing Ourselves To Michael Are We One Step Closer To Him By Allowing Our Experiences

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-17-2000

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. You are a wonderful reason for me to be glad each week we can meet. I am in gratitude to Father for He oversees my every need. He combines my experiences to produce divine meanings and values so that I may advance and take those steps closer to Him, yes.

In my days in the flesh, I viewed life as a battle and that I must continually gird myself with weapons for defense. I knew not that each one of my experiences taught me how to move one step closer to who I was to be, and to my divine caretakers who planned my destiny. With the help of my mentor and friend, Machiventa, I was able to see that my experiences were valuable, and I had to understand life's contrasts to move up in spiritual levels of understanding.

One who is prejudiced cannot understand the pain of it unless they have been the recipient of prejudice. To advance in spiritual understanding you need to experience the full spectrum of mortal living. Your experience is shaping who you are becoming. It is moving you one step at a time closer to your Father.

Do you struggle with those character flaws that place obstacles on your divine path? If you are gaining value from this then the struggle is good. Can you be close to Michael and yet shun His light upon personal unpleasanties? No! He shows you these things so that you may take yet another step closer to Father and become who you were really meant to be.

Should you choose to forgo these needed experiences, then certainly must you know they will continue in the life after this one. Expect experience, yes. Know these things will occur in Father's timing. Know that your experience will move you closer to Him. One cannot be devoted to drinking the cup and then complain about mortal experiences. All will experience certain events that will either bring light and growth, or bitterness and darkness.

In humility you are teachable. In despair, you are giving up on your own understanding. It is not necessary to fly into emotional upheaval during those challenging experiences, for you know Father is at work and your advancement is forthcoming. Does emotional upheaval serve? No! It may be a natural instinct, yes, but with the practice of self-mastery you can gain control over your emotional state and remain calm to receiving divine instructions.

I have a friend/student who from the time he was a child thought himself to be above everyone else. He thought he was superior as far as mortals went. When harsh events would happen to him it would make him believe that God was indeed cursing him. He could not understand why such injustices would befall such a superior mortal as himself.

Was God unjust in allowing this experience to occur to this child of His? No! He was allowing natural evolutionary procedures to unfold to teach this child how to go one step closer to Him. This man's pride and ego was the lesson to be unfolded, not the unjust laws of the universe. The character flaw was the enemy to this man's life – not necessarily a sin, but valuable experience to wade through to understand it and work it out. Did Father and Michael aid in his humility? Yes, to a point – the point where the light of truth exposed his character flaw.

Each mortal will know feelings of superiority and inferiority, envy and kindness, cruelty and love, justice and injustice. These experiences are a gift that helps you to become a responsible universe citizen. Is my friend/student changed by the light of Michael's truth? Yes, he is. Michael revealed to him the origin of his character flaw of superiority, and that Father was not knocking him down but pointing him upward, getting his attention, so to speak.

My friend now understands his early childhood training had led him to believe that he was above others and that his character flaw had presented obstacles on his mortal path where he could not maintain friendships or relationships, or even parent correctly. Michael's orchestrated experience has brought him to the understanding that a 'change' was needed, and that an imprisonment such as 'his feeling superior' was not worth the maintenance. Love for his children took the focus off himself long enough to ask for Michael's light, and by so doing he was with liberty to show his children a new and better way.

Michael asks that you do not punish yourself for the realization of these shortcomings, no – that is indeed a waste of time. Instead, focus your eyes upon Him and allow Him to take you through the experience in His gentle manner. Receive the most from these experiences by remaining observant of your surroundings. Do not fly into emotional upheavals, but rather, concentrate on the value to be produced from these mortal experiences. Humility is not punishment or belittling from the divine caretakers, no - it is an open ear, a receiving mind, an understanding heart, yes.

This week, I ask you to ask yourselves: "If I have committed myself to Michael can I complain of the cup put before me?" "Can I relax in His watchcare and be observant of things to unfold?" "Does self-belittling serve?" "Does a humble heart serve?"

I am sorry, no questions this evening. I am scheduled to be elsewhere. Know that I am available to you each during the week. Plan for quiet time to connect with those divine sources. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Self-Mastery Does Lead The Whole Toward Light And Life

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. My greetings to you, friends. I so much enjoy your conversation and the sharing of your experiences. It has proven true how valuable your mortal experience really is. You cannot make spiritual understanding out of just 'existing,' no, for it is necessary to live these experiences and take what you can from them.

I understand that some have experienced difficulty with the emotional aspects of your experiences. I have had my emotional days in the flesh also. However, I can console your mind that the emotional flare-ups decrease when you have become more spiritized in mind. Michael's Spirit of Truth is a compass that points the planet into the direction of Light and Life. The betterment of one becomes the betterment of all. Self-mastery is the key. Exposure of character flaws leads you to find both healing and liberty from them - yes, correction, if you will.

Yes, it is difficult to know where to begin when making effort towards improving upon self. The mortal experience is priceless in learning to exercise self-mastery. Though these shortcomings may be difficult to bear, they are helping to bring Urantia into a new and better age. Self-discipline is difficult in a world of self-indulgence - where so many seemingly empty souls indulge daily in things that would appear to bring fulfillment.

In the days of old, self-discipline was somewhat forced from struggle. But with technology, the minds of men and women have become ease-seeking, and faith is placed in things material. Mortals find it difficult to 'go without' when their neighbor waves their good fortune in their face. Self-indulgence has been looked upon as normal, as the popular thing to do.

In the early days of our Mission, we observed the minds of mortals were quite ego-centered and without much spiritual foundation. 'Spirituality' had always been associated with self-denial and too many rules. A child who is always carried does not learn to walk. A child who is always indulged expects the world to owe him, to cater to him. A child who is taught 'no' in early youth learns to be responsible as a citizen in society and to do his share - to minister to others and be ministered to.

I do not speak here of self-denial, but self-discipline - being able to master the self and thereby strengthen the divine connection. The Master could go a great length of time without food or water. He took no note of an emptiness in His bodily system. His mind was quite full and centered upon God. You can say when the soul is nourished, the body (or things material) becomes secondary.

Does not the mature adult learn to save his fortune for the better-quality things in life? – for he knows that today's self-gratification does not secure tomorrow's bread; and, that today's self-gratification does not secure the good of the whole. What is self-discipline but a redirecting of focus.

Where is your focus? Can you nurture the soul and know that the material emptiness is just temporary? Yes. The Master could be found from time to time dashing the hopes of His fellow apostles with the realities of the kingdom. The apostles had often hung their hats upon a material hook and the Master would chastise them. Even though His words were seemingly harsh, this chastisement spoke to their souls – it redirected their focus.

Is self-chastisement acceptable? Certainly – to a point! Self-chastisement serves you well when your focus is redirected back towards the spiritual kingdom. It is not self-punishment or self-denial. It is not causing a well of hunger for other things. It is a closeness with Father and a trust that says: "I will wait upon the word of the Lord."

Many can say: "I am too weak to practice self-discipline. I am only made more desirous of material things. I am only further separated from God." This is old thinking. The new way should focus on the participation in leading Urantia further into the stages of Light and Life. "I can have self-discipline for it serves the world; it brings the reality of the brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God into focus."

Is refraining from flying into emotional upheaval self-discipline? Yes. Is being observant and staying calm while waiting on the word of the Lord, self-mastery? Yes. I know these things are difficult when in the flesh, for I have lived it. But I can promise you, as you begin these practices, the logic and practicality will become apparent; it will become as if there were no other way.

This week, define self-discipline and self-denial. What is the difference? What is self-chastisement? Note your self-indulgence versus self-discipline. Does the nurturing of the soul minister to your material needs? A few questions?

HARRISON: Abraham, we would like to introduce you to Mark. It has been a pleasure having him here with us.

ABRAHAM: Greetings Mark. Welcome.

MARK: I have a technological question that is about our spirit names. How do you realize our names? Where and how and when is it generated?

ABRAHAM: I receive the spiritual names from the personal Father Fragments. The names are now given upon spiritual realization of each person. The names used to be given upon fusion with the Thought Adjuster. At this time on Urantia we find the early receiving of these names creates a greater spiritual connection and allows each individual to know their place in the spiritual kingdom is secured. I am quite fortunate to be witness to this new age of enlightenment, and it is certainly touching for me to see the Father Fragment speak the name of His beloved child in whom He accompanies. Is this answering Mark? (Mark: Somewhat. Thank you.)

CALVIN: Hello, Abraham. It seems like my mortal experiences that are hard to take, happen way more often than I would like. Is that foolishness in my way of living that allows that to happen? or is it foolishness not to expect it. I think you know my question there. It often seems like my trials and hard times are way too much for comfort.

ABRAHAM: I understand that question is best answered by the feelings you have afterward – the fruits produced therefrom, or the spiritual poisons that arise. I understand your enthusiasm to seek these issues out and have speedy correction – but it is not that simple. Time and experience play a role in learning spiritual values and meanings. If there is not learning or fruits produced, then there is not value in the experience. There needs to be time allotted for lesson absorption. You know you cannot demand immediate answers and have value therein. Life is an unfolding; it is not watching over your shoulder for the next big event to hit. It would serve you each to allow for natural unfolding, natural evolution. Father cannot be forced into hurrying these lessons; He is not waiting until you are not looking to ‘drop one on you,’ no. His universe workings are calculated for the best overall value – and, for understanding to occur ‘within,’ for as many of His children that are open to it. The stillness is ideal for an energy recharge in order to better tackle these mortal experiences. A time in quiet reflection is aligning your will with Father's – an alignment which brings peace in mind and heart. A complete trust in Father is relaxing that part of you which worries that you are ‘not keeping up.’ Is this answering?

CALVIN: Yes, and very helpful. Thank you. I would love to voice that Angie is here. You know her from the Pocatello group. (Abraham: Yes, welcome.)

I am with honor and love to know you each, and I carry you in my thoughts all week. I am with love for you. Until next week, shalom.

Prayers of Alignment For Father`s Agenda Not Ours | Self-Chastisement vs Self-Discipline

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. What a beautiful and calming energy we have here this evening. Our connection to Father and one another is clearer and stronger by the minute. Every now and then I desire to allow my pure spiritual intentions to surface while cares and concerns float away. We can direct our focus to where we will be most productive.

Our Father, we desire at this time to cast our cares aside. We seek for your pure intentions to well up within us. We worry not for tomorrow because you are overseeing our path. We will relax in the security of your care. We are without agenda so that you may work through us for the betterment of all. Amen.

How cleansing in heart and mind to quit pushing for your desires to be fulfilled! What liberty is there in not wanting! How the avenues of the mind are opened to new possibilities when we do not put so much effort into pushing for our own agendas.

As a mortal, it is completely natural to hold close to what you know, to what you have, to what you think you are – this is binding and limiting you from those prospects into new avenues. How can we take in the new if our will is not in alignment with Father's? What food for the soul when you can feel the peace of not being pressured to strive to fulfill what you think you need to have fulfilled. What rest for the mind, body, and soul, yes.

Would self-chastisement redirect your focus toward this relaxing of pushing forward with your intentions? Sure, it helps! However, to know you don't have to hurry forward in all that you think you need to do is opening avenues within the mind to new possibilities. Self-chastisement would seem to put a stop on your desires – and therefore, make you wait and long for fulfillment.

Contrast this with self-discipline! Self-discipline should fill you with a peace that says: "I am accepting of whatever Father wills. I am not pressured. I am taking in comfort and peace because I rely upon Father. I am nurturing my soul. I am full with the love and overcare that Father provides. I am confident He oversees my every need. I shall not want."

Do you want what you want? or can you align your will to want what Father wants? He is the keeper of the watchtower. His broadened vision oversees your every need. You are on the ground surface, and your vision is not as is Father's` on the watchtower; you are not able to see the good results produced from this or that decision.

Yes, children, you have not the view that Father has; but you can take comfort knowing He is in His watchtower, ever vigilant in overseeing your every need. He is able to instruct and guide in your every decision – and is that not a cause for peace, a cause for gratitude, a cause to feel confident in the world? Yes.

Practice in self-discipline is relief from the pressures of the world's opinion of you. You need not answer to the world when you are answering to the maker of the world. This, is freedom. This, is cause to relax in the comfort of the Lord. This, is nurturing the soul that provides fulfillment within – so much so that all other things, things you 'thought' may fulfill, seem empty and inadequate.

The Master lived and breathed the word of His Father. His confidence was unmatched and He moved about freely in the world knowing that Father went before Him. Father did the difficult tasks and paved the Master's way.

Did Jesus have need for self-chastisement? At times in His days of youth, yes, He did find thought clarification in chastising Himself against His need to fulfill His desires in favor of Father's. This practice in self-mastery led Him to act as if there were no other way than to align His desire with Father's will. This practice became natural, and self-chastisement was no longer needed.

I at times have my own agenda that scrambles my focus on the overall purpose. I still find honest and direct 'self talk' brings me back to the common goal. Prayers of alignment also minister to my soul in that it provides comfort where I want not for myself, but for the Father. I am made to rest and feel that 'soul peace' which surpasses all understanding and provides me with a fresh outlook every day. With this fresh outlook, I am naturally desirous to be of service to the whole, and my focus is redirected back to that goal. My friends, what is the goal? What is the purpose for forgoing self-indulgence to await those greater things of the kingdom?

This week, rehearse your own prayers of alignment. Note the inner comfort which makes all outer comfort secondary. If prayers are in alignment, is self-chastisement still so needed? If the soul is fed, is there an increase in self-mastery?

I am, as always, with more love for you each week. I am always uplifted by our friendship. Until next week, shalom.

Self-Discipline Is Not Self-Denial, But A Redirecting Of Focus

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-07-2000

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome. Tonight's atmosphere is filled with such family love and support. How can we really fail in any of life's endeavors when there is support such as this? How beautiful it is when you have enough comfort among each other to lay out your sorrows or joys in living! How wonderfully safe we all are in the family of God! We give our unending gratitude to the head of our family, our most beloved Father.

Father, in all His wondrous ways, may seem to be such a mystery to us. He may seem so completely awesome that He is far beyond us and that we are seemingly unnoticed. Yes, Father is all-powerful, all-knowing, all-encompassing of every aspect of every existence of everything – yet Father would have us see Him in a Fatherly role, a Father who would protect, love, care, teach, and guide His children.

Yes, our beloved Father would have you so close to Him that you could not tell where you begin and He ends. He would have you hear His every whisper of guidance or word of encouragement. He would have you see with His eyes how love rules the universes. He would have you feel His strong hand ensuring you that you are His child, loved beyond your own understanding.

Father would also have you know that your path to Him is of utmost importance; He will stop at nothing to show this to His child, even if it means revealing those hard truths that help you to forge ahead. Father is strength, love and compassion, yes, but He is also serious about the spiritual education of each child.

Father does carefully lay out plans of experience for you. But He would have you want to experience them, not be forced into His adventures. His plans of experience are sometimes difficult and it is tempting to choose an easier path. But know, the path of ease can create more work for you and your Father. The carefully laid-out plans of Father can direct you to take in the most value and meaning from each experience.

It is a mortal pattern to learn to be distrusting at times; even sometimes we can be distrusting of Father, and this is completely natural, yes. To learn to give Father all you have so He can make you more, takes a constant commitment to trusting Him.

We have spoken of discovering character flaws which block our divine learning. We are learning to accept these challenges to improve self-mastery technique. We have learned to feed the soul and be fulfilled from the inside, rather than the outside.

Self-discipline is not a negative thing; it is not self-denial; it is not self-punishment, but a redirecting of focus from 'self' – to 'God, our Father.' It is not harmful to develop firm, honest, and direct self-talk to aid in this redirecting of focus. Self-discipline is a positive step forward in active participation to co-create with Father. Again, self-discipline is not negative self-bantering – which breaks the spirit and depletes energy and confidence in who you are.

Father asks that we treat ourselves as He would; He is honest and direct. Sometimes this is painful or shocking but He would have us know these things to aid in clearing our path to Him. He does not throw the spears of honesty at us to wound our spirits into submission, no. He seeks only to empower you with the ability to make your way.

The Master knew the mortal life could be fraught with difficulty and ruthlessness. It would have been so simple for Him had He chose to opt out of the harsh mortal experience. Could He have still made Sovereign Ruler of our universe? Probably! But the Master's supreme faith and trust in His Father had driven Him forward with strength and power to not only endure but be victorious.

Jesus struggled with the mortal mind in aligning His will with Father's. His numerous journeys into the mountains constantly renewed His faith and trust in Father's ability to see Him through. The Master nurtured His soul by allowing Father to care for Him. He was filled from the inside and wanted not for Himself, but for the glory of His Father in heaven.

The Master wasted no time in negative self-chatter but did learn to discipline His mind into waiting patiently for the word and will of God. He cared not to fulfill a human destiny or to leave a personal legacy, no; He was only concerned with the 'good of the whole' and that was fulfilled through the will of God. Did the Master have prayers of alignment? Yes, most definitely – several times a day.

The mortal will is strong and is free to be about its own agendas. The divine will is in waiting for the mortal wills' acceptance and permission to integrate and make the kingdom of heaven come to life here on Earth.

This week, I ask you to view yourselves as Father would. See your mistakes simply as a child who is just learning. Practice your prayers of alignment to aid in your self-discipline and self-mastery. That is all. I cannot take questions but I can meet with you during the week in your time journaling. Know that one of my joys is to assist you in any way I can. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Spiritual Reality Creates A Healthy Mind, Which Creates A Healthy Body
Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-14-2000

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, my friends. I appreciate your lighthearted exchange of energy this evening. It certainly makes my lesson more clear when you each are in such a supreme mode of giving and receiving.

In the short time our Mission has been fully functioning we have seen a great many changes. It is on a personal level that we have seen the most changes. Each individual putting forth their best effort to make personal correction aids in the Missions' complete picture. When each individual can master the self, then will the greater things of the kingdom be brought into your reality; new ideas that were not even thought possible will be possible.

Self-mastery is mind-expansion, and that mindal expansion is open to new spiritual realities. Without the practice of self-mastery and greater mindal capacity, some spiritual realities would perhaps be seen as phenomenal or even be the cause of some fear. We await your acceptance to these new realities to bring Urantia into Light and Life. There is no greater test of self-mastery than in how you relate with your fellow mortals. I give you, EMULAN:

EMULAN: How my heart is lifted, my friends, when we can meet and share our common hope for a new and better life. I am aware of your personal group history and I have seen much growth. There have been difficult times between you, yes, and yet this was a stepping stone to better understandings and not so much a stumbling block to creating separation.

I am not native to Urantia but my world was somewhat like it. I am however, surprised at some of the exposure that I have been witness to. I have seen the worst that man has to offer to his fellows, and my surprise is that this behavior is so common. What a competitive world you live in where a man's triumph is to set his fellows up to fall. Also, where an importance in entertainment certainly outweighs the importance of educating the young.

I am fortunate though to be included in this time where these social challenges will be modified to bring the greater realities of a spiritual kingdom. Our Teaching Mission, which will embrace many generations to come, is a wonderful platform from which to create social change. By your personal correction you live an increasing exemplary example of how each mortal is viewed as a child of God; and, that we all are welcome to participate. Yes, we show that we can care, and be cared for.

Michael's Spirit of Truth is the living revelation of showing where there is need for healing; He brings out those dark places into the light where they can be understood and worked on. There are many social disorders, yes. Michael seeks to break those barriers of separation to enable Urantians to unify as a family. Personal self-mastery and social healing create an energy that can allow for new spiritual realities.

Look at your medical practices – is there not more connection than ever before between mind and body? Is it not becoming common to believe that spirituality creates a healthy mind which in turn creates a healthy body? Yes, this thinking is beginning to connect with the minds of the masses and to be looked upon as if it always was that way.

The way in which you treat your fellows is either an energy 'generation' or a 'depletion.' To generate is to be prepared to be open; to be accepting of new spiritual possibilities, new realities, yes. With some time spent in practicing self-mastery among your fellows we can then introduce the beginning of those new spiritual realities that you can expect. Can you generate positive energy with each person you meet and feel the immediate effects from that? Yes, if we so desire.

To practice self-mastery among your fellows is to promote a positive energy exchange. Know that most individuals feel the same frailties you do – they can be open to new spiritual possibilities by your efforts in positive thinking. We can each participate in this Correcting Time when we can keep our ministry on a personal level. Your fellows are your assignment. Be open to receiving any words Father might have for them for you to speak.

Next week I will be here to accept questions. Talk with one another on this. Your discussions here are indeed practice for those you interact with each day. I leave you with my love. Farewell.

Practicing Self-Mastery Brings Out Our True Character

I am ABRAHAM. What a joy it is for me to meet with you each week. I feel a part of this group. I feel at home with you. I know I can be my complete self with you and still I am loved and accepted. I thank you.

I know you each on a personal level and I find each one of you to be a component within the circuitry of our present existence. You each play a role in the creation of our personal history as a group. Each one of you also creates a history in the lives of others which affects the whole. Every varying personality brings a specific social flavor and has a duty to being that ingredient, which adds to the whole.

I am always in gratitude because of my fellows who support me in being my complete self and accepting my varying views on things, even if they are not in agreement. I count on my fellows to maintain a spiritual balance; their feedback to me is valuable. One friend, who has graced me with his support and truth is one who will speak here tonight. I give you, Emulan.

EMULAN: My fellows, I too, am creating a bond of friendship with you each. I have not been with you long and yet you have taken me in as one of your own. I know my ways are different from Abraham's and yet you each have responded to me with nothing less than kindness and acceptance. I too, thank you.

The character of a being has so many variables that come into play. Culture, environment, parental guidance, peer persuasion, and education, does certainly shape an individual's character. 'Character' is a calling card of sorts - it speaks to individuals and tells them who you really are.

As a mortal, you can witness your fellow's behavior and define their character as 'this' or 'that' and make a personal judgment according to what you see. This is simple to do, yes, and yet, you know not these fellow's backgrounds; you do not know what has shaped their character, or if you are really even seeing their true character.

Many individuals feel their natural and complete self is not enough or not acceptable, so they play many false roles. It is difficult unless you really make effort to know somebody to place a label on them. There are personality factors about me that would perhaps offend some, but my friends who know me on a soul level understand why I have become who I am and what has shaped me. These friends respect the position I play in the good of the whole.

In practicing self-mastery with our fellows, we can see what we are really portraying to the world. Of course there are individuals who bring out the best or worst in us. With the practice of self-mastery, you learn of the control and power you really have. It is your understanding which shapes your attitude, which causes your reactions.

Self-mastery is being in a state of learning, a state of openness; it is an attitude of being non-judgmental, being aware of learning about your fellows - why they are, who they are, and what gifts they might bring to add to the whole.

Not everyone believes they have gifts, or that their fellows have anything positive to add to our present history. But I can guarantee you each that your indwelling Father has a personal plan and purpose that you will all serve. 'Self-mastery' is waiting and listening to your indwelling Father, not being motivated by your fellow's judgments or opinions.

What has shaped your character? What gifts have you to offer, or what are those natural aspects of your personality that help you to serve? How judgmental are you when it comes to your fellow's character? Can you make effort to learn more about them and to understand why they are the way they are? It is only about understanding - not so much accepting, but just understanding, and allowing Father to work out the details. I will accept a few questions.

CALVIN: I thank you, Emulan, for your help in our lives, and for this lesson. Miriam is absent tonight and asks to express to you her appreciation for you and your help. She asks a question of why we seek comfort in food? Why is it seemingly the first place we go?

EMULAN: Miriam, you are learning to not internalize every negative feeling and not take things negative as a personal attack. You do well. To seek comfort in other avenues is quite natural, and not an offense against Father for not being able to rely upon Him completely. The misuse of everyday energies leads us to feel empty and alone. The emptiness does cause the 'feeling-need to consume,' and to 'refill where we are empty.' Everyday pressures and stress lead us to deplete energy, and this depletion is lonely and sometimes frightening. We turn to quick comfort: "What will make this feeling of loneliness and loss go from me?" This is not to try to control or overcome, no, but to maintain a spiritually healthy life and to use your energy wisely. Energy exhaustion needs to be replenished through spiritual avenues. Yes, meditation, prayer, time for reversion, and comfort of your fellows – all does aid in regenerating energy. Man does truly need his fellows. To know he is not alone and not out of the ordinary, it is most beneficial to speak with friends, especially those who understand this plight. I am told to also mention – the physical hormonal and chemical changes of women can cause you to feel this energy depletion. To fight your desires or cravings can only lead to further indulgence. Feed your impulses lightly so as not to deprive, but to accept the mortal state. You are still mortal, and all the chemical changes lead you to filling the emptiness with material things. Be not so harsh on the weakness of the mortal mind but know that there is a need to re-energize spiritually and do other things that cause the mind to redirect its focus. Play and rest are also helpful, along with a sensible diet that contains all the nutrients that will serve all systems in the body. The cravings should be less when the systems are served. Worry not. These times of 'needing to be materially filled' are not lasting. Another question?

RACHEL: Emulan, I am going to ask this question because maybe next week you won't be taking questions. A week from tomorrow is our ninth anniversary of this Teaching Mission. Will you have some special thoughts and words for us to help celebrate this anniversary?

EMULAN: I am told Abraham already has prepared for this, yes. (Rachel: I have been reading his mind.) Emulan: Well done. It has been a journey of learning and growing. I know how much the Teaching Mission means to you each. We will have something prepared, yes. Another question?

CALVIN: Emulan, tonight you talked about being judgmental about others – a pretty timely lesson, as always. An example: Somebody asked my opinion about a book that someone is putting out. This person is quite controversial concerning this Teaching Mission adventure, and so on. So I expressed my viewpoint of this person, and I only know him a little bit from interaction of our emails, and in meeting him for maybe an afternoon. So I ask: Is it best to only speak as to what I actually 'know' because I might be indulging on the side of error in the giving of my opinion? or is it best to say: "This is just what I feel." Or, perhaps is it best to just keep quiet until I have had some deeper interaction with somebody rather than saying something in error about them. Your thoughts? [Editor's note: Calvin was referring to one in the Urantia Book community – Ernest Moyer.]

EMULAN: You can always comment if it should bring about good, truth, or more awareness. That is why we must make effort to learn about each other. We must be open enough to share our backgrounds, our commonalities, our differences. And yes, if there could be one sentence you could say that would change things for the better, or bring about more awareness, then by all means. Father does use you to serve your fellows. If you are feeling Father-led and foreseeing an eventual positive outcome then certainly express your viewpoint. If you can truthfully see that you are feeling any spirit poisons, or ego-interference, and foreseeing negative, then I would forgo any comments. I know you already understand this, and I feel you do well. Is this answering?

CALVIN: Very helpful. I thank you, my friend and teacher. One further thing: There is, in our internet-posted Teaching Mission lessons anyway, this topic of the Magisterial Sons' supposed entrance upon Urantia, and maybe not so much as a worldwide conscious awareness of him but at least a spiritual entrance. As you know, I just don't see this, but chalk it up to mans', once again, 'wishful thinking' and 'proof-seeking.' Last week your lesson was on opening our minds to new realities; and I know we have had lessons on wishful-thinking and mysticism – I wonder if you or Abraham have any comments on this? Am I just 'not being open' here?

EMULAN: Abraham has taught you well on the dangers of mystical-thinking. Your experience has taught you his lessons were true. You have seen for yourself and have learned these lessons so that they are lasting in your mind. The new spiritual realities will come about much in the same way. We can teach about them to bring them to your awareness, but it is experience and faith that will make them real in your lives. In time, these new spiritual realities will be as if they had always been. This Teaching Mission has taught you to draw a definite line between mysticism (ego-centered non-realities) versus everyday-living realness experiences. You know this line. Within each one of you, you have drawn this line for yourselves. Some may be more intolerant of mystical ways. Some may flee from this Mission because it is too real. And some flee perhaps because it is not mystical enough. I have no comment on the Magisterial Son issue at this time. Otherwise, is this answering? (Calvin: Yes, and very well stated. Thank you.) Emulan: One more question?

SARAUNA: Emulan, it's always a pleasure to be able to interact with you and I value the things you have given us in the past. My question has to do with finding myself in my occasional distrust of everything and wondering what I can do to separate or distinguish between what I should trust and what I should not. I believe this comes from my background, the way I was raised. And, with the fact that I have in so many ways been asking God for things that are perhaps – as I see at this time in my life – maybe not so Godly, I feel inclined to make every effort to enhance my trust of the Mission. And I feel that the messages are valid and real. And when everyone asks a question here, usually it is part of the answer that I, myself, am looking for as well. Even so, I feel that, as you know, I'm greatly disturbed by the issue of trust and tying it in with the Father. I guess because I have felt betrayed by my biological father I have on this Earth and yet, I still have a tie to him. I feel that there is a part of him that seeks God as well, though I can't accept all that he is and does. I am caught up in a dilemma here. Perhaps you can simplify it for me and just give me something simple that will help in this complicated situation. [Editor's note: Sarauna's father is a fundamentalist Mormon polygamist.]

EMULAN: I can try. I do believe you should question everything, yes, well done. Being in the material body – you must learn faith, and this is not easy to 'believe without seeing;' it is completely understood. Your ability to reason what is truth and what isn't is an extension of the gift Father has bestowed upon you – freewill, yes. You are correct when you say your Earthly father has caused you to be a bit untrusting. As a child, and somewhat even now, you felt without a voice. You were not given those things a child needs to learn to trust. To question is a natural aspect of your personality, Sarauna, but the pain of being without a voice causes you to be apprehensive about blindly following. Father does not ask you to blindly follow, no! but to rely upon Him in your intelligence which He has bestowed upon you. To question, is natural. Yet, to question Father's ability is causing insecurity and pain for you. As you accept that you are His child, He does reveal to you His gentle loving nature; and yet He shows you His unmatched power and ability to do all things. This dilemma, as you put it, is entirely natural and will certainly lead you to a practical solution. You are in a courtship with Father, and in learning to dance with Him you must relax and allow Him to lead, at least sometimes. [group laughter.] You do well, Sarauna.

I will take my leave and not without telling you each that I love you more each time we meet. I am honored to be a part of you. Farewell.

Ninth Anniversary | Honesty Brings Us One Step Closer To Self-Mastery

Abraham & Ham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-28-2000

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome, my friends. What an honor it has been for me to be among you all these years. I have not only been a teacher but also a student, friend, and brother. My experience here with you has been most valuable in my spiritual education. You have taught me to better teach by your willingness to listen and accept me for who I am.

We are kindred spirits, my friends, for we are alike in many ways. The ways that we are different is not destructive to the underlying foundation of our relationship - that being, our friendship. We celebrate with you in gratitude to Father for His outreaching ministry. He has taken the barren land and made it bloom. I am in gratitude for my position He has allowed me to fulfill.

Tonight we have with us your friend and first instructor, who would wish to speak:

Greetings, children. I am HAM. My heart is full to see how you have maintained the Correcting Time focus. I am aware of your obstacles which you have overcome.

You, the students of our teachings, have helped to initiate change on Urantia. Your acceptance of me and this unorthodox method of communication has started an avalanche of change. Mysticism, self-centered thinking, and miracle-seeking have fallen by the wayside with you. You have picked up the tools of self-mastery and assisted us in beginning the sculpting of Light and Life.

What has begun shall not be stopped, for your faith drives us forward. Your acceptance brings greater realities. Hold fast, my children, to what you have learned. Keep rowing in the waters of faith. All our efforts guarantee success. Keep striving for that new and better age. I will be among you as your brother and friend. I leave you with Abraham. Farewell.

ABRAHAM: What a reason to rejoice when we can see our friends and know that friendship is ongoing even when you have been apart. I am grateful to Ham for opening the Woods Cross door for me to enter. Teaching you has been a constant joy and challenge. How brilliant is the Master who has paved the way for Urantia to be uplifted and brought back into the fold of Nebadon. It all begins with small openings, with small steps.

I am always amazed at the outcome of many situations because at times when all seems lost, Father integrates everyone's efforts to produce such growth. Father has made a place for everyone in the kingdom, and everyone will have gifts that will help to add to the whole. Many gifts may seem odd or out of touch, but just because we do not understand them it doesn't mean that Father is not at work integrating them into a positive outcome.

I often look to my fellows to help me to remain balanced in my thinking and desires. My friends have my best interests at heart and are honest when they feel I am imbalanced; I rely upon their goodness to uphold me in my positive thinking while informing me of where I am imbalanced. I take not offense of their forthright honesty for that is their role as my brother or sister; I, as well, do the same for them.

In learning self-mastery among your fellows, honesty is so important - and yet this honesty can many times, offend. Your presentation of the truth (your method), is key. I often say to my friends: "I do not speak with authority, but only my inner feelings."

Most individuals intend to do good, yes. It is important you let your fellows know you have their best interests at heart, and to tell them your honest feelings. Let them know you are open to be changed in thinking - and above all, that you wish to bring awareness and create balance. Look for those feelings you may have that may reveal your true intentions. Are they leaning towards doing good for the whole? Are they bringing Father, glory? Or, are they leaning towards self-glory and some sort of self-gratification.

This week, take time to journal your memorable learning experiences that concerns self-mastery among your fellows. That is all for this evening. I am sorry, no questions. Know that we are with you in heart and mind, this evening and always. We most definitely appreciate your dedication and perseverance in seeing Michael's Mission bring about Light and Life. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Draw Out the Divine in Others. Do You Argue With Others For The Glory Of Being Right?

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, and welcome to you, my friends. I am made to feel such peace in your presence this evening. In the peacefulness, we are relaxed and open to more in-depth learning. Your sincere seeking brings me here each week with a grateful heart that Father has granted me this assignment. In your willingness to be open and spiritually focused, you draw out the best in me; you open a divine door for me to allow my spiritual thoughts to come through and reach you.

In everyday mortal living there is not always these open doors; in fact, there are many more opportunities in the mortal life to be opposite of spiritual. Each one of you knows of certain individuals that tend to assist you in leaning towards your animal tendencies. It becomes a habit when you are in this person's presence to immediately put up your defenses and make an opportunity for spiritual poisons to arise. You can see how far you have come in self-mastery in how you are dealing with your fellows in comparison to your former defensive patterns.

Yes, it is true that some personalities do clash; and yes, it is difficult to relate with them. I could offer you help however, by suggesting that you treat each individual the way you have treated me. You have not now, or at any time, had a firm opinion about who I was or am now; therefore, you have held no judgment against me. I have told you I am still learning and you believe me. You have committed to also helping me to learn, just as I have committed to help you. You cannot see me, and yet you have great faith in me as a teacher, brother, and friend.

Should you treat other individuals as you have treated me, I guarantee you would bring out the divine in them. Bringing out the divine in others creates a stage from which higher learning is available. There, in this open communication, is active Thought Adjuster participation. There are literal circuits between you and the one with whom you communicate. I would say that the ego-drive in some would perhaps chance to put a stop to such positive interaction, but this is to be expected. All you really can master and monitor is your own ego activity.

Do you perhaps argue your point to feel the glory of being right? Is the humility felt from another's more accurate opinion too painful so that you cannot be open to change? You very well know you will come up against individuals who will have these personality traits, and this is wonderful practice towards attaining self-mastery. The peace we each feel here tonight is opening spiritual lines of communication, and that would not be so apparent if there were much ego-interference.

When you can maintain peace in mind and heart, in even the most unpeaceful experiences with your fellows, then will your lines of divine communion stay active. Anything negative which your fellows may say to you, cannot shake that divine ground from which you stand. Any emotional unpeaceful ego-directed attitude you might have will only be worse when you confront those fellows which go against your grain.

You will see a break in habit pattern when you can attempt to draw out the divine in your fellows. Spiritually-minded people use spiritual tools to solve problems; they are very well equipped, and they do it for the glory of Father. Ego-driven (or animalistic) individuals have no tools but only weapons with which to do harm. This is a form of self-protection, but really are they protected? Or, are they spinning a larger web of negativity in which we all become trapped in!

The Master had set wonderful examples in His life in diffusing negative situations by drawing upon the divine within His fellows. His calm and peaceful demeanor set a stage for learning to take place. In His calmness, people felt at ease to truly be themselves. In His caring eyes, people felt safe. In His warm and endearing smile, people did not take themselves so seriously. Many times the Master used His charm and humor to draw out the divine in others; and in that connection, there was Thought Adjuster connection, there was the feeling of oneness and universal unity.

This week, I ask you to surround yourselves with peace and reaffirm your own spiritual connection. Take the comfort of peace wherever you may go and put that first before dealing with your fellows. In every situation, attempt to draw out the divine in them. Use phrases that allow others to know you are open to learning.

In being your true selves, your natural charm will be an asset to opening those circuits between your fellows and your Father Fragments. Focus not so much on resisting those individuals who antagonize you, but on the inner peace you have from knowing Father is at hand, and that He is with you to draw out the divine in these individuals. Break your old patterns of defense with those techniques the Master used here in His life in the flesh.

I thank you for your acceptance of me. Your friendship is making me out to be a better individual. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Unified in Brotherly Attitudes. (also, Rachel's question and her passing)

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-13-2000

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. It is most wonderful for me to see you draw out the divine in one another. In this place of unifying hearts and minds, we are with God; we can look into one another's eyes and see the love of our Father; we can hear the group laughter and be made to feel safe; we can be willing learners and kingdom participants and exchange with one another the words of God. Yes, how beautiful to behold the true meaning of the brotherhood. How excellent it is to be among you - kingdom believers, brothers and sisters.

What can such a positive interaction bring? What actually occurs when you attempt to draw out the divine in one another? For one, there is Father Fragment connection; this connection is tapping into divine knowledge, a spiritual 'knowing' that supersedes life in the flesh. Do you not feel your difficulties are put into a spiritual perspective and made lighter when you meet together?

You are really all very different individuals with varying habit patterns, experiences, beliefs, hopes, and desires. Your life-backgrounds are different; your personalities are varying; and still, here in this group, you can transcend what you think you know - to the embracing of one another's differences and be open to higher learning. This is the brotherhood that the Master taught about.

In drawing out the divine in your fellows there is a confidence that you are not relying upon your own wisdom but that of Father's. You are seeking God - and in that, the ego is kept at bay. Therein, you are open to many possibilities of learning and generating new concepts and ideas. In this 'seeking for God,' you are allowing yourself to be lost for Father's sake. Therein are you found by Father and His magnificent love and comfort.

In the joy of the Lord, there are actual circuits opened between you and your fellows - you and the universe circuits. In the joy of the Lord there is a unity that creates the concepts of how the Supreme Being is becoming, always becoming and evolving, always operating within the divine plan of our First Source and Center. In this place of such wonderful divine connection and brotherhood unity, there are physical chemicals released in the human brain which creates balance in mind and body.

Do you see – where you are unified with brotherly attitudes, there is God? I mean to correct my words when referring to the ‘brotherhood,’ for the English language is limited and I in no way mean to cause offense to our sisters. I am fully aware that all are equal in the kingdom, and all are known beyond their mortal forms.

What a beautiful balance we can bring when we are so willing to lose self for Father's sake; we are opened to such an expansion of spiritual realities. Mortal living is mixed with divine realities and we will see, with practical eyes and spiritized minds, the kingdom of heaven being made real, here on Earth.

This week, continue in your efforts to draw out the divine in your fellows. Allow yourself to be lost for Father's sake, to draw out the divine in yourselves. Note the mental and physical benefits. Feel the universal connection. Walk with confidence that you are a participating member of the family of God and knowing your destiny is secured.

No questions this evening, but I have been asked to respond to Rachel's question. One moment. [Editor's note: Rachel had most valiantly been attending every week's meeting for ten years. However, this evening she was not feeling well and couldn't attend. She asked a group member to seek Abraham's advice and comfort regarding her condition.]

Daughter, I am made to understand that your illness is only the ravages of time. While there is cause to be concerned for physical health, there is cause to also be rejoicing at the fact that Father would like you to feel comfort in His ministry. He would like you to be open to new thinking, new adjustments. In mortal living, there is a tendency to become numb to everyday living. During this bout of illness know that He softens you in heart and mind to receive greater realities. It would serve you well to also receive medical help, for these ailments you suffer from now tend to worsen with time. Worry not though, for I am at hand to answer your questions, and Father is there to aid in your comfort. That is all.

To you my students, I am as always, touched by your generosity and friendship. I am with a full heart to know that we link arms in gratitude to our Father for this reality known as the brotherhood. My love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

[Editor's note: Calvin called Rachel after the meeting, reading Abraham's words. Her interpretation of Abraham's message was that it was time to prepare to move on to the next life and said: "Well, okay then, I've had a wonderful life. I'm ready to go." Our wonderful friend and sister, Rachel (Ida Young), passed away two days following this lesson, on March 14, 2000 – apparently from natural causes.]

All Things of Value Are Used For the Next Life | Nothing of Value is Ever Lost.

Rachel's Passing

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-20-2000

[This meeting was the first following the passing of Rachel, our group sister, from elderly age complications.]

I am ABRAHAM. How humbled I am to be with you this evening. Your faith is genuinely inspiring. You, my friends, have had much experience together; and in that experience, you have grown closer with one another. When there is such fellowship and connection are you ever really away from one another? Physical separation, yes! but brotherly connection, no!

It would seem at times that experience has beat upon your souls with such harsh reality that it sometimes appears life is only about adjusting to closings – that life seems to be just about survival, making your way through one heartache after another. And though at this time it is difficult to see the new realities before you, there will come a time when you can see mortal life as new beginnings instead of endings; openings instead of closings.

There will always be mindal adjustments you need to expect, but your experience and your life lived with Father is educating you on how to adjust with grace and gratitude. Your connection within the brotherhood brings God before your eyes. Your love and comfort in your circle of acquaintances aids in your technique of dealing with those life adjustments you must experience.

Life is not about voids and emptiness to find fulfillment for, no; life is about finding the beauty of Father within the voids and emptiness.

How blessed is the child who has a loving parent to comfort them, yes; but how equally blessed is the child who has a sibling to understand them? How small are our difficulties when they are put before a comforting friend. How balanced you can become when a friend is tactfully honest. How wonderful it is when someone listens to your ideas and appreciates you for being you – being your unique self. The idea is not so much important as is the appreciation of uniqueness.

I do understand your feelings of loss for your friend and group mother, Rachel. I understand your need to grieve and come to terms with this reality. I know that life may seem to be about wading through pain to higher understandings, yes. After the grief, when the dawn of understanding rises, know that your friend is not disconnected from you but holds the fondest of memories and knows that you aided her in her experience to reach the spiritual levels where she is now. It is complete understanding and love that remains.

All things valuable are kept and used for the next life. Nothing of value is ever lost – and I say, your friendship with one another is extremely valuable. Your connection with one another brings God before you. You are assisting one another in gaining experience, learning lessons, adjusting in a gentler way to mortal realities, and gaining insight into spiritual possibilities. In the reality of the transition from one life to the next, all things small fade away, and only love stands out; only gratitude for 'this life experience,' seems important.

Rally your faith, my friends. Stand in comfort knowing you are in the presence of God when you can set aside small things in favor of accepting the challenge to live – and live to the fullest. You know the value of this life directly affects the next life. You are swimming in value – it is all around.

Know that in the brotherhood you are among God in real 'living reality.' You are made to 'feel' those spiritual realities when within the company of your mortal sisters and brothers. Be not mournful at separation from your friend, Rachel, because she has a spiritual connection with each of you. All things of value are never really lost.

I will be close by you this week. Do not hesitate to consult me. I am with a full heart that I know you, and I am with even more joy at the thought of when we can meet face to face. I love you. Until next week, shalom.

Natural Energy Manifestation, Through Our Thoughts

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a joy it is for me to be among you each week. I watch you like a father and I am always amazed by your willingness to learn. Your learning is my learning. Your growth is my growth. Your joy is my joy. We each know our actions have affects. What we do most of the time, matters. What we think, also matters. How we perceive and understand affects how we live and relate within the brotherhood.

The Master, being a friend to all, is deeply affected by how you think, feel, and act. He has real personal connection with each of us and knows why we do what we do; why we think the way we think. As we move deeper into the brotherhood, we become connected with one another as the Master is connected with us. How you 'understand' affects those that you know. Yes, your beliefs, thoughts, and words, affect those you know.

The connection between individuals is a living energy and a flowing current of 'good' or 'bad.' The power of our thoughts is becoming a natural energy manifestation that not only affects you but those you are around. Thoughts are an actual living reality. This understanding is one of the new spiritual realities that will become apparent as you practice being within the brotherhood. You will realize that with a fellow - 'your pain is my pain; your sorrow is my sorrow; your joy is my joy.'

There is really an incredible power to affect those around you. Without saying a word, but just in your thoughts, you can send energy signals. When one man climbs upon the back of another to have power, the effects are not only felt between these two men, but also with their family, friends, and strangers they would chance to come upon. The man who has been wronged is made to feel injustice and become filled with spiritual poisons - which most definitely affects all he comes in contact with.

Yes, the wronged man has choices he can make: He can become beaten and bitter and take revenge; he can become hopeless and weak - not to make effort anymore; or, he can turn to Father and display his feelings. This embittered man can even show his ugliest emotions to Father; he can be angry for a time, yes, but not take it upon himself to 'react.' He can look for the higher lesson in his circumstance. He can give his difficulty over to Father and allow Him to clarify the situation so as to create solutions.

Should the wronged man lie down and be walked upon by his fellows? No! Should he stand up with pride and fight for his place? No! Can he allow himself to be lost, his ego to be set aside, in favor of gaining higher spiritual understanding? Yes!

The man who has stepped upon the backs of his fellows to have 'more and better' is asking for spiritual intervention – hard lessons. He is severing those ties with his fellows. He is empty of those things which really matter. His money, power, and pride are temporary empty satisfactions that hold no meaning – and he wonders why he is not happy. He can recognize his problem and make amends – or, seek for further temporary fulfillment of again hurting his fellows for gain.

Both men will at some point know the pain that was caused over this situation. Both men will have understanding of the effects their actions had. Can a higher good be created? or will more spiritual poisons be spread! Will they react to save pride, to save self? or, can they lose self in favor of understanding, in favor of Spirit direction!

This week, be aware that your fellows' joy is your joy; their pain is your pain. Be aware of the connection of those you come in contact with. Ponder upon your personal power to create a higher good. Tonight I can take a few questions.

INERA: Abraham, do you have words for Claireesa? [Her father passed away Sunday.]

ABRAHAM: She knows my words and feelings. I can say that where there was hurt, there will be healing. Where there was misunderstanding, there will be enlightenment for all concerned. She need not worry or have added stress because from this point on, new enlightenment will create healing for her and those she loves. She only needs to be open. Our love is most certainly with her. Another question?

CALVIN: Do you have any words to say of the Pope's visit to the Palestinians this week?

ABRAHAM: It is definitely a giant step in the Correcting Time. These matters appear to be momentous and growth-promoting; but, as always, with growth there is pain. Religious leaders need to evolve with the changing times and be open to diversity. A religious organization who claims to have the 'only true church' asks for stagnation and upheaval among the members. We are hoping this occasion will show that each and every individual is a child of the living God. It matters not of personal beliefs, but having respect for everyone's right to believe in the way they see fit. It is so difficult for man to allow difference. Each church has jealousy for other churches. Many religious people believe that other religious people are less enlightened and are ignorant; there are always intentions to convert one another over to a 'correct path.' This is indeed erroneous and only negative can result. We are hoping the attitude of 'the brotherhood of man' will bring about acceptance of diversity and a desire for a common good for the whole. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, your lesson tonight speaks right to my heart. Sometimes in this group, I feel like a rebel-rouser. I feel like everyone comes and is getting along just great, and then here I go with my stuff which causes turmoil. On one hand, I feel like I am not honest about it in how I share and in how can we work through it – it is really scary for me to do that. Then I feel like maybe I should just keep quiet and act like everything is okay. I even sometimes think that maybe I cause more problems by my presence and that maybe I just shouldn't come, and blah, blah, blah. So your lesson tonight has a lot of words for me to think about and dwell with. Do you have any guidance on that?

ABRAHAM: There are always ways to measure your intentions. Like with the story of the two men – you can attempt to understand why you create some of these tensions by asking yourself: Are you sharing your truth to create good for the whole? Or, are you feeling personal injustice in which you must 'right' so as to save self-worth? Low self-worth is made more difficult when others appear to personally attack you. There are those feelings of 'if you do not right the injustice then you are apt to believe they were justified in their actions' – and once again, it is proven you are right to think you are without self-worth. This is understood. Jesus would surely have been crushed by other's opinions had He not had a strong spiritual connection with Father. His connection was a shield against other's attacks. His connection was a deeper understanding for His fellows. His connection to Father was a detachment from other's hurtful actions. He cared only what Father thought, and the others were seen as individuals who are on their own path of learning; He knew Father would help them. He did nothing unless he could promote the highest good. He had never made effort to 'save self.' I hope this is helping.

MIRIAM: Is it erroneous to think that 'because we are brothers and sisters it is in the highest good to talk about things that have discomfort?' Or, is it best to just turn everything over to Father and know that everyone is on their path and just let it be? Maybe it is just a faulty thing of mine in thinking we ought to be sharing these things.

ABRAHAM: Understood. You are speaking about being truthful about what is in each one's heart? (Miriam: Yes). Abraham: Understood. Certainly, speaking the truth is of the highest good – although the way in which you present it is key to having positive results. We each need to focus on remaining 'the learner' and looking to the spirit for words. When you are gathered, God is before you. God is made real right before your eyes if you each can set aside 'self.' Certainly, discussion should take place if there can be further understanding; but also this is limiting depending upon the results it is bringing about. If topics become dead – then, of course, it is time to release it into Father's care. Each individual needs to have time to grow into a better understanding. Does that answer? (Miriam: Yes, thank you.) Abraham: One more question?

MARK: What questions could we be asking ourselves in the next stages of growth that you see here with us?

ABRAHAM: I believe that it would be helpful to ask yourselves: What are my priorities? What is really important? What really matters, and how can I work best with Father to bring these things into a reality? What can I do to have a balanced life? What can I do to promote the highest good for Father, myself, and others? Is this answering? (Mark: Yes. Thank you.)

I am always with more love for you each time we meet. I am with gratitude to Father for my position within the brotherhood. As long as we give all we have for the good of one another we are venturing further into Light and Life. My love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Allow Father To Be An Increase Between Ourselves And Our Fellows | Setting Aside Desired Outcomes

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How magnificent it is to know that when we can meet, God is increased. By that I mean: Being in the material form we must go by faith; when you gather, your faith is upheld and increased, and Father becomes more real. What a joy to ponder – God among us; God increased! The kingdom of heaven is becoming an ordinary concept within your minds – natural, as if it had always been that way. Stillness time is most definitely required to keep your relationship with Father fresh and growing.

These lessons we are learning now concern ‘the brotherhood.’ Again, I say the word brotherhood is just a mortal term that more encompasses all men and women. Let us not feel separation from simple word terminology. When there is separation, ‘the brotherhood’ is not reality. The mortal experience requires you to learn the concept of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.

Yes, when you are gathered, God is increased; He is more. I speak of this particular group at this time. Of course, there have been times where God was less or decreased due to ego-interference, but this is part of our learning experience. My friends, you have the ability to make God more wherever you go and with whomever you meet. You have a wonderful relationship with one another here, now, and most of the time the spirit here is obvious. ‘God is increased,’ yes.

You also can bring Father into everyday-living situations with those you know. I mean not to say preach to your fellows from the text, or from your beliefs so as to right their wrong thinking – no, not at all; I mean to be a living example of the spirit in whom we live, move, and have our being.

Is it possible to put Father before you? Is it logical that He desires to be integrated with every phase of your life? Can we learn to set aside what we feel we need in favor of asking Father what does He need of us – “What would you wish for me to do with this situation, my Father?” Can we ask, and trust that He has heard us and the answer is forthcoming? Yes, of course!

Children, for the most part, believe in the knowledge of their parents. A parent (or an older/wiser adult) feels confident in their knowledge as opposed to a child not having much experience to relate to. A parent feels to know most everything a child would assume, and a parent may find satisfaction in the faith that the child has in them.

When a parent (or an older and supposedly wiser adult) is mistaken, is it the first thing on their mind to apologize and allow for correction? Not all the time, no, for some parents (or prideful adults) would rather smooth-over the issue with their logic so as to not appear foolish or wrong. A good parent, in the first place, asks Father to go before them and make effort to be spirit led in all their answers to the child's questions.

If the wise parent or adult is somehow proven wrong, they can be honest with the younger and supposedly less wise child and allow for correction. Spirit-led individuals fear not correction for they know they are also always learning and growing. Correction appears not to be 'a blow to the ego,' but rather, 'a light in the darkness.' There is rejoicing on the part of the parent, and the child - who is learning to believe in themselves also.

Yes, a parent (or adult) can make effort to show themselves to also be learning and open, which gives a child freedom to be who they really are. This is 'increasing God.' This is allowing the spirit to teach. This is setting aside desired outcomes (or food for the ego) in favor of being nourished from the living spirit. This is creating spiritual current between individuals. To allow Father to go before you is giving Him freedom to work through you; to use your hands and voice, to listen with your ears and see with your eyes. Yes, this is 'God increased.'

I very much understand how some individuals make it difficult for Father to be present between you and that individual. I know that it can be difficult to have Father's presence increased in some situations. Some people you know make it difficult to stand aside and allow Father to work and have His presence among you. While you may not see the fruits produced from your efforts, believe me, there are always seeds planted.

Yes, the goodness you show can only have good effects - even if to the dismay of the other individual you are involved with. Connection with Father is detachment from others' opinions. Their harsh words are only drops of water that evaporate in the midday sun. Their words are only there for a minute, but the love of God is there for eternity.

I am sorry, no questions. I am scheduled to be elsewhere. This week, I ask that you practice allowing Father to go before you in all situations. Can you bring that increased God you feel here with each other, to the world out there among your fellows? Ponder upon the power you have to create a divine current between you and other individuals. And please do not worry so much; the spiritual poisons make this exercise difficult. Worry is a spiritual poison.

Take joy, my friends, at the reality of God increased. Look at the beauty in the world and know that Father is in the midst of it. Be not prone to hopelessness of negative happenings. Allow Father to go first. I would be happy to meet with any of you in your private journaling time. I am, as always, with more love as each week goes by, my friends. Until next week, shalom.

Love | That Life-Giving Energy That Serves The Whole
Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-10-2000
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a beautiful evening in which to gather, reaffirm our faith and recommit to the cause. I do indeed look forward to each week when we can view with our own spiritual eyes, Father increasing among us. Emulan would have some words for you.

EMULAN: Greetings, my friends. I too feel blessed to be with you and know that we each play an integral part in the brotherhood. In the days of old, multiple families would dwell in the same home. There was never a time where a friend or neighbor could not just come by. There was always room for one more at every family's table. In these small communities there was a definite need for the brotherhood, just to actually survive.

In the adversities of that day and age, individuals needed one another because hardship came too easy; there was mutual understanding that one could depend on their neighbors. When hardship struck, compassionate, practical, God-loving and God-fearing individuals, found it altogether right and proper to assist their neighbor; and when hard times came to pass, they would expect the same assistance in return.

With modern technology making life more convenient, man has learned to be independent. Independence is a wonderful thing when the economy supports the whole. Conveniences are practical and helping society to evolve, allowing more time for those things that are really important - like family, stillness, and service.

Technology in this day and age, however, has brought with it much competition; and with the fading or distorted spiritual practices, it was easier for man to become individualistic. Man does not so much rely on his neighbor anymore, but he is now seemingly competitive and feels to 'do better' than his neighbor. There are still God-loving individuals who serve to be of spiritual use and find fulfillment in that, yes; and there are still those God-fearing individuals who will serve because they fear God's wrath.

What reason have you now to uphold your brothers and sisters as your equal, and you, theirs? Is there the desire to have more than your neighbor - or at least 'as much?'

Love, my friends, is a living energy that, without, humans literally can die. Look at a baby who has not experienced the love from a parent who would rock himself, craving the loving parental arms and stimulus around him. Look at these children who grow without love. What becomes of them? They are also unloving and unproductive. Love, my friends, is a flowing life-giving current which sustains all things, which heals all things, which unifies all things.

Can a man serve in a world without that life-giving energy? Can he build a product which would replace love? Can one build a school where children dwell, and be slothful and looking for gain when he thinks only of his own children? What good is this mortal life without love - love to give, and love to receive? How will competition or individualism fill the emptiness where life-giving energy should be? How will selfish individualism serve the whole?

There is no question that each person is a distinct and unique child of God in which Father knows on a very personal level. You should not downplay the importance of this; and yet, not become so wrapped up in it that all else is 'less important.'

Michael is the founder of this brotherhood. He is at the helm. He would see it His honor to fill His pan with water and wash your feet as He did those apostles of old. He does not distinguish one persons' feet from the next. Be you man or woman, young or old, rich or poor – He has made your place in this brotherhood and counts Himself as one of you. He is a Creator, Son, Brother, Father – and yes, Sovereign of our universe; but He counts Himself a brother in this brotherhood.

Michael would not make your lives easier in a technological fashion, but He would certainly uphold you or teach you and bestow upon you that life-giving energy in a brotherly fashion. Welcome Him among you. Allow Him to take your feet in His pan and make you feel a part of His brotherhood. Yes, welcome Him among you. Know that in your dealings with your fellows, He is one of you.

How can we take the Master's example of not being able to distinguish one's feet from the next, but only have the willingness to be there for your fellows and pass along this life-giving energy – love. Love surpasses all pain – all those petty differences, and all those hurt feelings that someone has done disservice to you.

This week, my friends, put love first as your focus concerning your dealings within the brotherhood. Ponder upon the Master's symbolic spiritual cleansing. Allow Him to be welcome among you as one of you.

I am with more love for you each time we meet. I would be willing to answer your questions during the week. From Abraham and myself, we bid you farewell.

Love One Another As He Loves Us | We Are Each An Extension of Father
Abraham, WOODS CROSS, UTAH 04-17-2000
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How I do look forward to meeting as a group where I feel so completely at home. It has taken time to know and understand each of you, yes, but the more I know you the more I love you.

Said Jesus: "Love one another even as I have loved you." This was not so much a request from the Master, but a command. How can you love everyone, even those that have wronged you? How can you create a new and ever-flowing current of this love between you and your fellows? It is difficult to love individuals who are not giving love or positive energy in return.

In our last lesson we have learned that God can become more when you gather; and, that you have the power to take Him with you wherever you go, with whomever you meet. You may find it easy to see the God in one another, yes, but it is more difficult to see him in individuals you do not know or have had negative experiences with. "Love one another as I have loved you." How does the Master love us? I do believe He sees the God and the good in each one of us. From that foundation, love begins to take root.

The Master sees us on a kingdom soul level as in 'we are all children of the Most High.' The concept that 'we are brothers and sisters in the kingdom of heaven – we are all children of God' is the basis that we find commonalities in. Everyone you meet, you already have something in common with them in that 'we each are an extension of our Father, and we are equally, His children.'

Jesus understands that we each have a path we must take, and our experiences will shape who we become. Because an individual is different from Him, or perhaps they have a more narrow vision than Him, does not put barriers between He and the individual. The Master knows why we have become who we have become. He expects us all to be different in personality and characteristics. He does not always agree with the choices we make but He does so much love us for our efforts. He does understand the love we so crave and search for.

The Master has promised us that to 'love one another as He loves us' is to have an enlarged capacity to receive divine revelation or greater understanding. This greater understanding teaches us of those greater realities we will utilize to make the spiritual connections we need here on Urantia and usher this world into Light and Life. Light and Life cannot come about without the brotherhood.

This week, my friends, ponder upon what it means to 'love your fellows as Michael loves you' - what does that mean? Does He look past the outer material shell, to the inner soul - the seed from which you bloom, spiritually? To love one another as He loves us is to be able to take your fellows' intolerance of you and make it a positive upliftment instead of a negative blow. When you look at your mortal acquaintances, can you remember the commonality in which you all share? Contemplate the fact of 'how much power you really have to promote the brotherhood.' Practice being in a mode of giving and not so much worrying about what you can receive. I say with all sincerity, I believe you each are beautiful and I am honored to serve with you and be one of you. As requested, I should take questions.

TECTRA: Abraham, the first thing - I'd just like to give you my gratitude for all these wonderful beautiful lessons that you give us here each week. The amount of love and compassion and brotherhood is so refreshing. Thank you so much. As you know, I am going on a traveling journey. How can I be of service in ways other than what I may already know or think I know?

ABRAHAM: My friend, Tectra, you sound as if you would be bidding me farewell, but not so. I should accompany you from time to time, and I believe your gentle and sincere manner in which you speak with people is your strong point in service. I do believe, however, that you do at times hold back when you feel led to say something. You are open enough to receive divine communion; and yet, sometimes you doubt your ability to receive - and at times fear delivering an answer. You are genuinely trusting of our Father, and many times you are so much doubting in yourself. This journey should prepare you to take more courageous stands and exert a bit more spiritual authority with those you meet. The journey you have chosen appears to be quite an adventure which would cause you much joy; but I would say to beware when the journey is rough, to rally your spiritual forces to see you through difficult moments. Know that in these difficulties, there are your lessons; there is your well of strength to drink from. You will do well my son. Your abiding faith is what will be most attractive to others. Have you another question?

TECTRA: Yes, Abraham, I want to ask about receiving direct communication: It is kind of a paradox to me in that the way I live my life. I have a lot of faith, like you speak of, and I live my life in a way that is trying to do the best I can for myself and those all around me. I'd like to hear messages from you, or some Teacher, or from my Father Fragment, but I don't hear them – and yet, still, my life works out so well because of my strong faith. What can I do to have more of a direct experience of guidance?

ABRAHAM: It is already there. You would assume this communication to be out of the ordinary but the opposite is so. Your direct communication is feeling so natural you think it is of your own mind. You have excellent Father Fragment communication and He does direct you in the best and most fitting way you can conceive. He would not seek to shock you with what you are not ready for. His method is more in thought than in audio word formation. I know for certain you have received my words and used them well. We seek to have this communication process to be as natural as possible; to be as it was before the Rebellion; to be as though the circuits have never been severed. Worry not. You receive in a manner of which you are accustomed to. You do well. Another question?

TECTRA: I do have one more question, it is actually for the whole group: How can we trust in Father more?

ABRAHAM: By less worry of 'saving self;' by believing Father would not ask you to sacrifice or pay for your entrance into the kingdom; by knowing that you are loved just because you are and that you need not do anything to earn that. Yes, in truly believing this you are bestowed with the well-being that Father is integrated in every aspect of your life, even things you are not aware of. It is perhaps likened to your journey ahead – you are free-falling, without thought of where you shall lay your head and to where you shall receive your meals. It is so difficult for mortals to release all that they are, know, and have – for in the clutching of this, the energy is spent and the connection with Father, weak. It takes a courageous individual to be willing to be lost to become more. I cannot tell you with words how to trust more, but by your experience and the choices you make, you can come to your own conclusions. Is this answering my son? (Tectra: Yes. Thank you so much.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, are you wanting to address us during the upcoming Teaching Mission Conference – to address the group and put that on the schedule? [Editor's note: It is likely the 'upcoming' TM Conference was the one held in Bogus Basin Resort, not far from Boise, Idaho.]

ABRAHAM: I would. It would perhaps be less complicated this way. There is so much to gain from these gatherings. I would seek to help bring light, but not to blind. I would prefer some organization. Yes. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, this is one that I don't usually ask – a question about the Urantia Book. There is something that I keep reading about that bugs me, and I need some help with understanding it: When it talks about people of 'lesser ability' and of all the 'finer races' versus the 'inferior stock' – that always bugs me. It seems to go with the dogma that is 'not inclusive,' and I close down.

ABRAHAM: Yes, it does appear to be quite cruel. But even as we look in nature – nature is also seemingly cruel. Father has arranged His universe and there is reason and purpose to everything. Always do evolutionary worlds experience this dilemma, but yet it is 'natural evolution' and leading worlds into Light and Life. The experience of this evolution causes growth for the Supreme Being and for the universe as a whole. The apparently cruel 'breeding out' of inferior races is really a valuable teaching tool to the inhabitants of the planets, and to the history of the Universe. This world was experimental, and in these natural evolving times there are many who watch and learn from this. Nothing goes unnoticed, nothing is thrown away. The information is growth-promoting and valuable, even when it seems prejudiced. I hope this is helping. (Miriam: It is, and I thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Good question.

I am to take my leave, but I would tell each of you I am available for conference during the week should you need me. Know that I am with you in spirit. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Love of Father, A Life-Sustaining Nutrient | To Love As We Are Loved
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-24-2000
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How wonderful it is to meet together each week. Each week I feel welcome and at home. You all contribute to the energy that makes this transmission process possible. Your warm and inviting intentions allow me to feel at ease to speak my mind. I can literally feel a welcoming energy from you.

I cannot say I have ever felt much negative unwelcoming energy in all my years in this Mission. Your desire to allow me to teach and be with my brothers and sisters keeps us in a forward momentum. Your motives and intentions have energy and you each have done well in promoting the progress of the Mission.

We all must expect to come across individuals who do not share in such positive energy exchange. It is somewhat sad for them, yes, but good practice for us to keep that constant energy-flow from our divine source within. When you link up with these individuals, be not ready to embrace those spiritual poisons. No, stop and remember, these conflicts are lessons in learning on how to keep that divine energy moving forward, rather than a severance.

Recently you have celebrated the day of the resurrected Master. His life on Urantia really created great change. His teachings, although becoming somewhat distorted, still live on. I can say, what He faced during his trial and execution was also an important part of learning to live in the Father's comfort when all else has failed or all human energy has ceased.

How could the Master have endured such a trial? How could He be resolved within Himself to not go with his mortal instincts to save Himself? Yes, He was the Creator Son, and could have saved himself even then. The brutality He faced made even the spiritual beings on high, shudder. Jesus 'the man' and Michael 'the Creator' knew deep within His very being of the absolute and unconditional love of God – all else was small in comparison.

The love of the Father is an energy – which is, in actuality, the Sustainer of life. My friends, you know to a small degree of the love of God. Your capacity to comprehend this love grows with each spiritual level you master. The true and everlasting love of God is without pleasantries or fairy-tale padding. The essence of God's love is powerful and truthful, honorable and forthright, all-encompassing and without condition.

The Master endured because He knew without a doubt, He possessed this love; He felt this love as a life-sustaining nutrient that upheld him in all things. The Master loves us with this same love. I understand that it would be difficult for you to love everybody with this love, but as you reach for new spiritual heights you can know better yourself this love of God – this sustaining, unfailing, and enduring energy which in all actuality is the only thing we will ever really need.

Yes, to 'love your fellows as the Master loves you,' you must first understand how the Father and the Master do love you – it is with realness and allowing you to experience and learn what you need in order to find God. How can you endure in such a strife-torn world? What will drive you forward? What will fulfill you to your very inner being?

We are still within the series on the brotherhood; but at this time, I ask that we each reconnect with our Indwelling Spirit. Ponder upon the Master's courage to endure and also to lay down what He wanted in order to take up what Father wanted. If you are met by your fellows, could they see that you have been with God? Would they know He is your sustaining force and drive? Would they know it is Him that leads you to do good? Can you lay down what you want, to take up what Father wants?

During this week, practice your stillness to refresh your memory of the pure and sustaining love of Father. How is your soul refreshed, re-energized, rejuvenated, and ready to serve? Have discussions with one another. That is all. I would be most happy to meet with you each during your journaling time. Feel free to ask me anything – I will be there.

My precious friends, I do certainly feel such gratitude to Father for knowing you. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Problem Solving Within Relationships | Be Open Rather Than Assume

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-01-2000

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How filled I am with joy and gratitude to be here with you this evening. How blessed we each are to have one another. I am with humility at being witness to the awesome works of God. What a time to be involved at this particular part of the universe. We rejoice to view the upliftment of Urantia and how it affects the universe and the growth of the Supreme Being.

Our Father delights in seeing us without worry and in full joy of the spirit. It is entirely acceptable to take a moment throughout your day to be joyful and appreciative of Father's works around you. What rest for the mind, body, and soul! Finding our place with Father brings a new outlook to everyday living. I am with the full joy that only the Spirit can bring. Even we, as Teachers and your unseen friends, need to take time to rejuvenate in Spirit and reconnect with that pure essence of the Father's love.

Michael said: "I am the vine and you are my branches." He also taught: "My Father is the Gardener that tends to the whole." Being an extension of the vine gives us all reason and purpose. Father tends to us so that we may produce much fruit.

Yes, we all have a function to perform and we all stem from the same beautiful vine. In the brotherhood, we learn that we not only have the duty to produce our own harvest but to aid in the harvest of others. To be apathetic towards your fellows is to stifle your own production of the spiritual fruits wherein one can say: "Your joy is my joy. Your sorrow is my sorrow. Your harvest is my harvest."

I would think it time to discuss a bit about problem-solving within relationships. Many are the times we cross paths with our fellows and find we do not communicate well, or assume that others think poorly of us. Conflicts arise out of what seems to be nothing. Many have had difficult backgrounds that would have taught them to believe the world looks at them in a negative fashion.

Problems between you and your fellows become built up with excess baggage, not only from what is obvious and in front of your face but with the many years' past scars. Through miscommunication, we find that we assume what others are thinking. The problem becomes so built up in our minds that the original problem is lost under the pile of assumptions and negative thoughts.

This week when communicating with your fellows – should you happen to have difficulties, attempt to not build up in your minds this problem with your own understanding, your own definitions, but look at it for what it really is. Isolate the problem. What is the core of the problem? Remove from it those assumptions you have added to it. Contemplate where miscommunication may have occurred.

Some difficulties are never to be found healed because feelings are so damaged by assuming you know what others are thinking. Chances are, you can return to your fellows and discuss with them the miscommunication or the difficulty, isolate the problem, and discuss possible solutions. If each party is willing to be open to change then is this fertile ground for healing. If there is too much 'self-saving' occurring, then consider: are you not being true to the vine that sustains you – and not tending to your fellow's harvest.

This week, remember to find time to be in the full joy of the Lord. This brings a wonderful balance to mortal living. In this balance are you less likely to make negative assumptions and be more open to communicate with a giving heart and attitude? Before blowing your problem out of proportion, view it for what it really is. Be aware that you are not to add that baggage from the past that makes it all the more painful. Be aware of your inner thoughts that say: "This person thinks poorly of me." Or, "That person is thinking this or that of me." Only a few questions, please.

CALVIN: Abraham, do you have any words to share with Marty Greenhut, in New York, who is reaching out his heart to yours. He named his son 'Isaac' because of your influence.

ABRAHAM: Yes. Marty, my son, long are the days we have spent in each other's presence. I understand you as you understand me. We do have a brotherly connection that most definitely surpasses all religious beliefs and teachings. I know that you feel you are sometimes only treading water and not moving anywhere, but let me assure you that you have planted many seeds that will take root. You may not be witness to this, but the seeds of effort that you plant are being carefully tended to by the master Gardener, and He works within His own perfect time. Worry not, my son, the doors that are open – by all means, enter. The doors that are seemingly closed – allow them to wait. Your shared ideas are what is important, not so much the 'following through' to see that each seed-idea takes root and grows. Have peace in your heart and know that God is your partner in all things. He is there to guide and give you the seeds in which you are to plant. My friend, think not I am a figure from the days of old, but a friend close by to help you and bring you the love that you have so kindly given to me. I am not a distant teacher, but a close friend. Carry on, my son. Another question?

SARAUNA: Abraham, thank you so much for today's lesson. You addressed things I've just been carrying in my thoughts today. I am wondering if the so-called 'planetary alignment' that is coming up the end of this week is going to have any influence on us in a way that is important? [Editor's note: Sarauna's question was referring to the rare aligning of Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, and Saturn, plus the Sun and Moon, on May 5th 2000.]

ABRAHAM: Not anything spiritually that I can foresee. As with all planetary happenings, there are natural events that could create a bit of change in an ecological nature, but nothing to worry about. One more question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, could you give a ballpark comparison of where we are now compared to when Caligastia joined the Rebellion and when Adam and Eve defaulted?

ABRAHAM: I can try. With the Correcting Time, we have to 'un-teach' certain beliefs. We have to de-mystify and disillusion the old understanding to make way for new understanding. Among the results from the Rebellion and the Default, there was less universal communication with Urantia's inhabitants. With the severing of the circuits, there was not the influx of spiritual understanding there could have been; and therefore, the world's people had an 'anything and everything goes' attitude. Religions were built from the dust and not from the actual practical application of our inner Father Fragment guidance. Without my wonderful friend and mentors' assistance (Machiventa Melchizedek), and of course the highly successful bestowal of our Creator Son, this world would be in total chaos. These two epochal events did much to keep Urantia on track, yes – but these times of today, with the Fifth Epochal Revelation and the Correcting Time movement, are newly occurring for the first time. The circuits are allowing a greater influx of information, and as individuals are disillusioned – perhaps some in a negative way – there is new room made for new information. It is difficult to say where you are now because this re-encircuitment has only occurred a few times in all the history of the universe. I believe though that you, as a civilized society, are not so much moving backward, or in circles as before, but are at least now in a forward momentum. This is wonderful and all the more reason to rejoice in the awesome works of our Father. Good question Miriam. (Miriam: Thank you, Abraham. We just love you.)

ABRAHAM: And I, you. I look forward to working with you and standing by you as your brother. Yes. My love is with you each, also. Until next week, shalom.

Spiritual Harvest | If One Is Dedicated To The Vine, He Feels Responsible To The Branches

Emulan and Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-08-2000

(TR: I guess Emulan will speak first. I don't like it when they change stuff.)

I am EMULAN. Change is good. [laughter.] Worry not, for I am also your friend and teacher.

I do not make it my place to bestow personal praise on my students and group, but I think it is appropriate to say, in my observance of you I find you diligent and hardworking. I find you to be persistent even when you feel defeated. I see you always making your best effort to do what is true, beautiful, and good. Not always do you succeed, but how excellent that you always try.

I say these things as an observer, a friend, and one who would truly desire to see your spiritual harvest be plentiful. I would likewise tell you, and with helpful intentions – when I would see the opposite of these virtuous aspects of your personalities or characters, I would think myself a real friend and helpmate to try to assist in your recovery to spiritual abundance. When I share my thoughts with you I do so in the hope that you would find them helpful in producing your spiritual harvest.

I am grateful to my friends and associates around me, for they assist me in tending to my spiritual harvest – my harvest is their harvest; my joy is their joy; my sorrow is their sorrow. At these levels in the brotherhood, I am more deeply connected to Father; I see His personality manifested through my fellows and myself. With such a loving association among my fellows, I am more balanced in mind, more joyous in my attitude, and lighter in my countenance.

In my desire to produce a bountiful spiritual harvest I also tend to the Vine which sustains me. I have my place secured on the Vine and I take my position there quite seriously. I have a responsibility to the Vine as well as the other branches – and, the overall well-being of the plant as a whole. If one is dedicated to the Vine which sustains them, how can they not also be dedicated to the other branches? Could I be very successful in my production of the spiritual fruits if I assume my brothers think poorly of me, or feel that they do not make me feel welcome?

I believe my first duty is to the Vine – He sustains me, and in Him I can believe I am a child of God. I should not worry what my brethren are thinking of me when I have the full and complete love of God. If we truly believe we are children of the Most High, then we are not so likely to assume the world is against us. We are more likely to accept Father's abundance and not overlook those blessings that chance to come our way.

I am most grateful to be side by side with you serving that same beautiful Vine. I leave you with another beautiful branch which also adds to our spiritual harvest.

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I thank you, Emulan, for such a beautiful and informative lesson. I am honored to serve with you, my brother, in our Lord's Mission. You indeed help us to add beauty to our harvest.

When I am completely within the joy and abundance of Father, I truly believe the universe is with me. I feel a comfort and well-being at the thoughts that: "I have my position on the Vine. I am in a warm and loving universe." "If I have the love and affection of my supreme Caretakers, what more could I ask for? Even when I do feel disharmony with others, I am unshaken, for I know I am still grounded within a loving universe."

I know what it is like to wear the mortal flesh. I have personally experienced the world's cruelties, for I have, in my day, been the cause of cruelty to others. I can say, the moment I truly felt the full and complete love of the Father, I was not enslaved any longer to others' opinions. I had a freedom to embrace my sonship and live within what I thought to be the will of God.

In this feeling of well-being, I had rallied my own wild assumptions towards my fellows and began to look upon them as my siblings within the kingdom. How this brings such beautiful balance and abundance of spiritual fruits is such cause to rejoice – such cause to be grateful to those that made our way possible, those that gave us our place and position within the universe.

This week, contemplate your understanding of your status within the kingdom. Are you believing that you are truly deserving of Father's abundance equal to your fellows? or would you chance to overlook them because you feel undeserving or unworthy! Perhaps you feel disconnected from the Vine. Perhaps there is a holding back in assisting your fellows in their harvest.

My friends, we must incorporate these truths into our daily lives. We must actually practice them for them to become an everlasting part of our eternal reality. Do not think that you can sink down and be unnoticed, for you are in full view of the Vine. I would leave you with my love –and, my commitment to assist you in your spiritual harvest. Until next week, shalom.

Your Fellows Are Your Lessons | Perhaps Even The Vagrant

Greetings. I am ABRAHAM. I am always learning each time we meet because I am your teacher and friend. I have learned certain lessons that would bring me to the spiritual level of which I am now. You have become a part of my life. No matter where we go from here, you will each be a part of my memory of history. Through the negative or positive you have each taught me lessons that add to my harvest. I would consider it an honor to have been part of yours.

To understand the 'inter-workings of the brotherhood' is pertinent to your spiritual growth. To endure with your fellows is to be accepting of the lessons that will add to your spiritual harvest. Yes, good or bad experiences, it is still quite valuable.

A child who has been abused or neglected for instance, is going to take that experience and either learn from it, or be embittered. She can learn to become enlightened and better from it, and to not repeat the cycle; or, she can become deeply scarred and angry and take out her frustrations on her children in her adult years. Yes, our fellows are our lessons; they are key in advancing spiritual levels. Even in negative experiences, there are growth-promoting factors that yield skills to use in the future.

We are each so very different – and yet, we need very much the same things. It is sometimes difficult to become involved in another's life because we all know deep down we are, to a point, responsible for each other's spiritual harvest, yes, but yet, not sure of how and when to engage. Many circumstances occur where you are a part of someone's memory of history, someone's spiritual growth. It would be easier to not become involved, but where are the lessons in that? Where is the spiritual growth?

A person who would happen to meet up with a vagrant, who is asking for money, knows too well that money could go for what feeds his overall problem. How simple it is to turn your head and walk away and go on with your daily living. How conscience-clearing it would be to give him the money and walk away feeling, 'I have done my part.'

How many would stop and engage in conversation with this man, with one who appears to be a lower-level human being? Who can find a few Spirit-led words to plant within this fellow's mind to encourage and inspire? What good will it do to show that you care? not to act like you do, but to show it! My friends, you have no idea how the mere act of showing you care energizes a person; it turns them in a divine direction even should they question: 'Why would they care for me?'

To meet and speak with this vagrant could have quite a few possible lessons in it: To be non-judgmental; to show you can care for someone who does not measure up to societies' ideals; to find innercourage to speak with a stranger; to have understanding for those less fortunate; to remove fear with an ever-flowing current of Father's love from you to your fellow. Yes, these are all valuable lessons in what could be five minutes out of your life. This vagrant may be your assignment; you may be his.

This week, seek not the way of ease but the way to understanding. Know that involvement means receiving lessons. Involvement means feeling that ever-flowing current of spiritual love. In recognizing the love Michael has for you, you can have an increased love with your fellows. Remember to be observant and to 'allow the unfolding' that is in Father's hands. Look for the lesson in your confrontations with your fellows.

Many want to serve Father but say: 'I know not how.' Perhaps you can become involved with those you meet without worry that they may infringe upon your time, or divert your attention from those things you think are really important. We each have something to learn from one another. We each can add to each other's harvest.

We can also 'take away' from a friend – by apathy, or fear of getting involved. This can delay another's harvest just as it can yours. In one another, we find God. We can bring out the best or worst in each other. We can add or delay the spiritual harvest. I can take questions.

SIMON: Abraham, thank you very much for your lessons; I am very enthusiastic about sharing them with others I find on the Internet's 'Teaching Mission List.' I wonder if you have any insight about sharing there. Sometimes I feel awkward or maybe a little over-zealous.

ABRAHAM: Understood. My first recommendation is to live a spiritual example and allow the joy of Father to be seen in your light and free countenance. Next, I would say to engage in conversation to see if they are open to receive such teachings. If they show interest, then by all means proceed. If not, I would wait and perhaps bring the subject up again at a later time. Your best bet is your instinct on these matters. You know, my son Simon, if an individual is open or not. We must always use caution when sharing these lessons because many times it is connected to ego. For example, one may share the lessons with a fellow to be helpful, and because they truly care about people; and perhaps another may share these lessons as if to say: 'Look at this treasure I have, let me enlighten you.' A person can receive a lot of undue gratitude or energy for sharing them. Is this answering? (Simon: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, in talking about working with our fellows and being in service to others, how can I maintain balance in that and take care of my health?

ABRAHAM: It sounds as if you are moving at a safe faith/trust level and yes, Father does aid physically where He sees fit for you to perform certain tasks. Even illness is a lesson in itself, and it is altogether wise not to overdo. But where there is faith and trust, there is focus on Father and not on self – there is energy going towards accomplishing those tasks and not towards feeding the illness. Many individuals who are very busy make not time for addressing bad health. You need to be balanced in this, of course; but where you have your thoughts on others – there, does that energy manifest into service. There is balance to be had in all things. My daughter, you are very well aware of your health difficulties – enough to know when to slow down. Your extending yourself in service to others, though, is quite healing mentally, spiritually, as well as physically. Is this helping? (Miriam: Yes. Thank you very much.)

MIRIAM: Could I ask a question about midwayers? What do you think of them – like do you chum around with them? Do you talk to them? Are you buds? Do you visit? Is one here now? Who is he? Does he know us? Does he like us? You know, just kind of like a warm and fuzzy approach of what the midwayers are doing these days. How are they doing?

ABRAHAM: Yes, to all questions. I am in such gratitude to these marvelous helpers.

They are quite like you, my mortal friends. They are humorous and at times, emotional. They are quite eager to be of assistance. They succeed and fail just as we do. They perform a great many tasks from things menial to things historical. The midwayers that are in attendance tonight, yes, I have known for a very long time, and they are as close to me as you are. Is this answering? (Miriam: Yes, and thank you. And I would like to thank them.) Abraham: Certainly. Understood. You each work more with them than you know. One more question?

CALVIN: I guess I'd like to know if you have an opinion on hosting the conference next year – it being our 10th anniversary of the Teaching Mission here in the United States. We have our opinions, but would you like to add yours?

ABRAHAM: I am in support of the group consensus. I will be supportive of whatever you each decide. I understand this to be a delicate issue now. I shall be on hand to help wherever I can. Let me assure you our Mission is still building its foundation for a strong and meaningful duration of time. We will have ample opportunity to serve without the pressures of time. Do not worry. Is this helping? (Calvin: Yes. Thanks.)

I am as always with gratitude to be a part of this family. I am, each week, with more love for you. Do not hesitate to seek my counsel during the week. Until next week, shalom.

The Wealthy Woman Finds God Through Her Philanthropy To The Orphanage

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-22-2000

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome and my gratitude to you that make our meetings possible. You are understanding the brotherhood when you unify as a group and participate. I am touched by Father's goodness. I am touched that He would have so much faith in me to grant me my position here with you. I am never surprised by Father's goodness but always am I amazed; His supreme caretaking of the universes is apparent when I witness Him working through my fellows.

The expansion of the brotherhood is unfathomable over your universe careers. You will meet every type of individual you could possibly imagine. No two personalities will be alike. Some you meet may be kindred spirits, and others will be so opposite of you it will most definitely challenge your heart and mind. The one aspect of each one of us will be that 'living Father within;' I say, that, will be our common ground. Some individuals may seem to have more of the Father manifesting within them than others, but our main concern is how our 'Father within' is manifested in our daily living.

A wealthy woman who lived in a beautiful home surrounded by beautiful things and servants found it satisfying to donate her money to a children's orphanage. Every year she wrote out her check with the thoughts of: 'Yes, I am making a difference in the lives of these children.' She would attend her high-society functions wearing her beautiful gowns and tell her wealthy friends about her good deeds, and how they also should likewise share their good fortune.

She was a bit closed-minded however when it came time to accept an invitation from the orphanage to visit so they could thank her. Having grown up wealthy she knew not the restrictions of poverty. She was spoiled and was taught that she was of high importance. She treated her fellows with an arrogance that said most individuals were beneath her.

There were trusted servants in the home but not one of them liked her. Nor were they so much loyal to her; they did not do their best performance in serving her. Her own friends found her personality barely tolerable – but because of her wealth she had earned a certain status among them; they found her pompous and disloyal; not one of them called her a true friend.

This wealthy woman finally (reluctantly) accepted the orphanage's invitation. She thought, "After all, she had well deserved their gratitude for all she had done for them." A few minutes inside the orphanage she saw the children's living conditions as impoverished. They wore used clothes, and even though they had done their best to prepare for her visit, she found the conditions way beneath her.

A child had taken her hand and led her to a small table and chairs where they had been doing some art. The little girl told a story of living in a home where she had been abused and neglected. The wealthy woman most definitely wanted to flee. She could not bear the pain in the girls' face. A small boy had joined them and began to read her his poem. How mature this small boy had sounded, for he had experienced a lot in his young life.

The woman had visited with the children for a few hours, and in every child's face she had seen the eyes of God and knew that from this day forward she would be changed. On her way home she felt ridiculous seeing that her money spent had made little difference in her life, but her visit with the children had completely changed her.

The woman made many more visits to the orphanage, and each time had begun to change in heart and mind, in personality and character. Her soul was literally expanding. The children had grown to love her – and she, them. She became truly philanthropic, yes, but now it was with her time and her love. She learned to overlook financial status. She disregarded any high-society position she held. She made true friends – friends who had seen the goodness within the woman. Her servants were treated like family and with the highest respect. They, in turn, took her in as one of their own.

The change of this wealthy woman came when she had given up all she had believed in and was open to the evidence that God exists. The giving of herself aided her in her own growth and put meaning into her life. Fancy functions were completely dull compared to cookies and punch served by the kids. She had begun out on a journey of self-aggrandizement, and ended up on a journey glorifying Father through truly good works.

Do you see – when you can serve, it is to your own benefit; you are made to grow. The evidence of growth is a glorification to Father; it is a commitment to Him, showing your efforts to find Him. To reveal 'God within,' is evidence of Light and Life.

This week, search for those wonderful qualities in others as well as in yourself that say 'the Correcting Time is at work.' The evidence of Light and Life is among you in your fellows – look for it, concentrate on it, participate in it. Know that I will be with you during the week. In your journaling time look for me. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Who Is Seated In The Watchtower | To Reflect Upon Father Is Key To Comprehending The Brotherhood

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-29-2000

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you my friends and fellow travelers in this experiential journey. I am in such gratitude to Father for He has prepared our place at His table. Every setting is carefully polished and placed for each one of us. To see you here this evening is evidence of Light and Life.

Throughout this entire Teaching Mission, I see individuals who are endeavoring to carry out the instructions Michael has given. There are some individuals who work quietly and believe they go unnoticed. There are individuals who stand firm in what they believe to be God's work. There are beautiful sincere seekers who are looking for practicality in spirituality. There are those who stumble in uncertainty and wish for more proof that this Mission is real.

All of these well-intentioned individuals make up the brotherhood and give significant proof that Light and Life is occurring. How honored I feel to be in contact with all our Mission participants. You inspire me and show me the goodness of our Father. Let us always give our Father full sovereignty in all we do – individually as well as collectively.

When we can allow Father His place, then are we giving Him our trust and permission to bestow upon us divine instruction. He is in His watchtower with a full view of our journey. He can impart to us which roads need to be traveled and what supplies we will need. He makes the roads meet where we can help another, or be helped. He gives us the directions to the divine well in which to dip our cups for rejuvenation.

I ask all who chance to come across these words to reinstate Father to full sovereignty over your personal lives, as well as the Mission as a whole. Live as though Father is right there with you in all that you do – because He is. He is not about politics or caught up in battles of self-aggrandizement. He is in full view of our destiny and needs to be able to break through expectations to make this Mission secure and long-lasting.

Go back to your raw and unbiased basic belief of who your Father really is. Is He far off and concerned only with the greater affairs of the Kingdom? Is He a supreme ruler who will sit on high and judge and condemn you? Or on the other hand, is He the purest and most innocent love you can possibly imagine? Is He powerful beyond comprehension and yet, first in your lives in all things? Contemplate your understanding of the Fatherhood of God. Look for evidence of His good works on Earth. Take note of His good works through you and your ability to allow Him to do so.

How complicated life becomes when Father is not allowed sovereignty. How difficult life is to not believe He is mighty and lovingly powerful in all things – including every personal detail. In our own desires we overlook Father's will. Father knows our every need and desire; He takes that into account regarding your eternal destiny. He would not have you hunger throughout eternity being unfulfilled, no. Our Father can move mountains and align the stars – why could He not see to it that you become internally fulfilled – spiritually joy-filled!

There are desires individuals wish to fulfill. There is pain they wish to heal. There are wrongs they wish to right. There is a need to be accepted, unconditionally. Individuals may act out in various ways in trying to have some compensation, some soul satisfaction, some justice, or perhaps just a feeling that they are important and do belong. Take this into consideration when you deal with one another. Do not expect to find healing and consolation so much 'through your fellows,' but 'through the Father' – allowing Him sovereignty; allowing His seat at the head of the table. This is a wonderful opening to finding that soul-satisfaction.

You can be helped by one another in this brotherhood, yes, but only to a point. When relationships or confrontations with associates become confusing, it is time to reflect on who is seated in the watchtower – yes, He who can view clearly, all things. To reflect on your understanding of the Fatherhood of God is key to comprehending the brotherhood of man. That is all. A few questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, it is a very hard thing for me to determine 'what is the will of the Father' – and what I think is Father's will, but is my wishful thinking or my agenda. It seems so much like just in my head. Should I just trust that my Thought Controller is coming through? I know there's no glory-seeking in it and I do recognize some of those things as a checkpoint, but maybe you can give me some further help here?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. To wait upon the will of God is difficult for some. To act on impulse seems a bit more natural. It is difficult to not attempt to fulfill self-desires or heal past wounds, and sometimes, subconsciously, or even consciously, act upon this. To allow time is difficult, I know. But God is the same today, tomorrow, and forever. His will is there – within, always; and should you allow time to prove what His will really is, it would be wise. Should you allow Him His sovereignty, and work for His glory only, without expecting anything in return – these are good guidelines. 'Thought Adjuster' versus 'Thought Controller' is a matter of the giving over of personal will. The Thought Adjuster can guide or prompt, but not change human will. The status of Thought Controller works within personal will. There, the pre-work has been done; the years of teaching and guiding have resulted in the inner soul's promise of: "Not my will Father, but yours be done." There is a greater amount of trust when one is transformed to Thought Controller status. Is this helping? (Calvin: Yes, it is; very much so.) Abraham: Another question?

SIMON: I appreciate the lessons very much and your presence with us here and during the week. It comes to mind regarding the balance of time between our temporal labors and preparing/planning for future events. I have been wrestling a little bit with that this week. I am really enjoying these new levels. I had an event of losing one of my main technicians that does some of the TV repairs; and part of the lesson touched on some of that for me. So my question is really about the balancing of temporal time versus the time we invest in eternal things, future things.

ABRAHAM: Understood. I, in my mortal state, had often pondered upon this. My mentor and friend, Machiventa, taught me that the two are actually combined. The spiritual life should infiltrate every aspect of your mortal living. You must work to live and eat, yes – but in that, there are spiritual lessons; there are lives you touch; there are relationships formed; there is spiritual growth to be had. Spirituality should intermingle with all aspects of life. Certainly, you cannot expect to do the stillness while at work; that is probably the only thing you should find separate time for. Is this answering Simon? (Simon: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: Certainly.

I am as always feeling blessed and comforted knowing Father allows me to be with you. My love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

The Divine Is Within Each, Equally | In Him We Can Do All Things
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-05-2000

I am ABRAHAM. Welcome, my friends. I do so look forward to meeting with you. I am always learning and feeling encouraged to grow and serve. I am in awe of our Father who makes the way. He is the guardian who keeps my lamp aflame. He nourishes me in all ways. I hunger not.

I strive continually, yes, but I feel not the pain of aloneness or mistrust in the grand Overseer. I am small in His greatness and yet, I relax in His gentility while I am also empowered by His faith in me. God, our Father, can do all things. He is in us, and in Him we can do all things. He lights our path and beckons to us to come to Him, to be with Him, to love and be loved. In Him, we can do all things.

So many times does the mortal life bring disappointment and discouragement. While we are weak, He is strong. Yes, in Him we can do all things, heal all things, understand all things, and endure all things. We make effort to become lost to ourselves to those mortal things we cherish so that He may make us more than we are.

To be endowed with Fatherly affection is fuel to carry on – to face our challenges without complaint and find real joy. If we truly understood the faith Father has in us as His children, we would feel less of a sting from mortal life, and embrace our challenges with the certainty that Father bestows upon us the gifts of His own ability. In Him, we can do all things.

Can we become small so that He may make us more than we are? With such a conscious presence of Father's love, power and abilities, how can we not improve in the area of brotherly affection! If all mortals truly believed the divine indwells within them equally, there would be an astonishing peace knowing that all have ample opportunity to live, work, rest, and play – with an inner-knowingness that we have divine abilities. One can hardly hope to comprehend the Father's power and goodness if they cannot be made small. Without the understanding of the goodness of God, why would one make efforts in making strides for the brotherhood?

Life can beat upon the spirit; and instead of gaining spiritual muscle, one may become bitter or resentful. Without the understanding that these life-occurrences are necessary on an evolutionary planet, one may overlook the good works of our Father. Are all things possible with such an embittered fellow? No! Is he endowed with ability? No! Is he for the betterment of the brotherhood? Of course not!

You can look around you and view Father's good works. You can point out evidence of Light and Life, for your faith has made it so. Yes, you are uplifted in faith when you see the work of our Father's own hands. Be not so beaten down by the worlds' seemingly harsh occurrences but make effort to find your Father at work. Use this as encouragement to strive to become more for His sake. In your receptivity of divine inspiration, know that you are endowed with His abilities. We can do all things, in Him.

This week, take a few moments to reflect upon the goodness of God. Ponder the possibilities. Believe – that in Him you can do all things, heal all things, understand all things, and endure all things. That is all. A few questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, in your lesson you said: "If all mortals truly believed that the divine dwells within them equally, there would be an astonishing peace." If we had that astonishing peace, how would we grow? I've understood that it is through our conflicts and struggles that we grow. I am sure there is truth, both sides, but if you could say a few words to that?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Many times in struggles and conflict there is such mindal frustration. There is fear and worry that does block divine information. Peace would bring about a relaxation that allows natural evolutionary understanding. In the calmness is your mind clear and more receptive to new ideas and solutions. This is empowering and growth-promoting. Mental frustration and spiritual poisons cause individuals to act rash and fearfully – doing things that would promote further frustration. Struggles do cause growth if you understand them. Inner peace allows us greater capacity to be receptive to Father's teachings of the meanings and values. Is this helping?

CALVIN: Yes it is, thank you. In summing up my understanding then – in this imperfect world with evolutionary struggles we can at least stay peaceful in understanding Father's hand even through our hard challenges, and not get off-balance or lose ourselves to fear and miss Father's further help. (Abraham: Yes. Another question?)

MIRIAM: Abraham, first of all, I would just like to say you are so beautiful. Sometimes the phrases you use like: "He is the guardian who keeps my lamp aflame," are astounding to me. I have a hard time picturing you as being a swashbuckling war guy, you know. You are so tender and so good in your interactions with us. I just really appreciate that. I have a question about when I was working with Jenny on Saturday. It seemed like I was doing good, you know, in using the healing prayer you taught us – that experience just really got tense. I felt a lot of pain in my right shoulder. I have been feeling kind of weak since then. I was wondering if you could help me understand that process, or explain it, or give me some guidance. I hope I wasn't barging in where I didn't need to be or something. Do you know what I mean?

ABRAHAM: Yes. I am gathering information. [pause.] From what I understand, the overall process was healing and a great help. However, there was some tension, and that diverted the energy to take a longer path. I am gathering that your desires and wishes for this individual to have healing was so potent that the healing energy came in a great surge, which affected you physically. Your sympathetic understanding for your fellows is, no doubt, beautiful. But we suggest that you have no desire for the effects of the outcome. Of course, you want to see your fellows do well, yes, but ultimately the will of Father must prevail. The prayerful healings are for faith promotion and mental stability, not just for physical healing. They are reminding the individual that Father knows their circumstances and desires for them to relax and be unafraid of His will. You, daughter, have a way with these healing practices. Just remember to trust in Father's outcome; it will make for a better flow of energy. Have not worry for your physical wellness. With rest and time, you can expect the problem to lessen. Is this helping? (Miriam: Oh yes, Abraham. Thank you. I just love you.)

I am as always with more love for you each week. You, my dear brothers and sisters, bring me a love that feeds my soul. Until next week, shalom.

Broaden Our Vision Of Divine Abilities | Speak With Loving Honesty

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-12-2000

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Each week I look forward to meeting with you and hearing you define your weeks' occurrences with spiritual definitions.

I am always amazed how the spirit works to create growth and cause healing. 'In Father, we can do all things.' To have full faith in this statement is to broaden your vision into believing Father lends us His abilities for creating greater good, and heightens our faith in limitless possibilities.

Many mortals are set with the mind that 'things never change.' "I am powerless and my destiny is laid out before me without rhyme or reason." Some believe they are to fulfill this mundane destiny, and believe not they have the Father of father's who dwells within them.

Should you have confrontation with one of your fellows where feelings are hurt and trust is damaged, some would find it impossible to mend this broken relationship and cannot envision how Father could create healing and restore balance. If you believe you are endowed with divine abilities, then are you putting Father first; you are asking to see with His eyes, hear with His ears, and feel with His heart. Yes, with God in us all things are possible.

Before spiritual poisons get hold of you, take a moment to ask Father to go before you. Let Him know of your willingness to do His will. Let Him know you are open to receiving His solutions. This is a new era, yes, and new understandings are opening up to you. Divine abilities will be a cause to worship and rejoice - not to be in awe over, no, for these things will become as if they have always been. It is said:

"You can exchange your mind for the mind of Christ." - this is literally true.

If you can rally your faith to believe that 'God indwelling within you' can create limitless possibilities, broken relationships can be mended. You can find reason and value to your struggles with your fellows. At the first sign of confrontation with a fellow or feelings of negative energy, invite Father into the situation. You can receive divine information that would be helpful in diverting confrontation, or in finding a greater purpose to this relationship turmoil.

To invite Father in is to cap the ego's desire to see certain outcomes; you remain open to Father's solutions and divine possibilities. In the midst of these confrontations, be not surprised that you find yourself with divine abilities - such as a deeper understanding; words to heal; and a broadened vision. Such enhanced abilities do result in a more secure connection in your relationships, yes, and feelings that there is a source of future friendship and comfort to be had.

This week, contemplate on broadening your vision of divine possibilities. This is not miracle-seeking, no, just the average everyday awesome works of a loving Father. Believe you are empowered to create a stronger brotherhood with your divine abilities. Think not that your eternal destiny is mapped out and you are only to run the course, no. You are a co-creator in your divine destiny, and the efforts and choices you make most definitely influence that destiny.

Ponder upon your courage to speak with loving honesty. Embrace that divine truth within, allow it to flow through you. With a God so close and lovingly protective of our welfare, how can we not go forward with confidence and courage?

No questions this evening. I should like to speak with you each during your time of journaling. I enjoy our one-on-one contact. My love is with you, as always. Until next week, shalom.

Be As The Small Child Who Views Others With Non-Judgmental Eyes

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I love to attend this meeting every week to observe how you have dealt with your mortal happenings. I can say with certainty that you each do much better than I did when I once wore the mortal flesh.

This time in your world history is particularly interesting because of the many changes and occurrences. We are always in a state of amazement at Father's wonderful works. There is a ripple of joy throughout the heavens each time a child of Urantia turns Godward. As you progress in your spirituality do you find yourself with divine abilities that help heal the past, correct present behaviors, and cause hope for the future.

We in this brotherhood could learn much from the little child. A small well-cared-for child views the world with wonder. A child rises every morning in excitement of things to happen during the day; they have not plans or deadlines to meet; they go about their day living in the present moment.

A young and unspoiled child views his other tiny fellows through the eyes of curiosity and enthusiasm to find out all they can about them; they see not color of skin, financial status, or positions of importance or power – they view their small friends with the eyes of equality and without judgment.

At some point in your lives you each began like the small child. With experience and worldly cruelties you have learned to develop a thick skin for protection. Yes, you have taken in life's cruelties, and you have also given them out – and have seen the repercussions therefrom.

To truly become attuned to the universal brotherhood we must remember the little child within – the child who finds excitement in the company of his fellows; the child who accepts his fellows without question; the child who would partake of their fellow's joy or cry at their sadness.

The little child is quite possibly over-trusting, but always can he go to the parent for guidance. How blessed is the man or woman who walks into a room only to see their fellow's faces light up with joy at their presence, as children do. To acquire the attributes of a child concerning the brotherhood there needs to be effort made towards taking steps and daring to be vulnerable, or exposed so to speak, among your fellows. If one makes effort to be among your fellows without worry of self-protection, then are there literal opening circuits between you.

A small child worries not about his individual self – if he is rich or poor, male or female, black or white – he just is. He is happy to be himself with his tiny fellows and knows that this is indeed quite good. The small child views his peers without expectations and is open to learning about the individual. He worries not what his small friends can do for him, but only reaps the joy from their company. The child is open to learn about his fellows for he has no preconceived notions, only wonder and curiosity.

Be as the small child. View your fellows through those small unjudgmental eyes. Make effort to really feel the excitement from learning about them. Take joy in just 'being,' and allowing others to just be. Find the joy in fellowship. Learn and teach. Grow in character – and love with more reality.

As I view you, my small friends, I am in wonderment and excitement to know you more and learn from you; to teach you; to laugh and cry with you. I am with more love for you each time we meet. Until next week, shalom.

As An Adult, Have I Put Away Childish Things | Can I Accept The Abundance Father Wants to Bestow Me

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-25-2000

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I am here. Greetings, my friends. Your energy this evening is staggering. I am uplifted to behold such renewed spirits. With this renewal we can find the courage we will need to further our personal work, as well as that of the kingdom.

There is a great deal of personal work to be done to gain those benefits from experience. Experience teaches us to be helpers, healers, and holders of light. I am confident in the Mission's participants to lay that firm foundation of reality in which Light and Life will rest upon. I am in joyful worship to behold Father's works in the realm of which you my mortal friends abide.

Our efforts from our side of the Mission have been as if we were tunneling through a mountain with Father's tools, and we are now catching a glimpse of light from your side. While we ponder upon the world's possibilities let us not lose focus on those small corrections that enable those huge possibilities to become reality. Let each time we meet and share faith and love send us back out a bit better as a cosmic citizen.

Through brotherhood interaction, we gain that experience we need that teaches us to become helpers, healers, and holders of light. As you interact with one another 'through the eyes of a child' and 'with the heart of a child,' let us remember the words of our beloved Sovereign Creator: "As a child, I had the things of a child. As an adult, I put childish things away."

Lose not your child-like faith and heart to interact within the brotherhood, yes, but embrace those mature spiritual ideas with that mind of the One who is experienced. Embrace that reality of an adult while learning how to lose those childish fears and relentless 'repetitious' childish behaviors. [group laughter; and as Calvin put it for all of us - "hey, I resemble that!"]. You, my friends, are such a joyful part of my life. I know I am a better teacher because you listen to me, love me, and allow me to just be. I thank you.

Our lessons concerning the brotherhood will be now more interwoven with lessons concerning personal behaviors. I would take a moment to speak again on your status as a child, son/daughter of God. You, all of you, are children of the living God. There is nothing that can take that away. Each of you are known and loved for who you really are at this point in time - not just for who you are becoming.

Yes, even with all the personal flaws, again, each is loved for who they are. Your seat at the table as a cosmic citizen of Nebadon is secured; it is yours now and always. Each one of you has the same opportunities to advance as you will. Each child is loved as if they were God's only child. There is simply no doubt - you are loved beyond your comprehension, and loved equally.

There are life-occurrences that would make one believe all that I have just said is not reality. Many individuals, including some of you here, believe that your place at the table is not secured; there is a mortal tendency from past experience to believe that circumstances - your fellow's and God's abundance for them - is working against you.

Many mortals are apt to believe in good and bad luck, good and bad forces, which some call 'karma.' There are universal laws, no doubt, and to transgress these laws will definitely lead to a lesson of correction. Therefore, tonight I mean to focus on how you perceive your level of accepting God's abundance. Are your fellows really working against you? and is that what you believe you deserve? Are you followed by that black cloud of bad luck? Are you living a life of unnecessary atonement? As an adult, have you put away childish things?

This week, contemplate your real beliefs of self-worth. If feeling undeserving, know that the world is not out to see to your unhappiness! Be aware, my friends, of the many times you reject the abundance of Father because you feel not worthy. Personal humility is to be commended, yes, but personal 'unworthiness beliefs' delay spiritual progression.

That is all. Know my friends, I am in your presence during the week. I am at hand to be of assistance. As always, I am with more love for you. Until next week, shalom.

Father, Through Experience, Helps Us Put Childish Things Away

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-03-2000

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I am here. Greetings, my friends. It is always wonderful for me to participate in this group. I feel at ease to be myself. I believe you each have my best interests at heart. I realize you each make me more than I am.

As a mortal, I wanted those life victories that would bring me glory or favor in Father's eyes; I felt that my fellow's interest in me would signify my importance in the world; and if I could not earn their praise through good works, I would use power or fear to attain it. I longed for those mortal rewards; I did at one time believe they brought me happiness or a sort of self-acceptance that I was valued and truly belonged.

Under the guidance of my mentor and friend, Melchizedek, I learned that I was already favored in God's eyes, equally, along with everyone else. I learned His unconditional love was a living energy which fulfilled my craving for social attention. I realized that attaining self-glory was empty and on the side of mere animal tendencies. To extort this attention from my fellows through the use of power or fear was simply childish and verging into the arena of self-love and/or evil. Yes, "As a child, I had the things of a child. As an adult, I learned to put childish things away."

What brings us to adulthood? Of course, it is experience - moving and growing and evolving experience. Some consider their experience in mortal living up to this point, to be half - a gift that has made them who they are today; and half - dysfunctional, with wounds of experience that they must learn to rise above. I am grateful for each half because it brings me maturity - that knowledge and comfort that enables me to see how Father has taken me by the hand and helped me to understand why He does what He does.

I did at one time believe that I could only receive love and respect through power and force. Through my childhood experiences I was led to believe that the world (and God) found me unworthy; and therefore, I had to put extreme effort into everything I did. My focus was misaligned, and my energy was misspent. Although I am glad for the lessons of correction, I am much more gladdened to be where I am now.

Yes, Father had helped me to put away childish things - through experience. It was all valuable, as you will likewise see. I learned from Machiventat that the 'One God' knew me in depth, and loved me anyway. Father was not waiting to correct my every mistake, no. He was waiting for me to listen to His direction. He was teaching me that I am a valued citizen in His universal scheme and that all things are working for me, not against.

You would be amazed at the unseen forces that aid you in your journey. The spiritual keys of the kingdom are not hidden for you to feel tortured into finding, no! The keys are out in plain view, and with experience and maturity, they become more apparent. This maturity brings rest for the mind, a re-focusing in spiritual goals, and a redirecting of energy towards attaining those mature findings of the kingdom.

Since you set out on your spiritual quest, what childish things have you put away? What experiences have brought you to those higher levels of spiritual maturity? And do you not agree – now that you know what you know – there is a lot less fear and much more faith in our Supreme Caretakers?

In spiritual maturity, we can rest in the fact that our place at Father's table is secure; and, we can allow those lessons that bring us a better understanding of spiritual realities.

Contemplate your attitude towards the universe. Are you finding yourself with the belief that it is working for your spiritual success? Or, just bringing you one burden after the next to find your breaking point. That is all. Friends, I leave you with my love. Until next week, shalom.

Lay Down the Childish Behavior of Mistrust and Suspicion

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-10-2000

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How I enjoy your conversation, logical conclusions, and good humor. I feel such a serenity in heart and mind when we can visit. I have appreciated your trust in me as your friend, brother, and co-worker. Your trust and faith in me aids me in my experience as a citizen in our Father's universe. You have allowed me to learn to become a better teacher by allowing me to stumble through this experience. Your patience has been beneficial for all of us.

As we relate with one another we are allowing experiences to occur that teach us how to become more than we are; we are learning to put away childish things; we are beginning to see that the universe is with us and not out to taunt us into becoming a responsible cosmic citizen.

This week we will discuss trust and suspicion: What child has touched a hot stove and not learned from it? Does he learn not to touch it again? Hopefully so! This is logical experiential thinking. The child who has been consistently disappointed by people he knows, and who he is supposed to trust, learns to be more cautious when taking people at face value. The child is learning caution, yes, and is still within the realm of logical experiential thinking.

As this child grows, he either learns to use that balanced logical mind or he becomes mistrustful and suspicious. To move about in the world mistrustful and suspicious creates such barriers in spiritual learning. After one has been so disappointed by human associates, he finds it quite logical to perceive Father as one who cannot be trusted; in that untrusting mind we are more likely to avoid our human associates and also our Heavenly Caretakers – adding to suspicion and mistrust.

It is well and good to be independent, but the brotherhood exists for a reason. People need people, yes, and I have learned to become a better teacher and person because of my students. People need God! I have become a more loving, honorable, responsible individual because of God. Yes, our ties are helping us to become who we are supposed to be.

In a suspicious mind we cannot make a soulful connection with others. If we fear emotional pain and disappointment, we would think ourselves better off to avoid experience with one another. The experience is what is valuable and helping you to 'become.' An open unjudgmental heart concerning your fellows creates circuits between you. Therein, are your feelings of belonging in the universe, feeling at home wherever you are.

I do not say to blindly trust, no, but to stay within the realm of logical experiential thinking. If you have been continually hurt by someone and have just cause to mistrust, then Father does not expect you to keep this contact with them. The facts speak for themselves. You are an intelligent child of God who knows when you are receiving 'valuable experience' and when you are receiving 'redundant abuse.'

Allow us this week to lay down the childish behavior of mistrust and suspicion. Allow us to create those soul circuits between our fellows and our Heavenly Caretakers. Let us contemplate our trust in our 'almighty and unmatched in love and power' – our Internal Father. Is He like your human associates and deserving of your mistrust and suspicion? How far do we dare to fall without worrying that Father's arms will not be there to catch us? A few questions?

ELLEN: I would like to know more about the universal broadcasts – if that is strictly a spiritual 'thought-to-thought' communication or does that involve material communication from other planets? There has been some things said on the Internet. I am just curious.

ABRAHAM: One moment. I can say 'for right now' that these broadcasts will come as knowledge from origins unknown. Several individuals will receive these thoughts at the same time. It will seem completely natural at the time of reception – but after time, you can find evidence that you were not the only one to receive. Our broadcasts will be subtle at first so as to not shock anyone. As the planet develops further into Light and Life the thoughts will be more audio. We cannot rush evolution, although we are terribly excited for it. As for world-to-world communications, that is a subject for the future meetings ahead. Thank you. Good question.

SIMON: Abraham, I am very grateful and sometimes overwhelmed with the beauty of the lessons. I don't have a particular question except, how might I look to serving in the future?

ABRAHAM: My son, why look to the future? You are serving now with your co-workers, your children, your friends. You do a great service in just living what you truly believe. The care you show people which you have for them says a great deal for the kingdom. Temper your zeal with the realness of spirituality and your service will carry much more integrity. We are overjoyed to have you in this Mission. You do well, Simon.

I appreciate each one of you for your diversity and your dedication to serve and be served. You have dared to step beyond what you think you know to a broadened horizon of new possibilities. As always, my love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Continuance On Mistrust And Suspicion | Intentions v/s Reality

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, my friends. I so look forward to our meetings each week. Always are we learning individually but when the learning is as a collective group there are much more ideas – meanings and values to be had. I have always appreciated each unique individual within this group; there are so many varying views that aid us each in our own understanding. One such individual in this group also provides greater growth in thought – my friend, Emulan.

EMULAN: Thank you, Abraham. I also benefit from your knowledge and the kind manner in which you relate to me. I can always count on loving truthful words from you. I am in gratitude to you, Abraham, for allowing me to gain experience in teaching. Your mentoring skills have proved quite beneficial.

I also thank you, my friends, here, for your patience and allowing me to speak in the manner from where my character resides.

Continuing on the lesson of trust and suspicion: I would say there are many factors that cause individuals to have to keep repeating this lesson. There are underlying intentions individuals may hold that would make them view others as having the 'same' intentions. Where 'your' intentions are, there also is 'your' perception of reality.

A person may have certain thoughts, opinions and views that they just assume others also have. These thoughts, views, intentions, are deeply embedded within the mindal structure, and what you intend towards others is a reality you may perceive coming back from them.

A young lady who would find it energetically fulfilling to gossip about others may just assume others are gossiping about her. This is her reality. What she has sown in her actions, she has reaped negatively. Her true intention is to reap the energy from her fellows as she provides them with information – fact or fictitious information.

The possible guilt this young lady may have, coming out from within the good of her soul, causes her to reap what she has sown. What she would do perhaps immorally, she assumes others also do. This causes mistrust and suspicion of her fellows and is, literally, disconnecting the energy in which she so desires. It is not gratifying, or even 'ego-uplifting,' but rather empty and causing feelings of guilt. In guilt, we tend to self-punish. When we suspect others have intentions to do something negative toward us, is it because it is 'our' underlying intention? or what 'we' would do?

With all due respect to our older citizens of Urantia, I could say that some tend to be caught up in old ways and have set patterns – some, not all. In these set patterns there is no new flow of ideas, possibilities. Even the younger citizens who may be able to flow with new ideas still have experiences at times that would teach them to handle certain circumstances with the same pattern.

Some patterns have proved to be useful in dealing with difficulties, and some have proved to only put you in a repetitive cycle of the same lesson. So, when you are feeling mistrustful, is there some underlying intention that does cause you to handle some circumstances in this fashion – therefore must your fellows do the same? Are the intentions from a spirit/soul-side? – or an ego /animal-side.

I understand mortals always desiring to be one step ahead, as if it is self-protecting. You may perceive at times you can't afford to be trusting, for the repercussions are too fearful. In learning to lay down this childish thinking, look to your own intentions and ponder their origin – are they from a divine nature? or a human nature. Are you projecting your intentions off onto others, assuming that they would deal with circumstances the way that you do, causing you to reap the harvest therefrom? Do you not agree – in this thinking, there is not the flow of new ideas and possibilities?

Can we set our sights on Father to ask for greater understanding, a more open heart and mind? Yes, this is 'circuit creation.' Even in this circuit creation, should there be any negativity, Father surely would have you know it. What rest for the mind to know that there is such a flow of ever-changing possibilities available. We need not repeat the old tactics to just wade through our difficulties once again; we have an inflow of new divine information. We can learn our lesson and move on to the next. We can feel that sense of accomplishment and spiritual joy while being able to minister to others.

Be aware of your intentions this week and how you may project them off onto your fellows. Is this causing mistrust? The human mind is a web of experience, and trapped within it is old and worn-out ideas. To relax and not assume that 'things never change,' is to clear it for new and better information.

This is all. I would take my leave having you know that I am with more love for you each time we can meet. Until next time, farewell.
Allow the Natural Evolution | Allowing Father His Control Over Our Own Supposed Need To Control

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-24-2000

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings How wonderful it is to stop in our busy lives to take in spiritual nourishment. We spend the week using or manipulating energy to live the best way we know how. To meet together like this is a drink from the well of well-being. At times it is good to just stop and be free from worries, pressures, and the constant daily striving.

When we can meet and focus on things spiritual, we can go forth into the week armed with truth, beauty, and goodness. How blessed are we that Father would see to our personal well-being even when we become too busy to notice. These lessons we receive help us to advance in spirituality – enough to be of service to our fellows. I am certain you have divine abilities, but your faith is what carries you.

TR: I am telling him I can't hear him very well – so give me a minute. [Editor's note: The meetings these days are in Simon's home this year in Sandy, UT – Simon makes a mad dash to shut off a TV upstairs, the clock and air conditioner; tell the crickets to go to sleep; get a yellow shirt because yellow is supposedly good for communication, [laughter.] – all of which is an experience that ties in to this very lesson.]

ABRAHAM: Thank you, Simon.

We have need sometimes to release our difficulties long enough to be able to receive divine information. When you feel 'the need to control your environment' you are assuming to be God in that you are overseeing all that occurs around you. You are compounding your difficulties many-fold when you feel this 'need to control.' The pressure from this 'need' brings mental confusion and exhaustion – rather than a peaceful serenity. Yes, Father is literally forced to stand aside until you can quiet the mind and really listen.

If you have mistrust in those people you see before your eyes, then chances are there is mistrust of Father. This is not out of the ordinary, and time will show you that Father is unlike any human you have known; He is able to see with the eyes of the past, present, and future. He is not one who would tempt you with rewards of the kingdom to force you into doing His bidding, no. Father is about allowing natural evolution to take place.

In allowing evolution to work there are numerous persons involved, and each one gains the experience they need to further their spiritual education. In allowing natural evolution to unfold there is less pressure upon individuals; therefore, a more-clear incoming of divine messages. Yes, your attempts to control your surroundings blocks divine information, solutions, and new ideas.

You can have desires; you can have needs you wish fulfilled, yes; and with complete trust in Father, you know He knows this. You know He is able to fulfill these desires better than you can, no matter how much effort you put into trying to control and manipulate. Father knows those empty places inside you, and in each place, there is a lesson. In each lesson there is experience gained by numerous individuals if natural evolution is allowed to unfold as it should.

Why is there so much stress and illness in mind and body in the world today? Why would individuals spend all that they earn to fulfill those empty places inside? Why would these children of God climb upon the backs of their fellows to get ahead in life? Why would God-knowing individuals not trust that Father knows their inner desires and can fulfill them beyond their own expectations?

Control is force, pressure, and strain. Natural evolution is allowing, receiving, and moving. Control is frustration and wasted energy. Natural evolution is peace and helping energy to move. Can one say to the sky, 'Do not rain?' No! but one can bring an umbrella. How much control do you have anyway? How do you exhaust your human resources without verging upon being controlling?

Of course you must make effort in your daily lives. Of course you must strive to do all you can, yes. But when your mind becomes so entangled with confusion and frustration because you are 'not granted what you have worked so hard for,' then are you in the area of controlling.

You can raise a child with values and give this child all the love that you can, yes, but you cannot force the child to behave in a way you see fit. You have control over how you have loved this child, how you have taught this child, yes; but when this child grows up she/he will do what she/he thinks fit! and you have not control over that. You can do all that you can, and the rest is up to the child and her/his indwelling God Fragment.

How healthy in spirit, mind, and body if we could relax and allow Father's natural evolution to move! How many numerous fellows would be affected by being allowed to gain experience from this natural evolution? It all begins with trust, my friends, trust in our Supreme Caretakers.

Father has an adventure mapped out for you that is perfect in every way. When you struggle to 'control' the adventure, then Father must step aside - and that is where you get lost; that is where relationships are dissolved: that is where stress begins; that is where the body and mind are adversely affected.

This week, think about natural evolution and how you may attempt to control it. I am in such gratitude to Father for my particular adventure. I have been places and have learned things I could not have done on my own. I thank Him for His care. And I, even now after having had my experiences, look back and often regret my mistrust in Him. And even this He understands.

As always, I give to you, my friends, my love and appreciation. Go into this next week with peace in your hearts and clarity in your minds. Until next time, shalom.

Acceptance and Allowing | Relinquish Control In Favor Of Divine Power

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-31-2000

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, friends. I do look forward each week to meeting with you. There is always something new to discuss. There is always wisdom to be gained and an enlarged capacity to receive divine understanding. We are learning that our journey is not so much of a quest as it is an adventure. In allowing the unfolding we can perceive with the eyes of the spirit and learn greater realities. Just as in the process of transmission-receiving, one must let go of self to be open to new ideas and concepts.

In learning to put down that childish behavior of being controlling, we are asking

Father to make us more than we are. When we learn to embrace our Father's plan of natural evolution, we are intrigued by the adventure more than we are in fear of what is to come. We can trust our Caretakers to see to our needs for they are included in our map to Paradise.

What does force bring us? Can you force a tree to grow? No! It is accepted that nature sees to the well-being of the tree and its growth takes many years.

Acceptance, my friends, is key to being able to allow for natural evolution. A training of the mind helps you to find this acceptance. To contemplate, journal, and have discussion with others aids in your acceptance of natural evolution. We learn to become lost so that Father can show us our divine purpose and make us more than we are. We relinquish control in favor of allowing for divine power.

The son of self-love (Lucifer) highly craved control over his surroundings. He chose not to wait for natural evolution but to force his own desires off onto others. In his control, he felt powerful and regarded as important; and took much pleasure out of taking something away from God – for that added to his sense of self-worth. To be controlling fed his ego and put him above others.

Lucifer was already loved beyond measure. He was granted divine power when he had released any control, yes, but he saw this as mundane and 'being the same as everyone else.' He could not grasp the 'group' concept. He could not stand side-by-side with his fellows and 'work among them' for he had great desire to 'lord over them.' He was truly individualistic.

To be controlling has many roots of origin. One may feel the need to control out of fear of the unknown. 'Should I embrace natural evolution, then where will I end up?' Another reason one may be controlling is out of the need to feel important. Another controlling person may be simply ease-seeking and to delegate their work to others. As we let go of our need to control, Father bestows upon us His divine power, and it is entirely much more fulfilling than holding on to this childish behavior of 'controlling.'

Yes, "As a child I had the things of a child. As an adult, I put childish things away."

A corporate executive with many employees thought it productive to pound his fist on the desk and demand top performance from his workers. He thought it would be financially beneficial and give him a sense of power. The employees disliked him and were not loyal to him. They did an adequate job for the company, but most certainly not their best. The executive was constantly enraged by their low performance and the loss of customers. His mind was constantly frustrated, and his health was fading.

Out of desperation the once controlling executive turned to God and sought a better way. He learned to become a part of the team, working side by side with his fellow employees. He gave them the respect and love he so craved himself. In relinquishing control, Father had made him more than he was, and gave him more than he had. He found meaningful fulfillment and satisfaction from allowing natural evolution. He found love as a moving energy, whereas as an individualistic man he had nothing.

The executive regained the loyalty of his employees, yes. The employees found his kindness and trust in them to be inspiring, and put their best foot forward. The company had become about people, not about money. The company had become a well-oiled machine that had doubled their production – and of course, the finances reflected it.

My friends, I ask: What is this divine power worth in place of mortal control? In trusting Father, what is He entrusting to us? This week, ponder the willingness you may have to release control. Release what you 'think you are' and what you 'think you have.' Have you the courage to trust Father so that He may make you more than you are? Can you allow windows of opportunity for Him to come in? Can you see your release of control as an act of divine strength? What would your receiving of these divine powers entail?

That is all. As always, my love is with you and I look forward to our private moments together, as well as the group setting. Until next week, shalom.

Laying Down Our Need To Control | What Are Our Duties | Gratitude and Abundance
Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-07-2000
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Your discussion on this topic of feeling a need to control is branching out with numerous avenues of new possibilities. I am uplifted by your comments and willingness to learn. As we learn to embrace the adventures of living the natural flow of daily life, we find ourselves with new energy to stay the course. Working together as a group enlarges our capacity to receive divine information, create new ideas, and balance our thinking. Yes, well done.

When I first began teaching, I found myself becoming concerned over my student's abilities to learn. I worried that I was an ineffective teacher. Progress seemed slow and my enthusiasm craved immediate results. I learned that 'in time' my students would eventually understand the lessons – and that it was not part of my duties to see to their advancement, no! My duty was to lay out the banquet before them, and it was the student's responsibility to partake of what looked appetizing.

In learning the difference between 'exhausting your human resources' and 'being controlling,' we sometimes must define our duties. As a parent, what are your duties? As an employee, what are your duties? As a child of God, what are your duties? What is within your control? Times may arise when you need to contemplate your role as a citizen of Urantia, and as a child of the kingdom. When you have felt to have performed your duties to the best of your abilities there is only one task left – and that is, your releasing of any outcome and the acceptance of Father's will.

This past week you were to ponder the meaning of relinquishing control in favor of divine power. In laying down that childish toy of 'control' we will take up the mature tool of 'divine power.' Many individuals move forward from a feeling of being spirit led, and although they are unsure of the exact feeling, they are with the best intentions. It does take time, patience, and a complete trust in Father to effectively follow through with His will.

I am EMULAN. Greetings, friends. There are many examples of divine powers when one can lay down the need for control. Those that have not want nor need find their reception for divine information wide open; they have a universe of possibilities before them. One who relies upon the will of God seeks not for themselves but for the glory of God. Those that need to control have need to fulfill certain self-desires and spend their lives looking to fulfill these desires.

To have want and to feel a constant need is to make effort to see to it that those things are fulfilled; this is exhausting! Those who perceive their lives as 'in abundance' have gratitude. They have not so much desire to have wants or desires to keep what they have, but to spend time in gratitude. It's all a training of the mind, my friends. It's how you perceive life going on around you.

One who has been in a serious car accident may fear driving again. They may take more precautions and perhaps always buckle their seat belts. They may avoid driving at night, or perhaps avoid driving altogether. Another individual may use those logical precautions while driving but feel gratitude for having survived the accident. In this mode of gratitude, they look deeper into the eyes of their loved ones; they notice the bright and beautiful color of the sky more; perhaps they hear the songs of the birds more clear. My friends, therein is your value and meaning. Therein is logic, gratitude, and abundance. Therein is an ear open to God.

Your experiences may shape 'who you are now,' yes, but your reliance upon God will broaden the vision of 'who you are becoming.' He coordinates meanings and values to aid you in your adventure. He has so much to show you. With your need to control, He is limited in what He can give you. Allowing natural evolution is an open door to new beginnings.

How does 'what you need and want' dominate your life? How does that keep you reaching for that true feeling of abundance – that satisfying feeling of: 'Yes, God is with me!' How do we begin to trust that Father knows very well what we need and want? How will gratitude keep us from being controlling? Thank you, my friends, I give you back to Abraham.

ABRAHAM: We thank you, Emulan, for your insightful words. Every day we should find some time to look to our Father and realize what He has done for us. It would be to our own benefit to give thanks and find some time for worship.

Our Father, we know that you have rallied each one of us to participate in this epochal upliftment in time and space. You have dared to shine a beautiful light upon a darkened planet. We know it is only for the love you have for us, your children. You tend to us personally as if we were your only child. We are made to lay down those petty things when we realize your love and hand in our lives. You are kind and merciful, yet powerful and corrective. We find we can do all things through you, and that makes us ask ourselves: 'What more could we want?' While you know all things, you have been patient with us in our blindness. While you are the origin of all knowledge, you are patient with our ignorance. While you are everywhere, you have fragmented yourself in us that we may know you. We are with great love and gratitude for you. We commit ourselves to trusting you and glorifying your works. Your perfection gives us a goal to work towards. We are with excitement that you are our destination. We will continue to strive to find you and your abundance. Amen.

This week, my friends, take time to answer Emulan's questions and continue to contemplate the possibilities of divine power. Find a few moments each day to worship. That is all. My love is ever with you. Until next week, shalom.

Use Logic to Diffuse Imbalanced Emotionalism

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, my friends. I am always looking forward to this night when we can meet. Your discussions are expanding personal growth as well as universal growth. I am always in gratitude to Father for my position in His family of kingdom believers. I look not to 'how I can improve upon His plan,' no, because love and logic tell me there is no better way than His way.

In my mortal life I had learned that emotions speak loudly; and I learned to be emotional to get my point across to others. My emotional ways were a form of control. Emotions and the ego go hand-in-hand. This is definitely part of mortal life, yes. This is understood, and in time, if balanced, can cause you more life 'creativity' instead of chaos.

Your emotions are a part of who you are; as a child, they spring forth naturally. As you grow, you learn to put these emotions to work for you. Some emotionalism cannot be helped because of the powerful meaning in which the emotions spring forth from. Some individuals are quite naturally passionate and driven on certain issues; and when balanced with logic and faith in Father, can become quite powerful tools.

Emotions that spring from ego-needs are closely related to the animal-side of people. The ego has needs, wants, and cravings to be noticed. 'Righteous indignation' is an emotion springing forth from the ego-side. The ego seeks to control, manipulate, and tends to believe it knows better than Father. The divine side, on the other hand, allows, expands, and has faith that our Supreme Caretakers are all-knowing, all-powerful, and ever-loving.

Our beloved Mother Spirit has endowed you with mind and intelligence; and it is through logic that the emotions can be balanced. When a problem arises, one needs to perceive it through the eyes of the spirit, such as: What is the problem? Is it compacted with past painful experiences? If so, how can you relate now with those experiences and see the value therein?

Natural emotions may arise during certain problems, but you can use your logic to see the lesson in it. Will emotions serve the Divine in solving the problem? or will it serve the ego! Will emotions inflate the problem? or deflate it!

Emotions are understood in this mortal world - you, no doubt, will have them. But we must not forget our gift of the mind (logic) which balances out emotions and aids in solving problems, not complicating them. Stillness and study help us to be well-balanced in mind. Clarity in mind helps our logic to diffuse emotionalism. To handle matters through spiritual methods is more productive than handled through emotions.

Particularly on this world have people used their emotions to attain what they would like. A loud voice or flailing of the arms is always a cause for attention and for getting one's way. This emotionalism is a negative energy which goes out to those we have come in contact with, and so on – from our contacts to others. What an expansion of negativity!

It is said: "The squeaky wheel gets the oil." – and along with that, creates negative waves of energy and allows others to act from a darker side as well. Using emotions 'as a form of control' is extending beyond falsehood to the beginning of evil. As we learn to lay down the childish toy of being controlling, we would do well to watch our emotional behaviors. Forget not that Father is all intelligence, and would most definitely think your use of logic to be very practical, as well as spiritual. This is divine power.

To integrate logic into your emotions creates stability and allows a positive outgoing of energy – a natural flow of divine energy as opposed to a forced (unwanted) push of negative energy that occurs more often on only the emotion side. Many of the world's decisions and policies are constructed only on simple emotionalism. They are forgetting to integrate logic, and that creates further difficulties, further indebtedness.

This week, still continue in your practice of worship and gratitude; this is an excellent transformer of attitude. To be grateful for Father's abundance, be it good or bad, is showing you have trust in Father's all-knowingness and all-powerfulness – that He can do all things. Ponder upon your levels of emotionalism. How can you learn to be more balanced with logic? How can you go about in your daily living as a show of faith in our Father?

Also, journal this week on those childish things you have already laid down, and those things you are ready to receive as an adult. My love grows for you more each time we meet. Until next week, shalom.

Our Universe Creator's Mortal Birth On Urantia | Jesus' Example of a Non-Emotional Nature

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you, my friends. I count myself blessed to learn so much from your discussions. I am touched by your sincerity and willingness to be honest with yourselves as well as one another. It is a true show of courage when you can admit your shortcomings and place a request to Father for help when you desire to become better. I am happy to give you to Emulan.

EMULAN: Greetings, friends. I do also enjoy these lessons along with you. I see where I have need for improvement and I feel relief at those things I have overcome. On this appropriate day of celebration for our Creators' Urantian birth, I should like to say a few words.

The Master began in this life as any mortal does: He learned. He experienced. He grew. He had gains and losses. He knew victory and defeat. He experienced those heightened senses of mortal joy and the darkest hours of despair. He knew love and He understood hate. He experienced prejudice and unsolicited adoration. In all this, He complained not.

The Master questioned not His Father for the reason He experienced what He had. He dwelt with the serenity that Father had His reasons, and it was the Master's fondest desire to follow Father. The Master did not seek credit for going about doing good, nor did He find it necessary to inform others of His good works for them. He found it unnecessary to accept any praise from others, just as He found it unnecessary to accept their criticism.

On this world, Jesus was indebted to no man. He could not be bought nor owned by anyone. He knew that everything came from Father and everything must go back to Father. The love and closeness the Master experienced with Father was not to be compared to the love and acceptance of any mortal. Granted, He loved His followers, but He did not need their love. He did, however, need Father's. He lived, moved, and had His being in the love of the Father.

The Master was passionate about certain issues but He did not use emotionalism to further His cause; He used a balanced mixture of love, logic, and practical life application. The beauty of God shone in His face and that was what attracted people's attention. He was not a salesman with a product to sell, but a lamp to shine unto those who would have Him.

Our beloved Father/Brother lived not to convince others that He was right and in charge of all destiny, no. He lived to see the joy of knowing God on the faces of people He ministered to. He was not a missionary, nor a preacher, or some authority who would set everyone straight. He was a friend to man, yes, but more-so He was a minister to their soul, a brother, caretaker, nurturer, and teacher. He is, so that you may become more.

Ponder upon His excellent balance of spirituality, logic, and passion. This balance is also yours to have by and through understanding the Master and having a close personal relationship with Him. Emotions may drive the ego, but care and passion drive the soul. We think of our beloved Creator/Brother/Father on this day and celebrate our salvation, our salvation from selfishness and from the animal-side of living.

This week, we ask you again to think about what you are ready to lay down and ponder perhaps what attributes of the Master's you would be ready to take up. Tonight I suggest we use one such attribute/emotion in celebration in our Brother/Father - 'be joyful.' Until next time, my friends, farewell.

Are We A Balanced Personality Or One Easily Off-Balanced | Poem From Athena_Celestial Artisan

Abraham & Athena, WOODS CROSS GROUP 08-28-2000

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you, friends. I surely am filled with new energy when we can meet. The serene atmosphere we have this evening enables us to be clear in our thinking and receptive to new ideas. I would like to express my gratitude to you each here tonight for your faith in me as your teacher and friend. Our continual growing and evolving association brings the divine world before our faces.

This evening I would like to introduce a Teacher new to this group. I find her particular personality to provide us with a more balanced understanding in regard to emotions and behaviors from a mortal perspective.

I am ATHENA. I thank you for allowing me to speak. I am always finding my interests to be growing and changing. I always love meeting new beings no matter where they are from. I have always found the human mind, personality, and behaviors to be interesting because there are so many possibilities and potentials to be had.

There are so many varying personalities in the human species, let alone the whole of the universe. We have individuals who are aggressive and seize life with both hands; and we all know mortals who are passive and sometimes become overwhelmed by life's circumstances. Some of you are somewhere in the middle and experience both ends of the spectrum.

We all know individuals who have a constant need for extra energy; and we know of those who are a continuous supplier of energy. Each personality will handle their emotions and behaviors differently, yes, and there is a call for individuals to be mediators and equalizers – or bringers of balance if you will. We are finding your training to be helpful in bringing balance among your fellows. Our purpose is not about any one individual, but about the well-being of the whole.

I do so admire Michael for His balanced personality. He was both a father and a mother combination to those that were fortunate to know Him. He was gentle with individuals that would receive Him as gentle, and was aggressive with individuals that would receive Him as aggressive. He had balance in mind and personality, and His behaviors reflected that.

Jesus lived a perfect diet for life: prayer, contemplation, and a continued focus on Father – this provided Him with the spiritual nutrients He needed to have such balance. He was not about male or female, rich or poor, free or bond. Jesus was about being that true essence He was designed to be. He believed He was a Son of the Most High Father. He had neither envy nor jealousy for any man. He had not want of anything from anyone. Nobody on this world could give Him what Father could. He tended to His spiritual life first, before all things.

My friends, what would matter to you now should matter to you for eternity. I am saying, those things that are important today should concern eternity – all else is simply small details.

This week, we ask that you ponder the many sides of your personalities and know that God speaks to you from a standpoint of who you really are. What is your spiritual diet, and does it have an effect on your eternal career? What can be done to bring out the best in yourself without relying on others to do it for you? I thank you for allowing me this experience and I hope I can return to better know you each. I return you to Abraham.

ABRAHAM: Greetings, friends. And my gratitude, Athena, for your lesson; I am grateful for your help. I would take a few questions.

TR: Let me ask one for Charlie B. Charlie wants to know is there any geological factors to the Teacher's placements throughout the Teaching Mission.

ABRAHAM: My son, our Correcting Time is in its beginning stages. There are many called, yes, but it is taking time for individuals to answer. It matters not one's station in life for a Teacher to come to an area. It is up to individuals who will receive our words. We do seek individuals who are less likely to need some sort of aggrandizement or special attention. We look for average individuals who are open to this method of communication and serving their fellows as a free service. There are many who awaken every day to the Correcting Time; and I would say to you, there will be many transmission-receivers, and it will seem commonplace. I hope this answers. Another question?

MIRIAM: I had a question about the Lucifer Rebellion. Whenever I think I know what 'patience' is I always think about Father in waiting and waiting and waiting for the 'adjudication' to happen. I guess I was wondering about Caligastia and all those folks that went with him, that hung out for all that time, and they were given plenty of time to change their mind, etc. When the adjudication finally happened, could you just describe that a little bit? Was it like they were absolutely rock-solid and said: 'No, we are not changing?' Was there fear involved with them? Was it like the Ancients of Days saying: 'Okay, that's it!' Do you know what I am saying? I was wondering when it happened - why then? You know with the Correcting Time and all, was it like the critical mass thing - was it just time for the healing to move on and for the quarantine to be lifted so that the circuits could open up? Does that seem like a question that you could answer to help me understand it a little bit more?

ABRAHAM: I can try. From my understanding, the Rebellion was allowed to run a natural evolutionary course. There were those who repented and were taken back into the fold of Nebadon. There were those who were unchanging in their minds and posed a threat to the master plan. In the timing of the adjudication, it went with natural evolutionary growth, as does the Correcting Time. The Correcting Time has been functioning for many years prior to the adjudication to prepare the minds of mortals for the changes to come. The adjudication was somewhat separate from the plans here on Urantia, yes, but works toward our benefit. With the resolution of the adjudication, the circuits were reinstalled as was promised. The rebellious ones are no longer. The danger of them further infecting Urantia is no longer a threat. Is this answering?

MIRIAM: Yes. Those folks who were 'no longer' - were they afraid before they were 'no longer?' or were they just solidly where they were and NOT going to change.

ABRAHAM: So many years spent in selfish love creates a hunger that is never fulfilled unless it is given more self-love. Those rebellious ones were imprisoned inside the self, unable to go beyond to see all else that really mattered. It was as if it was drug addiction. They could make effort to escape their plight, but character weakness and faithless practices always led them back to the drug of their choice – that being 'self-love.' It is acceptable to have a balance in love for self, and knowing that all goodness within comes from our internal God, yes, but theirs was a 'self-love without God;' without patience; without faith and concern for the whole. There was fear, yes, and yet, no willingness to embrace new possibilities. There was acceptance though as if the rebellious ones knew there was some type of freedom in annihilation. No longer were they tortured in mind and desire. This was a sorrowful but valuable time in the history of the universe. This experience is documented and taught in other universes. How helpful it has been to many beings; but most of all, to the growth and the experience of the Supreme Being. All that goes into our Supreme Being, our God-in-time, comes back to us modified with meaning and value. Is this helping? (Miriam: Oh my, Abraham, yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, George Bernard of Australia is coming to the States – probably to our group here. Do you have a comment about his work with the midwayers to put on the record? And also, a word or two about Athena – who she is, maybe, so we might know her better?

ABRAHAM: Yes, I know George. I am delighted he has had contact with the Mission participants. Many mortals will serve in various functions, and he is quite gifted at what he does. His balanced demeanor gives our Mission a stable foundation to show that we are about everyday average reality. I have to wait to answer your questions about Athena. I think at a later date she can answer for herself. I do know there could be some confusion, and allowing time to go by will reveal more clear answers. Is this acceptable? (Calvin: Yes, very well. I can see what you are saying.) Abraham: Another question?

SAURANA:[Personal question – was inaudible.]

ABRAHAM: I can understand. I cannot give you direct guidance, for that is Father's duty. I can only reassure you that you play a very important role, even if you do not see it that way. You do plant seeds by your words and show of faith, and they do have an impact even if it is not immediate. Your focus could be best placed on attaining clarity of mind and tending to your own garden of faith. Strengthen yourself through closeness with Father and our Master – who makes all things balanced and put into simple form. Know that in these lost feelings there is 'Sarauna' – one who reaches and builds those spiritual muscles, and becomes more wise in thinking and mature in action. Fear not, my daughter, for the spiritual forces are with you. You have the ability to do many things. You need to begin from a place of clear thinking in order to receive divine guidance. Is this helping? (Saurana: Thank you very much Abraham; your words are always helpful.) Abraham: Certainly.

I am always with more love each time we can all meet. I have enjoyed our interaction and I view you each to be my spiritual co-partners side by side with me. Yes. I am grateful. Until next week, shalom.

[There was an 'Athenia' Teacher to a TM group in Michigan which may be the same

Teacher as Athena, here. (Here is a link to a transmission from July 6, 2009.)
Also, 'Athena' was Teacher/Associate to a group in Australia (The 11:11 Group) identified as a Celestial Artisan. The following is one of her poetic transmissions on May 10, 2005 to that group]:

I Made A Vow
Yesterday has gone away,
It was simply yesterday.
Was it good, or was it bad?
I shrug about the time I had,
For yesterday has gone away,
Since it was simply yesterday.

This early morn' I made a vow,
That I would live my life right now,
Accepting credits to be earned,
With all new lessons to be learned,
For it's the essence of my vow,
To experience the "now".

Will the future bring me sorrow?
Not a care about the morrow!
Whilst I labor in this day,
Tomorrow's still a day away,
And there are lessons to be learned,
So many credits to be earned.

Yesterday has gone away,
It was simply yesterday.
Was it good, or was it bad?
I shrug about the fears I had,
This early morn' I made a vow,
That I would live my life right now.

I am Athena, a Celestial Artisan, and my love goes out to all.

A Free Mind And Soul Is Spiritual Liberty
Abraham & Athena, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-04-2000
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, friends. How well we all work together! New understandings, ideas and theories are always building with new possibilities when we are within the same mind. Our receptivity to God-consciousness helps us to better communicate and understand one another, which is always growth-promoting. I am amazed at Father's hand in all that we do, even when we have not put him as our focus; we are always grateful for that saving grace.

I am aware, my friends, of the hectic lives you each are almost forced to live. I also know that much of your hectic lifestyle is self-imposed. I would like to incorporate a restful peace within our ongoing lessons. Emotions are always at their greatest when the mind is tired and clouded with day-to-day activities or trivialities. The discomfort in physical form can also imbalance our emotions. Along with pondering your spiritual diet this week, look to your physical diet as well to ensure well-balanced health to maintain emotional stability.

I am ATHENA. Greeting friends. I too am grateful for our interaction and look forward to knowing each of you better and assisting you in any way I can. This week I have been assigned to speak a bit on a free mind and soul- spiritual liberty- and, a re-focusing of attention-seeking.

As I have studied your world, I am astounded by the many demands you each must live with. Many tasks are never completed or only completed halfway. Your focus is drawn in so many directions that it is easily understandable that daily life is lived - practically without your being aware of it. With all you must contend with there is such imprisonment in mind and spirit; and this is where true discontent begins. True joy in living is overlooked, for your focus is set on doing those small material tasks that you believe will bring you less stress and more happiness.

Ponder if you will: What would life be like if you were indebted to no human or obligated to do naught else but to serve our Father? Would Father allow your bills to go unpaid or your children to raise themselves? No, of course not! As you focus firstly on those tasks of living, your attention is drawn away from the One who can help you most. Father is a master organizer while overseeing all that matters in everyone's lives.

Can you, for a few minutes each day, allow your responsibilities of the day to fade away? Can you be alone with God and redirect your focus on Him? Can you trust that He will not allow you to slip and become entangled in further difficulties? Can you commit to being committed to Father first while all else is secondary? What life changes must you incorporate into your daily living?

Before you look to your material communications to see what you have missed, check-in with your divine communications to make for a more organized and less complicated day. Complications in daily living are not a sign of productivity. They are a net to further trap more difficulties, adding to the stress and cloudiness of mind.

Jesus answered to no human authority. He lived a spiritually liberated human life - and even that, at times, was somewhat limited. He abided by most human laws but answered always to His Father first. His human emotions were well balanced while He thrived on 'clarity of mind' to receive divine communication.

"Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." A redirecting of your focus from the demands in life to the commitment you have for God is to have understanding of the meanings and values of the everyday occurrences in mortal living.

I believe the human mind to be a great canvas in which we allow our 'life circumstance' to paint on the canvas what it will. We have allowed our peers to have space on the canvas also. All our negative and positive experiences have added shades of darkness or rays of light. I believe every good thing comes from God.

Clean the canvas daily, my friends, and allow God to show you true beauty, true contentment, rest for the mind and spirit, clarity in thinking, and balance in emotions. My love to you. Farewell.

ABRAHAM: I thank you, Athena, for your lesson and your unique flavor in which you add to our group. I would say that I am grateful for the trials I have experienced because my canvas is a work of beauty to behold. Father does organize, integrate, unify, and explain all experience in our eternal careers.

This week, my friends, ponder the words of our friend, Athena. Forget not to find rest, and allow that peace of this season to influence the busyness of your daily living. Until next week, my love goes with you. Shalom.

The Church Minister Learns | Where Is My Focus | In Whom Do I Serve
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-11-2000

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What a peaceful atmosphere in which to begin. I thank you each for your participation. Your unique personalities complement one another and open our hearts and minds for receiving, yes.

Every day when I set out, I am filled with such gratitude and worship for our Father for He has watched over my every need. Yes, He has tolerated me when I was intolerable; He has comforted me when I was in discomfort; and, has balanced my attention when I was imbalanced. As a mortal I did not really know such divine caretaking, but after the experiences I've had, I can see how Father has managed my eternal career in spite of my obstinacy.

Each day I am in wonder and awe of His endless Fatherly affection for me. It took many years to learn of this secure soul peace – even into the Mansion Worlds. But you my friends, you who are learning these morontial lessons here, do live in a new era where you can feel this watchcare and comfort, now. Your times for distress and worry are decreasing as you are increasing in knowing that the Source of all love and all power is at hand. I, having lived a mortal life, understand the day-to-day stresses you are under; but I also know better now of the available assistance we all have.

A minister in a church appeared to have all those things in life that were true, beautiful, and good. The parishioners would attend his service, recite the usual prayers and leave feeling the same as when they arrived. The minister focused on strictly preaching lessons from the Scriptures. He focused on telling his listeners of what not to do. He always attempted to greet his parishioners personally, with a handshake or greeting, but never really took the time to know each person.

The minister saw to it that the church was kept immaculately clean and proper, for he felt it reflected upon him. He imposed strict guidelines upon his family so as to personify a godly image. His focus was set on 'how he appeared' to the world. He performed all his life's duties to the best of his ability – anything less was not acceptable. He could not be caught stumbling. He was sharp with those individuals who volunteered at his church to make sure everything ran smooth.

This minister slept little and worried much. He felt as though he was doing his very best for God and could not understand the emptiness inside him. He could not be found having faults to the outside world. He felt somewhat superior in a way, and yet deep down he knew this was a mask for his true feeling of inferiority. He was trapped, so to speak, in his standards. He was unable to move about with creativity. He was bound by tradition and aesthetics.

As he viewed his listeners one day during church services, he felt as though nobody was really listening or appreciating him for his efforts. He really thought they should look up to him. He ended the service as he always did with the same scriptural phrases, said his goodbyes, and after having looked over the church to make sure everything was just perfect, he got in his car and left.

As the distraught minister drove he thought: "Why do not the people see my efforts? Why do my children rebel against me? Why is my wife indifferent towards me? I do everything to the highest standards. I feel not close to any one of my parishioners. I feel my hands are destined to repeat the same traditional habits that have always been. I feel I am indeed a righteous man, but what is wrong!"

In the cloudiness of his thinking, his car was broadsided; he was indeed hurt and in great pain. His first thoughts: "How could God allow this to happen to me, for I've lived a righteous life!" As he was drifting in and out of consciousness, he heard that divine voice from within: "In whom do you serve, my son? Who do you trust to complete those daily tasks? Whose opinions of you do you value most? Who are you attempting to impress? Whom do you serve?"

For many hours during the man's recovery, he pondered these words and attempted to answer them. He found he was serving himself. He was building a nest of prestige. He craved adoration and power. He could not become close to any one person for he put himself above them. He had set up for himself a seemingly perfected life in which he was not allowed shortcomings or mistakes. He soon realized God did not demand this of him, but he assumed this standard would bring him what he most craved.

When the minister had fully recovered, he returned to church services to find the parishioners to be enthusiastic about the messages from their temporary substitute minister. He had felt some jealousy at first, but he had allowed true humility to seep into his imprisoned mind. He had learned from the new pastor how to relate with individuals, one-on-one, with sincerity. He learned about living up to the true definition of a minister. He realized that a perfect screen over an imperfect mortal only imprisons and strangles creativity.

The 'changing of heart' minister began to preach from his experience, and honestly told his listeners of all that he had learned. He courageously admitted his blindness and taught the people with those lessons he had learned therefrom. He found he had not more care for the condition of the 'church' as he did for the condition of his family, friends, and 'church attendees.' He had realized he learned as much from his listeners as he had taught. The parishioners became participants.

The church became alive with divine information and with the creativity of new and better ways to live this mortal life, divinely. The minister found a new door which had opened to his soul that allowed him the spiritual liberty we should all be fortunate to know. He could move with real joy; he could find humor in his mistakes; he could find value in his hardships; the pressure was lifted off him, and the light of reality had set him free.

Today this minister is joyful and thriving in a successful church ministry. He is no longer bound by what he thinks righteousness is, but by caring about glorifying our Father – and ministering to his family, friends, and acquaintances.

This week, my friends, find those things that imprison you and complicate your lives. Ask yourselves the questions that the divine voice asked the man as he lay there in pain: “Where is your focus? Whom do you serve?” That is all. I am so grateful to you, my friends, and I feel a greater love with each passing week. Know that this week I will be close at hand to answer any questions. Until next week, shalom.

Faith And Trust In Our Divine Caretakers Yields A Creative Mind

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, friends. How wonderful it is we can meet each week to review what we have been learning, re-focus our attention, and reaffirm our faith. The week's difficulties, struggles, and many activities, can weigh upon your soul.

I love each and every new day. To me, it is a new beginning and alive with possibilities. I used to be weighed down in my old traditions and boundaries of thought; I would take life so seriously as if each day was made to do further damage to my mind and soul. My creativity was squelched and my capacity for spirituality was quite limited.

Our meetings are a wonderful way to shed the skin of the past worries and complications, to reveal the new possibilities. Our thinking can always be in a mode of evolution if you so choose. Or, we can remain burdened under the debris of old ideas, long-held habits, and those things that cause us to be imprisoned.

After some time with my friend and mentor, Machiventa, I had learned to release my preconceived notions, my tradition-bound ideas and behaviors – which was the way in which I handled everything. I learned my thoughts were living, changing, and expanding. I learned that almost everything is in a constant state of motion, including thoughts. I was a sum total of my thoughts, yes. I could be limited and bound – or I could be creatively liberated.

On a material planet where you must rely upon faith to see you through your divine career, there is always a tendency to hold fast to what your eyes can see and your mind can conceive. There will always be worries for the day. There are always obligations and concerns to be acted upon. No doubt, you have your responsibilities and yet, these things are potentially imprisoning and strangling the creative mind.

A well-balanced character is not controlled by these life burdens, but is free to receive of the divine mind which is a master organizer. An imbalanced character (person) is controlled by their life's burdens and forgets that divine mind – making these burdens more complicated.

Our Celestial Caretakers seek to keep us in a forward momentum. They not only problem-solve but solve problems with creativity. To have faith and trust in our Caretakers is to perceive and to believe in that divine mind which is breaking down those boundaries that surround us, and choosing to handle all matters in a most effective manner, considering the whole.

What material ties have a hold on you and strangle your creative mind? What has you feeling that your soul is bound and your mind caught up in a continual well-worn groove? What brings you into a state of peace and reception for limitless creative thinking? The feeling of personal liberation, my friends, is like no other feeling. The possibilities in human living are endless. At some point in your mortal careers, you can choose to lose everything in order to gain all that you will ever need.

How can life be simplified to free up your mind for more progressive thinking and service? We are on the cusp of momentous evolutionary changes. We require those creative minds to carry forth our work. One who is burdened by non-productive things is not a channel for the new work ahead.

Find time this week to ponder these questions and ideas: How can Father better organize and simplify your daily living? How can life be made to have a creative twist? For you, what makes you feel spiritually liberated? That is all. A few questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, thanks for these lessons. Sometimes it seems like I am not following through. Sometimes it feels like an inch a week and sometimes a couple days' worth. I appreciate your teachings very much because they keep me going forward, even if very slowly. In our discussion before the lesson, we talked about our Universe Mother Spirit's possible broadcast message. How correct was our reception of that? And, is that something we should pursue and post to the internet? Do you have anything further to say on that subject? We are acknowledging we could be in error here.

[During this past week, some in the group had received and had written down transmitted messages about our Universe Mother Spirit – how it was a new day in her awareness among her many universe children.]

ABRAHAM: I understand. The broadcast was correct for the most part. I was happy to know it was received. This receiving has been long awaited. To view the citizens of Urantia receiving these broadcasts are likened to the elation that was felt when the first human twins comprehended worship. Things will really move fast from here. I can confirm a day has been set aside to devote attention to our Mother for her wonderful services. This day of devotion and celebration helps Her to fully actualize into Her potential. Our beloved Brother/Father is heading the coordination of this day. There will be celebrations throughout Neadon. We will pay tribute to Mother and Her direct subordinates for their service in our universe. We hope that citizens on material planets will become more fully aware of their functions (the functions of Mother's subordinates), and how to become actively involved with them. As for the actual day, I will not say right now, but soon. You can share this information if you like or not, it doesn't matter. Many residents of Urantia have received this broadcast, and in future days there will be better understanding of these broadcasts – and more individuals who will recognize them. Is this helping? (Calvin: Yes, it is. Thank you.) Abraham: Another question?

MIRIAM: It is kind of funny what the lesson was about tonight. I have been imprisoned for a long time, most of my life, with the relationship with my biological father, and how this relationship has been an impetus for me to grow and to learn from. It has always been difficult. It has been a challenge to make me grow, yes, but it has always been an imprisonment. I have healed chunks, and grown, etc., along the way, and I am so grateful. Recently I have had feelings of love and happiness and whole feelings about my father for the first time. It is absolutely wonderful. I feel free and I feel the distortion lifting. I am so grateful for my parents. By learning how to be their daughter, this other area of confusion has been so much better. I guess my question is: My father died a while back – does he have any way of seeing or knowing the healing that is going on with me? I have a wonderful feeling about him today which is such a new thing. It makes my heart full. Can you comment on this process or any information you may have about that?

ABRAHAM: Certainly, he knows. He is well informed and happy for the new understanding. I am told this was a source of pain and regret for him, and as time and understanding have influenced this dilemma, he has grown in soul and love for you and others he had hurt. You, Miriam, my daughter, have handled this situation like an expert, almost viewing it from a scientific point of view where you have gathered facts, weighed them out, done your own experiments and, have come to a logical conclusion. Well done. This has been a source of pain, yes, but also a source of growth; and your happiness is the fruits therefrom. Well done. Another question?

HARRISON: Abraham, I want to thank you for the message you gave for my mother. She seems to be in much better spirits today. My question is two parts: 1) Is it possible to know my father's spiritual name? 2) Would you be up for saying a few words to my father?

ABRAHAM: I would be happy to speak to him but I feel he is not quite ready for me. (Harrison: I agree.) Abraham: I can give the name at a later time. Your Father must be allowed time to become used to this method of spirituality. Sir, I find you to be a man who is somewhat gentle in spirit, but not always have you been this way. I am familiar with your regrets, and I tell you these regrets do not serve you or anyone you love. Allow them to be swept away with the winds of change. Hold fast to what you have today and see not the injury in each moment, but the victory in how you have survived. You are meeting up with a crossroads in your life where your head may tell you to go in one direction while your heart may say another. Look well, my son, to the Father of all fathers for guidance. He is closer than you think. You need not worry. You do well. Is this helping, Harrison? (Harrison: Yes. Thank you.)

I am growing in affection for all of you, my dear friends and devoted students. You assist me in my spiritual liberation with your faith and love. I thank you. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Move Creatively From the Spirit | Personal Assessments

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 09-25-2000

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What an intimate little group we have here this evening. We may be small in numbers but we are grand in our thinking and willingness to be open to receiving spiritual light.

I am amazed at Father's hand in all things. I may not always be directly aware of Him but I rest in confidence knowing that without fail He will be there. I rest in comfort knowing Father makes me more than I am. Every good thing is of God, and he who has God within him, is good. I find each area of my life to be sacred and a celebration of being.

Knowing Father is in every aspect of my life I can relax and receive a continuous flow of divine information. 'Father makes me more than I am' - I say that with gratitude and humility, knowing that I can do many things because He is in me and I in Him. In my everyday mundane chores, I dedicate my work to the glory of our Father. Each day I find I can become more aware of His presence and utilize His divine abilities to further His works.

The Master had an eye single to the glory of God. As He worked, He dedicated His work to Father. As He partook of material sustenance, He held it sacred. As He spoke with people, He set Himself aside so that Father may speak; and, He also listened to hear Father's words through others. As He rested, He rested in honor of Father because He was respectful of Father's overall plan.

God made all of us so that we may return to Him. When we can live our lives as if we are on our way to returning to Him we can move with confidence knowing He is endowing us with spiritual power from on high. In this spiritual power, we are liberated to be our true creative selves. We need not fit into the mold of society for we are indebted to no one. We move from the spirit. We live by the spirit. We take action from the spirit.

God is creativity and He has granted us creative thinking skills. He has granted us the liberty to act upon what we feel is true. No two personalities are alike in all the universes. Imagine that - each person, each personality, has the right to be individually creative.

It has been said to "go the extra mile for your brothers and sisters." What are the possibilities in changing the saying to "go the extra mile - creatively - for your brothers and sisters?" Father is trusting in our true core selves to further His work. He is trusting us to act from the spirit within; you need not obtain anyone's permission to do so. Openness to Father's will is the key to success in 'moving from the spirit.'

With all the new upcoming changes, we need individuals to provide a foundation of spiritual realness. We will be requesting individuals to aid in steering cosmic destiny. My Mission friends, you are assisting us in that endeavor with those spiritual seeds you plant by living a good example of life in the spirit. Each new person you come into contact with is a new prospect to plant seeds of spirituality and to help get information out to further this Correcting Time.

I would like to take our lesson format into a new direction by ministering to you each more on a personal level. I will be offering you personal spiritual assessments. I can give you a good understanding of where you are now, and what would be progressive to focus on. Whosoever should desire can ask and I can accommodate. We have been together now for some years, and I do believe I know you each fairly well. I would believe it to be my honor to help you in any way I can. I would also be starting a new series of lessons concerning personal overall wellness. What is an individual who is 'well,' as to the totality of 'wellness to the whole?'

That is all. I can allow a few assessments tonight should there be a desire, if not, I would take a few questions.

CALVIN: I'll start, Abraham. I would think it's fairly helpful to me. Where am I now and what can I focus on for the week that would help me?

ABRAHAM: Yes, although I would say the focus has no time limit. (Calvin: Okay.)

Abraham: It is for however long it takes to naturally progress. These assessments need not be shared if it is so desired. My son, you have traveled a long and arduous path. While you can be grateful for your advancement you have to admit, Father is unfailing in love and grace. You have indeed worked hard to open your mind and receive spiritual information that is not twisted by prejudice. Well done. Your downfalls, however, are impatience and pride. You have a need to be productive, but mostly this need is a mask for pain you do not want to recognize. In your busyness there is a covering of things you wish not to see. These stumbling blocks keep you from feeling the full effect of Father's love and embrace. Your heart is gentle and warm on the inside but is enclosed in a tough outer shell. The shell is binding and imprisoning. You take great lengths to show that you are not stumbling. These are barriers which keep you from experiencing those lessons you need to advance. Think about it, my son. Feel no fear in stumbling. Be at ease to know that no one stands by to laugh or ridicule you for being a man. Focus on breaking the restraints of the heart shell and be willing to be known for who you really are. You see great beauty in God's works and yet, you feel not His complete love. Focus on believing the universe is with you – not against you. Rid your life of those complications that make you seem productive, but are only masks from past painful experiences. Thank you for your service in our Mission. Your dedication is to be commended. You are loved beyond human measure. Thank you for your courage to accept this personal assessment. I have time for one more.

ANTHONY: Okay. I guess I'll be courageous to take an assessment-guidance.

ABRAHAM: My son, I also thank you for your courage. I shan't give you any more than you can handle. I perceive you to make great effort. I understand you to be searching. You are on a journey that is quite weighed down with past unresolved issues. You could lighten your burden by facing those things that have surely wounded you. The path you have been on is made more difficult, for you travel at dusk so as to not see too much that would be upsetting, or make you think your journey will be more difficult. You are a man of great faith and you are more dedicated than you actually believe. While you live in two different worlds it is good to know your foothold in the divine world is becoming more sturdy and dependable. I would say to you that while you view Father as a loving God you fear His judgment. I say, my son, He is not looking down upon you but attempting to hold you up, to uplift and inspire – He is making you more than you are. There are dark places in everyone's life that have left them scarred in one way or another. These dark places are fertile ground for valuable lessons. Your focus can lean towards: 'Life is fair; God is just; and I am not thrown randomly into the world to see if I can measure up.' You can focus on being who you are truly meant to be, not who others think you should be. You are not out to gain anyone's acceptance. You are only to make effort towards accepting yourself as you are. Look not at your life as 'a series of hits and misses, and therefore you must journey at dusk.' Rather, focus on setting forth on your journey in the full light of day. You will be astounded by the freedom of soul and mind. Pack lightly, go through and discard much of those things you are already lugging around with you – most of them are not necessary. This will take time of course but the value is immeasurable. I thank you for your courage to accept this assessment, and I would have you know we are closer than brothers. I am here anytime you should need me. You do well. That is all.

Next week I should continue with these personal assessments. Please inform all those who would desire one to be prepared to receive. This week, think about how you can move more creatively from the spirit. Is God really in all aspects of your mortal life? My love is always with you. Until next week, shalom.

The Faith-Trust Factor Is Key To Advancing Spiritual Levels

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How blessed I feel to be able to meet with you. I can feel more gratitude; I can learn more; I can gain more valuable experience – yes, because we are friends and fellow co-workers in the kingdom.

I have come to know so many wonderful individuals that have taught me to always have hope and to never underestimate the powerful works of our Father. I have also experienced seeming down-trodden times, and my associations with you have helped me to persevere and keep an eye single to the glory of God.

I experience Father on a personal level, no doubt, but also do I experience Him through you each, my friends. I have learned through humility and being teachable that the universe is filled with endless possibilities. My deep and abiding trust in Father does not lead me astray. I know that when I include Father in every aspect of my life, I can trust myself to make good decisions.

My friends, you have had enough experience to know that Father is unfailing in His dedication to us. You cannot from this point on ever really believe that God leaves you to suffer the mortal life alone. You have studied enough to know that you must decrease so that God in you can increase. These simple truths can bring you comfort on a spiritual level, yes, but it is understood that in your agondonter status, what is right before your eyes speaks loud and clear.

To strive to be God-like is a tremendous challenge in mortal living unless you possess the faith-trust factor. Having faith that God is there, and to trust in His abilities, is key to advancing spiritual levels. If you focus on allowing God in you, and you in Him, the faith-trust levels build to where you begin to lose fear and gain self-confidence. The more you allow God in and rely upon Him, the more you can be confident that you are moving and acting from the spirit. Do you see, you have decreased self-doubt and increased trust that God, our Father, works through you?

Spirituality has integrated into your lives beginning on an 'intellectual' level – and the 'faith-concept factor' does not support that. Spirituality is best learned through the faith-'trust' factor because it allows you to set aside the ego's logic, to being perceptive of Father's hand in your life. Most definitely can mind be a gift and a stumbling block all at once. To begin first from the faith-trust factor allows your intellectual capacity to open and receive without interference from the ego. Yes, you are trusting in Father to guide – to be in you. He gives you that ability to trust yourself.

You each have the ability to know what is truth for 'you.' You are entitled to your truth as others are entitled to theirs. What is true to you today may change tomorrow. As long as you are having the faith and trust that God is leading you, then can you move with the smooth assurance that your truth will grow and evolve.

This week, contemplate your faith-trust levels. How much does your mistrust or ego interfere with the receiving of new concepts? Think about that personal relationship with the indwelling God. Who is He? How can you be sure you are allowing Him to work in your lives? We are not about catering to the ego, but about feeling confident as a well-loved child of God.

We are on our way to learning that overall personal wellness leads to spiritual comfort and contentment, which will certainly affect the masses, yes. I can accept questions or answer requests for personal assessments. Proceed.

CALVIN: Abraham, we welcome Mr. Richard Keeler from Wyoming, and Rita Gum, who are both with us tonight from the Salt Lake Urantia Book study group. Also, I received a call from Jim Foster, from Oklahoma, as I'm sure you are aware, who is asking for any assessment and help you might give to him with his personal challenges.

ABRAHAM: Yes, I am aware. I can say to you, Jim, my son, your diligence in this Mission has been inspiring. Your gentle manner and kind heart certainly makes everyone who knows you feel at ease. There are times, however, when you do become upset – and in your dedication to serenity you keep quiet. At times this is good, yes, but it is taking its toll on you, physically. You can say things from your heart, my son, in a tactful, intelligent, and gentle manner. To forthrightly speak your mind is not causing irreparable damage, but at times may even be helping. I understand your physical pain to be quite unbearable, and you will need to keep in step with your material medical curriculum. I understand you to believe that being productive is proving your value, and your need to be productive worsens your injuries. Relax and know that all things will be completed in due time. Worry does not add to your good health. Suppressing honest feelings does not help either. I know you are seeing this pain as somewhat of a test of spiritual endurance – it is not! but most definitely can you count on Father bringing out the value of this experience. Be cautious of the medications you may take for pain. Sometimes they only cause more harm in the long run. Focus on looking deeply at your life and those things that cause you inner-turmoil, and confront those things with honest words. Be honest with yourself. You might think you have made your bed and have to lie in it, but I say – make a new bed! [laughter.] Have comfort knowing you have the forces of the universe with you. I thank you for your courage to accept this personal assessment. Be at peace, my son. That is all.

RICHARD K.: Who are you, and what is your purpose? [Editor's note: Richard was President and Trustee of the Urantia Foundation who chanced to attend this evening only. He regularly attended the Urantia Book study group in Salt Lake City at Rita Gum's residence.]

ABRAHAM: I am the Abraham from the Old Testament, husband of Sarah, father to Isaac, student of Machiventa. I have been commissioned by Michael and His staff to return to my native planet to teach because of my mortal experience. This world is in somewhat of a state of emergency, so I have been asked to return and teach from my mortal experience because of my association with my mentor, Machiventa Melchizedek. I have a deep and abiding love for the human race. It is an honor to enter into this Correcting Time and help in the upliftment of Urantia. I am not so much as the books of old say I am, but more along the lines of the way your Urantia Book says I am, yes. Is this answering? (Richard K: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: Another question or assessment?

RITA: I would like to ask a question, Abraham. Are you now the Planetary Prince? Are you working with Melchizedek? I think you did say that. Or, is Jesus the Planetary Prince of Urantia?

ABRAHAM: I can say I am not the Planetary Prince. I am in a long line of subordinates who work for Michael. I am advised not to say who the Planetary Prince is at this time for there are conflicting viewpoints and understandings among the Mission participants. With time it will all be explained. Thank you for your question. Another question or assessment?

SIMON: I'll take a spiritual assessment.

ABRAHAM: Simon, my son, your enthusiasm in our Mission is definitely energizing. You are neck-deep in all this spiritual discovery. You are courageous to move forward so rapidly, but I would ask you to be at peace with the natural absorption of all this spiritual information. This spiritual learning is not only about going forward but understanding from where we've come. Because there is so much correction needed, without having some understanding of the past it is difficult to move forward. It is difficult to attain the meanings and values on an advanced level when you have not understood previous experiences. I can say, with the enthusiasm you possess it would be quite healing to venture into the past and realize some things:

- 1) You need not find value in attachment to another person.
- 2) You need not seek other's acceptance.
- 3) All is the way it should be. Have not regret for your past experience or think that you have missed out on something.

Your feeling of unfulfillment will begin to fade as you incorporate these three steps into your daily living. Your associations within the group can aid you in understanding that the past was not just an endurance test to see how much you could take. You are stronger than you believe. You can be your true self – and yes, people will either accept you or they won't. But know, my son, God will always accept you. Rely on Him for your reflection, and know that in His acceptance of you, you can find self-acceptance. You do well, my son. Thank you for your courage in accepting this personal assessment. One more question or assessment.

RITA: Could I have an assessment? You're my favorite person of the Old Testament.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I see you with abounding energy, one who believes that all things are possible with God. It takes quite a lot to discourage you. You are persistent in your dealings and this is good. I see you at a spiritual level where you are looking at open doors and are feeling you should go through them – but there is some hesitation, some fear. This is easily understood, my daughter. You have always been one to be the first at doing new things. You are more of an instigator than a follower. You are quite the faith-filled daughter and work hard to do right by God. While you are wondering where your life goes from here, feel secure in your ability to know truth. Know that your strength has carried you thus far, there is nothing to fear. You can focus your attention on improving meditation in an effort to strengthen your personal relationship with Father. You would benefit to journal your honest feelings, yes, and then be still and wait for inspiring words that may come after. I do look forward to knowing you better, and I want you to know I am available should you need me. I thank you, my daughter, for your courage to accept this personal assessment. Yes.

Our time here has come to a close this evening, but know I would make myself available to any of you during the week. Know that always my love grows more for you each time we meet. Until next week, shalom.

Assignments Based On Our Faith/Trust | More Personal Assessments

Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-09-2000

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I thank you for coming. I look forward to each week's meeting with you developing new ideas and possibilities. We have quite a history together that has promoted a great deal of growth, but I do so enjoy our friendship – our real family togetherness and love.

This Correcting Time does require one to be open to new experience. Father will assign you certain tasks and help you find opportunity to complete those tasks. If you can allow faith and trust, you shall meet with inner fulfillment and true contentment. Emulan would say a few words.

EMULAN: Greetings, friends. I have missed you. I am happy to be here. I would say a few words concerning faith and trust. Many individuals are faced with the unknown; and while the unknown can be fearful, some do step out in faith and take an active role. Some individuals, however, allow fear to get the better of them and even be afraid of what God has in store for them. These individuals do stumble through mortal living asking: "Where is God? Does He not even know I exist?"

The Correcting Time, my friends, is here. Assignments will be increased. We are rallying our forces to promote as much light as possible. Your assignments help to bring that light. Assignments can be quite testing of your tolerance levels and can appear to be a burden. But as you go about completing the task, you find Father to open doors of opportunity. Some assigned tasks are perhaps so small you do not believe they are even assignments, but their effect does indeed go a long way.

Commitment to Father and His living will is the measure of which you will receive these assigned tasks. How willing are you to be put upon by our Father? Is to be put upon by Father an assignment which leads to inner fulfillment and closeness with Him? How do you know which tasks are really assignments from Father and which are not? Does it matter? Service is service!

The more you can allow God to share your inner life, the more your outer life will be affected. If you move from a spiritual standpoint, you can better trust in your own abilities to know the will of God and carry it out. I would never advise to blindly follow any human or even spiritual beings on my level, but I would recommend that you find that type of trusting levels for Father.

Father has your assignments aimed at service to others, yes, but also are your assignments your lessons. The completion of these lessons brings greater spiritual awareness and closeness to Father. By that I mean, closeness to His indwelling presence. I mean, the actual knowing and actual feeling that He is personally in you and you in Him.

Our Correcting Time is healing many things. In time you will live with the presence of God as if He has always been an integral part of you. Perhaps time will fade away your memories of feeling that mortal loneliness – but most definitely must you learn and possess that faith-trust factor. I thank you and I leave you to Abraham.

ABRAHAM: I thank you, my friend, Emulan, for your insightful words on this topic. I have indeed learned this faith and trust more in-depth when I have allowed myself to be of service. Father's plan is interwoven into everyone's overall experience and creating new growth. I would proceed with personal assessments, beginning with Gloria. [Gloria/Frosty is from one of the Idaho TM groups].

Child, I am happy you have asked and I have so enjoyed your particular personality type. While you are lighthearted, you are also deeply devoted to our upliftment of this planet. While you are quite serious, even verging on dramatic at times, your child-like faith opens up such wonderful possibility. I perceive you to have such great hope – and yet, are becoming a bit discouraged at times. You do offer a wonderful ministry, and while your techniques are helpful there seems to not be too many of your fellows that are accepting of them. You do know individuals who are discouraging, and their words are sometimes intrusive when you are putting your best spiritual foot forward. These individuals are nothing more than spiritual weights to be lifted to build muscle. You can be assured from the depths of your soul that you have a calling and do most definitely need to carry it out. Be practical in your service, yes, but do not allow those who criticize you to interfere with the work at hand. You have good transmission-receiving abilities; and while you doubt these abilities, you need to remain open to receive further training. I understand that while you are feeling alone you are beginning to believe that nothing lasts forever. This is partly true, yes. Things of value last, but even they are in a state of evolution; look at them as always changing, moving and growing – not going away. Worry not for these days of seeming useless activity; these days are preparation for the future. Cultivate your humorous side to give you relief from those things you find wrong. Worry not my daughter, for all, really, is well. I thank you for accepting this personal assessment.

NINA: I am trying to tell him who I want him to do next, but... [laughter.]

ABRAHAM: Are there more requests for assessments or questions?

CALVIN: For the record, I welcome Henry from Germany here with us, Abraham. And Sandy, who is recently new to our group from Indianapolis, is again back with us.

ABRAHAM: Welcome. I have known you each and I hope to know you better. Yes. A question or assessment request? I do understand the need for these assessments and I will complete all of them as time will permit.

NINA: He is going to do Miriam's because I won't quit bugging him. [laughter.] I am sorry. I have the list up here, okay. I'm going with the list.

MIRIAM: I appreciate that. Abraham, I would just like to preface my assessment saying that last week, in talking about faith/trust during my husband's accident some years ago, and I know people get tired of me talking about it, but when Ham gave me that help that he did, the words he used in there were faith and trust. I picked up the Woods Cross teachings for the very first time and there was a lesson in there on faith and trust. It was so helpful.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I do know of that time in your life to be a turning point, in not just spirituality, but every other aspect of your life. You have indeed drawn so much value from that experience that you are a living testimony to the powerful works of our Father. You know firsthand that Father can bring the value out of seemingly disastrous circumstances. My daughter, you are indeed, a diligent worker. You have moved with faith and trust even though sometimes it was with kicking and screaming. How I have also been inspired by your friendship to me. Your growth is advancing very rapidly. You are moving into a Thought Control mode instead of an Adjuster mode. You do move with faith and trust, and while you are learning to be with Father you are also dropping the idea you once held so dear, and that is – you truly desired the acceptance of others. At one time you had allowed them to shape the way you have lived your life. I am so happy to see you move away from that. You stand accepted as a valued child of God and have learned this from personal experience, not by someone having told you this. You are daring to take steps further out into the world and this will most definitely bring you new assignments. No doubt you are well equipped to handle these things. I would at this time focus on ideas that you have had but have been afraid to act on them. There are upcoming opportunities for you to complete those longed-for dreams. You will be able to follow Father's open doors with confidence because of the assistance of the Thought Controller. You can have confidence and be not afraid – this will verge into ego-interference. You have been given much and you have also given much. Be ready, my daughter, for there is more work ahead. Take joy and excitement from this. Do not be afraid. I am aware of your transmitting and receiving abilities, and I say these celestial assistants are not leading you astray. Well done, my daughter. Thank you for accepting this personal assessment. (Miriam: Thank you.) Abraham: Another question or assessment?

HENRY (visiting from Germany): Thank you, Abraham, that I can be here. I don't know if it is possible but if you can say hello to my teacher/friend, Paul, who has moved on to the next life. I would like to know, can you give any advice to me for when I go back to Germany?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I can say to you, Henry, your friend and mentor is aware of your journey and is most definitely happy for you. I can say your search has been indeed long and arduous, but worth all that you have experienced. Your time has come to where you can be other's friend and mentor. You have gained enough experience to be of service. I do understand that restless feeling that plagues your mind. There have been unpleasant things that have happened to you that you would wish to not be there. In your travels, it does feel like an escape from those things that do plague your mind. You have tremendous opportunity to be spiritually strengthened enough to face those past trying times and to have complete understanding, complete healing. The bitterness you may still hold can turn out to be of great value, great lessons, yes. You can make a difference in the world, my son. You are only one man, yes, but you can start planting the seeds of change. You need not be over-exuberant in the planting of these seeds, no. Just by being yourself and speaking from your experience you can effect great change; you can be a helper in this Teaching Mission; you can further the growth of our Correcting Time. It seems like an impossible task but you must know there are vast hosts of heaven who aid in your success. I would advise you to begin stillness practice and journaling your spiritual experiences. You are on an awesome journey, my son, a journey into eternal life. I should find it my honor to be your friend. I will help you when I can. In the meantime, have confidence that you are loved as if you were God's only son. He knows you more than you know yourself. He is unfailing in His devotion to you. Fear not, go forth with spiritual courage and know God has cleared the way. One more question or assessment. (Henry: Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome.

SANDY: I am asking for an assessment.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. You are undertaking great changes, my daughter. How wonderful you have the courage to follow through. While these changes seem great, they are really just part of mortal living and you will see in time that they hold value. I perceive you to be rigid in your beliefs; and while you are very faithful, such rigidity leads to stagnation. I would recommend to you to accept change with a free-flowing outlook. Do not fear it, but revel in all its challenges. You have had certain regrets that have plagued you and do cause you at times to be somewhat craving attention. I can say, my daughter, these things are about to find healing. You will better see the value of your experience as you relax in your beliefs and allow the free-flow of divine information. You have ability to be a teacher to your fellows. The way you treat them is what they will remember. Your kind heart and lightness in attitude will be an attraction. They will come from all walks of life. Expect your association with these people to hold great lessons for you also. Have not fear, but excitement in the changes ahead. I see you best thriving in a state of relaxation, yes. You do well, my daughter. Thank you for your courage in accepting this personal assessment. (Sandy: Thank you very much.)

I am slipping. I would however, like for each of you to know as each week goes by I am in more love for you. Until next week, shalom.

Self-imposed Burdens | Being Over-Burdened with Past Baggage

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-16-2000

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, and thank you for coming. There is such a peaceful atmosphere here this evening. We are connecting more on a soul level. In the peace we are allowing our daily troubles and worries to slip away. We can literally become closer, and my words will come with more accuracy and have deeper meaning because you are so open to them.

I am filled with gratitude to Father, for His glorious works are ever-unfolding and upholding. When we step out with the faith/trust factor we can relax and be confident that we are intelligent children – children able to understand our Father, the source and center of all things.

As we go about daily living, we are sometimes overburdened by past baggage, present stresses, and future worries. It is difficult to be just that pure soul entity, child of God. As we learn to step out with faith and trust, we can release everything and be at peace with what Father wills us to handle. This overburdening baggage that we seem to carry in mortal life creates an endless cycle of difficulties; we forget to be who we were destined to be – that learning child of God.

The baggage I speak of is imprisoning and stagnating unless you can release it to Father and allow Him to transform it into valuable understanding and meaning. This baggage perhaps could be difficulties you do not know how to handle; it could be past pain you have not yet dealt with; it could be unpleasant behavioral patterns you would wish to be free from – and all this is so much for the soul to handle when Father has not been allowed to transform these weights into evolving understanding and ideas.

Many people act out in various ways to be free from their baggage – they may overindulge in unsafe behavior; they may give in to unproductive self-gratification; they spend their lives trying to compensate for past pain; they spend their lives doing things that mask that baggage they are so committed to carrying.

When you can step out with faith and trust, you can allow these things (the imprisoning baggage) to fall by the wayside. You can feel confident that Father will help you sort through them – and that He will be your compensation; He will be your deliverer. Father can free you to be that soul you were intended to be. You need not be caught up in that material world. You need not feel the pressures of your peers. You need not continue to live your life as if you are compensating for the pain you have experienced.

With so much baggage it is difficult to give you new divine information or new and better ways to live, for the ego holds close that baggage, and the divine cannot see overtop of it or through it. The divine needs to feel that freedom to explore your past painful experiences and assist you in dealing with them, providing you with meanings and values. If you hold too closely to what you had believed to be true then those evolving thoughts cannot help you; you can be literally blocking divine information.

Rest assured that Father is strong and that He can not only help you carry your burdens, He can help you to sort through them, provide for you meanings and values, and throw away those self-imposed burdens that you have put upon yourself. Allow your mind the freedom to be moved by the Spirit. Allow your soul to be strengthened by the Spirit. Know that the ego only has power over what you allow it to.

That is enough for this evening. I will continue with personal assessments and questions, if any.

SAMUEL: Abraham, I would like to have a spiritual assessment – and if possible, the meaning of my name?

ABRAHAM: Certainly Samuel. I see you, my son, as having made great strides in these last few years. You are daring to show yourself as you really are where before you felt as though you were not acceptable and have not right to speak what you thought. Those many experiences you had did indeed leave you questioning your worth as a person. Your experiences had you feeling as though you were not worthy of other peoples' acceptance or love; you did tend to go inward as if to shut out the rest of the world. You are becoming stronger, my son, and your perception is being corrected. You are finding out you are most worthy of friendship and love. You are finding out you are acceptable more-so to God, and the rest does not too much matter. You would do well to take the initiative to step forth in being of service, because this is further training for you. You are finding your way and you can become what you have always admired in others. I also understand that impatience you are feeling with personal aspects of your life. I can say, as you step out in service to others you will meet people of greater integrity than those of your routine patronage. Father has someone for you, worry not. In the meantime, focus on becoming more courageous to speak your mind and be aware that a more calm tone of voice has a greater effect. You are building strength in character, and events that happen to you now do help you to progress. Samuel means one who is growing into full potential, yes. Have not worry, my son, you do well. Thank you for your courage to accept this personal assessment.

IMARA: Daughter, I see you as such a diligent worker who has great faith and willingness to be helpful in the kingdom. You are ready to begin a more spiritualized lifestyle but have a difficult time making it also, practical. You tend to separate regular daily events from things spiritual. The material and the divine can co-habit, leading to a more balanced life. You have opportunity to meet people, and your treatment of them is an opportunity to show a spiritual example. Your calm demeanor opens other individuals to being accepting of spiritual seeds.

Your enthusiasm, on the other hand, is also attracting people to want to know what is so wonderful. You are feeling somewhat regretful of having missed out on certain mortal experience. I say, have not regret nor worry. All has gone according to Father's plan. He can make sense out of your disappointments. He can make your life look as though it was lived deliberately and for the good of all. You are also hiding aspects of your personality as if they are not acceptable. I would say, you are beautiful 'as you are,' and to hide parts of yourself is holding back the hand of God. Have that freedom that you can be who you really are! and should others not be accepting of it, so be it. Focus on getting to know the personality of the Mother Spirit. Her qualities are a shining example for all females; a shining example for all people. Women of this day and age tend to hold resentment of past treatment and have difficulty moving past it. Mother is well balanced in her function and duty. She is in Her rightful place as an honored being of Nebadon. She need not fight for Her place. She has taken Her place and performed it to the utmost of Her ability. Have not regrets, daughter, nor worries. All, really, is well. Thank you for your courage to accept this personal assessment.

RITA: Abraham, can you tell me what my name means -- Rita Charmain?

ABRAHAM: I am giving definitions to spiritual names. I realize our text says we do not receive spiritual names until we are one with our Adjuster, but in this new day and age and Correcting Time we are allowed to release spiritual names. Do you desire to know your spiritual name? (Rita: I do, please.) Abraham: One moment. You are known on high as Azsuray. (Rita: How would you spell that?) Abraham: One moment. (Ellanor: I think he is asking somebody. He says do it like this: A-Z-S-U-R-A-Y.) (Rita: Thank you.) Abraham: Certainly. I believe the name means to be the bearer of many things, yes.

I will bring our meeting to a close, but not without expressing my love for you each. I am uplifted and inspired each time we meet. As always, my love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

You, Kingdom Practitioners, Are To Go Forth With Confidence
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-23-2000
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I would like to extend to you, each and every one of you, my gratitude and love. Those that participate in these lessons are creating a major change in this world's history. You that partake of spiritual nutrition are becoming strong and empowered to know God and to become like Him.

I give to you my commitment to see that each one of you who chance to come upon these words will be personally ministered to - to aid in your personal empowerment. Last week we spoke of releasing our long-cherished baggage to apply the faith/trust factor in our lives. Each day that we are committed to giving ourselves to Michael is another step-up in our personal empowerment.

These many years we have spent dying to the old ways and taking up the new. We are now spiritually empowered to live what we have learned. You are ready, my friends, to be what Father has intended for you to be.

You, kingdom practitioners, have been trained to go with confidence into the world and truly live what you have been taught. Every day you gain more courage to be your true selves. Every day you are learning to find meaning and value from your past mistakes. You have learned to laugh at your regrets knowing you have yet still more chances to correct. To have spent time with the Father, to dwell in this appreciation and to marvel at His everywhere-ness, is to be saturated in spiritual joy.

People everywhere are learning that they are not as inadequate as they thought. People are finding out that they are learning children in an advancing universe. Those that are daring to step forth with spiritual light leading them are confident in who they are and what their divine purpose is. They know that to be in the mindset of a 'victim' is no longer acceptable, no longer conceivable. Life does not fall upon them with random cruelty, but challenges present themselves to further sharpen their spiritual senses.

In daily living we cannot fall victim to seemingly negative occurrences but, we can remain observant and become empowered with divine ability. Yes, when you can move forth with spiritual confidence you are relying upon God to empower you with spiritual tools. These new times ahead bring us new tools to equip us to face the new challenges: You can live your lives on purpose. You can live for a purpose. You can find the beauty in being a small part of an elaborate spiritual plan.

Be not disconcerted with the new challenges ahead but be comforted knowing you are empowered and divinely strengthened to carry on in the face of all things. The open door of faith leads to a great many possibilities. These possibilities are not realistic for those who feel a victim of life. The possibilities are not available to those who are weakened by life's circumstances. Mortal life-circumstances are to teach you spiritual stamina and personal empowerment; they teach you your cosmic responsibilities.

What are your duties as a citizen of Nebadon? How can you fulfill your responsibilities when you might believe you are a victim of life? Without spiritual empowerment how can you further the Mission?

Take note that Father knows you will become imbalanced from time to time. It is through sincere worship that you regain balance. Through worship, you reconnect with the Father and empower yourselves to live life 'on' purpose and 'with' purpose. Through sincere appreciation (worship), do you wake each day with unbounded enthusiasm instead of dread and fatigue.

Every day this week, I ask you to find time to feel that appreciation of being a child of God and a universal citizen, a kingdom practitioner and an empowered spiritual being. I do appreciate you each for your dedication and daring to live these teachings. My love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Group Chores Are Equally Shared Among All | No Place Of Individual Honor Above Others

Abraham & Mother, WOODS CROSS GROUP 10-30-2000

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How joyful I feel to watch you at work. How uplifted I feel to be witness to your weekly learning. Though life seems dark at times you each keep searching for the Light. Your tenacity to remain true to your posts moves us all forward. Your joy is my joy. Your sorrow is my sorrow. Your advancement is my advancement.

I realize in learning personal empowerment you tend to put forth great effort; and in this effort, life at times seems to be out of control. The greatest effort you should put forth is the effort to allow God to work – with you and through you. You have your responsibilities, no doubt, but that (your responsibilities) falls within the realm of being dedicated to the doing of God's will. We have a guest this evening:

I am your MOTHER, Friend, Sister. I am with humble greetings to you, my children. I have so long looked forward to our meeting this evening. I am feeling my best when I can be close to you my small children. A mother needs to keep a close watch on the little ones for they are easily influenced or lured to things which may be unsafe.

I am so honored to have my place in this universe. I live to create. I live to join in partnership of overseeing that the details of the kingdom are brought into their full potential. I have regard for my duties; be they large or small, I honor each task as if it were handed to me by Father.

I realize my partnership with Father makes me more than I could be. He has made my place just for me. I know this is my place within the universe. I am unconcerned with others attempting to fulfill my duties or take my place; I am more focused on joining in with a team-minded attitude to seeing that the small details of large projects are completed. I worry not for the honor that comes with any given task. I focus on those details which are within my ability to complete.

I work with many individuals who also find that in unification there is efficiency and oneness – a feeling of belonging and satisfaction that 'with teamwork all things are possible.' We can, from time to time, have disagreeing viewpoints, yes, but with our eyes on Father, and on what is best for the whole, we accomplish a great many things.

Many universal tasks are completed due to group effort. No one is concerned with 'who shall receive the credit therefrom.' No one is in a position for receiving greater honor because every task, large or small, is deemed equally important. You can't complete some steps without having taken others. I take great satisfaction looking into the eyes of my coworkers and to contemplate the tasks we have worked on together. We each become closer and more dedicated to one another, as well as the Father.

In these times ahead there will be group chores. No one is with any more prestige than the next. No one is at a place of honor. Things you do are for Father and for the betterment of the whole. You will be given group assignments. Realize, the measure of which you are involved will be the measure of joy you will receive.

Especially in your small Mission groups, there has got to be some unity. There will always be differences, yes, but there has to be a commitment to Father and to one another. This is not asking you to sacrifice, but is adding opportunities to you for growth as a universe personality. With such unification, there is much support on such a planet as yours. There is a feeling of belonging – and, knowing that your place in the Kingdom is secure. You need not fight for a place of prestige or honor – because there is not one.

I look forward to becoming closer to you each and having you look into my eyes as your Mother and coworker, and have that inner-knowing that we can accomplish many things together. Know that I hold you close. Farewell, my children.

I am ABRAHAM. Thank you, Mother. I have indeed learned a great deal from you and have a higher understanding of how unification adds to our own being. To know that my brothers and sisters are with me in support broadens my spiritual perspective; and, leads me to believe that I can do greater things. Being a universe citizen, we grow to realize we each stand side-by-side in equality and love. There is no judgment; there is not petty quarreling about our place and position.

This week, find time to connect with each other as a group – to discuss personal empowerment and watch group empowerment unfold. I can answer a few questions.

TR (ELLANOR): Let me tell him those questions from Samuel and Marlin and see if he is going to answer. [pause.]

ABRAHAM: For Marlin (John C.): Inform your family member her illness is not as serious as she would believe. Her fear is complicating her affliction. With the proper medical care and feeling of hope, she will again live a normal life. She will draw-out the value and meaning from her illness and become better because of it. Have her make plans for the future. Have her know she has more duties that must be fulfilled in this life. There are never any guarantees because we are attempting to stay within the Father's will. Have her read sections from the Urantia text on those who were physically and mentally afflicted, and reiterate those times when the Master said: "Go your way, for your faith has made you whole." That is all.

To Samuel (Dirk): I am understanding your dilemma. I am still somewhat in the dark about the solution, but I can give to you what I have. Be careful, my son, when speaking to these two gentlemen that you do not appear to be taking sides. Utilize the mind of the Master. Know that He was a peacekeeper and yet, He was firm in his word and actions. You can be of good help in this situation. Attempt to diffuse each one's wrong perception of the other. Most conflicts are from misunderstanding or assuming that each one is thinking negatively about the other. I am in understanding that one of these men thrive on conflict. Perhaps it would be best to be passive with this fellow while informing the other not to feed into his need for conflict. Appeal to their common sense, and attempt to make light of the situation. Reason that some things are better left alone. That is all.

I am unable at this time to give an assessment for Inera – perhaps at a later date. Now that our business is done, I can take a few questions.

MIRIAM: First, I am in awe of Mother's words today. We thank Her for a wonderful message. I would like to ask, Abraham, how are you doing? The last time I asked was at the June conference and you said you felt like a father who was pacing waiting for the birth of a child. How are you doing? You have been spending a lot of time giving us assessments. Can you let us know what you are up to and how you are doing, personally?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I have been furthering my education with new classes. As the world changes, I need to be updated on how I can help minister. I always am intrigued by the everyday workings of Father, and my mind is always filled with questions. I do take great joy in my associations with my fellow Teachers, as well as you. There is always time for reversion and worship. My life is quite full and I cannot express my gratitude enough to our Heavenly Caretakers. I do not mean to say it is easy, but I do view challenges as a puzzle to be solved. I thank you, my daughter, for your care and concern. That is all. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, in the upcoming conference, I personally have felt to maybe invite our friends from New Zealand who initiated this Teaching Mission to come and share with us and to show our appreciation. On the other hand, perhaps they have been instructed to 'bow out.' Do you have anything that you would like to say?

ABRAHAM: Yes. You can make attempts to send an invitation, and then let it be. They have performed their duties as far as setting up the foundation for our Mission. They each live full lives and are quite busy. But certainly, they would like to know what their small efforts have initiated. An exchange of communication is a good thing to focus on. Their presence is not so much needed at the conference, but communication is good.

SARAUNA: Abraham, I guess I want to express my gratitude to our Heavenly Caretakers for the experiences I have had in the last several days; I am really grateful for all the opportunities I have had. I hope I can find more ways to serve as Father wants me to. If you have any comments – I think you know what I am talking about. I am just feeling so full of gratitude and I just want you to know that.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. I also thank you for your willingness to embrace our Mission and being courageous to step forth in doing what you feel is right in the eyes of Father. You are beginning to rely upon His wisdom and feel more confident in saying those things that need to be said. Even though you feel progress has been made, do not be discouraged if things slide. It is a long process and a test of spiritual endurance for you. You are doing a great job. Take this time to become spiritually strengthened. Remember, even when things seem bleak you have these events to draw upon. You can plant seeds, you can even tend to them, yes, but you cannot make them grow. I would say that in your acceptance of that, you can relax and feel confident that Father will do what He needs to do when He needs to do it. You are doing well, my daughter. Have not worry. Another question?

AZSURAY: Abraham, do you think you could give me some advice on how to build up the kingdom, to be a leader of the Urantia Association of Utah. I know you are knowing of the people here; I humbly request if you could. I feel so inadequate in this calling/position, not knowing the minds of my brothers and sisters.

ABRAHAM: I perceive that you do well. It would be good to focus on the everyday application of the Urantia text to daily life. Bring living reality to the book. Guide your fellows towards making the book a reality by not only study, but the interjection of everyday-life happenings and how you may have applied the principles of the book. I understand your enthusiasm; I would suggest that you temper that with being your genuine self. Allow Father to care for the rest. That is all.

SIMON: Abraham, I had a dream last night about the 'heavenly hosts' and a little something about the difference between seraphim and how they seem to enlighten my mind. I am very grateful for these things. I wonder if you have any comments along those lines of dealing with my dreams.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Dreams are a vague area of spiritual realities. You can know of their value by the fruit they produce. Should this dream lead to assistance in your daily living, then by all means, reflect upon it often. Seraphim can aid in the 'stillness state' more than in a subconscious 'dreaming state.' The fact that you are dreaming of them shows the faith you have that they are a working reality in your life. To have such faith is to get to know them better.

I am slipping. I do so appreciate your willingness to welcome me and hear my words. I am grateful to our Mother, for she adds new perspective to universe caretaking. I am looking forward to our busy week ahead. As always, my love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

With Spiritual Strength, Fear Lessens and Confidence Increases | George Visit from Australia

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings to you, my friends. What a full week you have spent enlarging your capacity to receive new spiritual seeds. Your contact with one another, and the unseen friends as well, has made your universe more 'user-friendly.' Father's works are awesome in that He covers so many areas of life and living - most of which you do not see, but most certainly play a part in. Michael's work is firmly planted and we are witnessing the new shoots of growth. The time has come where not even the unbeliever can say there is not some higher power or energy at work.

My friends, you have stepped forth in faith and trust, and you will not be disappointed. Your willingness to work in Father's kingdom has excellent benefits. You may not always be aware of the fruits produced, but as time goes by you will begin to see that there really is more good than bad, more positive than negative, more love than hate.

You are becoming more aware of your spiritual strength - meaning that your fear lessens and your confidence expands. You know what you know; and if you don't know, certainly you know the answer is forthcoming. You worry not about spiritual weakness. You are like a tightrope walker who grips his small umbrella and prays to keep his balance; he is with confidence that the net below is securely fastened.

As you gain spiritual strength there is a release of fear, and you move in Father's kingdom as if you have every right to be here. Without stepping forth with the faith/trust factor the spiritual muscles are not exercised, you lose confidence in God as well as yourself. Many who dare not to step out in faith and trust are overcome by the world's pressures; they build exhaustive skills in fleeing valuable spiritual experience, or hiding from life altogether.

As Mother said in our lesson last week, She knows this is Her place in the universe and fulfills Her duties knowing Father Himself has bestowed them upon Her. She feels at home and with purpose. She lives to greet each challenge as if it were a newly born child. She can become one with the challenge and receive insight on how to take care of it.

This week, ponder your spiritual strength. What do you dare to do now that you did not before? How do you treat your fellows now? Do you feel at home in the world and walk with confidence in Father, as well as yourself? I understand we have business. Our lesson is shortened to make time for questions. Proceed.

CALVIN: For the record, Abraham, we welcome George Bernard of the 11:11 Progress Group, from Australia; and Simon's friend, Lance, here for the first time. And, we welcome back Mark, Anthony's friend. Also, Tectra is back with us this evening from his long journey.

ABRAHAM: Greetings, gentleman. It is wonderful to have you with us. Have you questions?

GEORGE: Abraham, warrior and businessman, definitely a friend of all of us here, specifically of mine – it is my intention to train some transmission-receivers in Australia. Would you, perhaps on occasions, visit us?

ABRAHAM: Absolutely.

GEORGE: Thank you, Abraham. Just a question for the record, and I think it would probably delight the people here. In preface, in the mid-1970s – through the Akashic records we did have a look at your tent city of your mortal days. I would suggest it was a wonderful piece of universe reflection. My question is: The giant cooking pot you had there in your kitchen area – did you win it as a war trophy or did you pay for it? [laughter.]

ABRAHAM: It was not mine. It was a gift to Sarah from her mother. (George: Brilliant! Thank you so much.) Abraham: You are welcome. Have you another question? (George: Not at this time, but maybe we meet perhaps tomorrow night in a private session?) Abraham: Certainly. Are there any more questions?

SANDY: I have two questions if I can: I am experiencing a tremendous amount of energy right now, and I would want to know if that's through Teacher contact; or whether there is some other contact happening right now? I am really feeling a tremendous sense of energy flowing through my body right as we speak. Could you answer that for me first?

ABRAHAM: Nina is telling me she is, too. (Ellanor/Nina: I am, it's crazy.) Abraham:

Along with divine personages in the room, you each have tremendous group energy. Where two or more are gathered in His name – there, is Love. This in itself is an awesome energy! Through personal circuits, as well as universe circuits, there is no doubt this ‘love-frequency’ will have an effect on the material body. On my level, the frequency is not so much felt, but I can definitely view it with my spirit eyes. Your next question?

SANDY: I'm trying to integrate George's ideas of the 'Akashic construct' with my current practice of stillness. Both seem necessary and lead to the same place. I find the 'construct' is helping me illuminate my analytical mind even beyond my stillness practice; yet, elements of stillness seem – of the steps that I have been given to conduct stillness – seem very important. So should I alternate the use of both or somehow try and find a way to combine the two together in a personal practice?

ABRAHAM: I can say there is really no one way for everyone. You may experiment and then choose what is best for you. The idea of the 'construct' is a wonderful way to take the steps into stillness, but we have to keep in the forefront of our minds the overall reason we practice stillness, that is 'our contact with Father' - the realization that He is in us, and we, in Him. It is an exchange of divine love and knowledge. You and your Parent Adjuster may want to practice several different ways. The practice is good mindal discipline to keep your focus on the Spirit realm, and off of the daily grind. Yes. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, I want to just say thanks for the help in our touching base with Ruby and Mac, and the other two of your initial Correcting Time students, in New Zealand. What an awesome feeling of appreciation – to finally reach these people, after ten years, and to share with them that what 'they' have initiated there in New Zealand has had such an affect to set this Mission-stage here in the United States. I understand you met with them down there this past week. What an awesome thing we have going because of their efforts. [Editor's note: This is in reference to those in New Zealand who initiated the Teaching Mission via their contact with Abraham and Melchizedek through the 1980's]

ABRAHAM: No doubt, Calvin. We are watching our efforts come full circle – and this is indeed, cause for worship. The New Zealand team members were quite instrumental in initiating this contact. They were successful because they were humble and sincere in nature. They sought not for themselves, but for the kingdom. Many of your tasks may seem fruitless, and some may choose not to do them; but those that do can plant those seeds which will affect the world's future for some time to come – as did our New Zealand students. The apostles of Jesus believed they would have greater positions in the kingdom, and that it would take much blood, sweat, and tears to perform their duties. To their surprise, their tasks were somewhat simple and uneventful, but the fruits lived on for generations. Father asks not that you bend over backward and sacrifice for Him in the kingdom, no. He asks that you, in your beautiful personality, take joy in what you have been trained to do, be it a small or a grand task. You seek not reward for the striving of the kingdom but you experience the fruits of your efforts anyway. Our New Zealand team has done well, and we let them know that their position within this Teaching Mission is open and waiting for them. This contact is good. Yes, well done, Calvin.

CALVIN: Thank you. Do you have a comment for the record on the rehabilitated midwayers that are now back in service? or is that hasty transmission-receiving going on out among various Mission groups?

ELLANOR: I can hear him talking to somebody, so just a minute...

ABRAHAM: There are rehabilitated midwayers, but their integration back into their divine responsibilities will be slow and monitored. They have a long road to travel to get back to where they once were. They are, no doubt, just as loved as they always were, and are carefully watched over and tended to. Their experience is most valuable. Their progress is being documented and is being taught in other universes. The people of Urantia have naught to fear, for with each rehabilitated midwayer, there goes a lifelong loyal midwayer in its charge. Another question?

TECTRA: Abraham, I would just like to say thank you, for your guidance and assistance out on my journey. And not only you but all the Teachers, allies, guides, and Father, who were attending me. Also, my appreciation to all those personalities that were with me and helping me out on the road – all the beautiful people I met. It was because of all the supernal help I had that I was able to do so many wonderful works – because of that Spirit inside of me. I felt so much growth to just be there for people. Again, thank you for being there with me.

ABRAHAM: Greetings, my old friend. I would say I am happy to see you again, but as you've expressed, I have already been with you. I have been witness to your good works and soul growth. This is truly inspiring. You move like an adult in the kingdom, but still, you carry that child-like faith. It is indeed, beautiful to behold. You have experienced a basic training of mortal life, so to speak, and you have come forth with greater knowledge and strength which will certainly serve you in the future. Welcome back, my son. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, did this week just rock or what? [laughter.] I was so thrilled and elated to be a part of this group. I mean my heart is full and I love the lessons – I think we all do. Starting at Claireesa's last Sunday. [Editor's note Our group participated in preparing a place for George to stay a few days, at Claireesa's home, culminating in a potluck dinner upon George's arrival.] I just love this group and I'm so glad George came to town – no matter what he does for us and leaves behind. It was a wonderful exercise for this group and I'm just thrilled about it! And that's it, I don't really have a question. [laughter.]

ABRAHAM: Miriam, my daughter, 'you' rock! [group laughter.] Your efforts and hard work have left me in amazement. You certainly know how to rally the troops and accomplish a great many tasks. Each member in the group was willing to set aside personal desires or expectations in favor of wellness for the whole. Mother's lesson was certainly a catalyst for the week. You all were called, and you each answered. I thank you. Well done, my friends. Another question?

SAURANA: Well you might know, I just saw a face as I was going into one of these meditative situations, and it still just stands out to me, and I don't know if you might know who it would be. I'm just so curious, can you help me with that? Maybe it was just my imagination, but I don't think it was. (Abraham: One moment.) Saurana: I saw more than one face, but - I mean the really beautiful one. (Harrison, her husband: "That was me!") [group laughter.]

ABRAHAM: I have inquired about this face and no one knows, but it does not mean that it was not real. It means just that I am not informed. You each will have experiences that will strengthen your morontia senses. And in time and with practice you can decipher which experiences are real and fruitful, and which are from the imagination. Further practice will aid in your ability to know who it is you are seeing. You can ask again at a future time, perhaps I will have more information. In the meantime, be not discouraged and keep practicing. (Saurana: Thank you.) Abraham: You are welcome. One more question?

LANCE: Abraham, this is my first night here before this group. The question I have is: What can we do, as individuals and as a group, to glorify the Father's name and, to show forth the love of His Son so that the world can benefit from it?

ABRAHAM: The most important thing you can do is to live your life by example. Live your life as if you have been with God, and your fellows will indeed recognize this. You cannot say you believe in one thing and then, do another. You cannot make a promise and then not keep your word. You cannot see yourself as spiritually superior while your fellows are spiritually starving. You can, however, live side-by-side with your fellows as if you are all on the same journey together. The amount of faith you literally live will be a prime example to your fellows. If you can live what you believe, then you are benefiting mankind by showing them that 'God is real enough for me to live life the way that I do.' We live, move, and have our being in the Father; and by naturally living this out are you sending your greatest message to the world. Good question.

I am with greater love for you each time we can meet. I have enjoyed seeing new faces, as well as familiar old ones. I look forward to becoming closer to all of you and watching the kingdom expand one faith-filled child at a time. My love is with you. Until next week, shalom.

Good vs Pure Intentions | The Lessons We Can Learn From Eve

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, friends. What a beautiful spirit there is here this evening. I count myself blessed to be among you and one of you. To have seen this Mission unfold as it has leads me to be filled with gratitude because Father has seen to every detail; He has been a part of every happening.

When I first had received my orders to begin teaching and promoting the Correcting Time, I was overwhelmed by the immensity of this teaching task. I could not foresee how all the plans would bring all the components together to build what is known as the Teaching Mission. I had longed somewhere deep down to see results. It was difficult to maintain a low level of expectations.

It is in my nature to locate a problem, work diligently for a resolve, and then reap the fruits therefrom. But this Correcting Time - I realized was not mine, but Michael's and Father's. I was not just overseeing the Mission as a coordinator, no! I realized my part was to find a corner of the world and start there, one small step at a time. I set aside my desires or expectations because I had learned enough to know that Father's plans well exceeded my own.

At times I was given certain tasks to complete and I knew not why, which sometimes gave me cause to be frustrated. But still I made every effort to fulfill those duties that were bestowed upon me. I could have taught my students as I wished. I could have thwarted the divine instructions in favor of my own techniques. This I knew would be to delay our Father's plans.

Our Creative Daughter, Eve, did so love the Father and her mission. She had great desire to be of help – yet even with her good intentions, she threw a wrench into Father's plans, which had a great evolutionary effect on the planet. Her intentions were good, but not pure. A good intention is to do what you think is right. A pure intention is to allow Father to do what He sees as best. A pure intention is wanting what God wants. It is so easy to be drawn in by the excitement of “I am working for our Father.” It is a cause for concern, however, at those times when our ego wishes to impose its ideas.

Our Daughter, Eve, did have underlying desires to put forth her ideas in the hope that she may be accredited for her sharp mind and quick action; we believe she really did not take into consideration the severity of her wayward actions. Not one of us would even dream of pointing a chastising finger at Eve in disapproval, no. We each understand the underlying need to be needed, to fulfill certain duties, to be a part of such a vast universe and its evolutionary unfolding.

Father has the vision of time – the past, present, and the future. He has the intelligence of eternal experience. He knows where we have been, where we are now, and where we should go. He has every single being within each universe to consider—universe upon universe, being upon being—with never-ending, always-growing, ever-changing factors to consider.

The most we can do for Father is to live with pure intention – to want what He wants, and to firmly believe there is so much more to consider than our limited view. It should be taught early on in mortal life that every good thing takes time, and that 'God's time' and 'mortal's time' are two different things. To sit and be anxiety-ridden over ‘God's time is not as quick as your time’ is a temptation to thwart His plans.

This week, I ask you to contemplate pure intention. Study the Urantia textbook on our Material Daughter, Eve. Ponder if you will: How many beings do you consider when you make plans to complete a project? How can you know how everyone will be affected? Can you find the inner discipline to wait, be patient and allow Father to coordinate destiny? Can you be still and await your instructions?

I am sorry, no questions this evening, I am due elsewhere. But know that with each week that passes I am growing more in love for you each. Until next week, shalom.

Through Experience Do We Find God | Patience and Impatience

I am Abraham. Greetings. I am energized by your spirit here this evening. As I look upon you, I am filled with enthusiasm to become a better person. I am joy-filled at viewing Father's enlightening works on what seems to be a dark planet. I am fortunate to be here present with you and involved in a world I love so much. I have listened to your findings on this week's assignment and I think them to be most fruitful. Everyone will have a varying view because of the varying levels everyone is on, yes.

Caligastia taught personal liberty and thought that would inspire personal power. To only trust in yourself is a very lonely place to be. Our Father teaches us spiritual power - through Him. He makes us more than we are. He takes us through experience after experience, and an ever-growing education that we would not have if it were not for Him. Anyone who has experienced transmission-receiving, or perhaps feeling led by the Spirit presence, knows there has to be a decrease in self (ego) so that Father can increase.

We as mortal ascenders understand the plight of our Material Daughter, Eve, because of our own experience with impatience. It is natural for a child to 'cause a scene' when his will is not fulfilled. As you grow, you learn the virtues of patience through your mortal experience. How can you know patience if you have not experienced impatience? How can you know the will of our Father unless you have recognized your own interfering ego?

Experience is experience! It matters not the good and bad of it, for experience is, for the most part, all valuable. We each can use our experience to progress. One will not move forward by being held in shame or degradation, no. One can only move on if they have taken the time to have Father provide meanings and values.

The universes were set by our Father's hand for the purpose of our experiencing - and He bestowed upon us free will in doing so. Would there be real understanding of meanings and values if there was no free will? Father desires your love, yes, but He does not force you to love Him, for what would the value be of that love if it was forced? How meaningful and valuable is it when you can, by and through experience, come to know our Father. To serve in His Kingdom is to grow as a child of the realm into a productive cosmic citizen. Now that is valuable! that is meaningful!

It is through experience that we find God. To exert your will to over-shadow His, is to delay His overall plan. To delay is not really so harmful, because Father will find other avenues to reach you. To be so stubborn that you cannot even consider Father's will, hurts 'you,' not Him. When you come to know the goodness and watchful caretaking of Father, then you begin to trust that He has your best interest at heart, and that it is well and good to rely upon Him. That does not mean you can shirk your responsibilities, no! but to not have the everyday anxiety that a person has who 'does not' rely upon our Heavenly Parent.

How do you live your life so as to not overshadow the will of God? How can you find peace and comfort in the waiting?

Father certainly does know the desires of your heart, yes, and your desires are most definitely calculated into His overall plan. You may not receive those desires of your heart 'when you think you should' – but allow me to say that Father has well exceeded my expectations in His ministry to me. If you have already formed certain opinions/beliefs and have not room to move, then there is not new incoming information. If you have not committed to dying to the old ways in favor in taking up the new, then will your personal relationship with Father, lag.

This is a new era. Things will be always moving; and you, my friends, will be the assistants. Your examples of patience, and letting it be known that you do your utmost to be within the will of God, is a great teacher to others. Opinions, beliefs, and thoughts must be fluid and ready to take on various transformations. Be not afraid of these changes – rather, be intrigued by Father's adventure.

This week, map out a plan in which you can easily follow that is allowing Father's will to reign supreme in your everyday life. A few questions?

SANDY: I have received several messages this past week. All these messages seem to be pointing in the same direction for me. Can you confirm that what I received was true, and if there is any other clarifications I might need?

ABRAHAM: From my understanding, your message is for the most part, accurate. But bear in mind that you have spent these last few weeks with an overabundance of emotion and instability of daily life. Allow time, my child, for becoming acquainted with your new surroundings. It is perfectly acceptable to be feeling in upheaval, but be careful of making life-changing decisions until you can stabilize your foundation. Know that Father is ever close by and leading you to your latest mortal adventure which is always filled with learning and spiritual growth. Allow time for the fruits of your message to show themselves. I would be all too happy to work more closely with you. Feel free to call upon me, my daughter. Is this helping? (Sandy: Yes, thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Another question?

NATHAN: I have a question. I have not felt as 'in-tune' to the spiritual side of things for a while as I had been. My question is: Have I been properly acting on what small hints I have recognized as far as my personal life and where Father sees I would be best to work on, both the physical and spiritual sides?

ABRAHAM: Yes, of course. You have taken in a great deal of spiritual information, and this takes time to absorb. Worry not that you are not diligently studying, for everyday average living is study enough. You can practice everyday spirituality in just living. You need not be in constant study or chasing after spiritual information. When you are ready, your spiritual education finds you. As you experience this mortal life you can just remain open for Father to define the meanings and values for you. To absorb too much spiritual light 'too fast' can lead to fanaticism. Father teaches us balance in all things – and that includes spirituality. I find you to be appropriately following the spiritual path as your experience and ability allows you to. Have not worry, my son. You stand on the shore of an ever-expanding ocean of spiritual adventure. Enjoy your journey, yes. Is this helping? (Nathan: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: One more question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, some time ago I had an experience where I walked into a situation with what I thought was an open mind and an open heart. My outcome of this experience was different than a lot of my friends. I felt quite connected with Father's will in that experience. I didn't feel upset – but rather, I felt calm. As a matter of fact, I thought maybe what the situation was about, and instead of me 'receiving' something, it was perhaps about just 'being of service.' But since then, I've sat in disharmony over this. In my stillness I have gotten through some healing, somewhat, but I am finding my ego is still agitated. And I am thinking that the basis of that must be 'fear of difference from my fellows,' you know. So, I wonder how to be patient, and blend. On one hand, I feel comfortable and I know that Father will show me the way – that whatever the lesson is I will see it. But on the other hand, I guess the question is 'individual' versus 'group,' and how to feel true in 'what I know,' and how to blend with others. Is that making sense?

ABRAHAM: Yes. You would be surprised that many of your fellows think as you do, but many are afraid to say because they do not want to appear as the one who stands out different. You have had enough experience to know the truth as you perceive it. You have to only answer to our Father. You do not have to answer to anyone else. You are correct in your perception of Father and how He understands your feelings on this matter. You have every right, as a child in this universe, to have your understanding of your experience. You have your inner understanding of truth, and you can trust that spiritual instinct. Can you imagine how the Master felt in many group settings? His vision was quite unlike that of many groups He was involved with. At times, He felt quite alone in His thinking. If He could have been swayed by the 'group mind' He would not have been able to fulfill His destiny. He wholeheartedly trusted in Father to lead Him into where He needed to be. He could tell how 'on target' He was with Father's will by the fruits produced and the peace therein. Do not worry about the ego's involvement on this matter. Rather, rejoice in the fact that God has endowed you with a spiritual strength and courage to go forward with the truth as you know it. Is this helping, my daughter?

MIRIAM: Yes, Abraham. Thank you. I just love you.

ABRAHAM: And I, you – all of you. I would wish my express my gratitude to Father for His overseeing every minute detail, and helping us to focus on those things in life that lead us to love. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Being Adaptable In Life Opens Us Up For The Necessary Changes Ahead

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How beautiful it is to behold the faithful at work. You have built a strong family foundation from which all your service as a group stems. It is truly beautiful to see Father increase among you as you make effort to learn how to decrease the ego, yes.

When you think back over your lives you can view the various stages and changes that have made you who you are today. You would all agree that these changes came with some difficulty and a bit of mindal frustration. There is a long journey from infancy to adulthood. As you have experienced, you've learned new and better ways to live the mortal life. Being reborn in spirit opened up all new possibilities in mortal life where you have learned to integrate the two worlds.

Growth can bring growing pains, yes, but like the transformation of the butterfly you cannot live a full experiential life inside the cocoon – there are many stages the butterfly must travel to become its intended divine purpose. Should the caterpillar protest having to become enclosed in the cocoon? No. Father has a set plan and purpose for all His living creatures. The best that the caterpillar can do is to become adaptable. After the darkness (the hard lessons) there is a beauty unfolding.

As you travel this mortal path there are untold adventures to be had. This mortal life is about becoming adaptable. One who moves from the desert into the mountains adapts to the new changes and must make provisions therefor; if this traveler could not adapt, surely he would face the consequences. Being adaptable means accepting change and working therefrom to the best of your ability.

Mortals do tend to like things to stay the same because it is without turmoil and the need to make effort. Of course this is not bringing growth; this is not experiencing the full spectrum of the intended divine purpose. Being adaptable means not 'you are forsaking free will,' no, it means only that you are accepting certain circumstances and putting forth your best effort to work within Father's overall divine plan.

As you have entered into the spiritual life you have allowed yourselves to be changed and made adaptable to spiritual principles. Evolution will change all things. When you can be committed to adapting to mortal circumstances then incoming divine information is more clear; spiritual poisons are decreased and the feeling of the presence of our loving Father is increased.

Your books, your printed lessons, your thoughts and ideas of today will all change – this is a natural divine process. In being adaptable, we can accept these life-changes and work from what we know. In the serenity of being adaptable, we are open to new revelation – and that is instant divine communion! It is in having experience that we are being made stronger through adversity, breaking through the cocoon of darkness into becoming a creature of spiritual beauty.

In all your changes, can you contemplate the fact that these changes could possibly be a divine lesson? Can you remain observant and open to 'living revelation?' As you accept change, can you become adaptable to mortal circumstances and work 'without anxiety' from whatever level you are on at the time?

These times are changing fast and we will require you, my friends, to become used to these changes so you can aid others in adjusting. Our heavenly Caretakers are even made to adapt because they have given us the gift of free will. They can adapt in ways that promote the highest good for the whole.

Adaptability is not being mechanistic, no. It is not giving-over your core beliefs to be nonresistant and to not make waves, no. Adaptability is quick acceptance of circumstances that are occurring, and being able to be calm to receive divine revelation. Adaptability is to curb spirit poisons and take action from what you think Father thinks is best.

No questions this evening, I will make time for questions next week. I am, as always, moved by your devotion to our Father and to one another. I am with more love for you each every time we meet. Until next week, shalom.

Becoming Adaptable And Usable To Father To Help Further His Work

Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-04-2000

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, my friends. How well you are learning to become adaptable! It is understandable that this lesson will take time but it is certainly worth it, especially concerning the eternal adventure ahead.

I give you, my friend and coworker, Emulan.

EMULAN: Greetings, my fellows. I understand you each have been busy with your varying life changes. I know from personal experience that the mortal life becomes more spiritized as we can learn to adapt.

In my days of inhabiting the mortal body, I had experiences that would seem rather harsh. I had lost my wife and daughter in an accident, and the overwhelming pain brought me to the brink of insanity. I experienced the standard - 'blaming Father' for this crushing experience. I had experienced consuming despair. I had wished for the nothingness of an eternal slumber.

During these dark hours, I could find no consolation. I was treated for depression and even spent much time hospitalized. In my darkest moments, I had the realization that neither the doctors nor medication could pull me from my darkness; the pain I experienced was beyond this world and I needed to seek a source that could accommodate.

In my seeking, I realized that as I had traveled the path of grief that I had released all I had longed for, and I come to understand that I had to allow my wife and daughter to move from a despairing part of my mind, to a loving remembrance area. I was at a point where I had to make a choice: Either I could adapt and accept these circumstances and work from what I knew best - or, not adapt and become consumed with bitterness and the seeming injustice of mortal living.

Did Father take my family from me? Of course not! Did He plunge me into the depths of despair? No! But I can say, He helped me find a reason to go on - to find value and meaning from this terrible accident. My best hope was to recover from depression and function in a normal life - and with Father's help, I most certainly did. I learned our Father well exceeds our own expectations.

From my experience in the hospital, I became interested in psychiatry and felt somewhat of a calling to pursue this avenue. I did, through much effort, graduate with degrees in psychiatry. I did go on to help others who entered into the darkness of the human mind.

Yes, Father showed me the values of my own past experiences and how I may use that to be of service to others. He used what I deemed 'unusable' and made it valuable, made it meaningful. Father showed me the strength that could be possessed through viewing my own weaknesses. He showed me that in my adaptability He worked to better many lives.

Did I still miss my family? Of course! But I found great satisfaction in making the best out of my new life-calling in honor of them. In time, I realized they were safe and well-cared for.

As I experienced my own healing, my mind was opened to eternal possibilities. I felt joy with the comfort that I would see them again. I was strengthened in faith and trust that God is overseeing every detail, and that surely this mortal life is not about suffering and finding the value therefrom, no, it is about becoming adaptable and useable to God. His work is endless and He tires not. He only awaits those listening children to help Him in furthering His work.

My brothers and sisters, we have tremendous tasks ahead of us in this Correcting Time. We need to become useable to Father to further His work, His plan, His Correcting Time. I thank you and leave you to Abraham.

ABRAHAM: Our gratitude to our brother and coworker, Emulan, for this evening's lesson. How better to teach than from personal experience - wonderful, my friend. I should be happy to take a few questions.

CALVIN: Yes, our thanks to Emulan for his time and effort to help us on this world from his experience. Abraham, I am sure you are familiar with our plannings for the up-coming 10-year anniversary conference. Would you suggest a 'conference-theme' from your side, which we could work around? or do you want us to think it up on our own?

ABRAHAM: I have been listening to each of your ideas. I find you are all very creative and have faith that you will come up with something. Worry not. This should be kept simple, is my only suggestion. Another question?

CALVIN: Inera's daughter, Ashlee, has asked for an assessment, and if you think it appropriate, my son Cory's friend, Angie.

ABRAHAM: One moment. Anicia (Ashlee), you have learned much in your short years. I say to go forth with a gentle but firm attitude. Do not allow others to stand in your way. Do not believe that you are doomed to repeat the paths of your elders. You are a separate and distinct child of God with your own ideas. I would recommend that you beware of mystical avenues. They will perhaps sour you against spirituality altogether. Know that life does not pass you by. You are where you should be. It is not always exciting and it is not always supposed to be. Know that there are experiences you must have to shape you for future work in our Mission. You are becoming stronger every day. Have not fear nor worry. You do well. I thank you for your courage to accept this personal assessment.

TR: This is for Cory's girlfriend, Angie. He is saying a name but I can't understand what it is.

ABRAHAM: My daughter, you are overwhelmed by such a heavy burden. Let me begin by saying this is not as serious as you think it to be. Do not be weighed down by others' thoughts. Allow your mind to be clear and free from past beliefs and opinions and traditions. Be alone, child, with God – just you and Him. Can you see – He works within the lives of everyone, not just a chosen few. God loves the sinner as well as the saint. He loves the believer as much as the non-believer. You are His creation and only need to look within to find Him. You do not have to go through someone else. You have your own Father-connection – it is your birthright. He loves you as you are. You need not work for His love, you need only have faith. Take your time, my child, and have not fear. No matter your decision, God will always be there for you. To overlook dogma, doctrines, and traditions is not overlooking God, no. Father desires you to experience a full mortal life. He has faith in you. Follow your inner-leadings. Know that this is not a matter of spiritual 'life or death.' Be at ease. That is all. Another question?

SIMON: Yes, Abraham, I am interested in your perspective of the 'I AM' as it might pertain to my growing understanding of it; and anything else you would like to pass on concerning the notes I have made.

ABRAHAM: As I understand the 'I AM,' I believe it to be the now God, the all-encompassing, all-present God as He is now. I believe via the Thought Adjusters, that His all-present/everywhere-ness is also ours to have. There are myriads of beliefs that men hold dear – but in a simplistic way, you could view the 'I AM' as 'now existence,' not concerned with the past or future. Is this at all helping?

SIMON: For me, it is rather hard to grasp this concept. I read the text in the Urantia Book and have dreamed about it somewhat. I woke up in the middle of the night and did some writing about it, but then it seemed to just slip away in a bit. I feel that there is a great delight in understanding this concept from a spiritual basis, and then in living it – feeling the presence of the Father in us in Adjuster contact. That is what I feel in all of us here tonight, and throughout the day of work, and our whole life. This seems, to me, to be key right now. Can you put that in perspective for me?

ABRAHAM: You said it well. The feeling of the 'now presence' – that inner-knowing that there is so much beyond this life – and, of the One who oversees the functioning of it. In my understanding, I see the 'I AM' as a fact; not a far-off idea, but a universal knowledge that 'God is,' and therefore, 'you are.' There is plan and purpose for all things, but in this concept we do not focus on anything else but His 'now presence.' As our faith grows, we will more comprehend this concept without the extra endless concepts that surround God. We only need look at the realization of His 'abiding' existence, never with beginning nor end. Perhaps in time I can give you a more clear explanation. Is that acceptable?

Simon: Yes. Thank you. I hope to grow in understanding of this concept as time goes on. This is a very great jump-start. (Abraham: You're welcome.)

NATE: Abraham, with regard to the conference, I have chosen to take on planning for the children and youth activities. I was wondering if you maybe had any ideas as far as curriculum I could take from the Urantia pages, that would simplify for the children right now; if I could get some extra help in revelation while I am working on that?

ABRAHAM: Yes, the youth will carry on this work and there are many good ideas in the Urantia Book. At a convenient time, we could arrange a private meeting. And yes, I would be delighted to work with you, personally. (Nate: Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. One more question?

ANTHONY: Maybe you are aware - I had another experience which wasn't quite so kind in my trying to share the Urantia Book and these lessons with someone. I can now see that I was quite aggressive, and was told that I was a snob about it. I guess my question is if you have anything to add to that? Also, I am trying to adapt to being without my lost kitten, but I would rather have help in finding him.

ABRAHAM: Certainly, my son. Your zealousness is energizing to say the least. You would do a great service to many, to voice your understanding in a 'calm' manner no doubt. You are eager to see progress in these enlightening times, as we all are, and as our Creative Daughter was. Eve also desired to view the opening of the world's peoples' minds and hearts towards progress. And yes, certainly patience is easier spoken of than done. I am saying, words that are filled with passion does speak to the hearts and minds of your fellows, yes - but more-so effective when there is a calm inner-knowing faith that comes through. Know my son, that you are God-led and have every ability to still those inner desires and wait upon the will of Father. To speak out is all well and good when it is welcome - but you know that to force ideas is to cause others to be defensive. You are a man of strong faith, yes, and it shows. Living your life 'according to your beliefs' is the best testimony you can give. As for the kitten, although I am unsure about the whereabouts of the animal. I can suggest to you, my son, this episode of your life is masking the pain of something deeper - a deeper longing perhaps. With some journaling, you can most definitely get to the bottom of this and have peace and adaptability towards the life choices you have made. Do not worry. Do not feel cheated, for Father brings out the values and meanings in all life's occurrences. Certainly, what you were not able to fulfill in this life, there will be ample opportunity in the next. Yes. Have not fear or worry, my son. Really, all is well.

I will take my leave, but not without expressing to you my growing gratitude and ever-deepening love for you each. I thank you for allowing me to be your brother, friend, and teacher. Until next week, shalom.

Allow Emotions To Decrease And Logic to Increase, That We Might Be Of Better Service
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-11-2000

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How I love these small intimate groups. The energy is less scrambled and it is easier to put across my message. I am filled with gratitude every day for Father takes me on one adventure after another.

I have had to learn to be adaptable and made useable for this work. I have had to learn patience and keep my emotions at bay while allowing logic to rise to the forefront in my thinking. I have had assignments that were not at all what they appeared to be at the start; if I was not patient and open, I would not receive the real meaning in the assignments.

In this Correcting Time, it is important that you be observant. Many things will happen that Father will need you to work on. Should you become filled with emotion and rush into the difficulty with your own knowledge then you might miss the real purpose for the assignment.

As planetary changes occur, you are also changing – you are going to be more and more capable of receiving divine information. If you should come from a place of emotionalism or egotism, then of course, your assignment must be given to another.

We work for the glory of our heavenly Caretakers; we move destiny for them. Through natural evolution, they provide opportunities for us to further the Kingdom work. Circumstances with your fellows may not be what you can see with the 'material eye,' but more perhaps felt on a soul-energy-mind-level. To make rash judgments regarding your fellows is closing off the continuous flow of divine information. To relax in compassion for your fellows, with an eye single to the glory of God, is to serve in a most effective manner.

Many of you who have long lived this mortal life perhaps think you have seen most everything or experienced all you can. But I say, these times are quickly changing, and it will require you to be always with fresh eyes. Should your fellows come to you with a seemingly petty problem there could very well be something deeper that you are meant to help on.

You may not have the slightest clue for the reason certain daily events come to pass; but if you can be observant, you perhaps can find opportunity to serve that is adaptable, that is usable. With each life you touch, you are creating a living circuit that will continue to grow and reach many others. The best promotion we have for this new time is through your personal ministries. You can touch many lives – and from that, new roots take place and new growth appears.

In everyday-life-circumstances must we always question Father? Can we be patient and observant to see what He may have in store for us? Can we focus on our emotions to 'decrease' and logic to 'rise' so we can be of practical service?

This week, number the amount of times you may out of habit feel to falsely judge your fellows. Instead, be aware of just remaining watchful and open to divine information that may be useful in serving them. Know that even though you may touch another's life – even in the smallest of ways – you are helping to create a living link. Know that you are not only serving but gaining valuable experience and learning.

I am aware we have questions from a few that are not present this evening. One moment.

First: For GEORGE BERNARD (George was a recent visitor to our group from Australia. His question is regarding his experience with midwayers; his role as transmission-receiver in Australia – particularly regarding a recent transmission he had received):

ABRAHAM: My friend, I am somewhat uncertain of your question, but I will do my best to answer. You are with great enthusiasm, no doubt, but know that transmitted messages can be influenced by this enthusiasm. Be watchful and careful. Desire not to desire. Allow the messages to come through without any wishful thinking attached. You are doing well, my friend, and I do speak to you in a way that I know you are accustomed to. Your message, for the most part, was correct. However, we will have further practice.

Second question: For MARLIN (from Michigan regarding his family and associates who live in fear of evil influences):

ABRAHAM: My son, you know very well how to handle these judgmental people. They are quite closed-off due to their own inner fear. They fear what they do not know. You can help by bringing further understanding and dispelling the darkness from their thinking. Be gentle in your dealings. A gentle manner is far more attractive than one who would stand and fight for his position. You do well, my son.

Third: For CHARLIE (from East Coast area regarding the death of his pet):

ABRAHAM: I do understand your pain. Many individuals have attachments to animals that are beyond the animal level. You have had one such attachment, but there are perhaps deeper meanings in this loss, and that is puzzling to you. There are attached regrets, yes, and this loss brings those regrets to the forefront of your mind. This pet symbolized a parent/child relationship, and the loss that you experience brings your regrets to the forefront of your mind. I can say, my son, as soon as you confront these regrets, the pain will lessen and you will find the value in this experience. I must say, you have been a wonderful father to your children. You have not missed out on any experience. The experience as a pet owner is valuable in that it teaches you to care for living things. It shows that you can be connected with all life. You can love and be loved; but when the pet ceases to live, the experience stays alive in the owner while the life energy is returned from whence it came. This is not wasted, no. All life serves a purpose. Be at ease to grieve, my son. Work through this process and know that there is value in it, there is meaning. When the grieving subsides, you will have your fond memories, your new insights to your past regrets, and your enlightened prospects for future experience. Be at ease, my son. Allow Father to comfort you. Do not ever think He is too busy for what you may see as just a human thing. Be at peace. Other questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, for the upcoming Snowbird conference: Sometimes it is tough to decipher if it is what I want or what I think Father is implanting through me or giving me ideas. Your lesson is helpful, yes, and if you have anything to add I would really enjoy that boot in the pants or whatever. We were discussing the idea of maybe having three ‘scheduled’ speakers that you might recommend – as you yourself addressed us last year, and as Ham did on the schedule the year before – and then maybe time for some open transmission-receiving as well. Is three okay with you or would you rather go with one or two, or none? Do you have any input here?

ABRAHAM: I would first comment on your first question regarding your will or Father's. It is always wise to seek the opinions of your fellows to stay focused and balanced. Do not worry. As for speakers in the conference – no, I cannot say. I am sure opportunities will present themselves, especially if all can keep an eye single to the glory of God. Keep the conference simple and at a peaceful pace. Do not force or rush. Allow the spirit to inspire and move you. Is this helping?

CALVIN: Yes, it is. A clarification on speakers though, I was not referring to mortal speakers on our side, but Teachers on your side of which you may want us to schedule. Did you understand my question?

ABRAHAM: Yes, I did. Is this helping? (Calvin: Yes.) Abraham: I am not able to arrange or direct on this mortal endeavor. I can, however, assure you that your inner guidance is alive and with great possibilities. Have not worry. Another question?

SANDY: Abraham, I have a question about how I am doing right now in my working on a physical level. I seem to be getting directed by my Adjuster to increase physical exercise which I have been pressured for a while to do. I am wondering about diet as well which should aid to increase my communication with my Adjuster and opening to the circuits. And any other comments you would like to add.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Always does exercise and a balanced diet aid in the more clear communication process. Your scientists have already a wonderful program to follow: Low fats and salts, high fiber, small amounts of meat and dairy. You are doing well in your transmitting and receiving. I would only suggest that you take your time; feel not pressure or a need to hurry. All things are happening – slowly, but steady. Be sure to take in great amounts of fluids and find time to be quiet every day. Is this helping?

SANDY: Yes, thank you. I was more concerned if there is anything that I am doing that was harmful.

ABRAHAM: I would only suggest that you use caution when taking in what you think is 'all natural' herbal supplements. Some have not been tested enough and you don't really know the long-term effects. All things in good balance, my child.

I am slipping in my connection. I would bid you goodnight. I am with always more love for you each, each time we can meet. Until next week, shalom.

Forgiveness | Allow Our Resentments To Fall Away | Make Room For Understanding |
Allow The Purifier

Abraham & Christ Michael, WOODS CROSS GROUP 12-18-2000

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How wonderful it is to know that we are each personally connected to spirit. Every child of God has opportunity to know and use the marvelous spirit within. We can be assured that we are not left alone, left behind, or left unguided. We each can rejoice in the empowering feeling that God is in us, and in Him we can do all things.

During this mortal holiday time we turn our thoughts towards our beloved Brother/Father, Christ Michael. We ponder the meaning of His life and how well we really know Him. The most significant influence we believe that Jesus showed His fellows was the living goodness of God. You could tell by the way He treated His fellows that He knew Father and had a close relationship with Him.

In Father, the Master could do all things and not any man could hinder His work. Jesus had not become bothered by hurt feelings or resentment when His fellows had gone against Him. The Master was strengthened by His communion with the living God. He stood on an unshakable foundation of spiritual strength and power. I give you our beloved Sovereign/Brother/Father.

MICHAEL: Gather close to me, my children. I am one of you; I am one with you. I know that this time on your world is in celebration of my mortal bestowal to your world. I have come to you this night bringing you yet more challenges.

This time of year is somewhat of a focal point for brotherhood and glad tidings. I ever so much appreciate the small gestures among you, my Urantian children. I ask you to go beyond the usual small gestures, towards taking a giant step toward a heart and mind purification. I would ask that you consider the possibility of my presence sweeping over you as if to clean and purify the mind, body, and soul – of all past pain, regrets, mistakes, and personal trauma. I am asking you to focus on forgiveness.

How difficult it is to move forward when so many are buried in resentments, grudges, and traumas they cannot seem to overcome. I understand it is difficult to allow these things to be taken off of you as if they do not have any meaning. I do understand how painful it can be when your fellows have crossed you in one way or another.

How would your life be different if you could truly believe that this very day is the beginning of your life, a life free from past painful experiences that weigh you down and result in certain behavioral habit patterns? How would you view life differently if you could allow these burdens to be lifted from you? How free would you feel to have no resentment or grudges – and instead, unforgiveness towards others that may have wronged you?

Forgiveness is really a step in trying to have understanding for others' actions. Forgiveness is not forgetting and laying down to be further insulted, no! Rather, it is taking a step in trying to have understanding for your fellows, and yourself. To take a step towards forgiveness is being open to the spirit realm, to receive the meanings and values from those things you may find unforgivable.

I say, taking a step away from resentment and grudge-holding is a commitment towards being open to receive new light; it is to move forward; it is to progress. One who stays stuck in unforgiveness is inflicting constant self-punishment wherein one is not open to receive the meanings and values. Ask for me. I will help relieve you of the burden of unforgiving. I can help purify the mind and cleanse the heart towards receiving greater light.

In this time of brotherhood and glad tidings, let us delve into the reality of forgiving and taking a step towards greater understanding – loosening those ties that bind you to old behavioral patterns. If one cannot forgive another, that is the measure of how much one can believe he receives forgiveness. If you cannot learn the virtue of forgiveness, then surely you cannot truly believe you are forgiven for your mistakes or misdeeds.

I am saying, allow those small grudges to go by the wayside and cleanse yourself of these spiritual poisons. Make room for new light. One cannot promote this Mission, nor the brotherhood, when they harbor resentments in their hearts against their fellows. You cannot stay stuck in pain and preach the good news at the same time. Allow this season to be a time of new beginnings. Know that nothing has harmed the so-loved and cherished soul within. All things that you feel may have dented the soul, has rather, exercised the soul into personal empowerment.

I do feel that anguish a father feels when he views his children harming each other. I so much desire to be in your midst to dispel the dark thinking of unforgiveness and show you a new and better way to move forward. Come to me. I am the Purifier. I will uphold you in all your changes. I will support you in your striving to become God-like. I do want to be a part of all those things in life that you believe are just byproducts of being mortal.

The spirit poisons are a cause for serious damage, and it is quite needless for you to experience it alone. Call on me. I am the Purifier. If you can open your hearts and minds just a little bit you will view my works, firsthand. You will be an integral part of the sweeping changes that will direct this world into Light and Life.

We are immovable in our commitment to create change. We will go forward in whatever manner we are allowed to – however you will receive us. I am dedicated to promoting the growth of the universe as a whole. I am striving for the growth of the God-in-time. There is so much beyond what you can fathom that is occurring in the universe. Many eyes are on Urantia and many prayers are said every day for the world's upliftment, as well as the universe as a whole. I am one of you. I am one with you. Carry on.

ABRAHAM: Thank you, Michael, our Sovereign Creator, you who ever strives to uplift and promote the highest good for everyone. It is with a humble heart that we gladly accept your challenges and will faithfully carry on.

My friends, Michael has asked us to allow our resentments to fall away to make room for understanding. We cannot receive personal correction without understanding. We cannot be released from being stuck in resentment without taking the first step towards forgiveness. How you 'forgive' is how you believe you are 'forgiven.' How could a child of God progress when he believes there is an unforgiving Father who seeks to severely correct him? Unforgiveness – is not moving; not growing. Allow this season to be the focus of going before the Purifier. Let us strengthen our relationship with our beloved Sovereign, and truly be delivered.

We will not have time for questions but perhaps we can find time during the week to catch up on all requests. I am honored, my friends, to serve you – to serve with you, and be served by you. Know that with each passing week my love is increasing for you. Until next time, shalom. [No meeting on Dec. 25th.]

Universal Laws | Forgiveness And Mercy | Our All-Powerful Father and All-Merciful Son

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am quite inspired to view how well you each work together. You are, for the most part, finally becoming unified. You are in alignment with the common group goals and working for the betterment of the whole. Ego is decreasing while Father's will is increasing. Well done.

I truly love the concept of beginning a brand-new year. It's almost as if you can allow the old – be it good or bad – to fade away while taking from it new wisdom of 'lessons learned.' It's as if you are beginning with a clean slate; or as Michael said it so well last week: "purification of mind, body, and soul."

Looking out over the horizon of a new year to come, we are filled with excitement at the new possibilities. You can also be filled with a bit of anxiety, or dread, at the challenges to come. How wonderful it is to know that every day is the beginning of a new day and, all our choices are before us. We do indeed have tremendous power as small citizens of Urantia. We can align our hearts and minds to move a world forward into Light and Life; or, we can separate and delay progress. Either way, Father has granted us the gift of free will.

I especially enjoyed Michael's lesson on forgiveness in our last meeting because it is almost like a baptism of the spirit; it is a cleansing of old resentments and an opportunity for healing. In the healing, we find new spiritual passageways. Our challenges do not end, but we are stronger and equipped with more spiritual tools. In these weeks ahead, I would like to discuss universal laws – forgiveness being the first. If the Father is all-knowing, all-powerful and all-loving, then surely we can describe the Son as all-merciful.

To be merciful is not a pious act to be performed to display to your fellows and to God so that you may earn spiritual points, no. Deep and abiding mercy is something that resides in the soul. As you experience, you learn about mercy a little at a time as you are so treated. Without mercy and forgiveness we have opportunity to learn to appreciate the awesome power of these divine virtues when they are finally realized and accepted?

To be forgiving, one must learn in-depth about mercy – and that requires research; research to gain understanding. Whether it is through verbal communication with your fellows, or perhaps transmission-receiving, or our Urantia Book text, you cannot have understanding unless you make effort to research. Understanding is not instant, nor automatic; someday it may be, yes; but for right now if you truly desire understanding so you can be merciful and forgiving, you must exhaust all your human resources.

I find it quite awesome that in all creation there is the gift of free will – and yet, there is such precise order in Father's realm. Universal laws are not so much 'Father's laws' but are the 'natural outworkings of evolution.' These laws create universe order and are designed to serve the whole. They are not unfairly harsh or merciless, but just facts that each cosmic citizen should know. Most actions have reactions. Cause creates effects. This is simple and most just, and in the best interest of caring for the whole.

This week, contemplate mercy and how Jesus displayed it in his life. Is mercy, weakness and allowing others to continue to walk on you? Is mercy, intelligence? or emotions? A few questions.

MIRIAM: Abraham, this lesson, and Michael's lesson, have been so appropriate for me in the past little bit of time. I have been having an extremely difficult time this week being in the flow and in service to others. I don't know if it is because I have been so physically tired lately, but the spirit poisons are so strong that I apologize to my Thought Adjuster for taking up space with the poisons. It has been wonderful and I am grateful for it. But in being of service, in learning how to be merciful, I need some direction.

ABRAHAM: I can understand. When there are physical burdens upon you it is difficult to also be of service. But mindal stress and anxiety can make everything seem more difficult. It is understandable that you are worried and feel a connection to other's pain. Your sympathy for others is to be commended, but there is a time to detach from sympathy and attach onto logic and action. I mean not to say you should not feel for others' pain, but only allow that to go 'so far.' In sympathizing, there is greater vulnerability to your own health. The Master could sympathize with His fellows, and that was His cause to go into logic - and from there, action; this kept His emotions from burdening Him down with negativity. Negativity will direct you into the spirit poisons, and then it is difficult to act with good intentions. You, my daughter, are sensitive to many things, but you have certainly been strengthened in spirit. Sensitivity should only be a gateway into logic and action. Logic first, because many times there is no action needed to be taken, and logic will tell you this. I know you are frustrated when you cannot treat difficulties in a hands-on manner. Worry not, my daughter. Your words are comforting and inspiring to others. Know that others could also be under pressure and may not receive your words well; but do not fear, there are most definitely seeds planted. Is this helping?

MIRIAM: Yes, Abraham. Is it natural to have spirit poisons? And as Simon asks, is it okay during those times to just go take a nap or break?

ABRAHAM: Yes, as long as you possess a mortal body you will always deal with spirit poisons - it is entirely natural, yes, and you should have some mercy for the mortal-self. While we are striving to be spiritual beings, we still possess the animal nature. Do not be hard on yourself because this does not leave a door open to learn more. This 'acting out of spiritual poisons' is not your desire, no! and certainly you feel bad about yourself. In feeling this negative self-outlook it is difficult to break the cycle of spirit poisons. If you can believe you are still 'just learning,' then you leave the door open for Father to come in with correction - not your kind of correction, but His - with love, with mercy, with understanding.

Sure, spiritual poisons can result from fatigue, and most definitely is it acceptable to escape for a time to clear the mind. And yes, Simon, you can take a nap. Is this helping? [laughter.]

I am beginning to slip and I will take my leave. I would like you to know how much you all inspire and uphold me. I find it my highest honor to do the same for you. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Universal Laws Encompass All Of The Mortal Experience | Divine Justice Reigns Supreme

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I very much enjoy your discussion time. We are always learning more when we can join with questioning minds seeking sincere answers. We have learned a great deal about universe laws from this planet's epochal events. With experience comes more understanding of universal laws.

Adam and Eve proved the theory that transgressing the divine laws brings about a natural universe reaction. These laws are not meant to punish or rehabilitate, but to create order and further universe progression. The acts of transgression by Eve brought about a landslide of successive universe corrective actions. Although Eve had the best of intentions, she still transgressed the Father's will, and the affects are still experienced today.

One can think: "My minor transgressions harm no one but perhaps myself." As we can see from the Adam and Eve advent, this is not so! The universal laws work towards the growth of the whole as well as the Supreme Being. These laws are eventuated out of love and care for the universes, not out of the judgments of a stern and angry God.

"What you sow, most certainly do you reap" is a common, but true, concept. Ham said long ago: "If you cut your finger, surely will you bleed." This is not mean or a punishment to the ignorant, no, but just a common effect from a common cause. Should you not find it within yourself to bestow mercy and forgiveness, then surely is it not forthcoming to you. It is simple and yet, so very fair – mercy begets mercy.

If you are to show yourself to be a man or woman of God, then surely do you strive to attain Father's attributes – and surely do you strive to follow the universal laws. Many religious foundations today bestow upon its members their own supposed universal laws. It is done in all good intention, yes, but after many years of trying to follow certain man-imposed laws, you know within yourself that they go against the grain of your soul; they undermine your inner-knowing and take away your spiritual confidence.

Yes, many of the churches of today lay down impossible laws to follow. They tend to deny the 'animal self' even exists while formulating laws that no one can keep. There are urges within the soul that are somewhat stifled by man-made religion. I want you to know – that for yourselves, the universal laws encompass all of the mortal experience. You can know them; and as you experience, you learn more of them. They are simple and easy to follow. They do not oppress the 'animal mortal self,' but do embrace the whole human experience.

Our Father's creation is the embodiment of mercy and is a support to its citizens, not to bury or suppress who they really are. The universe is created to bring out the best in each citizen by and through love, not through the heavy hand of bad karma. The universal laws are designed to uphold, not hold down or hold back. Father, in His wisdom, has created the universes to intelligently guide its citizens, not to coerce them.

In the Father's loving and merciful ways, He helps you to become more than you are - not to shame you into becoming a copy of Himself. His justice is not like that of man's. Father has the perspective of all time, space, and experience - of the past, present, and future. No being under Him can have such a perspective; and therefore, cannot create such justice.

This week, I ask you to contemplate the Father's justice versus your own. So many mortals are buried by the world's unfairness and do believe it holds them down. They tend to view Father as a vengeful God who will punish them at will. They do not see Him as a 'liberator,' but as a jailer of the soul. How do you perceive the divine laws? What examples have you to learn from wherein you have transgressed the divine laws? Were not the results (what you have learned) orchestrated with perfect intelligence?

God's justice always outweighs man's - and even though it is hard to see that in your mortal form, know that the universes are busy behind the scenes seeing that divine justice reigns supreme. How much more can a man appreciate justice when he has experienced injustice! How much more fair will you be when you have been treated unfairly!

No questions this evening. I would be happy to take questions next week. I am due elsewhere, but know that I am excited to be growing alongside you each, my brothers and sisters. I am with more love for you each time we meet. Until next week, shalom.

The Universal Law of Justice | Worldly Injustice Subject To Divine Correction |
Cheating on Taxes

Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-15-2001

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I do so admire your diligence, hard work, and unity regarding the upcoming conference. Your experience together is somewhat forcing you to apply my lessons. Your unified experience is a good exercise to take out into the world amongst your fellows. You can open any book or listen to any teacher, but without experience, the words you take in are somewhat meaningless. Experience is your teacher. This week we will continue on with justice. I turn my time over to Emulan.

EMULAN: Greetings, friends. Every day I live, I grow more in appreciation for Father's amazing works. I have seen firsthand how justice in our universe operates. Justice really has an energy all its own, but you can certainly count on Father's tireless workers to be ever vigilant in upholding the universal 'law of justice.' If experience is your teacher, then certainly will you discover that no matter what the situation is, divine justice always comes out ahead.

A man who would perhaps cheat on his taxes, and seemingly get away with it, will certainly have that immediate satisfaction of things going his way, yes. Those that know that he had escaped any penalty from cheating might view him as 'lucky;' they might even consider cheating on their own taxes. What these individuals do not know is that although the government does not know he has committed a crime, the universe does, and many events will be set into place for the corrective action to occur.

You might feel you can transgress any law and escape the penalty, but know that through the natural outworking of universe intelligence, new lessons are forthcoming. Almost all injustice is corrected. Man's injustice can be divinely corrected. These corrections are not to strike fear into the hearts of mortals but to continue the momentum of growth regarding the universe as a whole and the experience of the God-in-time - the Supreme Being.

Those with a clean spiritual foundation that transgress natural law know that corrective action is forthcoming. They are not surprised by it, nor believe that God is an unjust Father - but on the contrary, that He is a very careful and loving Father. Those individuals with a cluttered background of many religious faiths believe that God will punish them, and their own guilt is an added barrier to receiving divine assistance or correction.

It would seem that the world is filled with injustice and that nobody really does anything about it. Most individuals spend time in just complaining, as if that will bring about justice. Divine justice is working throughout everything. All worldly injustices are subject to divine correction. You probably won't see it firsthand but believe me, with time you will know how awesome and organized Father is.

You have it within you to know if you have transgressed divine law or not. Your indwelling Adjuster brings divine laws to light and arranges for correction, even if you have transgressed unintentionally. Look not on these corrections as a 'punishment from the gods' but as a lesson from which to learn and become stronger and better equipped as a universe citizen.

The man who has cheated on his taxes may not deal with mortal corrective action, but certainly will divine correction be forthcoming. This is not threatening, no; this is a safeguard to you and to the worlds of time and space.

Take the Lucifer Rebellion for example: Without force, or the hand of a 'stern and angry God,' the universal laws were put into operation. The rebellious ones were allowed to be subject to universal law. This is divine insurance that the 'son of self-love' was unable to further spoil Father's children. Divine law is protection for the universe citizens. I thank you.

I am ABRAHAM. We are grateful to you our brother, Emulan, for a well-thought-out lesson. I will accept a few questions.

DIANA (SANDY): Abraham, can you help me to understand the difference between 'going with the flow' and self-nourishment - taking actions for self? Do you understand?

(Abraham: Can you specify?) Sandy: There is a release of self, of action, for oneself in the flow of life, it seems. There is an action when doing things for oneself, whether they are 'in service or in alignment with the Father's will?' or not. To me, it seems to be a distinction between the two? That is what I am asking. (Abraham: Are you speaking of self-nourishment versus selfishness?) Sandy: Yes. There is a distinction, I guess. I don't know how else to put it except for there needs to be action for oneself; yet, without being selfish?

ABRAHAM: There is a line drawn between self-gratification and administering unto oneself. We all know that the Master taught self-forgetfulness, yes, but certainly did He need to do those basic things to occupy the mortal form. I believe the Master was so balanced in this area because His most effective self-ministry was spending time in stillness with the Father. A good relationship with Father is asking to be spirit led. In being spirit led you find areas which need attention and action. This world today seems to be overridden with self-indulgence, and that is mostly due to an empty spiritual life. The line between self-glorification and service can even be confused where one can find a great deal of gratification from serving one's fellows; yet, who perhaps takes credit for acts of service – when the mindset should have been 'doing work for the glory of God.' Your own internal Indweller, Diana, is the best measurement. In other words, how do these actions 'taken for self' feel – are they feeding the spirit? or are they compensating for some emptiness or painful past event? Are they spiritually energizing? Many individuals will feel guilty or non-productive in doing something that just feeds the self. Feeding self, if done in moderation, can be physically and mentally uplifting. If overdone though, then there is imbalance and narrowed vision of what is around you, and there is limited experience. Is this answering? (Sandy/Diana: Yes.) Abraham: You do well, Diana. Have not worry. Another question?

CALVIN: Abraham, I understand from this lesson tonight that it is probably a delicate subject, on the Teachers side, to teach us mortals about justice as a repercussion from our actions because you don't want us to 'do good so we don't get punished' – but rather, you want us to 'do good because it is good.' That takes the right intent of doing good, not so we look good. I am sure that is a delicate subject to teach, and yet Emulan has explained in a way that we will remember – to lead us, not to force us. Thank you.

ABRAHAM: Yes. The universal laws are designed to protect its citizens. As we come to know the goodness of God, to give Him anything less than the best of ourselves is quite unfulfilling for us. We find it our honor to uphold these universal laws, yes, for we not only love God but 'one another as brothers and sisters' in the family of God. Teaching on this topic is delicate, yes, for we do not want to be, as are many of the churches today, coercive and unfruitful guilt-producing. We do not wish to enforce divine law but to only make you aware that you are protected. And, that the universe is indeed orderly not rigid – always moving, growing, and progressing, yes. Is this helping? (Calvin: Greatly. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. One more question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I am getting ready to go down to be with my family in New Mexico, and I am really weary. The lesson on 'logic' helped, and I have been trying to use that in my day-to-day interactions. I am doing my stillness and my meditation in the afternoon. I have been so ever aware of the Thought Adjuster and wanting to serve well. That is probably enough to help me. If you can give me some guidance as I set off for my journey? Your words help me so much.

ABRAHAM: Certainly, my daughter. I am perceiving you to be somewhat fearful of the inevitabilities of this mortal life. Yes, these inevitabilities are something you cannot control and this does bring about some anxiety and confusion. You are spending a great deal of time in service and helping others; but these situations, these real things in mortal life, are somewhat depressing. It is hard to maintain an uplifted spirit when these natural inevitable mortal things are going on around you. Illness is a mortal reality that many will deal with. Old age is something many will deal with. These things are out of your control, but the reality of them is perhaps overshadowing your spirit. Making the best out of every situation is not always possible. (Miriam laughing ... "but I try.") Abraham: Sometimes it is perfectly acceptable to cry or have some depression – it is natural. And hopefully, with the continuing exercise to align your will with Father's, this will part the clouds of reality to allow the sun-rays of divine possibilities to shine through. You are a strength, my daughter, to many. It is acceptable to take a break and have reversion every once in a while. Is this helping? (Miriam: Yes. Thank you very much.) Abraham: You're welcome.

I leave you with my continued love and support. I would ask you this week to think about the value of experience; are you a willing participant? or do you drag your heels. View events in your world – even though they seem to have no divine repercussions I ask that you ponder how Father might be intervening; and, applying divine justice. Until next week, shalom.

The Universal Law of Truth | Divine Truth, Which Leads to Ultimate Truth | Father's Truth

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am once again happy to visit a place that I consider to be a home away from home. I feel uplifted by our association – like a brother who would go out to work and return to a safe and caring home. I thank you for always making me feel welcome. There are many things that occur to you in the world, and certainly, no one understands that like your family here does.

Many this week have experienced for themselves the universal 'law of justice.' We know we are each subject to divine law; we know we are each protected by it. It would seem that justice takes on many forms, and through the use of your spirit guidance you can learn those forms and take action therefrom.

Many set out on a quest in the name of justice; and at times there are underlying agendas individuals would wish to have fulfilled. There are some who may set out to take justice into their own hands for perhaps selfish reasons. You can measure your own intent by asking yourself: "Am I taking action for justice for the glory of Father? or myself!" Father will have assignments for you which will set divine correction in action, yes! yet I say, be careful of how you define justice.

In our morontia training, always following the lessons on the universal 'law of justice' is the 'law of truth.' Truth is measured in many different ways and very few people will have the same views on truth. Truth is subject to the individual's understanding, yes, but 'ultimate truth' is 'God's truth' and, an ever-inspiring universal law. In this age of self-help or self-compensation for hard experience, we find that many mold the truth according to how it will bring about self-satisfaction. Unfortunately, many times this is not truth, but still, individuals will cling to it with all their might.

A person who has had a difficult childhood, for instance, may see the partial truth – that their caretakers were selfish or inadequate. And in their firmly-held beliefs they live their lives as a victim; they can make excuses for self-indulgence (or self-destruction), believing that they deserve such things for compensation because of their experience. If this truth (supposed truth) is too firmly held onto, there is not forthcoming light into the matter; there is not forthcoming divine truth to broaden such a narrowed vision.

If such a one (with difficult childhood) would truly seek the universal law of divine truth and Spirit guidance, then could they discover 'ultimate truth' and have broadened vision. Perhaps they realize their caretakers were acting out of ignorance, or just repeating a life pattern which they themselves had experienced. Yes, a 'victim' can turn into a 'victor' – they can see an ever-expanding reality of truth. And yes, as has been said many times: "The truth will set you free."

Allow your truth to be subject to divine definition. Do not be so quick to cast a dark shadow of what you think the truth really is. Always hold out for Father to shine the best light on any given situation. Be flexible in what you believe to be true. Individuals use truth in different ways; it is used as a weapon, a shield, a springboard, and a shelter from reality.

Mortal truth is not the final word, no! and we should be with gratitude to know that sooner or later the ultimate truth always stands out. There is nothing hidden, especially with the recently restored circuits. All things that are not true will be brought to everyone's attention. Be not afraid, my friends, of the ultimate truth. To embrace divine truth is liberating, and is clearing a divine path.

In your expression of truth do not make it your duty to force it upon everyone you know – rather, realize they have their own truth – truth as they have experienced it; and everyone is at differing levels of comprehending truth reality. It is not anyone's duty to force truth. You can allow your truth to be known 'if requested,' yes, but even the Master did not throw pearls before swine. His truth was straightforward; and painful at times, yes, but never did He force it upon anyone. Truth was not Jesus' weapon, nor shield, but a light in the darkness.

This week, I ask you to ponder your definition of truth – is it subject to divine enhancement? or is it rigid and closed-in, unmoving? Is your truth, the truth? How closely can you stand by what is true and how might you, on a daily basis, bend the truth? A few questions?

ELLANOR: I have a request for a personal assessment from Kathy McCord.

ABRAHAM: My daughter, I perceive you to be somewhat weary on your life path. It would appear that the same mortal patterns continue to repeat themselves. Some days you are equipped to take on the world, and you are disappointed when the world does not respond. You are a diligent student in spiritual matters. In fact, there may be too much of a clutter of religious spiritual ideas. I would recommend that you set aside all your beliefs for a time and just be with a clean foundation of just you and God. In seeking quiet moments, you can discover those things of spiritual value to set upon your foundation. First and foremost, though, you would do well to look upon God as a Friend, Father, Advisor, and Comforter. He is not 'far off' tending to worldly affairs, but more-so He dwells within your very being. It is said: "With God all things are possible." Renew your relationship with Him by seeking stillness time - not so much textbook study-time, but just time with you and your indwelling Father. Overall, my child, you do well. Have not fear of the new things ahead, for they are only opportunities to learn, grow, and be of ministry to others. Keep an open heart and mind. You do well. That is all. Another question?

CALVIN: Charlie had a question he'd like us to ask. You are probably already aware of it, but for record's sake: There has been some discussion in the Teaching Mission about our 'seven psychic circles' which the Urantia text teaches us about. Furthermore, the discussion is about the many mortals wanting to know 'where we are' in these circle attainments. Charlie would like your understanding if that is a good thing and encouraged by the Teachers, or is discouraged? We seem to have two different viewpoints. It is not to say one is right or wrong, but maybe it would be good to further discuss this. We have experienced both sides of this in this Teaching Mission. I can really see what you are saying in this lesson - that as we express our understanding, we should stay open and be flexible for a greater understanding; and, be open to being wrong in our experience or viewpoint. I will leave it at that.

ABRAHAM: In the beginning days of this stateside Teaching Mission we (unseen Teachers) were a curious bunch to you, our students. There were all kinds of mortal ideals and expectations. The seeking of spiritual names was popular on a sort of mystical level. To begin our Mission these curiosity questions were answered - and with time, education and growth, we had hoped that our students would focus on the assignments and not so much on finding ego-fulfillment or proof that we truly do exist. The 'seven psychic circles,' which the Urantia Book teaches, is not a grading system for mortals; it is not to show how well one is doing so that one can quit searching. It is not a level of acceptance into Father's family. Understanding the psychic circles is so much more than you could imagine; and usually, you do not find out what circle you are in until you are no longer asking. We are in hopes that you do not seek out of curiosity, but to just accept you are a cosmic citizen who is ever-striving Paradise-ward. We are hoping for the mindal advancement. And, we have faith in our students - that they come to a place where curiosity questions are not asked. We hope for the deep-mind training it takes to ask the really important questions like: "How can I be a better parent? What can I do to serve in Father's kingdom? How can I deal with my neighbor who is against me?" You can always ask what circle you are in, but do not be disappointed or discouraged if it is not what you thought. [laughter.] Is this helping? (Calvin: Yes. Thank you for this updated viewpoint and advice.)

SIMON: Abraham, I appreciate the lessons and the deep-mind training that goes along with it. How can I be a better boss, and how can I work better for Father in this Correcting Time?

ABRAHAM: I do perceive you to be a wonderful employer. A good boss always expresses faith in his employees. He allows them to do those important tasks that you would usually do yourself because 'you want them done right.' To let an employee know that they are important, and that you have faith in them, leads to their loyalty to you. To work alongside your employees, side-by-side, is a show that you are 'one of them' and not 'above them.' In turn, they feel as if they are part of a family and not just another cog in the production machine. Their quality of work is better because they know they are working toward something bigger than themselves. Is this helping? (Simon: Yes. Thank you.)

CALVIN: I guess I will ask a little more about the spiritual names – have you found it has been helpful for us to know those names? or is this a handicap because of our curiosity-seeking? It seems like an important issue. What is your assessment on how we have done with these spirit names?

ABRAHAM: I believe the names were helpful in making individuals feel like they were known, personally, by God. They have been the source of curiosity-seeking, yes; and on the other hand they have been as a gentle kiss on the forehead, by Father. As we have evolved in this Teaching Mission we are seeing more and more that the names are not being asked for out of mystical-seeking, but out of a desire for closeness to Father. The fanfare for spiritual names is declining. Yes. One more question?

INERA: Abraham, it is good to be here. In the last six months I have lost seven members of my almost immediate family. Is there any rhyme or reason for that? or is it 'just the way it is?'

ABRAHAM: Greetings, Inera. I am happy to see you here again. I am not able to explain your loss but only to remind you that to the mortal, death seems overwhelming and final. To lose so many family members all at once is unusual. But know, my daughter, that this occurs in several families all over the world, and while it is seemingly tragic and sad, Father does minister to each family in a way to make them see the true value of living. He wants you to see that death is not only a transition – but that the life, which was here for a comparatively short time, was filled with value. No, death is not an ending. For those that die, life goes on much like it is for those still living the mortal life. In each family tragedy, there is an abundance of lessons – and most of the time, a deepening of relationships with those you still have. Upon awakening from mortal death, you do take stock of your life; and hopefully, you will not only find regrets but lessons of love and, of Father's steady hand of guidance. Do not worry my daughter, for all are safe and carefully tended to, just as are you. Have not regrets for this mortal life but, make the most of each moment as if it were in dedication to our Father and those you have lost. You know this is what your loved ones would want for you.

With that said, I will take my leave. I would express to you each that I am growing with more love for you as each week goes by. Until next week, shalom.

Embrace Truth And Disperse It With Wisdom
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 01-29-2001
Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I love our dialogue here this evening. Each one's outlook builds onto each individual's view of truth.

When our Master walked the Earth, He did need to build a strong and courageous character. His life's experience trained Him for His life's work. He could see as a child how adults complicated, twisted or bent the truth. He could also see that 'as a child' He had not the authority to state the truth as He envisioned it. It was then true, and still is today, that those of experience are perceived somewhat of an authority with truth, where the young are not taken seriously. But in all actuality, more children are truthful than are adults.

The Master could be found giving hard truth to an individual - or depending on who He was talking to, give gentle fragments of truth. The Master could draw out people and perceive the flavor of their personality - and from that, He could give His truth. Also, He recognized that some individuals would only accept His words through straight hard truth - truth with passion and power. Yet to those individuals who were bound by ego, He was careful in how He put forth His words. He knew it did no good to force truth on those who would not have it.

Just as it is today, your universe Caretakers give you truth in a manner that you will receive it best. Sometimes truth is best received through life's hard lessons, and sometimes it is through small insignificant daily tasks. On the Master's lips was always this small prayer: "Father, your will, not mine, be done. Allow me to be a vessel for your works."

Jesus looked at truth as an everflowing current of energy, subject to transformations. He told His truth as He perceived it from the Father - through much time spent in devotion and stillness. His communication with Father was instant and always accurate. He could minister to His fellows through the eyes of Father in a manner that Father saw fit, not how He personally would perceive them.

The Master could have defended Himself before Herod and Pilate at the end of His mortal life, with His truth, yes, but He was more aligned with the Father's will - and if it would have caused spiritual progress, He would have spoken up. The Master could accept the hard truth of mortal life, yes - but this does not mean He felt no effects from it. Many times did the Master cry out and did reconcile within himself to Father's ultimate truth. While there was the mortal pain of truth, there was always a divine comforting explanation.

You, our Teaching Mission students, have been called the ambassadors of truth. You have had opportunity to share, and you have done well. You are learning those techniques of the Master:

- To draw an individual out and discover the nature of their character, and how they will best receive the good news.
- To rely upon that ever-moving flow of Spirit direction and allowing Father to use you as a vessel for His works.

- To learn to reconcile yourself with divine truth and be accepting of the hard lesson, but also knowing a hard lesson is not always necessary for learning about truth.

It has been said, only the strong have the courage to speak the truth without fear of repercussion. Many fear sharing their truth, thinking they will possibly receive ridicule or loss of love or respect; they tiptoe around the truth as if they were protecting themselves. If the Master would have done this, His life may have been prolonged, yes, but the Master's love for Father, and the desire to do His will, would not allow Him to protect Himself. He relied upon Father to use Him in any way that would be best suited for the whole. Logic told the Master how to deliver His truth, but always He relied upon 'Father' for the words.

Many historical books would describe the Master as meek. Many believe that to be meek is character weakness. Our definition of meek is to not be self-saving or self-serving, but to be more focused on; "How can I best serve?" In that definition, the Master was meek, yes, but in no way is He to be perceived as a 'gentle and holding back man,' one who is afraid to hurt others; afraid to 'be seen as a mean person.' Jesus was the best example of a mortal who was empowered by those on high – one who would embrace truth and disperse it with wisdom. His life was certainly an example of true beauty.

Beauty will be our topic for discussion next week. A few questions.

CALVIN: I gather, Abraham, you're trying to get us to understand how to lovingly disperse truth in a way that would be most effective to the hearer; and, to use our logic to know how best to do that. I feel this is a lesson I need to brush up on.

ABRAHAM: Yes, my son, you are well experienced in this area. There is a goodness within the human soul that desires to save people from their own misguided thinking. There is not an allowance for the natural evolution of the mind to take place. In dispersing our truth, the best we can hope for is to plant seeds. We can be available to tend to those seeds; we can answer questions and encourage – but we can't force those seeds to grow! You never know when someone may be planting seeds in your direction; therefore must we always stay open to that flowing current of divine truth, yes. Another question.

AZSURAY: Yes, Abraham. I have just been served papers regarding my being excommunicated from the Mormon church because of my beliefs, being contrary to theirs, in the Urantia Book. I am very eager to put forth truth here; but maybe with your wisdom, and with your understanding of me, you could give me advice on how I should handle this that would be pleasing unto the Lord? I know that is a difficult question. Sorry. I humbly ask you this.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. My daughter, you already know how to handle this. The Master, even in front of His accusers, still held a deep affection for them. He saw not their ignorance but their status as children of God – as His brethren. He would not use this time to rebuke their ignorance – but if they would have had it, He would have lovingly ministered unto them. This event can be used to plant many seeds but you must use wisdom and rely upon the words of your God within. Sometimes it is just random 'life-experience' that leads you to one religion or another, one faith or another. Remember that everyone is acting from a place that they know best. You are a daughter of grace, and I have faith in you to carry on with your highest light. Yes.

If there are no more questions, we would remind you to study on the different aspects of truth and prepare yourselves for the upcoming lesson on beauty. As always, my love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

True Beauty | Our Best Source Of It Lies In Our Association With Each Other
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 02-05-2001

I am ABRAHAM. There are few things more beautiful to behold than the faithful gathering together in search of higher truths and better ways to live those truths, yes. It behooves some mortals to have to reconcile themselves with truth, but once it is understood that it is for a higher good then it becomes easier and the lessons more advanced.

I realize that living in the flesh makes spiritual things seem far away or fairytale-like. In your busy lives it is all too easy to be dragged down by negativity. The many decisions you must make every day are influenced by how you perceive life. If one should perceive life as negative and dark, then all their actions taken would be from that particular view. Every day you face spiritual poisons, yes; and many (without spiritual light) become burdened and depressed. Some are so overwhelmed with merely surviving that they miss the reason of their whole existence.

True beauty is like fuel for everyday living – it can take the sharp edges off of the darkness that you experience. Identifying real beauty in everyday living draws forth meanings and values from the darkness. One who can see beauty in everything is a light in the darkened world.

What is beauty? Beauty is experiencing those mortal moments that bring you closer to God. Beauty is the hope that love overcomes hate, good overcomes evil, and light overcomes darkness. When you have become burdened by the world's pressures and feel depressed and without liberty, then you have gone too long without divine beauty. Beauty is a redirecting of focus. It is that spirit-energy that refuels you to go beyond coping with your circumstances, to actually being challenged by them.

Where do you find this energy source? Ask yourselves: "What is it that makes me remember God? "What are those things that refocus my attention from darkness to light? "What are those things that make me exclaim – there is a God, and He is with all power and perfection!"

Certainly, there is beauty in nature that brings a calmness to the mind and leads us to contemplate the intricate designs found within nature. We find beauty in science and how all living things have a perfect design. We find beauty in truth, and that creates light in our unknowingness. To be with anything less than truth can create fear in the imaginings of our minds. I do believe our best source of beauty lies within our association with each other. Small kindnesses done does cause us all to refocus our minds back on Father's plan and purpose, Father's love and caring.

How beautiful it is to put all your effort into raising a child, and then see that child live a loving and conscientious life. To see that child care for others and have passion to create good in the world – yes, that is real beauty. To become involved in a stranger's life, to assist without thought for one's own welfare, is inner-spirit beauty. To assist your fellows without thoughts of self-aggrandizement or receiving credit, is beauty; and this beauty you create is helping others to refocus their thoughts back on Father. A mind stayed on God is the strongest link in a chain of good.

We know in this mortal life we must find the beauty in those places where there may appear to be none. Beauty is a soul fuel; it is hope for the hopeless, light in the darkness, encouragement for the discouraged; it is to know that with God, all things are possible. To refuel with beauty reminds you of the awesome Caretakers that know everything about you, who do all they can to assist you and are never failing in their love for you.

This week, find those things which redirect your focus back on to Father. When the world seems to be too much, find your source of beauty. While seemingly negative things might deplete your being of energy, note how divine beauty restores and refreshes your outlook. What can you do to be a source of beauty? How can you live so that your fellows may redirect their focus back to Father?

I cannot take questions this evening but look for me during the week in your moments of contemplation. Know that I will be honored to assist you in any way I can. I find you each to be a source of beauty and fuel to my soul. Know that my love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Focus On Appreciation Of Beauty | What We Focus On Is What We Attract

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am quite moved by your comments and sharing on the topic of beauty. In the giving, beauty is created – and like energy, is moving and growing. To recondition the mind to have the ability to recognize beauty in all things is a source of power.

You have the responsibility of sharing the good news, and when beauty is present in your life you attract others. Like all good things, beauty comes from the Father and goes back to the Father. To live a life in recognition of divine beauty is to incorporate worship into everyday living. To redirect your focus back to Father is an open door to numerous possibilities, for what you focus on is what you attract.

As has been said, those who would focus on fear draw fear into their lives. The fear is not so much stemming from reality, but the damage is occurring to the mind and body anyway because that is the firmly-held belief.

To suspect the universe is against you, then most certainly will it be true in your life. If you believe that your fellows do not have your best interest at heart, then this is true for you. Even though this is not reality, you are drawing this negative force to you. This negative force is where you take action from – you react from what you believe to be happening, even though this is non-reality.

To make effort to find everyday beauty leads us to ponder the divine goodness. The goodness leads us to love the Father. The love leads us to worship. To live your life with overtones of worship leads you to believe you are divinely loved and cared for – you believe the universe is with you, not against you. Do you see, your focus begins to draw good to you – you have increased trust for Father and His divine staff; you view life as if you are worthy of good things, deserving of divine things.

This week, I ask you to focus on appreciation for those divinely beautiful things. Find time to ponder Father's divine goodness, and seek true worship. Who is worship really for? How is your focus redirected from worldly things to the spiritual? How better can you handle everyday negative events? To have genuine understanding of truth and beauty is a pathway to knowing goodness. To have understanding of the goodness of Father leads us to find our goodness within and our potential goodness to come. A few questions?

NATHAN: Abraham, first I would like to comment that at my wedding a couple weeks ago there was a very strong spirit there. I felt very strong affirmations from that spirit that what was happening was correct. If it was you, then thank you. If it wasn't you – if you could give the proper person my 'appreciation.' Secondly, I was wondering if I could get a personal assessment.

ABRAHAM: Yes. One moment. I have been informed that your sense of a strong spirit was none other than the Spirit of Truth, our beloved sovereign Christ Michael. My son, you must know by now how much you are loved and looked after by our Divine Caretakers. You are on a good path, have not worry. There will be times of trial that test your footing upon this path but do not waver, do not regress, do not have doubt. You are building a strong spiritual foundation and experience is your best teacher. Have patience with the Father's ways. Have patience with yourself. You are growing, and as with any growing man you must take in that spiritual nutrition that builds the muscles of faith. You are doing well, Nathan, my son. Remember who you are and where you are going. Is this helping? (Nathan; Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: Another question?

SIMON: Yes, Abraham. I have been encouraged by positive events this week and making contact with folks along the path of their receiving the Urantia Book – Margarita, for one; and Diane, for another. I would like to learn a little bit more how Thought Adjusters work, and I wonder if you would like to comment on that. My question would be: How do I get to know my Thought Adjuster better?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. This is a time for spiritual upliftment; and of course, people will seek you out because of the way you live your life of faith. Yes, this is an active time for many. It is wise to choose a simple path when guiding others to the Urantia Book. A relationship with the Thought Adjuster is so very close to you that you can almost overlook it. The Father Fragment is the voice that encourages you to forge ahead when you want to quit. He is the courage to stand out when you wish to hide. He is the buffer against your own negative self-talk. He is your closest ally and defender of all that is true, beautiful, and good. It is the human will that blocks Him in His work. It is the desire of the mortal to save self when Father has promised: "If you lose yourself surely you will be saved." To better know the indwelling Father, you can start by really listening to those inner feelings. Release your desire to see what you would like to have happen, to looking forward to what Father has for you. Small and simple steps towards Him leads to great character changes. If you can have trust, then certainly will you be more aware of Father's works in your daily lives. If you can have patience and faith, then guidance will come with less struggle and more accuracy. Father is always aware of your needs and desires, and He incorporates that in with His lessons for you. Yes, our supreme goal is to become one with our divine Monitors, for He works ever diligently towards that goal. Yes. Good question, Simon. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, I just love you and want to thank you for these lessons. I had the biggest wave of love for Rachel during my drive coming over here tonight, and I remember how she used to ask how Joshua (her brother - Thern Blackburn) was doing. [Editor's note: Rachel - Ida M. Young - was one of the Woods Cross original members who had recently passed away from old age complications.] I know if she were here, she would say: "We have some guests" and would introduce them. So I will do the honors - we have Jason and Dave here on our question night, and we welcome them. Abraham, have you got any gossip on Rachel and how she is doing? And, can you just let her know we send our love.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. One moment. I do know that once we have linked hearts and minds, we are always connected, as you are still connected with Rachel. She cares very deeply about all that has been started on this world; and yet, she is quite busy in training for future assignments. And you know she always sends her love. I also welcome our guests and would have you know you can be at ease to ask a question.

JASON: Hello, Abraham. (Abraham: Greetings.) Jason: I am new here and have been directed to this. May I ask for a personal assessment, if that is possible.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. My son, I am happy you have finally made it here. I know your journey has been one of difficulty, but you have prevailed. You are understanding the difficulties to be lessons, and have learned well. Your enthusiasm is energizing and I see you firmly grounded in a strong foundation of faith and trust in our Supreme Caretakers. You have experienced many trials in which Father has shown you the values and meanings therefrom. You are a positive light wherever you go. You have a wonderful attitude that says: 'I am teachable and excited for every new day.' You know quite a few individuals that seem to stray towards a darker side, and your example set before them is counteracting the darkness and helping in the redirecting of their focus. Well done. You have much to do, my son. Be at ease! and know that the trials you have experienced are the catalyst for divine joy. Thank you for your courage to accept this personal assessment. Is this helping? (Jason: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome.

To you each – I am as always, touched by your faithfulness and love for the Divine. You are examples of all the good things that Father has to offer. I am with more love for you each time we can meet. Until next week, shalom.

Without Learning The Law of Acceptance It is Difficult to Know Father's Will Abraham, 02-19-2001

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I look forward to meeting with you here each week. I learn as much as I teach. I love the study on the universal laws. The momentum of time, space, eternity and destiny, are fueled by the universal laws. I appreciate the universal laws of truth, beauty, and goodness because they start with you from the beginning of existence and carry you onward through eternity. Truth is our path. Beauty helps us to appreciate the path, and goodness urges us to move forward upon the path, yes.

We have discussed 'redirecting focus through worship;' and following this, it is standard to discuss the universal Law of Acceptance in the doing of Father's will.

A child who attempts to leave from her home for the first time is filled with the fear of unknowingness. She desires to reach her destination, yes, but is loath to leave the parent's side. The unknowingness creates images of unsafety in her mind, and she cannot help clinging to her parent's leg. With a little coaxing and encouragement from a wise parent, they can get the child to go a little beyond the front yard.

The child, however, who is skilled in life's possibilities might feel better equipped to handle those things that might come before him/her. With education and encouragement, the destination is not so fearful. The child is equipped with some knowledge and feels that inner confidence and strength – a spirit-connectedness.

Your experiences today are your lessons to becoming skilled cosmic citizens in the universe. That 'spirit-connection' is the encouragement you need to venture out beyond your own front yard. Father uses various methods to educate His children, and although some of these methods seem painful and trying, He is equipping you to have less fear and feel more at ease in the universe.

A parent who dares not send forth their child out to have experience is telling the child that he or she is not to be trusted and not equipped to handle life's circumstances; in this, the child has little or no self-confidence and lives in a world of unknowingness and fear.

Father would not purposefully put you in painful circumstances, no! but experience at times does turn out to cause pain. Our Father, the good Parent, puts before us those values and meanings that we need to learn from life's experiences. He trusts us in our own ability and intentions. He trusts the universal laws will bring knowledge and balance. He encourages us to have faith in ourselves.

Many individuals would choose to stay behind closed doors in an effort to feel safe – safe from experience; safe from the pain that experience can bring. There is not much spiritual progress in this kind of safety; there is only the fear of unknowingness. You cannot gain strength from not exercising. You cannot reap the benefits of meanings and values if you shun experience.

The universe does set up certain circumstances that teach you cosmic citizenship. I ask, how can you learn when in a state of resistance and fear? How can you progress spiritually when you do not make effort to bravely face the road before you? Acceptance is key to gaining meanings and values from your experience. To accept the lessons before you is not an invitation to suffering, no! but to teach strength, endurance, and self-confidence. Acceptance is the practice of letting go of what you think you know, to being committed to staying teachable.

The world's technology seems to promote a life of ease, and many have such resistance to anything that takes real effort. 'Acceptance' asks you not to do anything but be observant and spiritually connected so that you can find Father's meanings and values in all experience; that you can have confidence in your abilities as a mortal child of God, an equal cosmic citizen.

So many say: "I would do the will of God if only I knew what it was." Without understanding the law of acceptance, you will definitely have a difficult time discerning Father's will. To have acceptance of those mortal things that befall you is to become observant of the lessons therein; and through spiritual connection, being able to discern Father's will in any given moment.

To choose to be a doer of the will is not so much being submissive or laying down to be used as a pawn, no; choosing to be a doer of Father's will is allowing your desired outcomes to fall away – and yes, in a sense, losing yourself to slowing down, becoming observant, not acting so much on impulse or emotion, but connecting with the divine Parent and receiving guidance. To be overcome with emotion is to push forth your desired expectations and stumbling over Father's will.

Our Master taught self-forgetfulness, and in this, there was the acceptance of Father's will, self-confidence in the ability to carry out that will, peace in heart and mind that leaves you open to meanings and values – and yes, new understandings.

Forget not this week to stay with worship. Strengthen your divine connection. Know that our good Parent is urging us onward – through experience.

Can you trust in a Parent who has created the universes and their inhabitants, and oversees the overall collective functioning? Do you shun mortal experience so you will be kept safe? Or, are you observant to the lessons and open to spiritual progress! Can you live in this world as a divine being and feel truly at home? Can you say if choosing the 'divine will' comes with a cost? and if so, what is that cost?

No questions this evening. Just know that I am ever appreciative to our divine Parent that He has allowed me to be with you. As always, my love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Each week we meet I am more uplifted and energized by your continual striving to grow. We are each in a state of becoming, and how blessed are we that we have one another to share and expand concepts and ideas. One who is teachable is open to his fellow's ideas; he may not agree with the ideas but he can accept the fact that his fellows are his brothers and sisters in the family of God.

As you progress spiritually you find it your ultimate joy each day to dedicate yourself to the doing of Father's will. What a relief from daily pressure to hold up the day and offer it to Father knowing it will not always be a struggle but a welcome release from pressures, a clearing of the mind, and cleansing of intentions.

Being born of the spirit makes you a new creature who strives to live according to the will of God. You may fall short at times, yes, but certainly, you find you cannot return to the old ways. In this commitment there is acceptance of sonship with God. You are not so much losing anything, but becoming a new creature and gaining endless possibilities.

Even where I am now, I must remember the divine law of acceptance. It is quite easy to defer from Father's way, to my own. I find my own understanding to be confining and limited, whereas if I am aligning with the universal law of acceptance I am in the ever-flowing current of divine information, and my understanding of my everyday realities are expanded. Therefore, I do not find that this universal law comes with a cost but certainly do you put self-mastery into practice.

In this area of acceptance, I would like to elaborate a bit more on a personal level: We can accept the divine path and Father's perfect plan; we can accept our fellows for their unique personalities; we can accept our present position in life – but so much of this is increasingly more difficult when one is without some degree of self-acceptance. Father did not coordinate the mortal life so that you would be self-satisfied continually, no, He designed the overall pattern so that we may always strive and work towards Him.

I speak not of self-satisfaction, but self-acceptance. So many regret the past, harbor guilt, and are self-loathing. So many cannot accept the fact that they have simply been a learning child in an ever-expanding experiential universe. With such restrictive thinking, there is practically zero tolerance when it comes to our own flaws or shortcomings. With the law of acceptance, we can believe that even in our mistakes Father has revealed to us the meanings and values of them – that He has never punished us for our misunderstanding like we have punished ourselves. Many mortals continually focus on their negative character aspects while overlooking the personal strides made in their efforts.

As a small child learning to ride a bike, a father would run alongside the child helping to steer the bike. And at an appropriate time when the child is ready, the father would release the bike and allow the child to go it alone. Does the father know of the possibilities of the child's wrecking and falling? and possibly becoming injured? Yes! Can the father continue to run alongside the child? No! Can the father give instructions and encouragement? Of course! Should the child wreck and appear to fail, would the father punish the child? Of course not! The father continues to guide and help the child to develop their own abilities, comforts the child when failure seems apparent, and encourages the child to continue in their efforts.

Father knows you will fall and He stands ready to comfort, guide, and encourage. He is not there to punish or ridicule you when you seem to fail – why would you punish yourself? Can you not accept the fact that you were, are now and will be, a learning child of God? You cannot go from infant to adult without the experience in-between. You must accept yourself as a learning child.

To self-punish or think that God would bestow upon you bad karma is to block meanings and values in experience. Everyday negative self-talk is energy-depleting – it is spiritual stunting and is soulfully abusive. To be so ego-bound that you cannot accept that you have made mistakes is a waste of experiential time that could have been used to discover new meanings and values.

There has to be a point in mortal life where you have moved past all external expectations of what the total person should be, and have a true acceptance of the growing soul that you really are. Father loves you beyond your own ability to comprehend, and accepts you in your becoming. Do not make that mistake of self-bantering and close off new spiritual possibilities and soul growth. Do not be weighed down by the fact that you still have so much to learn. Rather, be uplifted by the fact that the learning is an adventure that carries you to possibilities far beyond the mortal life.

This week, be watchful of self-punishment. Ponder the difference between self-satisfaction and self-acceptance. How would you gain confidence through self-acceptance? What new possibilities might come from this? I understand we have a few questions. Proceed.

CALVIN: Thank you for the lesson again, Abraham. Also, for the help during the week. Marlin in Michigan called about his wife, Helen. She is on some medication and wants to know if she should increase it, change it, or stop it? Do you have any insight for her? She is going to the doctor to seek further help.

ABRAHAM: That is all I could recommend – that she seek further medical attention. I can only give so much information without a more specific question. I am understanding her to be using other substances that do not allow the other medication to work properly. Much of her medical problems are due to some feelings of unfulfillment, some disturbances of emotion and inability to express herself. My daughter, I do believe you are aware of what underlies your medical issues. If you can honestly look at these emotional disturbances and allow Father to provide you with understanding, then perhaps your medication can be decreased or even stopped altogether, yes. Have not worry. You know your answers lie in the spiritual realm, my daughter. That is all.

SIMON: Abraham, I really enjoyed the Celestial Nights Conference, and I thank you for visiting. [Editor's note: Florida gathering of Teaching Mission students.] I understand there is a 'high spiritual commission' present on Urantia for a few days. I wonder how I can expand and fulfill my commission better. I wonder what other things I might know about interacting with the commission while they are here.

ABRAHAM: I am limited on what I can say on this subject until more of the Teaching Mission has some further understanding on this, but personally speaking to you, Simon my son, I do see you as a great organizer. You have a rare combination of diplomacy and grace. You love what you do and that means everything. You derive happiness from making others happy, and you have inner-knowing on how to understand individuals beyond what they present. Well done. Allow time for further unfolding, yes. Another question?

CALVIN: This is for George Bernard, in Australia. He is getting information directed from Melchizedek to him and he feels pretty sure of directives for a mobilization and organization of the Teaching Mission for certain tasks. Anything you might have to pass forward to him to put on the record?

ABRAHAM: I would only say to you, George, my son, to allow time to show forth fruits in the Mission. We understand the overall excitement, but the Mission must be built on a sturdy foundation. Have patience in the unfolding. Machiventais cautious and desires every day for spirituality to be usable and helpful in mortal living. You are on a good path. Be sure to temper excitement and expectations with patience and allowance for natural unfolding. Overall, my son, you do well. Carry on. One more question?

AZSURAY: Abraham, in a message that you gave me previously to a question about my leadership, you mentioned the word 'instigator.' This has been on my mind since then. Could you expand more on what you meant, please? I hope I am not using it in a negative way.

ABRAHAM: Certainly not, my daughter. Your ability to put ideas into action is a gift. You are, for the most part, working to glorify our Father; and your love for Him gives you the drive to go forth and do good in His name. Yes, 'instigator' is positive in this case. Have not worry, my daughter, Azsuray.

I am coming to a close, for I am slipping. I would express to all of you my unending gratitude and love. Your continued dedication to this work is truly inspiring. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Acceptance Of Our Fellows Does Not Mean Embracing All Ideas and Fads

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-05-2001

Back

I am ABRAHAM. I am amazed every day to view how rapidly the kingdom is growing. We feel such gratitude when we see our efforts have made a difference. I realize events in daily living might lead you to believe that life works against you, but you that carry a deep and abiding faith know the reason for such occurrences and don't usually feel a mortal desperation or anxiety.

In a fast-paced world such as this, we are always overlooking the small blessings. Many mortals tend to look for grand occurrences that say 'God is at work,' and in the process become discouraged when their expectations are not met. There are conditionings of the mind that seem to help you keep up with mortal living.

Societal stimulants and the ever-striving to 'just survive,' does take the focus off of the small blessings; whereas just in noticing small blessings, your focus is set on Father; and in this focus, you are better able to handle those situations that cause inner-turmoil. Yes, in noticing the small blessings you learn to recognize Father's fingerprints.

We have been discussing the universal law of acceptance and the doing of Father's will. We have also covered 'self'-acceptance. I would speak a little on acceptance of your fellows.

I feel such comfort each week when we meet. You welcome me as I am. You know my personality, and you welcome it. I feel at ease to speak my mind without fear of ridicule or rejection. You accept me as your brother, friend, teacher, and fellow sojourner. You may not always agree with what I say but that has no bearing on my level of comfort because I know you love and accept me as I am – as I also do you each.

We meet various individuals daily; and as we learn about them, we can draw closer to them. It is understood that some personalities we clash with and have not commonalities – we may even dislike their character. As we traverse the worlds in our climb toward Paradise, we will meet various individuals who will be different from us. We are in understanding that each one is no doubt a child of God and also on their own path to Father.

I think by now we are in understanding that we cannot force our own way on others or lead them in a way that we see fit. We can express our opinion, we can encourage, yes. But really, at no time should we attempt to change another. We are all Father's children; not one is with more status than another. You can have acceptance of that and have love for your fellows without allowing the differences in personalities to create conflicts – although, conflicts are not really that bad because they can promote and even create growth from new understandings.

Some individuals you know are perhaps not so lovable, but certainly we can accept the fact that they are growing individuals on their own path, and will learn according to their own ability and in their own time. I truly believe that most people have the best of intentions and try to do what is right, in their eyes.

The “holy wars” in the Middle East, for instance, are groups of individuals who are attempting to force their beliefs onto others. You see, each group has the best of intentions and believe they are only 'doing what is right.' Perhaps they are blinded by the fact that every child of God has the same intentions, and that they are only attempting to do what they believe is right.

There are so many divisions in religion, government, and even families – because there is no acceptance of diversity. "If they are not with us, they must be against us," is a familiar saying. Why cannot individuals allow for others to grow in their own time? You cannot force growth or fit a quart into a pint. You can, however, learn to have acceptance – acceptance that everyone is a child of God – and, that they need not look to you as their savior. How beautiful it would be for them to know you uphold them in their differences.

How can one look down upon a brother's blindness when they themselves are also blind! We can be more accepting of our fellows through learning patience and allowing for unfolding. We need not agree with our fellows but we can respect their right to learn and grow in their own time.

As a side note to this lesson on acceptance, I would like to add a few things: There are new concepts born every day and new ideas to ponder; it would seem as if everyone 'has the answers.' I would remind you that you each have your own indwelling Father Fragment that helps you discern truth. In trying to apply the 'law of acceptance' in your lives, know this does not apply to all new concepts or fads. You need not accept every idea that happens to cross your path.

I mean to say that the world's growth is moving so rapidly that we must be clear-minded enough to discern truth from falsehood. You can contemplate new ideas; you can pray and do stillness, yes! but certainly you are equipped to judge for yourself those ideas you will hold true, and those you would let go. In this day and age, new things will come and go. I suggest to be open-minded, yes, but to be cautious in accepting all you see and hear.

I have not time for questions – I am sorry, Simon; perhaps during the week. [laughter.] I would be back next week with a new universal law to discuss and answer your questions. Until then, feel free during the week to call on me in your journaling time. As always, my love goes with you, shalom.

Law Of Personal Liberty – with Integrity | Universal Laws are Equality Enforcers, Safety Measures

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, my friends. I will begin this meeting with a short prayer.

Father, as we stand here today before you, we are with grateful hearts to know that you love and accept us as we are. You have opened up a vast realm of possibilities for growth by fueling us with your all-encompassing, never-ending, always-empowering love and acceptance. For that, we offer up ourselves to you. All that we say, think, feel, and do is offered to you as our gift for your honor and glory to use as you will. Our unending love and gratitude to you always. Amen.

My friends, I am always touched by your conversations. I am made to go further in my thinking and I am made better by knowing you. I feel an important part of our family unit. With your acceptance, I am made to see new possibilities for growth in myself.

As a child, we have all experienced that loneliness of 'unacceptance.' The pain of not being accepted leads us to close off and lose hope. There are many individuals who really never recover from not being accepted or being an outcast of sorts. To stand immovable in unacceptance of someone closes your eyes to their potential. To reject a fellow's personality make-up is to invalidate their experience, their struggles. Unacceptance of others is binding to them like that small child who feels not hope of new possibilities – new growth, yes.

As promised, I will discuss another universal law with you – that is the 'law of personal liberty.'

Liberty is viewed as a gift from the heavens, but I like to look at liberty as if it were a map to our Paradise Father. Many people in today's society are seeing religious values (or spiritual values) as binding or imprisoning the true nature of a mortal; they view spiritual values as a contract to keep – one that promises eternal salvation; and should you choose to break the contract, then of course there is no salvation to be had.

The true nature of the ascending soul is rooted in liberty and free will – the freedom to experience and learn to the best of one's ability and in one's own time. Those who embrace the true nature of liberty use their wisdom gained to assist others to uphold universal laws. Some religions teach their own version of universal laws which are not congruent with the ascending soul. Of course their laws (their claim of universal laws) seem to work against the animal self.

Certainly, universal laws are a natural outworking of evolutionary experience and are in alignment with the ascending soul. The universal laws are looked at as equality enforcers, safety measures, and of great assistance to the growth of the Supreme Being. The 'law of personal liberty' teaches us that Father is calling His children. He wants to be known and made personal to each individual child. The 'law of personal liberty' tells us that 'all choices are ours to make.'

Our Father loves us enough to let us go and find our own way to Him, in our own time, according to our own ability. My friends, there is not need to hurry or be pressured to 'follow a correct path' or risk losing eternal salvation. All things work best when there is no pressure, only peace. Peace allows the best in everyone to rise above turmoil, negativity, and darkness.

There are many aspects to the universal 'law of liberty.' I will mention the very important aspect of 'integrity.' As we mature in our spiritual growth, we learn to sharpen our view of integrity. Integrity is the intention to uphold universal laws and choose to trust in those on high. No doubt does the Father have an overall picture and superior outlook on all that was, is, and will be.

Spiritual liberty with integrity chooses Father, not the ways of self. Of course we will all have hopes and desires, goals and dreams – and Father knows this. He does not ask you to sacrifice any of these things. He only asks that you stand by and allow Him to help, because while He is teaching you, He incorporates others in – to also teach them; and, to create a higher good for the whole.

Remember, we are working for the growth of the Supreme. To be with spiritual integrity is a commitment to upholding universal laws. In your commitment are you more empowered with spiritual gifts to assist in creating greater good.

As we all know, Lucifer and his cohorts promoted a greater self-good. They had not spiritual integrity and worked not for the growth of the Supreme Being. They disregarded universal laws in favor of self-indulgence. Their ultimate craving was to be superior, to be set above others, to gather attention and be praised. Self-fulfillment was their goal, and while liberty allowed them to put their goal into action, their lack of integrity stopped them in their accomplishing it.

Everyone has personal liberty, yes, but not everyone is with integrity. Do you understand how integrity carries you far beyond being just 'a part of the universe' - to becoming 'an equal and integral inner-worker of it?'

This week, ponder spiritual liberty - with integrity, and without integrity. Where does 'self' lead you and, where does 'self-forgetfulness' lead you? Where does your map of personal liberty lead? I can take a few questions.

HARRISON: Abraham, we have a couple of guests here tonight: Harmony, my daughter, and Eric. I thought I would introduce them to you and offer them the opportunity to ask a question if they would like.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Greetings, my friends.

HARMONY: Abraham, I am an animal lover and struggling with the death of my cat. I was wondering where animals go after their death and, do they have any type of connection.

ABRAHAM: Yes, I can understand the love between an animal and its owner. During the life-span of an animal there is experience created; there is love built, lessons learned and, values understood - such as loyalty, companionship, reliance. These experiences are all valuable and are a historical energy that is not wasted, but returned to the safekeeping of the Supreme Being, the God-in-time. There is not a 'pet heaven,' but certainly the animal's personality is a real and valued experience in the eyes of those that loved them. The life-energy from all living things is returned to the Supreme Being, who grows with each and every experience. Death is difficult - whether it is a pet or a family member - and definitely, each situation requires time to reconcile the self with the experience. No living thing is ever lost, and no living thing - no matter how small - is ever not valued. All life is of the utmost importance and never-ending. 'Loss' is a necessary experience of the human condition, unfortunately, but how would we comprehend the value of life without the experience of loss! Rest easy, my daughter. The experience and values you have attained are immeasurable to your spiritual growth. Above all, what we must always remember is love shared. Another question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, you know how the Urantia Book says that the soul is like the child of the Thought Adjuster; and the mind is an entity that gets created - this is how I look at it, or how I interpret that. I've been thinking lately though, about how the seraphim help us in this relationship. The Thought Adjuster and I are building a nice relationship. I feel like I know Him, and lots of room to grow with Him, yes, but I feel like that is a growing soul entity. I certainly know that getting to know our mind can wear us all out. The 'seraphim' and their relationship to the soul, I am not aware of. I am grateful to the seraphim for their help, etc., but is that something that we should look forward to in this life here - you know, building an awareness, knowledge, and a soul awareness of these seraphim? Or is that just sort of like they are entities growing unto themselves and not meant for our awareness. Did that make sense?

ABRAHAM: Yes. You can know the seraphim in this life. As you become spiritually progressed will you learn to recognize various entities – from seraphim and midwayers, to Christ Michael and Mother. As mortals become less absorbed by outside distractions can they turn inward, and – with more of a feeling than a mindal knowledge – recognize various personalities. I am understanding you already have some introduction to a seraphim? (Miriam: Yes.) Abraham: As time passes and you have desire to become better acquainted, then yes, you will be. Does this answer?

MIRIAM: Yes, Abraham. Thank you. You were saying earlier to “stand immovable in unacceptance of someone who closes your eyes to their potential.” In regard to that – you know my friend, Sally; for years she and I’s paths have crossed with light and dark, with health and not health. I have tried to be of service to her; and I have gone through several years lately of just trying to get her with Father, and she is not seemingly interested. She is in such trouble these days and my heart goes out to her. I’m not trying to mess with her business or say what-not about her, but is there any guidance you could give me in Sally's regard? She is so troubled.

ABRAHAM: Yes, there are some individuals you may get to know that are in such opposite perspectives than you. There are some who have not open ears because earlier on they formed an opinion of you. This is not seen as sinful, but in the non-acceptance, there is limitation in potentials or possibilities. It is said: "A man can only attain what he can envision." I would say, even if you cannot envision, but have acceptance for new possibilities, then all the opportunities are open to you. Miriam, my daughter, you have given this sister every benefit of the doubt, every acceptance, every chance to move on a forward path with you as her friend. Any shortsightedness on her behalf does not reflect upon you or your efforts. You know very well that individuals can be offered help, but help cannot be forced upon them. You have made every effort and that is all you can do. Does this mean to give up or quit? No. This means to keep doing what you're doing – but take a non-emotional stance, if you can. In the 'calmness,' perhaps she will be more open. If not, then do not allow this to be your burden. Take what values and meanings you can and be about the Father's business. Does this help? (Miriam: Yes, Abraham. I love you so much. Thank you.) Abraham: And I, you. You're welcome. One more question?

HARRISON: Abraham, concerning universal laws, how many are there and, can you name them? [laughter.]

ABRAHAM: The laws that you learn in mortal experience are about one-third of what we will learn beyond in the morontial life. It is as you experience life that you learn the laws. I would be of no help teaching on laws that you have not had the experience to understand them by. Good question though, Harrison, my son.

With that, I will take my leave. Know that with each week that passes I am with more love for you. Until next time, shalom.

Allowing Liberation Of Others | Spiritual Liberty Is Freedom To Experience

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What an energizing spirit we have here this evening. I can literally feel life flowing. I am always amazed every day at Father's careful attention to the small details in life. I am with a full heart to know He is overseeing my every need. I feel peace knowing He is my source of all I need. I feel truly liberated by Him because in Him I can do all things.

As a mortal man before my enlightenment, I was trained according to the customs of that day. I was made to believe in many man-made laws. I held closely to superstition and had a great fear of the unknown. I was taught that life's sacrifices were pleasing to the gods. Pain and punishment seemed to be my key to the kingdom.

Meeting my mentor and friend, Machiventa(Melchizedek), truly liberated my mind from many misconceptions. I felt not bound by man's laws but leaned more towards learning about God's. To have spent time with such a wonderful teacher taught me that I need not sacrifice anything or bribe the gods for favor. To know Machiventa and to understand the kingdom, truly liberated me.

Many churches have taught its members to not trust in themselves. They have taught they are bound by the animal-self; and if they do not perform certain acts (requirements) then surely they will not be received in the afterlife. To really know Father is to be truly liberated from this thinking. Yes, many experiences you had as a youth have bound you to take certain actions in life's events. As one experiences and matures spiritually do you find spiritual freedom. In spiritual freedom, the mind and heart are opened to divine information.

A couple whose marriage is sanctified in a religious institution may find out years later the marriage was a mistake and they live in daily turmoil and unhappiness; the religious laws of their church keep them bound in their unhappiness. But is this really God's law? Does Father wish for you a life of inner turmoil and unhappiness? No, of course not! Father does, however, want us to have experience – to be open to his divine leadings and to use all our mortal resources. In trying, over and over during these relationships, and when you have still not succeeded, then does He want you imprisoned to an unpeaceful life? No!

Spiritual liberty is yours for the taking. It is not about religious traditions and life sacrifices, but about being free to experience, learn, make mistakes, make corrections.

This week, I ask you to 'go within' and ponder those things that keep you imprisoned, that keep you from feeling free to experience the universe, firsthand. The rules of integrity still apply, yes, but they are not to bind you – they are to cause you to be responsible as a cosmic citizen.

We have discussed the integrity of spiritual liberty and being at ease to enforce spiritual liberty in your own life. I would also like to add – allowing others to also experience their spiritual liberty. Visceral debates have always come from differences, whether it is politics or religion. You have every right to your thoughts and opinions and to seek out your own inner guidance, 'as does your fellows.'

Allowing a brother or sister their liberation to think and feel as they will does keep the lines of communication open in that there are opportunities for spiritual ideas to take root and grow. To shake a finger at your fellows saying: "You are not understanding this topic, please look at it my way," causes defenses to arise. Really, no one has any right to minimize your experience, your opinion, your personality, your way of thinking – and with the 'law of spiritual liberty' you have not the right to take it from them. Yes, this does tie in with the lesson on acceptance.

Even the celestial administrators did not stop a onetime brilliant son (Lucifer) from his act of rebellion and right to free-thinking and self-love. These celestial caretakers allowed events to naturally evolve. They allowed him his liberty to keep the lines of communication open. Of course, those sons rejected it – but as you know, all played out to contain meanings and values.

All of us, from the lowest to the highest order of citizenship, wait upon the will of God. Allowing spiritual liberty and natural evolution gives Father a chance to minister. It gives ascending souls the right to experience and choose for themselves. It keeps a natural flow of spiritual current pointing towards the good. I have time for a few questions.

SIMON: Abraham, I have a question regarding more specifics regarding my commissioning and what I can do to bring about the concept of the place Dalamatia? [Editor's note: In these days, as often is the case when new revelation to this world is forthcoming, there were some in the Teaching Mission who were claiming to 'receive instruction from On-High' regarding this or that – which didn't seem legit to many others within the Mission. At a recent gathering with some Florida Teaching Mission members, there was such 'new' instruction claimed – which posed some concern with many others. Simon's question was regarding his receipt of such instruction. Mission participants were advised by our celestial Teachers to use one's Spirit of Truth, and logic, to decipher what is truth from that which is mere wishful-thinking, miracle-seeking, or grandiose-maneuvering.]

ABRAHAM: I am told to stay away from that subject. I have no doubt, Simon, you are spiritually led and can understand where your focus needs to be. You are receiving experience that leads you to spiritual maturity and I will stop with that.

CALVIN: Abraham, I would just like to welcome some guests for the record. We have Warren Smith here for the first time; he was first with Rita's Urantia Book study group. Also, we have with us tonight from Costa Rica, David and Susie Butterfield.

ABRAHAM: Welcome. Have you, questions?

SUSIE: Abraham, I don't think I have a question so much as to say how blessed I feel to be able to speak to you. I have very much appreciated your lessons and, I am grateful to have been given the gift of the Teachers. If you have anything to say to further me along my path, I'd be grateful.

ABRAHAM: Most certainly, my daughter. I also return your kind words and give you my gratitude for your dedication to this work. I believe you know that your experience has trained you for the spiritual gifts you have today. I am told that you have taken in a great amount of spiritual information. Sometimes this can lead to imbalance or disappointment, so I would also ask that you balance that information with humor and reversion. You know within for yourself what is right and true. Do not be thrown from your path by the lures of mysticism or pastures that may look greener. Overall, my daughter, you do wonderfully and your sweetness of spirit leads others to want that same closeness with Father that you have. Have you a desire to transmission-receive here this evening? (Susie: If it is Father's will.) Abraham: Very well. I will take one more question.

DAVID: Hi Abraham. I have read about you since childhood. I never dreamed I'd see the day when I had the opportunity to speak directly to you. Thank you for your presence, and I want you to know that I have always felt you to be part of my spiritual lineage. Thank you! especially for the opportunity to be with you tonight.

ABRAHAM: My son, we have already spoken many times. You know me as well as I know you. I am also honored to work with you and I am inspired by your faith and dedication to a life in the Spirit. Yes, well done.

I am understanding another is to say a few words, so I will take my leave and leave you with my love. Until next week, shalom. (Alana's transmission via Susie from Costa Rica as transmission-receiver, was not recorded here).

Spiritual Liberty Is Not License To Self-Assertion, But Open Communion With God
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 03-26-2001

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am in understanding that you each had a full week of spiritual learning. I must say, to view your interaction together was touching and inspiring. We receive such great hope when we witness our mortal brothers and sisters at work for the betterment of the whole. You are learning the true meaning of spiritual liberty with one another. How blessed are we that Father should give us each other to learn greater truths with.

There are some individuals who see 'spiritual liberty' as chaos, possibly dangerous, as if 'anything goes.' But with the lessons on integrity, we find spiritual liberty to be a natural outworking of evolution. Liberty taken to extremes, of course, verges on possible default – but the 'law of spiritual liberty' tells us the more we understand about it the more we receive. Spiritual liberty is not license to self-assertion or the doing of self-will, no! but the open communion with God that broadens your view and encourages you Paradise-ward.

On the other hand, those bound by traditional religious values see spiritual liberty as an excuse to carry forth self-willed notions. Many believe the universe to be harsh and only out to limit who they really are. Many find that they are imprisoned by their understanding, their cultural upbringing, their bad luck – and really, this is true for them, they are always in fear of lacking one thing or another; they can always find some worry to dwell on; they awake each morning with a feeling of dread and unwanted obligation.

How you feel upon meeting the new day is a good measure of your level of spiritual liberty. Of course you each have obligations, but those who self-imprison have nothing else but obligations; there is neither peace nor joy; there is not the enthusiasm or the intrigue of daily adventure; they look to God as a jailer who will see to their just deserts.

Those imprisoned in their narrow cell do not realize the door is unlocked. The more integrity you have, the more spiritual liberty you will receive. The less ego you exert, the more spiritual gifts you will receive. This is not a heavenly bribe, no, but just a natural outworking of the universe.

My friends, there is great joy to be had in spiritual liberty. Father, having given us the power to make our own decisions, holds so much value in us to understand what it is like to be without choices, or liberty to see, grow, and act as you see fit. Father bestows upon us personal power that we might eventually grow to know and find Him. He does not limit our choices or imprison us with rules, but trusts us to evolve as we will.

To have no choices (or liberty) would be confining, and stagnating the soul. To constantly be imprisoned by worry after worry is slowing spiritual progress. To feel the freedom of making your own decisions is giving the soul permission to search, learn, and grow as it will. When you are using spiritual liberty, you feel not your mistakes to be so crushing, so embarrassing, and you need not be so hard on your growing soul.

Spiritual liberty is extending that mortal vision to capturing a broadened divine view. The joy from this, my friends, cannot be described adequately. Only by experience can you know the real joy of this freedom. And in the joy, you look forward to the day's adventures; you seek not out every negative thing; rather, you look for Father's daily works (Father's fingerprints); you see life is not so much a test of endurance, but a challenge to be savored.

We often think of the 'sons of self-love' and pity them for their narrowness of vision. They had liberty beyond their own understanding but, they chose the way of self. Their downfall was their limited patience, their need to always be first; and, to never be caught short or looking foolish. They could not release the imprisoning self so that they could become more. The tighter they grasped on to themselves, the more they really decreased in all ways.

There will be times of confusion for the planet as a whole concerning this 'law of spiritual freedom,' and you will each have opportunity to temper the confusion with wisdom and common sense. You will have the option of seeing your duties as either a burden or as a challenge. You can crawl through the lowly trenches of the mortal life, or you can rise above and walk tall where the view is clear and the horizon is broadened, yes.

This week, my friends, journal upon rising to greet the new day: How do you feel? Are you immediately focused on the day's obligations? Do you wake and greet Father with anticipation of the day's adventures? Are you filled with dread of the new day? or are you excited to participate in it. Ponder your own self-imprisonment – how would you otherwise feel if you had no worries?

What would it feel like to have no daily goals but just spend the day being in each moment and acting from a standpoint of spiritual liberty? Yes, journal this week about what self-assertion means to you and how you can learn to relax and receive more peace from learning patience.

That is all for this evening. I take my leave, but first I would express my love and gratitude to all of you. You are most certainly a light on my eternal path. Until next week, shalom.

The Grace Of God | Reconciling Self With The Ways Of The Spirit | The Triumph of John the Baptist

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-02-2001

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Every day I exist I find myself closer to our Father. The more I release, the more I receive – even as my words (in these transmissions) cannot begin until I am really listened for. In other words, expectations and desires must be released for my words to come through. I find this 'giving and receiving' fascinating. Father has bestowed upon us spiritual liberty which gives us the freedom to do as we will – and in that, we find the grace of God.

As a child, we all remember being rescued from some sort of distress or another. We remember the relief we feel as we are picked up and pulled from our discomfort. Even now with our free will, we do not always choose the way of Spirit. In recognizing the law of spiritual liberty, we can receive experience regarding the gentleness, kindness, and the grace of our divine Liberator.

We have seen, firsthand, Father's all-pervasive power. At this point in your spiritual education, you know Father can move mountains. In some religions, members fear this 'all-powerfulness' and Father is seen as a harsh judge. In the mortal life, where tension is rampant in every aspect of our experience, we forget how to be gentle, kind, and graceful.

Father does teach with ultimate Fatherly abilities, but we fail to see His gentle kindnesses that act as a light in the dark. He is not an abrupt Father who would rush in to spank an erring child; He is not a spy who watches your every move for mistakes. Father is not looking to bestow your lessons upon you with crushing blows. His patience calculates the best method in which to educate, comfort, or guide you.

When you think back upon your lives – in your darkest hours when you believed you could not take one more of life's harsh blows, something would present itself and bring you relief, comfort, and hope. Something would bring you the faith that hard times will not always be upon you; and, the knowing that 'change is ahead, yes, and I can rise above my inner turmoil, self-pity, and hopelessness.

What is that gentle relief that came as a helping hand in the darkness to pull you from your despair, from your troubled mind? It is the grace of God, my friends! the love of a Father for a child who gently teaches and guides; a Father who revels in every moment of just being with the child. Our Father enjoys watching the growth – watching the child begin to comprehend and take steps on their own. This is spiritual freedom – our all-powerful Provider assisting His children to grow with kindness, love, logic, and liberty. He rushes us not. He bestows no time limits upon us.

Many say: “Where was the Father's gentle kindness at the end of John the Baptist's life? – where was his relief?” Were you there you would have known John's relief – the ministering angels that filled him with peace; and, the knowledge that he had a hand in the worlds' destiny. John knew a comfort that many do not know when facing uncertainty or death. John had the peace of knowing that he was only at the beginning of his work, and that cessation of the mortal body freed him to go on to work other positions. Even in death, there was relief. Even in prison, his soul was free.

Did John lose hope and have despair? Yes, of course, at first! But with prayer, and his eyes ever turned heavenward, he found answers to his questions that no man could answer. He had surrendered all, to gain more. He had not the question of: ‘Why me?’ but the confidence that: ‘It is me for a reason, and I am honored to serve.’

How do everyday people endure some of the worst occurrences life has to offer? Do they ache with despair and lose hope? Most, at first, yes! but everyone is free to make choices and to choose – the ‘way of self;’ or, the ‘way of the spirit.’ We will all learn to reconcile the self with the ways of spirit. Reconciling takes time and patience. It takes emotions and some mindal turmoil, no doubt – this is part of the mortal adventure. But as we learn to view the mosaic of ‘spiritual liberty’ we see it is patterned with divine grace.

This week I ask you to study on grace – and ponder on how you handle everyday occurrences. Do you force ‘your will’ and ‘your way’ to solve difficulties? Is explosive emotion the only way to settle differences? How will handling even the most difficult occurrences ‘with gentleness and grace’ alter destiny?

This week, journal your accounts in which you see the grace of God in action. How do you feel when you have been picked up by your Father and made to feel relief and comfort? Know that as each week passes by I am with more love for you each. Until next time, shalom.

Law of Spiritual Liberty | Serenity in Simplicity | Not Allowing Self-Imposed & Societal Pressures

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I do so enjoy watching you discuss, organize and plan events that further the growth of the Teaching Mission and the kingdom of God here on this small planet. We are discovering that we each live, work, play, and learn best when there is no pressure. Ideally, someday you will discover the full meaning of spiritual liberty – and that time really has no bearing on our eternal path.

In today's mortal life there are deadlines, schedules, quotas to meet and ever strive to beat. In a world where material goods are so valued, you can see how everyone moves, lives, and has their being in a constant striving for attainment of 'more' and 'better.' Economic issues are important in a material life, certainly, but when society revolves around this 'striving to attain,' the pressures can be unbearable. Pressures from employers, families, friends, society, cause a number of physical and mental ailments. Where is the freedom in that?

Does spiritual liberty align with the material life? Yes, if you want it to! Does the universe realize your needs and help open doors to new opportunities? Of course it does! Can you force these opportunities to occur sooner than they should naturally evolve on their own? This is pressure, my friends.

Pressure is losing sight of real priorities. Pressure is complicated living and always making one feel like they can never do enough, never have enough. The pressure keeps one in a state of continuous want – you never really ever have satisfaction of 'having' or gratitude for 'being well taken care of,' you only see that you are lacking and 'without.'

In this complicated world we have forgotten the serenity in simplicity. Even when one chooses to be of service to their fellows, they often feel not the joy in serving but the pressure to 'hurry and serve, and be done with it.' They feel the pressure to squeeze in as much service as possible as if it is buying a seat at Father's table. The purpose in serving, my friends, is to connect with Father, to feel the Father's joy and grace working through you.

Bombardment of social fads and advertising tells us that only if we 'do this' or 'have that' will we really fit in and really be accepted. The tides are changing where the spiritually-minded will say to these social fads and advertisings that: 'No, we will not be pressured to keep a certain level of success. Father is our goal. Our ever-striving to attain Him is our focus. His grace and working in our lives is our success.'

In understanding the law of spiritual liberty, know that only one's self-imposed and/or societal-imposed pressure limits you in attaining the true desire of all people. How are you pressured by the world? your family? peers? your employer? What integrity have you sacrificed for the striving of what the world deems valuable? What small steps can you take in relieving yourself of such pressures? It's all in your perception, my friends; it is how you see the world; it is in your perception of what 'you think' is valuable. Yes, "Where your treasure is there will be your heart also."

In returning to simplicity – how much more time will you have to devote your attention to those things that really matter? Said Jesus: "My yoke is easy and my burden light." Father does not put upon you near as many pressures as you put on yourselves, or as many as you put upon one another. Find time this week to cleanse your life of these pressures. Journal those small steps you can take to make a real difference in how you can simplify and change your perception of everyday living.

I am aware we have need for an assessment (Miriam's husband, Don), and then I will take a few questions.

My son, Don, you have dealt with a great deal of hardship, and I must say I have seen few with the grace you emulate. Your patience in life is an example for all to follow. I see you at this point in your life as one feeling a need for a closer connection with Father – you seem to be worried from time to time if you should do more to connect with Him. Don, my son, I see you as one who is very close to Father, and you do have the best of intentions. You do not always do right by those intentions, but neither does most anyone else. Have not worry, and make allowance for your mistakes. Do not be so hard on yourself, because Father isn't; He is not counting strikes against you, but ever calling out to you to assist you in this life. You do have some emotional buildup and resentment that has accrued over these many years. These are easily resolved with journaling and self-honesty. Be not afraid of what you discover, because no matter what has happened you have been, are now, and always will be, a child of God. Be observant in life's daily events for there are wonderful lessons therein. That is all. Are there questions?

HARRISON: Abraham, I have two questions. One: I am feeling like there is a change coming I guess in my professional life. I don't know if that is a change that I am trying to make happen, or if it is something that Father is leading me toward. If it is something that Father is leading me toward, I would appreciate any counseling in that direction. Secondly: Is there a universal law that would apply to the lesson you gave us tonight?

ABRAHAM: First, my son, Harrison, I could not know of any occupational changes ahead. Father may set before you opportunities, yes, but the choice is strictly yours. He has endowed you with logic and liberty to reach the conclusions that are most spirit-filled. Yes, the second question – spiritual liberty is the law that we are focused on now. There is such a delicate balance in our teaching the 'liberty' of living a life in the flesh. There is always a chance for default in spiritual liberty; and yet there are so many who live in great limitations where one can go from 'taking advantage' of this liberty, to 'not utilizing it fully.' Does this help? (Harrison: Yes, and thank you.)

SIMON: I really enjoyed your lesson. It answers a lot of questions that I have been going through, and gives me a lot of strength to move forward. I wonder if you could speak some more along the lines of making my life simpler and undoing all the things that I have done for many years to make it complicated. I feel like I have been a person who does things kind of in spurts, as far as energy goes, and then I run out of energy and find a need to have to regroup. Maybe you can talk a little bit about endurance and the energy to endure.

ABRAHAM: I would first say that many complications in living arise out of ego. There are things that have happened to individuals that have hurt them deeply, and many will spend a lifetime in pursuit of things that will facilitate healing. As you mature spiritually, you realize those past painful events were actually valuable and have brought you to your maturity. In maturity, we can release those ego cravings in favor of a more satisfying soul fulfillment. My son, Simon, I do see you getting very enthusiastic over a project and your mind thinks faster than you can act – this is an overuse of energy. Yes, learn to pace yourself and have the acceptance that if something is God's will and for the good of all, it will come about. You will be given ideas on using your human resources to help to complete the goal at hand. Do not spend your thoughts on the outcome of things. Learn to take joy in each individual step – for in the steps, there is Father. Is this helping? (Simon: Yes, thank you so much. You are wonderful!)

MIRIAM: Abraham, I want to thank you for this lesson tonight. It is literally, just like an aspirin. I'm not asking you to say anything because I know you are running late. It just blows me away that you know what we want and need, and how you put that into the lesson. It is just what the doctor ordered. Thank you.

ABRAHAM: I wish I could take the credit (laughter), but many who are unseen are involved in each week's lesson, and there is a great deal of love and care for each one of you. I also express to you each, my gratitude for your ever-expanding dedication to Michael's Mission and the Correcting Time. Well done, my friends. I leave with my love and appreciation. Until next week, shalom.

The Law of Abundance, Spiritual Abundance | Integrity in Abundance

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am so uplifted by our ever-growing connection to each other and to our divine caretakers. As of late, you have celebrated the risen Master. While this holiday is focusing attention on our Lord, it still is surrounded by many misconceptions. Many believe He took the worlds' burden upon Himself and died to bring you forgiveness and salvation.

The Master did not die for you, no! but He came back for you. His resurrection gave us the promise of life everlasting and showed us how well we are watched over. The risen Lord showed us that the mortal life was a continual fragment of eternity, and how we can live our lives from that perspective instead of believing everything mortal is only temporary.

Regarding the law of 'spiritual liberty,' we have discussed the aspects of integrity, grace, and returning to simplicity. We find it helpful usually to now move on to the law of abundance. In really learning to simplify your lives, you are uncovering your true selves from all the mortal debris.

We have come to the realization that, yes, life is difficult; and that is not really such a bad thing because meanings and values come along with it. It is easy to forget one of the Master's promises: Said He: "I have come so that you may have life and, have it more abundantly." We learn that through the grace of God His tender ministries make all our striving, well worth it.

In the busyness of the world, we forget to take notice of Father's abundance. Some see Him as a harsh Father, one to send down upon them hard lessons so that they may become strengthened and grow toward Him. That is not so much true, as things do naturally occur in mortal life, yes, and Father will draw out the values and meanings therefrom. Truly though, He wishes for us to have supreme joy and spiritual abundance. Those on high, including the Celestial Overseers, work for this; they want us to perceive the good in life and create an energy out of it.

Joy and peace should always outweigh pain and sorrow. Faith that rests on an unstable foundation finds it hard to believe the universe works for our good. There are past experiences that would tell us we are of little or no value, so some do not really believe they are deserving of the better things in life. Love, friendship, material well-being and good health, are out of reach for them.

When one is believing they are undeserving of this abundance they tend to subconsciously sabotage their own well-being. A wonderful and positive thing could be staring them in the face and they are suspicious of it. They can hardly believe that these good things are their birthright; are the promises from our Master.

A man who has grown up in poverty may be suspicious of any so-called material luck that chances to come his way. In the feeling of being undeserving he might subconsciously take his new-found wealth and waste it, for that seems normal to him.

A woman who meets a man that she falls in love with might be suspicious of this seeming good luck because her male influences in the past were poor examples. She may constantly test the man for his loyalty, which will eventually backfire because he will become weary and give up trying to win her over.

Are there past experiences that block you from life's abundance? Are there ways in which you may sabotage your happiness? Even those who have beliefs they are spiritually on target can delay their progress by these feelings of unworthiness. Father is no respecter of persons; He sees to each child's happiness – if the child will let Him.

Again I mention the value of integrity 'in abundance' because certainly, you cannot request Father to pay your bills if you are not willing to work. You cannot request Father to keep you from getting disease if you abuse your body. Father works with us in our efforts to create our own abundance. "Where your treasures are, there will your heart be also." If you are putting value in selfish gain, then I doubt the universe would be of assistance.

You can find a great deal of abundance in service to others; but should you only serve to receive abundance then certainly this alters the outcome. Should you find yourself exceedingly joyful in just serving, then will your connection with Father strengthen – and you will naturally see, spiritually, abundance in all aspects of living.

This week I ask you to journal down 'where do your treasures lie?' Contemplate your understanding of self-worth – perhaps it is too little, perhaps it is too much. Think about what you would give back to your own planet and its people. In service you are more likely to lose self, and abundance is naturally noticed. In the sense of gratitude, you are creating an energy of positivity.

Remember the apostles of old and their fight for a place of preferment in the kingdom. Remember how the Master washed each one's feet as if each were all the same foot. Allow the Master to show you His abundance, His tender mercy, His generous ministry, and His unshakable divine love for you. That is all.

As always with each passing week, I find myself with more love for you each. Until next week, shalom.

The Boy and His Good Teacher | Abundance In Experience AND In Teaching
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 04-23-2001

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am once again grateful to be here with you, my friends, my fellow co-workers, my family. I am grateful because you have each added to my abundance. You have allowed me to be my true self, be that good or bad. You have allowed me to be a part of you which has given me valuable experience – that is abundance. As you mature spiritually, you find experience to not be so traumatizing but adding to who you are now and who you are becoming.

There once was a boy who had a particularly strict teacher. She seemed to never let up on the lessons and he found himself in constant striving. The boy grew weary of these lessons, but the teacher kept encouraging him – patiently going through each lesson step-by-step. Even though the teacher was quite patient with her young student, the boy found her tireless and almost to the point of her punishing him.

The good teacher taught because she cared about her place in the world. She genuinely loved and enjoyed the children. She cared deeply for the world's future and wanted to add to the world's success by the student's lives she touched. She taught not for respect, prestige, or for a show of power – she pushed the children enough to make them believe in themselves; she gave them faith that they were important, intelligent, and had abilities.

The boy, who is now a man, thinks of his teacher fondly and is overfilled with gratitude and awe at her dedication. He recognizes she added to his experience; therefore, participating in his abundance. He remembers that the teacher never ridiculed, and allowed him to make mistakes without fear. She allowed the children to grow at their own pace.

The teacher took such joy in the children's advancement, and this increased her abundance. The children received the benefits of her knowledge, and this increased her abundance. The man now, who was that small boy, takes his valuable experience from that time with the teacher and passes it on to other children and adds to their experience – their abundance.

I cannot emphasize enough how valuable everyday experience is. You either add to other's abundance, or you deplete their energy source; you correlate experience with others which creates lessons and new soul growth. Even negative experience with others can create an abundance in knowledge – spiritual and otherwise. Many are afraid to be open to sharing experience for their lessons may be painful and they see not the value. And some come to share experience for self-gain without thought of others needing to receive also.

In the mortal life you will most likely experience the full spectrum of the required experience. Even the Master experienced many bestowals to gain full sovereignty of the universe. At some point in this life, you will know every aspect there is to know – from extreme sorrow, to supreme joy; from an empty cup, to a cup that overflows; from divine love, to mortal loneliness.

There is no escape from experience if you should desire to advance in things spiritual. This requires experience. Experience is your abundance. If you should bravely face all experience, you are open to receiving those required lessons to advance spiritually. Remember that in sharing your experience, to allow others to stumble. Make it not your duty to always correct. Encourage, yes. Correct, no. Focus on the positive, yes. Point out the negative, no.

This group has had a great deal of valuable experience; this has added to each one's abundance. Even the negative experience was filled with needed information to keep striving, keep reaching for improvement. Your relationships are wonderful teachers.

This week, focus on 'abundance in experience.' How much experience do you purposefully avoid because it will either lead to your disappointment and sorrow or, cause you to have to do too much work? Strengthen your connection with those you know and be a provider of abundance for them. I speak not so much of material abundance, but spiritual companionship and being a light of encouragement. When you feel you are putting forth effort in service – do you hesitate to contemplate the cost? Or, do you serve for the strengthening between you and Father. Again, where are your treasures?

That is all. No questions this evening. I would have you know you have each brought me a great deal of abundance and I am grateful. Every week I am with more love for you and more desire to also serve you. Until next week, shalom.

Abundance Is Not Gifts From Heaven To The Favored, But Knowing You Have Responsibility To The Whole

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How blessed I feel to be included in your lives. You each add to my experience and overall abundance. Our Correcting Time is designed to utilize the whole. No one person, or a few people, will carry the Mission single-handedly. No special honors will be given to the seemingly devoted. No transmission-receiver can take credit for delivering the Teaching Mission to the hearers. Without the participation of the whole our Mission would either fail or be delayed.

The gift of your energy and good intentions does bring my words to you. Your integrity and thoughtfulness of using these lessons to benefit the whole is what brings us success in expanding the kingdom. Even those individuals who feel they have the smallest of parts are crucial to the progress of this epochal era. Your willingness to really work adds to the abundance of the whole. Your service adds to the growth and expansion of the God-in-time – the Supreme Being. You are a co-creator in natural evolution.

Many individuals find it too difficult to put themselves out in service, or have not the feelings of confidence that they can actually handle difficult tasks. Some choose not to put themselves out there in experience and then they wonder why their life is neither here nor there and nothing of significance seems to happen; They put forth no love, and therefore, they receive no love. They make no effort to give service, and find themselves alone when in need.

You that have chosen to live this mortal life to the fullest and 'drink the cup' of 'come what may,' will give and receive; you will experience and participate; you will be a designer of destiny – an architect of the future. The 'reserve corps of destiny' may have to work a bit harder; you may have to take on a bit more responsibility; you may have to exert less self and promote more spirit.

Abundance is not gifts from heaven to the favored; it is not being bestowed with the way of ease; it is not Father enticing you to do His bidding, no! Abundance is knowing you have responsibility to the whole in a way which you have to make effort towards for the overall betterment of the kingdom. We work for the good of one another. Your abundance is my abundance. My growth is your growth. You add to my experience – and I, to yours. Your joy is my joy. I know you each realize this life does require a certain amount of effort but I say, always should joy and happiness outweigh sorrow and tribulation.

This week, when you are called to do a difficult task and you are apprehensive, pause for a moment to consider the spiritual ramifications of participating. Be observant. Consider the possible outcomes. Look with the eyes of the spirit. Ponder – is your participation bringing personal growth? growth to the Teaching Mission? growth to the kingdom? perhaps growth of another?

Father's assignments are filled with intrigue and mystery – and they are either fearful to you, or adventurous. You can participate and perform your responsibilities and add to the progress; or, choose to wait on the sidelines and let life just happen around you. When you choose to forsake your own needs in favor of participating in other spiritual tasks, or tasks of any kind, then always does Father see to ministering to you. He does not let you overlook those important things that help you to move in this mortal world. As you choose Father's work, He chooses to work for you.

This is not to say He does not work for you should you choose to just stand-by – but the lessons are altered, and you learn the same thing in a different way sooner or later. I understand it is easy in this mortal life to become set in same habit patterns; it is difficult to move from your level of comfort. As you become more spiritized and comfortable with your status as a child of God you gain more self-confidence to be seen, to be of service, to go forth and be assertive with your spiritual responsibility.

As you mature spiritually, you do find that you have not traversed this life alone; many have added to your experience and helped you to become what you are today. Good or bad, all the experience was valuable. Be not afraid to go into experience, but be observant. Take notes and help Father show you the values, meanings, and abundance from the average mortal life. I do understand there are times when one feels closed-off or not in a position to be outgoing, and this is acceptable. Take your rest and worry not. You will regain your momentum and once again feel like plunging headfirst into experience, yes.

That is all. No questions. I will take questions next week. This week, I ask you to find a quiet time to journal and hear for my words. I would wish to have a short time with everyone for a personal greeting and to practice the transmission-receiving method, yes. Know that my love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Compassion Should Come Naturally, Not With Any Thought of Seeking Notice

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings, my friends. I am always touched by your acts of compassion for one another. When one is weak, the others support. When one is sorrowful, the others are available with an open ear. When one is afraid, the others are giving encouraging energy. What a brotherhood, my friends – quite beautiful to behold.

Learning about the universal laws becomes more understandable as you experience life – you begin to understand the need for them and have gratitude for this universal fairness and watchcare. Universal laws endow us with power, power to use for good or bad. We are partakers of time and doers in destiny. What we do and how we live really does matter and has an impact on universal wellness.

We are going to leave the subject of universal laws for a time and move on to other issues. Be watchful in your experience for other universal laws to reveal themselves. All our lessons are intertwined and used in the best manner to teach the varying groups. [Editor's note: There were many other Teaching Mission groups throughout the world by this time. Mostly in the US. Each group had their own morontial/supernal Teacher.]

I find it helpful at this time to say a few words on compassion. How beautiful it is to behold individuals helping one another, upholding and supporting; yes, it is wonderful to see. Your level of compassion is the measure in which you receive compassion back. To be truly compassionate we must stand in our brother's shoes; we must look through their eyes; we must find a heart-connection.

The compassionate soul longs to create lasting solutions for their brothers and sisters in need. To perform compassionate acts for the sake of being guilt-free because your fellows are in need is a misunderstanding. To be compassionate because you feel pity upon your fellows is also not quite right. Compassion is a heart and soul connection that says: "I am feeling what you are feeling. I see you could use some help." Compassion asks you not to sacrifice begrudgingly, no! but happens naturally, without hesitation.

Most of the time most people only wish to be listened to and understood – not pitied or pressured into various solutions, but just to feel that they are not alone. You in the Teaching Mission have great opportunity to allow Father to show Himself through you. You have opportunity to minister to your fellows now in a manner that you could not do before. The transmission-receiving process is becoming common, and instantly the compassionate person can put forth Father's words to aid in any given situation.

The compassionate person listens without underlying agendas or intentions. The compassionate person is not tempted to bestow their wisdom to have others look upon them with awe. True compassion is feeling that you truly want to help without anything in return; it is wanting to help because of your expanding love for Father. The compassionate person inevitably grows closer to Father because of their pure intentions to be open to His words to help their fellows.

You can be encouraging and uplifting in your compassionate ministry without showing forth pity and disempowering individuals to feel unconfident and hopeless. You can validate their difficulties by relating to them your personal experience. If you have not personal experience to draw upon then certainly can you, at the very least, show you are interested in what they are saying. In your desire to want to help without personal recognition will you be connected to Father's words – His instructions for your fellows; His mind. That is ministry, my friends. That is active ministry. A few questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, in the beginning, you said that universal laws endow us with power to use for good and bad. It was my understanding that maybe the universe assistance would withdraw if our intentions were not for the good. Could you say more of what you mean on that?

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Even Lucifer himself had access to these universal laws, and through the promotion of himself he could benefit from the innocent by the manipulation of these laws. Father has bestowed us with free will and has given to us heaven and Earth. Those that use spiritual power for the benefit of all will receive more power. With more power comes more responsibilities, more assignments. This is of your choosing, of course, yes, but even Father did not interfere in Lucifer's reign of self-assertion. All played out naturally, and even that experience was valuable. Is this answering?

CALVIN: Yes. Thank you. I can digest further on what you are saying here, during the week.

ABRAHAM: An assessment before we are out of time, for Harrison: I see you are quite active in all aspects of living. I have not much new to report. You are going forth on faith and I would only suggest that you become more balanced with humor and play. Reversion activities are a refreshment to the mind and soul. Do those things that you love to do but do not make the time for. They do not necessarily have to be spiritual in nature, no. You are at a time in life where it is acceptable to enjoy life because you have a well-rounded understanding of it. Is this helping my son?

HARRISON: Yes, Abraham. Thank you very much. I would ask one short question: In my travels, sometimes I will stop and spend the night at a place where I will have bad dreams, and I feel like I need to get up and leave to get away from some danger, or some evil presence. I have done that on a couple occasions. My question is, should I stay and just let Father's light shine and face that fear, whatever it is, and not go running off? or should I move on?

ABRAHAM: One moment. I am told these dreams are based on the stress of the day and not to worry or fear. You are in no danger of being in an evil presence. Know that these fearful feelings are easily overcome with doing an activity that grounds you back into your everyday foundation. Do those things that you usually do – read a book, converse with your wife, take a shower, watch TV – these things are grounding and bringing you back to your foundation of the intellectual, spiritual, and physical.

You each do well and I am in gratitude to the compassion and friendship you have shown me. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Balanced Self-Compassion Versus Self-Loathing or Self-Aggrandizement

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-14-2001

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I believe you receive more insight from your discussions than you do from my teachings. My heart swells to overflowing when I see how you care so much about your fellows' and your worlds' well-being. To create such a compassionate balance in the world, everyone will need to participate. Every child is gifted in one way or another; those who are mostly intellectual will be brought into balance by those who are emotional, and vice versa. Where one is lacking the other can fill.

To have fellowship amongst you eases the everyday stresses of living in the world. Knowing your fellows are at hand makes the adversities of life more bearable. You strengthen one another. You uphold and promote faith for each other. Logical compassion brings about a balance among mortals that will carry them into Light and Life. Your genuine concern for others, your self-forgetfulness, brings more divine communication that guides and serves the whole – this truly is growth for the Supreme Being.

While self-forgetfulness is honorable, I would remind you of the scale that has balance; we have 'self-compassion' as the middle mark, 'self-loathing' on one side, and 'self-aggrandizement' on the other. Balanced compassion for 'self' means you need not constantly reprove yourself for mistakes. Some self-chastisement is acceptable as long as it leads you to desire to make more effort. Self-loathing remarks lead you to give up and not even make effort because the feeling of inadequacy is overwhelming.

I have noticed that many have neglected to feed the spirit, the element that makes you a distinct child of the living God. It is understandable that life is busy and there are many mortal tasks to complete. There are many goals to achieve that makes you 'successful' in the world's eyes. When one has neglected the spirit, the balanced compassion for self leans toward self-loathing, self-disappointment, losing confidence, yes.

A few moments a day in quiet reflection or observing the wonders of nature gives one mindal clarity. A small amount of time lost in the beauty of music brings one to a spiritually-centered point. An awareness of Father's works leading to a moment of supreme gratitude connects you to those spiritual circuits you need to have balanced self-compassion. In that mindset, you forget not to care for the body, mind, and soul.

How easy it is to neglect the physical needs which in the mortal life can disrupt other areas such as mental and emotional. Poor habits or diet can lead to imbalance, and that disrupts the mind and distorts the perspective. Ask yourself – how much time in your day is spent in unproductive stimulation of the mind? In this age of technology, it is easy to get carried away with external stimulation, mindless entertainment.

All that is required for balanced mindal clarity is a few moments per day in the silence. There is much more to gain in stillness than in the midst of chaos and over-stimulation. Reversion (or entertainment) is wonderful, and you should find a healthy balance for that, yes, no doubt – but remember to feed the spirit as well. Remember to allow yourself the gift of a few moments with the First Source and Center; He brings you back to a center of balance and realness where there is not room for fears, or imaginings, or doubts, or hopelessness.

Compassion for self, is allowing time for you to regain your spiritual, physical, mental, and emotional momentum. In this balance, you are in top form to fulfill your ministries; you are able to cope in chaos, stay clear in confusion, and provide assistance when and where it is needed. In a state of imbalanced mentality (or emotionality) your physical body begins a cycle of deterioration which leads to many illnesses. In remembering to have compassion for self you are returning to Spirit and allowing Father to put you back to where you should be.

This mortal life today is more complicated than I could have ever imagined in my day. I do feel you each have to contend with more than I ever did – and I had not the technology you do. Do not become discouraged with your shortcomings; it is understood this is a difficult world to live in now. Shortcomings are to be expected but they cannot, and should not, dominate your life-purpose.

In caring for your growing soul you are also taking care of the world. We tend to the soul to be also productive in the kingdom – that is usually our focus. We do not tend to the soul to fix broken hearts or bruised egos or to allow ourselves to lay down before our troubles, no! Patience and balanced ('compassion for self') is what we are speaking of, yes.

This week, find time for quiet moments and rest. Eat for life – not to fill an emptiness where Spirit should be. Play – find time to go outdoors. Yes, you must work and be diligent in your responsibilities. Do you see what I am saying? Find balance! Find ministry for the self so that you can also minister.

No questions this evening, I am due elsewhere. But know that with each week that passes I find myself closer to each one of you. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Beginning Lessons On The Brotherhood | Fellowship

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 05-21-2001

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. The energy in this room this evening helps my words to come through with more accuracy and clarity. I thank you for the prayer. Your fellowship is a wonderful sight to behold. You are learning to communicate – to serve, and be served. We each add to one another. How blessed we are. Yes.

There are many examples in the world today of how some individuals use or manipulate others to become successful or seemingly be 'better than others.' Parts of society show that wealth rules! and other important things are set aside. It would seem that today's success is measured in dollar amounts.

Small groups like yours are setting a new stage of reality where the priorities are 'people' and their well-being. As this Correcting Time exercises, the muscles of the brotherhood are strengthened. The scales are becoming more balanced every day with actual proof that goodness prevails and God is real.

In this mortal life, you will experience everything you have to to progress Paradise-ward. You will have your moments in the sun, those moments of elation - moments wherein you can literally feel the presence of our Father. You know though, it is in your moments of deepest despair and loneliness that if you can still feel the Father's presence, then you can really call that, progress. Yes, how wonderful it is that in your darkest hours you have a friend at hand and to know that you are loved and cared for. How much more bearable can our despair be when we know there are our fellows close by.

In your trials of life you have the choice - to become beaten down by these trials, or educated by them. How blessed are we when our fellows can help us in seeing the lessons in our adversities. Therefore, know that to need your fellows is not a sign of weakness but part of the divine plan. To refuse service is not valiant, no. To never ask for help is not courageous. You see, your fellows also need experience in service. And as you connect with one another you are also connecting to the divine circuitry.

I say, you have not the realization how much influence or power you really have. The unification of the brotherhood will see your world into Light and Life. For the next few lessons, we will discuss the brotherhood and the simple misconceptions that build obstacles. I believe we are all in agreement that above anything else, comes Father. Right below that is the brotherhood or the Fellowship. If you have not friends or people you love and care for, what good is anything else? You cannot receive affection or energy or support from money, your job, your mortal dwelling, hobbies, social standing, or the fads of the day - but you can find God in one another.

You can be supported in your faith in Father, and in yourself as His child, through one another. You cannot be validated or upheld by a beautiful home or important status in the workplace. Those temporary fulfillment's leave you saying: 'Is this all there is?' These things will fade with the mortal body. These material things will die. The memories with your children, parents, friends - even strangers, will carry beyond this life and will hold values and meanings that you cannot find anywhere else.

In learning to live a balanced life we see the answer is clear - people, all people, are more important than those 'things' the world defines as 'success.' Our most difficult task in dealing with people is the ability to communicate. When there is not clear communication, people seem to assume the worst. Your minds – each so different and perceiving things in so many various ways – understand and comprehend so differently. You could communicate one thing, but your fellows may take it entirely another way. Perhaps the tone of voice, the style of language, the attitude, may say something different than your actual words. A great deal of listening, and less speaking, is required.

As you begin to realize that your fellows perceive things differently from you, you realize they also have the same feelings as you. Yes, some are more sensitive, while others are more bold. But as you expand your minds to incorporate the diversity of personalities, you can better accept how each individual is and celebrate 'that' – not discard it for its difference.

This week, be aware of your communication skills. Do not leave conversations or discussions when you feel you are not in total understanding. Do not be quick to assume what others are thinking. Have discussion. The more you can understand others the less you will assume and avoid built-up resentment. Be not afraid to be honest, but remember your fellow's feelings. Think of the Master as He related to individuals; He was logical and yet loving; He was truthful but tactful; He was firm but friendly. He who would have a friend must show himself friendly, yes.

We will discuss more on communication skills next week. Until then I send you with my love and gratitude for your communication with me. Until next week, shalom.

Being Truthful, Tactful, and Kind In Our Honesty Helps In Open And Safe Communication Between Us

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am grateful once again to be here with you, my friends. I appreciate how you accept me for what I am. You allow me my truth and make it very comfortable for me to be direct. I love the purity of our friendship. We have no hidden agendas. We play no mindal games. We seek not to take from one another, but to give freely, yes.

As humans grow, they develop various techniques to acquiring what they want. These techniques are clouded with falsities wherein they have lost the purity that spiritual brothers and sisters can attain with one another. Last week we discussed regarding assumptions individuals may conclude if we are not clear in our communication. In today's world of wheeling and dealing, manipulation and seeking ego-gratification, we have lost the art of simple and genuine communication.

As small children, we learned that simply asking for what we desired did not work. We learned various techniques to talk others into what we desired. Of course a wise parent cannot grant their child's every wish because some of those wishes are harmful. Nonetheless, the child pads the communication with impurities and the beauty of simple truth is practically lost.

Many mortals have learned that to request fulfillment of certain needs requires mindal games, such as empty flattery, aloof attitudes, and phoniness. We often seem to have lost the courage to state the plain and simple truth; but rather, blurt out the truth that, of course, is our own version – and then we expect others to be able to relate with what we are saying and fulfill our needs.

A wife who is angry with her husband for example, may not come right out and state her problems. Instead, she may choose to be silent or be short with her words; or deliberately do things the husband does not like. The simple art of communication would enable her to state her difficulty with her husband– honestly! without padding or game-playing. Those who have been married many years have learned to use this communication manipulation because they feel they are no longer really heard or taken seriously.

In a manner of speaking, mortals train one another into using this impure method of communicating. Regarding the couple we are speaking of, the husband knows and recognizes his wife's communication-manipulation, and he has his own impure methods he uses back on her. In this, no understanding is reached, and resentments are built. The plain and simple truth is lost; the compassion is lost. There are only defenses – manipulate and out-manipulate.

This week, I ask you to look at the levels of purity in your communication. Attempt not to resort to game-playing or manipulating to be heard. Instead, truthfully (and with kindness) state what you are really feeling and thinking. Do this as if you are not only discussing the difficulty with the person – but also, their indwelling Father-Fragment. You would be surprised how many individuals will appreciate the simple honesty and your daringness to be truthful.

Communicate your feelings. For example: "I am hurt when you do this." Or: "I feel without value when you do that." Do not blurt out your truth as if to accuse, no – for example: "You always speak so negatively about me." Instead, say this: "I feel hurt because it seems that you speak so negatively about me. I feel without value. I hurt to be without value in your eyes." The plain, pure, simple, honest-feeling truth – is opening, expanding, creating healing.

It is unpopular in this day and age to expose any vulnerability of self. When you do dare to expose this softer side of yourself, you speak to people's basic sense of compassion. This makes them feel comfortable to be open and honest in return; you literally open their attention – and, they are better able to really hear what you are saying. To create this ideal brotherhood on Urantia, the game-playing and energy-manipulating, needs to cease; and pure feeling/exposing, needs to increase.

Communication is an art. To gaze into your fellows' eyes and feel a divine brotherly or sisterly connection, is connection to the divine. "Where two or more are gathered, there am I also," said Jesus. Communicating should be a feeding of energy, a nurturing of souls – not manipulation to have your way, or to change another person, no.

When you observe small children at play, they seem to be so honest – so in the moment; so happy to be with one another. When children come in from play it is not long before they are requesting to go back out again. Friendship is a natural divine energy source, and a buffer from the brutality of mortal living.

This week, my friends, remember the pure communication of a small child. Be tactfully honest and appeal to your fellow's Adjusters (that God Fragment within each), as well as their hearts and minds. Seek to feed and nurture – not to rob, to gain self-esteem or ego-fulfillment.

I cannot answer questions this week, but I will be able to next week. Know of my appreciation for you each and the purity of our friendship. I thank you. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Do Not Limit Ourselves From Our Self-Perceptions Or Negative Attitudes

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am always looking forward to seeing you each week because your new spiritual discoveries and your enthusiasm about them help me to view Father's works, firsthand. As I have known you over these years you have become very different people than when we had first started. The human mind is usually in a constant-evolving state; albeit seemingly slow, it is still changing and moving.

We have been discussing common obstacles within the brotherhood that seems to separate us. One of those obstacles we will speak of tonight is on the 'allowance of growth' – allowing change in yourselves and in your fellows.

Individuals who have known one another for many years become used to the same behavior and habit patterns. Upon first meeting and becoming acquainted with individuals, you are likely to form an opinion of who they are and you treat them according to your beliefs of how they are behaving. If a man is selfish, you are not likely to believe he can change and grow, so you treat him with limitations and are not likely to help him to move forward.

You can see a person who is in the public eye – how easy it is to accept the opinions of the news reporters about that celebrity. You have no firsthand knowledge of how this individual really is – but still, you are easy to form an opinion. How ease-seeking, so to speak, to form a simple opinion of other individuals wherein you either like them, want to change them, or leave them alone. Many want the support of their fellows as they themselves grow and change, but are not so understanding when others are to do the same growing and changing.

A parent who has a child who is a bit slow in learning may form an opinion and a plan that accommodates the child. The child then believes himself to be slow to learn and becomes limited to changing and growing. The wise parent, however, may see the slowness in the child but always be highly aware of new possibilities or avenues in which to guide the child.

Unfortunately, 'how you look in the eyes of others' is important to you and your growth as a person. We tend to keep individuals in a mold or with a label that keeps them limited to new growth and changes. If you have known an individual who was perhaps alcoholic and knew them as an awful person, but see them ten years later in recovery – would you treat that person as if they were that same alcoholic? or would you perhaps be open to their newness and be encouraging in their upliftment.

Some people simply do not change. Some do not evolve positively nor do well with new growth. Some will stay in their same habit patterns – their same self-pitied/energy-stealing personality portrayals – and that is miserable, yes, but certainly acceptable in this mortal journey. You need not, however, be closed off to them and limit them in where they may find new growth or new avenues.

Certainly have you learned through becoming inspired, and in being showing a new and better way to all things, yes. You may never know how you touch people's lives by a show that you believe in them, you have faith in them, and are not saddled with the same opinion of them. I also say that you need not put these growth limitations upon yourselves either. You need not continue with the negative self-banter: 'here I go again;' or, 'I can't do anything right.'

Yes I say, do not close off growth. Do not limit your possibilities. A close relationship with Father will aid you in allowing yourselves, and others, to be open to new changes. You need not ever let the opinions of anyone keep you stuck repeating the same habit patterns. They will always have their opinions of you, yes; and it matters not so much what they think of you, but what you believe about yourself – what you believe about your status as an equal child of God.

Yes, close communion with Father is a shield against the negativity that may keep you limited. Know that Father wants you to experience this mortal life to its fullest – and, that you have abundance in all ways.

This week, instead of forming opinions or treating individuals as if they are stuck in the same behavioral rut, find encouraging and inspiring ways to guide them to a more positive light. Also I ask, do not limit yourselves by your small self-perceptions or becoming overwhelmed with what you believe to be self-inadequacy. You, my friends, are children of God; and we need to honor that with open, growing and changing minds. Have you questions?

CALVIN: Abraham, is there a balance – I call it the dance – somewhere in the middle of 'speaking up' and 'just letting things go?' I am sure you know what I am talking about.

ABRAHAM: It is difficult when feelings are so painful and the wounds are fresh. I know it is difficult, but to allow some time to pass is a good guideline for knowing how to speak up rationally. Also, sometimes the hurt feelings are magnified by unknowingness and assuming things are worse than they really are. At this time, it is good to ask questions and get some clarification of what the individual is really saying. The true pain though, comes from one's fear that what other individuals are saying about them is reality. It is a closing off in ego/attitude-balancing, and is shutting out possibilities for new understanding, divine communion, growth, and change. There are appropriate times in which to speak up, such as times of injustice; but a calm and clear voice will be heard much more than irrational screaming. It is also good to go back in your memory to see if there are other causes that have made present events so painful, and see that perhaps you are overreacting, yes. This time is difficult because you feel you dwell in this pain alone; but you know all too well that you have those spiritual assistants as tools to survive, yes. Is this answering, my son? (Calvin: Yes. Thank you.) Abraham: You're welcome. Are there other questions?

SIMON: Yes, Abraham. I was wondering if you knew who the two people were in the purple robes that I met a week ago last Thursday. And, what was their message about?

ABRAHAM: One moment. I am told they are only fellow believers, and it was you that delivered a message to them, not them to you. Your show of faith and willingness to learn was a wonderful example to them. They are coming up against lessons that are aiding them in acquiring a more stable foundation in spiritual realness. You are somewhat perplexed by the event because you were open to direct communication with your own Thought Adjuster. You were without any fear and more open to learning than to teach. Is this helping? (Simon: Yes. Thank you.)

TECTRA: Abraham, as we go about our days how do we stay more open to direct communication with our Thought Adjuster?

ABRAHAM: There is so much 'outside stimulation' that draws your attention away from the spirit. When you do not exercise certain muscles, they are prone to atrophy - even spiritual muscles. Study, stillness and fellowship, are wonderful antidotes to the overwhelming mortal daily realness. It takes commitment though, to the spirit; either you are in or out - committed or not! The half-way commitment is too difficult. When you have promised your life to divine ways, and then knowingly go about doing the opposite, then certainly are you going to be closed-off to the Father. You become disappointed in self, and also believe Father is thinking the same way; and your feelings of unworthiness pull you farther away. Everyone makes mistakes, certainly. Yes, there are moments of weakness, no doubt - but in the realization of your true intentions, you know if you have knowingly gone against the spirit, or not. You are not then prone to feel closed-off and away from God if you believe you have only made a simple mistake. Yes, in your commitment to a life of the spirit, then do you live what you believe. Mistakes, yes, certainly! but they are acceptable. But knowingly to go against that divine promise is closing off yourself from Father. Good question, my son.

VIRGINIA: I want to know if having expectations of having an eternal family are right, or is that my ego that wants that?

ABRAHAM: I am altogether not too sure of your meaning but I can say this much: From the religion you learned as a child, this has put various beliefs into your thinking that are sometimes difficult to be free from as an adult. But with your new-found spiritual adventure, you are becoming more clear in reality. There is a lot of confusion in the churches today, and the only way to receive clarification is to be open to living revelation. What you believe today may serve you today, yes! but be open to revelation, to receive divine information that may expand your beliefs. I know you to be a daughter with great faith and will carry a wonderful spiritual message all the days of your life. Your enthusiasm is contagious, and we are happy to know you in this Mission of our beloved sovereign, Christ Michael. Yes. Welcome.

I am slipping and will take my leave. I do wish to express my gratitude for your allowing me to change and grow at my own pace. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

A Teacher Is Best When He Accounts Himself Equal With His Students

Abraham & Emulan, WOODS CROSS GROUP 06-11-2001

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. How wonderful it is to see you working and fellowshiping in alignment with your spiritual lessons. Your enthusiasm for the success of the upcoming conference is contagious. We on Michael's staff also have our agenda scheduled and are prepared to create as much spiritual upliftment as you allow. These life lessons that you live have given you the tools to be flexible and accepting, in combination with dedication and a commitment to truth. Well done.

The Teaching Mission has created quite the sweeping changes. We are all in amazement at the growth and are in such gratitude to the Caretaker of caretakers. When you think back to your greatest lessons learned, you have seen they have come 'through conflict.' You can get to see all sides of a person during conflicts. How easy it is as a mortal to plunge into the emotional during times of upset, leaving out rationality and incoming divine information.

(TR/Ellanor: Hold on a minute. Sorry about this. I couldn't hear him and then I could hear somebody else. Now it sounds like he is talking to somebody else.)

ABRAHAM: Correct. I am speaking with your friend and brother, Emulan, who will now address you.

EMULAN: Greetings, friends. I am so happy to be among you and be counted as a participant in this Mission. I had to learn through experience to reach where I am today. I was fortunate to have such wonderful mentors. All my relationships helped me to learn and grow as a person.

You each have something to learn from one another. When one is always trying to be the teacher, the learning is limited. In having a learner's outlook, you are open to those divine circuits that feed you incoming spiritual information; your outlook is always fresh and new, and the possibilities are endless. There is a great deal of satisfaction in being the teacher because most students tend to look up to teachers.

Students who rely mostly upon their teacher's words however, can limit their own incoming information. The greatest teacher is one who is open to being shown they can be wrong. A good teacher has as much respect for the student as the student has for the teacher. A good teacher sets not himself up above the students but works side-by-side in a co-creative effort to generate learning.

The planet, as a whole, is beginning to shift in thinking, discovering that no one human has all the answers or can be set apart as special. No teachers in my realm are set apart, different, or above any of their students. I have learned a great deal from hearing others' experience and the lessons learned therefrom. I have also learned from sharing and receiving feedback from friends, associates, and mentors.

I am so grateful to Abraham because he treats me like I have a great deal to teach him. He is an experienced and a wonderful teacher, yes, but sits with me side-by-side, and honors me as an equal. He greets me with enthusiasm as if I am an important part of his life. He looks at me with the eyes of a father, opening up my own perception to my full potential.

All of the wonderful teachers I have known have made me feel I was acceptable 'as I am,' and has shown me a broadened horizon of where I am going. A small child can truly relate with an adult who bends down on one knee to eye-level, and makes attempts to delve into their knowledge. Small children love to talk about themselves. They feel the adults' interest says that they are important, yes, and on equal levels as far as a personal being.

Our Master also honored His fellows while in the flesh by asking them questions and taking an interest in their lives – making them feel they are an important participant in the world, and that what they do really matters. He did not squelch His fellow's vision but sought to broaden them with a divine logic. The Master loved to learn about people and was truly fascinated in how they became to be what they are.

In getting others to talk, the Master knew that divine connections were being made, that many individuals were discovering personal stumbling blocks and actually working through them. The Master could see where ego may have created problems in His fellow's lives and would tactfully redirect them to new insights. He was not forcing His own knowledge, no! but as the learner, His connection to divine communication was flawless. He had access to vast solutions and new possibilities, yes.

I thank you for having me this evening. I return you to Abraham. Farewell.

ABRAHAM: I thank you, Emulan, my brother. Be assured I have also received a great deal from you and your experience – your techniques of teaching, yes. I also count myself truly blessed to know you, my brother.

This week, my friends, practice personal interaction with your fellows. Recognize the difference in being a learner and, a student. What is the difference between a student and a follower? Practice being a director of new potential in your fellows. Strengthen your connection with Michael; and when you come up against those individuals who are deeply negative, you will be prepared to stay strong, stay inspired, and keep inspiring. Know that my love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

Sharing Of Yourself Opens That Spiritual Circuitry Between Us | The Brotherhood

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. Thank you for that heart and mindal-expanding prayer. Well done! [Opening prayer by Rob Crickett – visitor from Australia.] This evening I am feeling rather filled with gratitude, for all those things that really concern me seem small when I am truly connected with Spirit.

Our God is a giving God. He is generous in all ways. He is abundant with love and kindness, but also is He generous with those lessons, be they simple or complex, that lead us closer to Him, yes. In experiencing such kindness and generosity from a caring Father, how can we not also want to be giving of ourselves? In the giving are you truly divinely connected.

What does it mean to be truly giving of yourself? The goodness from our Father flows through us like a current of energy, and we are filled with feelings of well-being and the urge to also do good. To be closed off, self-protecting, or too shy, is an obstacle to that divine flow of energy. You have each known individuals such as this; or, are such an individual – who loathes the sharing of yourself, your mind, your hopes, your dreams, and also your discomfort.

One who shares not receives not. What a lonely existence to be unwilling to be exposed for the creature you are meant to be. Many that cannot find it in themselves to be open and willing to share life with others usually feel themselves to be of no value. Our Father sees each child with extreme value, and each one is His beloved child.

In this brotherhood/fellowship, we must realize the importance of the giving and receiving of one another. In the sharing, there is learning and growth; there is literal Spirit circuitry connections; there is the possibility of Father being about His business through you. How many times have you learned from hearing another's experience? How many others have you helped from sharing your experience?

Do not be discouraged by those who wish not to share or are not open to hearing you. The Master wasn't discouraged but kept moving, being about the Father's business. Along the way, He always left His fellows with thoughts to ponder, or words of encouragement. Many did not share back with Jesus and it was not in Him to find offense, no. His self-forgetfulness and direct communion with Father had rendered Him egoless; therefore, His ego could not be bruised. Sure, His heartfelt sorrow was for those He could not reach or those who spurned His kindness, but He knew He had all the love He could ever need in His Father.

The Master, with His divine connection, was driven to be a fountain of good news with a free-flowing of love and inspiration. Jesus knew the Father's supreme desire is an unbreakable communion with each one of His children. Now that is something to rejoice over! That is a reason to drop petty concerns and anxiety! We have the universe at work for us. We have all the love we will ever need in our Father; how can we not be a fountain of good news?

This week, contemplate your willingness to be open to others – even if they seem harsh or indifferent; be willing to listen first, then share and find that spiritual circuitry. Think about the Master and His love for people, even those who despised Him. Think about His self-forgetfulness that led to His egoless-ness. In your moments of quiet time, make effort to find that flow of energy from Father and use it to serve and create lasting spiritual bonds with others. That is all. Have you questions?

SIMON: Yes, Abraham, I am very grateful for the lesson this week. It seems to go to the heart of a building and increasing love for each person I might come in contact with each day, each moment, as the day goes on. And, to look forward to that day with that increasing love for Father flowing through me, and to that individual I am in contact with at that moment. I wonder if you could speak a little more about that issue of building that love and that circuitry? I see it as sort of a flow-regulation, like in a dam. Is that a good visualization? Like a dam of love behind? I'd like to build up, recharge? What I am asking is how to recharge that love when I feel like it is low?

ABRAHAM: Yes Simon. Understood. I would not so much call it a dam, but perhaps a river that is free-flowing – never-beginning, never-ending, yes. There are moments in mortal living where you feel the universe is with you and well organized; your joy is overflowing, you are flexible in nature, you are ready to be shown new things, you are apt to be helpful to others. This, is the river of divine energy. This, is a literal physical mindal feeling. There are moments also when the human animal-side tends to take over with ego involvement, and the instincts of selfishness are activated. This may occur when you feel you are slighted by another, or when you feel life is unfair and you turn inward and close off. This 'closing off' is also stopping that flow of divine energy, and does lead to feelings of isolation, unworthiness – and ultimately, a terrible loneliness as if you are the only person who understands what you are going through. There is an entire universe who really understands you and is always with you, but through the chaos of mortal living we are likely to fall into those ego traps. We are likely to feel defenseless instead of empowered from on high. You cannot really build reserves of divine energy such as the dam you described. Reserves lead to over-exuberance and fanaticism; and, possibly thoughts of over self-importance. The energy must remain 'free-flowing' in that you are willing to go about the Father's business come what may, without worry of ego damage. The river must be allowed to keep flowing because it reaches those you come into contact with. Good question Simon. Is there another question?

ROB: My name is Rob. I had a personal experience with our Father, Michael of Nebadon, and Mother Spirit. In cooperation with them, I have produced a book. And, in cooperation with them, have given my life over to ministry (Rob Crickett International Ministries) which brings me to this house, this country, and to the world as a whole. I am asking for your comments, your advice, on how you think about things I need to take care of that would facilitate this to the will of our Father?

ABRAHAM: Certainly, my son. I do know you. We are not strangers (Rob: True). Abraham: I am aware that your enthusiasm is overflowing. You are anxious to see this work come into fruition. The best recommendation I could give now would be to take things slowly. Allow things to build with a natural evolving momentum. There is no need to rush things along. You have a wonderfully big heart, and your love for our Trinity Caretakers is beautiful to behold, yes. The universe is with you in your desires, but as you full well know, their techniques and planning (our Caretakers) are far better than anyone else's. You would do well to release your expectations of what you would like to see happen, for the bigger and better plan of what can really happen, yes. Well done, my son.

With that, my words are slipping, yes. I thank you all for allowing me to be here with you. Know that you are always in my heart and mind. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

To See Our Imperfections Is A Gentle Light Shown For Correction, Not To Promote Unworthy Feelings

Back

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. What an energy here this evening. I ask you to harness it and redirect it to the One we all serve. [pause.] That's better. Thank you.

I realize that living in today's world is stressful - and still you are so surprised at the animal within. You have your common reactions to everyday life events, and certainly, at times it does seem that you have not had any spiritual training. Have not worry; nor, let your hearts be troubled. Do not become discouraged with what seems to be 'spiritual regression.'

This mortal experience is meant to push you, to drive you toward higher-mindedness. Everyone has choices on how they will react to stressful circumstances; you can lean toward an animalistic rash-reaction - or, draw from the well of spiritual higher-mindedness. Either is acceptable and is always creating new lessons. You know by now we are not perfect but strive for perfection.

It has become simple to self-punish when the human animal-side is shown, as if this will keep you in line. The more you self-punish, the more you are disappointed in yourself and, discouraged - feeling as if you will 'never get it right.' This all leads to those feelings of unworthiness and the thinking: 'Why would Father care for such an unruly child.' Here are your feelings of being orphaned. Here are your feelings of utter aloneness in the universe.

We are straying off the lesson of overcoming obstacles in the brotherhood a bit; but when you think about it - if you feel so unworthy, how can you possibly be connected in the family of God? Living the mortal life naturally, instinctively, draws out those imperfections within that need attention. This is shown to you to give you drive towards greater things, not discouragement and feelings of unworthiness.

When one feels so unworthy, inadequate and alone, one is likely to neglect themselves, spiritually and physically. It is difficult to draw upon spiritual power when you feel physically ill. Do you see, the mental or emotional focus causes physical effects that complicate everything, and really takes away the joy of mortal living. Always do we recommend you to stay connected to the spirit through stillness practice and prayer - this is a natural antidote to animal tendencies.

When faced with stressful events use your words to describe to Father how you are really feeling. Do not assume anything without first asking Him questions and attempting to view the overall difficulty. A little understanding can diffuse any stressful situation - practically. When the animal ego-self presents itself, do not punish yourself but turn toward the Corrector Himself. Present your behavior to Father; tell Him of your feelings and reasoning behind your rash actions.

What do you believe a mortal father would say to a child who is searching for answers and a better way, a higher-minded way? Certainly, he would not punish you as you would yourself. He would not discourage you or make you lose confidence in your status as his child, no! He will show you a new and better way to handle situations. He will encourage you to keep trying, for you are his valued child who is in a state of becoming.

With all our imperfections, our First Source and Center, our Upholder, our beloved Father who knows all things, could not possibly love us any more even if we were perfect. Accept the fact that these animal tendencies will present themselves for you to build spiritual muscles and learn self-mastery. Be not discouraged by them but, be challenged. Know that your Father is right there in every moment – not condemning you, but calling out for you: "This way, my child."

Know that Father's children are quite sensitive and need to be encouraged by their peers also. You can learn from Father and not be condemning towards our fellows as if we were their judge. But definitely, can we describe to them our feelings, our hopes for a new and better way? Sure! Certainly can you show your fellows a better way with encouraging words, and sharing that you truly understand them for you have also had the same experience.

This week, strive for higher-mindedness by not self-punishing, no! but by searching. Do not allow the feelings of unworthiness to creep in so as to cause mistreatment of self. Understand, these feelings of unworthiness are a major cause for drug and alcohol abuse – among other forms of abuse. You can be firm with yourself, yes, as long as it challenges you to do better. Do not leave yourself with feelings of inadequacy and hopelessness that 'you will never learn.' You are indeed that extension of our Father. You are the dwelling place for His gift to us. Be responsible in the care of the 'self.' Yes.

That is all. No questions. Know that I am with you more than you know, as are Mother's angels and various universal helpers. Please call on us. Know that we are with you. My love goes with you. Until next week, shalom.

Allow the Unfolding | Make Ready For Growth

I am with you. I am your MOTHER, the Divine Minister of Nebadon. I ask you, children of Urantia, to take heed. Hear my words. Listen well. We stand at the threshold of change. We are a unified confederation in service to our Universe Creator – Michael.

Mission participants, I am here on behalf of the Universe of Nebadon to reiterate how vital your work is now and in the kingdom to come. We must not simply be about self-agendas in the here and now, no! we are about growth, and evolution also in the time to come. We call on you, children, to lay down the sword of the ego and the shield of the animal-protection.

We are not fighting a battle, but coordinating the integration of a universe. We are unifying to aid the Supreme Being in His state of becoming. Lay down those childish toys. Take hands and unite. Unite for us, we who have waited so long for this moment in history wherein Urantia is considered a solidified integral progressive part of the universe.

I am with you, sons and daughters of change, my co-workers, who have struggled to aid in our Brother/Father's Correcting Time. Release your hold, open your arms and await the unfoldment. What is our overall plan and purpose? In whom do you serve? Your Mother stands by in anticipation of her little ones calling out for comfort and assistance. Together, let us be about the Father's business.

I am ABRAHAM. Thank you, Mother, for your words. We will, as a small corner in your universe, heed your words with sincerity and devotion to the highest we can conceive. How blessed are we that you would be with us.

My friends, relax and exhale. Be witness to the unfolding. Be available to be spirit led. Center yourselves on the serenity of spirit. Capture for yourselves 'the newness.' The seeds have been planted and well-tended to. The new shoots of growth are beginning to blossom and soon we will make ready for the harvest.

This week I ask that you find rest and empty your cups. Be willing to lay down what you have been clinging so tightly to. Allow for the unfolding. Make ready for the growth to come and have not worry. The universe is with you. I am aware there are questions.

CALVIN: Thank you very much, Mother, for your help and for your being here tonight. Thank you, Abraham for giving us added strength, help, hope, courage, and advice. I want to welcome a member of our group that has interacted with us remotely but tonight is personally with us, Imara. (Abraham: Yes, welcome my daughter.)

IMARA: It is wonderful to be here, finally. I have recently learned of a theory from a woman who claims that since the time of Jesus on this Earth that people who achieve fusion with their Thought Adjusters do not translate from this Earth, as they do from other worlds, but they follow Jesus' pattern of service after fusion until natural death. I was wondering if you would comment on that.

ABRAHAM: This is difficult for me to discuss because it may create quite a controversy. I will tell you what I know. Individuals who have attained a perfected life here in the flesh, who fuse with their Adjuster, more often than not, forgo the Mansion Worlds and the path taken by the Master when he was on Earth. The Master needed to fulfill His duties by gaining all the experience of the average mortal; and therefore, He needed to complete the average path - experiencing the Mansion Worlds, the morontial experience, and so on. The Mansion Worlds are mostly required to correct those imperfections that you cannot correct in the flesh. A perfected mortal has no need for the Mansion Worlds. I cannot say where they may go directly from fusion, for this varies, but they are most definitely greeted by a heavenly host and guided therefrom, yes. Does this answer, Imara?

IMARA: So, for mortals that fuse from this world - do they die, therefore, a natural death? or do they translate from this world? or does it vary?

ABRAHAM: It does vary in the material way in which they may leave this world, yes, but it depends a lot upon the Adjuster's desire. Beyond that much information, I am not prepared to disclose. Is this at all helping? (Imara: Yes, and thank you.)
Abraham: One more question?

MIRIAM: Abraham, before Mother started with tonight's message, I got the biggest wave of love and I didn't know who it was going to be, but I am filled with gratitude. I am glad that we each have a place at the table. And even though that place is uncomfortable for me sometimes, I am committed to staying, and I love the fact that I get to stay. I just wanted to thank you, both. It was very, very helpful.

ABRAHAM: Beautifully said, my daughter. Yes, this topic will be touched upon at the Conference. Everyone is needed and well-loved. We have realized in these years of the Correcting Time the beautiful devotion the students have towards our movement. We are touched by the faith and willingness to really work towards truth, beauty, and goodness. Yes, I also am in gratitude, my daughter. (Miriam: Thank you, Abraham.)

TR: He is saying - No, Calvin, there is no further Conference matters to discuss, [laughter.] but I do love your enthusiasm and drive to reach truth. Have not worry and know that we trust in your spirit guidance. That is all. (Calvin: Thank you.)

Go in peace, my children, and know that the upcoming events are not chaotic and under mortal control, but well planned-out by a universe. Yes. Our love goes with you. Until next time, shalom.

2001 Snowbird TM Conference - Down To Earth Spiritual Reality

Friday Morning - First Session/First Message

TR: Nina

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I am astounded when I look out at the faces here today. When we first began in this Correcting Time, we could have never foreseen this day, meaning today. We knew of Michael's plan for correction but, especially those of us who call Urantia our native planet, we could not envision this Mission taking hold. You could say we were flying blind and going on faith.

From midwayers to angels, and from Melchizedeks to you, it has taken every single individual to bring this Mission into fruition. Still, we are here today standing on faith alone, still working, still believing in Michael and His love for us. When you speak of "down to earth spiritual reality," what does that mean for you?

A moth that is attracted to a flame finds the flame its solid reality. It is not so much what it can see, but what its instincts are telling it. Common spiritual reality is a practice you can use in everyday living. The 'realness of the spiritual life' is your flame - it is your families, jobs, communities, and this Teaching Mission. Our Correcting Time is not 'out of reach hopefulness,' no - but workable/usable practice that brings forth spiritual fruits.

As we grow in this Mission, we find spirituality to be so much more than personal desires or fulfillment of self-agendas. We find our Mission to be ever-expanding circles of light, growing to encompass all Father's children. The Master, in his perfect humility, found his purpose to be so much more than just about him.

Of course there is personal correction and overcoming of ego-desires. As you grow, you find you are responsible for the good of the whole. The Master thought in terms of the whole. His Mission was not just to gain sovereignty over a universe, no, the overall plan was so much greater than that, as you will find out. These small steps that have been taken this far in the Mission are part of a much more grand adventure.

We are responsible for one another. No one person will go ahead of the other. We will all go forward – together. The Mission is about all of us; it is not a platform for self, mystical ideas, or unusable spirituality. We will all go forward together – and that makes each one of us responsible for each other.

Empty your cups, my friends. Be prepared for the new. Know that Father's vision is so much more than your own. Do we carry forth with His vision, or push our own? You each must realize that you have assembled here because of your trust in something greater than you. That is amazing. That is cause to rejoice. The trumpets of change have sounded, and with great joy we proclaim 'Urantia has heard.' The world is responding, change is occurring, no one can stop us now. [group applause.]

Think of yourselves, each one of you, with responsibility to the Mission and, each other. What is best for the whole? How can we each take a part in producing the beautiful harvest that brings this world into Light and Life? What is the price you are willing to pay for this Mission? What is the cost of 'setting aside self' and bringing a world into Light and Life? Know that the Universe is willing to pay any price for such a small and seemingly troubled world.

You must know by now how loved you are and how wonderful it is to be free from orphan-hood and back into the fold of Nebadon. Take up your responsibility. Be your brother's keeper in a manner that produces spiritual fruits for the whole – not your brother's personal corrector, no, but an upholder; a dedicated sibling that will not flee, no matter what. Differences of opinion, harsh words, hurt feelings – these cannot separate us for we are each beholden to one another, yes.

I welcome you. I invite you to our Conference – the conference of our beloved Brother/Father. Know that with each passing day we grow closer and more in love with you. Others will now speak. [See next nine Transmissions dated July 6th through July 8th.]

2001 Snowbird TM Conference-Down To Earth Spiritual Reality

Friday Afternoon Second Session, First Message – Snowbird Conference

TR: Rebecca

[This is the opening message to the whole group, as many did not arrive at this Snowbird, Utah Conference until the evening. As a background, Ham presented his first address to the world as a whole, ten years earlier, in Los Angeles, CA. The title of that address was Welcome To Change.]

Greetings, my children. I am HAM. I wish to welcome you all once more to change. Your lives have all been through many transitions (lost microphone). Yes, as I was saying, it is important that you should be open to change. Your lives have been through much change. Much evidence of growth is around you. Indeed, you are not the same as when we began this journey. Welcome again, to further change.

Yes, there has been disillusionment, loss, sorrow – times when you indeed, traveled the valleys of doubt and despair. But always were you accompanied, always was there a hand on your shoulder and a loving voice in your ear beckoning ‘this is the way.’

Indeed, the Master's Spirit is much more forcefully, more personally, and more experientially present for His children since the opening of the circuits. Before, you saw through a glass darkly. In the future, that glass shall be as crystal clear and you will know that you know, for the Master has spoken to your hearts and beckoned, and you have followed.

His children know His voice. You know when you hear Him, when you feel Him. You know that He is becoming a palpable part of your lives. Doubt not that this mighty change has occurred. Doubt not that you know as you know. Receive His calling. Turn not away from His smiling face. Allow His comfort and share His evidence upon your lives with others.

"You shall know them by their fruits," He said so long ago. And so it is! It is now time for you to bear the fruits of His Spirit, His vine. It is you who He trusts to be His representatives. To be, yes, His apostles. Even so must you walk in true humility and increasing grace with the Father and the Spirit. Accept the gifts He is giving you – yes, the gifts of your growing being; the gifts of His fruits; the gifts of being truly of service.

The Master is infinitely patient. He loves each one of you even as the infinite and eternal Father spreads His love out as a blanket to warm you, to cover you, to comfort and protect you. Turn not away. Stay with him. Follow His guidance as you know His truth to be unparalleled in your hearts. There is nothing that should dissuade you from this love, the truth and beauty and goodness, together.

"He who has seen the Son has seen the Father." You who love the Son must then also love the Father. This is the way that Michael has created for you to walk. He is the living way. His Spirit leads only to the Father. His Spirit is true and good and beautiful. Accept yourselves as you are accepted by this good Spirit. Throw down the artificial barriers, the years of accumulated debris in your minds and hearts – and embrace the Master, for His arms are outstretched to embrace each one of you.

When the Spirit of Truth came to the apostles, His presence was forceful, real, and beckoning – so much so that they, each one separately, laid down their lives for this magnificent Man and Spirit being. And now the Spirit of Truth is once again coming in force, beckoning each one to a higher calling than you could have ever imagined – not to death but to life-everlasting.

These words I speak are true and sanctioned by Michael of Nebadon. My love is also upon each one of you. I, a humble teacher, have been given this great gift to serve the Sovereign of our universe; and therefor do I call you to His service. You will all be about the Father's business in your own ways, in your own times. As you go upon this road, know also that there are morontia teachers, angels, and midwayers along the way – guiding, helping, redirecting.

Know that once you are truly irrevocably committed to the life of apostleship, you will not be allowed to stumble. You may falter, you may walk a little off the road here and there, but your faith will bring you back. This is Michael's promise.

Go in peace then, my children, my friends. It is an honor and a privilege to serve you and to witness your growing and becoming. Others will speak. My love goes with you. Farewell.

2001 Snowbird, Utah TM Conference—Down To Earth Spiritual Reality
Friday Morning – First Session/3rd message

TR: Gerdean

My greetings. I am GORMAN. Thank you, Michael, for your good tidings. And thank you, our Divine Minister, for the Spirit that pervades our atmosphere in this mountainous bowl of infinite celebration within the initial resounding effects of so many centuries of effort.

I am a Secondary Midwayer. I have been working for a long time—as have many many others—in service to the divine plan that is beginning to be revealed in your faces as you light up the environment with your beautiful souls. It is the essences of our effort and desire to do the will of the Father in heaven; and, in devotion to Michael, our Master Son, that we are among the army of workers, the elemental grunt workers, along with you in the trenches and in the fields.

I am truly honored today to be given this space on the podium to express my appreciation and gratitude for those of you who have been able and willing to follow the guidance and the direction we have injected into your paths. We have helped you go left when you wanted to go right. We have directed you in both the subtle paths and, the obvious. We have stubbed your toe and thrown things in order to get your attention.

And having gotten your attention, it is my privilege to honor Prince Machiventa for his untiring efforts; and, his unspeakably patient and loving Teacher Corps who have invested their entire beings into the work at hand – the reclamation of our pretty little world on the outer rim of Nebadon.

I am small and lowly in the hierarchy of spirit ascension and descension, but I am happy to be in this phase. I have such regard for my superiors, for I know they have great devotion to my growth, and yours – it is an ideal you have yet to perceive in fullness, for you cannot see quite beyond the veil of material perception. And yet, I encourage you to look, to attempt to see, to realign your eyes. Exchange your vision such that you are able to incorporate the celestial reality as your primary reality. These few days ahead will give us that opportunity. We can practice the greater family reality.

There is no separation in creation. We are an inter-species alliance of the material, morontial, and spiritual. Just as we have the Son, we have also the Father as Grand-Father over all – an unspeakably wondrous experience. I now embark with you on a continuation of this unspeakably wondrous conference experience in these incredibly beautiful environs, with some really cute creatures in the surroundings in the Snowbird mountain-tops.

Thank you, mortals and celestial alike, for helping bridge the gap. And yes, you are welcome. We are also invaluable in the process and are happy to serve – happy to rejoice in the work at hand. The kingdom is upon us. Rejoice and be glad.

Friday Evening – 2nd Session – 2nd message

TR: Daniel Megow – Coeur D'Alene, Id. TM Group

MICHAEL: Thank you, Ham, my son. You serve me so well on this world. My peace I bring you all.

Two millennia ago, my apostles and I turned our religious community upside down. In a very short number of years, we have spoken the Father's truth. We showed them love. We created fruits.

In ten short years, you – my dear ones who are without the benefit of seeing me face to face – have also turned your religious community upside down, and you are continuing to do so. You each mean so very much to me. Knowing each of you, touches me. I am seeing that you serve in your best way. I love each of you, personally. You serve me well. Doubt not your worth to me. Your love and your service changes many – more-so than any of you could ever know. You volunteer your service for me, and it pleases me. You truly are my apostles, and have the variety to touch many in my world.

Many of you came to this understanding of your planetary family, with doubt; and yet, when you saw more clearly, you went wholeheartedly, like Thomas. Many of you only wished to be shown, like my apostle Philip; he was a wonderful loving apostle who gave his all towards the service of the kingdom. Each of you has a unique gift which you share, and which helps to bring my world together in loving service. You know so much more of the reality of the cosmos than did my earlier apostles; and like them, you have chosen also to follow me.

I love each of you as my little one. I hold each of you in my arms. I am so grateful for all that you do in my service. You all have my love – and ‘that,’ you are to give, and give it freely. Give it freely also to yourselves; you deserve this.

You are a wonderful group of people and you will do well in advancing the kingdom on my planet. Do not seek for preferred places in the kingdom. You all have an equal place in this work, even now. You will do what you know you should when Father wants you to. You listen, and you listen well.

Never feel that you are doing nothing, for in every day that you walk out among my children, you do much. You give love to many who have maybe never felt love in their life in such a free and open way. You truly are my beloved apostles and disciples.

I say, fear not to pick up the trash that someone else throws down. Do not pick it up with attitude saying: "Those lazy people throwing this trash down," – no! pick it up in love and put it where it belongs because you know the right way. You know what is best, and perhaps they do not. Show them with your life; show them with your actions; show them with your relationship with me and, with each other. This is how you change the world, one by one.

I see what you give to us all. I appreciate every bit knowing that each of you gives from your heart. It has been my pleasure to address you all tonight, and I did so want to look in your eyes in this manner. It is my joy. My peace I leave with you, my children. Carry on.

2001 Snowbird Utah TM Conference – Down To Earth Spiritual Reality

Saturday Morning – 3rd Session – 1st Message

TR: Rick Giles

Greetings terrestrial hosts. I step forward from among the celestials gathered with you. I am EL-YON. I regard you all as my friends. It is a pleasure to be in association.

Let me present to you in a manner by which you may perhaps develop a deeper dynamic – a connection with Father of Paradise, and Mother Supreme – our Supreme Being. You have begun on this world the fall quarter of your first semester in the Melchizedek Universities. For those who have been off to college, perhaps you remember the time when you brought your parents to visit your new home. You delighted in showing them the grounds, your dorm, the planetarium, the library – you were the tour guide.

Here on Urantia, likewise, being indwelt with the Father and enfolded in the Supreme, you are the tour guide again. They delight in being shown through your eyes. Being taken by the hand, they want to discover your joy in your new home, your first home. You all know and realize the Father's omniscience. And you understand that Mother Supreme, though providing all of us opportunity for experience, also is in need of our contribution – through experience. Your two Parents want to experience your life with you.

We each, as ascending mortals, are very keen upon our goal of reaching Paradise. Our mortal ascension is driven by the desire to become perfect as the Father in heaven is perfect – it is all-consuming to the devoted, to the sincere, and the consecrated. But as you ascend, remember you are also showing the Father and Mother Supreme around. You are taking them on a great universe journey. Doubt not in the choices you make, that the Father freely allows you to choose.

All of us who have ascended from the biological spheres and rising up from ignorance, do wish to know 'the true way.' Unfortunately, at times we desire to be given a list of rules that we can just simply adhere to – this is not the Father's will. There is true and genuine righteousness in the universes, yes, but Father asks you to discover it.

There is no order form that can be delivered to you that spells out 'step by step' what the will of the Father is. Yes, He will make known directly when it is of great importance that His will be done. But in the context of the Supreme, there will be times when you must choose, because that is His will.

Your experience to choose requires that you branch out from the security of 'being told.' Is this not unlike when you left your parents and went to college and suddenly found a new freedom? You could stay out as late as you wanted. You could turn the music up as loud as you wanted. The breadth of our 'freedom to choose' has taught you lessons that we are not capable of understanding being owned under a rulership.

Our Sovereign, when on Earth said: "Blessed are the pure in heart." I wish to take a few words, to spell them out: A pure heart is one who personally understands righteous expression; an individual who knows the context of reality – that which is truth, beauty, and goodness -- and lives accordingly. Purity is untainted by falsehood and willful disruption of truth, beauty, and goodness. 'Righteousness' has been a word much maligned due to ostentatious behavior.

The Master also said: "Blessed are the poor in spirit." As I look upon you all in this room, I see rich spirits who are abundant with the blessing of revelation and the love of fellowship – for that is a private ownership of religion. It is not the accumulation of vast doctrine. It is not the acquirement of throngs of devotees. It is not the establishment of grand temples. It is not the one-hundred dollars in your wallet. There is only one objective necessary, and that is your direct relationship with God.

The Master said: "Blessed are the meek" – which are the modest expressions of everyday living – it is simple. That, is true righteousness.

Apply these three beatitudes and you will become an expert tour guide for Father and Mother Supreme. Enjoy your first years at this campus of the Melchizedeks, for there are many lectures to attend, lab classes to be involved in, and field trips to enjoy. I was once mortal and I know that 'graduation' is not far in the future for you.

Be not concerned about your transition to the mansonia experience (the mansion worlds). It is a small transfer. Look with delight to the eternal embrace of the Father who dwells within. There, is the true ceremony that is what you are working for. There, is where the passion arises to bless our fellows with the understanding, and to kindle within them the desire to attain.

My friends, I love you all. You are standing beside me in a dimension just beyond your dimension. I love you. I step back. Thank you.

[The Saturday afternoon session that followed El Yon's words was the speech by Rebecca (the transmission-receiver for Ham in the initial Woods Cross, Utah group in 1991 through 1992); and some follow-up with Nina (Ellanor - the transmission-receiver for Abraham, Emulan and Mary, in the Woods Cross group from 1995 and forward). After Rebecca's speech, and Nina's remarks of historical significance, there was a question/answer session from the group to them both. In this afternoon session, both recounted their initial experiences and preparations as transmission-receivers for the Woods Cross, Utah group.]

The First Ten Years

[Editor's Note: For the Woods Cross Utah TM groups, Rebecca (from 1991-1992), and then Nina/Ellanor (1995 through 2022 at the time of this editing) were the predominant and designated transmission-receivers. Both, share their initiations and experience with the Teaching Mission, in this session. This session was conducted by Calvin Len Mckee, also of the Woods Cross group.]

REBECCA: Did any of you, even in your wildest dreams, ever think that one day you'd be part of a group of people that has contact with the unseen planetary government, and that you'd be taught on a regular basis by supernal teachers, just like in the Mansion World schools? Did you ever think that you'd be given a task and then guided, step by step, through every phase of it? Did you ever think you'd be part of a celestial mission to actively change the direction of the entire world?

Well, I didn't. But then as Jarad (Hal Bynum) says in one of his songs, "everything's different now." Let me tell you a little of how it started, here in Salt Lake.

When I moved back to this beautiful city, where I was born in 1965, I found companionship with other Urantia Book readers for the first time. Thern Blackburn, Ida Young, John Wormeck and others, became my extended Urantia family. We'd read the Urantia Book every week and discussed it in Thern's living room in Wood's Cross, UT, just north of here. It was a great comfort to me to know other people who loved the Urantia Book as I did.

Then one day in 1989, I think, Thern received a strange letter from some people in New Zealand. He called me on the phone to tell me about it. Thern had a habit of being cryptic on the telephone, like his phone might be tapped or something. His tone was conspiratorial.

"You'll never guess what I received in the mail today. It confirms something I've been thinking about for years."

"What do you mean?" I asked, half listening. I was working in my dry-cleaning plant and had a million things on my mind.

He continued, "It's about something big - Melchizedek!"

"Really?" He had my attention then.

"Yes. Really. He's back here on this planet! And that's not all..."

"Isn't that enough?" I was still trying to take it in.

"No. There's someone else with him."

"Someone else? Who?" I asked.

"Guess," he demanded.

"I can't guess. Come on, tell me," I answered.

There was a long pause and then he whispered, "Abraham!" After a few more exchanges, we hung up the phone and I was half thinking that my old friend had just 'lost it.' [group laughter.]

As I listened to him read the letter from New Zealand to our group that Thursday evening, part of me thought: "Oh, I don't know about this! But then, the wording sounds authentic, not like something made up. The people [in New Zealand] seem sincere enough. It's probably not true; but if it is true ... IF it is, I don't want to miss out."

Not long after that, a strange thing happened. I was sitting on my bed at home and suddenly the room seemed permeated with a 'presence,' and I was rooted to the spot as a voice spoke to me. It wasn't so much exact words as ideas that came to me. The voice seemed to tell me that our group was part of the reserve corps of destiny and that if I wanted to participate, it would mean I had to be willing to give up everything I had, including my business - which was something I was very proud of at the time. The presence made it clear that it would not be an easy road by any means; and then it asked me, very plainly considering all this, did I want to participate and become like a modern-day apostle? Then it waited for an answer.

Well, I didn't have to think about it at all. My answer was an emphatic "Yes!" Then I was told that Abraham was now in charge of the 'reserve corps' and we would be under his supervision. Then that was it! I sat, dumbfounded for a while, mulling it all over. The next day I called Thern and explained that I felt I had to pass this on because I was sure it wasn't just for me, but for our entire group, small as it was. [referring to the Woods Cross Urantia Book study group].

Thern decided that the 'voice' I heard was that of my Thought Adjuster, and published that information later; but looking back, I think it was either Ham or possibly Abraham himself. Understand, we had no experience of this kind of thing, and the only 'voice' that the Urantia Book talks about mortals hearing is the Thought Adjuster's. So it was an understandable mistake, but one that brought a lot of criticism as I recall. [Editor's note: The time Rebecca speaks of was several years before internet – hence, the back-and-forth letters from New Zealand.]

Anyway, we decided to send a letter to New Zealand to ask about Abraham's being in charge of the reserve corps. They wrote back some weeks later with confirmation and then nothing at all happened after that for about a year and a half. All the while, Thern kept saying, "I can't help feeling that something is going to happen to our little group."

Then, in late February 1991, I was pressing pants early one Saturday morning at my store, when again I felt a presence and this time a voice spoke very forcefully, "I am Ham. I will be the teacher for your study group."

I said: "Me? Through me?"

"Yes," came the reply.

"Who are you? Where do you come from?" I managed to ask.

"The Garden," was the reply.

"Eden?" I asked.

"No, further...."

Then, "I have come to redeem or correct..."

My mind was racing, and that was all I could get. I picked up the phone and called Thern. After I explained what had happened; it was Thern's turn to doubt my sanity. I could hear it in his voice, "Really?" he said: "hummm."

Then we started talking and speculating on who Ham might be. We thought, "further from the Garden of Eden," might mean, further back in time, maybe to the Prince's staff; Ham had a three letter name, the same as those guys. Thern said he'd research it and call back.

"No Ham," he said. "There's every other kind of three letter name, but no H-A-M."

"Are you sure?" I asked. I had already built up a scenario in my mind in which the loyal members of the Prince's staff returned once more to save the day.

"Positive," he answered.

"Oh well," I said: "I guess all we can do is wait and ask him when he comes again."

"I guess so," said Thern.

I could tell he wasn't completely sold on the whole thing, but he showed up that Thursday at my house with an old tape recorder, and we stumbled through our first Ham meeting.

We asked questions about how we should proceed. Should we study the Urantia Book and then ask questions about it?

"No," came the reply, "I will give you a lesson each week."

Thern persisted, "But, what about the Urantia Book?"

The answer stunned me. "The Urantia Book is a tool," said Ham.

Up to that point, the Urantia Book had been the anchor of my life. How could he talk about it being merely a tool? What heresy was this?

Toward the end of the meeting, Ida asked, "Where do you come from?"

The reply was "The Garden,"... and then, "Edentia." But I didn't say the word "Edentia," out of fear of getting it wrong, so the meeting was hung up at that point. I couldn't get any more, and we broke up for the night - none of us knowing what to make of it all.

I got out my Urantia Book, looked up Edentia, and there it was, "Edentia - known as the garden world." That was a powerful confirmation for me. Then, come Saturday afternoon I received a visit from Abraham himself. Evidently, he had received a report from Ham - especially the part about my not transmitting the word, 'Edentia,' and blowing the meeting.

He said: "It is not your job to edit or change the communications in any way. You are simply to transmit as exactly as possible what you receive without commentary or alteration. It is not important what you think about them. In fact, it's best if you do not think about them at all. These are the conditions. Now, do you want the job or not?"

Well, that was exactly what I needed to hear - something strong and definitive; I didn't have to try to sort out what was what during the transmission. It was a great relief; and I promised Abraham I'd do my best.

Over the next several days and weeks, I made three decisions:

First, I made a solemn vow to stay in this thing for the long haul. Come what may, I would never give up or shirk my duty to the Teachers.

Secondly, I made a vow of loyalty to the Teachers and to Melchizedek: If there ever came a time when my loyalties would be divided, my loyalty to them would always be paramount.

And thirdly, I made the decision that I would never accept material compensation for this work no matter how tempting it might be to do so. I am proud to see that that standard has spread and is, in a way, a policy of the Teaching Mission to this day, some ten years later.

For those of you who are wondering – yes, in fact, I did lose everything for a while. But what I gained in its place was beyond my wildest dreams. I lost my little old dry-cleaning business and a couple of houses, yes, but I gained the love of my eternal life, my partner Jarad and the wonderful life he's given me, in its place. We live a truly blessed life in service to Michael; we are rich in love and friendship; we have exciting and fulfilling work, and all our material needs are more than met. I pray that you all find this same degree of happiness in this life. You are my most treasured friends and I love you all, and I thank you for being so supportive of me when I have needed it.

As we enter into our second decade of service, I think it's important for us to remember three things.

One, is that we must be careful to keep ourselves available to serve the Supernals according to their purpose and never to use them for our purposes, no matter how noble those purposes may be.

Secondly, we must rededicate ourselves and our loyalty to them, and vow never to split that loyalty – no matter how worthy the other recipient of that loyalty may be.

And thirdly, we must recognize that the Supernals place their supreme focus and all their efforts on our measly individual spiritual progress. To them, all else is secondary. So the spiritual progress of ourselves and others must be our primary focus as well. The mightiest cause waits humbly upon the progress of the least of us.

My brothers and sisters, we have been through a lot together in these last ten years. No doubt there are more trials and tribulation to come. But I wouldn't trade it for the world. Would you?

CALVIN: Rebecca, could you stay up there for a bit longer? Does anyone have questions for Rebecca?

REBECCA: Okay.

Q (?): How's your dog? (Beau)

REBECCA: Oh, the dog's fine. He's home with the babysitter. [laughter.]

MICHAEL PAINTER: Rebecca, was there any specific point in time when you actually felt any doubt and uncertainty, of what you've been through?

REBECCA: I don't know if there was ever any time when I felt any doubt, so I don't know if there was a change from when I felt doubt to when I didn't feel doubt – because the only thing I doubted was myself, whether I could keep doing it. I wasn't doubting Ham, but whether I could fulfill what he was asking me to do.

JERRY DALTON: Would you briefly summarize the first steps taken to announce the 'Announcement' program when you went to Los Angeles – that episode?(Rebecca: Yes)
Jerry: I believe that was really the first 'outreach,' right?

REBECCA: Yes. It seems like Ham just came and said – and it was to me personally, and wasn't to the group – that he would like to address the General Council of the Urantia Fellowship. I told Thern about it and he called Duane Faw. [of the TM group in Los Angeles area.] It was going to be held in Los Angeles that year so, we could all go and visit with Duane and Roxey and Vinnie and everybody out there. And so we did go, and everybody was very supportive, except for when we got to the actual meeting. Then, you know, it was like you'd expect – about a third of the people kind of got up all together, and left. About a third of the people were wondering 'what was going on;' and the rest of the people were jumping up and down with excitement and enthusiasm saying, "Wow, it's about time!" kind of thing. I don't know how else to explain it. Is that helping? Is that what you needed, or was there something else that you were thinking?

JERRY: That's fine. Were there specific instructions from Ham, in doing this?

REBECCA: No, no. It was "You've been doing it for a year, you can do it now" – so I just got up and let whatever come. Everyone was pretty fidgety because when I was first doing the transmission of Ham, it was real word-for-word slow; and nobody (that hadn't been to our group) was used to that. So it was hard for people to have the patience to listen to each 'word – after – word' slowly come, and so that was kind of hard too.

Q (?): Is Ham your personal teacher? (Rebecca: Yes.) Q: Do you have other Teachers that have come, since? How does that fit into your life? Do they guide you and tell you what you should be doing?

REBECCA: Yes. We mostly talk, on day-to-day stuff, we mostly talk with Jarad's (Hal Bynum's) personal teacher who's a wonderful female named Ian. She hasn't told us that much about herself except that when she was on her mortal world she reached out to the Master and he helped her through some dark times. She wrote a diary – and that diary, after she passed on, became a spiritual guidebook on her world. So, we're in awe of her every day. She keeps us in line, keeps us moving forward and doesn't let us get too far off the track.

Q(?): Hi. I have an issue with security – physical security, losing things. Losing my home, losing things. So, can you tell me about your loss with your business and your home? Is it necessary to really go through 'loss' in order to advance?

REBECCA: I don't know how it is for everybody else, but for me it was. I was attached – I was really attached. I had to make a choice. What was more important! Was the spiritual life more important than the physical life? It was, to me. It always has been, for a long time. But I had a lot of attachment, and when I let go of all of it, then my life just became great and beautiful, and I would have never married my husband. I'd still be a little lost person, like I was. I feel so blessed after having gone through that. It was just never a big horrendous deal. It was always just a step – taking steps.

LORAINA: Hi Rebecca. Remember when we were all being taught to receive transmissions? (Rebecca: Yes.) Loraina: And during that time there was a lot of confusion. I remember the feeling, the conversations about, "Was this real? or was I just making it up?" and all of that. And did you go through some of that, personally, when you were beginning the transmitting? (Rebecca: Oh, Yes.) Loraina: Could you tell us? I never could actually distinguish my mind very clearly from that of my Teacher, Danielle – so I did end up dropping out, basically. But I'd like to come back to it, and I'd love some guidance?

REBECCA: Yes. I guess everybody has to have their own criteria as what makes it real for them. I would just sit there and wait for one word at a time to come, for the longest time. One word would come and it would repeat, and I would say it. The next word would come, and I wouldn't be sure, and it would repeat until I said it. Then next word, etc. It was just like that. I mean, you remember how slow it was! It would take us an hour to get a paragraph, and sometimes even a sentence. It was because I was really unsure and I wanted to put the burden on Ham for accuracy, you know, that it wasn't on me to just 'try' to get it right, I wanted him to make sure that I got it right. That's just how 'I' did it. Does that help? (Loraina: Yes, thank you.)

Q (?): Do you think there's any significance, in your mind, what the significance was in the waiting 18 months for the transmissions with Ham to start?

REBECCA: Well, it was personal stuff going on in my life, probably, that had something to do with it. I had to get some things sorted out. I had some deaths in my family, and a divorce, and other traumas that I probably couldn't have started and then go through that – and so I think everything had to settle down for me. I think that's what it was.

RICK GILES: I'd like to add a comment to that. I find that significant in light of – when Jesus was visited and told to "be about the Father's business" – and right after that, His dad dies and he had to raise the family. So there may be some morontial principle that goes on – that waiting period? (Rebecca: Good point, yes.)

Q (?): This is kind of a curiosity question: When we had a study group in Bakersfield, and we all attempted to transmit, we were aware of sensations happening in our mind during the week. Did you experience that sort of thing? (Rebecca: Yes.)

Q: Maybe they were working on some little adjustments in our minds, or trying to improve receptivity?

REBECCA: Probably. I don't remember, specifically.

Q (?): But then you also had very strong impressions once Ham made contact with you?

REBECCA: Once Ham made contact it didn't seem like I had to really do anything. It's like he had done all that; and like I said, I kept putting the burden back on him. "It's got to be strong or I won't say it," was my attitude, you know. "If there's any doubt, I won't say it" – that kind of thing. And so they had to make sure it was real forceful and strong.

Q (?): Well, consistent with this subject of obstacles, one of Ham's recent lessons was on the importance of obstacles that are placed in our lives; that they in fact (our celestial helpers), oftentimes will intentionally create obstacles for us for a variety of reasons that we may not understand at the time. (Q: Yes) So obstacles can be a blessing. (Rebecca: Yes, yes.)

STELLA R.: Rebecca, I was in Los Angeles that night that you transmitted the Announcement from Ham, and I took it all down in shorthand, and then when I walked out of there I thought "Well, maybe it's so and maybe it isn't." So I put them away for about five years. Then when I thought it was my idea to decode the Book of Revelation, my celestial Teacher Coreli gave me just a little bit of information about Chapter One. They had apparently thought about two or three other people and they had watched me to see what I, this human, would do. Well, I picked up the ball and then I continued with them and the result was this book after four and a half years, so I blame you. [laughter.]

REBECCA: Well, I can take that kind of blame. [laughter.]

GERDEAN: Hi Rebecca. I noticed you've picked up a bit of a twang? [laughter.]

REBECCA: (twangy reply) Yea, I'm a 'Southerner' now! [laughter – Rebecca and Jarad live in Nashville, TN]

GERDEAN: I wanted to ask you, as a transmission-receiver: You know you get in there with those Teachers and it gets rather intimate; and you can observe, I can observe, how the Teacher handles questions. I have learned a great deal by observing the various Teachers – Tomas, particularly. But I wanted to ask you if you've given any thought to any of the characteristics – how has Ham added to your character, your spiritual character. By observing how he does something, what have you learned from Ham in that context – in your intimate association?

REBECCA: Boy, that's a great question. If I could be just a little bit like Ham, that's what I want. Because observing him over the years, talking to all kinds of different people – people I know, people I don't know, people in all kinds of different stress problems/things. He is unfailingly great. I'll be sitting in there thinking, "Oh, you know this is just, whatever – whatever, yea right," – kind of 'being down' maybe on the person a little bit; and Ham will come through and be the most loving, kind, generous and gentle soul; and then it makes me feel really bad, [laughter] and I think, "Oh, whoops!" But, you know, we're just humans – I mean we're just doing the best we can. But yes, if I could be more like him; he's an example of who I'd want to grow up to be like. Yes.

LUCILLE FAW: Rebecca, it's Lucille. We were driving up to Utah one time to join your study group for a visit at Thern's (Woods Cross Group). We played Ham tapes all the way up there. We got through two tapes and I said, "this is real; there's too much love there not to be real." But I want to say, that in my opinion – being in the Teaching Mission, serving God in any way, does not automatically shield us from loss

- it happens to everybody in the world regardless of what they are doing in life. We were having study groups at our house on Bocana Street, and the big Malibu fire came and took it right down to the foundation. That night in the motel I prayed to God to give me strength that when we went back, if it really was burned down, to just accept it. And I did - the house was gone, and it felt alright.

REBECCA: Yes. That was a horrible fire. You had to be very brave to go through that. I guess, as with everything, we are to go to Spirit, yes. Just to accept, yes.

FRED HARRIS: Rebecca. I've known you for a long time. First of all, I want to say that I really do appreciate the courage that you've shown throughout this in the face of so much. [group applause.] (Rebecca: Thank you.) Fred: In light of that, I came up from Florida to visit you in 1991. Ham was exceedingly gracious and said some things to me which caused me to rethink my whole life. But I really want to focus more on the 'Gabriel appearance' and the 'Melchizedek appearance' - both of which did not 'materialize' in the way we thought they were going to. And I just wonder how that impacted your faith. And the criticisms that came from that - how did that impact you?

REBECCA: It was one of the best things that happened because it made us all really think about what we really believed. We were getting, at that time, we were getting material messages and we were getting spiritual messages. I think in our enthusiasm we kind of went overboard a little bit - and got carried away with 'what all was going to happen.' We kind of thought a big ship was going to come down and just 'take us all away,' yes; we were just going to 'know everything' and 'we had it together,' you know. That showed us really where we were. And, hanging in there through that - you were there Calvin ... (Calvin: No, my first meeting was the week after the 'Gabriel night.') Rebecca: The week after? Okay. Well see, we still had people coming! [group laughter.] But, yes, it shook everybody up a bit. And, it shook some people out. Some people left because they had expected this huge thing to happen, and then it didn't. But you know we just hunkered down and kept transmitting the lessons. Ham was kind enough to kind of take some of the burden off of us and onto himself - and that helped us. But it was really a good thing because it made us all evaluate 'what is it that we truly think?' 'What is it that we truly believe in?' 'Do we have to have a miracle?' 'Do we have to be shown?' And most of us decided 'No, we didn't have to.'

CALVIN: Hey Fred, on the heels of that question and that reply, I'm going to ask Nina, who was one of the original Woods Cross group members, to tell her story of the "Melchizedek appearance" up in the mountains. (Nina/Ellanor: No, no) It was funnier than all funny!!!

NINA: I'm going to get even, Calvin. [laughter.] Yes, and my mother (Faye) was with me!

FAYE: Oh no!

(SOMEONE): I think she should stand up on this one?

NINA: No, no, no.

GROUP [in jest]: Nina! Nina! Nina!

NINA: Okay, Okay. This was probably after the 'Gabriel' and 'Naperville' events and all that, and during the days we were all practicing transmitting. Well, one day my Mom called me up and says she thinks she got a message from some Melchizedeks that, you know, something might be going on. So she says, "Why don't you try to do some stillness and see what you can come up with." So of course, I came up with the date and time that they would be arriving, in physical form. [group laughter.] So actually, Mom was like preparing a room and buying some groceries for them, and whatever; [group roar.] and, the time I came up with was way early in the morning. At that time, I was married and I had to explain to my husband: "We're going to meet the Melchizedeks," [laughter.] and he said, "Who? the Jelesnicks?" [laughter.] But anyway, he didn't say anything more, just 'whatever.' But my step-dad, Tom, he was very good about it and he says "Well, if you think you got this message, how could you 'not' show." So, we decided "Okay, let's do it." My kids were babies and we packed them up, and the diaper bags, and got them buckled up in the car, and we drove to the 'spiritually designated area.' [group roar.] Oh Lord, this is so embarrassing! [group roaring with laughter.] Oh, it was like 5:43 in the morning and it's darker than hell; [roaring laughter.] and all of a sudden from far away we see this light, and we're going "Oh my God, here they come!" [group busting up.] And it gets closer and closer and we're screaming, "Oh my God!" and all of a sudden, we hear a long "honk" - and the kids started screaming and crying - and as it gets closer ... it was a train!!! [group roaring.] So it was all a good lesson, like Rebecca said, you know, 'what are we going to look for in this.' And I think that the people who lasted through the 'Gabriel' and 'Naperville' expected events are the strong people that are supporting the foundation today. [group applause.] We did learn a few hard lessons from Abraham in the years following regarding proof-seeking and miracle-seeking.

BILL KELLY: Rebecca, one of the reasons I initially was not interested in hearing from Ham, was that I'd heard rumors about all this material stuff, this "Sonarington" project; it just sounded hooky to me.

REBECCA: Much of it was hooky - the human expectations part.

BILL KELLY (Pocatello group): It sounded like some other human production, and I thought 'I don't want that stuff.' It took me two weeks of listening to Ham (on tapes), and writing down what he said in the seven months of transmissions in 1991, and I came to sense his presence in the room, and fell in love with Ham. I became convinced it 'was' real. So, you know, when you made a designation between the spiritual and the material, I just wanted to verify that it was the spiritual part that got to me also. (Rebecca: Yes.)

Q (?): I'm curious. In the early years of the Teaching Mission when you were getting these messages that there would be a materialization - do you think they said that to set us up for disappointment so we'd focus on what we were supposed to be thinking? Or do you think it was human error?

REBECCA: I think that there was human error, yes, but that they 'let it go' so we could learn some needed lessons, yes. They didn't try to dissuade us; it was like they figured that we needed to run into that brick wall and learn the lesson. So, they let it happen (our material proof expectations). That's what I think.

HAL BYNUM (JARAD): You know one time, and I don't remember what lesson it was, that Ham was teaching us the different stages of this revelation. I don't remember what the first one was but the second one was 'disillusionment.' Because, I remember thinking that, when this all started, I thought that, you know, if we had cats and dogs they wouldn't get run over; they'd be protected by the midwayer creatures, etc., etc. And I found out that wasn't true right away, and we lost two of them. [laughter.] I had thought that we didn't have to pull them in at night; and all kinds of things. I thought, you know, that we'd just walk on water and all kinds of crazy stuff. Maybe everybody, when new to spiritual enlightenment, thinks that - you know, that you're going to have all kinds of powers and that you won't have all those ego struggles. Boy, what a dream that was [laughter.]. So anyway, the second stage being 'disillusionment' - it sounded like that was what they allowed to happen there. (Rebecca: Yes.)

CALVIN: Abraham has taught us about this 'disillusionment' many times; and, in letting our self-agendas, go, etc. So yes, what you are saying, Hal.

LORAINA: Before I ask my question, I just want to remember that night with Gabriel. It was so funny - we sat up all night, I mean our assembled group; we had lots of people show up. In fact, that was Brad's first night, because I went home the week before saying, "Gabriel's going to appear. The angel Gabriel is going to appear, as in the flesh." And we believed it. We were there all night long, being very patient, very still, and waiting and getting very sleepy, [laughter.] and people were really getting kind of grumbly. It was just this most amazing experience. I was thrilled to have gone through it because it really did serve, kind of a 'waking up' to a deeper place in my faith, yes, because when I was coming to the idea of it, it was like I was an innocent child with a magical story. And then when it didn't happen the way I pictured it, it was like you said, we had to drop down deeper to well within of 'what is real.' So, it's just been a part of the whole journey. It was great.

REBECCA: Yes, and I kind of had a little bit of a - in a very early part of the night, I really felt a strong presence and I kind of saw a being in my mind, but he didn't materialize; and I couldn't see with my eyes open, but yes, there was something or someone there.

LORAINA: Well, my question goes to a different subject, with regard to Teachers - do they choose us, are they chosen for us? Are there specific reasons a Teacher and a mortal are connected?

HAL BYNUM [from the audience.]: They volunteer.

REBECCA: Yes, like Hal says, they volunteer to come assist and teach us. But I don't know anything about the process of what they go through.

BILL BRYANT: The examples we've heard about 'disillusionment' and false predictions and disappointments and all these physical things that didn't happen - these aren't restricted to our Teaching Mission groups. If you look at the history of the churches of this country, and other countries, many times they've predicted the Second Coming, and one thing or another, such as the Seventh Day Adventists and all the others who have had these disappointments. So, it's not confined to us! "we Teaching Mission people." [laughter.]

REBECCA: Yes, that's true.

QUESTION: Rebecca, I have thought, while you've been speaking to us about what Gard Jameson [Urantia Book Trustee] said in his letter last night about "our being part of a beautiful time of healing;" and what I want to ask you is: Surely there are many brothers and sisters that we know and love who are Urantia Book readers, but they have not embraced the Teaching Mission yet. They are kind of on the fringes – they want to know more; they want to reach out; they want to connect, but they're skeptical and afraid. They have issues regarding the veracity. And I just wondered if you've had some successful experiences to be able to communicate your understanding and your experiences with the Teaching Mission to those people who want to know more, but are being held back for some reason?

REBECCA: It's hard to say, because we can always talk to people and tell our story and how we feel about things, and yet, we don't know how it affects them. And, I don't know any particular person that was hard core 'Urantia Book only' that I've single-handedly brought over to the Teaching Mission. I don't think I've had much success I guess – I don't know! Calvin has.

CALVIN: Now, listen to the humility of a good transmission-receiver up there, folks. [applause.] Are there any more questions? We have one more item after Rebecca, if there's any burning question, then we will do that.

LEE RECTOR: I just want to make one comment about the Gabriel night. I was there. There was no question in my mind that they were there. (Rebecca: Yes.) I actually recall feeling the presence move from one person to the next. (Rebecca: Yes, me too.) And, I think about how the Master was always asked to perform miracles – and sometimes we look for miracles with our eyes, and not with our hearts and with our spirits. I left that room that night feeling as though – exactly as what was to transpire, came.

CALVIN: I think people make the same mistake, in religion, about Jesus' 'Second Coming,' they think "Well, He's going to come in this way or that" and when that day comes, they have all kinds of different expectations.

STEFANI MURRAY: Rebecca. I think it was, you know, part of a learning process that everyone's going through. It's like we mix up the material and the spiritual. And I think a lot of these lessons has been that, what you're talking about – being able to perceive someone with your mind as a presence. I think we're learning more to see in other ways than with our material eyes, and have less expectations. The only incarnation events are like the Bestowal Sons, among the spiritual beings; it's a rare thing. (Rebecca: Yes.) Steffanie: Even then, there are those who think 'but the Melchizedeks do at times, materialize' – but then again, they don't have to be in physical form. What you're talking about is seeing someone as a light, feeling their presence, knowing that someone's there, feeling their personality, recognizing their energy, you know. One of the greatest things that this Mission's done for me - I was one who really was kind of locked in to 'the Urantia Book only' until I found out I had friends involved with this Teaching Mission that I trusted, and I really listened at the Flagstaff Conference. [Teaching Mission Conference about 1996 in Flagstaff, AZ.] and it was so unmistakable. It was really funny because I would never have expected a 'material presence,' but the understanding with 'spirit.' One of the funniest things, then, that happened to me was having a very material thing happen after that, which was Teacher Will - getting a copy of her unpublished book in two days. You know, which was like, basically miraculous. I'm sure it was, for them, relatively easy. But our expectations - of mixing up our mortal thinking, or what we need to transcend; and then that transcendence of our agendas, or what we want. This world is more glorious than we can dream up or imagine, and if we each do our assigned tasks, and be patient and work, then we are contributing to the whole; and hanging on to that is just so important. We're so grateful that you've been able to do what you have, Rebecca; and you know, just to have that faith, and to walk in it step-by-step, that's the miracle right there.

REBECCA: Thank you.

CALVIN: Just before we break for cake, Byron Belitsos is going to make an announcement, and then we're going to go upstairs and have some ten-year anniversary cake. [Conclusion - big applause.]

Attendees at this momentous 10-year Anniversary Conference were from all part of the United States and a few from other countries. The 'Teaching Mission' did take root and spread throughout the world fast in these first 10 years -- mostly in the United States.]

2001 Snowbird TM Conference - Down To Earth Spiritual Reality

Sunday Morning - 5th Session - 1st Message

TR: Nina

I am here, yes. I am ABRAHAM. I am with humble gratitude that we were able to attend this, our Father's banquet (this Conference). I pray you were each fed well. I realize there was so much to choose from. Many of you nibbled a little bit of everything. Many only partook of a few dishes. I hope that the nourishment will sustain you in these days ahead.

The Father has prepared a place for each one of you at his table. Not one seat is higher than the next. He has carefully placed those utensils before you that you need, to partake of the mortal life and to gain the experience you need that points you Paradise-ward. He has prepared dishes of practical spiritual sustenance - everything you need to survive and thrive in your eternal career. The candles are lit and he beckons you to come.

There have been other prepared foods laid out upon the table made with man's recipe – some mixed with ingredients of temporary empty promises. Some dishes are elaborately prepared as if to show all 'who can out-do the Father.' As practical spiritual reality takes hold, we find these dishes to be tasteless, without nutrients.

You have the choice, says your mortal will, to choose what is right for you. You will taste many things but I would admonish you to look at what Father has prepared, for the winter of this mortal life is long and you will need practical spiritual sustenance to survive.

Will you drink new wine in old skins? or will you allow Father to fill your cup with the grapes of truth, beauty, and goodness from His vineyard. Will you feast on the Father's ever-sustaining morsels of practical spirituality? or will you fatten on man's morsels of mortal ideas. Whichever you choose, you know that your place is set; it is yours, and that free will prerogative to choose will never change.

What dishes can you prepare to bring to this Correcting Time? What would you feed your fellows – recipes from the Father's all-knowingness, all-encompassing love? or, would you prepare a platter that will seem to impress your mortal counterparts but feeds them no nutrition whatsoever. What will you bring to the table!

The future of our Teaching Mission rests on your participation, your integrity, your ability to be small and use the Father's recipes. Can you stand aside and allow Father to help measure the truth, add a pinch of beauty, and stir that ever eternal pot of goodness!

The table is set. The Master has raised his glass in a toast. He invites you to join Him in this experiential adventure of cosmic citizenry. The Supreme Being awaits. What will we choose to partake of! What will we choose to serve our fellows! Will we even come to the table? Know that Father, Mother, the Master – each is there to pull out your chair and seat you.

Know also that I am indeed with humble gratitude to see Father's faithful children take such measures to do good to be a part of this epic adventure. My love goes with you. Shalom.

As Experiential Beings You Stand Upon the Platform of Faith

2001 Snowbird TM Conference – Down to Earth Spiritual Reality

Sunday Morning. 5th Session – 2nd message

Daniel (TR - Jonathan)

Greetings to one and all. I come to you at the request of my faithful student, Isaac. I am DANIEL. I greet you with love. One moment while Jonathan (Rick Giles) adjusts to the image I present him.

I must let the ricochets of implications settle. Follow with me as I present to you a lesson on faith, belief, truth, and experience – that ought to be enough.

Let us describe reality as a ground – the ground of reality. As I unfold this presentation you may at any time substitute God for this ground of reality, for you know at the center of all things, absolute materiality and absolute spirituality, are one and the same. Resting upon this ground of reality is the platform of faith. You, an experiential being, stand upon this platform.

Reality is not flat; it is very contoured and complex. Your faith platform rests upon points in reality. These are your contact points of truth. This platform is not rigid as a board – though initially, when faith is weak, it is stiff, yes. Beneath this platform are the gaps where you have not truthfully contacted reality. The personality will fill in these gaps with beliefs in order to stabilize faith and to keep it from rocking. Living faith is really pliable.

As you advance, your faith becomes more like a blanket that rests upon this contour of reality; it takes on shape. But as this blanket rests upon these shapes of reality, it too does not fully conform; it does not wholly present God (or reality) to you, for you must still fill in the gaps with belief. Your contact points of truth are becoming greater. Your experience is becoming more real.

Faith becomes increasingly pliable, but it also must move, for there is a horizon line of discernment beyond which you are unable to perceive reality. And faith ever urges you to broaden your horizon; therefore, your platform will travel. As it moves over reality, your belief becomes a lubricant that allows you to roll smoothly. Over the course of your ascension, you will encounter new lubricants and you will leave behind those belief-lubricants that served you in your travel at one time.

As you ascend, initially, and depending largely upon belief and your traveling with faith, you will arrive wholly in the presence of truth. Faith will grow thinner. This may seem odd, for as you seek to strengthen and embolden your faith it will become more like 'saran wrap' for it will more accurately conform to the contours of reality, revealing ever-more precisely, God. The truth-contacts will increase. The belief-gaps will dissipate.

Upon attaining Paradise citizenship, you will conform to the reality of Paradise and the personality of the Father. You will become, fully, His child – a representative of His perfection from the universes of time, as will the multitudes about you; and, those spread abroad throughout the universes who have been with the Father, who have once stood at His home. The expansion of experience is the increased discernment of truth-contact and the falling away of the filler of belief.

I thank Jonathan for bearing with me. And, I thank you all for your earnest attention. Our wonderful Mother is in your presence. She seeks circuitry contact with her precious daughter, Nina. Before she embraces you again, I will turn you over to Aaron.

[Regarding Aaron's mention of Jerusem (below), the Urantia Book explains that Jerusem is our "system capital" of which all mortals ascend to on our way to the far-distant Paradise. Jerusem is (so far) comprised of 687 inhabited worlds, of which our world Urantia (Earth) was the 606th. Some do conjecture that Jerusalem-Jesus' 'Earth-capital'-was named after our system capital.]

Sunday Morning. 5th Session - 3rd message

AARON (TR--Daniel Megow)

Hello friends. I am AARON. I have a quiz: Setting aside some of this effort to attain planetary citizenship - I ask you now: What does it take, tell me the milestones required to become a Jerusem citizen? Are there any ideas? [inaudible responses.] And my second question will be on 'methods' you have available to attain Jerusem citizenship.

But first, I ask for a milestone. [Group replies regarding the Seven Mansion Worlds; transforming the animal nature; fusion; etc.] Aaron: The supreme decision perhaps? Other ideas? [Group replies: choosing the Father's will; service; etc.] Aaron: You have answered my first question. How about the 'seven psychic circles?'

Let us move into our second question: Tell me the methods whereby you maintain these milestones? [several group-replies.] Aaron: You have mentioned tolerance; service; prayer; self-mastery; love; worship; self-love; forgiveness. Excellent! I think you're going to pass. [laughter.]

Now that we're warmed up - what do you think are the milestones required to qualify this planet in Light and Life?[Group replies: All of the above; a Planetary Prince; unity; inner connection.] Aaron: Wonderful, and now what are the activities you may undertake to aid in attaining these milestones? [Group replies: Faith; serve each other; [inaudible.] casting off the old baggage.]

My friends, you are abundant with ideas. We must relate this all to our fellows around the world. The methods for attaining citizenship on Jerusemare quite similar to the methods of bringing this planet to Light and Life. [inaudible.]

Thank you for participating with me. I love you all. Take one moment to center yourself, to prepare yourself for reception of Mother's contact. [Editor's note: Our Universe Mother's address was in the next segment - and was the ending of the Conference.]

A Divine Message From Our Universe Mother. See These Children, They Are Mine And I Love Them Dearly

A Divine Message From Our Universe Mother-Spirit

Greetings, my little ones. When I look at you, I am overcome with the desire to say, "See these children, they are mine." You are not hidden from us, we know you through and through, be it good or bad. We are most deeply in love with you.

We are all a character in a most wonderful novel; it is perhaps a combination of history and a love story. I play your Mother. The story is filled with evolution, sin, rebellion and darkness; but we cannot forget those who stand out in fighting for this young planet. Chapter upon chapter there is light, love, knowledge, progress, and heroes.

Your chapter is being written – what would you like it to say? The choice is yours; you are writing the chapter. Your faith, your willingness to serve, your willingness to be spirit led, your sincere humility – will be a wonderful catalyst to the next chapter.

Your integrity, devotion, sincerity, and love of our Father will set in motion all that will be written from this day forward. You are a co-author. You are a director of destiny. You play a key role in how the story will turn out. Have not fear for the turmoil within this beloved Mission for this is only a chapter – it is not the end.

Be conscious my children, be aware, for all that you do directs and produces effects. Remember who you are co-authoring with – allow Him to speak; allow Him to assist; allow Him to comfort you when you cannot see your way through. We are made more because Father is in us and we are in Him. Take up your pens of responsibility – integrity, tolerance, love – and let each one of us be a part of this grand love story.

See these children, they are mine and I love them dearly. Go your way, my little ones. Let us be about the Father's business. Farewell.

Phase Two Of Our Teaching Mission | Building Upon The Foundation

Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-09-2001

Regular Monday Evening's Lesson With Woods Cross Group

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. I so enjoyed your discussion this evening. It was nice to hear you discuss something else besides the Conference. This everyday-living reality is what we have spoken about so many times before. Our Mission is about finding those reserves – to draw from a spiritual account in a practical way, a way that suits the human and the divine.

I breathe a sigh of relief for we have put our best foot forward. And now we leave the results in Father's hands. I can say, every individual received exactly what they put into the Conference gathering. I trust that most will have those spiritual reserves on hand for some time to come.

I have been assigned the somewhat controversial task of reiterating the basis from which this Teaching Mission stems. I am speaking about the Urantia Book. This Book is our compass in the sea of everything. Many ideas will come and go, and you can always measure these ideas with the Urantia Book. The Book is a solid directional guide. Even though it may contain some material that seems farfetched, nevertheless it is a lighthouse that leads us to the shores of balance.

Along with our Urantia Book's epochal revelations, we have our beloved Father Fragments providing for us ever-new and updated information. In the days ahead we would do well to ponder our closeness with the beloved indwelling Fragment who is ever showing us a new and better way. The communication with our Fragments is becoming more simple to understand since the planet has been re-encircuited into the fold of Nebadon.

Do not make the mistake of putting these Father Fragments on a mystical pedestal, because this leads to over-indulgence in self-aggrandizement; become used to thinking of them as the better part of yourself, your higher mind, your revelatory provider. These Mystery Monitors are the gatekeepers to all that holds meanings and values. Allow them to work, and notice your new sense of balance and confidence to be at home in the world. Those wonderful Fragments are a safety measure to weed out non-reality while correlating information that will serve you well.

And last I would say a few words on living revelation: Down through the ages, you can see how the basic goodness of all religions has taken hold – has not gone away. Those things that are really true will be lasting. There is always a great deal of excitement created around certain theories, but when they lose the momentum of the people's faith they go by the wayside. As you mature in spirit you find you need not give faith-energy over to just anything. You can always count on your indwelling Fragments to keep you up to date with universe happenings; you can know their ministries more mentally than emotionally.

In choosing those courses from the banquet table, the Adjusters can certainly lead you to those dishes of nutrition. And what might not always look appetizing to you may be with more spiritual sustenance according to the Indweller. You can measure living revelation with your understanding of becoming more selfless. What feels good and true may be food for the ego, not necessarily for the soul.

Have confidence, my friends. Your indwelling Father goes before you; He has sampled everything and is a helpmate – not one who is waiting for you to make a mistake so He can chastise you. Ponder these things this week, my friends, for we are at the beginning of PHASE TWO of the Mission. Let us rally our faith, filter out the falsities and check our foundation for cracks. This next phase will be the building upon our foundation.

I would not receive questions this evening but would love to leave you with some heightened energy reserves by praying for you.

Our Father, our Son, our Mother, I humbly come before you on behalf of my Mission fellows. There has been a great expense of energy as of late; and I, in my love for them, beseech you to rain down upon them your everlasting love and comfort. Aid them in their integration of all they have learned this weekend. Bring balance to imbalance. Bring clarity to cloudiness. You know as I do that their underlying motivation was out of love for you. We know that. We know that you know their expense in spirit was great and we ask you for that spirit energy that only you can provide. I speak on their behalf that if there was ever need again for such energy expense my friends here would not hesitate to once again do all they could for you. I thank you, my Father, the Father of all fathers. I thank you, Michael, for we could not want for a closer Brother/Friend. I thank you, Mother, for your grace and example of service without glory. Know that our thoughts, our love and our complete being, is in you. We will gratefully accept your energy, guidance, and love in return. Amen, and shalom.

Which Master Do You Serve | Are You Driven By Fear or By Love For The Divine
Abraham, WOODS CROSS GROUP 07-16-2001

I am ABRAHAM. Greetings. As I look around the room, I am touched by Father's faithful – all gathering to once again become centered and focused. It is apparent that you each come to learn and participate without need of any promised reward – quite an accomplishment from when we had first begun. My message this evening is simple, yes! and yet, without it we could not continue with these teachings:

Down through the ages, man has always searched for answers; answers of any kind. When one man would appear to have more knowledge, then the other men would then follow him. With the ever-evolving ego practices, men, and some women, have sought a place of importance. The more followers they attained, the more important they were, was the sentiment.

As the Correcting Time moves forward and old ideas are fading away, we find that we need not a mortal hierarchy to go through to get to God; every individual has access to things divine. Every mortal will find for themselves that they cannot serve two masters. You cannot put your fellows on a pedestal and be beholden to them – while Father is set aside because you cannot see Him or you cannot trust in yourself for your connection with Him. We serve the 'One God' – the First Source and Center, the Father of all fathers – who is the Divine Director, the Perfection in the midst of imperfection. He is whom we worship! He is whom we serve!

Man has been a slave to many things – his fellows; his mortal material needs; his addictions; his want for power and glorification for ego. I could say most of these mortal masters all are rooted in fear – fear of loss, fear of being punished, fear of isolation. The main reasons many mortals do not ever really become close to Father is because of fear; they fear Him, His power, His all-knowingness – not His fairness and His overwhelming love.

Many perceive Father as a stern commander who does not have their best interest at heart: so they seek to hide from Father. They will allow Father in on the Sabbath, or perhaps at prayer time, maybe even meditation, but they exclude Him when they are about in their daily human dealings – and some of those dealings are not so divine.

You cannot really have a part-time Father. You cannot only have God when you want Him, for He is there in all your mortal undertakings whether wanted or not. There is nothing hidden. Yes, He will show you your shortcomings, but that is out of His love for you; His main duty and goal is to point you Paradise-ward. Father does not seek to shame you into righteousness, no – He seeks to be a loving and intimate associate; he seeks to co-create your eternal path to Him.

Do not pray to Father for fear of what will happen if you don't. Do not worship Him as if to pay off your mortal debts. Father, who carefully orchestrated all creation, is not to be tricked or manipulated, no. You cannot bargain with Father saying: "I will give you this for that," no. He is your closest ally; your most trusted friend; your shield against mortal harsh reality; your shelter from the storm; your spirit replenisher; your way-shower.

This week my friends, ponder – which master do you serve? What is your perception of the First Source and Center? Where can you bring Him into your life that you have not before? Think about how fear may lead you to leave Father out. Does Father want to be in every aspect of your life – even those areas most dark? Have discussion with one another during the week on this topic. I understand there are questions and assessments. Proceed.

CALVIN: Abraham, Joy Brandt. from Oregon I believe, is such a sweetheart in supporting the Mission as a skeptic and a cynic, like you say some of us are. She has requested an assessment.

ABRAHAM: Certainly. Joy, my daughter, we do delight in your questioning mind. Even as a child you could be found speaking more with adults than with other children. Your drive for knowledge has made you who you are today. I see you as well-balanced – and yet, a little fearful about your foundation of belief. You love Father and the source in which you have learned about Him, yes, no doubt; but still there is a tiny part of you that says: 'What if all that I believe is not really true?' Know that many individuals experience this, and while you are an intellectual daughter of God, do not allow the intellect to override your faith. Measure your intellect and faith with your past experiences. Do you not agree, there are some things even you can't explain? While you are strong in character and bold in technique, do not forget there is still that child inside who dreams of greater things, yes. You are where you should be. Skeptic or not, your daring to question is truly beautiful and keeping others to always check their real motives. Well done, my daughter. We will speak again. Another assessment.
